AMBASSADOR REPORT

The Ambassador Report Archive is now complete. All 72 issues have now been posted. This site was launched on March 8, 2000, when the first three selections were uploaded. Since then, we have worked almost daily to scan and proofread the issues and make them available as quickly as possible. Happily, we are able to say that on September 2, 2000, the mission was accomplished.

These pages are dedicated to the memory of John Trechak, the late editor and publisher of Ambassador Report. A man of limited means, he nevertheless took on an organization with tens of millions of dollars at its disposal and never flinched. For that, all of those who benefited from his work owe him a debt of gratitude we can never repay. Rest in peace, John Trechak.

The Painful Truth is grateful to The Archivist for his months of devotion to digitizing every one of the Ambassador Reports. On February 3, 2001, The Archivist turned over the honor and responsibility for publishing the AR on the internet to The Painful Truth. Anyone can, of course, obtain their own hard copies of the AR and convert them to digital format ~~but any copying from this site, which has been watermarked, will not be tolerated.~~

Please note that Ambassador Report mentions many organizations, addresses, publications and web site addresses which may have changed or which no longer exist. This is especially true in the earlier issues, many of which were published as many as 25 years ago. Our goal is to reproduce Ambassador Report complete and unedited, and, accordingly, we will not delete references to defunct organizations and out of print publications, nor will we research whether addresses have been changed. Please use caution if you try to contact any of the organizations mentioned in Ambassador Report.

The following introduction and descriptions were included in the index John Trechak, the late publisher of Ambassador Report, sent out to new subscribers.

In 1975 a group of Ambassador College alumni decided it was time that the truth about Herbert W. Armstrong's Ambassador College, Plain Truth magazine, Ambassador Foundation, and Worldwide Church of God be made known, especially to those financially supporting those institutions. This small group of alumni formed a publishing association called Ambassador Review which in mid-1977 became Ambassador Report. Since 1976 the group has produced over 60 highly revealing publications about the Armstrong movement.

The entire Ambassador Report collection represents the most thoroughly researched, frank, and shocking series of exposes ever done on the inner workings of what has been called the Armstrong Empire. The Report has also reported extensively on the dozens of colorful spin-off groups the Armstrong organization has fostered. The Ambassador Report series is exciting, eye opening reading, especially when read in chronological order.

Below is a list of what has been published along with a partial description of the contents of each publication. Keep in mind that issues of the Report contain, in addition, other smaller articles, references to sources (including the names and addresses of numerous churches and other organizations), and many readers' letters that are often equally interesting and informative.

**Ambassador Review Introductory Letter** - Ambassador Review's early 1976 introductory letter stating the association's purposes and goals along with an open letter to Ambassador College (AC) Vice Chairman Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA) (9 pages).

**The Gerringer Letter** - Bob Gerringer's 1975 open letter to Worldwide Church of God (WCG) evangelist Charles Hunting, explaining the theological and ethical reasons why he and his wife Connie left the WCG (28 pages).

**The 1939 Article: "Did Christ Reorganize the Church?"** - by Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA). Published in 1939, HWA attacks the very organizational methods he later adopted (10 pages).

**Ambassador Review, June '76 \(AR1\)** - Expose articles on HWA, his many failed prophecies, the WCG's error filled tithing doctrine, AC's nonaccreditation and censorship of student mail, the Ambassador Foundation and the phony Jews controversy, the WCG's Catholic Church parallels, HWA admits he is in love with a woman fifty years younger, "The WCG Talmud," Marion J. McNair's book Armstrongism Religion or Rip-Off?, "Profile of a Cult," breakaway organizations, and more. (51 pages, illustrated).

Ambassador Review

P.O. BOX 661 SOUTH PASADENA, CA. 91030

AMBASSADOR REVIEW is a brand new, frank but exciting publication published by alumni and students of Ambassador College. It will dare to stand up for truth and honesty and report the facts. AMBASSADOR REVIEW has the following purposes:

- It is a forum for assessing the teachings of Ambassador College and their effect on Ambassador College students. In short, it will examine the "Ambassador Experience."
- It is dedicated to prodding the leadership of Ambassador College and of the Worldwide Church of God which supports and controls Ambassador College to change the practices and policies which are bringing discredit to Ambassador College worldwide.
- It is a publication which will bring to light some of Ambassador College's biggest problems which have been too long covered up.
- It will present solutions to Ambassador College's problems and take firm and direct action to initiate drastically needed changes at Ambassador College and in the church which so heavily influences it.

· It is solidly founded in the belief that Ambassador College was built by and continues to exist through the combined efforts and contributions of many selfless, dedicated people. NO ONE MAN CAN TRUTHFULLY SAY, "I am Ambassador College". No one family clan or clique should ever be allowed to monopolize the Ambassador entity.

The AMBASSADOR REVIEW is a journal by and for the students, alumni, and friends of Ambassador College. Its purpose is to provide an open forum for those who have shared in the "Ambassador Experience". It has grown out of the increasing need for a response to the censored and ideologically-controlled articles found in official Ambassador College and Worldwide Church of God publications.

The REVIEW is intended for thinking men and women. It is not designed for those who may, by their own choice, prefer to remain ignorant, intimidated, or amnesiac.

The AMBASSADOR REVIEW intends to communicate more than just opinions. We intend to communicate solutions and work to see that problems are solved. We believe in the essential dignity of man and therefore in a free, open and democratic society - with free, open and democratic institutions. Therefore, we want Ambassador College placed in the hands of responsible people - people who have demonstrated their integrity in both their words and their deeds.

We welcome and encourage literary submissions from our readers regardless of political, religious, or philosophical persuasion. We welcome any articles or letters that will help our voice to stimulate others to pause and ponder the cries of conscience in our pages.

We seek to establish the AMBASSADOR REVIEW as a permanent journal to analyze and review the total "Ambassador Experience", and to help stimulate those of the present Administration to make a complete turnabout from their folly.

Needless to say, the publishers of AMBASSADOR REVIEW are deeply concerned that the institution(s) to which we have all given so much are now showing signs of deterioration.

Consider for a moment: Why a closed Bricket Wood campus? Why a cancelled Imperial schools program? Why the "dismissal" and departure of many of Ambassador's finest faculty and administrators? Why the liquidation of the Ambassador College Press? Were these changes due to "severe shortages in funds", as we were told?

Yet all of these cuts occurred while millions were being spent to finance the A.I.C.F. concert series and Chancellor Armstrong's lavish banquets - a "SECOND GREAT DIMENSION" [emphasis his], as he puts it.

Consider also, how many of Ambassador's most loyal friends have discontinued support of the current administration for reasons of conscience!

The list of these people, which appears in our first edition, is staggering. It is composed entirely of individuals who were not only longstanding leaders, but in most cases ordained ministers. The list includes former Plain Truth editors and writers, staff members of the World Tomorrow broadcast, four former evangelists, a chairman of the Department of Theology, three vice presidents of the corporation, a Dean of Students and the brother of the college's founder - Mr. Dwight Armstrong. In addition, we know from personal discussions that many current AC faculty, students, and administrators intend to depart in the near future.

When individuals of such outstanding character and long service are compelled by conscience to withdraw their support of the Armstrongs and resign, we think that our deepest apprehension is confirmed, and the future of Ambassador is imperiled!

The publishers of AMBASSADOR REVIEW intend to make our voices heard by both the Administration and the local community - and will, if necessary, undertake direct mail campaigns to newspaper editors, columnists, and free-lance writers, radio and television producers, civic leaders, foreign embassies, educators and other organizations....

The publishers and editors of the REVIEW, however, always intend to keep the above actions at the highest levels of honesty and integrity.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW's program of direct-action is brought on by our deep concern for those of the future who stand to suffer the same personal grief and dashed hopes which we have "experienced". The mental damage already inflicted upon sincere and trusting individuals cannot go unchallenged. The injustices of the past and the present must be rectified!

And they can be. - With your help!

As an example of the kind of articles you will be reading, we are enclosing a copy of one of the articles already submitted. The article points out major discrepancies in President Garner Ted Armstrong's January 14 address to the student body assembly.

Also in the first issue, you'll read about:

- THE UNCOVERING OF THE SECRET STRATEGY OF A.I.C.F. OPERATIONS
- THE INVASION OF PERSONAL PRIVACY
- THE EXISTENCE OF SWISS BANK ACCOUNTS FOR EXECUTIVES
- SEX SCANDALS
- INTERNATIONAL SMUGGLING
- THE CONTINUED RAPE OF CONTRIBUTORS

Such things have been and are being conducted by administrators and members of the Board of Trustees still in office at Ambassador College. We intend to publish their names in AMBASSADOR REVIEW.

All of this information has come about as a result of dedicated student and alumni research that finds its way to our mail box daily. The AMBASSADOR REVIEW is interested in stimulating continued improvement in the College and its standards.

To accomplish this and to restore proper leadership to the college, we need your editorial contribution.

We want to hear of your experiences. AMBASSADOR REVIEW needs your insight, because each of you sees the "Ambassador Experience" from a special viewpoint. As a result, your letter or article can contribute to publishing the real facts. Just one example: In April 1975, Bob Geringer and his wife, Connie, put into writing a list of honest, straightforward questions regarding doctrines, interpretations, sermons, Co-Worker letters and "personal remarks" they had come across from ministers and evangelists during their many years of the "Ambassador Experience". As a result of their letter, many have begun to reevaluate the meanings of their experiences at Ambassador College. The "Geringer letter" is being made available, upon request, as an adjunct of AMBASSADOR REVIEW.

So we, the publishers, hope you see how important just one letter can be to the thousands who may be affected tomorrow by what you are open enough to say today.

If you agree that the AMBASSADOR REVIEW can serve an intelligent purpose in your life, then we warmly welcome your contribution and your subscription.

AN OPEN LETTER TO GTA:

WERE PLACHE AND HUNTING PROPERLY ROASTED?

We wish to congratulate you, President Armstrong, for your brilliant castigation of Richard Plache's pharisaical and oppressive actions while Dean of Students (1968-1972). It truly was a stellar performance. We also wish to laud you for coming to the defense of freedom of speech and religion at Ambassador College, as evidenced in your statement: "We do believe in freedom of religion and freedom of the press and freedom of speech at Ambassador College."

We would like to pose some questions, however. How, Ted, can you praise the virtues of freedom of religion and speech - which have probably never existed at Ambassador College - and at the same time tell the faculty and student church members that if they disobey the Worldwide Church of God's teaching about not associating with disfellowshipped members and go ahead and attend Plache's meeting to hear his side of the story, they "do so at peril to" themselves? How can you promise freedom out of one side of your mouth and turn around five minutes later and use scare tactics to dissuade students from attending a lecture with which you personally disagree?

After all, when the Apostle Paul was teaching what some thought to be heresy, he was given a chance to address the whole church in Jerusalem (Acts 15). Interestingly enough, he too was addressing the problem of those who would impose the Old Testament legal system on others. This Jerusalem meeting - unlike the recent Pasadena doctrinal meetings - was not carried on behind closed doors before a group of hand-picked loyalists who already had their minds made up.

You, as a "minister", have preached eloquent sermons upholding the Bible. The Bible you quote says to prove all things, and it warns that he who pleads his cause first will seem just (Prov. 18:17). How can we hear both men plead their cause if we are allowed to listen to only one of them? How could we come to a fuller understanding of the issues raised by Mr. Hunting and Mr. Plache when (1) you ridicule their past performances, emotionally denouncing them and all they stand for, and (2) then you proceed to use "church authority" to threaten and intimidate students who wished to honestly and objectively listen to Mr. Hunting's and Mr. Plache's side of the story. Ted, your tactics seem reminiscent of the Hitlerian and Stalinist eras and do NOT belong in a college assembly.

Furthermore, Ted, you conveniently forgot to explain some of the following points:

-- While it is true that the names of Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting were rightly equated with the term "super Pharisee", these two men were mutually excelled in advocating yardstick religious practices by Herbert Armstrong, Rod Meredith, Raymond McNair, Ron Dart, Sherwin McMichael, Dibar Apartian, Dean Blackwell, Clint Zimmerman, yourself, etc., ad nauseam. Dormitory and room monitors - ever ready with their evaluation sheets - were prevalent when Jack Elliott was Dean of Students in the early 1960's long before Richard Plache arrived on the scene.

- Wasn't it HWA who personally approved the campus dating rules and designated certain men as approved marriage counsellors, not Richard Plache?

- Wasn't it you, Ted, (along with Mr. Plache) who called students in concerning the breaking of the dating rules in 1970? So, Ted, you did give support to the dating rules. It was HWA who called in several students in 1965 regarding "understandings" and removed the "leading" students from the sermonette list, visiting program, etc. Handholding for students was declared to be sinful and forbidden. This was long before Mr. Plache became Dean.

- Wasn't it HWA who declared the wearing of makeup a sin?

- Wasn't it HWA, not Mr. Plache, who dictated skirt lengths, hair lengths, dress codes and who forbade the wearing of beards, etc.? True, Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting (under Raymond McNair in England) enforced HWA's dictates and clearly spelled them out, but so did you, Ted, and all the rest of the ministry.

- Wasn't it the Church Administration Department, under Mr. Meredith's direction, and the whole ministry who filled out visit cards reporting on attitudes, problems, the sex lives, etc., of members and prospective members? Mr. Plache did not initiate this practice in CAD, though he had a similar system organized to report on students. Ted, you allowed some of these things to continue after you removed Mr. Plache. Why? Weren't you "in charge"?

- Wasn't it the Data Processing Center, under your auspices, Garner Ted, not Mr. Plache, which conducted and still conducts tithe checks on members, employees, men about to be ordained, etc.? For instance, in 1974 Mr. Dart made use of the tithing records of the Big Sandy employees to determine who to lay off during budget cuts. Interestingly, the impartial computer divulged that one Big Sandy evangelist gave no donations or tithes in 1973. (He was not fired, but later received a pay raise.) Why are you not zealously squelching this activity, Ted?

- In 1972 when you were removed from your position, the students were not told all the reasons, and when some possible reasons surfaced, Ted, you condemned this as "grave robbing", stating that "love covers past sins". Yet, you have brought every last skeleton (and invented a few) from Mr. Hunting's and Mr. Plache's closets to the student assembly and paraded them publicly so that all could gawk at them. Doesn't love cover their sins too, or are they different, Ted? It seems their "sins" were based on the WCG's understanding of the Bible and Mr. HWA's college policy, not on some moral or spiritual lapse.

- When Mr. Hunting and Mr. Plache condemned their former deeds and the pharisaical practices of the church which they supported, they were branded as hypocrites. Since when is repentance "hypocrisy"? Would you also accuse the Apostle Paul of hypocrisy because he left the sect of the Pharisees and repudiated their despicable beliefs and tactics? Why haven't the remaining WCG ministers gone on record, publicly condemning (1) the spying on students and members, (2) the pharisaical, non-Biblical disfellowship policies which deny one freedom of religion, (3) the suppression of our freedom of religion on campus, (4) the checking of people's tithe records and (5) the suppression of doctrinal facts on tithing, holy days, binding and loosing, prophecy, church government, etc.?

- Why, Ted, do you always say the church has a problem with the administration of 2nd and 3rd tithe? For three years the issue has been whether or not any tithing is required of Christians.

- Ted, why didn't you answer the doctrinal questions Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting raised? Why did you only attack and destroy their past record?

- Why did you, Ted, tell us that you and the doctrinal committee were glad to finally get the doctrinal issues down on tape and paper when the committee has had many of the issues documented from two to five years? What ever happened to the mountain of doctrinal information taken down on tape and paper at the May 1974 doctrinal conference? Why have you and HWA consistently both ignored the myriads of doctrinal papers you have received for years and refused to consider or refute the material?

- Why did you, Ted, say there were three days of doctrinal hearings (Dec. 29, 30, 31) when Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting were given only portions of two days to present their views (Dec. 29 and 30)? Why was Mr. Plache fired from the ministry on Monday afternoon before even being given a chance to present his views fully?

- Why were you and HWA not even present Tuesday when Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting spoke? How can you claim to have heard both sides fairly when you did not even attend? How could you attack the beliefs of Mr. Hunting and Mr. Plache in a sermon before the doctrinal meetings got under way? You didn't even know for sure what they believed, Doesn't Solomon say, "He that answers a matter before he hears it, it is folly and shame unto him (Prov. 18:13)?

- It was not only Mr. Hunting and Mr. Plache who claimed the ability of God to judge attitudes. You, Garner Ted, were always complaining publicly about the "attitudes" of people sitting in the audience whose facial "look" bothered you. It was HWA who constantly equated disagreement with him and his policies with "having a bad attitude" or "being in the bonds of Satan". Ted, why did you say concerning the recent events that "it isn't flesh and blood we fight against"? Are you not judging Plache and Hunting and implying that Satan supports them?

- It was not only Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting who appropriated to themselves the title of "Matchmaker". Loma Armstrong and most of the headquarters and field ministers at one time or another have told lovers to postpone or cancel marriages or tried to match people up. Even the deans and counselors who succeeded Plache have continued this practice to a limited extent - to this very day. Why have you not put a stop to the continued practice of matchmaking if you so detested its practice by Mr. Hunting and Mr. Plache?

- True, Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting fostered some questionable policies. But Ted, in 1971 you wrote a strong letter to Mr. Hunting condemning his pharisaical tendencies, and then you yourself were removed from the ministry at least twice for spiritual and "alleged" moral problems.

- Why, Ted, do so many WCG ministers still live in luxury while the "little ones" go without? Why ask the widows to dig deeper into their pocketbooks when you live in ostentatious luxury and fly in college planes to appear on HEE HAW or go hunting?

- After spending half an hour denouncing and belittling Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting and exaggerating their sins, you, Ted, claimed you don't deal in personalities. If this is not dealing in personalities, what is?

- Why, Ted, did you attempt to make Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting the sole scapegoats for all the oppressive, dictatorial policies of the college and church? Have you forgotten that all the ministry at one time or another was guilty of the same tactics Mr. Plache and Mr. Hunting are accused of?

There is a grave need for AC speakers to accurately gather and present ALL the facts when speaking before the student body. We are sick and tired of attending forums and sermons and having to hear one-sided, inaccurate, emotionally charged diatribes masquerading under the guise of "education" and "truth". Demagogic harangues have no valid place in an institution of higher learning such as AC. It's high time AC's educational leaders start behaving more like educators and less like politicians and demagogues.

Let us hope that truth, openmindedness, freedom of speech and religion will be allowed to reside and grow at Ambassador College as they do at other institutions of higher learning. Let us hope that we will be given a chance to develop real character and to have freedom of choice as you said your dad has always wished.

By the way, Ted, we have learned that campus phones as well as classrooms have been bugged, off and on, for the last two or three years. Also, one of the "super" deacons in the HQ congregation - Bill Evans - was caught red-handed in the back of his van trying to secretly photograph people attending Dr. Martin's lectures. Garner Ted, we hope that you will, with the same righteous indignation you showed toward Mr. Plache's oppressive practices, put an end to these unethical, gestapo-like tactics. In fact, this deacon should immediately be removed from his position, as was Mr. Plache. Right, Ted? Furthermore, bugging of phones makes it somewhat difficult for us to exercise the freedom of speech you so eloquently defended. Those engaged in these illegal and unethical tactics need to be severely reprimanded. How can a Christian take part in these things anyway?

Ted, why are you so fearful that even a few might hear Mr. Plache's side of the story? If our doctrinal "trunk of the tree" is as solid and strong as you and HWA claim, what have you to fear? If you have really proven your teachings once, surely you could prove them again without being afraid of what Mr. Plache or others say. Or is it true, as you admitted during the Pentecost change, that you just accepted what your father taught in many areas and wrote the "proof texts" in your margin without proving them. Could it be that you are using these tactics because you do NOT want your doctrinal "tree" to be examined because you are afraid it is full of holes? Certainly Robert Kuhn and many on the doctrinal committee know that it is - but perhaps they put salary and status before truth.

We encourage you to talk to graduates and employees as the Coumittee did to get the complete picture of who did what in preceding years at AC. You might be surprised whose closets hold the majority of the skeletons.]

AMBASSADOR REPORT

The Gerringer Letter

We are sending you the following letter so you may have a fuller understanding of the real issues that caused Messrs. Hunting, Plache and Ord -- as well as 80 other ministers in the last two years -- to resign. This letter was instrumental in causing Mr. Charles Hunting to open his Bible and to begin to read what it really says on such doctrines as tithing, healing, holy days, prophecy, church government, etc.

The author of this letter, Bob Gerringer, has had nothing to do with its distribution, but in light of his postscript, it is evident that he would not be averse to it.

But you may wonder: "Why are you sending me this material? I'm just an average, non-scholarly church member. Why me?"

The answer to this question is found in Matt. 18:15-17. Here Jesus explains the general principle that if your brother sins against you, you should go to him privately. If he will not hear you, take two or three and go to him again. Finally if all fails, you should take the matter to the church.

The issues contained in this letter have been taken to the top men over and over, and they have refused to change when shown to be wrong and will not even honestly examine the evidence presented. Then they immediately try to suppress the material humbly presented to them, and they try to discredit those who go to them. This underhandedness we detest. Because these issues have never been openly addressed or fairly examined, even though they have been presented to the top leaders in the Worldwide Church of God repeatedly, we are now taking these issues to you, the church member, so you can openmindedly prove the veracity of this research for yourself (I Thes. 5:21)

October 29, 1975

Dear Mr. Hunting,

Contrary to what you may have begun to think, we are alive and well, and we did receive your letter. I just finished this letter to you, but thought I'd better include this cover-page since it was way back on March 5th that you wrote us. I want to apologize very much for taking so long to answer your letter. Actually, by the date on the first page you can see that I began it over six months ago.

It is not out of disrespect or forgotten friendship that you've not heard from me all this time, but rather out of a desire for thoroughness. In your letter you said you wanted to hear from us, and you said, "let me know why you have done what you have done" -- it has been my desire to do justice to that request which has led to hundreds of hours of thought-gathering, researching, writing, and rewriting.

I'm not a very good writer, and in parts I've probably not done the best job of expressing myself, and just as you said typing wasn't your calling, handwriting certainly isn't mine, but sir, please take the time to read this letter in its entirety. And I'll be interested to hear your comments on it, either by letter or in person.

The letter is not as brief as I at first planned, but I will not apologize for the length because that's what it took to tell you why we did what we did. And you'll be glad to know it will not take you nearly as long to read it as it took me to write it!!

[Signed]

Bob

4/19/75

Dear Mr. Hunting,

Thank you very much for your letter. Connie and I really appreciate you thinking about us and taking the time to write us. I must apologize for taking so long to answer your letter. When it arrived we were gone. I arranged it so my new job would begin three weeks after I finished at Ambassador, since I would not be eligible for a vacation until working there for one year.

Actually, the three weeks weren't a vacation -- we traveled north to Modesto to visit my folks; then, to Seattle to see my brother and his wife; then to Spokane to see Connie's sister, husband, and their two kids; then to Colorado to visit my maternal grandmother, aunts, uncles, etc.; then to Lebanon, Missouri to visit Connie's folks and two sisters; then we came straight home., except for a quick look at the Grand Canyon. We traveled 5700 miles which I think is nearly as many miles as it is from L.A. to London by air (about 6000). We drove through blizzards in Wyo., Cob., and Mo. And Teddy came down with the roseola (a mild type of measles) just before we headed home from Mo. So, it was quite a strenuous trip, but, now that it's over, we're glad we took it. For an eight-month-old baby, Teddy traveled quite well, and our 10-year-old car with 98,000 miles gave us virtually no trouble.

Because of the cold weather, etc., etc., we all had colds when we returned to Pasadena. But I had to start to work, and I had accrued no sick leave, so I had to go every day. But, we have all recovered now.

I am a systems analyst at Kaiser Foundation Medical Care Program. They have hospitals, doctors, clinics, and a group medical coverage plan. They have 28,000 employees in Calif., and over 10% of the population of Southern Calif. are enrolled in their Health Plan -- 1.2 million. The work I'm doing is very similar to my job at Ambassador, and there seem to be very good growth opportunities there. It is located on East Sunset Blvd. in Hollywood, and is only 17 miles from our home in Altadena -- it takes 30 minutes to drive there.

Even though it has taken a number of weeks to start this letter to you, I've thought about it nearly every day. I've been jotting down notes to myself whenever I had a thought as to what to say to you, or how to say it.

Connie and I began very intensive and serious study this past July or August (1974). By the time the Feast came, we were reaching a number pf conclusions. A number of times since the Feast I've thought about talking with you. (I'm not sure how many times you've been in Pasadena since then.)

I wanted to talk to you and I didn't want to talk with you; let me explain. I felt closer to you than anyone else on the faculty. Connie and I have always respected you (and Mrs. Hunting) very much. I was extremely pleased when you said you would perform our marriage ceremony -- there was no one else I'd rather have had do it. And, Mr. Hunting, next to my Dad and Mom, there is no one I less wanted to disappoint than you. Yet, I knew that if we talked the questions I would ask and the statements I'd make would probably upset and disappoint you. On the other hand, in my enthusiasm and zeal, I really wanted to inform you of what I had learned and concluded, and why -- the spiritual, emotional, and mental process we have gone through. So, I'll try to give you a brief synopsis of the things we've recently come to see, and how we came to see them.

Let me first say that my actions have been based solely on theology, and not individual personalities, "rumors", real or imagined sins, etc., etc. You mentioned looking at the fruits of those who've left the church, And I'll mention this subject later, but the fruits of either those in or out of the church did not influence my conclusions. Over a year ago I became aware of some of the "personal problems or sins" of certain individuals high up in the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), and yet clear through last July (1974) I would firmly and emphatically defend the WCG and its leadership, though I was aware of certain "problems". Anyway, please don't think we found out about a sin, heard a rumor, believed a slanderous tale, etc., and this caused us to leave Ambassador College, because that just isn't true.

The first time I can remember having a question was in November, 1972. At a Bible Study Mr. HWA announced changes in the tithing doctrine -- AC and WCG employees no longer had to pay third tithe, and ministers had to pay second tithe. What alarmed me was that he didn't quote one scripture or explain, biblically, the reasons we had been wrong and why we were changing. He only referenced certain budgetary reasons such as insufficient excess 2-T, etc. Something I had been taught as being truth from His Word which wasn't to be taken lightly, was casually changed without so much as a verse being read. Interestingly, a couple of months later the decision regarding 2-T being paid by ministers was quietly reversed because of a deluge of complaints from the ministry. I only pondered this event for a short time, then dismissed it, but it did make a small impression I would recall later.

The next time I can recall having certain questions and doubts was almost one year later, right after the Feast in 1973. The Pentecost question was a large issue among some at that time. Mr. HWA was speaking at services, strongly defending a Monday Pentecost, when he said that the day on which Pentecost was to be kept was not a decision for us to consider or make, but "it is the church's responsibility". Of course, he meant the church hierarchy and, more specifically, himself. I immediately thought, the members are the church. The church is not a building, and neither is it the top ministers, nor is it Mr. HWA -- it is all of us. So here was an issue we were being told didn't concern us -- we should simply do it the way "the church" (Mr. HWA) told us. We were told God will not judge us on this matter, but that those who make the decision are responsible. The simple inference was, don't look into it, because if you reach a different conclusion than "the church", you still must do as "the church" says.

Mr. Hunting, Jesus Christ worked awfully hard to remove the need for a physical priesthood; the "vail was rent," and so each Christian has direct access to God. But the approach I've related in the above paragraph re-invents the priesthood and inserts it between God and the Christian.

Both Paul and HWA have said "Follow me as I follow Christ," or in other words "as I follow the Bible." Yet these words are rendered empty and meaningless when we are told we must leave certain decisions up to "the church," and that if we don't think a decision constitutes "following Christ," we must abide by it anyway, since "it is 'the church's' responsibility."

These statements regarding Pentecost I also dismissed after a short while; although they, too, made a lasting impression.

Next in my recollection was "the split" which occurred in Feb. and March of 1974. Mr. HWA's letter to all the members, dated Feb. 25, 1974, contained a number of statements which bothered me.

On page two of this letter, he accused the dissenting ministers of one overall thing -- greedily trying to get the tithes into their own pockets. I knew this accusation wasn't true. These ministers were willing to give up their job security, salaries, fleet cars, and in some cases their church-owned homes because of their firm convictions and their unwillingness to compromise with God's Word as they saw it. I'm not discussing at this point the truth or error of what they believed, but simply the point that they didn't have greed and theft in their hearts. (Perhaps one or two out of 40 or 50 were guilty, but Mr. HWA said this was the primary motivation for all the dissidents.) Mr. HWA's accusation was a serious one, and he told 50,000+ people. I, of course, assume he honestly felt the accusation to be a correct one. I have never heard him publicly before the membership apologize for making the accusation. It is interesting that the very next sentence in his letter said that the "one who ACCUSES ... is always guilty of the very thing of which he falsely accuses another."

On page 4 Mr. HWA explains why he "did not state the specific details of the personal, emotional problems" of GTA which led to his 1972 "leave of absence." He said he was afraid that the specifics would "SEND THOUSANDS OF BABES IN CHRIST TO A LAKE OF FIRE." Mr. Hunting, this attitude is a large part of what is wrong with the WCG. Mr. HWA (and, I think, much of the ministry) looks at the members as poor, dumb sheep; innocent, helpless, babes who must be sheltered, spoon-fed, kept in the dark, told nothing, never consulted, and guarded strictly lest they fall helplessly away or are defenselessly led astray. This is the way the Catholic Church looked at and treated its laity during the Dark Ages. Though perhaps the motive is good, this modus operandi keeps the masses ignorant and blinded. What happened to God's Holy Spirit? Many of these "babes" are spiritually mature adults, and they should all be begotten with God's "Spirit of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." When people are treated like children and animals (sheep), they will act the part, and their minds and God's Spirit will be stifled and smothered. Mr. HWA said on that same page, "The number of lives I might destroy forever ... might be as many as ten thousand." As long as the WCG ministry looks at the members as a gullible, vulnerable mass of people, the members won't learn to stand on their own two Christian feet, and use the Holy Spirit to grow and mature spiritually.

Before an individual becomes a member of the WCG, he is encouraged "to prove all things, hold fast that which is true." The ministry tells him, "Don't believe what we say -- check it out." "If we teach contrary to God's Word, do not follow us." Etc. Unfortunately, the opposite process begins once one is in the WCG. The member is told that "Mr. HWA is closer to God and has more of His Holy Spirit than anyone else, which is the reason he is the leader of the Church" or "Since Mr. HWA is the leader of God's Church, he must be closer to God and have more of His Holy Spirit than anyone else." Therefore his opinions (re: scriptural or non-scriptural matters) are more godly than anyone else's can be, so to do as he says must be the course of action which most pleases God. This type of circular reasoning is taught to the members, and is applied to a lesser degree to Mr. GTA, then the evangelists, then the pastors, then the P.E.'s, etc., etc. By the time you get to the lowly laymember, his opinion is worthless, when compared with the hundreds of those who must be closer to God since they have higher positions, or who have higher positions since they are closer to God.

In this way the member is stripped of any confidence in himself or God's Spirit in him. He places Mr. HWA and the rest of the ministry in the position of defining what he must believe -- in place of Jesus Christ and the Bible. The ministry carefully shows the laymembers how to prove the beliefs of the WCG from the Bible. The member thinks his belief is firmly grounded in the Bible, but for him to prove it he must rely heavily on the proof-texts and the explanations he has been given. I don't necessarily mean all these beliefs or explanations are incorrect, but the member is being groomed into a spiritually dependent person, and his primary dependency isn't It on Christ. or the Holy Spirit, but on Mr. HWA and the ministry of the WCG.

Our most precious, God-given possession at birth is our mind -- our ability to think independently, to question, to learn. Couple this with the Holy Spirit and we have the most fantastic tool known to man -- a mind begotten with God's Spirit. The approach of the WCG indicates that the laymember needs the Holy Spirit only - to help him overcome "personal problems" and help him accept that which the ministry tells him the Bible says. The Holy Spirit isn't simply to help us agree with the way the WCG explains it. In this way, the "weak of the world" are being made weaker. It doesn't take spiritually strong person to merely accept exactly what the WCG teaches and to obey it strictly. But it Does require strength of character and spirit to question, research, prove, and then abide by your convictions, regardless of what the WCG or anyone else says.

In this way I think the members of the WCG are not being helped. They know what they believe and how to "prove" it. If there is a doctrinal change they are then taught what new thing they should believe and how to "prove" it. But they are not encouraged to draw conclusions on their own, to research through many "worldly" commentaries written by "unconverted" men, to discuss with many the various options. I do not think it can be said that the members of the WCG are allowed, let alone encouraged, without fear of reprisal, to approach with intellectual freedom and honesty and candor any scriptural issue on which Mr. HWA and the "church" have ruled. And of course they would be forbidden from remaining "in the Church" if, based upon the results of their study and convictions, their actions were contrary to the official WCG teachings.

So in these ways and others, Mr. HWA's letter of Feb. 25, 1974, to the membership, was very disturbing to Connie and me.

Continuing the chronological chain of events, DLA, AJP, and many other ministers resigned or were fired, and some 3,000 members quit attending. I was curious as to the reasons these men were quitting, but I did little investigation -- I felt this (the WCG) was God's One True Church and He would take care of the situation. I felt I should obediently follow Mr. HWA (although I didn't totally agree with his tactics).

It was in April, 1974, that Connie and I found out that her parents in Missouri were about to leave the WCG. By phone and letter we immediately encouraged them to stay in the True Church, even though it wasn't perfect. We sincerely felt they'd be making a serious mistake to leave, and if they had left at that time, we would have flown out to discuss it with them.

Next came the May Ministerial Conference. Since I received "The Bulletin," I was allowed to attend all the "plenary sessions," although I attended none of the "workshops." I was very impressed and encouraged. The Armstrong seemed to be sincerely willing to examine any doctrine.

But Mr. HWA still took what seemed to me a less than candid approach. He called our D&R change "new light," "new truth" which God has (finally) shown us. In other words, he subtly blamed our doctrinal error on God. He never once admitted that he had simply been wrong. He never apologized to all the people whose lives and marriages he had ruined. He gave God all the credit for wrecking and destroying thousands of families.

In Mr. HWA's May 14, 1974 letter to all the brethren he said on page 10, "A strong and firm family structure is a basic building block of any happy and stable society." --And yet for years we've been destroying thousands of these "building blocks" of society. Mr. HWA still claims he has never made a major mistake in his guiding of this church, yet I can scarcely think of a more serious and damaging theological blunder as far as the physical, day to day lives of people are concerned.

Continuing in the May 14 letter (page 11): "No matter how much anguish is caused ... God's Church cannot depart from God's Laws or His Truth." In other words, the WCG can't depart from its interpretation of what God says on the matter.

Another quote from the same letter: "Brethren, this very experience (the D&R change) ought to teach all that loyalty to God and to His Church must always be placed first, over supposed or real wrongs or personal grievances." Mr. HWA is saying loyalty to the WCG must be placed above loyalty to God's Word! He's saying that it was right for us to obey the WCG's unbiblical and anti-scriptural teaching on D&R all these years, because this is what he terms "loyalty to God's Church." And he says this loyalty must "always be placed first, over supposed or real wrongs or personal grievances;" in other words, loyalty to the dictates of an organization must be placed first over what the Bible really teaches (on the subject of D&R, for instance) if you personally come to see the Bible and the WCG do not agree. Mr. HWA goes on to say (page 11), "God has given those of us who are loyal to Him and His Word the relief we relied on Him to give us." In actual fact, the "relief" has been there for 2,000 years, but it has taken the WCG this long to discover and accept it. And those who were "loyal to Him and His Word" on the subject of D&R needed no relief since they refused to ever submit to the WCG's incorrect teaching in the first place. Yet Mr. HWA would consider those who ten years ago refused to obey the WCG's teachings on D&R, Pentecost, etc. to be disloyal, even though they were being loyal to what God said in His Word.

Another quote, same letter (page 11): "I want all of you to know how happy we are for the answer given by God Himself." Again, this makes it sound like God has been responsible for our wrong teaching, and that now God has decided to clear up the matter (which must make people wonder why it took God so long). Mr. Hunting, the truth is that Mr. HWA and everyone else who taught, supported, and accepted (myself included) the disgraceful practice of breaking up marriages is responsible -- but one Being isn't responsible -- God. He had nothing to do with the WCG being in error all these years in the matter of D&R. It is a giant "cop-out" to claim the only way out of the doctrinal nightmare called D&R was for God to provide "the relief we relied on Him to give us."

Then Mr. HWA tells how much he and the other ministers appreciate "the faithfulness of those of you who have endured this anguish in order to be obedient to our God." Actually, they were obedient to Mr. HWA and the WCG rather than God every time they submitted to a WCG command to break up a happy home. Anytime we obey men rather than God, He is not pleased, regardless of the sincerity of the individuals involved. Mr. Hunting, is it ever right to obey Mr. HWA rather than the Eternal? Yet Mr. HWA commends the brethren for doing exactly that, and then labels it faith in and obedience to God. Finally, Mr. HWA says, "Loyalty and faithfulness always pays." And whether he realizes it or not, he is saying that "loyalty and faithfulness" to himself rather than to God (if they differ) "always pays." Why? Mr. HWA feels if he is wrong it is God's fault, and God is responsible to provide "the relief" through "new light," "new truth," "revelation," etc.

I am not questioning the sincerity or dedication of Mr. HWA or anyone else. But back at the time of that Conference, what Mr. HWA was saying and writing was not providing me with the reassurance that God agreed with his approach or attitude.

So all of the things I've been relating to you finally led to perhaps the most important question and a very pivotal issue for any member of the WCG: Is the WCG the True Church? Is it the only True Church? Are True Christians only found in the WCG?

I had not looked into the doctrinal issues facing the WCG. I had not consulted with or read any literature from any of the "dissidents." I felt this would be disloyal to Mr. HWA and God's True Church. If the WCG was the only true church, where else was there to go? why go elsewhere anyway? and since God was totally in charge of the WCG, wouldn't He take care of everything in time and in His own way? and wasn't it showing both a lack of faith and insubordination to question the way the WCG handled things and the way Mr. HWA directed things since that would be identical to questioning God?

But would God be upset at me for studying extensively into both sides of the doctrinal questions? Would God really be upset if I dared to read some of Dr. Martin's literature; many in the WCG said we shouldn't even open a piece of literature written by a "dissident."

When I first began attending the Radio Church of God, I was told this was the true church because we did and taught exactly what the Bible said. Recently the WCG has said we're the true church because we change our teachings when they are wrong.

By July of 1974 the WCG had changed two of its teachings in a short period of time. It was obvious the WCG didn't have the Bible 100% correctly understood. Since there had been errors in the past, there certainly would be errors in the future, so of course, it couldn't be said the WCG was the true church "because we have 100% accurate teachings." So what is it that would make the WCG the only true church? Is there a certain percentage of correct doctrines necessary? 99%? 90%? 80%? Are there certain key doctrines which must be understood correctly, whereas others are not as important?

I could more easily explain my conclusion and the reasons for it in person, but it became clear to me that there is no such thing as one True Church the way the WCG believes there is -- in other words there is not one true organization. The WCG is not the True Church of God.

The one true Church of God certainly does exist, but it has no organizational boundaries. The definition of a Christian, one who is a part of the body of Christ, a member of the Church of God is one who has God's Holy Spirit in him (Rom. 8:9).

The same question with regard to an individual arose in my mind --- must an individual understand a certain percentage of doctrines correctly in order to be a Christian (in order to comprise a part of the true Church of God)? 90%? 80%?

Mr. Hunting, God looks on the heart and the attitude of an individual, not on how much they understand. We cannot draw lines and say a person must agree with a certain view of a certain number of doctrines, or he cannot receive the Spirit of God. People who are illiterate, elderly, blind, deaf, and/or low IQ, etc., can all become Christians. They may understand very few of the Bible's doctrines, but if God finds a receptive heart and attitude, God can give His Holy Spirit and so add another member to the true Church of God.

I concluded the WCG has no corner on truth or Christians. I feel most in the WCG are in the "True Church," but the WCG isn't that "True Church." Neither is any other organization on earth, although many of them also have members of the "True Church" in their organization. The Body of Christ transcends man-made organizational boundaries (such as the WCG) and comprises all whom God has chosen to receive His Spirit.

Mr. HWA feels the WCG is the only True Church. He feels he is an apostle -- God's one direct representative on this earth. But after coming to grips with the "One True Church" issue, I could no longer agree with Mr. HWA on these matters. I came to realize that simply taking the word of Mr. HWA and the WCG would displease God -- I would be placing them above Him and His Word as the primary molders of my beliefs. Chronologically, I arrived at these conclusions in early August, 1974. It was at this same time that Connie, 3-week-old Teddy, and I took a two-week vacation to Seattle to visit Chuck and Carol.

Chuck and Carol had, completely independent of Connie and I, arrived at these same conclusions, and they had already begun studying all sides of the issues. It was at Chuck's home that we first read some of Dr. Martin's literature and listened to his tapes. Many members in Seattle received Dr. Martin's materials, so Chuck originally sent for it so he could study it, then disprove Dr. Martin's teachings to any who raised questions regarding these subjects. However, upon careful analysis, Chuck and Carol were surprised to discover that much of what Dr. Martin said indeed appeared correct, and so they began to study more and more.

I was very skeptical when Chuck declared Dr. Martin was right on a number of issues where he differed with the WCG, but I knew then I'd really have to confront these issues.

When we returned from the Northwest, I visited Dr. Martin's Foundation for Biblical Research. I discussed a few things with him, then took copies of his writings and tapes. I studied what he had to say on a subject, what the WCG had to say, what the Associated Churches said. The subjects we researched were: Church government, old and new covenant, sabbath, Holy Days, tithing, healing, law and grace, etc. etc., as well as a number of areas of prophecy.

I will not even begin to try to relate my conclusions in these various doctrinal areas. But by the Feast, 1974, we knew it would be our last with the WCG -- the doctrinal gap between them and us was growing with virtually every subject we looked into.

As soon as we returned to Pasadena following the Feast, I began looking for another job. It was about this same time that Chuck and Carol, and Connie's folks quit attending the WCG. Virtually independent of them, we were nevertheless reaching very similar conclusions.

I perhaps reached the depth of my disappointment with the WCG when I read a statement written by Mr. HWA appearing on page 631 of the December 3, 1974, "Bulletin." Its implications are horrendous. He said, "Christ... has BOUND in heaven what His Church, even in unrealized error, has bound in earth." The statement hit me like a lightning bolt. I am enclosing with this letter a copy of my contribution to the "Open Forum" of the "Bulletin." In it I explain why I feel nothing can be further from the truth than the above statement by Mr. HWA. Needless to say, the "Bulletin" would not print my opinion in the Open (?) Forum. Bob Kuhn refused it because it was "too inflammatory."

The WCG cannot afford to openly present both sides of the story, cannot allow its members to read the opinions of those who disagree with Mr. HWA and the official stand of "the church." In the ministerial meeting of March 4, 1974, GTA said he was just trying to hold it together. He and Mr. HWA treat the effect and not the cause of the WCG's problems. This is why disfellowshipment is such a handy tool for them. New, unapproved, "heretical" ideas and opinions can be stopped by kicking the trouble-maker out of "the church" and then forbidding anyone in "the church" from talking with him.

When it comes to controlling both the actions and minds of people, the WCG has a lot in common with the Catholic Church of the Dark and Middle Ages and the Renaissance. That church used excommunication to rid itself of "heretics." (They used even stronger tactics in the Spanish Inquisition.) Galileo believed and was trying to disseminate facts regarding the earth and the universe. "The church" threatened him with excommunication if he would not recant. Rather than allow people to examine the facts and judge for themselves, the pope felt he had to protect the "babes" of the church from deception, and so shut-up Galileo. He may have even claimed Galileo was in the bonds of Satan" and greedily trying to get a following so he could get their tithes! The Catholic Church had such absolute control over Europe for over 1000 years that it was largely responsible for the Dark Ages. It was the "free spirits" and "rebels" against the church who got the world back on the track of progress. There was no dirth of sin during the Dark Ages, but there was complete stagnation in the areas of learning, knowledge, invention -- the only progress was backwards. I feel the members of the WCG are in their own Dark Age.

I'm sure that not everything Galileo believed was accurate, but he should have been able to express his ideas for public evaluation. I definitely do not agree with everything Dr. Martin teaches, but I thank God that at last he can express what he believes and why without fear of reprisal. And I'm equally thankful that I can feel free to study and evaluate for myself what he and everyone else says -- then I can decide and act accordingly.

God does not today have any organization of men ordained to tell others what the Bible says and what God wants them to do. The WCG is inaccurate in many of its teachings -- so I know it isn't commissioned to enforce its beliefs on others.

Wherever there are thinking, questioning, probing, seeking inquisitive curious, independent, intelligent, free people, there will be differences of opinion and interpretation, and I don't mean only regarding obscure, relatively unimportant scriptures dealing with seven thunders or why eagles gather around carcasses. God intended this -- He gave each of us individual minds and He gave us His Word which in parts is anything but perfectly clear. God is concerned with our heart and our attitude, and not with our ability to, like programmed computers, all profess the same point of view on a specified number of doctrines. Individuals can differ significantly in both their beliefs regarding and their application of the scriptures, and yet all be brothers in Christ and members of His Body.

But whenever someone who used to be a loyal supporter and member of the WCG begins to believe and teach something different, Mr. HWA declares them to be "in the bonds of Satan." In his letter of February 25, 1974, he makes such statements as: "These deceived ministers (are) allowing Satan to use them," "Satan is the real author," "these Deceived men (are) now allowing Satan to turn them the wrong way," "this thing is of SATAN." It is one thing for Mr. HWA to disagree with them, but when he dogmatically declares them to be agents of Satan he is making a serious accusation. And when I began to see that many of the things "these deceived ministers" were saying were true and that many of the actions they were taking were the only courses they could follow and still be loyal to God, I began to recall Matt. 12 wherein the Pharisees accused Jesus of acting "by Bellzebub the prince of the devils," although Jesus said His actions were "by the Spirit of God." If God through His Holy Spirit is motivating and guiding certain individuals, He will not look lightly on accusers who claim the Spirit-led individuals are actually motivated by and in the bonds of Satan (see verses 31 and 32).

I would like to quote from The General Catalog of Ambassador College --1973-74: "The entire curriculum in religion and theology is designed from a fresh viewpoint and approach ... (The student is) under continual caution to lay all preconceived ideas and religious bias on the shelf .. All difficult verses are studied not only in relation to other Scriptures, but also in connection with Hebrew and Greek texts, historical and archaeological facts, expositions of commentaries and recognized authorities, and the processes of careful study and specialized research. Students are taught to approach the Bible with openmindedness and with due respect for the results of past research, but accepting only that which is proved true, regardless of previously accepted or universally approved theories or doctrines... Nothing is accepted unless proved, and every student is emphatically encouraged to think for himself in the realization that his salvation is a personal matter between him and God."

Mr. Hunting, the above quote is a misrepresentation of the facts. As students we were not encouraged to think for ourselves. Careful re-evaluation of one's thought system and the admonition "to lay all preconceived ideas and religious bias on the shelf" were urged if one had other than a WCG upbringing. However, once one accepted the WCG theology, all serious, and especially vocal, re-evaluation was expected to cease. One is then expected to proxy all "important" re-evaluation to Mr. HWA and, perhaps, Mr. GTA. Dr. Hoeh and others have often made the statement, "We shouldn't try to cross the Red Sea before 'God's Apostle'," -- meaning that, just as the Red Sea wouldn't open up for anyone except Moses and only Moses knew the proper time and method for crossing it, understanding in "important" doctrinal areas will not open up until Mr. HWA puts his mind to it and decides the matter. As one faculty member expressed it, "I've just had to come to accept the fact that we can never grow any faster than the two men at the top."

The selection I quoted from the college catalog is an example of the artfully developed technique used by the WCG and AC to advertise their indoctrination as "education." I realize this is a strong statement, Mr. Hunting, but were we ever encouraged to challenge and question the doctrines of the WCG? Back when I was in AC, suppose that during an OTS class a student had seriously questioned the reasoning behind a "Monday Pentecost." Would such inquisitiveness and openminded re-evaluation have been welcomed? Would the student have been encouraged to continue researching until he satisfied himself with a logical, proven conclusion? Suppose during an Epistles class a student had expressed disagreement with the instructor's explanation of Gal. 4:10?

Suppose the student felt this indicated Paul was opposed to the Galatians observing the Holy Days, and that they were not to be kept by the Christian today? Would the instructor have applauded this student's intellectual curiosity? Would the instructor have encouraged the student to conduct "careful study and specialized research," including the "expositions of commentaries and recognized authorities"? Would the student have been warned to put no more emphasis on what the WCG says than other theologians, but rather to prove it for himself? And would he have been allowed to present to the class his research and his conclusions, regardless of the outcome of his study?

We know what would have happened if a student would have been so daring and bold as to have asked such questions. There would have been gasps of horror in the classroom at his virtually blasphemous statements. The instructor might have taken the time to repeat the WCG's official explanation of the question. If the student seemed unwavering in his point of view, he would have been "called in," "counseled," told not to question "God's Apostle," told God is in charge, told this is the only true church, he must repent and change his attitude, "the doors swing both way," asked if he was really converted, told he was disloyal and would never make it into the field, etc., etc. Am I exaggerating? If so, only slightly. The college catalog's glowing description of intellectual freedom and honesty as an exemplary specimen of higher education is very different than the real-life approach taken by AC and the WCG towards those who question and disagree with official church dogma.

Probably no college instructor at AC has ever had to face such a situation, because it is doubtful whether any truly inquisitive, questioning, openminded individuals still actively possess these traits by their third year of college. Almost everything about AC teaches one to accept what he is taught without question. Unquestioning acceptance and unfailing obedience prove ones loyalty to "God's Church." AC is not a "liberal arts college"; it isn't an "educational institution." At most AC is a theological seminary where a person can go to learn what the WCG denomination believes and how to instruct others in those beliefs. I vividly remember attending, in my freshman year, Pasadena Bible Studies conducted by Mr. HWA. He was always getting very upset at people who sent up questions during the Bible Study. If any question only slightly expressed disagreement with him, what he had said, a belief of the WCG, etc. Mr. HWA became very irate. He would scold the questioner for "his attitude," his lack of respect, disloyalty, and so on. Mr. Hunting, I'm not exaggerating. He made it quite clear he does not want to be questioned. He was very defensive and constantly felt the questions to be a challenge to his authority. He made it clear to all of us that he was responsible to no one but God (and the more people who believed that, the more powerful he became). At first it bothered me when he responded so defensively and antagonistically to the honest, open questions sent up by people in the audience. However, as the months went by and I attended many Friday night sessions conducted by Mr. HWA, I began to look at it the way he did. When he chewed someone out because they asked a certain question, I agreed with his appraisal of their "wrong attitude." Slowly my outlook was being warped until I concurred with his belief that no one had the right to seriously challenge or question him or the WCG.

The above is only one example of the WCG intolerance of beliefs contrary to theirs, or even of those who merely have questions about the church's doctrines. Being a student at AC, and to a lesser extent a laymember in the WCG, is to experience a type of brainwashing. The indoctrination results in a form of mental castration; theologically the individual will not or cannot think for himself. He will blindly accept, believe, and obey whatever Mr. HWA says. He will loyally support and uphold the WCG's castigation of those who question, doubt, or criticize.

Primarily theologically, and oftentimes in many other facets of life, the WCG has turned thinking, reflective, inquisitive, analytical, seeking, free people into a dependent, unconfident, gullible, easily led and manipulated group. Obviously there are a wide range of degrees of how individuals were before entering the WCG and how they are ending up, but I feel the above trend represents the vast majority of cases. II Cor. 10:5 does not say, "bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Mr. HWA and the WCG."

Mr. HWA has done what he has accused so many other churches of doing -- taking one small Biblical point, and making it the central point of a religion. Mr. HWA claims there's only one reason we've been called today -- to get the gospel of the Kingdom to the world as a witness. This extremely limited and incomplete interpretation of the real meaning, intent, and fullness of the gospel is crippling when it comes to understanding the New Testament and what real Christianity is all about. Mr. HWA has often said, "Jesus Christ not the gospel." Well, He most certainly IS! Christ IS the good news. Paul in I Cor. 15:1-4 sums up the gospel as: "Christ died for our sins ... He was buried ... He rose again the third day." Rom. 1:16 says the gospel is "the power of God unto salvation."

I've read Mr. HWA's booklet, "What is the True Gospel." He only quotes five or six of the New Testament scriptures which mention "gospel." Three or four of the quotes serve as his "proof-texts" -- and he proceeds to draw dogmatic conclusions, ignoring both the immediate context and the rest of the New Testament. If he'd examine the other 95 places where "gospel" is mentioned the meaning would be quite clear, although very different. This booklet is typical of the research and "open-mindedness" which has gone into most WCG publications and conclusions. Mr. HWA's concept of the gospel is similar to the blind man who got hold of the elephant's tail and quickly concluded that an elephant resembled a piece of rope.

So, instead of spreading the real gospel, Mr. HWA is delivering his gospel message to political figures and dignitaries around the world. It is also interesting to examine the scriptural support for these activities. In the October, 1956, Plain Truth, page 22, Mr. HWA said, "The popular churches of Christendom nearly all take active, vigorous part in the world's affairs and its politics ... They are part and parcel of THIS WORLD, and they serve only THE GOD OF THIS WORLD, Satan the Devil. They are deceived! They do not even know they are doing wrong -- they ARE DECEIVED!"

Although God has personally given Mr. HWA no commission, he nevertheless feels that virtually every commission God has ever given is his. Mr. HWA either thinks he is, or is to do the job given to: Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, the "watchman," the "inkhorn," the one who "cries aloud and spares not," Elijah to come, a type of John the Baptist, either Joshua or Zerubbabel, one of the two witnesses, an apostle, a "messenger," one who "prepares the way," Hosea, Malachi, Moses (anyone who disdains Mr. HWA's authority or position is immediately compared to Korah), Daniel, Joel, Amos, etc., etc., etc. And, of course, he primarily feels he is to fulfill Matt. 24:14 -- see Rev. 14:6 for the most likely individual to take care of that job.

When I examined Mr. HWA's "US and BC in Prophecy" belief and found it to be not only scripturally and historically unprovable, but untrue, I realized that virtually my entire concept of Bible prophecy was built on sand; not necessarily the what, but certainly the where, when, and to whom.

Mr. R. C. Meredith said that Dr. C. Paul Meredith had "always been a student, and he took careful notes on Mr. Armstrong's prophetic sermons. As time went on, he compared these notes to the events that were taking place -- and to what other preachers had said -- and soon came to realize that Mr. (H.W.) Armstrong was the only one who actually knew what was going to happen BEFORE it happened!" ("The Inside Story of The World Tomorrow Broadcast", p. 12)

"This is the ONLY Work on earth that really understands ... the specific meaning of present-day world events, and the exact time schedule of prophecy!" (IBID, p. 17)

To see how inspired and Godly this supposed "understanding" has been, I would like to quote from just a few of the writings of Mr. HWA and others in the WCG. I would first like to refer to one of the original issues of the Plain Truth, June, 1934. On page 3 Mr. HWA has drawn a chronological chart of end-time events." In this chart the "tribulation" is diagrammed as ending in 1936. 1936 is also labeled "End of Age." Immediately thereafter are the "heavenly signs" and then the "Day of the Lord."

Now to quote Mr. HWA in the May/June, 1941 issue of the PT: "Since the last issue ... many things have occurred, every one in accordance with prophecy! ... War events thunder on, rapidly approaching the prophesied climax! ... Hitler now emerges as the "BEAST" of Revelation! ... Bible prophecy ... shows the Roman Axis forces will take Egypt, Suez, Palestine, -- even Gibraltar ... Britain will go down. And, unless we turn as a nation to God ... our beloved United States will have to go under ... We lack space for more detailed comment on specific prophesied events in this number... Without (a spiritual turnaround) we (USA) lack TOTAL Defense, without which we shall never win. We are at the END of the present order. ARMAGEDDON is now just a short way off."

Now to quote Mr. HWA, September/October, 1941 issue of the PT, page 7: "What does Hitler's invasion of Russia mean? What does BIBLE PROPHECY say about it? As usual, there are many ideas. So FEW, it seems, have a right understanding of the Bible and its prophecies (You can say that again!) Plain Truth readers know world events, before they occur. ... Hitler MUST BE THE VICTOR in his present Russian invasion! ... A settlement will be reached, giving Hitler the supplies and resources he must have and undoubtedly part of Western Siberia. The terms will give Hitler assurance that the Red army is unable to attack him, as Hitler turns his wrecking machine to the British Isles, the United States, and Palestine. Hitler will emerge from this Russian campaign stronger than ever, free to turn the entire might of his forces against Britain -- and AMERICA!"

PT, May, 1950, page 5, HWA: "Most certainly it is easily possible the thing (U.S. of Europe) will be fully developed and ready to strike in seven years! Yes, time is running out on us ... One third of our people will die from starvation ... and in the next FEW YEARS!"

PT, Aug., 1952, page 10, HWA: "Thus it has been proved conclusively and beyond doubt, that Hitler did not die -- his body was not there -- HE HAD ESCAPED! ... The next Pope will be a professed miracle worker, as supposed proof that God is using him to order and pacify the world!"

PT, April, 1956, pages 3, 23, 24, H.L. Hoeh: "PLAGUES are coming -- and, according to this prophetic warning, in about two years from now. ... For seven long and frightful years we are going to suffer as never before -- until we are left 'few in number!' We have about reached our population peak, despite the guesses of our political and industrial planners ... In another ten years for fear of Communist terrorism it won't be safe to live in Asia or in Africa! ... This most important Work will in all probability be completed in 1972! ... The coming Fascist-religious revival of Europe will conquer us within a prophetically indicated 17 years!"

"1975 in Prophecy, 1956, pages 10, 12, 20, HWA: "Indications of prophecy are that this drought ... will strike sooner than 1975 -- probably between 1965 and 1972! ... At the outset of this article I stated that the KEYS that had kept prophetic doors locked and closed from human understanding have now been found -- or, more properly, been given to us by God ...

Yes, millions of lukewarm inactive professing Christians will suffer MARTYRDOM -- and that before the anticipated push-button leisure-year of 1975 dawns upon us!"

PT, August, 1957, page 5, R.C.Meredith: "We will soon find that hoof-and-mouth disease will spread COMPLETELY OUT OF CONTROL! These things are not far off. They are here and NOW! DISEASE EPIDEMICS are prophesied to begin soon! America, WAKE UP! After 1965, we are destined to run into increased trouble with the Gentile nations. America and Britain will begin to suffer from trade embargoes ... We will begin to experience the pangs of starvation and of scarcity of goods!"

"A True History of the True Church", 1959, page 27, Hoeh: "God has given His Church -- THIS CHURCH -- just two nineteen year cycles ... The first cycle passed. Then God suddenly opened the door for the second cycle in January, 1953."

PT, December, 1962, page 42, HLH: "Russia and China Will NOT Split ... Russia and China are to remain allies!"

PT, Jan., 1963, page 21, HWA: "Somewhere along about seven to ten years from now the REVOLUTION IN THE WEATHER will become a national and international calamity. Drought, epidemics of disease, will reap a mounting harvest of death across North America -- and in Britain. Economic depression will strike ... And the time will be right for the new United Europe to strike!"

PT, June, 1963, page 46, RCM: "This coming, revived Holy Roman Empire which is prophesied to arise in Europe and CONQUER America and Britain within the next ten to twelve years ..."

PT, Nov. 1964, page 32, Eugene Walter: "In the next few years it is entirely possible that some of the satellite countries will break away from Russia altogether. East Germany could well become reunited with West Germany. Rumania and Hungary are also good candidates to join the West."

PT, May 1965, Page 21, R.F. McNair: "The greatest proof that the 'times of the Gentiles' have not yet ended is the simple fact that the Gentile Arabs are still in possession of the old city of Jerusalem. They will remain in control of this city until the second coming of Christ."

-15-

"The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy," 1967, pages XI-XII, HWA: "The events prophesied to strike the American and British peoples in the next four to seven years are SURE! That is why the events of the next four to seven years may prove this to be the most significant book of this century. These colossal world events, shrinking the first two world wars into insignificance, WILL COME, on schedule."

PT, Feb., 1970, page 27, R.F. McNair: "Will Britain ever be admitted to the Common Market? Probably not!"

I have given you about twenty quotes out of about one hundred which I have collected -- predictions made by Mr. HWA and others which did not materialize. The WCG always tries to speak with dogmatic assurity; however in the case of prophecy, their absolute-ism has been quite reckless.

In the Feb., 1972, Tomorrow's World, pages 30-31, Mr. HWA tries to claim they never really made specific predictions: "It has never been our intention to SET DATES! Yet, in our human zeal and enthusiasm we have a few times come close to it or appeared to.. Yet, in our zeal, we have used 'possible's' and 'probably's' and even appeared to set dates we really didn't intend to set."

Mr. Hunting, I sincerely feel that is an unfair "cop-out." After all, Dr. C. P. Meredith said Mr. HWA "knew what was going to happen BEFORE it happened!" Mr. R. C. Meredith claimed "Truth after truth, prophecy after prophecy has come to be clearly REVEALED by Almighty God to His servants in this Work." ("The Inside Story of the World Tomorrow Broadcast", p.17). He also declared that the WCG understood "the exact time schedule of prophecy!" Mr. HWA claimed to have been given by God "the KEYS that had kept prophetic doors locked and closed from human understanding" and he claimed on page one of "1975 in Prophecy" that these prophecies were now "crystal clear."

Not only has the WCG set specific dates and placed clear time limits on its prophecies, but time and again it has been in error -- prognosticating that a certain thing will not occur and it does, or that something else will occur which doesn't. Certainly a few of the forecasts have been correct, but when so many are made a few are bound to come to pass.

In that Feb., 1972 Tomorrow's World editorial Mr. HWA claims that this entire subject is "of MOST MINOR consequence." To get another view on this subject I would like to quote God in Deut. 18:20-22: "But the prophet, which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die. And if you say in your heart, How shall we know the word which the Lord has not spoken? When a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord has not spoken, but the prophet has spoken it presumptuously: you shall not be afraid of him."

The WCG specializes in "Self-Fulfilled Prophecy." The News Bureau or writers choose those sections of newspapers, news releases, news magazines, etc. which they believe fulfill prophecy, and then ignore much of what might modify or contradict those selections. Eventually sufficient clippings have been amassed to prove that severe drought, crop failure, upset weather conditions, etc. are going to sweep the country next year. But when hoof-and-mouth disease fails to envelop the intended target or when Russia and Red China do indeed split, does the WCG admit error and print retractions? No. They continue to interpret world news. They do not analyze the news, but rather force it to fit into their pre-conceived prophetic super-structure. The WCG often makes conditions seem worse than they really are in an attempt to "help" God fulfill prophecy sooner and according to their interpretation of it.

Soon after Rohan's attempted Mosque burning Mr. HWA began saying that neither he nor anyone else in the WCG had ever proclaimed that a literal temple had to be built in Jerusalem. When I heard him say it, I believed it -- unquestioningly. After all, it would be virtually a sin to question Mr. HWA.

Could Mr. HWA's denials represent a possible credibility problem? situation ethics? expedience? deception? The following quotes helped me decide:

PT, Oct., 1958, page 4, column 31 paragraph 4, HLH: "A temple or sanctuary is yet to be built by the Jews in Jerusalem! ... it shall happen in less than 14 years from now!"

PT, June, 1967, page 2, column 2, paragraph 6, HWA: "There will very soon be a Temple in Jerusalem, with daily sacrifices once again being offered ... They will invade Jerusalem, and take charge of the Temple." Page 4, column 2, paragraph 3, HWA: "So there will have to be a temple there!" Page 5, column 1, paragraph 4, HWA: "So there will be a temple built on the spot of the old temple in Jerusalem." Page 5, column 2, paragraph 4, HWA: "Then Revelation 11 shows there will be a temple in Jerusalem."

PT, Mar., 1968, page 8, column 2, paragraph 3, RCM: "... a religious center and Temple will be built there (Jerusalem) within the very next few years!" Page 41, column 1, paragraph 2, RCM: "The building of a literal Temple" and "a great religious leader making his Headquarters right in that Temple in Jerusalem" are to be signs that "the END OF this age" is near.

PT, Aug., 1968, page 41, column 2, paragraph 4 GTA: "Bible prophecy specifically states that there WILL BE A TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM." Column 3, paragraph 3, GTA: "This reveals clearly. that the TEMPLE of which these prophecies speak must be a Temple IN JERUSALEM -- on the same site as the one in which Christ spoke; the same site on which Solomon's Temple had stood. This cannot be some other "temple" in some other area -- it must be a temple IN JERUSALEM -- or the prophecies of your Bible fail! ... He will SIT IN A TEMPLE OF GOD" -- ON THE TEMPLE SITE -- IN JERUSALEM!"

Why did no one in the WCG speak out against Mr. HWA's denial of the above statements?

The WCG's apocalyptic predictions, of course, are not unique in the field of religion. The Montanists set a date for the return of Christ in the second half of the second century. The Anabaptists predicted the return of Christ in 1533. Prevalent among European Jews was the belief that the Messiah would come in the year 1648. The Millerites expected the second coming of Christ in 1843. The WCG expected to flee in 1972, with the Second Coming in 1975 (Sept.6th, to be exact). And the same thing happened when all these dates failed: the delay of the second advent failed to put an end to any of these movements; quite to the contrary it gave them new life and vitality. The failure was always followed by greater efforts to expand their work.

Perhaps the most poignant illustration of this is the Jehovah's Witnesses. The JW's have set dates of 1878, 1881, 1914, 1918, 1925, and 1975. I think you would find it interesting and informative to read the article: "Prophetic Failure and Chiliastic Identity: The case of Jehovah's Witnesses." in the American Journal of Sociology, 1970, pages 926-948. I will not take the time to quote from it here, but the parallels between the JW's and the WCG are unmistakable. There is an incredible similarity between their reaction to repeated prophetic failures and the WCG's.

In Jan., 1972 Mr. HWA claimed the gospel had gone to all the world, whereas it had not before that time; many in the WCG felt God had "given the world more time to repent"; Mr. HWA claims God has "delayed the return of Christ: so Mr. HWA can finish witnessing, so he can finish the job God gave him; Mr. HWA claimed that something of divine significance did happen on Jan. 7, 1972 -- the greatest door ever opened to the Work -- Reader's Digest ads -- thus justifying the long-awaited Jan 7th date, ending the second 19-year time cycle (Mr. HWA has conveniently failed to ever refer back to the Reader's Digest ads "door" because they failed utterly); Mr. HWA pointed out the approval of the auditorium contract as another significant event in Jan., 1972.

These five examples of the WCG's reaction to the failure of its 1972 prediction are very similar to the reactions of the JW's over the years. There are other similarities I won't take time to cite. Suffice it to say that, as the above article described the JW's, the WCG also represents a "case of the process of 'self-fulfilling prophecy'." That is, these two groups fulfill their own prophecies in two methods:

- 1) By interpreting news events to fulfill prophecy, whether the news is doing that or not, and
- 2) By reinterpreting prophecies in terms of their own particular organizational circumstances and activities.

With reference to the first method, I will take one quote from that article about the JW's, page 935: "The most frequently used device has been the selective interpretation of emerging historical events as confirming signs of the approaching end. The group's negative and pessimistic world view sensitized it to perceive virtually every major and minor social disturbance and natural catastrophe as an indicator of the impending collapse of the earthly system." This accurately describes the WCG's News Bureau and most of its writings on current world events.

With reference to the second method, I will again quote from the same paragraph on page 935: "A related device has been the effort to interpret the experience and achievements of the movement itself as confirming signs of the approaching climax and as validation of the sect's conception of itself as an agency of prophetic fulfillment."

To illustrate the second method, I will quote from Mr. HWA's co-worker letter of April 27, 1975, page 3: "Do you realize WHY God has held world events up, delaying the coming of Christ (Matt. 24:48??), of the GREAT TRIBULATION, and the DAY OF THE LORD? ... God is now holding back the world events heading toward the final climax of the GREAT TRIBULATION and the DAY OF THE LORD u n t i l we get the message of the KINGDOM OF GOD to the leaders and rulers of East Asia."

So the actions and strategies of the WCG are not new. One of the most meaningful and thought-provoking things I have ever read I completed this past May. The author is Eric Hoffer. The book was first published in 1951. It is called The True Believer; its subtitle is "Thoughts on the Nature of Mass Movements." He begins the "Preface" by saying: "This book deals with some peculiarities common to all mass movements, be they religious movements, social revolutions or nationalist movements."

I strongly urge you to read it. No member, past or present, of the WCG should be without it; on nearly every page I found one or more statements which were applicable to AC and the WCG. His perception and incisiveness were so uncanny, I found it hard to believe that The True Believer was written clear back in 1951 and that Mr. Hoffer had no knowledge of Mr. HWA and the WCG at the time.

Because there are a few lengthy quotations I want you to read, I decided to simply send you a copy of The True Believer. I will refer to the pages on which they are found, and they will be marked for your easy reference.

Inside the front cover of the book I have listed the pages on which are found the selections which I have marked for you. Of course, I hope you'll read the entire book, but please at least read those I've marked.

Many of the selections I have marked, but especially pages 21-24 describe the type of people, in general, who become ardent members of mass movements. Pages 55-61 discuss how a mass movement wins and holds its followers; in short, this is done through its ability "to foster, perfect and perpetuate a facility for united action and self-sacrifice" (pg. 57).

Pages 75-79 are superb; virtually every sentence is uncanny in its incisive perception into the WCG's approach to doctrine, dogmatism, absolute-ism, heresy, reason, close-mindedness, fanaticism, etc., etc. "Mass movements ... interpose a fact-proof screen between the faithful and the realities of the world. They do this by claiming that the ultimate and absolute truth is already embodied in their doctrine ..." (pg. 75). True believers "refuse to believe any unfavorable report or evidence" about their movement ... It is the true believer's ability to 'shut his eyes and stop his ears' to facts that do not deserve to be either seen or heard which is the source of his unequalled fortitude and constancy" (Pg. 76). Mass movements are "stripping each human entity of its distinctness and autonomy and turning it into an anonymous particle with no will and no judgement of its own. The result is not only a compact and fearless following but also a homogeneous plastic mass that can be kneaded at will" (pg. 79).

Pages 105-110 discuss the qualifications of the leader of a mass movement, and Eric Hoffer's description bears a striking resemblance to Mr. HWA. On these pages he also discusses the subject of obedience. Mass movements are "inculcating and extolling the habit of blind obedience ... All mass movements rank obedience with the highest virtues and put it on a level with faith ... 'Not to reason why' is considered ... the mark of a strong and generous spirit" (Pg. 108). On that same page he quotes Pope Leo XIII as saying that there must be "complete submission and obedience of will to the Church and the Roman Pontiff as to God Himself."

Regarding effective leadership in a mass movement: "There can be no mass movement without some deliberate misrepresentation of facts" (Pg. 107).

On page 118 he discusses what a mass movement does to its followers: "people raised in the atmosphere of a mass movement are fashioned into incomplete and dependent human beings."

On page 115 "the indispensable devil of every mass movement" is discussed. "It is his voice that speaks through the mouth of the dissenter... If anything goes wrong within the movement, it is his doing."

You can read these and many other quotes I have marked in the book itself, so I will cite only one more. I consider this final quote to be the most profound and important statement made in The True Believer. It sums up concisely why I feel that church organizations in general, and the WCG in particular, by their very existence and perpetuation, are missing the entire essence and one of the great meanings of Christianity:

"Collective unity is NOT the result of the brotherly love of the faithful for each other. The loyalty (love) of the true believer is to the whole -- the church, party, nation -- and NOT to his fellow true believer. True loyalty (love) between individuals is possible ONLY in a loose and relatively free society. " (Pg. 115, emphasis mine)

And "a loose and relatively free society" the WCG is not!

At the beginning of this letter I affirmed that the actions taken by Connie and I were not the result of individual personalities, dastardly rumors, real or imagined sins, slanderous tales, etc. Yet, we have not been deaf and blind, and when this subject, loosely categorized as "fruits" is examined, it only lends credence to our decision to leave the WCG.

Mr. Hunting, in your letter to us you said: "What about the fruits of those who have left the Church? ... Examine carefully the lives of those who have already left." We know scores of people personally who've left the WCG, and I've run into none of the "very tragic stories" you alluded to. Those we know are Christians exuding the qualities of Gal. 5:22-23. They are not in "the bonds of Satan", and have not suddenly displayed the traits described in Gal. 5:19-21. They are excited and enthused with the freedom and liberty Paul describes in Gal. 5:1. There has been nothing alarming in "the fruits of the scores of people we know well who have left the WCG. And even more exciting is the fact that we have met scores of people who've never been in the WCG, and in most cases have never even heard of it, who are Spirit-begotten Christians and members of the Body of Christ!

You asked me to "examine carefully the lives of those who have already left." Therefore, I am sure you also want me to examine carefully the lives of those who have stayed in the WCG. This I have done in the case of some of its leaders, and it was a very startling and disappointing exercise.

You asked us: "What about the fruits of those who have left the Church?" Mr. Hunting, what about the fruits of the two top men in the WCG? Do they meet the high standards set by God in I Tim. 3 and Titus 1? I don't think so. (These qualifications are required, not optional; they are not to be treated lightly or applied only when expedient!) Since you are acquainted with this issue of ministerial qualifications and are no doubt aware of the unacceptable "fruits" which I question, I will not go into specific events. But I think it is fair to say that all the facts about the actions of the top two men, plus certain behavior by a number of other individuals in the upper echelon of "the Work," would severely shock and stun the essentially naive laity. Unfortunately the WCG must live under a weighty, self-imposed "sword of Damocles."

And yet Mr. HWA claims, without basis, biblical or otherwise, to occupy the office of an apostle and to be the physical head of God's only true Christians on the earth today. II Cor. 11:13 warns of false apostles, and Rev. 2:2 commends those who "tried them which say they are apostles, and are not ..."

I am sure that some who have left the WCG have had problems, have not always produced "good fruit," and since you say there are "some very tragic stories," then I'm sure there are. But there have been some extremely tragic stories -- true ones -- involving far too many of those who are leading and directing various aspects of the WCG. Good or bad fruits do not necessarily either validate or discredit the beliefs held by the bearer, yet when those producing "bad fruits" attempt to govern others with their interpretation of God's Word, then their self-proclaimed authority should not be tolerated.

So, to conclude my comments on "fruits," I don't feel that everyone who left the WCG is a blameless "good guy;" nor do I believe that there are only "bad guys" in the WCG. I do feel, however, that there have been very few "tragic stories" among those who left the WCG, and I think a number of the leaders of the WCG, including the two at the top, have disqualified themselves by their "fruits."

In this letter I have not really addressed most of the major doctrines of the WCG, nor because of the length of this letter will I. However, Connie and I have come to disagree with much of what the WCG teaches.

One key to our new beliefs regarding the Sabbath, Holy Days, grace, new and old covenant, tithing, etc. was acquiring an understanding of the old covenant. When I graduated from AC, I had no real understanding of the old covenant, and why we kept and followed certain things, and ignored others. Much of the Bible became crystal clear when we realized and accepted that the covenant was made with Ancient Israel, and no one else. Also, we saw that God plainly states that the covenant was to be kept in its entirety, completely, and no place in either the New or Old Testaments are Christians told to keep whatever they feel like keeping. Yet, Mr. Hunting, this is what the WCG does!

Please read the covenant to which Israel agreed in Exodus 20-23. How much of that does the WCG obey? I don't mean partially, but exactly as God stated it. The WCG would say that certain portions of the covenant aren't applicable today, or can't be followed because of changed circumstances. However, there is no biblical authority for obeying only part of that covenant. Take Lev. 23 -- where in the NT does it say the Holy Days can be kept apart from the sacrifices which were an integral, if not focal, part of each holy day observance. Why does the WCG, completely arbitrarily, not enforce the blowing of trumpets portion of the Feast of Trumpets (Lev. 23:24) , but does enforce the removal of leavening and eating of unleavened bread (lev. 23:6) during the Feast of Unleavened Bread, but does not enforce God's command to build of branches booths which are to be lived in (Lev. 23:40-42) during the Feast of Tabernacles, does enforce fasting (Lev 23:27, 29, 32) on the Day of Atonement, does not enforce the waving of a sheaf of firstfruits during the Days of Unleavened Bread (Lev. 23:10-11), etc., etc.? There is no biblical authority for such haphazard, fragmented, and selective obedience to God. The entire Day of Atonement observance (as commanded by God in the OT and modified nowhere in the NT) revolved around the goat ceremony, and the WCG is kidding (pardon the pun) itself if it thinks it can observe the Day of Atonement, almost totally disregarding God's instructions for said observance, and then claim to be uncompromising in its obedience to God!

But the problems mentioned above are unavoidable when Christians today try to put themselves in a system God never intended for them. If we offend God's laws regarding the Sabbath, Holy Days, tithing, etc., "in one point," we are "guilty of all," and that is exactly what the WCG is doing as long as it professes to obey portions of God's Word which were never intended to be followed today.

Anyway, we have come to research many of the WCG's doctrines, and a close examination shows most of them to be in part, if not completely incorrect. Mr. HWA always claimed that he "let the Bible interpret itself." However, the truth of the matter is that his beliefs and teachings embody a plethora of "private interpretation." I could write hundreds of pages and not do justice to the doctrinal questions which have arisen in my mind in the last year and a half, but that is not my purpose in this letter.

Many people have told me they see problems throughout "the Work," but they continue to be a part of and support it because it's "getting the gospel message to the world." Mr. Hunting, I hope you will look at what Mr. HWA writes and says about "the gospel," and then contrast that to what the New Testament says. Look at the approximately 100 places in the NT where the word "gospel" is found; read the context. Please read Acts 17:3; I Cor. 1:23; 2:2; II Cor. 4:5; Gal. 1:16 -- you will see Paul emphasized Christ, and didn't merely allude to Him in a way which would prevent embarrassment. When Paul preached Christ, the listeners knew Christ had been preached to them, whereas Mr. HWA prides himself in being able to preach the "gospel" in a way that no one realizes it has been preached. In Rom. 1:16 Paul says, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ." This year, in the Bulletin, page 293, Mr. HWA says, "One thing has been a serious handicap, and caused me and my touring team NO LITTLE EMBARRASSMENT. We have had to say that we REPRESENT either Ambassador College, or the WORLDWIDE CHURCH OF GOD."

Mr. HWA has frequently quoted Gal. 1:6-9, wherein Paul warns against those who "pervert the gospel OF CHRIST" and preach "another gospel." Well, Mr. HWA is a victim of his own quotation -- he indeed perverts the gospel of Christ and preaches another gospel -- the gospel of Herbert Armstrong. The WCG is not preaching the gospel of Christ to the world. I think Mr. HWA himself sums it up best on page 15 of the October, 1975, Good News: "What we proclaim ... in reality is outside the field of religion." (I also address this subject on pages 11-12 of this letter.)

After beginning to examine many of the WCG's teachings in detail, I began to realize they had their own complex Talmud -- do's and don'ts, many of which were not mentioned in the Bible one way or the other. When Mr. HWA left the Church of God, 7th Day, he did not retain their teachings against dancing, card-playing, movie-going, etc. Yet, over the years the WCG has experienced similarly biblically unfounded rules and regulations.

Since starting his Church Mr. HWA has been making ex-cathedra pronouncements on everything from music to voting, dating to farming, doctors to hair lengths, investments to pierced ears, holding public offices to skirt lengths, adoption to beards, smoking to jewelry, wigs to pantsuits, medicine to customs of the land, dancing to make-up, types of employment to birthdays, business arrangements to stained-glass windows, sideburns to participation in dramatic productions, sex to nursery rhymes, bikinis to space travel, etc., etc., etc. I do not necessarily take issue with the WCG's teachings on all of the above subjects, but I do take issue with Mr. HWA's belief that he has the authority to enforce his personal, private opinions on thousands of others. Although God is silent on many of the topics mentioned in this paragraph, that does not seem to stop the WCG from speaking for God when the subject arises. Such flagrant examples of "private interpretation" are wrong!

Mr. Hunting, thanks again for taking the time to write us last March, and especially thanks for taking time out of your busy schedule to read my letter. It has taken me over six months to research and write this letter, and it hasn't been easy. I certainly have not intended it to be offensive, but rather to be honest, sincere, and "straight from the shoulder" -- qualities I have long admired in you.

I am more than happy to have spent hundreds of hours of time on this letter, because these are all things I've wanted to tell you. The purpose of this letter was to show you some of the major steps Connie and I went through leading to our decision to resign from my job at AC and leave the WCG. If nothing else, this letter should show you that our actions, though you may not agree with them, were undertaken only after much thought, prayer, and study. We have not taken this matter lightly or casually, but rather we have tried to seriously, logically, and systematically consider all the factors.

Connie and I are very happy, blessed, and excited about the future. We get infinite enjoyment out of Teddy, and our second child is due in December. We certainly love you and everyone in the WCG, including the man most accountable, Mr. HWA. We do not question sincerity -- only God can do that. We have no hate or bitterness towards anyone, although I would not be completely candid if I claimed there wasn't a great deal of disappointment we have experienced in the last year and a half. But the blessings we have received and are receiving far overshadow any negative experiences. By the way, Connie and I have many fond and heartwarming memories of Bricket Wood and the tremendous people we knew there. If we can ever travel to Europe again, we'd love to visit the campus and all of you. (Do you still play basketball?)

Connie and I would really like to see you next time you're in Pasadena. In fact, we bought our home over one and a half years ago and you've never seen it. We'd love to have you up for dinner, so just give us a call next time you're in town. Also, if you choose to answer this letter, I'll strive to answer it much more quickly and with a great deal more brevity!

Please give our regards to Chris, Denise, and Charles Freeman.

All our love,
[Signed]
Bob & Connie

P.S. A few of our other friends also wonder why we have left the WCG, so rather than writing other letters of this scope, I'll just send them a copy of this one.

DID CHRIST Reorganize THE CHURCH?

WHICH is the one true church? Here is amazing new light from the Bible, establishing the TRUTH of this important question of Church organization and government. Let us open our minds, and without prejudice, search the Scriptures, whether these things are so!

Just what is "The Church"? What is its object and purpose -- its real mission?

Is it AN ORGANIZATION, or a spiritual ORGANISM, composed of those saints whose names are written in heaven, and who have, and are led by, the Holy Spirit?

And, granting it is not just some one organization, yet should not the true Church be organized -- and if so, HOW?

Just what is the true BIBLE form of organization and Church government?

A startling new truth now comes to light; thru God's precious Word!

Most of us have ASSUMED one or two central points in this important question -- taken them for granted without investigation. And this careless assumption has led most of us into error. It has left us open to be deceived!

The Bible cautions us to prove ALL THINGS! It is profitable for correction as well as for instruction in righteousness. (The true Christian must be willing at all times to be corrected and chastened -- and must continually seek to GROW in knowledge as well as in grace!)

It is the true remnant people of God who keep the COMMANDMENTS that the Devil is wroth with today. It is us Satan is seeking to deceive. He will deceive even the very elect if POSSIBLE. And it is possible if we are careless, and assume things without careful study of all sides, and ample PROOF from the Scripture. We must be continually ON OUR GUARD, never trusting any man, or even a board or group of men, but God alone, thru His Holy Word!

So let us SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES! Let us begin at the beginning.

The CHURCH, as we know, actually BEGAN at Mount Sinai, in the days of Moses, Acts 7:38.

True, this was the Church under the OLD Covenant, not the New. True, there is a vast difference between the Old and the New -- and part of just what constituted that difference is one of the important things we want now to investigate. We want ALL the facts on the subject.

The Church was Married To The Lord!

At Mt. Sinai, God set up AN ORGANIZATION. Make no mistake about that!

In our quest to learn WHETHER God's people should join themselves together in an ORGANIZATION, having CHURCH GOVERNMENT, let us begin by recognizing that in the beginning, at Sinai, God Himself formed His people into an ORGANIZATION, having GOVERNMENT.

At that time God's people -- the only people on earth who were the people of God -- were formed into a NATION. As such, they had LAWS, and GOVERNMENT. They were A KINGDOM. First of all, they formed a civil government. But in this government, God also placed certain church governments, giving them the rituals, ceremonies, and sacrifices of the Law of Moses. Church and state were inseparable.

In any government, men are placed in authority, with power to GOVERN and to rule. There never was a government without MEN in authority, ruling over others. And, perhaps without exception, there always is, and always was, some ONE MAN who was in actual fact, tho not always in name or title, the real head, or ruler.

As God first organized His people, HE was their HEAD -- their King. But soon the Israelites wanted a MAN to be their king, like the Gentile nations around them. It is IMPOSSIBLE to have ORGANIZATION, or GOVERNMENT, without having a MAN as the actual and real head, even tho we SAY Christ in heaven is the Head, and continue to try to believe it that way.

A fact that many of us have never noticed is that THE OLD COVENANT WAS A MARRIAGE COMPACT!

When God first set up AN ORGANIZATION on earth, the people who formed this organization were MARRIED to the Lord. It was this MARRIAGE that bound Him and His people together!

In Jeremiah 3:14, the Lord says: "Turn O backsliding children, saith the Lord; for I AM MARRIED UNTO YOU."

The Lord Divorced His Wife!

The making of the Old Covenant, as recorded in the 24th chapter of Exodus, was the MARRIAGE CEREMONY. If anyone may doubt this, let us merely ask, WHEN, if not here, did the Lord ever enter into a marriage ceremony, joining :Himself and His people together as husband and wife? Where else, in all the Bible, can you find any account of a marriage ceremony?

The MARRIAGE ceremony was the OLD COVENANT CEREMONY! They are one and the same. It was this marriage, then, that established ORGANIZATION and GOVERNMENT among God's people!

We want to repeat that! We want you to understand it -- for it is of great importance -- it is the KEY FACT upon which the real truth, so long hidden, really hinges! IT WAS THE MARRIAGE THAT FORMED GOD'S PEOPLE INTO AN ORGANIZATION HAVING CHURCH GOVERNMENT!

That being so -- and it IS so, and none can deny it -- then it naturally follows that THE ORGANIZATION and the GOVERNMENT of God's people, at least as ordained and sanctioned by the Lord, EXISTED ONLY AS LONG AS THE MARRIAGE UNION WHICH ESTABLISHED IT!

If the marriage was done away, the ORGANIZATION and the CHURCH GOVERNMENT was at the same time done away! For it was only this marriage relationship which established the organization -- the kingdom -- the government, both civil and ecclesiastical!

When God first proposed the Old Covenant marriage, Exodus 19:5-6, He promised His people that IF -- they would be obedient, as a wife should to her husband, they would become "a kingdom of PRIESTS, and an holy NATION." In other words, a GOVERNMENT of religious character -- a CHURCH GOVERNMENT!

This is repeated in Leviticus 26. There the blessings to accrue for obedience are enumerated, together with the PUNISHMENT for DISOBEDIENCE! And what was that punishment to be?

Notice it! -- "they that hate you shall REIGN OVER YOU . . . SEVEN TIMES" -- or 2520 years! (verses 14-28).

Look at it, in your own Bible! If Israel, the WIFE, married unto the Lord, proves disobedient, Israel is to LOSE her government! No longer to be AN ORGANIZATION! Enemy nations shall REIGN OVER -- rule over -- the Israelites. Their own government no longer will rule them. No longer will they be an organization of their own.

Thus God threatened to turn the GOVERNMENT -- the ORGANIZATION, if you please, over to the GENTILES for 2520 long years, TAKING ORGANIZATION AND GOVERNMENT AWAY FROM HIS PEOPLE!

Now let us see whether He did that!

Israel, of course, disobeyed.

"And I saw, when for all the causes where by backsliding Israel committed adultery I HAD PUT HER AWAY, AND GIVEN HER A BILL OF DIVORCE," Jeremiah 3:8.

Surely that ought to settle the matter! Israel was DIVORCED! This cut off the GOVERNMENT, the ORGANIZATION, from among God's people, and TURNED IT OVER TO THE GENTILES FOR 2520 LONG YEARS -- until the very present generation! Still other Scriptures PROVE it!

Government And Organization Turned Over To Gentiles

Let us follow the story thru the Scriptures. Let us see if the other Scriptures confirm this astounding truth!

Israel sinner first, and was taken captive to Assyria about 721 B.C. But the House of Judah remained, and as long as they did God's true BIBLE FORM OF ORGANIZATION and CHURCH GOVERNMENT continued with them.

But soon Judah was sinning even worse than Israel, and they, too, were taken captive. King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon captured the Jews, destroyed Jerusalem, moved the Jews to the land of the Chaldeans. Among them was Daniel, the prophet.

Soon after this captivity, Nebuchadnezzar had the dream in which he saw the great metallic image. Of course you are already familiar with this.

Only Daniel could tell the king his dream, and its meaning, as GOD had revealed it to him. But notice a point in its interpretation:

"This is the dream," Daniel said after describing the image, "and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king. Thou, O king, are a king of king -- in other words, a WORLD RULER -- "for THE GOD OF HEAVEN HATH GIVEN THEE A KINGDOM," verses 36-37.

Note it! GOD gave the kingdom over to him! Now God never makes covenants with GENTILES. God never did, and never will, marry a Gentile people as such, or will, marry a Gentile people as such, or establish them as HIS kingdom, HIS government, HIS organization, HIS Church!

Yet it plainly says, here, that GOD GAVE NEBUCHADNEZZAR A KINGDOM! How? And WHY? Since God could not have established or set up a kingdom in Babylon, among the Gentile Chaldeans, the only way God could have GIVEN Nebuchadnezzar a KINGDOM was to have given OVER to him the Kingdom He already had set up -- the one set up AT SINAI!

Babylon never was the Kingdom, the Government, or the Church of GOD! But Nebuchadnezzar, under God's divine direction TOOK CAPTIVE the people of God's kingdom and church. And so God GAVE OVER TO HIM the KINGDOM -- that is, the GOVERNMENT -- the AUTHORITY to RULE -- which had been set up at Sinai!

Understand it! The AUTHORITY to RULE and to GOVERN was now taken away from the people of God, because of disobedience, and this AUTHORITY was transferred over to NEBUCHADNEZZAR and HIS SUCCESSORS for 2520 years!

When The Kingdom is Restored

Now notice the truth revealed in this Gentile Image a little further.

The AUTHORITY TO RULE was not only turned over to Nebuchadnezzar -- not just temporarily -- but it was to continue in the power of his successors 2520 years!

"And after thee shall arise another kingdom . . . and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule OVER ALL THE EARTH," verse 39. Note it! The RULE God had transferred over to Nebuchadnezzar was to continue in the Persian Empire, and the Grecian Empire -- they were to bear RULE over ALL THE EARTH! Yes, and by God's ordination!

Then followed the fourth kingdom of iron -- the ROMAN Empire. In the latter days -- at the end of the 2520 years -- NOW -- in OUR generation today -- this Roman Empire is once more to be restored by a union of ten European Dictators, as foretold in Revelation 17.

And then what shall happen, at the END of this 2520-year Gentile reign?

"A STONE (Christ) . . . smote the image," -- smashing this Gentile reign into pieces! Yes, CHRIST, at HIS SECOND COMING, is to SMITE it, and end it. What will happen then?

"The God of heaven shall set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: . . . but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and IT shall stand forever," verses 34, 44.

Jesus' disciples understood that the KINGDOM, with all authority to GOVERN, whether civil or church government, had been taken away from His people, and turned over to Gentiles. You'll remember how they asked Him, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1:6). But He did NOT restore it, then, He did NOT bring the government, the organization, the authority to rule, back from the Gentiles to His people! Consequently He did NOT reorganize His people, or establish any government, ecclesiastical or civil, among them! This the New Testament Scriptures, also, abundantly prove!

God had proposed to demonstrate, thru His people, what blessings and prosperity would naturally follow a civilization based upon HIS laws. And ALL the laws hand on that great basic principle of LOVE -- love to God, and love to neighbor. The principle of "GIVE" and of "SERVE", not of "GET" and "ACCUMULATE."

But, when His people Israel would not continue governing themselves according to His laws, based on this great fundamental principle, God turned authority of government over the Gentiles, and gave them 2520 years to DEMONSTRATE, by experience, the fruitage of the Gentile ways of lust.

The 2520 years is now up. The Times of the Gentiles have run their course. And just LOOK at the results of this Babylonish Gentile civilization! Governments are overthrown, and now arming to the truth to destroy on another! Business and industry is bankrupt under the principle of competition and strife and self-gain, want and poverty stalk the land, and millions are in want in the midst of plenty! Society is rotten and immoral, crime, racketeering, vice, gambling, run rampant. Religion is in confusion, torn by strife and division, in the grip of the GENTILE system of injecting ORGANIZATION and GOVERNMENT into the Church! Truly, in its every phase, our modern civilization is in BABYLON today!

Praise God, JESUS IS SOON COMING! Yes, coming to RESTORE the Kingdom -- the government, the organization, to the TRUE people of God! Coming to DESTROY all this "BABYLON" which has visited such unhappiness to the world! Coming to reign and RULE.

The 12, The 70, And The 7

But, did not Jesus SET THE CHURCH IN ORDER? Did He not REORGANIZE it again, at His first Coming? Did He not set up a definite "BIBLE FORM OF ORGANIZATION," and establish a definite "CHURCH GOVERNMENT?"

We have always ASSUMED that He did! Yes, we have taken this carelessly for granted! But let us prove THIS point -- let us prove ALL THINGS! Let us search the Scriptures whether this assumption be so!

First, did Christ ever set up an ORGANIZATION, with its boards of HEAD MEN, with authority to GOVERN over the "spiritual affairs," or the "FINANCIAL AFFAIRS" of the Church?

Let us see if we can find such boards, or Scriptures giving them such authority.

True, Jesus did call out TWELVE disciples, who afterward were called "apostles." But WHERE in the Scripture are they called "THE BOARD OF THE TWELVE" -- a term we hear freely used today, under claim of having "the BIBLE form of organization."

WHERE do we read of one of them being appointed as the "CHAIRMAN OF THE TWELVE" or another as the "SECRETARY OF THE TWELVE?" Is THIS Biblical and Scriptural? If so, where is the text?

When Jesus called them, and ordained them, did We give them AUTHORITY TO RULE? Just what did He give them POWER and AUTHORITY to do?

Notice it, in Luke 9:1-2:

"Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority" -- for what? To GOVERN? To RULE the Church? Notice carefully! Let us have a BIBLE REASON for all we accept and do! . . . ". . . and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he SENT THEM to" -- He sent them to WHAT? To rule and govern? To have supervision over the spiritual affairs of an organization? Notice it, IN THE BIBLE! . . . . "He sent them to preach the Kingdom of God, and to heal the sick."

The word "apostle" means "one sent." The definition in Cruden's Concordance is "one sent forth. Used as referring (1) chiefly to one of the 12 disciples of Christ; or (2) to any of various other followers of Christ who did evangelistic work."

An apostle does not mean one IN authority, but one UNDER authority -- one SENT by the authority of another! The only power and authority Jesus ever gave even His original twelve was to heal the sick, and cast out demons. And He SENT them, not to rule, but to PREACH -- not to BEAR authority, but to MINISTER, to serve!

Nowhere in the Scripture do we find the slightest hint that the twelve constituted a higher-up church board, and nowhere were they even given power to rule, or govern, or decide what doctrines the other disciples must believe.

Were The 12 Continued On?

Is there any Scripture giving plain instruction that the TWELVE were to continue on perpetually as a Church board? There is none!

Yet many have been led honestly to suppose that the apostles were to be continued exactly twelve in number, because a successor was ordained to replace Judas Iscariot. So let us SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES on this point, whether this is so.

What was Jesus' PURPOSE in ordaining twelve disciples? Let the Scripture say:

"And He ordained twelve, THAT THEY SHOULD BE WITH HIM, and that He might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils," Mark 3:14.

Not that they should rule the spiritual affairs of an organization. Jesus ordained the twelve in order "that they should BE WITH HIM!"

Now notice WHY He wanted them to be with Him -- and WHY a successor was appointed for Judas!

Judas' successor had to be a man possessing a certain qualification -- because he was "ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection," Acts 1:22.

Notice the necessary qualification. Not ability to govern, nor talent to discern and vote on right doctrine. Look at it in your Bible: "Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and our among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto the same day that He was taken up from us, must one be ordained TO BE A WITNESS WITH US OF HIS RESURRECTION," Acts 1:21-22.

Do you grasp it? Do you see plainly revealed here the PURPOSE of the twelve?

First, Jesus ordained twelve "that they should be with Him." Later, after His ascension, one of these was replaced. And it had to be ONE WHO HAD BEEN WITH HIM, along with the others, thruout His entire ministry, beginning with the baptism of John!

Why?

"TO BE A WITNESS WITH THEM OF HIS RESURRECTION!"

Search the Scriptures as we may, we cannot find any other purpose for the twelve apostles, except to go out and preach, and heal, and to be WITH Jesus thruout His ministry, in order that they might forever PROVE the TRUTH OF THE RESURRECTION!

That was the only reason for the definite number of TWELVE! To suppose that this definite number of twelve was to be continued and perpetuated AFTER THEIR MISSION WAS FULFILLED is absurd!

Is there any statement that others later called "apostles" -- ones SENT to preach - - merely evangelists -- such as Paul, Barnabus, etc., were "one of the twelve?" There is no such statement in the Bible! Rather Paul and Barnabus, after they were called apostles (as in Acts 14:14), went up to Jerusalem UNTO THE APOSTLES, Acts 15:2. And here, at this conference, the Holy Spirit revealed truth TO BE WRITTEN AS PART OF THE INSPIRED SCRIPTURES, which were not yet, at that time, complete. Surely no "12 apostles" are authorized by the Scripture to receive such special instruction from the Holy Spirit, to made part of the Holy Scriptures, TODAY! Such an implication is little short of blasphemous!

True, Paul and a few others are called "apostles." But an "apostle" is merely "ONE SENT." If we could find one single Scripture where Paul, or any other than the original twelve, ever were called "ONE OF THE TWELVE", as we freely hear men style themselves today, then we would know the twelve continued on.

BUT THERE IS NO SUCH SCRIPTURE!

The words "The twelve" are NEVER used except to refer to the original 12 which companied with Jesus thruout His ministry, to be witnesses of His resurrection!

There is NO SCRIPTURE even hinting that the twelve were continued. On the other hand, every Scriptural indicaion is that THEY WERE NOT. Even the authors of "A History of the True Church" were unable to find any continuance of THE TWELVE in the TRUE Church!

That ought to settle the matter. The Scriptures speak of FALSE apostles, and of "them which SAY they are apostles, and are not, but hast found them LIARS," II Corinthians 11:13; Revelation 2:2. Let us beware being deceived. It is the COMMANDMENT KEEPERS whom the Devil seeks, in these latter days, to deceive!

Let us be sure everything we accept is based on true BIBLE AUTHORITY, and not falsely read INTO the Bible by imputing a meaning to various scattered texts contrary to the plain, obvious intended meaning in ITS SETTING!

How About The Seventy?

Now let us look briefly at the "70."

Did THEY constitute a CHURCH BOARD? Was power to govern, or rule, or act as an advisory board in matters of doctrine or church government? Was THAT the purpose for which Jesus appointed them?

The ONLY PLACE IN THE NEW TESTAMENT where "the seventy" are mentioned is in the 10th chapter of Luke.

Beside the twelve, whom Jesus ordained "that they should be with Him," for "a witness of His resurrection," and whom He sent forth to preach, "the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come," verse 1.

Did they ASSEMBLE -- as a board?

No, they WERE SENT, not together but TWO AND TWO, on a special mission -- preparing for the personal visits of Jesus to these various towns and cities! Instead of assembling as a church board, THEY SEPARATED -- two and two!

What instruction did Jesus give them? Did He vest them with power to RULE, or set them up as an advisory board, or appoint them to be the LEADING elders?

No, He said, "Go your ways . . . and HEAL THE SICK . . . and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come high unto you," verses 3, 9. They were authorized only to heal, cast out demons, and preach! That is all!

They returned from this special mission (verse 17), and Jesus gave them power to tread on serpents and scorpions so nothing should hurt them. And THAT IS THE LAST EVER HEARD OF THEM! Their mission was ended!

Brethren, let us be honest! IF the Lord ever intended them to be a continuous church "BOARD OF THE SEVENTY", do you not honestly think we should find some further mention of "the seventy?" Do you not think we should read of this "board" in the history of "the TRUE Church" -- IF they ever were such a board?

No, the simple truth, when we come to "search the Scriptures WHETHER these things be so," is that they never were a church board, and they ENDED their work and mission before Jesus was crucified!

The fact that in one or two instances Moses selected seventy elders for certain duties of that day, BEFORE God took the government away from Israel and turned it over to the Gentiles -- BEFORE He divorced Israel -- certainly has no connection with the seventy Jesus sent on this special mission.

Were The "Seven" A Financial Board?

And now a brief glimpse at "THE SEVEN."

Were they set up as a FINANCIAL BOARD? Were they appointed to receive and handle the TITHES of the whole world-wide Church? Did they ever supervise the financial affairs of the ministry, hiring and firing ministers, and paying them their salaries, or "allowances?" Were they set over THAT business/

Let us not be deceived, but look at this AT IT IS IN THE BIBLE, honestly!

In the early days of the New Testament Church, the brethren sold their possessions, had all things common, and took care of the PHYSICAL needs of their own widows and orphans.

In the 6th chapter of Acts, we notice in the first verse, the Grecians complained against the Hebrews, because their widows and orphans were being neglected in the daily ministrations of material needs.

Then the twelve -- the ORIGINAL and ONLY twelve of the Bible, ordained to be witnesses of Christ's resurrection, -- called together the disciples and said, "It is not reason that we should leave THE WORD OF GOD, and serve tables. Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men . . . whom we may appoint over THIS business," verses 2-3.

They were appointed over BUSINESS -- but what business? Note it IN YOUR BIBLE! The business of WAITING ON TABLES -- of feeding, serving, the MATERIAL needs of the widows and orphans!

And WHY were they appointed? So that the apostles might devote their time to the PREACHING of the Gospel, and the WITNESSING TO THE RESURRECTION, which they were sent to do, INSTEAD OF this business of ministering to the PHYSICAL needs of women!

The business for which the seven were appointed had nothing whatsoever to do with receiving and disbursing tithes for the ministry and preaching of the Word!

We should like to see any text in the New Testament showing that there ever was appointed any BOARD to act as a TREASURY for the tithes of the disciples, and to receive and disburse the money for the whole church! We say such a thing IS UNSCRIPTURAL and unless SCRIPTURE can be produced for it, such a practice ought to be discontinued!

If there is ONE LINE of scripture for such procedure under the New Testament, the editor of The GOOD NEWS agrees to print it in the next issue -- if any can supply it! This is our challenge, and we await replies!

There is not one single HINT in the New Testament of any Church BOARD with authority to rule, to govern, to decide doctrine, or to handle tithes and church finances (the whole church). In a later number we shall devote an article to explaining Acts 15, which certainly sets no such example.

All authority and power to rule is limited solely to each LOCAL congregation. But there is NO BIBLE AUTHORITY for any super-government, or organization with authority over the local congregations!

The plain teaching of Jesus is JUST THE CONTRARY! Listen! "Jesus called them unto Him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to RULE over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise AUTHORITY upon them. But so shall it NOT be among you," Mark 10:42.

The AUTHORITY -- the GOVERNMENT -- the RULERSHIP -- was turned over to the Gentiles for 2520 years -- until Christ RESTORES the kingdom at His Second Coming!

Where Church Government Originated

How, then, did ORGANIZATION, and the idea of CHURCH GOVERNMENT get into the Church?

It came out of BABYLON! Spiritual BABYLON -- that is, ROME! The same as nearly all other false doctrines of Satan.

In the early 4th Century, Constantine, the Emperor, who officially started SUNDAY observance in the Western world, saw his Empire in danger of disintegrating.

At the time a great controversy was raging among the leaders of Christianity, over Dr. Arius' doctrine concerning the origin of Christ, as opposed to the Trinity doctrine.

We quote from Encyclopedia Britannica, (article, ARIUS):

"This controversy over Arius' doctrine reached even the ears of Constantine. Now sole emperor, he saw in the one catholic church the best means of counteracting the movement in his vast empire toward disintegration, and he at once realized how dangerous dogmatic strife might be to its unity. Constantine had no understanding of the questions at issue . . . He summoned a general council (the Nicene Council) . . . . It was finally decided against Arius. . . . Constantine accepted the decision of the council, and resolved to uphold it."

Thus it was CONSTANTINE -- the "BEAST" -- who injected and introduced into the church the idea of a BOARD to decide doctrine, and to rule.

Thus it was that CONSTANTINE made doctrine, as decided by a higher-up BOARD, the basis of fellowship and unity in the Church!

Jesus never said "By this shall all men KNOW that ye are my disciples -- if ye all speak the same thing the BOARD OF THE TWELVE vote on." That is the policy of some today -- but it is NOT BIBLE POLICY! Jesus said we should be known to be in the true Church IF WE HAVE LOVE one to another! And doctrine has only brought STRIFE!

In the next century, came the PAPACY In full bloom, starting the idea that the CHURCH is an ORGANIZATION having CHURCH GOVERNMENT!

Listen to authentic history! In the Encyclopedia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature, Vol. 7, page 529, we read:

"The first pope, in the real sense of the word, was Leo I. (440-461 A.D.)" To him the plan of government of the Roman Empire was an obsession. He applied and adapted that form of government to the church, forming the PAPACY.

Myers' Ancient History, says:

The Church "under Leo I, set up, "within the Roman Empire, and ecclesiastical STATE (government) which, in its constitution and its administrative system, was shaping itself upon the IMPERIAL MODEL."

Truly, an IMAGE OF THE BEAST!

Thus was CHURCH GOVERNMENT introduced into the Western world a century after Constantine (the "BEAST" injected the idea of church BOARDS to decide what doctrines the rest of the church must believe. And thus the very PRINCIPLE of CHURCH GOVERNMENT becomes THE IMAGE TO THE BEAST!

The whole thing is FALSE! It is NOT ACCORDING TO THE BIBLE! It is part of BABYLON! Those who are IN, and MEMBERS of such an organized church government, submitting to doctrines declared by unscriptural boards as a fellowship test, are IN BABYLON, and actually worshippers of THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST! And God is calling us, HIS people OUT of BABYLON today, before it is too late -- before the PLAGUES fall!

Brethren, let us have the courage to accept the TRUTH, and to COME OUT!

The Purpose Of The Church

Finally, what is the very PURPOSE of the New Testament Church? Is it to BUILD AN ORGANIZATION?

Let us, now, finally understand it.

The first kingdom and government was set up by Nimrod -- the first ancient Babylon (Genesis 10). The Devil is the god of this world, and since Nimrod the kingdoms have built civilizations based upon the Devil's ways of LOVE, of OBEDIENCE, and of GIVE, as defined in GOD'S LAW.

So God formed Abraham's children into AT NATION, giving them HIS LAWS, to show how a nation would be blessed that would build its civilization according to His Commandments. At Mt. Sinai Israel was united to the Lord in MARRIAGE, as HIS GOVERNMENT, both state and church.

But when Israel went after the ways of other nations, breaking the Commandments, God DIVORCED Israel, and gave over the GOVERNMENT, (which included CHURCH GOVERNMENT as well as state) to the Gentile kingdoms symbolized by Daniel's image and the four "beasts." He gave the GOVERNMENT into Gentile hands UNTIL THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST, when the government, church and state, shall be RESTORED to Israel!

When Jesus comes with POWER and great glory -- power to RULE, and the SAINTS possess the kingdoms of this world -- He will make a NEW Covenant with Israel and Judah, which NEW Covenant will be the MARRIAGE OF THE LAMB!

As the Old Covenant MARRIAGE ceremony set up Israel as a NATION, so will the new.

Now TO WHOM will Christ be married, at the Marriage of the Lamb? Notice it, IN YOUR OWN BIBLE -- Revelation 19:7 -- He shall marry HIS WIFE! Note it!!!

Yes, His WIFE whom He divorced. A wife who is divorced is not free to remarry until the death of her husband! And so Christ, Israel's husband, DIED to REDEEM ISRAEL! And now Israel is FREE to marry AGAIN!

And who will the New Covenant be made with? Notice Hebrews 8:8 -- with the same wife He made the first covenant with but later divorced -- ISRAEL!

Then He shall RESTORE the Kingdom to Israel -- both Church government and state. Christ will reign not only as King of kings, but also as LORD OF LORDS -- Church government, as well as state!

Christ's FIRST coming was to REDEEM -- not to restore.

Jesus never set up an organization, nor did He establish any church GOVERNMENT. He did not RE-ORGANIZE the Church!

Instead, He came calling INDIVIDUAL disciples out from among the church organization, sects, and denominations -- out from among the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes -- out from among worldly Gentile organizations and contacts -- He called His saints to be SEPARATE -- to COME OUT!

The very word "ecclesia" from which "Church" is translated, means "called-out ones" as well as "assembly."

The New Testament Church is not a kingdom -- not a church government -- but an assembly of individuals CALLED OUT -- Spirit-filled individuals, and therefore a SPIRITUAL ORGANISM, not an organization.

The OBJECT of the Church is not to build up an organization, or a movement. Let us see this great purpose clearly.

The CHURCH is Israelitish. Not a Gentile Church just called "Israel." It IS Israel. But those who do not come by faith, and who are disobedient, are CUT OFF, the Israelitish-born, while Gentile converts, thru Christ, are ADOPTED into Israel. Thus, spiritually speaking, Israel IS the CHURCH.

And it is the CHURCH who shall be married to Christ -- Israel REDEEMED by the blood of the Lamb of God!

The CHURCH is God's instrumentality thru which, and in which, He is selecting a people for His name -- gathering OUT of "babylon" -- OUT of worldly ways, worldly organizations, various individuals, -- one here, and one there -- to repentance, faith in Christ, receiving of and being led by the Holy Spirit, thus having HIS LAWS written in their minds and hearts -- living, individually, a life of trial and test, of OVERCOMING, that they may be thus fitted and trained for positions as kings or priests in the KINGDOM OF GOD, after Christ's second coming!

The CHURCH of God shall then become the KINGDOM of God. It is the CHURCH which shall be married to the Lamb, establishing God's GOVERNMENT on earth -- restoring the KINGDOM to Israel!

So THE CHURCH is God's instrumentality for overcoming the FAULT of the Old Covenant. That FAULT was disobedience. The NEW will be made with those in whose minds and hearts GOD'S LAW has been written, by His Holy Spirit! (Hebrews 8:10).

And this MARRIAGE will not be made with some one organization! It is THE INDIVIDUAL SAINTS -- not some organization -- which shall possess the government, and rule (Daniel 7:18; Revelation 2:26-27; 3:21, etc.)

His WIFE shall have made herself READY! But how? By a "re-organization", or some "new movement?" What folly! Read Ephesians 5:25-27. The CHURCH is the collective body of individual saints who are sanctified and CLEANSED by Christ! Let us stop speaking of some organization as "the Church," or "our Church!"

Jesus said, "Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be ROOTED UP!" Our heavenly Father never planted any super-organization, or established any church GOVERNMENT, or set men IN AUTHORITY over either spiritual or financial affairs, in the New Testament Church.

Any such "plan" was never planted of GOD -- and therefore IT SHALL BE ROOTED UP!

Our fellowship is first with God, and with Christ -- then with each other, and with Christ -- then with each other, in LOVE! The saints, so far as they know one another, are not to forsake assembling together for their mutual edification. For this purpose -- and that all things may be done decently and in order -- the Scriptures give us instruction for ordaining local elders and deacons, in every city -- every local congregation, or Church. But there is no super-organization over and above local congregation IN THE NEW TESTAMENT! And any such "plant" is certain to be ROOTED UP!"

All such organizations and governments came out of BABYLON -- and are today a part of BABYLON!

Brethren, let us have the kind of cooperative FELLOWSHIP, based on LOVE, that was practiced by the early saints, as recorded in the Book of Acts. Let us work together, in unselfish effort to GIVE of the Gospel truth to the world -- to GIVE of the "waters of life" to as many precious souls as we can reach -- to GIVE out the last warning message with great POWER!

But let us drop all effort to BUILD UP A MOVEMENT or AN ORGANIZATION. Let us quit working FOR organizations, and work FOR THE LORD -- and the salvation of souls!

What has split and divided up the saints in the Church of God? Nothing but ORGANIZATION -- which has led to politics, ministers lusting for rule and for power -- striving against each other, lining up the brethren on THEIR side, against the other! It is SUCH PREACHERS who have split up and divided our brethren!

God's Word commands us to COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM, and be separate. God's last warning is, "COME OUT OF BABYLON!!!"

Organization and church GOVERNMENT has brought us only strife, jealousies, divisions, bitterness! It is not of God, and it can bear no other fruit.

The CHURCH OF GOD needs more of the POWER OF GOD -- more of HIS LOVE -- of HIS HOLY SPIRIT, that the work may now begin to go forth IN MIGHTY POWER! We ought to be ASHAMED of the pitiful, puny, weak, feeble work that has split up and divided brethren, reached but so very FEW with the message, with almost no real conversions! All this, while leaders desiring power to RULE send out misleading, exaggerated, deceiving statements designed to convince tithe-payers that "the work is progressing." What a mockery! What a tragedy! What a pity!

We praise God that many of the more spiritual HAVE COME OUT! Let us obey GOD!

AMBASSADOR REVIEW is a journal by and for students, alumni, and friends of Ambassador College. Its goal is to provide an open forum for those who have shared in the "Ambassador Experience." It has grown out of the increasing need for a response to the censored and ideologically-controlled articles found in official Ambassador College and Worldwide Church of God publications.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW has the following purposes:

- It is a forum for assessing the teachings of Ambassador College and their effect on Ambassador College students. In short, it examines the "Ambassador Experience."
- It is dedicated to prodding the leadership of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God which supports and controls Ambassador College to change the practices and policies which are bringing discredit to Ambassador College worldwide.
- It is a publication that brings to light many of Ambassador College's biggest problems which have been too long covered up.
- It presents solutions to Ambassador's problems and will take firm and direct action to initiate drastically needed changes at Ambassador College and in the church which so heavily influences it.
- It is solidly founded in the belief that Ambassador College was built by and continues to exist through the contributions of many selfless, dedicated people. NO ONE MAN CAN TRUTHFULLY SAY, "I AM AMBASSADOR COLLEGE." No one family, clan or clique should ever be allowed to monopolize the Ambassador entity.

The REVIEW is intended for thinking men and women. It is not designed for those who may, by their own choice, prefer to remain ignorant, intimidated, or amnesiac.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW intends to communicate more than just opinions. We intend to communicate solutions and work to see that problems are solved. We believe in the essential dignity of man and therefore in a free, open and democratic society-with free, open and democratic institutions. Therefore, we want Ambassador College placed in the hands of responsible people-people who have demonstrated their integrity in both their words and their deeds.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW intends to make its voice heard by both the Administration and the local community-and it will, if necessary, undertake direct mail campaigns to newspaper editors, columnists, and free-lance writers, radio and television producers, civic leaders, foreign embassies, educators and other organizations.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW's program of direct-action is brought on by our deep concern for those of the future who stand to suffer the same personal grief and dashed hopes which we have experienced. The mental damage inflicted upon sincere and trusting individuals CANNOT go unchallenged. The injustices of the past and the present must be rectified.

We welcome and encourage literary submissions from our readers regardless of political, religious, or philosophical persuasion. We welcome any articles or letters that will help stimulate others to pause and ponder the cries of conscience in our pages.

We hope you agree that AMBASSADOR REVIEW can serve an intelligent purpose in your life and we warmly welcome your contribution and your subscription.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

THE END OF INNOCENCE?

Is this the beginning of the end for Ambassador College? Is the decline and fall already underway? Has freedom of religion had it at Ambassador? Is the so-called "Ambassador Experience" over? Next year, will the college be headed for a mere depression, or a bankruptcy? And perhaps most important, is truth headed for an increasingly austere life at an institution whose major media is called THE PLAIN TRUTH?

It's hard to be optimistic when you consider that this institution gave us forty years of Pentecost on the wrong day, divorce without remarriage (and that administered in the wrong way), "healing" with nothing to ease the pain, a TOMORROW'S WORLD that no longer exists, and let's not forget, "1972"!

Yes, it is hard to be optimistic. And, if normal conversation can be believed, a majority of people aren't.

None of the "great purposes" seem pertinent anymore. Bricket Wood is gone. Imperial Schools are gone. The Ambassador Press has been sold. The computer department is being phased out. The Ambassador Television Studio is being bartered off. And it doesn't help to be reminded that THE PLAIN TRUTH looks starved for content, while the pages of the once-again-delayed HUMAN POTENTIAL are so bloated with content that it appears to be wallowing in its own valleys, perhaps never to see the arrival of a second edition. Yes, it's hard to be optimistic.

But the problem is not lack of optimism. The problem seems to be the lack of believable integrity behind the "new" programs. Integrity no longer seems to be of the same value to the present administration-an administration which has as its highest counsel, Stanley Rader, a man who didn't even attend Ambassador College.

For the first time within the memories of most of us, Ambassador people are seriously questioning whether the college will survive. As a result, many seem to be caught in an unintended backlash of falling expectations.

Part of the problem may be that so many developments seem to confirm the portent of the negative view. In light of recent attempts of Ambassador administrators to misdirect AMBASSADOR REVIEW material from its rightful owners, it is not difficult to believe those who warn that the administration is not only in error, but willfully covering up error!

The notion that "government from the top down" is not of God and therefore not the best government for humans gains plausibility from the premature departure of four of the college's most respected evangelists-three of them vice-presidents. The resignations of scores of former Ambassador administrators convince us that the issues troubling the consciences of these men are real.

The continued rising prominence of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation appears to bear out the credibility of seers who say that Worldwide Church of God contributions are being transferred to a separate foundation under the control of less than "Ambassador quality" people. Reports of the A.I.C.F. spending $125,000 in one night for a Hollywood movie premier lend substance to the ominous prediction that Ambassador College will not make it much longer if these subsidies continue at the current pace.

The editors of this magazine are prepared to believe the worst-the collusion, the fraud, the shortchange and the clever subterfuge. But we are not prepared to accept without a fight the end of individual freedom, the demise of Ambassador College and its replacement by a group of international hustlers who offer fun for a few and oppression for the rest.

The Ambassador entity is at a turning point. It can listen to those who would try to improve it or it can cling to those sacred cows that will destroy it. It's time we realized that our growing-up phase is coming to an end. Many of us leave it reluctantly. It's hard to let go of the precious illusions of our spiritual childhood, the innocence of our infant-like beginnings.

Now we are discovering that certain doctrines and leaders cannot live in control of our lives forever. If this is what's happening, perhaps in time we can make peace with inevitable change, candidly admit the mistakes of the past, settle into a productive and rewarding spiritual maturity and face adulthood with intelligence, not blind allegiance. The end of innocence in this case will be the first step toward wisdom.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

A TREASURY OF FAMOUS PROPHECIES

"When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him."
(Deuteronomy 18:22)

"Where are God's true prophets today? ... This work has been warning America of definite and tremendous events to come for many years!"

"...on THE WORLD TOMORROW broadcast and in this magazine we have dared to unlock the Bible prophecies and apply them to specific nations and events that are now being affected. Do you grasp the significance of this'?"

- PLAIN TRUTH, August 1957, pages 3, 6, R. C. Meredith

"As nearly as we can calculate from the dates of ancient history, the year 1936 will see the END of the Times of the Gentiles.... We may expect the present worldwide depression, time of trouble and fear of war to CONTINUE until the year 1936! ...quickly after that time, we may expect to see the heavenly signs of the sun and moon becoming dark, the stars falling ... which shall be followed by the 'Day of the Lord'"

- PLAIN TRUTH, June-July 1934, page 5, H. W. Armstrong

"Mussolini and the Pope will hatch up an idea between them of setting up a world headquarters at JERUSALEM-and so Mussolini's armies will enter into Palestine (Daniel 11:41), and eventually will capture just half of the city of Jerusalem (Zechariah 14:2)."

- PLAIN TRUTH, March 1938, page 8, H. W. Armstrong

MUSSOLINI WILL FIGHT CHRIST!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, January 1939, Page 4, H. W. Armstrong

"Once world war is resumed, it must continue on through the Great Tribulation, the heavenly signs, the plagues of the Day of the Lord, and to the Second Coming of Christ, at the last battle, at ARMAGEDDON!...But this you MAY KNOW! This war will be ended by CHRIST'S RETURN! And war MAY start within six weeks! We are just THAT NEAR Christ's coming!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, August 1939, page 6, H. W. Armstrong

"The Italians will capture both Palestine and Egypt."

- PLAIN TRUTH, August-September 1940. H. W. Armstrong

"Turkey will cause British defeat. But God will rescue and restore the British and cause Turkey utterly to be wiped out."

- PLAIN TRUTH, May-June 1941, page 6, H. W. Armstrong

"PLAIN TRUTH readers know world events, before they occur!...Bible prophecy does indicate that Hitler MUST BE THE VICTOR, in his present Russian invasion!...Hitler will emerge from his Russian campaign stronger than ever, free to turn the entire might of his forces against Britain-and AMERICA!"

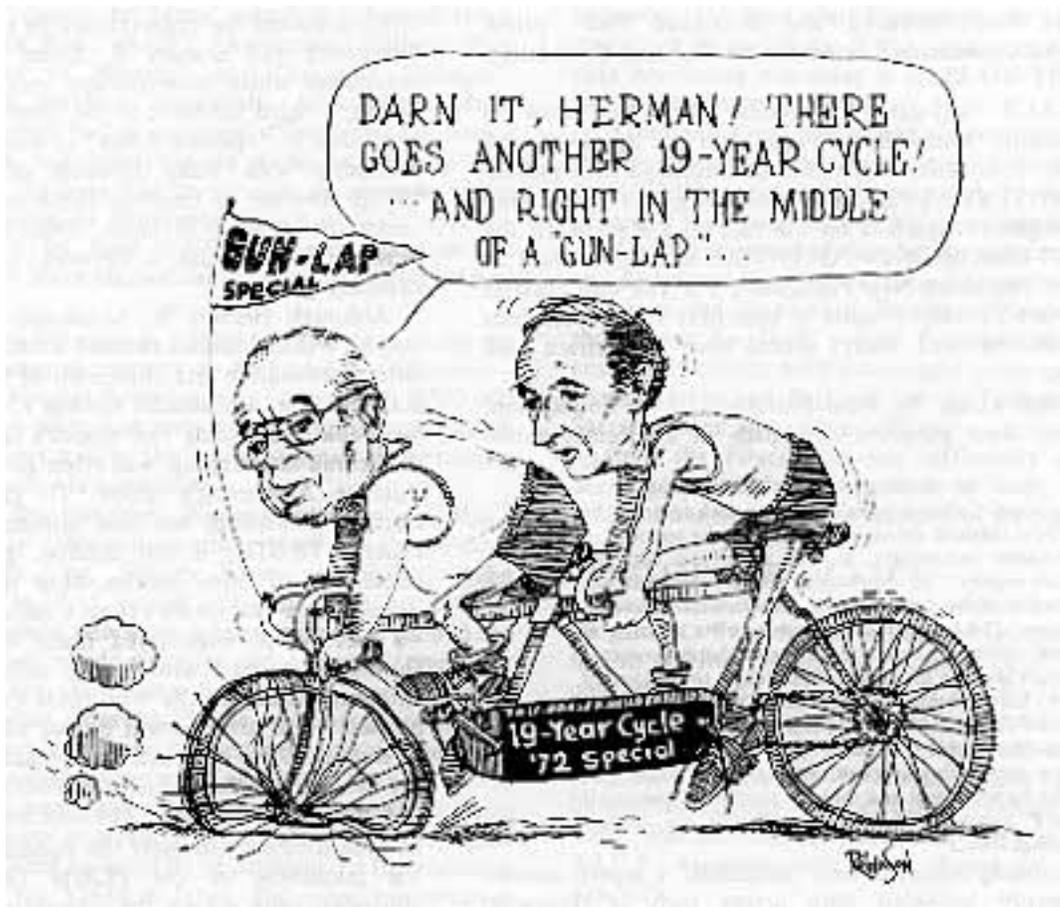

- PLAIN TRUTH, September- October 1941, page 7, H. W. Armstrong

"But Hitler (or his successor if there is one), and the False Prophet shall FIGHT against Christ!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, March-April 1943, page 6, H. W. Armstrong

"Yes, it seems that God is allowing us another 19-year cycle to COMPLETE THE CARRYING OUT OF HIS GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM TO THIS SICK AND DYING WORLD.... There is a tremendous job to be done in the very short period that lies ahead of us."

- PLAIN TRUTH, June 1953, "Man's Greatest Battle" by R. C. Meredith

"The idea of men climbing around on the outside of their space ships clad in pressurized suits is fantastic in the light of these facts.... Man will not be allowed or permitted to utilize the moon in suicidal warfare! Neither will God allow the moon to become the possession of any nation now struggling for world domination."

- PLAIN TRUTH, May 1954, page 8, Kenneth Hermann

"God prophesies that finally, within the next fifteen years, fully ONE THIRD of our whole population will die of disease and famine."

- PLAIN TRUTH, December 1957, H. W. Armstrong

"God Almighty has spoken through His servants the prophets that He will punish our people for their sins. He will let our own lust cause such droughts, floods, pestilences and famines that we will be totally consumed and carried away captive to other nations as SLAVES WITHIN TWENTY YEARS."

- PLAIN TRUTH, October 1955, page 15, H. L. Hoeh

"...it is the coming dry cycle in the early 1970s that ... ought to frighten us all! By THAT TIME, rural, city and industrial demands WILL HAVE DEPLETED OUR REMAINING UNDERGROUND WATER RESOURCES."

- PLAIN TRUTH, January 1955, "Weather changes Threaten Disaster for USA" by H. L. Hoeh

"Germany's coming Fuhrer-who will lead within probably 13 years from now a 10-nation union in Europe (Revelation 17: 12-13)-is 'the king of the north'! He will 'stretch forth his hand upon the countries; and the land of Egypt shall not escape'

(Daniel 11:42)...There is going to be a failing out between Nasser and his German supporters. Nasser's Nazi advisers are yet to turn upon him. GERMANY WILL TAKE OVER THE SUEZ FROM EGYPT. Germany will take over Syria's pipelines, now under Nasser's control."

- PLAIN TRUTH, October 1958. "U. S. and Britain Admit Nazi Underground Behind Arab Crisis." by H. L. Hoeh

"Somewhere along about seven to ten years from now the REVOLUTION IN THE WEATHER will become a national and international calamity. Drought, epidemics of disease, will reap a mounting harvest of death across North America-and in Britain. Economic depression will strike."

- PLAIN TRUTH, January 1963, page 21, H. W. Armstrong

"Our strength further sapped: 1963 shall increase drought and upheavals in the prophesied revolution in the WEATHER pattern. We may have an occasional good year in the weather, but the trend in general will continue until-probably by 1971-1972-it will become an acute disaster, especially to the United States, Canada, Britain and Australia."

- PLAIN TRUTH, January 1964, page 4. H. W. Armstrong

"Frankly, literally dozens of prophesied events indicate that this final revival of the Roman Empire in Europe-and its bestial PERSECUTION of multitudes of Bible-believing Christians will take place within the next seven to ten years of YOUR LIFE!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, February 1965, page 48. R. C. Meredith

"The unification of Germany? Perhaps it will take place sooner than we expect! The unification of ten nations in Europe is certain to be brought about within a very few years."

- PLAIN TRUTH, September 1964, page 20, Ron Kelly

"It is the most interesting date because Bible prophecy indicates that the final attack on the U. S. and Britain by this coming 'Beast Power' could easily be launched perhaps as early as the Spring of 1972-or earlier if this final work of preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God is cut short."

- PLAIN TRUTH, May 1965, page 44, R. C. Meredith

"That is NOT a message to ancient Israel-but to OUR NATIONS of TODAY. The 'Day of the Eternal'-a time foretold in more than thirty prophecies-is going to strike between 5 and 10 years from now!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, February 1967, page 47, H. W. Armstrong

"Although we do not set exact dates, every indication from the time table of prophecy is that this will take place within the next five to seven years or less!...This revival of Germany's dominant interest and influence in the Middle East, the building of a literal Temple, the eventual takeover of Israel and Egypt by a revived Roman Empire of European nations culminating in a great religious leader making his Headquarters right in that Temple in Jerusalem. This is a definite 'SIGN' to the true believers of God heralding the END of this age!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, March 1968, page 41. R. C. Meredith

"The 6000 years are about up. We may have another three, five, or ten years to go."

- PLAIN TRUTH, November 1968, page 39, H. W. Armstrong

"There will very soon be a Temple in Jerusalem, with daily sacrifices once again being offered.... Jerusalem will be surrounded and captured (Zechariah 14: 1-2) by the Fascist-Nazi armies of the European Empire, already starting to rise now out of the Common Market. They will invade Jerusalem, and take charge of the temple."

- PLAIN TRUTH, June 1967, page 2. H. W. Armstrong

"But your Bible reveals Britain will not be one of the ultimate ten nations that will unite to resurrect the final restoration of this prophesied Roman Empire."

- PLAIN TRUTH, October 1967, H. W. Armstrong

"Will Britain ever be admitted into the Common Market? Probably not!"

- PLAIN TRUTH, February 1970, page 27, Raymond McNair

"We do not set dates!...Yet in our human zeal and enthusiasm for getting this greatest mission on earth done, we have a few times come close to it or appeared to-and that we deeply regret...if we...appear to set a date, I FEEL I DO NOT NEED TO APOLOGIZE!"

- TOMORROW'S WORLD, February 1972, H. W. Armstrong

"If we KNEW of any error still remaining now, we would CHANGE it! If and when we find one in the future, we shall correct it!"

- TOMORROW'S WORLD. February 1972, H. W. Armstrong

"Right now, just prior by probably not more than five to seven years to the coming terrible DAY OF THE LORD, the Living Christ has moved swiftly to OPEN THE ALL-IMPORTANT DOOR THAT HAS BEEN CLOSED SINCE THE DAY OF THE ORIGINAL APOSTLES. After TURNING HIS BACK on Jerusalem ever since 69 A.D....after turning Jerusalem, because of the rebellious transgressions of his people Israel, over to be 'trodden down of the Gentiles', since 69 A. D., ALMIGHTY GOD HAS OPENED TO THE WORLD TOMORROW, EXCLUSIVELY, THE GIGANTIC DOOR OF THE SUPER-POWER RADIO FROM JERUSALEM...further we have signed with the Hashemite Government of Jordan a FIVE-YEAR BINDING CONTRACT, with option to RENEW another five years!...and when the time came, to WHOM did God open up these precious radio facilities? Not to the Roman Catholics-though they have shrines and buildings there! Nor the Protestants! Nor the Coptics, nor the other professing 'Christian' sects. No, He has opened it EXCLUSIVELY, by binding contract with the government of Jordan, to HIS WORK, to which He has called YOU as a Co-Worker! This PROVES which voice on earth today is GOD'S OWN VOICE, through human servants He has called! If you ever had any doubts whatever about where the real WORK OF GOD is, you can be SURE now!"

- CO-WORKER LETTER, April 17, 1967, H. W. Armstrong

"Jerusalem Radio, over which I have a contract with the Jordanian government, was not destroyed.... If indeed the Living Christ wants His message to go, NOW, from Jerusalem, as certain prophecies surely seem to indicate, then NO MAN CAN PREVENT IT! He will give us favor in the eyes of whoever controls that powerful station. If God does not so will, then we surely don't want to broadcast over it."

- TOMORROW'S WORLD, June 1967, page 5, H. W. Armstrong

Editor's Note: Isn't it strange that the Living Christ would lead His prophet to sign a binding five-year contract with the Jordanian government to send His message out from Jerusalem, Jordan, when two days after the first broadcast was to go out (Wednesday, June 7, 1967) there would be no Jerusalem, Jordan? The Six-Day War of June 1967 nullified all the positive declarations he made about Christ being behind this contract with Jordan.

"And the greater pity is that the very ones most deceived are the ones who RESENT having the Scriptures opened to CORRECT them, to REPROVE, and to set them right!"

- TOMORROW'S WORLD, February 1972, H. W. Armstrong

"As of the present I, and a majority of our historians in Ambassador College, and researchers in the School of Theology, feel that it is utterly unsafe to try to set dates in regard to prophesied events."

- TOMORROW'S WORLD, February 1972, H. W. Armstrong

PEOPLE WHO BROUGHT YOU
"1972", We Present...

On March 18, 1975, a star was born. In the appropriately plush setting of Perino's Restaurant in Los Angeles, Stanley R. Rader (Financial Director and Chief Counsel for the Worldwide Church of God), Robert L. Kuhn (Assistant to Rader) and Herbert W. Armstrong (Pastor General of the Worldwide Church of God) unveiled and christened their "prima donna"-the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation (A. I. C. F.).

The A.I.C.F. -self-slated to become the greatest show on earth-modestly accepted its place next to the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations. The founders declared their journal, HUMAN POTENTIAL (as yet unpublished), to be one of the most prestigious magazines on the face of the earth. In the "rehearsal" issue, HUMAN POTENTIAL announced itself as "The Most Important New Publication For The Last Quarter of The 20th Century"-quite a mouthful from a religious organization that had always prided itself in mustard seed beginnings.

Rader and Kuhn, the main promoters of the Foundation, summarized their purposes and goals in a succinct statement:

"...In establishing the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, we seek to bring the finest cultural events and artists to the greater Los Angeles community, as well as to join with the community in supporting leading charitable, humanitarian, educational and cultural organizations. The Foundation will underwrite all costs of the concerts, thereby enabling all funds generated from the sale of subscription tickets to be donated to participating organizations and institutions. (The foundation itself is being initially funded by the Worldwide Church of God which believes that the performing arts are the highest expression of the human spirit and that the support of charitable and humanitarian activities fulfills its biblical obligations.)"

The founding concepts were incredible: a superb concert series liberally sprinkled with artists such as Horowitz, Menuhin, Sutherland and Pavarotti; all box-office proceeds to be donated to charitable and humanitarian causes; and all expenses to be borne by an eclectic, fundamentalist sect that for nearly forty years had preached isolation from this present Satanic "world".

Noting all this, Ruth Asheton Taylor, a Los Angeles television reporter, aptly concluded her A.I.C.F. interview with the prophetic remark, "It's almost too good to be true."

This report intends to examine the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation beneath this polished veneer. What were the inner details of its founding? Who are the men who control this operation which draws so heavily upon Worldwide Church of God funding? Who really benefits from the Foundation?

PRE-NATIVITY

To clearly understand the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, one must first look back to past events which spawned the organization. In the late sixties Herbert W. Armstrong and Stanley R. Rader began the international excursions which now occupy most of their time. Osamu Gotoh, a third member of the touring team, proved himself invaluable in "opening doors" to heads of state. Gotoh's close friendship with many Japanese officials, including Prince Mikasa (brother of Emperor Hirohito), enabled them to make important contacts in Japan. These led to invitations to visit other countries, and a network of international contacts naturally grew.

Although Herbert W. Armstrong was a high school drop out, he was introduced to these world leaders as a leader in the field of education and chancellor of three [now two] utopian colleges. The Ambassador College ENVOY, a lavish full-color yearbook showcasing the school's fabulous architecture and manicured landscaping, was often given to officials in order to enhance Armstrong's image. To gain even more prestige, Herbert Armstrong was also introduced as publisher of the PLAIN TRUTH, a top quality, glossy magazine with a circulation of three million. Most leaders who granted Mr. Armstrong a visit could expect a full-color cover of themselves—a fact which engendered many of the early invitations. During these chats with foreign officials, Armstrong and his entourage discussed the Worldwide Church of God as little as possible. This arrangement proved adequate for several years

But in 1974, doctrinal and organizational disputes rocked the Church structure causing a substantial drop in membership and income. Numerous cut-backs and extensive streamlining became necessary to meet the budgetary crunch. At this time the publishing of the PLAIN TRUTH became a hotly contested issue among the corporate leadership. Garner Ted Armstrong, Herbert's son and heir apparent to the apostolic throne, wanted a complete change from the glossy magazine format to a plain newsprint tabloid which would represent substantial monetary savings to "the Work". His idea was met with stiff opposition by others near the top of the hierarchy but it was adopted, nonetheless.

"Ted's Rag", as the tabloid was appropriately dubbed by its editorial staff, began to present difficulties for the foreign outreach of "the Work", especially in Japan. Osamu Gotoh flatly stated that the Japanese people would not accept a newsprint substitute of a real magazine. Furthermore, Herbert needed an appropriate publication that he could proudly present to government officials overseas.

A second difficulty was developing concurrently in 1974. During this time Armstrong had been stepping up his international odysseys, and his contacts were snowballing. The "doors" were opening as fast as Gotoh and Rader could arrange them. As Herbert Armstrong moved up into the diplomatic big leagues, he began assuming additional titles: "Ambassador for World Peace", "Ambassador Without Portfolio", "Builder of Bridges" and "Spiritual Kissinger". Outgrowing his previous credentials, Armstrong candidly admitted in a letter to his ministers: "One thing has been a serious handicap, and caused me and my touring team no little embarrassment. We have had to say that we represent either Ambassador College, or Worldwide Church of God." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, June 3, 1975). It became obvious that H.W.A. needed a more elegant calling card to go with his new hat size.

As if this were not enough, a third problem arose. After the April, 1974 inaugural concerts at Ambassador Auditorium—featuring the Vienna Symphony at a cost of $500,000 plus—the concert stage had remained silent. As time passed, the "finest concert hall in the world" seemed to be turning into an extravagant white elephant.

In order to solve this triple dilemma caused by the "Rag", Herbert's identity crisis and an empty jewel box, heads came together. Before long, Stanley Rader and Robert Kuhn conceived a plan that would not only help solve these problems, but would also score a massive political coup in the organization. They would organize and control a completely new entity in the Armstrong Empire—one that would be completely separate from the Church and College in all areas but financing; hence, also facilitating a monolithic consolidation of power around Rader and Kuhn. Since the Church was already funding numerous educational and cultural projects such as the Temple excavation in Jerusalem, anthropological expeditions for King Leopold III of Belgium, the International Cultural Center for Youth in Israel, and other humanitarian projects in Thailand, Nepal, etc., the idea of a cultural foundation which would take these programs under its wing seemed perfect. Herbert Armstrong could now represent a prestigious organization "dedicated to serving humanity worldwide" without suffering any of the old embarrassments caused by representing a small church and college. And in order to allay any lingering feelings the Los Angeles cultural community harbored regarding Armstrong's "incredibly costly, secluded, elitist folly" (LOS ANGELES TIMES CALENDAR, March 10, 1974), Rader and Kuhn envisioned a star-studded concert series intended to put Ambassador Auditorium squarely in the public spotlight.

This "cultural foundation" concept practically sold itself to Herbert Armstrong. The concert series nicely appealed to his obsession of "showing up" the Los Angeles Music Center, and required little persuasion for its adoption. To "sell the 'old man'" on the idea of a new magazine, Robert Kuhn hastily produced a dummy issue which was presented to Herbert for approval. It, too, was enthusiastically accepted since it contained an article by H.W.A. and even borrowed from the title Armstrong was using in his PLAIN TRUTH series, "The Incredible Human Potential".

Rader and Kuhn had scored a major victory in reorganizing the Worldwide corporate structure. A whole new division of "the Work" was created practically overnight. They now possessed their own "empire within an empire".

H.W.A.'s approval of the package represented the final step, and Rader and Kuhn now approached the task of designing the details of the foundation. To placate Armstrong's desire that the "House for God" not be "commercialized", the idea of combining charity with the concert series evolved. Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws for the Foundation were filed in Sacramento; it all became "official".

Once the Foundation was sufficiently developed on the drawing-board, the time came to bring the Rader-Kuhn brainchild under the hard scrutiny of its potential supporters.

THE SELLING OF THE A.I.C.F.

Rader and Kuhn were faced with a two-sided marketing assignment. Two distinct groups of prospective contributors had to be "sold" on the idea of the A.I.C.F., its accompanying concert series and the HUMAN POTENTIAL journal. Both "factions" were essential for the Foundation's success. Simply stated, there was the "outside" world and the "inside" world (i.e., those outside the Worldwide Church of God who would be wealthy enough to afford the exorbitant ticket prices; and those who were members of the Church who would pay for all

A.I.C.F. expenses with little chance of ever attending a concert).

A massive promotional campaign was quickly launched to market the concert series to the elite "outside" group. Costly 64-page brochures were produced and mailed to leading citizens in the Southland describing the specific artists in each concert series, the onyx auditorium and the various beneficiaries such as United Way, March of Dimes, UNICEF and other smaller charities. Full-page ads began to appear regularly in the LOS ANGELES TIMES and other local papers. Articles followed which explained the "unique" fusing of charity with the performing arts. Paid announcements were broadcast over classical radio stations which led to the A.I.C.F.'s eventual sponsoring of a daily music program on radio station KFAC. The "saturation bombing" of the Los Angeles cultural community had commenced.

During this initial campaign, mention of the Worldwide Church of God was judiciously avoided. Permits filed with the City and County of Los Angeles for the solicitation drives and the information cards accompanying all A.I.C.F. literature listed Ambassador College as the financial source for the Foundation. This seemed ludicrous to those who knew that the College also totally depends on the Church for funds. The cheap camouflage was easily recognized.

Special cocktail receptions were hosted at the Rader residence in Beverly Hills for the key people associated directly with the performing arts and the media. These lavish affairs became a frequent occurrence in 1975, with the A.I.C.F. (Worldwide Church of God) picking up the tab. As inside sources have revealed, these gala affairs more often than not provided no real promotional value for the Foundation, but merely served as ego and status builders for Stanley Rader.

It soon became clear that the announced desire to bring the finest in the performing arts to the "general" Los Angeles community rang hollow. In truth, the concert series was designed to cater to those individuals possessing the rank of "General" or higher on the social ladder.

Simultaneous to this "out"-reach, the "in"-reach to the Worldwide Church of God membership progressed with a sales pitch diametrically opposite to that received by the public. While the "outside world" received a promotional blitz totally devoid of religious connotations, the Church members were being fed letters and sermons which announced the A.I.C.F. as "a great new phase of the Work", "a necessary adjunct to this new worldwide dimension of getting Christ's TRUE Gospel to the nations through heads of government." Convincing pipe-dreams designed to further assure members that the A.I.C.F. would benefit the "Work of God" stated that concert box-office proceeds would finance projects previously funded by the Church, and that subscription fees for HUMAN POTENTIAL would cover the expenses of the concert series!

Amazingly, this double-pronged approach seemed to be working. Ticket sales were slow, but that was to be expected until the new concept caught fire among concert goers. Church members accepted the A.I.C.F., the concert series and HUMAN POTENTIAL-faithfully praying and paying for yet another "arm of God's Work". As long as neither side knew what the other had been "sold", the inaugural season of A.I.C.F. appeared destined for success.

But Murphy's Law prevailed. The dike that separated the two fronts began to leak.

SHALOM ENDS HERE

Realizing that the $24 million concert hall was owned by the Worldwide Church of God, that all concert expenses were to be absorbed by the Church, and that the Church was also bankrolling HUMAN POTENTIAL, many L.A. citizens began to question the true motivation behind the A.I.C.F. The lofty platitudes published by the Foundation, indeed, seemed "too good to be true".

On August 8, 1975, Rabbi Shlomo Cunin, Director of the West Coast Lubavitch Movement, conducted a news conference at the Los Angeles Press Club, in which he leveled serious charges against the A.I.C.F. This sparked what became labeled "the Jewish controversy". The Foundation's real goal, Rabbi Cunin stated, was the; exploitation of the Jewish community with the ultimate goal of proselyting Jews. He had researched the A.I.C.F. literature distributed within the Worldwide Church of God ranks and discovered the glaring contradiction to what the rest of the community had been told. The statements, "new phase of God's Work" and "taking Christ's Gospel to the world", were clear proof to him that the pabulum about charity and culture merely represented a cosmetic front for religious activities.

He was particularly incensed by the fact that "counterfeit Jews", in the persons of Stanley Rader and Robert Kuhn, had been used to promote the concert series in the Jewish community. Though both are baptized members of the Worldwide Church of God, they had been introduced as Jews in good standing by Yitzhak Sover, who at that time was in charge of the Government Office of Tourism at the Israeli Consulate in Los Angeles. Sover provided the entrée enabling Rader and Kuhn to persuade many Jewish organizations to ally themselves with the Foundation.

An additional fact that should prove even more alarming to Worldwide Church of God members is that Robert Kuhn is also a member of the Reform Jewish Temple in Pasadena. It was confirmed directly with the Temple that Kuhn is undeniably a member. How Robert rationalizes his dual membership in an organization that accepts Jesus Christ and in another that rejects Him is anybody's guess.

Rabbi Cunin next waged an all-out campaign alerting the Jewish community to the "danger". With the help of Joseph Cummins, editor of B'NAI B'RITH MESSENGER, he was able to fan the sparks into a raging conflagration of controversy throughout the Jewish community.

Three days after Rabbi Cunin's press conference, Russell Chandler, LOS ANGELES TIMES Religion editor, spread the doubts surrounding the A.I.C.F. to the entire Southland community in an article entitled, "Church Group Looking to Culture to Provide a New Image". Chandler, who maintains extensive files on the Worldwide Church of God and receives copies of all internal and external publications, presented the public with a comprehensive, well researched "look on the inside". Statements from confidential issues of the MINISTERIAL BULLETIN written by the Armstrongs were quoted for all to see. The A.I.C.F. was indicted by its own words as a grandiose scheme to provide a more prestigious facade for the Rader-Armstrong religious corporation.

Under attack from two sides, Rader and Kuhn hastily mapped out new strategies hoping to realign public opinion before any fatal blow was dealt to their fledgling empire.

THE CHAMELEON EFFECT

Like a gilded chameleon, changing colors to match its immediate environment, the A.I.C.F. made swift changes to counter the allegations resulting from Rabbi Cunin's efforts and Chandler's exposé. The immediate concern was to salvage as much support as possible from the Jewish community since it could make or break the concert series.

Letters of clarification and apology were hastily composed by Stanley Rader, Robert Kuhn and C. Wayne Cole (then head of Church Administration) and sent to key Jewish individuals in a futile attempt to calm the turmoil. Statements on "official" church policy regarding proselytizing were emphasized to mollify Rabbi Cunin's allegations of "missionary" activity by the Foundation. The Worldwide Church of God's position was compared to that of traditional Judaism-"not proselytizing, but not turning away a sincere seeker." They neglected to explain why the Church is one of the largest media buyers in the world for its religious program; why in the MINISTERIAL BULLETIN the success of various "personal appearance campaigns" by its evangelists is measured in the number of new people attending Worldwide Church of God services; or why the ministry of the Worldwide Church of God commonly refers to new people requesting their first visit as "prospective members". Wayne Cole also stated in a letter to Rabbi Maurice Lamm that the phrases "doing the Work", "Christ's message" and "spreading the Gospel", were defined by the Worldwide Church of God as "the concept of government and whether man's government can survive without God." Apparently, Mr. Cole recently suffered acute amnesia because in the May, 1976 issue of GOOD NEWS he exclaimed, "God's Church preaches Christ! We preach Him crucified, buried, and resurrected...we preach Christ as the King of kings and Lord of lords who will soon arrive to bring all human governments under His rule.... That is our great goal as a Church."

Following the letters, Herbert Armstrong published a two-page disclaimer in the GOOD NEWS (October, 1975) publicly stating the independence of the A.I.C.F. from the Church. Garner Ted Armstrong made similar statements directly contradicting those he had made only two months previous.

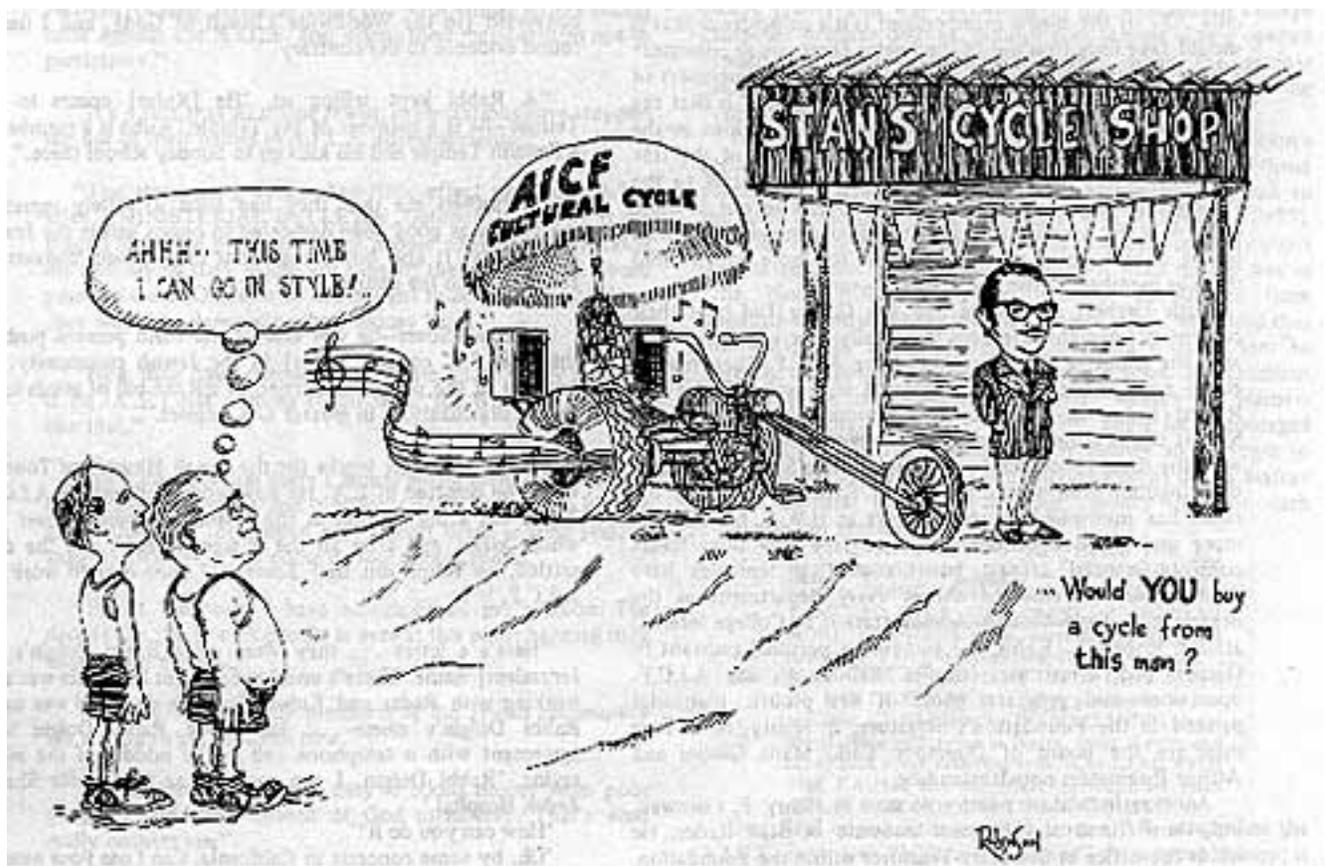

Arthur A. Ferdig, General Manager for HUMAN POTENTIAL and long-time

Managing Editor of the PLAIN TRUTH was chosen as the whipping boy for all the "misunderstandings" within the Jewish community. One of his statements concerning the "new arm of the Work" had been quoted by Rabbi Cunin and Russell Chandler in support of allegations. This gave Rader the opportunity to remark in a radio news spot, "...he is not ordained in the Church, therefore it is very difficult to understand how his article did appear with the comments that it contained....". Stanley Rader really played a long shot hoping that no one would ask why he, an unordained man himself, was acting as spokesman for the Church and Foundation.

Robert Kuhn displayed his protean ability in answering the charge of "image budding" alleged in Chandler's article during an interview on the Hilly Rose radio talk show. By avoiding any reference to Herbert Armstrong's "no little embarrassment" remark, Kuhn sidestepped all the real issues with glib excursions totally off the subject. He flatly denied that the Church was trying to change its image through culture. He stated that the concert series was the fulfillment of Herbert Armstrong's life-long dream of providing concerts to the public and added that the charitable aspect was developed because Mr. Armstrong did not want the Auditorium "commercialized" by outright ticket sales.

Although Rader and Kuhn played down this period of hostile publicity as much as possible, it nevertheless had a devastating effect on the concert box-office when combined with the prohibitive ticket pricing ($35-$100). Even the practice of "papering the house" with complimentary tickets did not bring the attendance figures for many performances above the fiasco level. Not until February 1, 1976, halfway through the season, did Rader and Kuhn swallow their pride and publicly announce the lowering of ticket prices to realistic levels-all for "humanitarian" reasons, of course.

Kuhn can be rightfully credited with achieving an uneasy détente between the Southland community and the A.I.C.F. He has managed to rearrange the rhetoric of the Foundation and effect the changes necessary to at least get the concert series functioning. And, in spite of the rough terrain the A.I.C.F. has encountered, it is surviving. Any other organization would have been ruined by the monumental expenses and meager revenues that the A.I.C.F. has on its balance sheet. The difference is that the Foundation has the Worldwide Church of God as its financial "lender" and terms of no interest and no payback ever required.

WILL THE "REAL" A.I.C.F. PLEASE STAND UP?

So, what is the real A.I.C.F.? Is it a front for a new move by the Worldwide Church of God to convert Jews as Rabbi Cunin charged? Is it an attempt by the Armstrong's to give their church a cultural face-lift by improving its image in the public eye as Russell Chandler stated? Both have drawn reasonable conclusions from their research, but they are only partially correct. Although the Church can always use more tithe-paying members, the A.I.C.F. approached the Jewish Community primarily to convert Jewish dollars into ticket sales. And the main image-building was intended not for the Church. but for Herbert Armstrong and Stanley Rader's own self-aggrandizement. Their ever-expanding egos had been constricted by the Church/College image, but the A.I.C.F. enables them to now take their rightful place among the "great" of the world without the Church and College tagging along.

The "real" A.I.C.F. is a grand exercise in pompous duplicity. It permeates the Foundation's advertising, its organizational structure, and even the founding ideals of culture and charity.

Examine the Board of Directors of the Foundation. On the surface, it appears to be comprised of twelve men with a majority of the members having no religious affiliation with the Worldwide Church of God. This seems to corroborate the claims by Rader and Kuhn that the A.I.C.F. is completely independent of the Church. But from inside sources comes the information that not one meeting of the Board has been held so far-at least no meeting that included any member other than Rader, Kuhn and the Armstrongs. Articles of Incorporation and By-Laws of the Foundation have conveniently defined a quorum for an A.I.C.F.

Director's meeting to be only 30% of the Board membership! Is it a coincidence that it should take only four out of the twelve Directors to constitute a quorum, and that there are only four who are members of the Worldwide Church of God? The "plain truth" is that the other eight Directors merely assume cameo positions in the organization. Since each is a prominent member of the fine arts community their names obviously lend prestige to the Foundation. Doubly shocking is the fact that several of these eight were not even informed of their Board membership prior to the publishing of the first A.I.C.F. brochure which listed them as members of the Board of Directors.

Both Herbert Armstrong and son Garner Ted have their customary limelight titles, but they really have very little to do with the planning and operation of the A.I.C.F. These honors go to none other than, you guessed it, Stanley Rader and Robert Kuhn. In fact, the most appropriate description for Stan is the "Cardinal Richelieu of the Work". Herbert and Ted wear the royal robes seen by the public while Stan manipulates the kingdom from behind the scenes. Rader's power over the ranks has multiplied in recent years as H.W.A. has become more and more dependent on him. Not only does Rader control financial affairs, but his political tentacles have reached out to embrace almost every department in the organization from Church Administration to College internal affairs. Robert L. Kuhn, the sometimes personal assistant to Garner Ted Armstrong, handles the day to day A.I.C.F. operations and generates most of the prolific platitudes printed in the Foundation's literature. In reality, these four men are the Board of Directors, Carlo Maria Giulini and Arthur Rubinstein notwithstanding.

Another individual worthy of note is Henry F. Cornwall, long-time friend and business associate of Stan Rader. He holds the office of Secretary-Treasurer within the Foundation. His position in the entire Worldwide Church of God empire is even more covert than Rader's, but sources within the organization have revealed that Cornwall wields incredible power in the area of fiscal affairs. Cornwall, a Certified Public Accountant, has kept the financial records of the Church and College for years and reportedly acts as the sole "independent" auditor of the corporate conglomerate. From their office suite in Century City, Cornwall and Rader discretely exercise almost absolute control over the purse strings. It is they who authorize the ultra-extravagant expenditures by the A.I.C.F. using Church monies.

AN AFTERNOON WITH RABBI SHLOMO
CUNIN

West Coast Director of the Chabad
Lubavitch Movement

(Excerpts from interview: April 20, 1976)

"[Stanley R.] Rader and [Robert L.] Kuhn were presented as two wonderful, fine, Jewish men who are working for this non-sectarian foundation that is going to help mainly Jewish causes."

"Rader and Kuhn presented themselves as full-fledged Jews. This is what they told Joseph Cummins of the B'NAI B'RITH MESSENGER; this is what they told everybody, 'They're two fine Jews.' They were introduced as such at lavish cocktail parties organized for Jewish community leaders."

"You see, they had claimed that Rader and Kuhn had never converted [to the Worldwide Church of God], and I finally found evidence to the contrary."

"A Rabbi kept telling us, 'He [Kuhn] comes to my Temple-he is a member of my Temple.' Kuhn is a member of a Reform Temple and his kids go to Sunday school there."

"It bothers me that they had tried to falsely represent themselves as good Jews

"The editor of the MESSENGER, Joseph Jonah Cummins, the oldest, most prestigious, and largest circulation Jewish paper in the West, firmly refused further advertisement from the A.I.C.F. Furthermore, he took a strong editorial position against Jewish involvement with the concerts. This was done after a thorough investigation of the evidence."

"They [A.I.C.F.] spent a fortune, thousands of dollars to pay these papers. Not only that, but for ISRAEL TODAY they paid to print that paper in excess of fifty-thousand copies to be distributed free in Jewish neighborhoods door-to-door. This gave the paper a chance to increase its circulation and at the same time spread the word about the concerts in Jewish homes. This is fact. All these things can be backed up."

[Referring to the statement: "The controversy seems to have been limited to the B'NAI B'RITH MESSENGER and only a small segment of fundamentalist Jews." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, October 21, 1975)] -"Obviously the guy who wrote this is badly mistaken, to say the least. He must have read the MESSENGER article (August 22, 1975) which contained letters from the leaders of all three factions which comprise the entire spectrum of Jewry. The heads of the Orthodox, Conservative and Reform movements in the Western United States all came out with strong letters taking issue against the A.I.C.F. and urging their memberships not to participate."

"It's a fact that all major Jewish organizations have stopped the use of their names in A.I.C.F."

dedicated to causes within the Jewish community. It also bothers me that they denied 'converting' Jewish kids to the church."

"Yitzhak Sover-he was one of the main persons pushing this [A.I.C.F. concert series] in the Jewish community. He was one of the people who tried to sell the bill of goods to all Jewish organizations in greater Los Angeles."

"Sover no longer works for the Israeli Ministry of Tourism which he directed in L.A. He now works fulltime for A.I.C.F. There was a big turmoil in the Jewish community over this whole affair, and after all the charges cleared, and the dust settled, we found out that Sover had gone over to work for A.I.C.F."

"Here's a letter ... they were using Rabbi Dolgin's [in Jerusalem] name. There's another fellow in Israel. He was also working with Rader and Kuhn. He is the one who was using Rabbi Dolgin's name...he duped Rabbi Dolgin into agreement with a telephone call in the middle of the night saying, 'Rabbi Dolgin, I can make some money for Shaare Zedek Hospital.'

'How can you do it?'

'Oh, by some concerts in California. Can I use your name?'

'Sure, great.'

This was done without telling him what it was. Then I called Rabbi Dolgin in Israel, and this is the letter he sent. In it he states that his name is in no way involved with A.I.C.F. sponsorship; the government of Israel is not engaged in supporting concerts in Pasadena."

advertisements."

"The statement, 'It has had little effect upon our ticket sales.' (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, October 21, 1976), is the biggest lie there ever was. Many people phoned me, thanking me and saying they would not support the concerts and would pass the word. Others who had bought tickets already, told me they would be demanding their money back."

"Now they have changed their entire image. They now say it [A.I.C.F.] has nothing to do with 'the Work' or anything like that."

"All I know is that there's money being spent. There's a lot of money being spent and obviously nobody wants to kill the goose that lays the golden egg. I don't think anyone realizes their motivation. They come on like sugar daddies."

"Put it this way, I have accomplished my mission. The danger for the Jewish people is over at this point because they know what's what."

"I doubt whether any members of the Jewish community are willing to get involved now."

"What bothers me is that they're taking money from poor people [Worldwide Church of God members]. That's what really bothers me."

"Money talks. That's the whole story."

The "real" sincerity of the Foundation's rhetoric concerning culture and humanitarianism requires a look at the Church's past position on these subjects. This is reasonable since the Worldwide Church of God created and supports the A.I.C.F., and Stan Rader himself has stated quite clearly in the MINISTERIAL BULLETIN (March 9, 1976) that the A.I.C.F. will support a project "as long as there is nothing about the project that is inconsistent with the basic unalterable, underlying principle of the Church...". Using this statement as a touchstone, the past principles of the Church regarding the "world's" fine arts and charities create serious contradictions with the founding principles of the A.I.C.F.

For many years the Armstrongs and the Worldwide Church of God ministry have attacked this "evil, Satanic world" in publications and sermons. Countless harangues warning members of the necessity of remaining "separate" from the world's influences were preached. In the area of music, not only was rock music maligned, but even the great composers, such as Beethoven, Bach, and Debussy, were often described as being under demonic influence. Drama, another art form to receive the Armstrong taboo, was compared to deceit or an attempt to escape reality and was forbidden on the Ambassador College campuses because anyone indulging in serious acting opened himself to "outside influences". But, when the greener pastures of cultural stardom beckoned to Herbert, the "chameleon effect" again came into play.

Perhaps the most blatant hypocrisy is the Foundation's great concern for supporting outside charities which "do those good works which the Church feels biblically enjoined to support" (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, October 21, 1975). The fact is the Worldwide Church of God had for thirty years dogmatized that the best investment for your money was in "the Work". Members were strongly discouraged from donating to outside humanitarian causes. They were told that the world will always have its poor and a dollar sent to "preach the gospel" produced far more good. An excellent case in point is a "co-worker" letter written by Herbert Armstrong dated February 27, 1970. There he discouraged Church members from sending their money in response to urgent media appeals to aid the starving victims of the Biafran famine. Herbert did not want "his" money spent on such humanitarian ventures:

"THE APPEAL WAS TO TREAT THE EFFECT, NOT THE CAUSE! ... THIS WORK OF GOD is DOING SOMETHING BIG AND IMPORTANT TO STOP THE CAUSE-to PREVENT MORE BIAFRANS from starving.... YOU are having A PART in spreading Christ's Gospel.... Right HERE is the MOST IMPORTANT WORK ON EARTH TODAY.... GIVE generously as you are able.... The way to DO SOMETHING about the starving and dying in Biafra, India, Egypt, and other such areas suffering evils, is to DEAL WITH THE CAUSE, not the effect-to HELP IN THIS GREAT WORK OF THE LIVING CHRIST!"

One final contradiction-while from a P.R. standpoint the may feel "biblically enjoined" to support charity, it certainly does not feel enjoined to follow the biblical principle Christ, Himself, outlined.

"Take care! Don't do your good deeds publicly, to be admired, for you then will lose the reward from your Father in heaven. When you give a gift to a beggar, don't shout about it as the hypocrites do-blowing trumpets in the assembly halls and streets to call attention to their acts of charity! I tell you in earnestness, they have received all the reward they will ever get." (Matt. 6:1-2, LIVING NEW TESTAMENT)

When this contradiction was cited to a Church minister at the recent ministerial conference, he exclaimed, "Well, I never thought of it that way before!"

Continuing the discussion of the "real" A.I.C.F.-How has the A.I.C.F. really fared'? Has it fulfilled its stated goals?

One area in which to measure the degree of success is the concert series. The goal of bringing the finest talent was easily achieved since the A.I.C.F. thrives on the motto "money is no object". There was little negotiation in performers' fees. What was demanded was paid, and top dollar was the order of the day in contracting the series. The secondary goal of enticing the general Los Angeles populace to attend these concerts was not as successful. That story was related earlier in this article.

TAKE YOUR PICK

(Statements by Worldwide Church of God leadership)

BEFORE JEWISH CONTROVERSY

H. W. Armstrong:

"Some weeks ago I authorized the formation of a new FOUNDATION-named the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation. It has become a necessary adjunct to this worldwide, dimension of getting Christ's TRUE Gospel to the nations through heads of government...[a] whole new phase of the Work."<sup>1</sup>

"One thing has been a serious handicap and caused me and my touring team no little embarrassment. We have had to say that we represent either Ambassador College, or Worldwide Church of God."<sup>2</sup>

"This new Foundation is giving us great added prestige, credibility, and favor. It is something NO ONE CAN CRITICIZE. It doesn't sound 'religious' !"<sup>3</sup>

"...we must in certain countries use whatever means the government says must be used in order to distribute literature and the like."<sup>4</sup>

AFTER JEWISH CONTROVERSY

Herbert W. Armstrong:

"But I want to emphasize that the new Ambassador International Cultural Foundation is entirely separate from the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College."<sup>9</sup>

R. L. Kuhn:

"...anyone associated with the inception of the Foundation knows that...any spin-off effect of changing and improving an 'image'...was not even considered originally."<sup>10</sup>

G. T. Armstrong:

"...the brand-new dimension in God's Work, the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, and the new magazine published by the Foundation, HUMAN POTENTIAL!"<sup>5</sup>

13 August 7, 1975 letter to Joseph Cummins editor of B'NAI B'RITH MESSENGER.

The amount of money received through the solicitation drive would serve as an ideal gauge for the effectiveness of the A.I.S.F.'s humanitarian endeavors. Its goal for this season was $1.3 million, but at press time full disclosure of the revenues collected by the Foundation have not been reported by Rader or Cornwall. By law, they have until the beginning of July, 1976, to file a complete financial statement with the City and County of Los Angeles. However, an interim statement was filed in November, 1975, indicating receipt of $310,000. While the Foundation loudly proclaims that 100% of all funds collected go to charity it is not very specific about whose charity. Only $96,000 of the reported total was distributed to "outside" charities. The remaining $214,000 benefitted the projects previously funded by the Worldwide Church of God. This amount is nearly 70% of the total receipts reported as of last November. Five months later on January 1, 1976, Robert Kuhn confided to Charles Hunting and Richard Plache over dinner at Chez Paul Restaurant that 85% of the revenues collected go to the Work's "charities" while only 15% of the revenues collected by A.I.C.F. left the organization to be distributed to bona fide outside charities. There's nothing like practicing the old adage, "Charity begins at home".

The third major area to measure the success of the Foundation is the growth of its journal, HUMAN POTENTIAL. Unfortunately, the magazine has been the most lackluster performer in the Rader-Kuhn cultural circus. Now over a year old, HUMAN POTENTIAL is yet to come out as a regular issue, and the entire project has been turned over to J. Walter Thompson, the mammoth ad agency, for the purpose of overhauling the journal's approach. The Thompson people had flatly told Stan that any attempt to market the "rehearsal issue" would be suicide. The present number of subscriptions confirms their assessment—only 15,000 to 20,000 subscriptions have been received, the vast majority being from members of the Worldwide Church of God. Rader and Kuhn had projected a circulation of 100,000 to 300,000 after the first year. No letters explaining the delay in publication have been sent to subscribers. The apparent reason for the "neglect" was voiced in a recent HUMAN POTENTIAL staff meeting: "We don't have to worry, they're Church members."

It should be abundantly evident by now that the "real" Ambassador International Cultural Foundation is the antithesis of its much publicized, idealized front. The A.I.C.F. steering committee of Rader, Cornwall and Kuhn have cared little about the "incredible potential of the human spirit" as they employ basic Machiavellian techniques in managing the Foundation, its public image and the staff. They have succeeded in creating an atmosphere of suspicion, trauma and insecurity within the A.I.C.F. organization. Their goal is to achieve financial self-sufficiency for their Foundation as quickly as possible so that it can operate independently of the Church and its inherent financial fluctuations and doctrinal "brushfires". Of course, should the A.I.C.F. ever need another major infusion of Church capital, that option would be kept open.

The timetable for fiscal independence has been pushed back due to promotional difficulties. Most of the artistic community has been turned off by the "nouveau riche" pomposity with which the A.I.C.F. carries itself. But valuable lessons are being learned, and the Foundation can afford to make mistakes. It has tapped into the $60 million annual reservoir of the Worldwide Church of God. Exactly how much is being transferred to the A.I.C.F. is next to impossible to confirm since Rader and Cornwall keep the books. The next section will briefly scan some of the more glaring expenditures of the Foundation as it takes the Church on a multi-million dollar sleigh ride.

FLEECING THE FLOCK

In a promotional letter for the A.I.C.F. the following statement appeared: "The Foundation's conceptual approach is the personification of generosity: everyone gains."-that is everyone but the Worldwide Church of God members who foot the bills.

The Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, in the final analysis, is nothing but a renegade Robin Hood-it steals from the poor to give to the rich. While the average lower-middle class Church member is sacrificing "till it hurts" in response to yet another H.W.A. "crisis letter", his dollars are subsidizing symphonic concerts and champagne receptions for Beverly Hills aristocrats whose savings account interest probably eclipses the annual income of most Church members. This premeditated rape of the contributor by an organization claiming to represent humanitarianism is nothing less than obscene! The tragicomic sham prompted one famous conductor to say he would have no association with the Foundation because the money came from poor people who had no say in its use, and because of the extravagant and unwise expenditure of those funds.

Vladimir Horowitz, tour de force of the entire concert season, performed two recitals for the tidy sum of $80,000-that works out to be $333.00 per minute. It was reported that Arthur Rubinstein was more than slightly miffed upon discovering that Horowitz received such an astronomical fee while he had "donated" his recital in exchange for a $50,000 contribution by the Church to the International Cultural Center for Youth. Another noteworthy artist, Joan Sutherland, received $10,000 for her performance. Her husband, Richard Bonyng, also received $10,000 for accompanying her. Most of the other performers were paid on the high end of the scale for normal fees. In some cases, extra remuneration was provided by sending a performer several first class plane tickets-roundtrip from New York or London to Los Angeles when in fact the performer was coming alone and from a point much closer. These extra tickets were easily cashed in. In addition, the A.I.C.F. is by no means limiting itself to sponsoring concerts in Pasadena. Several are being planned for Milwaukee and Washington, D.C.

Live concerts are not the sole beneficiaries of A.I.C.F. monies. The Foundation also heavily supports programming on KFAC, a prominent Los Angeles classical radio station. With the recent addition of "Luncheon at the Music Center" under its sponsorship, A.I.C.F. has become by far the largest sponsor on KFAC, ahead of Pacific Gas Company and General Electric. It now supports 18 plus hours of air time every week. (Rumor has it that Rader and Cornwall have been thinking about purchasing the entire radio station and have made overtures as such to the general manager.)

Probably the single most exorbitant event coming out of the A.I.C.F.-Worldwide Church of God checkbook occurred during the first week in November, 1975. At the Cinerama Dome Theater in Hollywood, the Foundation underwrote the movie premier of "Paper Tiger", starring David Niven. In attendance that night were scores of stars including: Fred Astair, Glen Campbell, Natalie Wood, Robert Wagner, Ann Miller and Dana Andrews. The A.I.C.F. picked up the tab for all tickets to the premier at $100 each. Rader also donated $25,000 from A.I.C.F. to the Motion Picture and Television Actors Relief Fund. Since the packed theater seated 929, Worldwide Church of God tithe payers received a total bill of at least $17,900, not including the post-premiere supper party at Chasen's. As if this were not enough, Stan also hosted a similar premier for the movie in London.

Lest anyone think Stan Rader only enjoys entertaining on the town, let it be known that he loves to have his friends over to his Beverly Hills home often for catered parties. No need to ask who foots the bill. Stan has developed many acquaintances in the local diplomatic community this way, and the A.I.C.F. is reportedly gaining a reputation among the consular corps as one of the most popular party-givers.

Since Church money is being expended for all these non-church activities, one would assume that financial problems are nonexistent in the Worldwide Church of God. But, to read Herbert Armstrong's letters to the co-workers and members would leave the impression that the Church is continually on the brink of bankruptcy, forever needing to be rescued by another "supreme sacrifice" by the contributors.

Garner Ted Armstrong recently declared that there would be no "sacred cows" in the Work. Any department not directly involved with "getting the Gospel to the world" would be liquidated to "streamline the Work". But while massive cutbacks and widespread terminations are under way, Robert Kuhn and a new A.I.C.F. publicity director are busily planning a "bigger and better" concert series for next season. Either Ted has been unable to locate a sacrificial altar large enough for the "Golden Calf", or he is afraid to lock horns with Stan Rader over the A.I.C.F. Inside sources have disclosed that the latter is the case. Ted and Stan hold roughly equal amounts of power in the organization, and neither wants to risk a head-on confrontation. For the time being each seems content to stay on his side of the corporate line.

STRAIGHT TALK (To the ministry and tithe-paying membership of the Worldwide Church of God)

Now that you have an outline of what the A.I.C.F. is all about, perhaps you should ask yourself some hard questions. Can you honestly say you do not share in the responsibility for the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation? You are paying for it, and dearly. Your tithes have made it all possible.

"But what can I do", you're probably thinking. "How the money is spent is not my responsibility. They will have to answer to God for their actions." You have all the canned rationalizations to fall back upon. But you do have a responsibility to the God you worship, to yourself and to the Armstrongs (if you really have any Christian concern). Your responsibility to God does not end with the signing of your tithe check. You must demand that your contributions be spent on the job of preaching Christ, not Horowitz. Of course, you can always try to convince yourself that your dollars are spent to "preach the Gospel" while another person's donations go to support movie premiers and lavish parties for the diplomatic corps.

Do you seriously believe Stanley Rader, Henry F. Cornwall and Robert L. Kuhn care about your welfare? Not one is ordained, and Cornwall is not even a member of the Worldwide Church of God. Both Rader and Kuhn cloak their membership in the Church-Kuhn is a member of the Pasadena Jewish Temple and Rader's main object of worship seems to be himself. Robert Kuhn has reportedly said, "Even if this weren't God's work-where else could you have more fun?" How does it feel to know that these three men are funneling millions of your dollars into their "cultural" empire to be spent as they chose?

10100 Santa Monica Boulevard, housing the Century City offices of Stanley Rader and Henry Cornwall-is this the real headquarters for the Worldwide Church of God?

Unless you awake from your fear-induced trance and protest even to the point of withholding your contributions, it is only a matter of time before the Rader-Cornwall-Kuhn cabal achieves its goal of financial self-sufficiency and casts off the Church as a depleted host. Nothing short of a massive "tithe-strike" can stop the A.I.C.F. Ted Armstrong cannot stop it. He is not strong enough corporately or intestinally to oppose both Rader and Cornwall; and Herbert is wrapped around Stan's little finger.

It is now up to YOU, the tithe payer, to stop the leeching of the Church! You have only yourself to blame each passing week as yet another part of your family's welfare and sustenance is needlessly sacrificed to provide FUN FOR A FEW!

A Legend In His Own Mind

In the beginning, Herbert W. Armstrong was born in Des Moines, Iowa to parents of "solid Quaker stock" who, Herbert claims, can trace their ancestry back to King David. Given this somewhat spurious claim to royal beginnings, it is easy to understand the fanatical insistence of sovereignty that apparently invaded Herbert the first day of his life.

To fortify his claim to such royal beginnings, Herbert beats his readers over the head time after time with advertising superlatives about his bloodline and experience. His autobiography tells us:

His father had a voice of unusual quality.

His brother Dwight had a special musical talent for composing.

Herbert married a woman of superior intelligence.
He had training in football, basketball, track and tennis under the best coaches.
He worked with the two best advertising men in the country.
His uncle Frank Armstrong was the most prominent advertising man in Iowa.
Herbert's brother-in-law in Portland was the leading architect in that area.
Herbert was the originator of the public opinion poll.

Herbert also claims that his son, Ted, is the pinacle of human omniscience.

"I think no man probably has a better grasp of world affairs and their significance. of social conditions, of family life and problems and of human nature. And more, probably no person on earth has a better knowledge and understanding of the Bible, and of Biblical prophecy...."
(PLAIN TRUTH Subscriber letter, June 5, 1968)

Even when Herbert Armstrong becomes sick, he does it in a superlative manner:

"I entered there [Southern Mississippi Infirmary] with the worst case [of typhoid] in the hospital's history. I was unconscious for two or three days."

And how did Herbert recover? You guessed it:

"I snapped out of it quicker, apparently, than any other case they had ever had..."

And while recovering:

"I was the favorite patient of practically all the nurses." (AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Herbert W. Armstrong, pp. 59, 60.)

There is little doubt that the results of the "worst case of typhoid fever in the infirmary's history" did bear influence upon what was to follow. Eventually Herbert would be claiming:

"Even as Moses, the Apostle Paul and others, in early life, had been specially prepared for the special Mission to which God finally called them, so was I...God revealed Himself to me..."
(Member letter, March 18, 1974.)

UPON THIS PSYCHOSIS I WILL BUILD MY CHURCH

As a teenager, Herbert flowered into a typical, would-be aristocrat. His writings about this period reveal him to be a grossly over-rated package of self-confidence and cocky conceit, with a burning desire for success. He appears to have been socially inept, enjoying relationships only with those who would feed his demanding ego.

To this day Herbert clearly exemplifies a pattern of personality traits which render him susceptible to an actual or symptom psychosis (See Robert Goldenson's THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF HUMAN BEHAVIOR: PSYCHOLOGY, PSYCHIATRY AND MENTAL HEALTH, Published by Doubleday, 1970). His writings are freighted with numerous indications of this psychosis.

His earliest religious experiences are filled with what is known as grandiose expansiveness. This symptom develops in many cases of psychosis. It is a state of mind in which the person's attitude of superiority manifests itself through contact with a cosmic person or divine message.

"At the next intersection, the steering wheel of the car automatically turned to the right. I felt the wheel turning. I resisted it. It kept turning right. Instantly I applied all my strength to counteract it, and keep steering straight ahead. My strength was of no avail. Some unseen force was turning that steering wheel against all my strength. The car had turned to the right into the street one block east of the home of the cripple....

"Could it possibly be that an angel forced the steering wheel to turn me in here? I wondered, somewhat shaken by the experience. I decided I had better stop in at the cripple's home a moment, to be sure." (AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Herbert W. Armstrong, pp. 323, 324.)

Herbert's imaginings of divine intervention include members of his immediate family as well. These accounts, as related by Herbert in his autobiography and sermons include a yarn about his son, Garner Ted, being attacked by a demon in his sleep and several instances of his wife, Loma, being contacted by angels. In one such instance Loma was warned by an angel, "Go to Salem. Go to Salem. Enemies are plotting against your husband." Another experience of Loma's later became, in Herbert's mind, a revelation of his divine commission:

"The first call to God's ministry came while we were living in this single room....

"One night my wife had a dream so vivid and impressive it overwhelmed and shook her tremendously. It was so realistic it seemed more like a vision. For two or three days afterward everything else seemed unreal-as if in a daze-and only this extraordinary dream seemed real.

"In her dream she and I were crossing the wide intersection, a few blocks from our room....

Suddenly there appeared an awesome sight in the sky above. It was a dazzling spectacle-the sky filled with a gigantic solid mass of brilliant stars, shaped like a huge banner....

"As she and I, in her dream, looked upward at the vanishing stars, three large white birds suddenly appeared in the sky between us and the vanishing stars. These great white birds flew directly toward us. As they descended nearer, she perceived that they were angels.

"Then it seemed that, from among these angels in her dream, that Christ descended from among them and stood directly in front of us.... He put His arms around both of us, and we were so happy!...

"Then it seemed He had changed into an angel. I was terribly disappointed at first, until he told me Christ was really coming in a very short time. At that time, we had been going quite regularly to motion-picture theatres. She asked the angel if this was wrong. He replied Christ had important work for us to do, preparing for His coming-there would be no time for 'movies.'...." (AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Herbert W. Armstrong, pp. 207, 208.)

With an imagination like that, there's no need for movies! Indications of perceptual distortion (a type of hallucinatory experience which threatens the principal) are visible throughout his writings:

"...I awakened out of a pleasant dream I could not remember. Suddenly, still more asleep than awake, the stark, hideous REALITY crashed through in my mind.

"'NO!' I almost shouted, it CAN'T BE! This can't be real!' God's CHURCH! Oasis of PEACE and HAPPINESS, and JOY in this unhappy, dark and violent world! The only place on earth where GOD'S GOVERNMENT produced these fruits!. Now actually INVADED BY SATAN! 'Oh Eternal God!' Now I was literally shouting beside my bed with up-stretched arms. 'Wake me out of his hideous NIGHTMARE! Wake me out of it!'

"By now I was completely awake. It was no bad dream. Satan was ATTACKING GOD'S WORK, pulling out all stops as never before, to DESTROY IT, and to destroy many ministers and brethren with it!... I knew I had to LEAP to the job, seeking Christ's guidance, to SAVE THE FLOCK from this vicious attack by Satan.

"Quickly I threw on some clothes and ran downstairs and out to the sidewalk for the morning paper, to see what next...." (Member letter, March 1, 1974).

On scores of other occasions Herbert exemplifies a type of paranoid projection often found in psychosis, revealing a complex arrangement of beliefs based on the delusion that the world is coming to an end via a specific format understood exclusively by the "patient".

"... the sudden increase in marches, demonstrations, riots, strikes. MASS VIOLENCE- and assassinations-even threatening to overturn governments of nations is something this world has never seen...." (Co-Worker letter 6/6/68.)

"World events are gaining momentum-speeding rapidly toward the END of this society.... Soon-possibly not more than 3½ more years-IT WILL BE TOO LATE! World events are moving now SO FAST, it appears there may not be more time than that!..." (Co-Worker letter 7/29/68.)

"Probably I have never written you a letter as important as this! First, this morning's news is MORE SERIOUS than most people realize! I tell you soberly, it means we are now right on the very DOORSTEP of the MOST SERIOUS CRISIS and WORLD TROUBLE that has ever happened in all history!" (Co-Worker letter 11/24/68.)

"We do not have much more time to go-perhaps not much more than about 2½ years!" (Co-Worker letter, 4/28/69.)

"...we may have less than two more years...." (Co-Worker letter, 1/29/70.)

"Events leading to the END of this world are now accelerating FASTER AND FASTER! More and more, the governments of nations are TOPPLING!" (Co-Worker letter. 8,129/74.)

"The whole world situation is now darkening. FASTER!" (Co-Worker letter. 7/25/74.)

"Can you believe it? ...another year of world troubles, overthrow of more governments, increasing violence and crime-whisking us rapidly into and through the END time of this present evil world. We now have little time left to finish God's Work." (Co-Worker letter. 1/2/75.)

"This morning...it happened again! Another important government overthrown! Co-Workers, as I said a month ago, time is now really running out on us! NEVER has the world been in a time of world troubles such as we live in now. We are definitely in the END TIME." (Co-Worker letter, 3/25/75.)

"It's time you were becoming ALARMED over the rapidly worsening state of the world you live in. Do not read carelessly over this, as if it were some ordinary thing you'd hardly notice! The FOOLISH will do just that, and they will SUFFER as humanity has never suffered before." (Co-Worker letter, 1/21/76.)

In addition to these special tendencies, psychotic personalities have a number of transition experiences in which they deny the reality of their short-comings by rationalizing into existence the intervention and approval of those whom they see as equals.

"I remember many a happy, blessed, really ENJOYABLE hour spent in the bare kitchens of financially poor people, studying the Bible with them. It seemed as if the angels were there with us-as indeed they were!" (TOMORROW'S WORLD, June 1971, p. 2.)

Throughout his life, Herbert W. Armstrong, seems to be battling a severe and disabling mental illness of organic and emotional origin, characterized by a loss of contact with reality. His personality disorganization appears extreme in its deviation from what most see as normal patterns of thinking, feeling and acting.

Today Herbert is busy policing his flock with hostile belligerance that resembles yet another symptom of psychotic disorder. During the course of a sermon it is not at all unusual to hear Herbert inflict verbal abuse upon his followers that would render a drill sergeant silent. The following reprinted article is typical:

"...almost every Festival (Feast of Tabernacles) someone on the grounds will approach one or two members, with an argument, or interpretation of his own of some point or question of Scripture which is contrary to the doctrine of God's OWN CHURCH.

"Usually a crowd begins to gather quickly. It seems many are such "dumb sheep"-so naive and unthinking and ready to be deceived by Satan-that they are ALL EARS at once!... many of you members just can't resist crowding up to hear him!" (SHOULD WE LISTEN TO OTHERS?" Ambassador College, 1960.)

Spurred by feelings of guilt, Herbert's followers have accepted this abuse and helped him rise to unimagined corporate success. This success has made Herbert's mind more certain than ever that he is a legend-singled out, inspired and lead by the very Being who blue-printed the universe. But as is always the problem with psychosis, the individual afflicted with it is seldom the truthful purist his followers would wish him to be.

LET'S ASK SOME QUESTIONS

It is obvious from Herbert's remarks about "dumb sheep" that questions are not always welcome at Ambassador College or in its corporate parent, the Worldwide Church of God.

In a 1974 member letter, Herbert outlined the history of the Universe in nine pages. He began his pronouncements about a time before man's creation or before recorded history. In this scenario, he claims that it was "questioning" brought on by "thinking and reasoning" that caused Satan to rebel. And what was the end result of this cerebral activity? -"That UNIVERSAL sin of REBELLION (raising issues, thinking, and reasoning) plunged the whole earth into physical chaos, confusion and utter DARKNESS."

According to Herbert, "questions" not only caused the fall of man, but propelled the nation of Israel into captivity and slavery, caused the disappearance of the early Christian church and, of utmost importance, is the cause of the recent strife within the Worldwide Church of God. According to Herbert, Satan is the prime mover behind man's rebellion against authority and Satan's primary tool is the use of questions.

It does not take much for us to realize, however, that the real reason questions are discouraged is not the potential threat to the Supreme Creator or His plan, but the threat to Herbert Armstrong and his plan. This plan involves blind obedience to Herbert who, we must remember, is God's apostle whose views are inspired.

IS HERBERT ARMSTRONG AN APOSTLE?

Over the years, students and members of the Worldwide Church of God have been repeatedly admonished to accept Herbert Armstrong as the one and only Apostle of Jesus Christ. Or at least this is the impression given in Herbert's writings since he neglects to ever contradict, correct or challenge those followers who call him an apostle.

Even the casual student of the Bible ("casual" meaning having nothing more than the ability to read and turn pages) can test Herbert's authenticity of "apostleship" by the following Biblical factors:

- 1) For Herbert to be an apostle, he must have been a witness to Christ's resurrection (Acts 1:22).
- 2) Herbert must have seen Christ personally, as did the Apostle Paul (I Corinthians 9: 1).
- 3) He must have "the signs of an apostle" which are miracles, wonders and mighty deeds (II Corinthians 12:12).

The question to bare in mind at this point is: Can Herbert W. Armstrong show any evidence of these factors in his life?

Additionally, there are indications that the current regal life-style of Herbert Armstrong is seriously at odds with I Corinthians 4:9-13. This passage indicates that apostles of the New Testament (not kings, lords and princes in the Old Testament whose positions as heads of state demanded a regal image) were to: a) show evidence of hunger, thirst and lack of proper clothing; b) be despised, while the lay people can be honored by the world; c) show evidence of being buffeted and having no permanent home in which to live; d) be willing to work with their own hands when required; e) when reviled, always bless their reviler; f) when persecuted, endure it cheerfully; and g) be defamed by people and considered "filth of the world" by those in the world, and the "offscouring of all things unto this day". The latter phrase indicates that the appraisal of disdain by the world and its political leaders, businessmen and educators is a continuing assessment. If the Herbert Armstrong you know meets these Biblical requirements then he is an apostle in every sense of the word.

On the other hand, if the Herbert Armstrong you know is the one a) with diamond cufflinks, a private jet, the Czar of Russia's tableware, gold flatware, gold bathroom fixtures in his office, a Rolls Royce, four homes, an executive expense account and handsome salary; b) who said in a letter dated February 25, 1974, "Arriving at Manila . . . I was greeted by a large, white-uniformed band" and stated in an earlier letter dated January 27, 1974, "GOD HAS GIVEN ME GREAT CREDABILITY IN THE EYES OF HEADS OF MANY NATIONS!", then later in that eventful year said, "A Government Highway Patrol car, with flashing red light and siren escorted me everywhere I went for the nine days we were there [Manila].", then, perhaps, we are confronted with one of those "occasional contradictions" which occur when one places the clear evidence of a matter next to the amplified screams thundered from the pulpit and the ballooned print of his writings. These, we might add, are the only things which give Herbert W. Armstrong his claim to apostleship, not Biblical proof. Without his hysterical style, Herbert, is about as apostolically potent as a house plant.

IS GOD "BACKING" HERBERT ARMSTRONG?

Although it may be clear that Herbert is not an apostle, to many in the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College, the fact remains that Herbert is in control. And to them this position of control over the rapid growth and immensity of his organization is synonymous with "backing" from God Almighty. Herbert leaves little doubt in the mind of his readers concerning this "fact":

"He [God] did call and choose me to raise up this present era of His Church, and to be used in proclaiming the true GOSPEL, for the first time in over 18½ centuries TO THE WORLD!
"You know you have the PROOF by the FRUITS that this IS the very Church the living Christ is guiding and blessing! Is there any doubt-COULD there be-as to WHOM God chose to raise up this WORK, and carry it on?
"I am the called and chosen servant of the living Jesus Christ." (Member letter, January 31, 1974.)

And what are those so-called "FRUITS" and "PROOF"? That comes in another letter dated March 18, 1974:

"In 1933, He [God] raised up, through my preaching....what was to become the Worldwide Church of God.
"As in the first century, the Lord ADDED gradually to that number. Meanwhile God's WORK was growing by MULTIPLICATION, 30%, per year, multiplying itself 8 times in 8 years, 64 times in 16 years, and more than 4,000 times in 32 years."

There is absolutely no quarreling with these figures. Just as there is not a shread of "PROOF" in these figures to indicate any backing from a divine source. Surely, if God is identifying His affiliation by the new dimensions opening up to a corporation and by the financial growth it enjoys, then we should all get down on our knees and pay homage to the divine guidance given Standard Oil Corporation over the last forty years.

More importantly, if God is "backing" Herbert Armstrong, why then didn't He back Herbert's prophecies? (see page 6). The above question was answered in the December, 1956 issue of the PLAIN TRUTH, in an article entitled, "Foretold 22 Years Ago!":

"God has raised up this very work to make known to the world His Truth-to carry to the world His prophetic warnings before it is too late!
"Scripture is full of warnings about false ministers and false prophets. The world is filled with such men and organizations today. 'The prophet that prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, THEN SHALL THE PROPHET BE KNOWN THAT THE LORD HATH TRULY SENT HIM'-Jerermah 28:9. That is how you can know who is preaching the truth today-when what he says comes to pass."

It is fitting that Herbert's PLAIN TRUTH magazine be the prophet that would decide the method of his own judgment.

IS HERBERT ARMSTRONG "INSPIRED"?

Herbert claims that he carries out God's government through his church. He claims that his God has given his church authority to determine doctrine. As proof of his authority in matters of church government, Herbert cites his expertise in clearing up problem areas of scripture which are not clear to most Christians. Consequently, Herbert moves in where others dare not tread. This is fair enough, since an establishment of clear directives by inspired research would be enough to satisfy the desire of many who wish a larger degree of harmony in their life with regards to scripture.

At one time the areas of doubt, in Herbert's opinion, were the subjects to which he concluded that 1) women should not wear make-up, and 2) Pentecost should be kept on a Monday.

History proves that in both cases Herbert Armstrong was miserably wrong. Herbert considered the use of make-up a capital sin and personally disfellowshipped both of his daughters for its use. It can now be demonstrated that Herbert's "inspired" research was unnecessarily restrictive of an individual's personal choice and did not provide adults the opportunity to govern themselves in the matter of their cosmetic appearance. Despite a recent reversal of his earlier decision, it remains clear that Herbert is still in control of all doctrinal decisions. But being in control and being right are two different things.

In the second case concerning the celebration of Pentecost on the "right" day, the charge against Herbert's inspirational credibility is far more serious, since it puts God on the spot:

"...God gave this festival to His people in order to reveal, and to keep them continually informed....

"As already explained, God's purpose in giving His Church His annual holydays was to keep his children constantly in true understanding of God's great PLAN.

"To accomplish this, God took the yearly material harvest seasons in Palestine as the picture of the spiritual harvest of souls.

"The New Testament Church of God was not founded on Sunday. But it did start on the annual Sabbath-day called "Pentecost"....

"All other holydays or festivals come on definite days of definite months. But Pentecost must be determined by COUNTING. It is very simple and plain. Any child should be able to start numbering from a definite day and count fifty. Yet there are three little simple points which seem to confuse some people so that they observe the wrong day." (PAGAN HOLIDAYS-OR GOD'S HOLYDAYS-WHICH? copyrighted 1957 by Ambassador College.)

And there you have it. Calculating the correct day on which to observe Pentecost is child's play. What greater proof of God's non-inspiration is there than Herbert chaining his followers to celebrating Pentecost on the wrong day? This blunder was perpetuated under Herbert W. Armstrong for forty years!

By his own reasoning, he shows himself "in discord" with God when instructing the reader on the importance of keeping Pentecost on the proper day:

"It is of very grave importance we figure the right day. This day, and this only, is made HOLY by the Eternal Creator. Suppose at the same time the Church of God was founded, the Apostles had miscounted. And 'when the day of Pentecost was fully come' (Acts 2: 1 ) they, instead of being all with one accord in one place were in discord, some having observed the day preceeding, and some waiting until the following day!" (ibidem, p. 14)

If you were in the Worldwide Church of God until 1974, you celebrated Pentecost on the wrong day every year you were in his church. According to Herbert's own reasoning you missed God's legitimate attempt to inspire you as to his New Testament plan for mankind.

ARE HERBERT'S CRITICS "SATANIC"?

If one is to listen to Herbert Armstrong regarding the beliefs of former members there is no question but that "THEY ARE IN THE BONDS OF SATAN", particularly if they publicly disagree with him!

Although he is referring to ministers who have resigned, the following accusations are typical of Herbert's opinion of anyone who has fallen from his graces. In his February 25, 1974, letter to the members of the W.C.G. Herbert states:

"No wonder Satan moved in his subtle, deceptive and diabolical way to influence a few of those who have been God's MINISTERS. They began by "Questioning" this, that and the other doctrine.... SATAN is the real author of this rebellion against God's Work.

"...these deceived ministers [are] allowing Satan to use them.

"This thing is of SATAN...these deceived men [are] now allowing Satan to turn them the wrong way."

Let's assume for the moment that these men are under the influence of Satan. Just for the sake of argument let's say Herbert is talking about two former evangelists and two former pastors: Albert Portune, Charles Hunting, Al Carrozzo and Richard Plache. If these men are as Satanic as Herbert claims them to be, then why is he still paying Al Portune seven hundred and fifty dollars a month? Why did his corporation offer Al Carrozzo $20,000 a year for the rest of his life if he would keep quiet and stay with the Worldwide Church of God? If Hunting and Plache were so diabolically influenced, why did Herbert allow the offer of a year and a half off from work with full pay at over $25,000 a year to be made?

It's one thing for Herbert to say these men are doing Satan's work; but it's worse to offer to continue their wages. If they indeed are wicked men, let Satan bankroll his own!

TWO WRONGS DON'T MAKE A RIGHT

The cerebral-trauma of the following Armstrong statement is beyond sanity. It is symptomatic of pure psychosis. It is Herbert W. Armstrong at his symptomatic best. It is (spiritually speaking) his way of putting the cart before the horse. This is the accounting method he uses to hide such mistakes as the old make-up doctrine and Monday Pentecost. In short, it's the classic advertising man's way of saying: "Though two wrongs don't make a right-Three do!"

"Christ ... has BOUND in heaven what His Church, even in unrealized error, has bound in earth." (Ministerial Bulletin, re: Pentecost and facial make-up, 12/3/74.)

I don't have to say to you, "Go back and read that statement twice more, then once again and never forget it." Anyone with one eye and no sense should know that it's a cop-out! This intellectual disorder leaves only one authority on earth to decide what is right and that person is:

HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG- THE ADORED ONE

Herbert Armstrong is one of the most enthusiastic ignoramuses to use the name of Christ since LaSalle consecrated his government's robbery of the Mississippi Valley with a benediction. It is difficult to interpret Herbert Armstrong's behavior, his writings, his sermons, and make sense of them without some assistance from a psychiatrist. Besides his enthusiasm for power and riches Herbert has an equal enthusiasm for his own image-his image of himself as the adored one, the legend.

While it is possible that some of Herbert's behavior patterns change considerably from time to time, this writer has come to the conclusion, along with several others who knew him intimately, who dined with him repeatedly, traveled with him and loved him, that the man's mental make-up has been marked from the beginning of their experiences with him by a slowly developing, systematic organization of delusions of divine grandure and satanic persecution.

This is not to say that he is necessarily evil in the sight of God. It is meant to indicate that many who know Herbert know his actions to be gross exaggerations of ego tendencies found among normal individuals.

Many agree that Herbert Armstrong tends to be more than slightly suspicious of others and tends to blame others, including Christ, for his failures in prophecy and doctrine. Those who know him have told me that constant failure has fostered within him the belief that he has not been given a "fair shake". Obviously, Herbert could not accept his "uninspired" lot in life and instead of making constructive efforts to change educational and doctrinal error became bitter nursing grievances of fancied injustices.

At some point in his life, these fanciful tendencies became the dominant pattern of his adjustment to the realities which fought against him daily. This makes it easier to understand his hypersensitivity to questions put forth by members, as well as his subsequent hypercriticism of others who would not readily adopt his ideas. It is easier to understand the armor of arrogance and superiority that Herbert has surrounded himself with and why he is totally incapable of admitting any defects or weaknesses within himself. One example of this is his unfounded insistence that he has never made a major mistake in his guiding of the church of God. Unfortunately, these characteristics have intensified with the passing of time.

Several psychological factors appear to be responsible for Herbert's "symptomatic" condition. Considering the "solid Quaker stock" family that Herbert grew up in, it is not difficult to believe that his parents could have been overbearing, critical and ambitious. As a child, Herbert could have been made to feel that he would not be accepted or loved unless he measured up to something that proved himself superior. Under the impact of this excessive pressure, usually reinforced with punishment, Herbert could have easily become the sullen, resentful and stubborn person that we see him to be in his autobiography and other writings. This pressure could also account for the passage in his autobiography which indicates that he did not get along well with children in his own peer group and favored his playtime with the older boys in his neighborhood. Subsequently, attitudes of superiority and arrogance developed. Instead of becoming friendly and congenial, Herbert became aloof and isolated. This could give us some insight into why Herbert spent so much time in the library and finally ended up dropping out of high school.

Instead of realizing that he was being rejected because of his own attitude, Herbert seemingly became increasingly hostile to the world ("they are all deceived") as well as overly sensitive to unintentional slights. As he grew older and achieved a few successes, he became more aggressive, humorless and domineering. He was constantly finding fault with others ("the world") and demanded more and more recognition for himself-" Brethren ... follow the one you have called GOD'S APOSTLE, whom GOD has chosen and USED these forty years!" (Herbert W. Armstrong: Member letter 2/25/74.)

This outward air of superiority is actually a cover for inward feelings of inadequacy. He betrays his inward doubt through his oversensitivity to criticism and his craving for praise among world leaders and the cultural elite. Every activity is marked by overzealousness: erecting a $24,000,000 auditorium which seats only 1,250 people, buying gifts of Steuben Crystal, flying the Vienna Symphony to Pasadena for two performances at a cost of $500,000. Is Herbert trying to make up for his own inadequacies through these pretentious showings of wealth? Whose friendship is he buying-God's?

Instead of looking inward to find the source of his difficulties, he protects himself from intolerable feelings of failure by eventually isolating himself, allowing another (is that you, Stan?) to fend for him, and blaming others for every failure, every problem. When he does emerge, it is usually with aggression on his lips. His aggressive attitudes arouse the anger and resentment of many people, and this in turn feeds the fires of his own hostility. This cycle continues until he loses friend after friend. You know how the story ends.

The fact that administrators are leaving his organization in droves is obvious. The failure of prophecy after prophecy requires no further demonstration. Equally obvious must be the fact that Herbert Armstrong is not inspired or backed by God in any way that differs from the ordinary individual. And it is about as obvious in Pasadena, Texas as it is in Pasadena, California that Herbert W. Armstrong sees himself as the champion of good and his enemies as the incarnates of evil in a manner so grandiose, that it verges on symptomatic psychosis. Either that is the case, or we are confronted by contradictions of such a conspicuous order that we absolutely cannot dismiss the possibility that Herbert is a charlatan and that the corporation known as Ambassador College is a rip-off to anyone who hungers for truth.

Either being the case, I cannot understand why some will still prefer their inspiration from an "office eight and one half miles above the clouds" when life offers more to those with their feet on the ground.

AMBASSADOR COLLEGE RESEARCH "PROVES" THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IS GOD'S TRUE CHURCH

Many people at one time or another wonder just where the one true church of God really is. Certainly you'd expect a logical God to make the truth plain for all who are honestly seeking Him, wouldn't you? Well, God has-through Ambassador College!

Let's quickly go right back to the beginning and find the trunk of the tree, avoiding the tree with the forbidden fruit on it, of course! You'll find with a little foresight (hindsight is allowed if you're low on foresight) that there are 14 major keys that would enable you to determine beyond any doubt which church is the true church. Fourteen, you know, is an extremely significant number since it's derived from multiplying 7 times 2 or 2 times 7. Fourteen also happens to be the exact number of asses both Deliah and Jezebel owned at one time during their lives. Need I go any further in depth to scientifically prove this obvious verity?

So now let's critically examine the 14 major scientific proofs for the true church. But don't believe what I write just because I write it. Believe it because you see it with your own eyes and especially because it's so true and obvious and because it's downright stupid to believe anything else!

I. IT HAS MAJOR DOCTRINAL TRUTHS

Obviously and clearly the Catholic Church has doctrinal truths possessed by no other church. Don't all other churches differ from it? Since only one church can be the true one, and others differ, this proves the Catholics alone are right. Does any other church preach the same gospel that the Catholic Church preaches? Of course not! This again logically proves the authenticity of the Catholic Church. Some dissenters have gone out from the Catholic Church-just as it was prophesied to happen. These detractors (obviously in a rotten attitude and disloyal to the men who brought them into Christianity and to God's truth) claimed the Catholic Church was doctrinally in error. But would God let His church be in error and not correct it? It's God's job to judge His church. If you say you would run the Church differently than the Pope does, this just shows why God chose Pope Paul instead of you to run the Church. Besides, Christ gave the Catholic Church authority to bind and loose-the same authority the apostles possessed. The Pope is simply analogous to the head apostle. Remember, everything Peter said could not be proven from the Old Testament. As Herbert Armstrong so aptly stated on this issue, "Christ has bound in heaven what His Church, even in error, has bound in earth." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, December 3, 1974, p.631)

II. CORRECT NAME OF THE TRUE CHURCH

There are many churches around named after men or doctrines. Christ, however, founded only one true church having a single body of beliefs and a true name. That name is Catholic Church. If you aren't afraid to, check a concordance. You will discover that the word "church" is used exactly 77 times in the New Testament. Here we see again God's number of perfection and completeness, seven, stamped on his true church. Interestingly, the first time this name is used is in Matthew 16:18 where Christ says he's going to build His church on Peter. Some claim the true name is Church of God. Believe it or not, the Catholic Church is often referred to in literature, as far back as the second century A.D., as the Catholic Church of God (with "Catholic," meaning "worldwide," merely being a descriptive adjective).

III. IT OBSERVES CORRECT DAYS

For 1900 years Catholics have known that New Covenant Christians aren't required to keep the feast days ancient Israel kept. However, Catholic leaders have been clearly inspired to select certain New Testament days to foreshadow God's plan of salvation: Christmas, Ash Wednesday, Good Friday, Ascension Day, Pentecost (on Sunday), and other meaningful Christian days. The Catholic Church does worship on Sunday instead of Saturday because God led it to bind Sunday on its members since the New Testament Church was founded on a Sunday (on Pentecost, Acts 2). History has proven this decision right, and clearly the Catholic Church has been blessed beyond its wildest dreams after it began worshipping on Sundays. As a Philippine minister, Colin Adair, of the Worldwide Church of God so perfectly stated in regard to a church keeping a sabbath on an unbiblical day: "I personally feel God has over the years made holy the day the Church chose... so that in effect we have not been keeping the wrong day at all! God was in it and the way the Church grew and was blessed all these years surely is additional evidence." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, August 8, 1974, p. 414)

IV. GOVERNMENT FROM THE TOP DOWN

Throughout the whole Old Testament God's system of government was a hierarchy that ruled from the top down. God has always worked through one organized hierarchy. In ancient Israel God had captains over the thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens. God does things in order, and He always governs from the top down, not from the bottom up. God does not change (Hebrews 13:8). In the New Testament His true church naturally followed this top-down principle of government by submitting to one top human spiritual leader over other ministers of various ranks. Which church has this godly system of government? The Catholic Church, of course!

V. ONE HUMAN HEAD OF THE TRUE CHURCH

God always works through one human head, no matter how imperfect he may be. In the Old Testament, he used Moses, the judges, and the kings. And shouldn't it be obvious to anyone with even a superficial knowledge of history that the Pope has been the human spiritual leader ever since? Sure the Pope makes mistakes, but not big important ones that would destroy the true church. Maybe the Pope doesn't have all the qualifications that a minister should have, but who does? And anyway it's obvious that God is using him! Just look at the fruits. It's very clear that the Catholic Church has grown bigger than all the other professing Christian churches combined. And remember, all the other churches' ministers are Satan's ministers and while some appear as angels of light, they're just tools in Satan's hands!

VI. OPEN DOORS TO BE SET BEFORE THE TRUE CHURCH

One of the greatest proofs that the Catholic Church is the true church is the open doors set before it. Just in the last decade alone, the Pope has been granted some extraordinary opportunities to preach the true gospel to world leaders. He has visited India, the United States, Portugal, Columbia, and Israel with full approval of the leaders of those nations. He addressed the United Nations and the World Council of Churches. He has contacted many Communist regimes and has even met the head of the Greek Orthodox Church seeking to promote Christian unity. Only God could be opening such gigantic doors!

VII. THE POPE IS GOD'S AMBASSADOR FOR PEACE

What leaders throughout the Christian era have done more for peace than the popes? Why even today Pope Paul has personally pleaded with leaders from all nations to seek peaceful solutions to their problems. World leaders listen to the Pope when they won't listen to anyone else. They always extend a special warmth to him and receive him enthusiastically.

VIII. HAPPY, DEDICATED PEOPLE

The dedication of Catholics worldwide is unquestioned. Look at the fantastic sacrifices nuns and priests make voluntarily just to help others and to stay close to God. Other Christian religions don't have anything to compare with this. Church attendance is much higher among Catholics than among other professing Christians. If they weren't happy people, Catholics just wouldn't attend or contribute, would they?

IX. FANTASTIC GROWTH

Christ is not divided (I Corinthians 1: 13). There is really only one true organized church, and that church, the Catholic Church, has been blessed by tremendous growth. No other church produces fruits like this! All other churches were founded by mere uninspired men who refused to abide by God's government. These collusionists tried to draw away disciples after themselves (Acts 20:29-31) to form their own groups, which history shows have split and resplit and splintered over and over. For instance, there are dozens of little bickering groups called by some form of the name "Catholic Church of God," all proselytizing among themselves, attacking and condemning each other.

X. GREAT FAVOR

Certainly no church has been blessed as bountifully as has the Catholic Church of God. Look at the worldwide recognition and respect enjoyed by the Church in almost every country on earth. Ambassadors from all the world's nations curry the favor of the Catholic Church. This enables the Catholic Church to have favor in influential leaders' eyes and to print and distribute tons of religious literature in hundreds of languages. At present the Pope doesn't even have to go seeking to get an audience with world leaders. They eagerly come, hat in hand, to see the Pope at his convenience.

XI. PHYSICAL BLESSINGS

The Catholic Church has been blessed with more physical and spiritual riches than all the other false churches combined. It has billions of dollars in reserve. It has art objects of inestimable value. The Vatican's gardens and sculptures are unexcelled anywhere in the world. Catholic rulers control many nations, giving those nations a spiritual stability they wouldn't have with atheistic rulers. The Catholic Church also runs famous colleges and universities worldwide which help impart morals and ethics to an immoral world.

XII. HOUSE FOR GOD

The Catholics were blessed with such tremendous wealth and abundance because of their faith that they were able to erect the magnificent St. Peter's Basilica in honor of the Great God. It's filled with tons and tons of the finest imported Italian marble, silver, gold, and the costliest materials and art objects available anywhere. It is without a doubt the highest quality building in existence. Evangelist Frank Brown echoed the proud thoughts of many a Catholic concerning St. Peter's when he commented, "The overall effect of this beautiful building is very striking... it certainly brings home very forcibly just how much this Work has grown and just how much God has blessed it... It makes it a little easier... to realize a little more how great our God is and how pleased He is that we have been faithful in His Work." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN, April 2, 1974, p. 84).

XIII. TIME CYCLES

The number 19 is extremely significant, as almost all Bible Scholars acknowledge. And interestingly, one hundred nineteen-year time cycles have now elapsed since the Catholic Church began-another stamp of godly approval for its existence.

XIV. LENGTH OF EXISTENCE

The Catholic Church has not been in existence as the true church for a mere 40 years, nor for 400 years, but for over 1900 years it has left its mark on all the world. Interestingly, it has also championed a symbol or "mark"-the cross. In Ezekiel 9:4 God had an angel go through Jerusalem putting a mark on the foreheads of those Christians who sighed and cried for the abominations committed there. The Hebrew word here rendered "mark" really means a mark in the shape of a cross. Though this twiggly point is significant, it's not a major proof. Let's get back to the basics! Think to yourself: Which church has best stood the test of time? The Catholic Church! Which church has Satan been unable to destroy (Matthew 16:18)? God's one true church-the Catholic Church

TITHE SPY

"We do practice tithing. The first tithe is 10 per cent to carry out God's work- and no one checks up to see if a person pays. It is between the member and God." (Excerpt from December 31, 1973 letter from Garner Ted Armstrong to S. E. Anderson).

"Never should the doctrine of tithing or the spirit of giving be used as a CLUB over people's heads, anymore than the doctrine of baptism, the receiving of God's Holy Spirit. or the laying on of hands is used as a club." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN of the Worldwide Church of God, April 8, 1975, pages 179-180, Garner Ted Armstrong).

"It is not the policy, as stated in the paper, to excommunicate or disfellowship because a minister may find (and there is no way by which he COULD really find information other than the divulging of it voluntarily by the individual member) that a member has been unfaithful in tithing. This should never be grounds for disfellowship." (MINISTERIAL BULLETIN of the Worldwide Church of God, April 8, 1975, page 180, Garner Ted Armstrong).

The Worldwide Church of God strictly teaches the doctrine of tithing in an Old Testament sense to support its many-faceted activities. Statements have been made that the administration of the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College corporations do not check the tithing records of its adherents to determine delinquency. Garner Ted Armstrong, President of Ambassador College and Executive Vice-President of the Worldwide Church of God, has personally decried the use of tithe checks in sermons at the Pasadena headquarters on several occasions. Other leading administrators have claimed ignorance of such activities. However, there are growing numbers of people who have felt the sting of accusation that they have been negligent in tithing, an activity supposedly between the individuals and their God, unmonitored by men. How was such information determined? Is it true that "there is no way by which he (the minister or administrator) could really find information other than the divulging of it voluntarily by the individual member"? What are the real facts? Are these denials in fact the truth, or are they blatant lies to cover up practices that have gone on for years and are still continuing? If tithe checks are indeed practiced, then it means that ordained ministers, evangelists and even "apostles" have seen fit to LIE about their use of highly personal information to advance the financial and corporate posture of Ambassador College and The Worldwide Church of God.

Interviews have been conducted with several former administrators of the Ambassador College Data Processing Center to determine the truth of the matter.

In 1967 Ambassador College purchased its first computer, an IBM System 360 Model 30. Today Ambassador College owns the latest and most sophisticated IBM System 370 Model 158, a computer facility which in hardware components alone is worth close to three million dollars. Although the budget has been reduced significantly, especially in the last few weeks with the termination of about 30% of the staff, the total data processing budget in 1973 was close to two million dollars. The major computer system developed by Ambassador College called "ACTS" consolidated all campus-wide subscriber files such as those formerly maintained separately by the Letter Answering Department, the extensive donation files of the Co-worker Department, Plain Truth, Co-worker and Good News files, etc. into one major computerized file.

All information on a particular subscriber is available for terminal display or for analysis with other subscribers in computer printouts. Every contribution made by a contributor can be viewed on a computer terminal. The date, amount, and type of contribution (i.e. Holy Day offering, Building Fund, Festival Fund or Poor Fund) can be displayed on a terminal for those who have access to the Donation File. Also, some very personal information giving even reasons for disfellowshipping, marital separations and sexual problems may be present on some subscribers' files for viewing to give a letter answerer the background necessary to answer their questions or for information to be sent to field pastors. The creators of this computerized system did not envision the uses it would eventually be put to. They did not know that the computer, especially the file of contributors, would be used in gestapo-like thrusts upon ministers, employees and church members at large.

In an interview with Keith M. Hunter, Director of the Ambassador College Data Processing Center from 1965 through 1973, he related how the concept of computer tithe checks all began:

"In early 1968 Roderick C. Meredith, then head of the U.S. Church Ministry for the Radio Church of God, now the Worldwide Church of God, was taking a tour of the new computer facilities at 55 North Vernon. I briefed him on the system that we were developing and showed him printouts of donation information. His eyes seemed to widen as he realized the potentialities of such a system. He asked me to look up the donation records of two men who were about to be ordained as deacons. It turned out that one was tithing and one was not (according to R.C.M.). Mr. Meredith immediately set up a policy to be administered through Dan Porter, then head of the Church Administration Department, that all ordinations and elevations in rank would be done subsequent to a tithe check. It is my feeling that this policy has been carried on down to the present day."

It is interesting to note that in February 1968 ministers were instructed from Pasadena headquarters that they should check the private tithing records of the members in their churches if they felt some of their members might not be tithing. The February 26, 1968 ministerial letter informed the ministers about the process which was to be cleared through the Church Administration Department. The ministerial letter of January 28, 1969 emphasized once again that the ministers should check with headquarters to determine the disloyalty of suspected brethren under their charge.

Keith Hunter, who is now the Director of Data Processing for the University of Southern California, related some other interesting points concerning activities in the late 1960's.

"Dr. Herman L. Hoeh, former Dean of Faculty of Ambassador College, used to purchase large numbers of books ostensibly for the Ambassador College Library. The interesting point is that he didn't buy them through the Business Office as a normal budget expenditure. He purchased them using his tithes. In other words, he did not send his tithes in to the central headquarters to be allocated for college and church activities. Rather, he himself decided how his tithes would be used, something totally forbidden for the average church member. At the end of the year he would come down to Hugh Mauck, then head of the Circulation Department, to request an annual receipt of tithes and offerings for the books he had purchased. Obviously, the annual receipt he received did not reflect actual tithes given to the organization. During the late 1960's David Jon Hill assumed responsibility for the Circulation Department and Data Processing. He frequently requested tithe checks through me personally and through Hugh Mauck who at that time had a computer terminal installed in his office."

We asked Keith Hunter who the administrators were who requested tithe checks front him personally:

"Generally the requests I received were delicate, sensitive and highly political. I received requests from Herbert Armstrong, Ronald Dart, Frank Brown, Jon Hill, Al Portune, Al Carrozzo, Leslie McCullough and Dan Porter. The requests generally involved ministers and headquarters personnel, although Leslie McCullough annually requested information concerning Ambassador College, Big Sandy employees. Other tithe checks or donation problems (i.e. I.R.S. investigations) were handled through the Co-worker Department. Some of the types of requests I received were:

1. Frank Brown requested information on Osamu Gotoh, currently director of Herbert W. Armstrong's campaign staff, an enigma to many high level administrators in the work. It turned out that he did not tithe during tire particular two year period (1971-72) and had only one $10 contribution on his record. Other tithe checks on the same individual always indicated negligible giving.

2. Herbert Armstrong requested a tithe check on all the airplane pilots after the request for large donations and even borrowing for the Work was made.

3. All U.S. Ministers were selected from the computer files and their contribution records were checked in depth during the years 1972-73. One minister in the Midwest that I know personally was given a great deal of problems by the administration over his donation situation.

4. The Visiting Program frequently requested listings of whole church areas, especially around the Pasadena headquarters. The Reno, Nevada church in particular had some scathing sermons accusing members of not tithing, disloyalty etc., after a cursory analysis was made of the church donation records. Those requesting the listings which were technical in nature did not know how to read them and probably made many unwarranted conclusions. No one ever asked for any information on how to read the reports which were not written for administrative purposes but rather for resolving technical data processing problems.

5. On several occasions when Pasadena employees were to be promoted, a tithe check was made to determine loyalty, devotion, etc.

6. Al Portune, former Vice President of Finance for Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God annually requested listings of non-contributing headquarters employees during the years 1971-73.

Interestingly enough, having scanned many of the reports over the years, I've noticed that Herbert Armstrong himself did not tithe in the normal way taught by the church. His donation record reflected only four donations, though large, during one particular year. He did not tithe on each individual paycheck he received as the rest of the church was commanded to do."

How often have Worldwide Church of God members heard of the spiritual perception of their ministry! The discerning of the innermost attitudes of individual Christians was a gift supposedly given in great measure to the ministry. Why then did recourse have to be taken to the computerized donation records of fellow brethren in Christ? Could it have been that the Holy Spirit did not really dwell as fully in some of these self-acclaimed men of God as they led many of us to believe?

Gary Reid, Manager of Systems Development, worked for Keith Hunter for eight years in the Data Processing Center. He is currently Director of Data Processing for Occidental College in Los Angeles. Many of the tithing requests were channelled through him by Keith Hunter.

"One of the earliest experiences I can remember was when I first began to work in Data Processing in 1967, Dr. Herman Hoeh was trying to get an annual tithe and offering receipt for book purchases he had made during the year. The system of tithing which I had been taught and followed, chiefly as a result of Dr. Hoeh's article on tithing, certainly was at variance with this "liberal" practice. I received many requests from Keith to look into the tithing records of individuals which he had received in turn from Ambassador College and Worldwide Church of God officials. On several occasions we said this would be the last time "they" would get us to do it. This approach was one of the many reasons I left the organization and I know it was for Keith as well.

One request I remember very well came directly to me from Ronald Dart, then the newly appointed Chancellor of the Big Sandy campus. At that time in early 1974, Ben Chapman, who replaced Keith Hunter as head of Data Processing, was out of town. The request included a long list of names of Big Sandy employees. We were asked to determine who was tithing and who was not. I don't recall how many were not tithing. It is not easy to determine beyond a shadow of a doubt when their annual salary is not known. I do remember, however, that an evangelist, Dean Blackwell, had given no contributions (as far as the computer was concerned) during 1973. Perhaps he, like Dr. Hoeh, purchased books with his tithes or perhaps he gave his contributions anonymously, so as to escape the watchful eye of the computer."

Another former executive in Data Processing, Mike Holman, was asked about his experiences as Manager of Computer Operations. Mike is now Director of Data Processing with a computer service bureau in Texas.

"After Keith Hunter left I continued to receive requests for tithe checks directly from Al Portune, Frank Brown, and the Visiting Program office. One particular incident stands out in my mind. In mid-1974 I found out that one of my employees was attending meetings of the Foundation of Biblical Research. The "policy" at that time was that anyone attending Dr. Martin's lectures was subject to termination. Ed Campbell, the employee in question, was an excellent employee who was not stirring up any "heresies." I felt we had no grounds for firing him and took the matter to Frank Brown and Robert Kuhn. I mentioned that Ed worked with the member records and that Dr. Martin and others at the meetings were not disfellowshipped according to the computer files. Frank Brown asked to have a list run off the computer of all graduates of Ambassador College and all employees to see who was disfellowshipped and who was not. However, the listing that was run was a standard profile listing and included indicators as to whether each individual had contributed during 1973 and 1974. Immediately I saw a problem as many people in the Editorial Department, including prominent writers for the Plain Truth magazine, had not donated during those years. I took the listing to Jon Hill. He said to run it so that the donation indicators would not appear. Ben Chapman was present with Mr. Hill at the time I showed him the report. Rather than letting the situation pass he ran to Ted Armstrong and alarmed him concerning the many employees at Pasadena who were not tithing.

Ted Armstrong had Ben Chapman install a computer terminal in his office to check out the detailed contributions of employees and ministers. Robert Kuhn, assistant to Ted Armstrong, reviewed the computerized donation listing noting who the non-tithing employees were. I also know that Jon Hill spent an afternoon checking out ministers and others' donations during the crisis of March 1974 in an office in the Mail Processing Department."

A meeting was held in late 1974 in the Television Production Department in which Garner Ted Armstrong stated that there were significant layoffs to be made for budgetary reasons. He stated that these layoffs were not made on the basis of analyzing the tithing records of employees in the Television Department. We know, however, that Robert Kuhn was well aware of employee tithing records and at that time had major involvement in Television. Several employees were personally confronted at this time regarding alleged tithing discrepancies. Many suspect, to this day, that their termination was based solely on the tithe checking process and not on job proficiency.

Late in 1974 Ben Chapman, Director of the Circulation Division, stated to Bill Hughes, an administrative assistant in Data Processing, that there were only three people who could authorize a tithe check. The names of those individuals were not revealed. Ben Chapman also stated that he was doing a tithing check on one individual with that individual's permission. Therefore, as late as 1975 we know that tithe checks were still being performed. However, we do not know who the individuals were who could approve such activity at that time. Could they have been Frank Brown, Wayne Cole and Ted Armstrong himself?

In this article we have presented evidence from the mouths of men who were actually involved that tithe checks were performed with great regularity on the ministry, Pasadena employees, Big Sandy employees, and selected church members throughout the United States. Men at evangelist and "apostolic" rank within the organization authorized these incursions into the private records of individuals of the Worldwide Church of God. A relationship that has been firmly stated from the pulpit of the Worldwide Church of God as being "between God and man" has been subverted repeatedly to determine loyalty to men and to an organization of men. Garner Ted Armstrong has said that he has never requested a tithe check on anyone. This is a blatant lie! He personally authorized Ben Chapman to install a terminal in his office to check out employees and ministers on an individual basis. He may say he personally did not want individual information but he did want overall trends and analyses made and reported.

We ask Ted: "Weren't you in charge?" You knew what was going on. Why didn't you stop this practice? Have you stopped it as of May 1976? It is not at all satisfying to hear you say that you personally did not take part in such activities when you know better and when even your own father, as head of the organization, employed such tactics himself and condoned them in others.

One of the purposes of AMBASSADOR REVIEW is to prod the leadership of Ambassador College and of the Worldwide Church of God to change practices and policies that are discrediting these organizations. Certainly the last eight years of tithing of Worldwide Church members cannot be said to be God's will. Rather, such actions are reminiscent of recent Watergate activities illegally perpetrated on private citizens by the government of the United States. It is time for knowledgeable members and former members to stand up against this heinous tactic. Now that Ronald Dart has finally achieved what seems to have been to some, his ambition of leadership over the U.S. ministry, will he continue his practice, begun in Big Sandy, of resorting to the computer for extra spiritual discernment? Will the computer be used to weed out supposedly disloyal ministers? We caution you ministers reading AMBASSADOR REVIEW to be wary of his activities.

Garner Ted, is fear and oppression really a thing of the past in the Worldwide Church of God?

EXECUTIVE ACTION

"Hello. Ted? This is Bob... Remember that tithing re search? I think we're going to have problems with Harry."

Editor: At beautiful, serene Ambassador College a person who is too concerned about truth may suddenly find himself living in a hostile environment. His personal quest for truth may not be regarded as dangerous or heretical as long as his voice is not heard by too many people; but if he is eloquent, or in a position to influence minds in the Ambassador entity, then his quest for truth will be regarded as a great threat.

After Ambassador College ascended to a position of limited prestige among fundamentalist institutions, and while in the midst of accumulating perhaps the most effective propaganda machinery of all such institutions, there occurred the simultaneous accident of accepting a student who regarded the acknowledgment of truth as paramount.

By the time this happened, Garner Ted Armstrong had become a major industry. The Worldwide Church of God had become Ted's religious arm of global influence and the church's Doctrinal Committee had become an efficient oppressor of truth.

The following account, written by Harry Eisenberg, is an account of character assassination. It clearly explains how truth is suppressed inside the Ambassador entity and how the one who discovers it must become silent, giving way to the personal doctrines of those in power, or be removed.

Before his discovery, Harry Eisenberg was an employee of Ambassador College. He is the author of eight major articles published for Ambassador under his by-line, as well as the author of numerous articles written for others or published under no by-line. Here is his story:

Quite by coincidence I am writing this article on the main campus of the University of Maryland. As is the case with virtually every other institution of higher learning, considerable research into both the sciences and humanities has been undertaken here. The purpose of the university is not only to educate students, but to provide new knowledge and answers to questions affecting our society.

Colleges and universities have in fact been the major vehicle for providing society with new knowledge in just about every field. The student, especially the graduate student, is on campus not only to absorb knowledge, but also to make a contribution to the body of knowledge extant in his particular field. To use a familiar phrase, he is expected to give as well as to get!

One would think this principle should hold true for Ambassador College as well. Unfortunately, this has not been the case. This is due to a basic difference between Ambassador College and other institutions of higher learning.

Whereas most universities exist to promote the advancement of knowledge and to pass it on to their students, Ambassador College exists to promulgate to the public the knowledge and values of its founder, Herbert W. Armstrong. New discoveries and/or contributions to knowledge are often not welcome there. For one thing, such new discoveries are not, generally speaking, in keeping with the primary aim, which is the dissemination of existing knowledge. Furthermore, should any new concept uncovered through the research of a faculty member or student conflict even remotely with the views of the founder, such research is utterly unwelcome, as Herbert Armstrong's views are regarded as sacrosanct and inspired.

For example, one student wrote a research paper for an Ambassador theology class, claiming that the scriptures speak of a spirit in animals as well as a spirit in man. He provided considerable evidence to support his contention. Upon presenting the paper to his instructors, the student was urged to keep his ideas to himself. It seems the spirit in man and the idea that animals differ from man is a pet concept of Mr. Armstrong's, and the theology instructors were afraid to present the Student's findings to him.

The following semester the student was not allowed to register for classes and was expelled from the college. He was charged with the crime of "highbrowing the ministers", whatever that means. The loss was Ambassador's, not the student's.

I was a paid researcher on the staff of Ambassador College for over four years. Generally speaking, my work involved providing "proofs" for the pet concepts and theories held by Mr. Herbert Armstrong and/or his son, Garner Ted. Occasionally, I was successful as in the case of an article entitled "Did Jesus Have Long Hair?" This article attempted to show that there is historical evidence proving that Jesus did not necessarily wear long hair, as he is often pictured today.

My article was widely reprinted and resulted in a personal full-page interview in a major Los Angeles daily. It was one of few articles which have cast Ambassador College in a good light. It was met with complete silence by an administration which feels any publicity should be its own private realm.

In January 1973, I was asked by my supervisor, Brian Knowles, to research the subject of tithing. In particular, Mr. Knowles was interested in learning who paid what to whom and how in ancient Israel.

And so I began a systematic study of the tithing doctrine by listing each Biblical verse which in any way refers to tithing. What followed was a study of commentaries, encyclopedias and various historical sources. The result was inevitable! I came to see that the tithing concept as promulgated by Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God was contrary to both the Old and the New Testaments.

Scripture makes it plain that the right to collect tithes was given to the Levitical priesthood in exchange for their service in the Temple. There is no evidence that this right was ever passed on to the New Testament Church. The Encyclopedias BRITANNICA and AMERICANA both confirm this view when they state the early New Testament Church did not practice tithing, although it was later adopted by the Catholic Church in the Sixth Century A.D.

Upon presenting the research paper to my supervisor, I was treated in a manner reminiscent of Galileo's encounter with the Catholic Church. I was warned that I had better keep my findings and views to myself. Naturally, it was assumed that I had done the paper because I had some kind of axe to grind and was merely out to prove a previously held notion. Research at Ambassador so often has meant nothing more than finding "proofs" for the "inspired" concepts and ideas of the Armstrongs.

When I was asked to squelch my ideas, I pointed out that that might be difficult as four people had already seen the paper. I was told that if I would keep it down, a doctrinal committee (sic) would eventually consider my findings. Six months went by and about all that the so-called doctrinal committee accomplished can be seen by reading a booklet entitled MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE published briefly by Ambassador College in the summer of 1973.

When I concluded there was no reason why I should keep my paper from others, I proceeded to show it to anyone who inquired about it. Not believing I was the ultimate authority on the subject, I collaborated with a team of some six other Ambassador College researchers on a more in-depth paper on tithing which was completed in December 1973.

As a result of these papers and the fact that I no longer felt a religious compulsion to practice tithing, I was dismissed, without warning, from my job on January 7, 1974. This happened despite the fact that my new supervisor, Dr. Robert Kuhn, acknowledged that I had done outstanding work for him. So much for religious freedom at Ambassador College.

The paper in question was ultimately published with minor modifications by both the Foundation for Biblical Research and the Associated Churches of God. Some open-minded researchers for a newly reconstructed doctrinal committee which was investigating tithing confided to me that any thesis or dissertation from reputable theological institutions that they had the opportunity to examine dealing with the subject in question, tended to agree with my findings.

Finally, in a meeting called to investigate the origin of the papers published by the Foundation and Associated Churches, I was publically slandered by Ambassador President, Garner Ted Armstrong. Armstrong stated, "Now I don't express it as assassination of Harry's character-it is his mind I'm worried about and not his character. I'm not a bit worried about his personal integrity or his personal habits nor his personal sincerity, but I'm not prepared to say he is the most balanced individual mentally, and that I would rely an awful lot on his research."

But he had been relying "an awful lot on his research". Just weeks before, Armstrong had been parroting my findings on his television program seen by millions in the U.S. and Canada. Furthermore, many of these programs were repeated on the air over and over again. On more than one occasion, articles bearing the by-line of Garner Ted Armstrong but researched by me appeared in fire PLAIN TRUTH magazine.

Only when my findings disagreed with Armstrong's private views was my research no longer reliable and the writer fit for ridicule. But such are the risks that anyone takes who might dare disagree with the administration.

-Harry Eisenberg

Editor: Harry's efforts to obtain the truth about tithing represented a special threat to the Ambassador administration. It is the one threat Ambassador fears the most-the threat of individual integrity asserting itself over Ambassador's aristocratic corporate structure.

Consequently, on January 7, 1974, Harry Eisenberg's hopes of a fair hearing for tithing research died by committee. Harry's voice, as well as his research, had to be removed from among the followers.

The Ambassador College Board of Trustees found nothing sinister about Harry's removal. Ministers and students who had liked him apparently found nothing objectionable in his being disfellowshipped. "He was a youth overly exposed to satanic doctrines, demonic thoughts goaded him into an attitude of rebellion. Nothing unusual in that." It ended, however, in his dismissal from an organization to which he had dedicated his life.

The announcement of Harry's termination took less than a few seconds. There was no risk that the doctrinal committee would expose the true reasons for Harry's dismissal, because members of that committee had been a party to it. There was no risk of exposure from members of the Ambassador-controlled media because a few words about the "Ambassador Oasis" from the charismatic Ted Armstrong, and the students would inquire no further. They would not try to digest the indigestible, think the unthinkable, or question Pilate about the removal of a christian.

No, on January 7, 1974, all seemed well. In fact, things seemed better than ever. And, in short time, the people would again be reminded that "God's work is moving ahead stronger than ever."

ACCREDITATION OR BUST! (the wooing of W.A.S.C.)

When Ambassador College opened its doors in 1947, it was housed in a single building (now the College library facility) and boasted four students and seventeen instructors. From these fledgling beginnings it has grown to its present enrollment of 690 full-time students and 180 supporting faculty and instructors. For 29 years the College has conferred unaccredited degrees upon its graduates. This lack of accreditation did not present a problem in the College's early years because, for the most part, A.C. was the training ground for the ministry and other positions in the Worldwide (then Radio) Church of God and the College itself. Those graduating from Ambassador College were absorbed into "the Work of God". For over twenty years this was the central reason for the College's existence-to be the "West Point of 'the work'

By the last 1960's a new trend was developing. The Church's economic growth had plateaued, and the institution could no longer guarantee jobs to all its graduates. Today only a few graduates from Ambassador College expect to be employed within the Church-College-Ambassador International Cultural Foundation (AICF) complex. These developments apparently forced the administration to re-evaluate A.C.'s academic position, especially in light of future enrollment. Through what seems to be only a subtle evolution, Ambassador College has changed from a ministerial training school to a church-oriented (nondenominational), liberal arts institution claiming a free and open learning environment.

A.C.'s first two attempts to become accredited (in 1967 and again in 1970) were met with stout criticism from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (W.A.S.C.) and accreditation was denied in both cases. After much self-evaluation, Ambassador College again applied for accreditation in 1974. This attempt was met with less severe criticism, and W.A.S.C. granted A.C. candidacy for possible accreditation in 1976 with the clear stipulation that certain specific criteria be met.

From all outward signs it would appear that Ambassador College is finally seeking accreditation in earnest. Under the direction of Dr. Michael P. Germano, the members of the Accreditation Steering Committee have been able to make some very encouraging, although limited, progress towards meeting the standards set by W.A.S.C. Dr. Germano and his team have made significant inroads into improving those areas in which they had authority to restructure (e.g., Faculty credentials, curriculum, library). However, the main areas in which W.A.S.C. has prescribed recommendations for restructure are in areas in which Dr. Germano and his administration had no authority to make changes. In these areas only the Board of Trustees has the authority to make changes. Because of the Board's reluctance to act upon authority recommendations and the Armstrongs' demagogic reactions to recent challenges to their absolute authority, it is essential that Ambassador's courtship with accreditation be evaluated in its proper perspective. If the College remains satisfied with the status quo there is little possibility that it can receive full accreditation.

In a recent sermon Herbert W. Armstrong, Chancellor of Ambassador College, stated that, "The way has been cleared for the accreditation of Ambassador College." (sermon, Ambassador Auditorium, March 6, 1976). By this statement it would seem that no obstacles stand in the way of Ambassador receiving full accreditation, and only the formality of citation remains to finalize the process. President Garner Ted Armstrong has also expressed confidence that the College will receive accreditation: "We're pursuing accreditation and we're going to get it. And we're going to get accreditation not on the basis of changing inviolable principles upon which we shall always stand—we're going to get accreditation based upon the fact that we are a worthy institution with a top-notch faculty, with a great administration, and with a great student body by and large—with the exception of a few tiny soreheads here and there that don't know what in the world they are doing yet, that are just a bunch of kids who need to grow up." (Bible Study, February 27, 1976). Both Herbert and Ted should be lauded for their optimism, especially in the wake of recent developments.

In a thinly-veiled memorandum dated February 26, 1976, Garner Ted Armstrong lamely "explained" to the faculty of Ambassador College that Dr. Germano's title "...Executive Vice-President" was a stop-gap measure, intending to reflect his function as my chief academic advisor and assistant, and the individual who, on a day to day basis, was involved in the conduct of administrative affairs. I had explained Dr. Germano's function in this capacity during the visit of the team from the Western Association, and we were granted candidacy while Dr. Germano carried the title of Dean." President Armstrong further explained that he fully intends to become more involved in faculty and student activities, "...thus remaining very much an active president, and not an 'absentee'."

He stated that Dr. Germano had been re-appointed to the office of Dean of Faculties, as well as chief academic advisor. The memo also stated that Dr.

Carruthers would be retained as Associate Dean of the Faculties, and Ray Wright was designated as permanent Business Manager for the College. According to President Armstrong, "These alterations in title...will help clear up at least some measure of existing confusion concerning administrative functions...." One may question, however, whether President Armstrong was really acting in the best interest of accreditation and if he were really clearing up confusion concerning administrative functions. This memo is only one example of the inconsistent language often issued from the President's office.

To lend some background to the above situation, one should consider the events surrounding Dr. Germano's change in title. In late January-early February students received bulk mailings of literature critical of administration policies. The literature was immediately labeled "slanderous" and "anti-Ambassador" and obviously caused significant trauma to the administration. In order to quell any disturbance that might ensue from the distribution of this material, a memo entitled "CONSENT TO COLLEGE MAIL PROCEDURE" was issued demanding that the students sign a statement of approval of mail censorship. (Although the College has received other "slanderous"- "anti-Ambassador" material in the past, this specific incident occurred as a result of the administration's reaction to the letter introducing AMBASSADOR REVIEW.)

In an attempt to cover their tracks, the authors of this college memo attributed "authorship" to Fred Gilreath, an unfortunate underling in the Office of Communication Services. Mr. Gilreath, however, has denied any knowledge of the memo's existence prior to its official distribution. Instead of quelling a disturbance, the memo created one. An estimated 30-40% of the students refused to give their approval to censorship. This certainly was not your usual tail-between-the-legs A.C. Student Body reaction. The students refused to be harassed as in the past. Helge and Rader sought reasons for this insubordination. It seems that these legal advisors convinced the President that this "rebellion" by the student body had grown out of the environment which had been nurtured by Dr. Germano's administration. So, the President tacitly demoted Dr. Germano.

Upon closer scrutiny of Dr. Germano's demotion, it can be discerned that the changes are more than titular. In the course of searching for information on accreditation, AMBASSADOR REVIEW contacted Dr. Germano's office regarding Ambassador College's Self-Study, the W.A.S.C. Handbook for Accreditation, and other related documents. Oddly enough, Dr. Germano's office has not retained jurisdiction over matters regarding accreditation. According to his secretary, this information is now being handled directly by Mr. Stanley Rader. However, when the matter was discussed with Mrs. Upton, Mr. Rader's personal secretary, she was unaware of the whereabouts of this material in Mr. Rader's files.

Dr. Germano's demotion from the helm of the accreditation process should cause great concern within the academic community of the College. Virtually all the painstaking work of restructuring the College to meet the high standards set by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges was done under the direction of Dr. Germano-usually while President Garner Ted Armstrong was away, "busy" in other areas of "the Work". President Armstrong's lack of concern in "vigorously pursuing accreditation" is demonstrated by the fact that he was only able to stay in town the first day the visiting committee was in Pasadena and then was "forced" to leave because of his "busy pre-planned schedule", although the dates of the visit had been known at least six months in advance. Chancellor Herbert Armstrong was so "vigorously" involved in other endeavors that he was not even present at the Pasadena campus during the W.A.S.C. visit.

The W.A.S.C. visiting committee, realizing that Dr. Germano was the man responsible for the intensive self-scrutiny, noted in their report: "The total effort (i.e., the self-study, evaluation, etc.) was under the direction of a Steering Committee headed by an able and highly respected Dean of the College (i.e., Dean of the Faculty)... Substantial and productive institutional activity had taken place...." (Report of the Evaluation Committee of the Western Association of Schools and Colleges to Ambassador College, October 23, 24, 25, 1974, pp. 1-2). Thus it seems that Ambassador received candidacy in 1974 in spite of President Garner Ted Armstrong and Chancellor Herbert W. Armstrong.

It was in those areas over which Dr. Germano had no authority that W.A.S.C. directed the bulk of its recommendations. It is instructive to look at those areas in which the administration continues to stall substantive changes. Five areas will be examined in detail: administrative structure, the Board of Trustees, academic freedom, library facilities and financial independence and stability.

I. ADMINISTRATIVE STRUCTURE

W.A.S.C. called for "A revised administrative structure (which) should make provision for a full-time President, chief executive officer for the College who would not be Chairman or Vice-Chairman of the Board.... Such an administrative model, when properly instituted by the Board of Trustees, would reduce the possibility of problems related to conflicts of interest and would help to provide the physical autonomy so essential to the successful operation of a educational institution."

What improvement has the college made in the area? Absolutely none! As of this writing, President Armstrong is still the "Madhatter" of titles, changing hats between President, Vice-Chancellor and Vice-Chairman of the Board of Trustees. His recent action to demote Dr. Germano, in view of W.A.S.C.'s recommendations is a definite advance to the rear. Ted Armstrong would like to foster the belief that since he was President of the College when it received candidacy, it can easily become fully accredited with him in this position. It cannot be stressed enough that Ambassador College did not receive candidacy because of President Armstrong but in spite of him. His only realistic claim to the office of President of Ambassador College is that he happens to be Chancellor Herbert Armstrong's glib-speaking son.

Garner Ted Armstrong has no academic credentials whatsoever that would qualify him for that office. One can find his "credentials" listed in the new 1976-77 Big Sandy CATALOG: "Garner Ted Armstrong, Professor of Theology and Sociology, B.A. (1956), Ambassador College; M.A. (1960), Ambassador College; Ph.D. (1965), Ambassador College." This type of academic hocus-pocus unfortunately is accepted without question at A.C. "Dr." Herbert Armstrong, himself a high school dropout who never attended college, has only an honorary "doctorate" from the "prestigious" Angeles University of the Philippines. Herbert's assistant, Osamo Gotoh, was granted a full Professorship by A.C. after he had falsified his transcripts from Japan and flunked out of Ambassador College.

Even if President Ted Armstrong's incredible academic deficiencies were nonexistent, he would still be unable to fill the position of President of Ambassador College because of the many demands placed upon his time—both real and contrived. There is a major conflict of interest in that he has so many "interests" that the time he has to devote to each is minimal. He claims to "be very much an active President" because he intends to be at more Student Body Forums and sing-a-longs; and yet President Armstrong distains the responsibilities in which a college president must, of necessity, be engaged: "My time is ladden with a lot of unessential executive-type responsibilities, when it should be almost 100% devoted to preaching the gospel of the kingdom as a witness to the world—instead of being burdened with a lot of paper shuffling and telephone answering and problem-solving." (Garner Ted Armstrong, "State of the Work" Speech, March 17, 1976). President Armstrong has neither the qualifications, the time nor the inclination to devote to the position of President of Ambassador College. It is time that the Board of Trustees realizes that the President of Ambassador cannot be President in title only but must be able to devote his full-time energies toward that position. A more stable academic environment would ensue and the accreditation of A.C. would most assuredly be viewed more favorably by W.A.S.C.

It seems that President Armstrong would have been wiser had he promoted Dr. Germano to the position of President of Ambassador College and given him the full authority to execute that office rather than "re-appointing" him to the position of Dean of the Faculty.

II. STACKED BOARD OF TRUSTEES

When W.A.S.C. conducted their study of Ambassador College in the fall of 1974, they strongly suggested that the then seven member Board of Trustees "...should be enlarged and should provide for a greater 'mix'." The Evaluation Committee then defined what it meant by "a greater 'mix'":

"The examiners feel that there should be more of a 'mix' in Board composition, even to the extent of allowing, non-Worldwide Church of God representation.... The possible revision of the present administration structure to provide for a full-time President of the College as chief executive officer of the institution, who is neither chairman nor vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees... merits consideration. Such an administrative model, when properly instituted by the Board of Trustees, would reduce the possibility of problems related to conflicts of interest and would help to provide and maintain a campus climate where academic freedom prevails, but it is essential that continued attention be given this vital area." (W.A.S.C. Report, 1974)

The Board of Trustees for the Pasadena campus has been enlarged from a seven to a fifteen member Board, but the complexion of the Board remains very much the same. None of the changes in Board size or membership substantially alter the political composition of the Board from its 1974 makeup. By their refusal to change the complexion of the Board of Trustees, the Armstrongs are clearly thumbing their noses at W.A.S.C. and are jeopardizing the College's already tenuous academic position.

It must be pointed out, however, that although the current members of the Board of Trustees have been hand-picked by Herbert W. Armstrong, Garner Ted Armstrong, and Stanley R. Rader, they do not have to bow to the whims of the powerful triumvirate. Legally, the structure for assuring accreditation already exists, if those legal rights were only exercised. If those on the Board are truly desirous of accreditation for Ambassador College they must realize their responsibility in the matter and exercise their authority as it exists under law-even to the point of voting Rader and the Armstrongs off the Board if they continue to stand in the way of the accreditation process.

If this charade does not stop, the eventual result will be the loss of administrators, faculty members and students.

III. ACADEMIC FREEDOM

The area of academic freedom has also generated considerable comment by the Armstrongs, Stanley Rader and Ralph Helge.

On this subject W.A.S.C. also made some very poignant statements: "A clear policy statement on academic freedom and tenure is essential.... Many faculty members indicated that academic freedom and tenure do exist and have existed for many years. On the other hand, some faculty expressed reservations about the delay in the policy statement recommended a few years ago, and about the actual existence of academic freedom, particularly in those areas where course content might border upon or involve discussion of theological doctrine or church policy. A clear policy statement emanating from the Trustees seems overdue."

To date, there has been no "clear policy statement on academic freedom and tenure emanating from the Trustees..." Such a clear policy statement could only weaken the ideological control now wielded by the triumvirate. It comes as no surprise that they have refrained from initiating any positive action in this regard.

Negative action towards such a clear policy statement was taken, however. College and church attorney, Ralph Helge, frightened by such a prospective Armstrong power loss, drafted one or two "briefs" outlining the "dire" ramifications which a clear policy statement on academic freedom and tenure could have on Armstrongian authority. This brief(s) was so top secret that it was delivered only to a select few, allowed to be read but not copied. All copies were then collected. Because of this top secrecy, it has been impossible to determine the exact contents of the brief(s).

In answer to all of this, President Armstrong has piously thundered, "We DO believe in freedom of speech and freedom of religion and freedom of the press at Ambassador College!"

But what does President Armstrong mean by such platitudes? One of the more clear, yet embarrassing, explanations came from his own lips in a sermon in the Ambassador Auditorium on December 7, 1974. The situation he was commenting upon was a sincere invitation by Ken Long (an Australian student) to President Armstrong to come to his dorm for a get-acquainted rap session with the students:

"...I had a fellow that tried to come to me to get me involved in some big dormitory meeting. And he wanted to -he said, 'So we can get to know ya better.' Uh-ha-ha! Oh-h-h-h what a lie that was! Oh-h, it was funny.... I found out later that he's been going over to listen to Ernest Martin. And he wants to attend his lectures-he kinda buys a lotta that stuff.-Against the Holy Days, he doesn't really think we oughta be keep'n the Holy Days apparently.... See, he didn't really want me over there to get to know me better. He wanted me over there to put me on the spot, to ask me a lotta questions-to make me vindicate the Holy Days. Now if he's sitt'n in here today-whoever you are, fella-do me the favor, don't come up to my office. 'Cause I just do not like to kick people out of my office. I mean, I just do not like to do it-it's bad news, you know. People give me a bad reputation for doing things like that. But, I've-I've got an awfully short temper where trickery and deceit and hypocrisy are concerned.... If he's honest, then I don't think I'm going to have any problem with it at all.- But that type of thing. I guess he honestly wants to know, 'Can I stay around here and enjoy the environment and enjoy the College and enjoy the students, and still go over and listen to somebody else's lectures.'" My answer-Sure you can!-As long as you keep your mouth shut and don't try to proselyte, and don't tell other people what you think you believe, or try to convince 'em to believe your way. Because if you do that, then I'm going to bounce you out of here like a half-inflated basketball, buddy! Now, if you want to keep your mouth shut about it, then that's fine. I would allow a Communist to come to Ambassador College and sit in the classroom and listen, and, hopefully be taught. But he's not going to be allowed to preach Communism.... It wouldn't matter from what race, what nation, from what political point of view, we accept Catholics, Muslims. Buddhists-anybody from any point of view. But they don't come here to teach Catholicism or Buddhism. They come here to learn. They come here to open up their minds and to challenge the textbook, and to wonder whether or not the professor is right, and to prove and to check out, and to prove all things to themselves and to hold fast to that which is true. But not to proselyte. Let me give you fellas and girls a guarantee about Ambassador College-we will not allow on the College, people to come here from the military services to deliberately try to proselyte and get you to go join the Marines and the Army and the Navy. We don't have to do that; the government doesn't make us do that so we can guarantee that you aren't going to be coerced and forced to try to run off and join the military service. We won't let members of Satan's organizations-any church you wanna mention.... Now we won't let them come on Ambassador College campus and just enjoy it here and go to the classes and tell you what a great church that is. We are really narrow-minded about that. But if any of those people wanted to come here and go to class and listen to what we've got, and just keep his mouth shut-not to try to proselyte and teach other people-well, come on! That's fine! The Church and College are two separate things; we've got to realize that, they really are."

It is blatantly obvious that Ted does not, in fact recognize the Church and the College as two separate entities and that the College can no longer exist for the sole purpose of Church indoctrination. The educational nature of a legitimate College prevents that.

Chancellor Herbert Armstrong further demonstrated that an attitude of genuine self-criticism is not cherished or welcomed at Ambassador College:

"Now if you doubt you're damned! And there are people trying to put doubts in your mind right now! They call it 'questions'. 'We've got the answer to these questions. I'll tell you here are these questions!' and, 'We're not answering these questions!' Brethren, that is SATAN speaking!! Saying 'questions' means DOUBTS!!... They plant doubts. They're going around saying, 'The people have questions.'... But the only questions are the ones these dissenters are planting in their minds. What about it? Are you going to let them plant questions in your mind?" (Herbert Armstrong, Sermon, Ambassador Auditorium, January 10, 1976)

In the "Report on Visit to Ambassador College-April 2, 1970" the W.A.S.C. Commission stated very clearly exactly why the above philosophy -which to this day remains the Armstrong's guiding "light" -cannot be allowed to have an ideological stranglehold on a legitimate educational institution:

"...The basis of 'truth' for Ambassador and its faculty is whether or not facts, information, or ideas agree with their Biblical interpretation.... Science has 'advanced' by constant self-criticism. Such a direction does not seem to be open for Ambassador faculty, however. This borders on academic dishonesty.... Whether what it is doing is a part of the spectrum of higher education in California or in the nation is a much more difficult determination to make. In some areas of the institution, what goes on is not unlike what goes on in many other institutions that call themselves colleges. In other areas it would be a stretch of the facts to refer to what is happening as traditional higher education. It is in those latter areas that the College appears to have no inclination to make changes, because the changes run counter to the stated philosophy and purposes of the institution."

Again, on January 27, 1971, in their "Letter of Denial of Accreditation to Ambassador College", the Commission re-emphasized the absolute necessity for the existence of the reality of academic freedom within the College:

"While the July 15 report states that faculty members are 'expected to question and reevaluate the areas of their competence and of knowledge in general,' the Commission sees such questioning almost exclusively within the parameters of the Ambassador philosophy. The impact of this was noted on the natural and social sciences.... While other church-related educational institutions accredited by this Commission share Ambassador's concern for the development of character, they have been able to establish an acceptable balance between indoctrination and education."

Because of this demonstrable fear of academic freedom, it follows that the idea of forging a clear policy which would offer tenure to faculty members can only be anathema to the Armstrong personality. It has been a long-standing practice by both Armstrongs to terminate any faculty members whom they feel constitute a "threat" to their authority. Recently two members of the Ambassador College Faculty-Gary Prather (Assistant Professor of Music) and Olin Degge (Assistant Professor of Sociology)-have been the hapless victims of the Armstrong paranoia. Because Mr. Prather refused to attend Church services any longer, he was threatened with termination. However, to date he has successfully intimidated the Administration over the issue of religious freedom as protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution and has maintained his appointment.

Olin Degge's case was not such a clear-cut instance of religious discrimination, and he was not so fortunate in retaining his appointment. When contacted, Mr. Degge declined to grant an interview, stating that he felt that his contractual obligation to the College made it necessary for him, to pursue and exhaust certain informal and/or formal channels of appeal within the institution before he could even consider such an interview. He also refused to divulge the name of the Administrator who terminated him, but he did make a brief statement regarding the reasons for his termination:

"I only feel at liberty to share with you the very obscure reasons I was given. I was told that an irreversible decision had been made to not renew my contract for the 1976-77 school year due to the fact that I had an extreme 'credibility problem' at high Administrative levels-where I am perceived to have a very independent, complex personality and be 'difficult' to get to know, with a 'makeup' supposedly 'difficult to determine'. I was informed that this had nothing to do with my teaching ability or record-which had not even been consulted. I have my own theories about the reasons for my 'extreme credibility problem', but I don't feel I am at liberty to elaborate at this point in time."

These examples, again, demonstrate that the present Administration at "higher levels" is not interested in following those guidelines set forth either by themselves or by W.A.S.C. The Rader/Armstrong power structure seems bent on playing Russian Roulette with Ambassador College's future accreditation.

IV. LIBRARY FACILITIES

A small, but vital, point was made by W.A.S.C. in regard to the College library collection: "The library needs strengthening, both in terms of numbers of holdings and the quality and distribution of titles." Dr. Richard Walther, Director of Library Services, has made valiant efforts to meet these recommendations on little more than a shoestring budget. It seems that in preparation for next year's visit by W.A.S.C. the Administration would be pumping funds into strengthening the still weak Ambassador College Library. But, once again priorities are not correctly ordered. While the library struggles to meet the standards set forth by W.A.S.C. thousands of dollars are being spent to build new tennis courts, at the expense of academic excellence.

V. FINANCIAL STABILITY

Last, but not least, it is necessary to evaluate the financial stability of the institution. Regarding this area W.A.S.C. commented: "There is a critical need for a careful analysis of working capital... the institution is very heavily leveraged in terms of fixed assets and is greatly dependent upon the maintenance of an ongoing cash flow. Liquidity is obviously at a very low point and, as such, financial flexibility does not exist. W.A.S.C. easily discerned the lack of financial autonomy within the College institution and the potentially fatal weakness of the College's reliance on the uncontrollable and capricious financial support of the Church.

At the time that he demoted Dr. Germano (Memorandum, February 27, 1976), President Armstrong glowingly announced the appointment of Mr. Ray Wright to the position of Chief Financial Officer of the College. Supposedly Mr. Wright would guide all affairs dealing with financial matters for the College-an attempt to persuade W.A.S.C. that the College and Church have two separate financial bases. Closer scrutiny reveals that the College is still directly dependent on the Church organization for financial support. Stanley Rader has retained his positions of Vice-President of Financial Affairs for the Church and Secretary and Treasurer on the College Board of Trustees, and he is still Ray Wright's superior as outlined by an interesting memo dated March 2, 1976 and directed to all employees:

"Department listings under Financial Affairs should read:
Vice President, Stanley R. Rader...5191
Secretary, Lelah Upton.....5194
Assistant Vice Pres., Raymond Wright...5193
Secretary, Cheryl Hoffman....5193
Henry Cornwall.....5196
Secretary, [not legible] Upton.....5471

Added under Ambassador International Cultural Foundation (AICF) should be:
Sec.-Treasurer, Henry Cornwall...5196
Operations Mgr., Raymond Wright...5193"

No financial autonomy was promoted by President Armstrong's appointment of Mr. Wright as chief financial officer of the College; Stanley Rader maintains control over the financial interests of both the College and Church. The College remains very much dependent on the Church for its financial support and is constructively controlled by it.

The possibility of an extreme identity crisis between Church and College has not been avoided. Is the College merely an arm of the Church which can be jettisoned at the flick of a "financial crisis"? Would the Church close the College in lieu of the more important matters of reaching the world with a last "end-time message"? In a sermon given on March 13, 1976, Garner Ted Armstrong states that he might do just that:

"Well, I look around now and I find that there are people whose names I have never even heard of before who are BIGGER IN RADIO AND TELEVISION THAN WE ARE!-far bigger. People whose names you wouldn't have known two to three years ago, who were absolute 'nobodies' in the religious field, have almost overnight... grown to greater capacity in the number of people they are reaching than is this Work. And I am going to turn that around NO MATTER WHAT IT COSTS! -Whether it costs a College, whether it costs whatever-we are not going to be satisfied in this Work with being number seven... or even with being number two. The job that we have got to do of warning and being a witness to the entirety of this world has got to be a number one job!"

Curiously, he seems to retract these words later in this same sermon:

"I've been saying to everybody, 'We ought to be building Colleges not closing them down, and starting schools not shutting them down, and going on dozens and hundreds of radio stations not cutting them back,' and that's precisely what I want to do...."

Notice, early in the sermon he raised the very strong possibility of closing the College in order to achieve his goals of making the Work number one. Then in a mixture of retraction and subterfuge he attempted to persuade his audience what they heard is not what he meant at all. It seems though, that he did mean that he would go to any means to forward his pursuit of 1,000 radio stations and hundreds of televisions stations, whatever the cost, because he added the qualifier:

"...but, we must not be afraid and I must not be afraid to look a sacred cow right in the face and to call it a sacred cow.... Things which become appendages, which in a sense hang on the Work and drain it of its strength are going to have to be changed and revitalized and we're going to have to streamline and sharpen the spearpoint right [not legible] of the main thrust of the Work.... We're going to make it our goal to be on 1,000 radio stations, not 240... hundreds of television stations not 30 or 40...."

The College remains in appendage of the Church which can be closed, sliced or ditched at the whim of the Armstrongs. As such, accreditation of the College could be little more than a bad joke.

...OR BUST?

Obviously, the basic philosophical changes that would give Ambassador a run at accreditation have not been made. Although Dr. Germano and his team made significant strides toward achieving accreditation and a more independent education environment grew from these efforts, there were some who were unable to cope under the pressure of honest, open, truth-seeking scrutiny. When the Armstrongs speak of "earnestly desiring accreditation", "vigorously pursuing accreditation", etc., they actually mean that they are seeking the privileges of accredited status while avoiding as many of the responsibilities and prices of it as possible. Unless the appropriate changes which would foster a truly open, healthy academic environment (i.e., Trustee independence; Administrative independence; academic freedom and tenure; a full-time, qualified President; economic independence) are made, Ambassador College can never hope to operate as a legitimate educational institution.

The Western Association of Schools and Colleges exists for the express purpose of critically exposing "educational" charlatanism. The issue is simply one of truth in advertising. All who desire the accreditation of Ambassador College should be aware that W.A.S.C. will see through the barrage of flack coming from the mouths of those in high places and will tell those responsible to either fulfill the requirements or shut up. When this occurs, though, the Armstrongs will doubtlessly throw their supreme tantrum and close the College in the same way a small child, who in conflict with a parent over a toy breaks the toy rather than give it up.

All concerned with the accreditation of Ambassador College should be both determined and committed to stopping this perennial, ulcer-generating instability to which the Administration, Faculty and Student Body are continually subjected. The only certain manner by which it will end is the neutralization and detoxification of the power now held by H.W.A., G.T.A. and S.R.R.-preferably by their resignation. Regretably, it is highly unlikely that this will ever voluntarily take place. But, channels do exist that could extremely minimize their power. An internal avenue would be for the Board of Trustees to exercise the clout which it legally possesses to see that their power is either severely diminished and controlled, or altogether eliminated. In fact, if the Board were so disposed, it could give the triumvirate their walking papers in its next quorum meeting by taking a majority vote. Such action is highly unlikely, however, because the other twelve members of the Board have never learned to exercise thinking independent of the three.

Another means of ensuring accreditation would be by alerting W.A.S.C. regarding the power held by Rader and both Armstrongs. In this way pressure can be exerted on the Board of Trustees to enact those policies which will guarantee the accreditation of Ambassador College for the right reasons. No one man or small group of men should claim to be Ambassador College-anyone who has sacrificed time and money for the sake of the institution has a right in determining the future of the college they helped to build.

Let your voice be heard. Don't let Ambassador lose this chance for accreditation. Write to: WESTERN ASSOCIATION OF SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES, Accrediting Commission for Senior Colleges and Universities, Mills College, Oakland, California 94613. AMBASSADOR REVIEW would appreciate receiving a copy of your letter so that it can continue to monitor Ambassador College's progress toward full accreditation.

MAIL CENSORSHIP SPARKS STUDENT PROTEST

The third week of February, 1976, witnessed another milestone in Ambassador College history: it's first student protest. The object of their outrage was nothing less than the officially-sanctioned censorship of personal mail.

Early in February, 50 introductory letters from AMBASSADOR REVIEW were sent to specific students living on the Ambassador College campus. One week later a phone survey by the REVIEW revealed that not one of the students had received his letter. After this discovery was made, the AMBASSADOR REVIEW staff sent out a second set of letters, at the same time notifying the Pasadena Postmaster of the mailing. Fortunately, this time the mail was not "lost". Unfortunately, however, the college mail clerk did not distribute the individually addressed envelopes. Instead, acting on orders, she placed notes in the student mail-boxes informing the students that their mail was being held for them. When they requested it, the clerk "encouraged" many not to accept the material. Some were upset enough by this procedural error" to voice complaints with Dean Oehlman. Other students mailed the envelopes back unopened.

The college administration, seeking to protect the ideological insulation of the campus, then decided to take action against any future influx of "dangerous" mail. On February 1-3 the college legal department issued a memo to all students requiring their signature on a legal document, entitled "Consent to college mail procedure". This would give the administration the right to prohibit the delivery of any "material deemed objectionable by the college"; the memo continued, "the same shall be collected, returned to sender, or otherwise disposed of."

The reaction came immediately. An estimated 300 students refused to sign the document. It was sent back to Dean Oehlman's office by the score, some with indignant comments and also a swastika or two! Even the PORTFOLIO, the official newspaper of the college, posted a copy of the memo on its office bulletin board with mocking additions made to the contents.

On February 26, having to postpone his trip to Egypt, President Garner Ted Armstrong conducted a lengthy meeting with the student council. The following day, after being briefed on the entire situation, he issued a personal memo to all students. This memo set up a temporary arrangement in which no mail would be censored, with the exception that "objectionable" material would remain in a common receptacle accessible to all who were willing to "dig for it". He also stated that a long term solution to "the problem" would be individual, numbered, private boxes. This arrangement seemed to most to be fair and a strained tranquility was restored. But, with predictable Armstrong form, Ted donned his ministerial cap and in a Sabbath sermon the next day verbally flogged the students in the name of Jesus Christ and assured them that they did have freedom at Ambassador College ... the freedom to pack their bags and leave anytime they want.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW contacted KABC-TV about the situation. On March 11 AMBASSADOR REVIEW publishers, John Trechak and Tim Nugent were interviewed on television by Wayne Satz of KABC-Channel 7 Eyewitness News. Ambassador officials, however, refused to comment. Then, after a week of persistent phone calls by KABC, Stan Rader came forward for the cameras. He refused to allow any students to be interviewed by newsmen and categorically denied all charges.

A few days later, when Mr. Nugent personally contacted Stan Rader, in an attempt to ensure delivery of all AMBASSADOR REVIEW material, he was informed that he would not be allowed on campus to talk to any students about their mail.

The latest incident in this bizarre chain of events was the erection of a nine-foot-high wall around the student mail-boxes. Students now have access to their mail only at certain restricted times during the day and then only under the watchful eye of the postal clerk, in keeping with the new international flavor of "the Work", Ambassador College can now boast of its own "Berlin Wall".

WHERE WOULD YOU GO?

"To be in possession of an absolute truth is to have a net of familiarity spread over the whole of eternity. There are no surprises and no unknowns. All questions have already been answered, all decisions made, all eventualities foreseen.... An active mass movement rejects the present and centers its interests on the future. It is from this attitude that it derives its strength, for it can proceed recklessly with the present-with the health, wealth and lives of its followers."

THE TRUE BELIEVER, by Eric Hoffer, Harper and Row publishers

Does the Worldwide Church of God really have a "net of familiarity spread over the whole of eternity"? Does it possess the answers to all questions? Has it foreseen the outcome of all events or prophecies? Events of the last five years have shaken the faith and confidence of many in the "absolute truth" expounded by the Worldwide Church of God. Even Garner Ted Armstrong, the spokesman of the organization on radio and television, stated in an interview with Joseph Hopkins, author of *THE ARMSTRONG EMPIRE**:

"It's (British-Israelism) not essential to salvation. It hasn't been proven to my satisfaction that the ten lost tribes relocated in specific places in northern Europe. It certainly is not a necessary doctrine."

In answer to a question regarding Herbert Armstrong's one true church dogma, Garner Ted replied:

"I don't believe that either, except for the invisible church, the Body of Christ. But it is definitely not necessary to belong to the Worldwide Church of God in order to be saved."

In answer to another question regarding the Sunday-mark of the Beast doctrine, Garner Ted, admitting that the doctrine had been taught in the early history of the Worldwide Church, declared:

"I haven't taught this for at least twenty years. In fact, as long as I have been in the Work this doctrine hasn't appeared in the literature." For those who possess Lesson 30 of the AMBASSADOR COLLEGE BIBLE CORRESPONDENCE COURSE, copyrighted 1967, we ask you to refer to pages 9 and 15 to determine the validity of Garner Ted Armstrong's denial.

In addition to these statements from the Executive Vice-President of the Worldwide Church of God, add the Pentecost change, the 1972 miscalculation, the Healing change (not yet published for the church), the Divorce and Remarriage decision and the watering down and/or elimination of many other peripheral teachings, doctrines, superstitions, etc. and we can hardly say that the Worldwide Church possesses the "net over eternity". Rather, the doctrinal net is ripping if not already completely in tatters.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW presents "another side of the story" on a number of issues of interest to those who are in one way or another associated with Ambassador College or the Worldwide Church of God. It is not our primary purpose, however, to address theological issues. Therefore, you may ask, "Where can I go to get another side of the story on the many doctrinal questions which have arisen in the Worldwide Church of God?"

We are providing you with a partial list of the groups to whom many are looking for "another side of the story."

Foundation for Biblical Research
Pasadena, California 91102

The F. B. R. was founded by Ernest Martin, former chairman of the Theology Department at Ambassador College in Pasadena; Kenneth Storey, former director of space planning for Ambassador College; and Gary Arvidson, former manager of the Church Administration Department of the Worldwide Church of God. The Foundation distributes booklets, articles, cassette tapes and a monthly newsletter.

World Insight
Pasadena, CA 91102

This is a new nondenominational organization founded by Gary Arvidson, Kenneth Storey, Richard Plache and Gary Reid. They are presently working on the first issue of a new magazine called INSIGHT. This publication will contain articles about Christian living, the ministry of reconciliation, prophecy, world news, psychology and related subjects.

4 Rue Echille Robelti

Chatillon, France

Philippe Sandron, a former minister in the Worldwide Church of God, is director of the F.B.R. in France. The Foundation distributes articles and cassette tapes in the French language.

Associated Churches of God
The Clark Building
Columbia, Maryland 21044

The Associated Churches are directed by Kenneth Westby, former Washington, D. C. district superintendent, and George Kemnitz, former Chicago District Superintendent, of the Worldwide Church of God.

Twentieth Century Church of God
Vacaville, California 95688

This group is directed by Al Carrozzo, former Pasadena Visiting Program director and assistant superintendent of Ministers for the Worldwide Church of God. Mr. Carrozzo publishes a monthly newsletter for those on his mailing list.

Church of God, The Eternal
Eugene, Oregon 97401

Raymond Cole, former Worldwide Church evangelist and one of the original four Ambassador College students in 1947, pastors this church in association with several former pastors of the Worldwide Church.

The Church of God
Cleveland, Ohio 44121

Carl O'Beirn, former pastor in. the Worldwide Church, directs this group.

Church of God, Seventh Day
Denver, Colorado 80201

Herbert Armstrong left this group when he decided to form his own church. They possess a great deal of doctrinal material as well as information concerning the origins of the Radio Church of God (now Worldwide Church of God) which differs in crucial areas from the account of Herbert Armstrong in his Autobiography.

Seventh Day Baptist Church
General Conference Headquarters
510 Watchung Ave.
Plainfield, New Jersey 07061

This church, whose origins go back to the early 1800s, has over the years attracted many former Worldwide Church members. It has literature available as well as congregations throughout the United States.

Church of God Seventh Era
Cabot, Arkansas 72033

Decidedly esoteric in nature, this group is headed by Larry Gilbert Johnson, a former Worldwide Church member.

Religion in the News
Suite 330
Stahlman Building
Nashville, Tennessee 37201

Founded and directed by William Hinson, a former Worldwide Church minister, this organization publishes and distributes literature concerning the Worldwide Church of God.

Concordant Publishing Concern
15570 W. Knochaven Dr.
Canyon Country, California 91351

The Concordant Publishing Concern was founded by A. E. Knoch in the early 1900s. It publishes a bimonthly magazine called UNSEARCHABLE RICHES along with many books on subjects such as "The Problem of Evil", "God's Eonian Purpose" and "The Reconciliation of All". Their publications have become quite popular with many former Worldwide Church members.

AMBASSADOR REVIEW is not necessarily endorsing any of these groups, nor are any of these groups necessarily endorsing AMBASSADOR REVIEW. None asked to be listed. There are certainly many issues on which these organizations disagree. Yet, we feel it is important that you consider all sides of every issue. Each will be happy to explain its particular point of view; you may find there are many more sides to certain questions than you expected.

THE TITHING PAPERS

Editor: AMBASSADOR REVIEW does not intend to take a position on controversial theological issues. We are, however, publishing this thoroughly researched, theological article because of the insight it gives into the inner workings of the W.C.G. and Ambassador College.

For more than three years the Armstrongs and their evangelists have been deluged with over 40 research papers demonstrating that a Christian is NOT required, by the Bible, to give God a tenth of his gross (or net) monetary income. Many ministers, top headquarters administrators and department heads have come to understand the biblical theology of tithing and admit privately that the church has no proof or authority for requiring a tithe on monetary income. Unfortunately, the W.C.G. leaders have time and again refused to refute the new facts that have come to light, and they attempt to silence those who would spotlight their futile attempts to cover up this important new data. The W.C.G. leaders are guilty of "grave procedural errors" in dealing with the numerous papers on tithing. Even today they falsely claim the only questions about tithing are "administrative," not doctrinal.

But why this article? Jesus said that when a number of people go to a brother, tell him his fault, and he still refuses to hear those people, then those people should take the matter directly to the church (Matt. 18:15-17; see also Acts 15:4,6 22-3). You who comprise the Church of God are seeing this long overlooked biblical principle put into practice before your very eyes. When you read the following facts distilled from the scores of papers presented to the W.C.G. Doctrinal Committee, you'll see how simple it is to understand tithing. You'll see information that has been suppressed and hidden from widows who can ill afford to tithe-vital information that has been withheld from thousands of members who are barely able to properly feed and clothe their families while paying over two-tenths of their income to the W.C.G. The following facts have been "held back" (Rom. 1:18) by W.C.G. leaders who seem to lack the faith to really believe that God rewards those who honestly seek him (read Heb. 11:6). Don't take my word for it, read on and do your own research.

I. GENESIS 14:18-24. Abraham gave Melchizedek a tenth of the spoils from war.

Abraham gave Melchizedek a tenth of the spoils taken in battle (Heb. 7:4), but Abraham refused to keep the rest of them.

Abraham had not labored at any occupation to produce the goods he acquired in battle.

The Bible never shows Israel tithing on spoils of war. See Num. 31:9, 27-29 and find out what part of the spoils the Israelite soldiers gave God.

Nowhere does scripture ever say that Abraham was commanded to give Melchizedek a tenth of anything.

Abraham was the father of the faithful. If the fact that he gave a tenth of the spoils makes tithing obligatory for Christians, then the fact that he participated in battle means Christians can fight in war and probably should in order to be able to tithe on spoils as did Abraham. But nowhere does the Bible state that the personal actions of Abraham-or Joseph or Jeremiah-must be faithfully practiced by a Christian today.

II. GENESIS 28:20-22. Jacob vowed to give a tenth to God.

Nowhere does scripture say Jacob was required to tithe or give a tenth of his goods to God.

Nowhere does scripture state that tithing was a law in Jacob's day.

Jacob made a personal vow to give God a tenth of all his goods if and on the condition that God would be with him and bless him.

III. LEVITICUS 27:30-33. Israel was required by the old covenant law to tithe on agricultural produce and livestock.

The Israelites were commanded to tithe solely on every tenth animal and on farming produce (Lev. 27:30-33).

Israel was never commanded to tithe on fish, milk, wool, or the money made from selling pottery, horses, carvings, furniture, books, clothes, construction work, etc.

Only the Levites could accept the Israelites' tithes (Num. 18:21). The Levites then had to give a tenth of the tithes they received to the priests. (Read Num. 18:26-21 8 in the Jewish translation.)

The priests didn't tithe.

The Israelites sent their tithes to the tabernacle or Temple (Deut. 12:5-6, 11 ). Every third year in a seven year cycle it appears that they retained their tithes in their cities for use by the poor, widows, strangers, Levites, etc. (Deut. 14:28-29). (See Jewish reference sources.)

Only landowners who were ranchers and/or farmers were commanded to tithe by the law of Moses (Lev. 27:30-33).

Every seventh year was a sabbatical year. No tithes were permissible in that year. (See under "tithe" in THE JEWISH ENCYCLOPEDIA, vol. 12, p. 151.)

The tithes were tithes only from the land of Palestine. The produce of Gentile lands was considered impure until certain rabbis allowed the tithes of a few Gentile lands to be accepted because so many Jews dwelled there. (See JUDAISM by George Moore, vol. II, pp. 70-71 and THE LIFE AND TIMES OF JESUS THE MESSIAH by Alfred Edersheim, vol. I. p. 9, et. al.)

IV. MALACHI 3:6-12. Malachi commands native Israelites of his day to tithe.

Malachi is writing to the Jewish nation returned from captivity (sons of Jacob-verse 6) in the time of Ezra-Nehemiah.

He is not addressing Christians today; verses 6-12 are not an end-time prophecy.

Again, the tithe Malachi is discussing is agricultural in nature. It was stored in a Temple storehouse (II Chron. 31:4-12; Neh. 10:38).

V. THE NEW TESTAMENT MINISTRY was supported solely by freewill offerings.

Christ told the Pharisees and scribes to tithe (Mat. 23:23). They were still under the Mosaic law at that time, the Temple still stood, and the Levites still ministered at the Temple. The Christian dispensation had not yet begun.

The scribes and Pharisees were said to be tithing on mint, cummin, and anise—all agricultural in nature.

The apostles couldn't receive tithes because they weren't Levites serving at the Temple. Most were Jewish. Jesus himself was Jewish (Heb. 7:12-14) and couldn't accept tithes or he would have broken the law.

Jesus, the ministry, and the needy were supported and assisted by freewill offerings from church members not by tithes. (No doubt some gave 50% of their monetary income and others less than 1%. See Mat. 6:25-34; Luke 10:4-8; Acts 4:32-35, 20:33-35; II Cor. 8:2-15; 9:6-12; 11:8-9; I John 3:17-18.)

The N.T. ministry is NOT the Melchizedek priesthood, nor does Heb. 7 say it is.

Jesus is the only member of the "Melchizedek priesthood" (Heb. 7:24).

The change in the law (Heb. 7:12) refers to the priesthood being changed, not tithing being transferred to the New Testament ministry.

The fact that Heb. 7 mentions that Abraham tithed to Melchizedek does not prove that a Christian should tithe. This example was cited to illustrate the superiority of the Melchizedek priesthood over the Levitical priesthood.

I Cor. 9 shows that a minister has a right to earn a living from preaching the gospel, but it never says he can take tithes or demand a tenth of one's net or gross monetary income.

THE CATHOLIC ENCYCLOPEDIA admits that tithing was first forced on Christians by the Council of Macon's decision in 585.

Nowhere does the Bible, Jesus, or the apostles tell a Christian to tithe.

A man is worse than an infidel if he doesn't provide for his family or relatives. (See I Tim. 5:8.)

Many W.C.G. ministers have admitted and written papers stating that in a number of cases it proved to be impossible for a head of a household to give one tenth of his gross monetary income and yet properly feed, clothe, and shelter his family, as well as accumulate a small savings for emergencies.

God never required a tithe on monetary income anywhere in the Bible.

Jesus told the Pharisees in Mat. 22:21 to "render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's." This statement was made to Pharisees, not to Christians. Jesus did not say this meant that the Pharisee should tithe, nor did Jesus by taking a coin somehow imply a monetary tithe, because the law with which he was very familiar never required any such thing.

VI. TITHING & CHURCH GOVERNMENT

Nowhere does the Bible say the church has the right to take an Old Testament law, delete part of it, reword it, twist it, and then require a Christian to keep the "new, improved" law.

Since the N.T. shows that the N.T. ministry was supported by freewill, voluntary offerings, the church has absolutely no right or authority to require Christians to give a tenth of their monetary income.

The church has no right to bind on members a rule or "law" that is in contradiction to God's Word.

If a church can change God's laws around and change N.T. church practices, then the Catholic church would also have the right to institute Easter, worship on Sunday, etc. Either God's Word is the authority for tithing, or it isn't. If it isn't, then the church, by commanding monetary tithing, is following the commandments of men and perhaps worshipping God in vain.

The authority to bind and loose was given only to Peter and the original apostles-not to the church down to the end of the age. See Matt. 16: 16-19. And they had only the power to bind what had already been bound in heaven (see the William's translation and the NEW AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLE for the best overall rendering of these verses).

VII. VALUABLE SOURCES. Please refer to some of the following works on the subject of "tithes".

THE CATHOLIC ENCYCLOPEDIA
NEW CATHOLIC ENCYCLOPEDIA
THE JEWISH ENCYCLOPEDIA
THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF JEWISH RELIGION

JUDAISM, vol. II, pp. 70-71 by George F. Moore

Almost all of the preceding facts were taken from the over 40 papers on tithing turned in to the top leaders of the W.C.G. during the last three years. As of May 1976, the W.C.G. leadership has still utterly refused either to openly acknowledge the existence of these facts or to disprove them. The recent tithing booklet was put out in spite of the fact that many of the members of the doctrinal committee didn't agree with its contents. Since H.W.A. & G.T.A. have constantly preached to T.V. and radio audiences to not just believe them, but to compare what they say with their Bibles, surely they wouldn't object to your examining the veracity of the objections to tithing which the W.C.G.'s top scholars have raised during the past two years-or would they?

AMBASSADOR

LETTERS

Gentlemen:

This letter will introduce ourselves as general counsel for Ambassador College.

We have received material published by you under the name and style of "Ambassador Review." Representations have also been brought to our attention which lead to the impression that you are representing the student body, faculty, and alumni of Ambassador College.

The purpose of this letter is to advise you that by virtue of said representations and the use of the name, "Ambassador" in your publication, that confusion is likely to arise in the eyes of the public giving the misimpression that you are affiliated with Ambassador College and acting as an authorized representative of one of its instrumentalities.

Therefore, we hereby demand that you cease and desist using the name "Ambassador" in your material and from representing in any way, either directly or indirectly, that you represent Ambassador College's student body, alumni or faculty. Further, that you cease and desist from in any way, either directly or indirectly, indicating or holding out that you are an agency of or represent Ambassador College.

We would appreciate hearing from you promptly regarding your intentions in this regard.

Respectfully yours,

Ralph K. Helge
for Rader, Helge & Gerson
Attorneys at Law

Dear Ralph:

It's good to see that the boys at Rader, et al., attorneys at law, have a sense of humor. Your demand that we cease and desist using the name "Ambassador" brought a roar of laughter from all of us here at AMBASSADOR REVIEW. We are certain that it was humor you had in mind when you inserted that demand, and consequently, we will not take offense at it nor accuse anyone on your staff of a sandbox mentality. After all, we appreciate a good laugh, and so as not to appear stingy with a good joke (and we know one when we see one ), we shared the guffaw, with the following firms who also have and use the name "Ambassador":

- 1) Ambassador Magazine (Trans World Airlines)
- 2) Ambassador Apartments
- 3) Ambassador Convalescent Hospital
- 4) Ambassador Hotel
- 5) Ambassador Inns of America
- 6) Ambassador Motel
- 7) Ambassador Rentals
- 8) Ambassador Van and Storage
- 9) Ambassadors for Christ

We feel that our use of the name "Ambassador" has a similar parallel to your use of the name and style "Church of God", a corporation which we understand you also represent, and which supports Ambassador College, Inc. In this specific case, the qualifier "Worldwide" has been added to "Church of God". In our case, we added the qualifier "Review". We are sure that this clear parallel will not tax the legal intellect of anyone on your staff. And as evidence of our firm position in defense of our use of the name "Ambassador", we refer you to the Pasadena Telephone Directory. Look under the "A"'s first, until you come to "Ambassador"; we think that perhaps an explanation will dawn upon you.

By the way, Ralph, by what authority do you demand anything of us? We're just curious. You see, we're wondering if you think that we cannot deliver abundant supportive evidence to back everything we say. We have hundreds of pieces of mail. They are from Ambassador College alumni. We have the input from students at Ambassador College. We have faculty from your college who also provide input. None of them, however, hold out that they are speaking for Ambassador College, Inc. Rather, they are speaking for themselves, to others, about the "Ambassador Experience".

It should be clear to you or anyone else that we do not hold out, nor purport to speak for all students, alumni or faculty of Ambassador College, Inc., and since the last thing on earth we would want would be for someone to receive the misimpression that we are all instrumentality of Ambassador College, Inc., we will be happy to exercise the following affirmative action to offset your unsupported claim of possible confusion in the public eye.

It should be added that we are assured from all sides that your claim (unsupported) of "confusion" does not exist in the public mind. However, we are quite willing to "go the extra mile" in this matter-for your peace of mind. Even though there will be personal expense involved on our part, we will contact any and all individuals you make known to us who have registered a complaint with your office in support of your claim and who were contacted by AMBASSADOR REVIEW through the mail. We will be happy to commit whatever time required to examine any evidence you would care to submit to us in support of your claims which might demonstrate that we have inured to our benefit any tangible property or good will otherwise intended for Ambassador College , Inc.

In addition, we are open and intend always to remain receptive to any suggestions you might outline which would clear up any possibility of any misimpressions-if they exist. In the meantime, we want you to feel free to recite or publish the following disclaimer as your discession dictates.

DISCLAIMER OF AFFILIATION

It has been brought to the attention of AMBASSADOR REVIEW by gentlemen representing themselves as general counsel for Ambassador College, Inc., that it is their impression that the name and style of AMBASSADOR REVIEW could lead to confusion in the eyes of the public and give the misimpression that we are affiliated with Ambassador College and acting as an authorized representative of one of its instrumentalities. So as to avoid any confusion and to clear up any possible misimpression that we are affiliated with Ambassador College, Inc., or acting as an authorized representative of one of its instrumentalities, we are issuing the following disclaimer:

AMBASSADOR REVIEW is NOT AFFILIATED in any way with Ambassador College Incorporated, and does not hold out or intend to indicate, either directly or indirectly, that it is an agency of or representative of Ambassador College Incorporated or of its instrumentalities.

Further, AMBASSADOR REVIEW does not hold out or indicate either directly or indirectly, that it is acting as an agent of any principals such as students, faculty or alumni for the purpose of binding upon said principals any statements or actions which are not authorized by the principal.

If we can be of any further assistance in this matter, please contact us.

Best regards,

John Trechak, J. Timothy Nugent

P.S. As a publishing enterprise we must presume that all uncopyrighted, unsolicited material is being submitted for publication. Thank you for your submission.

To the seekers of the real "Plain Truth", Greetings,

I received a copy of your AMBASSADOR REVIEW and I was really thrilled. Please put me on your subscription list. It is about time the whole truth about the "Ambassador Experience" be brought to light. I too was a true believer for many years and it nearly ruined my whole family.

As an exmember of the W.C.G. and a "super deacon", security chief, etc., I too know how much harm and damage the W.C.G. and its phony leadership has done to thousands of people. I can only thank God that He has allowed the mind and conscience that He gave me to function again, and never again will I allow myself to be taken over by any organization or man.

P.S. Should you run into any legal difficulties I would be glad to back you and even testify as to my "Ambassador Experience" (gestapo like tactics, phone bugging, etc., etc., we really did it all).

New Jersey

Could you please put me on your mailing list for the forthcoming AMBASSADOR REVIEW and any other literature? Thank you. If possible, could you please send the REVIEW in a plain wrapper? You know what might happen to it!

Student, A.C. Pasadena

I read the "Gerringer letter" and the one Richard Plache wrote in resignation. These finally got me off my duff and into much research which really opened my mind. Thank you kindly!

Washington

We do not accept this offer and are sending it back. We don't even want it in our garbage. If Mr. GTA and HWA are wrong in their authority, God will remove and/or punish them without our help or ours. If they are not wrong-remember what happened to Korah?

Manitoba, Canada

Editor: We'll take our chances.

I would like to mention that I think it is commendable in the way you are handling your manner of "exposing" the truth. The truth will prevail in the end without mud slinging and I think you are on the right track. It is so easy to get mad at the rotten system, especially when you know both sides and you've been through what some of us have.

California

I would like to see an article on how pressure could be applied to get the Armstrong program off the public air waves.

Editor: We're working on it.

California

We were disfellowshipped August 2, before three church gatherings comprising approximately 1000 people because we were reading Dr. Martin's literature. We were asked not to read Dr. Martin's writings because all it would do is confuse us. It was very embarrassing. All my friends refused to fellowship with my family and I since that time but we are over the hump now and the sailing is easy. Let me say that I am very happy to be "confused" by Dr. Martin.

Michigan

As a W.C.G. "regurgitee" and X.C. alumnus (Big Sandy, 1973) news of sanity greatly interests me. News that the college's administration now seeks to censor student mail as a measure against the currency of AMBASSADOR REVIEW also fascinates me. Hopefully you will support the natural reaction such intolerant tyranny will excite in the student body. I should be pleased to help you with a contribution of money to that end. In my last college year, a little outside support of good sense would have been exceptionally welcome.

California

I am going to tell you people the same as I have told the "Biblical Research Group", the "Associated Group", and another knot-head group: TAKE MY NAME OFF YOUR MAILING LIST. Your letters are unwanted and unsolicited! As for your group, I do not want to read the DIRT you want to distribute. This is certainly NOT true Christianity. Leaving God's Church or Ambassador College is your business. But leave us alone.

Any future letters will be dropped into the "Round File" unopened. Word is being spread here warning each other about your AMBASSADOR REVIEW and most are destroying it unopened. Your cooperation will be appreciated. I read very little of your literature and it made me sick to think former students, etc., could be so vicious. This is NOT God's way. It is Satan's way. I want no part of it or in it. Spreading this garbage makes your group as guilty of wrong doing as the people you are claiming to expose-if indeed what you say is true. I look to God to be my judge and I allow every other human the same privilege.

Maryland

We have been in the church about 14 years but for about two years we have had questions about a lot of things. If you start asking questions they tell you you are on Satan's wave length, but we started reading our Bibles and have seen so many wrongs in this church. About two months ago we quit supporting it and that is when we got to looking into things ourselves. We were in ... and ... had the tapes on Galations by David Ord. It really was good and so was Dr. Martin's on the New Covenant-I couldn't believe what I was hearing? Everything was so plain. I could see why they didn't want us to see or listen to Dr. Martin. They knew when you once did, then your eyes would be open.

Ohio

I appreciate what you are trying to do. I came into the W.C.G. in 1962 and had to get a divorce and sell my home and tithe and give offerings. I wasn't working and was taking care of my mother who is 98 years old now. I remember in 1969 when they said they were going broke and I drew out $1000 from the bank to send them, and, of course, there were the threats of the "lake of fire". I caught you on Channel 7 the other night on the 6 o'clock News.

California

My wife and I APPLAUD your efforts to get at the truth-which will be excruciating, since you are dealing with that farce, "Ambassador College," and its affiliate, "The Worldwide Church of the Watergate".

I was a W.C.G. minister for 11½ years, terminated last October because I upheld the Bible and Christ. They wanted Herbert and Ted. We felt that was "no bargain".

My gold, AC ring was discarded three years ago, and I am thoroughly ASHAMED of my past affiliation with that pseudo-college. Now, I fall back on my B.A. from Washington and Jefferson College (accredited).

We wish you well, but you're dealing with the lowest of scoundrels, men who are apeishly carnal, totally unconverted and subtly devious who are out to get members ONLY for the "income", and to maintain a high-flying life style.

G.T.A. laments that there are those "out there" who are WAITING for the Organization to crumble. That's ME! And, what's more. I'm PRAYING about it.

The Armstrongs are ENEMIES of mankind, especially Christian mankind!

D.L. Prunkard, Minnesota

Will you please place me on your mailing list? I want to obtain all the current (and all other) information possible about the cult known as the Worldwide Church of God. I was once ensnared by this foul organization of heretical embezzlers and our dear son has been a pitiful slave to these manipulators for ten years. Unless this bunch of charlatans is exposed to the light of day, he and many more thousands of the pathetic brainwashed victims of these cultists will remain zombies ail the days of their wasted lives.

Mississippi

You folks are taking on quite a task. I'm sure you know that only a steady, long-term effort willll bring about the goal of turning Ambassador College into a true institution of higher education rather than a base of operations for a medieval-thinking demagogue.

Many of the ideals of the college are highly commendable, but truly in its present form it is nothing but a front.

Hard work on all our parts collectively could bring about some great changes. I've noticed this-change at Ambassador has nearly always come as the direct result of pressure from without. Again, we applaud your efforts and hope we can be of help!

Texas

My husband and I want to commend you on your efforts and especially on your GUTS. We are thankful that there are people like you who cannot, and will not be intimidated or bought off. May you succeed!

Virginia

I was very interested to read of the plans to publish a journal which will provide the medium for open discussion not only of problems concerning A.C. but also possible solutions. It is encouraging to see that there are some who are concerned enough about A.C. to do more than just hope against hope for reforms that are long, long over due. I do hope that many of us who have sweated, prayed, and sacrificed or in whatever way participated in the "Ambassador Experience" will not be willing to write it all off as a lost cause.

Missouri

I am particularly sympathetic to your cause although at this time I think it is futile. Many of the thinking people have already left the Armstrongs and have started to do something worthwhile. Your belief in freedom of thought for Ambassador is a novel idea, but impossible for the institution with the Armstrongs still signing paychecks. The theology of the institution must be re-evaluated (re-evaluated nothing, it needs to be rejected!) before any significant change can occur. It looks as though the first issue is a smear campaign and I hope the second issue hits more on issues and suggestions. For what H.W.A. and G.T.A. have done to so many people they deserve all the bad press they get, but I doubt even public pressure would cause the "Apostle of God" and his henchmen to change. I have no interest to rejoin the church, but I would enjoy and support a publication that would... (censored)... or at least bring some things up. Good luck!

Iowa

For five years I was a member of the W.C.G. There I met my future wife. Upon getting married we were "red-tapped", marked and booted from the church. After a year of marriage under the fear of the soon coming end of the age, we separated and went back to the W.C.G. When John Mitchell and Bill Sutton, ministers in Shreveport, LA, resigned... we have been together happily ever since.

Louisiana

...showed me your letter about AMBASSADOR REVIEW yesterday. I couldn't believe it! Congratulations and I hope you can maintain the standards in future issues. I would be delighted to distribute the publication in England for you if you so desire. We could use perhaps a hundred copies initially.

England

I think you should do an article about how to get the Armstrong program stopped. A lot of stations would not carry it if they knew how much harm it does. Also, tell your readers they can complain to the Federal Communications Commission, 1919 M Street, Washington D.C. 20002.

California

The sample article concerning GTA is pretty direct and incisive. Perhaps this type of forceful approach may be just the thing to shake those people to their senses. Too long have trusting people just bowed their heads and numbly accepted whatever the Armstrong clique dictated.

Malaysia

We spent 24½ years with "the organization" and know what it is. We've hoped someone could and would expose it so people in the future won't be taken in and maybe ruin their lives as so many lives have been ruined.

Oregon

At my age of 80 years, and inflation and high cost of living you cannot expect much from me in support because I don't have it to give. My eyesight has failed me and arthritis has me crippled at times so I can't do little odd jobs to bring in money to pay for extras. Nebraska law won't let me drive any conveyance that is motor powered, so when I go to church I have to catch a ride with others....

Nebraska

Editor. Thank you for your support but we are returning your contribution. It is our policy not to accept contributions from the retired-elderly or those who are in serious financial need.

I have been very disappointed by Mr. Albert Portune, the evangelist. I always thought he was a sincere and good man. He must know all the facts of what was going on in the organization all those years. Why hasn't he spoken out since he left? He did a little for a short time, and then he stopped. Is there any truth in the story that the Armstrongs are paying him $750 a month for "retirement"?

California

Editor: Yes.

Things aren't what they used to be! I feel something is really wrong and would ask that, if you will, please forward to me any news, happenings, tapes, literature regarding changes, etc.

Australia

When I was transferred from my pastorate in the Carolinas to Pasadena in 1971, no one would have been able to convince me that I would, of my own volition, sever all ties with the Worldwide Church of God three years later. I was extremely loyal in supporting that organization.

At headquarters I learned how things really were. As department head of Church Administration, I learned a great deal about people, methods of operation and about the gross doctrinal errors which had been covered up for years. My last position as administrative assistant to the Vice-President of Church Administration was during the time when a number of ministers were attempting to help the organization bring about badly needed reform. We were told and the members were told that anyone who questioned "the boss" was "of the devil"!

Their unwillingness to change left resignation as my only recourse. Since then, a few changes have occurred in the Worldwide Church of God in some doctrinal areas; but change has only occurred as a result of great external pressure, and then only after there were many casualties strewn along the way. Changes have not occurred as many had hoped by "working within the organization."

I would like to ask the active and solid members of the Worldwide Church of God

if they know what their leaders really believe about church doctrine and the organization's methods. The Hunting-Plache-Ord incident was only the tip of a still existing iceberg. If the members only knew what many of their ministers in the field were really thinking! So many feel trapped because they see Bible truths but don't know what to do about them.

I personally know of a number of ministers who would like to "make the break" but don't know how they could earn a living. Isn't this a tragedy-when "the shepherds" grovel in fear and become the very thing they have preached against and despised for years-mere hirelings!

Change only occurs through pressure. I wish each member could ask as many ministers as possible what they believed in specifics, about certain doctrines. The questions should be pointed, not allowing those men to dodge behind "well, the church teaches....". These ministers should be challenged to speak their own convictions and not hide behind "the church".

It is my personal hope and prayer that the Worldwide Church will make the changes it needs and that this could lead to reconciliation for all of us. I would like to see a general conference of all ministers-both those in "good standing" as well as those who have resigned, been terminated, fired, disgraced or "eased out". I hope that such a conference would involve all, in one assembly but not behind closed doors as was the case with Mssrs. Plache, Hunting and Ord. It should be open to the members in the Church. The precedent for this was set in Jerusalem many years ago by the apostolic fathers (see Acts 15:3, 4, 12, 13, 22 and 23). I really wonder, however, if this will ever be possible.

Gary Arvidson
World Insight P.O. Box 35, Pasadena, CA 91102

I read your Journal (introductory letter) with a great degree of interest and feel compelled to answer. I am a former member of the Worldwide Church of God and a former writer for the GOOD NEWS and Booklet Department at Ambassador College.

It is my opinion that neither the church nor the college is even qualified to be called a viable Christian organization. It never has been. It has consistently violated virtually every principle of Christ and the New Testament. Its doctrinal approach and its teachings are in almost every instance in opposition to what is revealed in the Bible. The actions of the leadership have distinctly demonstrated widespread corruption, hypocrisy, non-Biblical and unchristian practices, immorality and illegality. My experience has clearly shown me that there is absolutely nothing in this organization which has contributed in any substantive way to the Christian community.

It is apparent to me that Herbert Armstrong is a proud, vain, stubborn egoist who must have his way or else. He has been remarkably successful in using the blinding, fearful elements of religion to obtain what he failed to accomplish in any other way-power over people coupled with riches, influence and position possessed by only a handful of the grandest nobles of the human race. He is going out in style at the expense of thousands of dumb sheep (no criticism intended toward the membership personally) who have sacrificed their lives and souls to support the ambitious aspirations of this modern-day religious tyrant.

The fact that the Worldwide Church of God's doctrinal position is in opposition to much of what the New Testament reveals must really go without saying. On such matters as tithing, clean and unclean meats, sabbath, holy days, attitude toward the rest of the world, approach to grace, extreme legalism, concept of the true church, healing, etc., I feel that the W.C.G. had been and still is in error.

Of course, what hurts even more are the past church stands on child rearing, divorce and remarriage, and the aforementioned subject of healing. The W.C.G. and Herbert Armstrong in particular have chosen in their overwhelming audacity to speak authoritatively on matters which God refused to comment. Mr. Armstrong has established a Hitlerian society and his henchmen have probed into the private lives of the laity with such indiscretion that it is appalling. It is truly incredible that it is still being tolerated. But it is a certain truth that as long as one remains a supporter of the organization it is indeed difficult, if not impossible, to really see the W.C.G. in its true light. Members of the W.C.G. tend to reason in vicious circles-to doubt or question Mr. Armstrong is to doubt the apostle of God and that is tantamount to doubting God Himself and that brings the individual back to where he started with nothing resolved. This type of thinking has created probably the most confused, frustrated laity of any church organization in the world today.

The Worldwide Church has curiously never published any type of religious creed or a list of its beliefs or tenets of faith. This has been a cause of concern on the part of many other religious leaders throughout the country. We often discussed the possibility of doing so when I worked at the college, but nothing was ever done. H.W.A. and G.T.A. often used to make comments that they would never argue religion with anyone, that it wasn't right or worth the effort. I now can better understand why they constantly refused to publish any definition of the basic beliefs or publicly debate the issues with their detractors. The simple fact of the matter is that the position of the W.C.G. on many, many points of doctrine would literally be torn to shreds by Biblical scholars. The immature and incorrect approach of the W.C.G. can easily be exposed and refuted. That is primarily why everything done at the college is usually done secretly. In fact, the entire church is and always has been a closed society. No relationships are permitted outside the church, be they business, marital, social, what have you. In case of sickness, the average member was to look not to anyone in the "world", but to the church minister. No outsiders were to attend services (I understand that this has been relaxed somewhat, though I would doubt that it has been implemented to any great extent). In order to become a member, one was forced to endure extensive questioning of his past life, sexual conduct, marital history, etc. Then he was carefully watched to see how he performed. just how deeply involved he really was before he could be baptized into the church. The views of outsiders on child rearing were constantly put down, and the worst possible methods were taught by the church. The child, like the parent was being taught by the W.C.G. to grow up without having the chance to make meaningful choices in his life. Everything was automatic, everything was forced, everything was tightly controlled.

Herbert Armstrong's personal distrust of the membership and for that matter most of the ministry led to iron-fisted domination by this religious dictator, who in his indescribable vanity would state proudly that God had never allowed him to make any major mistakes. I have determined that mistakes and errors were just about all Herbert Armstrong ever made, and the resulting damage may be untold. I have heard him stand up before the congregation and berate and rebuke and criticize and castigate the members for not supporting him, for letting down in offerings, for not praying and studying enough, while he would often state that he was sacrificing more than any of them. One would have to be dreaming the ultimate dream to even imagine any area in which H.W.A. sacrificed at all. While he constantly wrote pleading letters to the already financially-overburdened membership begging for more and more money to bail out the work, he somehow managed to increase his expenditures for as luxurious a lifestyle as the world's richest elite enjoy.

I utterly repudiate the leadership of the Worldwide Church and I reject the teachings and attitudes and approaches of the organization as well. I regret that the best years of my life were wasted in the service of this false prophet, that I gave up every opportunity, every ambition, every cent of money, every ounce of energy, every second of time to further the immoral cause of Herbert Armstrong, and Garner Ted Armstrong is no better than his father. He is a slick, glib salesman, without any evidence of the Spirit of God. He is a hypocrite of the first order, and a man whom I feel has betrayed his own conscience to order to gain the inheritance of leadership from his father.

Here is an offering to aid you in your work of telling it like it is! More power to you. I was "jailed" for 13 years in "the Empire" and gave them over $15,000 in tithes. I thought Rockefeller had the worst conspiracy going! The H.W.A./G.T.A./Rader/Kuhn mess is a close second! I am spreading your material to those that should know of your work. Please send me a copy of H.W.A.'s article "Did Christ Reorganize the Church".

Washington

It is music to the ear to hear people asking questions and getting answers, coming to conclusions, and stepping out on faith for truth. We have been so gullible and God has had to show us "error" with evidence we just couldn't overlook. I proved Mr. Armstrong wrong from every source available, and what a way to deceive people! Most of us were so busy studying what was prepared and preached to us we didn't research other areas until God showed us how corrupt the whole system had become. Anything that will help to wake people out of this folly of taking from the mouths of babes and making a few rich is a step in the right direction.

I would like the 1939 article and to receive the AMBASSADOR REVIEW. Did you know anyone in the Cleveland area found having this article will be disfellowshipped without reservation or review by Mr. Sargeant? This article must be dynamite!

Ohio

After reading the 1939 GOOD NEWS article you sent me, I wrote its author the following letter. I think your readers may find it interesting.

Dear Mr. Herbert Armstrong:

It was with interest and, I must admit, a considerable degree of amazement that I read your 1939 GOOD NEWS article, entitled, "Did Christ Reorganize the Church?".

For a man who heads a superstructure of an organization; one who embodies the very essence of autocratic rule and unilateral legislation; one who at the slightest challenge of his "apostolic aughority" reacts with purple veined indignation and all-consuming wrath-for such a man to write a flat denunciation of Church government on the grounds that it is "satanic" and unscriptural, that, Mr. Armstrong, must rank among the marvels of our century.

On the other hand, if one understands the particular situation and the circumstances which prompted you to write this article the matter appears to be somewhat less perplexing. From your contemporaries in the Church of God back in Oregon it has been related that your attitude toward Church government at the time stemmed from your own unwillingness to submit to the authority of the then "one and only true Church of God" on the face of this earth, and your article was your way of justifying your rebellion against those over you.

According to Elder Straub of the Oregon Church of God, who received his credentials as a minister the same time you did, the reason for your breaking away from the "Body of Christ" was not only as you claim, over doctrinal matters, but mainly on account of your stubborn refusal to submit to Church authority; the main issue being your unwillingness to render account of the tithe-movies you collected.

That this is the truth, Mr. Armstrong, becomes very apparent when reading your vociferous denunciation of government and boards who aim to have authority to "govern over the spiritual and FINANCIAL AFFAIRS of the Church". The fact that you left "spiritual" in lower case but saw fit to put the financial aspect in bold caps more than points to your real problem at the time.

Your article was subtitled: "Here is amazing new light from the Bible, establishing the TRUTH of this important question of Church organization and government" (emphasis yours). You then went on to caution your readers to prove all things (from the Bible!) because a "careless assumption" (namely that autocratic Church government and authority was Biblical!) had left them open to be "deceived". You proceed by inviting them to "search the Scriptures" with you.

I must admit, Mr. Armstrong, you did a thoroughly convincing job of proving from THE BIBLE that Church government and authority indeed is unscriptural and you rightly labeled such practice as being one of the deceptions of "Babylon, the mother of harlots" of which you urged your readers to "come out".

You said, "We should like to see any text in the New Testament showing that there ever was appointed any BOARD to act as a TREASURY for the tithes of the disciples, and to receive and disburse the money for the whole church! We say such a thing is UNSCRIPTURAL and unless SCRIPTURE can be produced for it, such a practice ought to be discontinued!" A little bit further down you state: "Jesus never organized, or re-organized His Church! There is NO SCRIPTURE for it!" (emphasis yours throughout).

Church government you call the "image of the Beast" and continue to say, "The whole thing is FALSE! It is NOT ACCORDING TO THE BIBLE! It is part of BABYLON! Those who are IN, and MEMBERS of such an organized church government, submitting to doctrines declared by unscriptural boards as a fellowship test, are IN BABYLON, and are actually worshippers of THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST! And God is calling us, HIS people OUT of BABYLON today, before it is too late-before the PLAGUES fall!"

You, Mr. Armstrong, quote Jesus as saying. "Every plant, which my heavenly Father has not planted, shall be ROOTED UP. Our heavenly Father never planted any super-organization, or established any church GOVERNMENT, or set men IN AUTHORITY over either spiritual or financial affairs, in the New Testament Church."

Our fellowship, you claim is with God and Christ, and then with each other, in Love. There is, according to you, "no super-organization over and above local congregations IN THE NEW TESTAMENT", and again you state with your usual fervor, "Any such 'plant' is certain to be ROOTED UP!"

As the reason for your being opposed to hierarchical Church government you state the evils of an authoritarian system. You say, "What has split and divided up the saints in the Church of God? Nothing but ORGANIZATION-which has led to politics, ministers lusting for rule and for power-striving against each other, lining up the brethren on THEIR side, against the other!" "Organization and church GOVERNMENT has brought us only strife, jealousies, divisions, bitterness! It is not of God, and it can bear no other fruit."

Could it be that the "spirit of prophecy" moved you to write those words at the time, Mr. Armstrong? Looking at the mess you have created over the years in both congregations and the ministry I cannot but concur with your conclusions. Your organization and Church Government with Popish "ex-cathedra" pontification has certainly brought you strife, jealousies, divisions, and bitterness. It would seem, Mr. Armstrong, that for once a prophecy of yours came true. Your prophetic batting-average over the years has been between poor and very poor: but this time you hit the bull's eye.

You have convinced me, Mr. Armstrong! And even if I weren't, how can I possibly disagree with the Bible which you so profusely quoted to support your conclusion? After all: God's Word yesterday, today, and forever. Isn't that what you keep claiming? Obviously, God's Word hasn't changed: you have. And it would be most interesting for the readership of AMBASSADOR REVIEW to see how you explain this one away.

You invited reader's comments in your article, asking for Scriptural proof that would support Church Organization and Government. You said, "If there is ONE LINE of scripture for such procedure under the New Testament, the editor of the GOOD NEWS agrees to print it in the next issue-if any can supply it! This is our challenge, and we await replies!"

Well, I am sorry Mr. Armstrong; there is NO proof to the contrary and I have to confess that I am unable to take you up on your challenge. You have done a superb job proving your point beyond the shadow of a doubt. However, since you are still Editor-in-Chief of the GOOD NEWS we shall be looking forward with eager anticipation to see your Scriptural support for your Super-Super Organization in the next issue of the G.N.

Good luck.

P.S. With regard to your poor batting average of prophesying over the years, permit me a rethorical question: How many times can one prophesy falsely before one becomes a false prophet?

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AMBASSADOR WHISPERS

Evangelist Raymond McNair, with consent from Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong, is quietly divorcing Leona, his wife of 21 years. He now claims that she was never really converted. Interestingly enough, he was the minister who baptized her in 1954 before marrying her the next year! They have three children.

Worldwide Church of God director for the United States, C. Wayne Cole, on a tour of Australia was notified by Robert Kuhn over long distance telephone that he would be going on a two-month sabbatical-due to health reasons. Thus, one of the last "concerned" evangelists has now been phased out and replaced by Ronald Dart. Word has it that Wayne may be offered the Canadian directorship-if he decides to remain.

Evangelist David Jon Hill has moved to Washington. Reliable sources indicate that he is selling Amway products while looking for permanent employment in Seattle. He has some property in Sequim which he may be selling to finance a home purchase. Although he has stated that he will be ministering part time (receiving half salary), others indicate that that will not be a major source of income for long.

Is Robert Kuhn bailing out? We understand Robert has partially succumbed to an offer of taking over the vice-presidency of a garment manufacturing firm in New York. Is that why certain men recently let go by the organization in Data Processing have been flown back to New York for interviews? Is Robert already establishing a new organization with former Ambassador personnel? If so, it's going to be very difficult for Stan Rader. He won't have anyone left to help him answer doctrinal questions asked by the press.

Maintaining one's standard of living is a major concern of many contemplating leaving "the Work." Many are now preparing for their ultimate exodus:

Dr. Charles Dorothy is continuing his Master's Program at Fuller Theological Seminary.

David Antion is working toward his Master's Degree in Counselling at Cal. State.

Gunnar Freibergs is working toward his Doctor's Degree.

Several other ministers who are completely turned-off with the modus-operandi of the Armstrongs are seeking refuge in various business ventures to prepare for their departures.

Stan Rader- Evangelist? Don't discount this possibility. Many feel he aspires to the ministry. We are convinced he would not start off as a ministerial trainee or local elder. Such an ordination would serve to further the ambitions which his baptism a year ago began to reveal. If and when such an event occurs, it would further add mystery to the question of Herbert Armstrong's ultimate successor. The two contenders would both be evangelists-one Mr. Armstrong's son and the other his constant companion and top advisor, who is considered by many to be the most powerful man in "the Work." Perhaps this historic event will take place this year.

The Playboy Corporation is currently doing research into the Armstrong empire. An expose on Ted Armstrong and Ambassador College is now slated to appear in Playboy's publication, OUI magazine sometime this summer.

Garner Ted Armstrong's recent television performance on "Hee Haw" prompted one entertainment critic to remark, "Now I know how bleak the future of the unskilled really must be." The performance inspired one former fan to design a bumper sticker which reads "Garner Ted Armstrong: Hee Haw, Hee Haw, Hee Haw." Mr. Armstrong's crooning debut was probably not helped by the fact that while taping the show a marshall served him with the papers for a $5 million lawsuit, being brought against him by William Hinson.

The $5 million Hinson lawsuit was filed in Tennessee against Garner Ted Armstrong and Tony Hammer. It will not be the last lawsuit against the Armstrong organization. There are at least three others in preparation-one, a $50 million class action suit, will soon be filed against the entire organization.

Charges by former Worldwide Church of God minister, Al Carrozzo, that Ambassador College officials are making use of Swiss bank accounts has not been met with much skepticism from former church officials. Mr. Carrozzo has sent AMBASSADOR REVIEW a copy of a 1974 Ambassador Telex to the Union Bank of Switzerland. The telex initiated a contract for one million Swiss francs.

Predictions by certain insiders that Dr. Hoeh will be the next evangelist to retire seems to gain plausibility by the fact that he is no longer maintaining an on-campus office. Many feel that as developer of the 19-year time cycle theory, Dr. Hoeh's credibility as a Bible scholar was permanently destroyed by the 1972 prophecy debacle.

An investigation by the United States Customs Department into the activities of one member of Herbert Armstrong's foreign campaign staff has proven very upsetting to a number of people at Ambassador. One Pasadena artist even reported giving this individual a $3,000 painting to sell in Japan on commission and now one year after its sale has still not received his money. One college faculty member interviewed by a government investigator would not divulge any information to us but only said, "Mr. Armstrong should be more careful in choosing the people that plan his tours. It's a shame that things like that are going on at Ambassador."

A number of former Armstrong followers are currently working on books about their experiences with Armstrongism. Marion McNair's book is due to be published this summer. William Hinson's is scheduled for release in September. Other books being written include two novels and a screenplay.

Stanley Rader's March 15 comment on ABC-TV news that he imagines that PENTHOUSE magazine is read at Ambassador College is not surprising considering the fact that Ambassador College president, Ted Armstrong, has more than once, been seen reading PLAYBOY in a Pasadena barbershop.

In the September 9, 1975 Ministerial Bulletin, Garner Ted Armstrong stated that 10 out of every 12 Worldwide Church of God children leave the church upon gaining independence from their parents.

Ambassador College's application to the United States government to acquire a $2.5 million piece of surplus federal property at no cost has met with opposition from many Ambassador College alumni who charge that the college should not be eligible because of religious discrimination. The property being applied for is the Vista Del Arroyo building in Pasadena. We have been informed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that due to a letter from Ambassador Review to President Ford, the application is now being carefully reevaluated. The key men in the decision now are: 1.) Mr. A.B. Pace, General Services Administration, 525 Market St., San Francisco, California 94105 and 2.) Mr. Charles Fuller, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco, California 941020

DID I SAY THAT?

On April 12, 1976 an AMBASSADOR REVIEW correspondent contacted the Ambassador College re-recording facility to request a copy of a sermon given publicly by Garner Ted Armstrong on February 29, 1975.

The, facility secretary informed our correspondent that he would need the permission of a minister before she could process his request.

Our man then contacted by phone the assistant to Ronald Dart, Steve Martin. Mr. Martin hesitated considerably over the phone, apparently unable to reach a decision. When informed that the tape was being requested by AMBASSADOR REVIEW in an attempt to clarify several points of contradiction, Mr. Martin replied, "That's a shitty thing to do." (It is interesting to note that the only word of questionable usage that appears in our magazine has come from the mouth of a Worldwide Church of God minister.)

Unable to convey the fairness of our request over that type of protest, our correspondent had no choice but to terminate his end of the telephone conversation. Our re-recording facility informs us that copies of this tape-recorded conversation may be made available to the public if an apology does not reach our offended correspondent soon!

PROFILE OF A CULT

Los Angeles television station KTTV has investigated a number of cult groups on its news program ON TARGET. These have included: The Children of God, Krishna Consciousness, Love Israel Family, Sun Myung Moon, The Alamo Foundation and others.

Researcher-newsman, Larry Attebery, who does the series, says it is remarkable how divergent cults, with different teachings, leaders, dieties, rites and customs are so often identical in the psychological techniques and indoctrination methods they employ. He told AMBASSADOR REVIEW that he has observed four characteristics found in almost all cults:

1) ISOLATION

Cults encourage separation from non-member family and friends. Converts are told by their leaders that the "outside world" is evil and that they should not associate with it. They are discouraged from "contaminating themselves" by delving into other philosophies or religions.

2) NON-THINKING

No questions or thoughts against a cult are tolerated by its leaders and members. Self-hypnosis, meditations, chanting, constant use of slogans, repetition of key phrases and special prayer routines are some of the methods used to stop conscious, constructive thinking. Many cults encourage constant activity for members so that they do not even have the time to think or question.

3) ABSOLUTE OBEDIENCE

Cult members are taught to accept all orders from their superiors. In some groups even lying and stealing can thus be justified. According to Mr. Attebery, "All actions are justified in the name of God, because the group is God's tool, and all outsiders 'serve the devil'."

4) GIVING EVERYTHING

Cults encourage unrestrained, indiscriminate giving to the group's leadership. It is not unusual for a cult to coerce new members into giving all their money and possessions. It sometimes even includes signing over one's legal rights (especially inheritances).

For those interested in obtaining information on various cults we recommend that you write to:

Citizens Freedom Foundation
Chula Vista, California 92012

The C.F.F. (William M. Rambur, President) is an organization of concerned citizens, many of whom are former cult members, who are dedicated to exposing cults and supporting legal action against such groups. It is also lobbying for legislation designed to protect the public from the abuses of religious or pseudo-religious charlatanism. Its March 1976 newsbulletin lists 31 cult groups which it is investigating. The Worldwide Church of God is one of them.

Sacramento, California 95814

The cost for this service varies depending upon the number of copies desired and the size of the documents to be duplicated. They recommend that you send an open ended check with a "not to exceed $12.00" limit.

The church and college do not make these documents available to their members or the general public.

THE CREED OF THE UNHOLY TRINITY

"Thou shalt discretely worship Herbert, Ted and Stan all the days of thy sojourn in their beautiful garden which they have created with thy tithes. And thou shalt not cross them or say any manner of truth against them openly for their sake. And if thou wilt close thine eyes, stop thine ears, button thy mouth and dig deeply into thy pocket when thou hearest the oft recurring and hallowed words 'FINANCIAL CRISIS', 'OPEN DOOR' and 'GUN LAP' then thou hast truly become a dumb sheep, and thou wilt be able to explain away all the mysteries of why thou dost allow thy Trinity of Herbert, Ted and Stan to fleece thee cheerfully as thou dost. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad for great is their reward. By sacrificing thy mind, thy will and especially thy money, thy Trinity and Evangelists do indulge themselves in all the sins that thou, a dumb sheep, hast been forbidden on every Sabbath day."

LATE NEWS

Worldwide Church of God Pastor General, Herbert W. Armstrong, 85, recently told a number of senior college students at his home that he would not be marrying again even though he was in love. Mr. Armstrong has, during the past few years, been seen in the company of Ramona Martin and many have speculated that they would eventually marry. Mr. Armstrong told the students that both his son, Garner Ted, and his legal counsel, Stanley Rader, have strongly urged him not to remarry as marrying Ms. Martin, a woman approximately 50 years younger than he is, would only lead to much undesirable publicity for the church.

Dr. Charles V. Dorothy, Professor of Theology at Ambassador College, Pasadena and former Dean of Faculty at Ambassador College, Big Sandy, has been relieved of his faculty position by President Garner Ted Armstrong, in spite of his being a tenured Professor. In his Old Testament Survey course, he is to be replaced by that renowned Old Testament scholar and theologian, Ben Chapman. Mr. Chapman received his B.A. from Ambassador College, is a member of the Board of Trustees, a member of the Armstrong family, and is a defunct Data Processing department head.

As one can easily see from a survey of Ben's academic credentials, President Armstrong made a "wise" move in upgrading the Pasadena Faculty. This is another encouraging example of President Armstrong's program of "vigorously pursuing accreditation." Evidently, Ted has also been equally excited about vigorously pursuing doctrinal research, since he also scrapped the entire Theological Research Project under Dr. Dorothy's direction. We are certain that both the Western Association of Schools and Colleges and, especially, next year's Old Testament Survey students will be absolutely thrilled by the "progressive steps" which President Armstrong has taken!

RESPONSIBLE GIVING:

WHICH AGENCIES SHOULD YOU SUPPORT?

One purpose of simpler living is to free resources for sharing with others. But how can you be sure the money you give is being handled responsibly and for the purpose you intend? The following questions should offer some guidelines on choosing reputable organizations to receive your support.

1. Are the charity's purposes and goals worthwhile, and ones that you want to support?
2. Are they duplicating the ministries of your own denomination or of other respected organizations?
3. Are the executive staff and board members capable persons of known integrity? Is the board paid? (It shouldn't be.)
4. How much money actually goes to its ministry and how much to fund-raising and administration? (A reasonable range is 10-25 percent for fund-raising and administrative costs, but watch out for euphemisms in financial reports that may hide excessive expenditures in the wrong areas.)
5. Is the organization audited annually by an independent CPA firm, and are they willing to identify the firm?
6. Are the promotion efforts and reputation above reproach? (If you aren't sure, a call to the Better Business Bureau or a charity licensing bureau may help.)

7. Have they been offended by my honest questions'?

THE W.C.G. TALMUD

Editor: With all the changes that have taken place in the Worldwide Church of God in the last few years it is becoming increasingly difficult for members to know exactly what their church teaches. Until about three years ago most members knew the traditions of their church. Now, many are not so sure what they are.

The following list of do's and don't's was compiled by Ambassador graduate, Robert Gerringer. It represents some of the customs and traditions of the Worldwide Church of God up until about 1973. We're sure it will bring back a few memories. The editors are not, of course, necessarily recommending or endorsing any of the following:

Do not use medicines or drugs. Never wear sideburns below the middle of the ear, or comb your hair over the forehead. Never dance without holding your partner and don't wiggle your hips. Never listen to hard rock music. Do not contribute to charities (Easter Seals, March of Dimes, etc.). Women should wear skirts long enough to at least touch the top of the knee. Women must wear their hair long enough to cover the nape of the neck. Never vote in any elections. Never join a political party. Avoid doctors and hospitals. Never receive a blood transfusion. Do not donate blood. Never serve in the military in any capacity. Never celebrate Christmas, Easter, New Year's, Halloween, Valentines Day, St. Patrick's Day, or April Fool's. Celebrate Thanksgiving. Do not have more than two drinks a night. Don't be a teetotaler. Never wear make-up. Men should never wear a toupee or wig. Women can only wear wigs if they are bald. Never color your hair. Women should not wear pants (except for sports activities). Never ever smoke anything. Pray at least 30 minutes a day. Study your Bible at least thirty minutes a day. Fast and meditate regularly. Never join or remain a member of a "worldly" club (Elks, Lions, Kiwanis, etc.). Watch only movies rated G and occasionally PG. Do not observe Mother's Day in England (Mother's Day is OK in America). Do not earn a living as a policeman, judge, fireman, physician, elected official (except Mayor of Big Sandy), astronaut, gambler, concert musician, actor or ballet dancer. Never have a picture of "Christ", "God", "angels" or "saints." Women should not go braless. Women should not take "the Pill" or have an abortion. Do not allow your children to join the boy scouts or girl scouts. Children should not play "pretend" games. Women should not wear Tampons. Always take notes during church services. Never call a minister "Reverend." Never bring the "unconverted" to services without the minister's permission, this includes close relatives such as an unconverted mate and children over 16. Never co-sign for a loan. Do not wear heart shaped lockets. Beware of classical music written by demon inspired composers. Never serve on a jury. Never sign over your body for scientific study. Do not read the writings of philosophers such as Plato and Aristotle. Do not vote for or initiate a labor strike. Going to night clubs is allowed, in moderation. Do not have organ music in church. Men should not wear pink or flowery shirts. Children should not be allowed to read fairy tales or nursery rhymes. Single people should date widely. Never date a non-Worldwide Church of God member. Never neck on a date. If engaged, a good-night kiss is permissible, if not prolonged. Never hold hands unless married or engaged. When married, have sex only in the two approved positions; never kiss below the neck (pre-1960's), never kiss below the waist (pre-1975). Dentists are OK. Novocain is OK. Antibiotics are not OK. Immunizations are not OK. Only unmarried women should be employed. Never date or marry outside your race. The races should be segregated whenever possible. Men should not wear beards. Do not eat maraschino cherries. Never get a tattoo. Avoid "Protestant type" hymns. Minimize contact with non-believers. Use olive oil and wine on sores. For weddings, use only the Herbert Armstrong approved ceremony. Card playing is OK. Never listen to "soul music". Have only a graveside service at funerals. Never wear or own a crucifix. Never sign a letter "in Jesus' Name" unless you are a minister. Church buildings should not have steeples or stained glass windows. Never build or own an obelisk. Never celebrate birthdays. Don't go into partnerships in business. Never say "God bless you" when someone sneezes (in fact, never say "God bless you"). Always buy "quality". Strive to become "cultured". Do not break an engagement to be married. Always get a minister's advice before making any important decisions (changing a job, marrying, selling your home, etc.). Never go along with new styles or trends until at least 50% of the public has adopted them. Never be a leader in setting styles or trends. Never support or attend the services of any Catholic or Protestant church. (The Catholic Church is the "great whore" of Revelation. It is Satan's church and Protestant churches are its children.) Do not listen to preachers who teach contrary to the W.C.G. doctrines. Do not practice vegetarianism. Do not have your body cremated. Women should not wear two-piece bathing suits and especially not bikinis. Men should not wear tight bathing suits (in England only). Do not engage in sky diving (before David Armstrong's interest in same). Never chew tobacco. Do not speculate in stocks or bonds. Never ever use "unnatural" farming methods (chemical fertilizers, pesticides, etc.). Never act in, direct, produce or write a drama. Never hypnotize anyone or be hypnotized. Do not celebrate the 4th of July (pre-1965). Do not adopt children. Do not have your ears pierced. Make ample use of corporal punishment in rearing children. Do not use euphemisms such as gosh, darn or gee. Do not create or own "modern" art. Sex on Friday night is OK for married people. Never go to a psychiatrist.

ARMSTRONGISM-RELIGION OR RIP-OFF?

by Marion J. McNair

This three-part volume is a thoroughly documented expose of the modus operandi of the Armstrong religion. The author, Marion J. McNair, is eminently qualified for the task of analyzing this sect as he has been associated with the Armstrong organization for over thirty years. Mr. McNair first attended Ambassador College as one of its pioneer students in 1948 and was eventually ordained to the rank of Evangelist. During the last seventeen years he has been a part of the administrative ranks of the organization at its headquarters in Pasadena.

In Part I, Mr. McNair analyzes the subtle psychological approach used to entice unsuspecting individuals into "the Work." He discusses the "Armstrong commission" and how exorbitant expenditures are rationalized and justified with minimal accountability to contributors. Complete profiles are given of Garner Ted and Herbert Armstrong along with all the top men who helped build the Armstrong empire. For this and other parts of the volume, the author collaborated with a professional psychologist who provides considerable insight into the soul of the Armstrong philosophy and approach.

Part II analyzes the early beginnings of the organization showing the real conflict in Herbert Armstrong's relationship with the Oregon Church of God. You will find that they pleaded with him to study in open discussions his "heresies" in the areas of British-Israelism, prophecy, and holy days, but that he continually refused such overtures. You will be astounded to discover that Armstrong was finally fired from the ministry because of his mishandling of finances and his total disregard for church authority. His move to California was forced upon him by his continual prophesy failures and the desertion of most of his church. He thus achieved a new base of operations, one unfamiliar with his massive prophecy debacles. It was this new base which became Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God.

Part III reveals the details of the 1973-74 organizational split, a split which is still continuing. You will see the entire episode from behind the scenes, showing the true concerns of the Armstrongs during the crisis.

This important book succeeds in exposing the totalitarianism of the Armstrong regime. It reaches beyond the facade and reveals what the Armstrong "Rip-off" is and how it works.

AMBASSADOR REPORT is published by and for alumni, students, faculty, and friends of Ambassador College. It has grown out of the increasing need for a response to the misinformation contained in many official Ambassador College and Worldwide Church of God publications.

AMBASSADOR REPORT has the following purposes:

- o It assesses the foundational philosophies of Ambassador College and their effect on Ambassador College students. In short, it examines the "Ambassador Experience."
- o It brings to light many of Ambassador College's biggest problems which have been too long covered up.
- o It presents solutions to Ambassador College's problems and encourages drastically needed changes at Ambassador College and, to a degree, in the church which directly influences it.
- o It is dedicated to prodding the leadership of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God which supports and controls it, to change the practices and policies which are bringing worldwide discredit to Ambassador College.

We welcome and encourage suggestions from our readers regardless of political, religious, or philosophical persuasion, and we warmly welcome all contributions to our efforts.

About This Issue

Garner Ted Armstrong and his unique gospel have, in recent years, been the subject of articles appearing in numerous publications, including Time, Harper's, Penthouse, Christianity Today, Coronet, People, Esquire, the New York Times, and the Los Angeles Times. That he should be the subject of so many articles is not surprising. He is an articulate, authoritative-sounding, colorful personality whose dynamic voice is heard daily by millions. What is surprising, however, is that, until now, no publication has ever told the whole Garner Ted Armstrong story.

In this issue of Ambassador Report are three articles which deal directly with this well-known radio and television evangelist. What emerges clearly from these three articles is a portrait of a man who is not only strikingly different from his calculated public image but who lives a life which is at total variance with the message he preaches. The dichotomy is so great that one is tempted to believe that here, in Garner Ted, the hypocrisy of Sinclair Lewis' Elmer Gantry is actually surpassed. His portrait would be a burlesque if it were not so pathetically factual. It is when we see in the lives of thousands the tragic consequences of the Armstrong operation that we realize the true character of the portrait.

There may be some who will argue that Garner Ted's sex life is his own business and that we should therefore not expose his immorality. Frankly, we would prefer that Garner Ted's sex life be his own business. But he has made it our business by setting himself up as God's personal representative and telling you, me, and the rest of this world how we should live our lives. While taking the public's money as a "minister of Jesus Christ" and using the public airwaves to preach the Ten Commandments and repentance, he leads a life that is the very antithesis of all Christian virtue. The way he lives his life shows all of us he really doesn't believe his own message. Our goal is not to decry his humanity but to expose his hypocrisy and by doing so spare others the consequences we and thousands of others have suffered as a result of putting our trust in him.

The many letters we have received in the past year testify to the bitter fruit of the Armstrong cult. We have reprinted a number of these in our Letters section. Also, in this issue we are printing a number of articles which expose the real effects of and the true spirit behind the Armstrong organization. Besides a highly informative, exclusive interview with Bobby Fischer are articles which document the Worldwide Church of God's misuse of charity monies, the Armstrongs' reluctance to meet the requirements of accreditation, the unethical transfer of corporate funds to the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, the intimidation of contributors through the misuse of computer information, the secret monitoring of college classrooms, and the real story behind the Worldwide Church of God's many doctrinal changes.

We, of course, cannot deny that there is a positive side to Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God. A tour of Ambassador's campus (the last remaining one) will reveal not only beautiful grounds but also some fine, enthusiastic students. A visit to a Worldwide Church of God service will reveal friendly, smiling faces. One can even find numerous individuals who will attest that in one way or another they have actually profited physically, financially, or spiritually from certain of the Armstrong teachings.

We're thankful that one can find a positive side to the "Ambassador Experience." We believe this issue will show, however, that that positive side has, over the years, been grossly exaggerated by the Armstrongs and that the vast negative side with its many tragic facets has been swept under the carpet by the Armstrong organization.

We hoped to accomplish more than simply exposing Ambassador College's negative side. It has been our desire to prod Ambassador's leadership into making those changes which we believe are vital to its survival. For over fifteen months we attempted to arrange a meeting with President Armstrong to present and discuss several positive affirmative-action proposals. It seems, however, that every time we attempted to contact him, President Armstrong was either "in a meeting" or simply "not in." Our phone calls to him were never returned. Our numerous letters to him were never answered. On two occasions we contacted the college's CPA and chief counsel, Stanley Rader, and asked that he relay to Mr. Armstrong our request for a meeting. Mr. Armstrong never responded.

I personally contacted Jim Thornhill, Ted Armstrong's closest friend, and asked him to relay to Ted our request for a meeting. He assured me he would pass the message on, but Mr. Armstrong never responded. We contacted Ralph Helge, legal counsel for the Worldwide Church of God, and asked him to mention to President Armstrong that we would like to meet with him. He assured us that the message would be delivered. Still Mr. Armstrong did not respond. We called the managing editor of The Plain Truth. He expressed doubt that the meeting we were requesting could be arranged, but he agreed to deliver the message. Again, there was no response.

We had been willing to meet with President Armstrong at any time and under any circumstances. The meeting could have been structured as a formal debate before the Pasadena student body, it could have been a friendly question and answer session before the Pasadena church congregation, or simply an informal chat over lunch. We didn't care. We simply wanted to present what we feel are some of the solutions to Ambassador's survival problem. Of course, we also hoped to give Ted Armstrong the opportunity to tell his side of the story regarding the many charges against him of serious personal misconduct. This, he has repeatedly refused to do.

In Ambassador Review (Ambassador Report's predecessor), the question was asked: Will Ambassador College survive the '70s? After another year of observing the college's inability to legitimize itself, its Board of Trustees' unwillingness to execute their responsibilities, and its administration's unresponsiveness to the real needs of the students or the problems of its alumni, our answer to that question is "No, it probably will not survive." And, if the attitude and character of its President, Garner Ted Armstrong, is indicative of the spirit which permeates it, then we would further add: "Ambassador College should not survive."

It is our hope that Ambassador Report will awaken many of those who are financially supporting Ambassador College into realizing exactly what it is they are supporting. Those of us who have gone to the Armstrong well and drunk of it know that its waters are not only bitter but poisonous. For us, the production of this report has been mentally and emotionally therapeutic. We only hope and pray that this issue's contents will spare others the expense, pain, and futility of the "Ambassador Experience."

Letters

The following excerpts and condensations represent only a small portion of the letters we received during the past year. The original copies are on file with the Report. The names of the correspondents have been omitted to protect their privacy. A number of letters refer to Ambassador Review, the predecessor of Ambassador Report. They are included because of their relevance to this publication.

The Cover Set the Theme

The cover set the theme - the roaring lion devouring the innocent ones, trampling Christ under foot, and there can be no doubt you've told it the way it is. Hope you boys and girls are wearing your bulletproof vests. They wouldn't even need John 16:2 for an excuse!

Australia

I certainly enjoyed the first edition of Ambassador Review and am looking forward to receiving the second edition with great anticipation. Prior to receiving the first edition, I had done considerable personal research on the Pasadena situation, and 80% to 90% of the material contained was no surprise to me and fully corroborated my findings. The remainder of the material contained was shocking, to say the least, but through continued interim research it has also proven to be factual.

Arizona

After working at Ambassador College and supporting it with close to 26% of my income for over 15 years, I must say that while I love the people there, there is less and less regard for the truth at Ambassador College. Expediency reigns supreme in the college and the church that supports it....

No college can long exist to serve the public which attempts to hide and suppress truth in a Hitlerian fashion. No college that muzzles faculty members as does Ambassador College can be recapturing true values. Please, Ambassador Review, I beg you as a [WCG] member in good standing to do all you can to help wake up or remove the leaders at Ambassador who are ruining Ambassador College. Please do all you can to help make it a shining light to the community - an institution dedicated to serving mankind.

California

Although I am quite loyal to the WCG, I nonetheless find your magazine of interest. This is mainly because I am in the habit of thinking for myself.

I really felt compelled to send a letter to WASC [Western Association of Schools and Colleges]. I am a senior here at AC [Ambassador College] and I care a great deal about this school. The church and the college are my life - not just a passing thing.

Although I detect a bit of bitterness in the June 1976 Ambassador Review, I still consider it a worthy contribution in stimulating the Worldwide Church. If only you had remained members! [Editor's Note: Many on the Report staff are members.] This church needs all the thinking people it can get. Like any loyal member, I am concerned with building, not tearing down the institution. And I personally feel that academic and religious freedom would be a step in the right direction. I look forward to your next issue. Thank you for an interesting magazine.

Ambassador College Student,
California

Editor: Readers may wish to write WASC at the following address: Western Association of Schools and Colleges, Accrediting Commission for Sr. Colleges, Mills College, Oakland, CA 94613.

We have, within the last few days, been handed a copy of the Ambassador Review. WOW! After reading it, we are sick to realize how misguided we've been all these years.

We have talked to two ministers and have been deeply hurt by their lack of concern for our "salvation." They refused to help us with our questions. One said we were crazy, that we were only looking for a way out, which is not true. They have both warned us to keep our mouths SHUT.

Florida

I can't tell you how happy I am that someone is doing something about the Armstrong's. I have been a member of the WCG for the last 24 years, and I regret every nickel I ever gave them.

Florida

I feel badly because I worked for a man-god for over 10 years. Five of those years I was a local elder. I finally got my mind back. I found I didn't need the flying tit - you didn't put me on your list of those who have left mother Herbert!

It has been said you check your brain at the door when you go into Worldwide. This I believe.

Washington, D.C.

We were baptized members of the WCG since 1953, and for 22 years we devoted our whole lives to it. I was a deacon and sacrificed family, time and money to the point of losing my health and nearly lost my home before my closest friend left the church and had us listen to a couple of Dr. Martin's tapes. We cut ourselves free just two weeks after signing a "loyalty to the Armstrong" list. It was just like coming out of a dark dungeon into the light.

Editor. Readers may wish to write to Dr. Ernest Martin at the following address: Foundation for Biblical Research, P. O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102. Phone (213) 793-1144.

There was an article in the first issue of Ambassador Review which shocked me very much. As I understood the letter and paragraphs in the magazine, the purpose was to point out and help clear up wrong practices and thus help it (the college) keep going. It was not shown that it was to support another religious sect, and the article about the Catholic Church being the right and only one was entirely out of line, I thought. I hope nothing like it will be in future issues.

Montana

Editor: A few have written to us saying they were confused by the article you refer to. The author attempted to demonstrate that if Herbert Armstrong's arguments for proving the Worldwide Church of God is the one true church are taken seriously, they would much more logically point to the Roman Catholic church as the true church than to the WCG. The article was written in a satirical manner to point out the discrepancies in the WCG's reasoning.

Well, some of your information did not prove too factual, like that about D. J. Hill, did it? Also there is a rumor going around that Messrs. Portune and Plache are coming back into the fold. It would be nice to be kept up to date.

Canada

Editor: You're right. In fact, Mr. Trevor Higgins wrote informing us that he is still in the WCG. Our apologies to him for accidentally including his name in the "Executive Exodus" list in our 1976 issue.

As for the names you mentioned and others that have come to our attention, let us explain. We have discovered that in many cases it is virtually impossible to know whether some individuals are in or out of the WCG. For instance, in 1976 Richard Plache not only resigned from the WCG, but he also condemned it openly in the Los Angeles Times and began working for the Foundation for Biblical Research. Now, we hear he is again attending WCG Sabbath services, although apparently he is not on their payroll or preaching. We find this all a bit confusing as he also occasionally attends Sunday services at a local Protestant church. We're not criticizing him for any of this. We're simply pointing out that it is difficult to know whether some are actively supporting the Armstrong cult or not.

Al Portune has told us he is not planning to return to the Armstrong sect, church rumors and announcements notwithstanding.

Jon Hill has repeatedly by public conduct and private comment indicated that he is no longer an Armstrong "true believer." Yet, his name still appears in The Plain Truth staff box, and we have no reason to believe he is not being paid for his services.

In this issue we have updated the "Executive Exodus," adding a few names we previously neglected and deleting any which were in any way questionable.

Lost House and Job

I became ensnared in the Armstrong spider web in 1964 and became one of the leading men in the local church, and I still can't believe all the double standards of the leadership in their empire.

The nine years of life in the WCG were the most miserable years in my life, also the most costly. Money wise, tithes cost me about $10,000. I also lost my new home because I couldn't pay Armstrong and make house payments too. So I blindly followed the teachings of the Armstrongs and lost my home. I also lost my job that I had been in for 10½ years because of all the time I had to be absent because of the commands of the church. My family and I lived in poverty for the rest of the time we were in the church. I finally started asking questions and couldn't get any answers from the church in 1971 and made my escape in 1973. Life has been getting better every day since.

England

After spending 15 years and over $25,000 in donations, we are grateful to have retained our sanity, our marriage, and close relations with our children and family. Not all ex-members were so fortunate....

Washington

I have been reading the literature you sent me. I admire the stand you are taking. Keep it up. You may never know just how many you have helped. It really hurts to think that the money you so carefully scraped up and sent in [to the WCG] was used so uselessly. Many times I went without necessities "just to help the church." Now I am in my eightieth year, and if they knew I was reading your literature, they would disfellowship me without mercy.

Canada

My wife and I were involved for about 8 years with the Worldwide Church of God and during this time sent them $100 to $150 per month. We are now trying to extricate ourselves from the large debt incurred doing this and feel any small amount we are able to send to try and correct the terrible burden so many people suffer under would be a right and proper thing to do

Costs a Lot to Run a Church

I would like to tell you of just one of my experiences with the WCG. About two years ago when I found out about the Armstrongs and read about tithing, I quit tithing but continued to give freewill offerings. The minister who had just moved here from Atlanta (Mr. Wooten) found out I was no longer tithing (obviously from a computer readout) and told me in no uncertain terms that since I was not tithing I should not occupy a seat [in church] . He said it costs a lot of money to run a church. This, after I had contributed over $50,000 in the 12 years I was in the WCG. Not only this, but all literature from the WCG (Plain Truth, etc.) was immediately stopped.

Arkansas

I am 84 years old and I am a cripple, walking with two canes. I fell off a house roof onto a cement pavement, breaking and damaging my right hip. I have been rather emotional in regards to the church. I had built up a nest egg for my retirement. Armstrong had me believing that the end was near and he made appeal after appeal for funds for the work of God. I kept giving him extra each time, a thousand or two each time, until my savings were gone. I had 720 shares of Tsoro Oil stock which was a fast growing company. I was pretty well fixed for my retirement. I signed this over to the Worldwide Church to be used in God's work.

Knowing what I know now, I think you will find this stock in Armstrong's or Rader's portfolio. I never even received thanks for it. There was no receipt, only papers for me to sign and send back. I know I have been a sucker, for I have given the Worldwide Church over $50,000.

Pennsylvania

The following are my notes taken on a sermon given by Mr. John Pruner, pastor of the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, church on November 13, 1971. Although we were subsequently asked to destroy our sermon notes, this was one set I felt I had to keep. Mr. Pruner made it very clear that we, as church members, did not have to contribute offerings strictly according to the percentages given in the sermon, but it was strongly suggested by headquarters that we do:

"Am I Handling My Finances God's Way?"

A. What does God Require From My Income?

1. First tithe - 10% of gross income --Lev. 27:30.
2. Second tithe - 10% of gross income - Deut. 12:5. Never borrow.
3. Third tithe - 10% of gross income - Deut. 26:12-15.
4. Regular offerings - should be 3% of gross income - Mal. 3:8.
5. Holy Day Offerings - should be 4% of gross income -- Deut. 16:16
6. Emergency Fund - send this directly to headquarters (no percentage given) - Deut. 15.
7. Fourth Year Fruit From Trees - Lev. 19:23, 25.
8. Firstfruits - Deut. 18:3-5. Don't give firstfruits to ministers, but estimate the value and send the money to headquarters.
9. Firstborn Male of Cattle - send money to headquarters.
10. Firstborn child - buy back with an offering sent to headquarters.

B. What Should We Voluntarily Contribute to God's Work?

1. Building Fund - 4% of gross income
2. Tithe of Tithe - 10% of second tithe
3. Loans to the Work
4. Gifts to the church
5. Special Emergency Gifts when the Work is in trouble
6. Library Fund
7. Recreational Fund
8. Spokesman Club Dues
9. Social Fund

Pennsylvania

A friend received his Ambassador Review copy and let us read it. It's great! Hope it does some good. We thought we had so many friends in the WCG, but you guessed it, we didn't. Herbert W. Armstrong managed in 11 years to get all the money he could get out of us. So now in retirement we have no nest egg, only a lot of regrets. But I think now we've discovered we have a Savior, and it isn't HWA!

Missouri

In the beginning of "AICF" [Ambassador International Cultural Foundation] , I donated $750.00, which included a subscription to Human Potential. Also, there were requests for donations to support "Personal Campaigns" by headquarters in the Jacksonville area. To this I donated $300.00. As you know, neither the Human Potential magazine or the Jacksonville campaigns became a reality. The above are two of many such rip-offs.

Florida

I was captivated by the Armstrongs' broadcasts in 1959 and came to believe their claim that they were the one and only true church of God. At their insistence, I resigned my Air Force Reserve majority commission and pension rights, and later gave up my job with the Navy at a missile plant because the church frowned on work in the armament industry. This entailed loss of civil service pension rights. I leased 80 acres of land, went to work farming for a living, and gave myself over completely to serving one who led me to believe he was a true apostle of God. I served diligently and was later made a deacon in the local church.

In 1972 in a private conversation with a newly assigned minister, Bruce Vance, I mentioned that among other lesser doctrinal errors, they were keeping the Feast of Pentecost on the wrong day - that it should be on Sunday instead of Monday. He disfellowshipped me on the spot and later "marked" me to keep others from having any contact with me. No considerations whatever were made for my sacrifices for the church and many years of faithful service. He just completely cut me off. At no time had I ever been disrespectful or incorrect in my contact with him. When the church itself, a couple of years later, admitted their error and changed the day of observing Pentecost, they never came to apologize or to ask me back.

Mississippi

Nearly a Suicide

Our son nearly committed suicide three times, and we finally were forced to help him get some help through the state mental health department. He had been an honor student, selected for the National Honor Society, in music, an officer in several high school clubs, winner of speech and other contests in 4-H clubs, etc. He ranked in the 99 percentile on college aptitude tests, and he won a full scholarship to an Oklahoma university where he went for one year.

Our son gave up the fully paid scholarship to go to Ambassador College to learn "true knowledge." He was the first member of our family to be a member of the WCG, and he felt they were sincere in their seeking truth.

He had an inheritance to use for college purposes or vocational training. The ministers told him he had to pay 10% of it as a tithe to the church. Another 10% was to be used for church conventions (feasts), and another 10% every three years had to be paid out of his inheritance for third tithes. I objected, for the money was not income, increase from labor or investments. The money was a gift/inheritance to be used for educational or vocational needs.... But they told my son to give it and he gave it.

What did the minister tell me as a result of my bringing the question to him and disagreeing with his instruction? He said I was the same as being in defiance to God himself, and that we needed to do what the ministers said, right or wrong, because Herbert W. Armstrong set the rules and he was God's only personal representative speaking the truth in this age since the original apostles. They told me I had never had an answered prayer and never heard any truth until I had come to the WCG. (Now we were beginning to hear what the WCG really taught which they refused to tell us before we started to go to their church.) They taught that it was our duty to follow the instructions of the ministry, regardless if it was right or wrong. The duty of the laymember was to obey and not question, and the responsibility of God was to remove the man from office if he was teaching wrong. We were told if we went contrary to what they said, we would lose our only chance at eternal life and burn in hell because now was our chance to have salvation, for they were the only true church and the only true ministers following Jesus Christ.

At first our son was happy to be in [Ambassador] College. It was sort of a big family all loving one another and feeling superior to the "ignorant blind" who did not know all those super things. He became arrogant. When he had problems, he would call home to discuss them, but when the "ministers or seniors" would tell him different answers, he naturally followed their counsel. He was being taught that he knew nothing right from his childhood training and that all his former education was wrong. He was told that nothing he had learned through his earlier years could be right because he had not been a member of the WCG and his parents had not been members. He had gone to a "harlot church" where no truth could have been gotten.

So our son rejected all the Bible he had (previously) heard read, especially from the New Testament, and when trials started coming two years later he had nothing to lean upon, having rejected all he had before he went to AC at age 19.... Mental confusion, mental disillusionment was the result!

Ambassador College, we found, was not interested in developing the true potential of the students, except as they could serve the needs of the WCG. When they found out his talents were not such as to serve the church, they asked him to leave after two years to do something else or go to some other college. But his credit hours did not fit into any of his previously chosen fields (and wouldn't have been accepted at any other college anyway), and now his college money was almost gone.

Having no education or vocational training to get a decent job, having all his money used on first, second, and third tithes, he had nothing left to start over on.

Also, at that time, if you did not "make it into the ministry," you were considered a failure and "lost your chance" at really amounting to anything. An inferiority complex ensued, and he became more and more a mental case.

They also taught that a man should hate himself, consider himself as dung!... Our son tried several things, but one blank wall came to another blank wall and one mental/emotional attitude led to another until he came to a complete dead end, suicidal, no hope situation in his own mind... Our son had a third mental breakdown before he could start upward to restoration. He hopes in a few more years to be back to where he was before he went to Ambassador College.

the mother of an Ambassador College student
(state not for publication)

My two eldest sons are both members of the Armstrong group, and the first literature you sent out was confiscated by them. Perhaps they informed you not to send any more. That is not so. Enclosed is $20. Please send the first material again and any that you have published since. Our family has suffered much because of this cult, and our eldest boy suffered mental and emotional derangement for two years. He was in torment and depression constantly, and we are still paying off the hospital bills. However, he did not leave the group. Our second son has started down the same trail, but our two youngest sons have seen what happened to their brothers and are very wary. What we can't understand is why they can't realize what they are doing to their lives. They seem to be totally brainwashed. Is there some way we can help them?

Minnesota

What really got the ball rolling for me was a book my wife brought home after she started back to work in mid-November of last year. In fact there were three of them. I had always thought that the identification of the United States and Great Britain was a sign that Herbert W. was a prophet, since I had always had a question in my mind about the greatness of these countries, which had to have a biblical explanation. That fateful night, she came in with Allen's Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright (1902), Rutherford's Britain-Israel and another by Gayer - all of which predated Armstrong. Then I knew he was a liar and a thief as well, since he did not footnote a single reference....

Separated Five Years

My husband and I were separated by the church for about five years from January 1961 to the winter of 1966. It was then decided we were married after all. Our separation caused a great financial hardship on us and necessitated my seeking employment at the age of 54. My husband's health was not good, and he suffered a heart injury around the fall of 1965. They [the WCG] let me nurse him, but as soon as he was on his feet I had to leave. At first I was allowed to be his housekeeper but later this was changed because "it caused a stumbling block to others." This separation caused severe mental and physical problems which are still with us to some degree. We are slowly overcoming the fear with which we were brainwashed from 1952 to 1974.

In 1971 my husband went on social security, and the minister said we had to tithe on the checks. It was the last half year of our "Third Tithe" year, and it took all of his monthly social security check to meet the three tithes. Living on my salary alone meant we borrowed money and while at it we borrowed $300 extra to send in to headquarters when the call came from there asking for help - beg, borrow (and they should have added "steal") whatever we could. We sold some property and tithed on it, though it was sold at a loss and the money used to purchase it had already been tithed on. My husband took a cash retirement settlement, from the state instead of getting monthly checks. Reason? 1972 - only the church needed money. He also tithed on this cash settlement, though it had already been tithed on each month he was working. Altogether, we gave about $30,000 to the Armstrong syndicate.

Incidentally, we did not leave the organization for any of the above reasons, but because when we stopped "taking their word for it" and really studied the Bible, we found so much error in their doctrines. After questioning some subjects, word came back to us that people in the church were being warned, "Steer clear of the .....s. They are on shaky ground." Even the deacons and deaconess (with whom I had been close) turned their backs on us before and after services and would give no explanation when I asked why. Our Bible says Christ is love, and such treatment was entirely unscriptural. This was the final straw and we left.

As a direct result of the erroneous "Divorce and Remarriage" edict of the perfect, prestigious, prescient Pasadena prophet, Herbert W. Armstrong, I lived (?) alone from 1963 onward. Though divorced, I could not remarry. This momentous decision was given me personally by Raymond C. Cole and James L. Friddle, at that time two of HWA's top men.

Later, to add insult to injury, in the fall of 1964, I was ordered by James L. Lichtenstein, then HWA's personal rep. in our area, to quit my job. I was a civil servant at the local Air Force base. I did so, thus walking away from a well-paying job and security, giving up fifteen years of creditable Federal Civil Service, a liberal sick and annual leave system, and a good retirement. HWA's Worldwide Church of God justified this edict by stating that members' employment with any phase of the Department of Defense conflicted with their policy that no one was to serve their country in the military service. This was also expected to "avoid trouble for the church" in the future.

In the ensuing years I first worked for a fellow WCG member as a farmhand for 2½ years and at various part-time or seasonal low-paying jobs. Now I am at the age where when I approach a prospective employer, hat and application in hand, they very subtly reach for the 11-foot pole.

In retrospect, I personally learned two things of great value in my thirteen years as a member of the WCG: (1) How to live poor. (2) Why one should never bend over for any individual or group.

What has always disturbed me about Armstrongism is the way children were treated. I can still hear their pitiful cries as they were abused by their own parents. Future zombies, mental and physical wrecks, sadists and criminals are bound to come out of it. I was in Pasadena only nine months and I believe I went into shock almost immediately.

The first week I was there, in 1969, a young man and an older man who had to leave their wives committed suicide.

Washington

When my son was about 14 or 15 years old, I was invited to one of the Ladies' evenings of the Spokesmen's Club, and Mr. Robin Jones was the minister there. He came to me just before we went home and told me to tell my son Paul to get his hair cut. Actually, it wasn't long, just slightly longer at the back.... I told Mr. Jones that Paul said if he had it any shorter they would laugh at him at school. Do you know what Mr. Jones said to me? He said if he did not have it cut, my son, as young as he was, was to be thrown out of his home! I was really upset and worried.... I thank God that I didn't do as that so-called minister of God told me to do.

You see... I lost my husband when Paul was 6½ years old, and I can tell you he was bewildered and very uncertain and worried about losing me as I was all he had left.

Dr. Martin helped us both through a very difficult time in our lives, and I owe much to his kindness to us.

England

The minister was elated that we asked him to come visit us. We had a son who was attending Ambassador College and felt they were a sincere group of people.... Many of my questions the minister evaded. He said we'd learn the answers later....

The first thing the minister did was ask if we were a divorce-and-remarriage situation. I had been, 20 years before, married to another man who had been a fornicator and left me and our three children.

The minister said that since I'd been remarried... he would have to know all the exact pre-divorce details. Because, if certain things were true, then before my husband and I could be baptised, we would have to separate.

The minister said I must come in for a conference to tell my story and that I must have someone that could testify that the facts were true. MY husband was very enraged that the ministers would put me through this ordeal. I had to go back and tell them everything that happened 25 years or so before.... they quizzed me about all the extremely personal morbid details. Finally they decided that my husband and I did not have to get a divorce to be in the church. But I had to get a man who could confirm my testimony to write what he knew.... He was a "friend" of my ex-husband who had run around with him from early childhood and knew all his past activities.

My husband and I, married around 20 years or so at that time, were one of the lucky ones, as were our children. But the grief and sorrow of some who had been forced to divorce because of some foolish childhood marriage was always around.... The children were torn from parents who loved them and who loved one another. These distraught people would talk to me again and again. I could sympathize because it almost happened to us! I did not think it was scriptural. It seemed a cruel misinterpretation of the Scriptures. But I tried not to judge what they were doing because at that time I was still in ignorance....

Another example was... a nice lady with two children. She said her husband had briefly been married (about a month) to a girl when very young.... Because of this they were told they had to separate and no longer be man and wife.... the children were shifted between husband and wife. At church, the ministers recommended that they merely talk to one another and try to avoid this as much as possible because it would only hurt them worse.

Eventually this woman moved to another town with the children to try to make the separation more endurable. They suggested that the woman try to find another husband, but the man was forever barred from remarrying as long as his first wife lived....

Later, in 1974, the WCG changed the policy and decided to no longer do this. But it was too late for those that had been forced to divorce and marry someone else.

Just received Ambassador Review and it's just great. I wish it had been in existence before we ever heard of "god Armstrong." I'm sure my life would have been so different. To obey "god Armstrong" has cost me my health and has caused disharmony with my husband (where-to-fore we had a very happy marriage - but now it's almost hell). Also, my family has disowned me.

I used to listen to Garner Ted Armstrong speak of his happy marriage and "How to Have a Happy Marriage" until I was almost green with envy. And then one of Armstrong's ex-ministers told me that Shirley (GTA's wife) had attempted suicide at least twice, because of her unhappy marriage and GTA's adultery. I can't for the life of me see how GTA and HWA can lie down at night and go to sleep knowing how they have conned the people out of so much, not to mention the deception. My heart aches for them with grief.

Texas

We were members of the WCG and dropped out five years ago because I didn't agree with their teachings. My husband and I fought like dogs and cats over it. They told my husband he might just have to put me away. Shortly after that we left the WCG and have learned much since....

Washington

I was a member of the WCG from February 1968 until December 1975. Today I am separated from my wife, and she has my youngest daughter and I have the three oldest children. She was baptized at the same time I was, and she blames "The Organization" for our separation and for wrecking our children's lives as well as our own.

I feel the biggest problem was that I gave a large amount of tithes and offerings, which in turn kept us at a poor level of living for seven years. Since I left "the Church," I have almost doubled my income and do not pay tithes and have a better life except for the longing and pain I have to go through because my wife of 18 years is no longer with us.

Takes Action

In early December I called on the manager of radio station WGL, the oldest station in Ft. Wayne. I had a talk with him and accused the WCG of taking money under false pretenses. I also left him my copy of Ambassador Review. I have since learned that their contract with the Worldwide Church has been canceled. Would you please send me an additional copy of Ambassador Review? I will personally call upon the manager of another radio station carrying the GTA broadcast and also leave a copy of Ambassador Review with him....

Indiana

I am fighting for the lives of these pitiful victims of this vicious cult and remember that four of the slaves are my children and grandchildren whom I love dearly.... I am aiding the Citizens Freedom Foundation and the Committee Engaged in Freeing Minds in their struggle to expose all the cults (right now the emphasis is on "Rev." Moon). However, as soon as they finish Moon off (and even now they are listing the WCG as a cult to be exposed), they will start on the others.

What Made Us Do It?

Even literature critical of the WCG unsettles, embarrasses, reminds me too much. From my point of view the "Ambassador experience" was a debacle, and my loud counsel to all of you who are expending the present portion of your very finite lifespans pursuing it is, Stop.

While an expose of the Armstrong operation's malfeasance will probably serve the end of reducing the number of their loyal adherents, a survey of the "Ambassador experience" surely ought not to scant consideration of the broad philosophical and psychological curiosities inherent in it. My correspondence with fellow apostates from the WCG frequently revolves around the question: What made us do it?

Indeed, not the least disturbing rumination on the "experience" is that we had or have the proclivity to it. A basic lack of reasonable humility (giving us the sense of God's scrutiny), a fear of error (leading to a surrender of personal autonomy), and a disgusting dilettantism and lack of patience, among many other things, brought us to affiliate with this man whose character is like ours in kind but different in degree by several orders of magnitude. Perhaps it is the fact that we see in Herbert Armstrong a caricature of ourselves that leads us, one fine day, to recoil from him.

I should be pleased if you would publish this as it speaks to a need to examine not just Armstrong but the climate in which he thrives - it examines the "cause rather than the effect," so to speak....

Your editorial policy on the matter seems obscure, but I have nothing to fear from exposure of these views in association with my name.

R. Stephen Estes, "B.A."
A.C., Big Sandy, Texas (1973)

After twelve years of the WCG. I'm left financially drained, spiritually empty.... my home broken up by divorce, and alienated from my former friends. Can such an organization be of God? I think not and pray the day of reckoning may soon come for the Armstrongs.

Iowa

I just received your letter and was very happy with the news of the forthcoming, larger issue of Ambassador Review. Exposing the corruption of the WCG is not a pleasant nor an easy task (especially since many or perhaps most of its members will refuse to believe the truth about their so-called "Mother"), but surely it is a necessary one. The Administration led by the Armstrongs is great in coverup and in "telling it like it isn't." I noticed recently there has been an increased effort to encourage - inspire - or otherwise induce members to tithe and contribute more generously. Letters were solicited to show the blessings of tithing. Circular reasoning is called upon to "prove" their point. When a tithe payer is blessed, it is attributed to tithing. When a tithe payer is not blessed, it is blamed on a bad attitude or lack of faith. For fourteen years, my family and I faithfully paid our tithes: First, Second, Third [tithes] , Tithe of a Tithe, gave offerings to the point of sacrifice, borrowed money to give when requested and our attitude was only the desire to give more, if possible, for the "Work." But where were the blessings? I lost jobs to keep "holy days," forfeited a career, and nearly "gave" myself and family into bankruptcy. The blessings surely must have been spirit and invisible, as we never saw them.

Members of the WCG call their beliefs "The Truth." We called the WCG "the True Church" and Mr. Herbert Armstrong was called "God's apostle." It was painful to learn that the WCG was not true, not a church, and not of God, at least not any more so than any other group or organization which may have made similar claims. We who left the WCG were accused of "abandoning ship," but the truth is, and Worldwide members should be made aware, that the Armstrongs and the hierarchial administration abandoned them long ago. The Bible was replaced by church literature and Armstrong (or Headquarters) interpretation, the apostles were replaced by HWA, and the church, the work, and great commission were elevated in priority and importance above even God Himself.

When "coming in" to the Worldwide Church, most of us felt the intense desire to share with all our loved ones what we thought to be a wonderful new truth. Now we who have been privileged to have been released from the bondage of the Worldwide Corruption (WCG) have the same intense desire to share a new and better truth with our Worldwide family and friends. Our aim is to help, not hurt, and forgive rather than condemn. I would sincerely urge all Worldwide Church members to carefully consider the evidence presented in Ambassador Review and to not be afraid to ask questions and demand answers. I am reminded of the words of scripture that say, My (God's) people are destroyed for lack of knowledge and were willingly ignorant (not knowing). To question the Armstrong system is not synonymous with questioning God. May we all have hearts responsive to God, eyes open to His true light, and ears that yearn for the pure expression of the very mind of God and always on guard against the deceit of men.

The Missing Dimension In Ambassador College- ACCREDITATION

Ambassador College (AC) has once again failed to receive regional accreditation from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC). WASC did extend candidacy for another two years, but, although this was encouraging, this extension should not be regarded as a guarantee of imminent accreditation. When Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) founded AC, he said he was establishing it for a definite and far-reaching purpose and promised to maintain standards on a high level "to insure full accreditation before the graduation of the first senior class" (Ambassador College Catalog, 1947-48). Twenty years later in 1968 AC was still looking forward to the possibility of becoming accredited. In 1976, Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA), president of the college, declared optimistically, "We're pursuing accreditation, and we believe we're going to get it" (Bible Study, Feb. 27, 1976). Later that same year HWA informed his congregation that "the way had been cleared for the accreditation of Ambassador College" (sermon, Mar. 6, 1976). But in June 1977, almost 30 years since HWA had founded AC, WASC again voted to deny accreditation to Ambassador.

To most students, faculty, and administrators this came as a crushing blow. Many were banking on the idea that the college was for all practical purposes accredited. AC had been transformed from a ministerial training school to a real academic community. Many felt that AC's stature had progressed to the point that WASC should have, at the very least, granted provisional accreditation to the school. For what reasons then was AC denied accreditation? Were the problems that caused the denial academic in nature or blatant continuation of strong-armed administrative practices? It is important that these reasons be discussed so one can understand why AC has consistently missed the goal of accreditation.

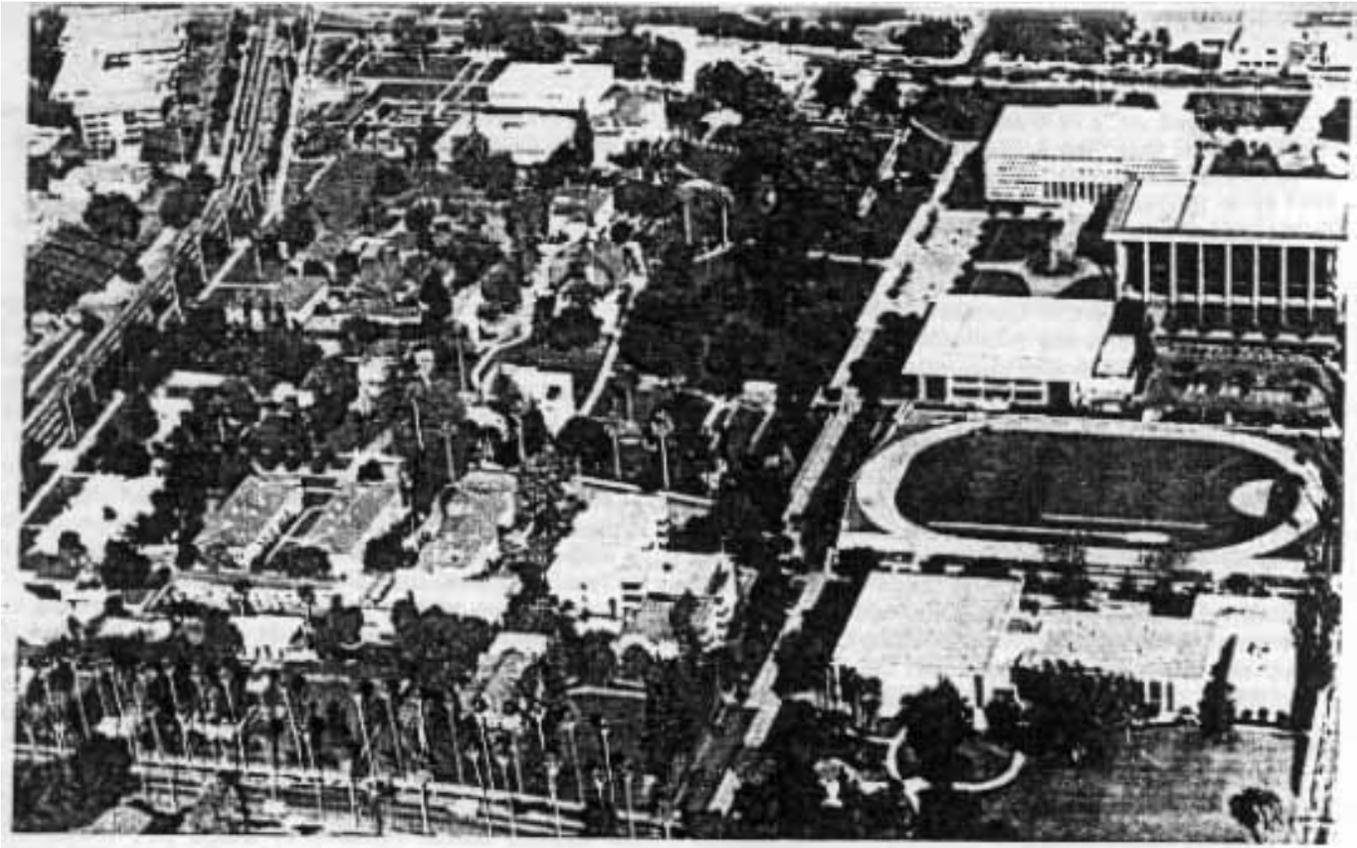

It must be noted that AC was not denied accreditation because of one or two picky points. In its letter of denial to the college WASC listed no fewer than 13 recommendations that would have to be implemented before the college could become accredited:

- Plans for alleviating space problems in the library and elsewhere, and provisions for employment of additional fulltime faculty should be given high priority.
- Without abridging the present supportive relationship between Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God, a complete separation of church and college must be established and maintained. This would also make possible financial reporting more in line with standard college practices.
- Since several persons hold major roles in both the church and college, unusual care must be taken to avoid the conflict of interest which such dual responsibilities can generate.
- Each department should assess its capabilities and limitations so that plans for the future are in harmony with an institutional commitment to carefully controlled growth.
- The proportion of the budget devoted to physical plant and support services should be reviewed so a more equitable relationship with the academic program can be established.
- A program to help members of the board of trustees understand their duties should begin immediately and should be a continuing and explicit effort.
- The executive committee of the trustees should have its role, including authority and composition, developed and assigned by the full board.
- Faculty involvement in such areas as budget development and handbook revision should be sought out and formalized.
- Administrative relationships and titles need to be stabilized and a comprehensive management study undertaken.
- Procedures for involving students in campus government need to be reviewed, and help for students should be as responsive as possible to actual student needs.
- Course sequence needs to be made more realistic, and facility equipment in the joint sciences should be upgraded substantially.
- A conscious effort needs to be undertaken to insure that able and dedicated women on the faculty are appointed to committees concerned with full college policies.
- Steps should be taken as soon as possible to see that the campus is prepared for an OSHA (occupational safety) inspection.

One should notice that well over half of these points deal with difficulties at the administrative level-most of which WASC had warned the college about time and again. Because the Armstrongs are bent on maintaining the political status quo and have only implemented minimal cosmetic changes, one might seriously ask if Ambassador will ever be recognized as a legitimate four-year college.

WASC did say, however, that AC's academic posture is moving closer toward "the mainstream of private higher education." Many administrators, members of the faculty, and students have worked arduously formulating a curriculum, structuring course outlines, and generating reports for the various committees and task forces. But all their efforts will be in vain if they do not confront these administrative problems.

Aerial view of Ambassador College's opulent Pasadena Campus

Six major areas were covered in WASC's evaluation report of its March 21-24, 1977 visit. For the sake of clarity and continuity these same areas of study will form the basic outline for this article. It must be determined whether Ambassador College is actively and seriously seeking accreditation or merely mounting another monumental snow job with the hope of pawning off more cosmetic changes as genuine compliance to WASC's recommendations.

I. Administration. On the surface AC has undergone substantial administrative changes since WASC's 1974 visit. Foremost of these was the appointment of a new president. (At the time of the 1974 evaluation, Herbert Armstrong held the dual titles of chancellor and president of the college; currently Garner Ted Armstrong is president of the college.) In addition, AC's Board of Trustees has again been reconstructed by the Armstrongs. (The board has been enlarged from seven to fifteen members.) But important changes were still being made as late as mid-March of 1977, less than two weeks before the site visit. WASC noted this and stated that although the ability to change quickly was impressive, "rapid change can also suggest that administration is not taken very seriously [and]... that precise relationships and clearly defined areas of responsibility simply do not exist" ( WASC Evaluation Report, 1977).

This lack of clearly defined administrative responsibility exists because of the authoritarian governing policies practiced by the Armstrongs and their lackeys in both the Worldwide Church of God and AC. Because of the absence of a working system of checks and balances at AC, changes can be-and often are-made rapidly without evaluation. This authoritarian approach to administration has no place in an academic institution. If Ambassador is truly desirous of accreditation, it must make a sincere effort to separate itself from this heavy-handed practice of "church government." If the new Board of Trustees will take its rightful position in the area of governance of Ambassador College, it is more than likely that these problems can be solved.

But what about the Board of Trustees? Is it a viable working body or an extension of the Armstrong authority machine?

Since 1974 the physical complexion of the board has changed substantially. When the evaluation committee visited the college in October 1974, there were seven members on the board. Six of them were ministers (HWA, GTA, Ron Dart, Dibar Apartian, Ben Chapman, and Herman Hoeh). The sole nonminister on the board was Shirley (Mrs. Garner Ted) Armstrong. At that time the examiners recommended that the board should be enlarged and that "...there should be more of a 'mix' in Board composition, even to the extent of allowing non-Worldwide Church of God representation..." (WASC Evaluation Report, 1974). Subsequent to that suggestion the board was enlarged to fifteen-eight new members were appointed and took their places by the original seven. None of these changes in size or membership substantially altered the political composition of the board, however. This basic structure existed until mid-March of 1977.

Just prior to this year's evaluation committee visit, AC officials decided to comply more strictly with WASC's 1974 recommendations. In the interest of disclaiming the practice of nepotism and possible accusations of conflict of interest (especially in the case where a board member was also a college administrator or if a person was a member of both the college and church board) and in order to provide for a greater "mix," the composition of the membership was changed. AC's 1976 Institutional Self-Study Report (p. 98) boasted that "the Board has been expanded to fifteen members from varying backgrounds."

It is interesting to note that the majority of these "members from varying backgrounds" are or have been high-ranking church officials who receive some kind of monetary remuneration (either salary or retirement) from the college or the WCG. Current members of the board are Herbert W. Armstrong (chancellor of the college, pastor general, and self-proclaimed apostle of the church), Stanley R. Rader (vice-president for financial affairs; his firm audits the books for the college and church), Frank Brown (minister), Jack Elliott (retired), David Jon Hill (semiretired evangelist), Brian Knowles (minister and managing editor of The Plain Truth), Jack Martin (employee), Raymond McNair (evangelist), Richard Rice (minister), Harold Treybig (minister), Dibar Apartian (evangelist), C. Wayne Cole (evangelist and head of the Canadian ministry), Harold Jackson (minister and head of the black African "Work"), Elbert Atlas (minister), and Van Lisman (optometrist and laymember of the WCG). All are members of the Worldwide Church of God. (WASC's recommendation of allowing non-Worldwide Church representation was evidently ignored.) Although these men (there are no women on the board) may in fact come from varying backgrounds, it is hard to see how one could consider that this change has altered the situation significantly. Because of their close relationship with the WCG, their ability to operate independently from the church must be questioned.

On March 15, 1977, several days prior to the WASC visit, a board meeting was called. This meeting was designed to belatedly instruct the board members about their responsibilities and functions. Ralph Helge (attorney for AC and the man instrumental in drawing up the most recent Ambassador College Handbook, as well as much of the "new" board's policy and procedure) lectured to the new and continuing members about the parameters of their authority. In summary the material outlined by Helge stated that board members must be members of the WCG in good standing; the board is empowered to nominate and elect its own members; its primary responsibility is the setting of general policies; and it has delegated authority to the president to implement them. All administrative officers are answerable to the board, including the president. If these indications are accepted on face value, one would assume the Board of Trustees is finally in a position of authority and capable of instituting changes that will assure the accreditation of the college. Unfortunately, this is not the case.

Just before the adjournment of the March 15 board meeting, President Armstrong interjected the following disclaimer.

"In case anyone has the slightest little idea, 'Well my, doesn't this look like we're putting in a totally different system of government?' let me assure you, let me assure you that the... government of God, from the top down-meaning my father in his position and me in mine-will be secure, and there is no diminution or dissolution of church government" (Board of Trustees meeting, Mar. 15, 1977).

President Armstrong made it perfectly clear that he expected no power struggle or exercise of power on their part. In essence the Armstrongs have established another "rubber stamp" Board of Trustees.

More evidence that shows President Armstrong feels he is above the board's authority rather than under it is found in a statement he made in his "Personal" in the July 18, 1977, issue of the Worldwide News:

"...A search for qualified lay-membership representation on the board is under way, and I am evaluating a number of dossiers submitted for presentation to the board at an early time...."

According to the official organizational report submitted by AC to WASC just previous to the evaluation committee's visit, the president is appointed by and is subject to the board. Since this is the case, what authority does GTA have in reviewing these dossiers in preparation for presentation to the board? Rather, this should be the function of the board itself. Either this is a classic example of the tail wagging the dog (in which case the board should remind the president with regard to the proper chain of authority), or it is a blatant confirmation that the Board of Trustees is the sham it always has been.

In essence, what is being exhibited here is nothing more than unabashed double-talk. It is no wonder, then, that WASC noted some confusion among faculty members as to "what is expected or allowed them in matters of college governance generally, or even in academic planning" (WASC Evaluation Report, 1977). Although AC does have a statement (of sorts) on academic freedom and responsibility (which was drawn up by the college's legal department without faculty consultation or input), it is ambiguous and confusing, to say the least, and must be categorized as more of the same-unadulterated doubletalk. The statement that was printed in the Ambassador College Handbook in section 4.2 follows:

"Academic freedom shall be understood to mean that the faculty member is encouraged in the pursuit of knowledge and truth within the area of his instruction and is expected to teach different viewpoints about secular knowledge."

Without an exact definition of what is meant by "secular" knowledge this statement is meaningless. On the surface "secular" knowledge could be interpreted as meaning anything not religious. This would be the most likely interpretation for a person to chose if uninitiated to the WCG's special approach to education. The WCG does not accept "secular" knowledge of and by itself because it claims all knowledge has its spiritual dimension. All knowledge must be evaluated from a particular spiritual perspective. Unless one views all knowledge in line with the established view of those in charge (i.e., HWA and GTA), then he is accused of being out of line with the teachings of the church and dealt with accordingly.

Under no circumstances could AC's statement on academic freedom be defined as strong and definitive. In fact, because of the limitations within the statement, it does not even conform to the current interpretation of academic freedom by the American Association of University Professors who stated:

"If a limitations clause at a church-related institution leads to elimination of the basic expressions of academic freedom, the institution has lost its credibility as a member of the academic community" (AAUP Bulletin, Vol. 61 [Spring 1975], p. 57).

Ambassador College must clear up the confusion regarding the policy or rather the lack of a policy on academic freedom. A refusal to do so may result in a loss of key faculty members as well as continued denial of accreditation.

In a recent move to comply with WASC's suggestion that AC should become separate from the WCG in financial affairs, President Armstrong appointed Dr. James Stark (who was chairman of AC's Business and Economics Departments) to replace Ray Wright (who held the position of business manager for Ambassador College, the church, and AICF) in the position of business manager for Ambassador College. But this is just a small step. WASC emphasized that much remained to be done before the college could present a "truly convincing" picture of financial accountability. Foremost among their criticisms was the intertwining of assets between church and college. They also stated that AC "would benefit substantially from a very comprehensive management study, including a thorough audit, by a nationally recognized firm" (WASC Evaluation Report, 1977). The institution's financial records are currently audited by the accounting firm of Rader, Cornwall, and Kessler (a clear example of conflict of interest, since Rader is a member of the college Board of Trustees and holds other major positions within the institution). If Ambassador desires to become and remain accredited, it really has no choice "but to demonstrate that the college is a distinct entity from the Church."

The overlapping of church governance with the administration of the college has no place in Ambassador-especially if AC truly expects to become accredited. The Board of Trustees should exercise the power that is rightfully theirs and institute the changes needed to clear the way for full regional accreditation. (It is highly unlikely that this will ever take place, however, because 13 of the 15 board members are payed by either the church or the college-Garner Ted signs the checks.) If the Armstrongs continue to thwart the decentralization of administrative power, WASC will be forced to again deny AC accreditation.

II. Physical Facilities and Equipment. Only brief comment is necessary for this category. It goes without saying that the campus grounds are beautiful and create an environment of serenity. A major drawback confronting the college, however, is the severe shortage of space and in many instances equipment. The evaluation committee summed up its feelings in this area by stating:

"The cost of maintaining such a magnificent campus needs to be scrutinized carefully, however, so that the College cannot be justly accused of being more interested in how a program is accommodated than in the program itself. A lovely facade is no substitute for a solid, if plain, academic effort" (WASC Evaluation Report, 1977).

III. Library and Other Learning Resources. Since WASC's 1974 visit, AC's Library and Learning Resources Department has grown and developed into a more important and viable resource in the academic community.

Currently this department is housed within five buildings. WASC considered the scattered physical locations and inadequate storage facilities a major liability in this area and suggested that housing this department under one roof would alleviate these problems plus speed up the process of converting to a single classification system. (The library is in the process of changing from the Dewey Decimal System to the Library of Congress System.) Also, foremost among WASC's suggestions was that AC should increase the library's budget to enable it to hire three or four full-time staff members and that the current budget for library material be continued with annual increments for inflation.

For the most part these suggestions seem straight forward and will not cause undue hardship on AC to implement-that is, if AC is granted ownership of the Vista del Arroyo Hotel property and there is no shortage of funds.

It must be pointed out, however, that AC's library is another example of administrative lethargy. Although in many ways the library has made tremendous strides in overcoming blatant inadequacies, overall the facilities are still inadequate to meet the needs of the students and faculty of AC.

These points were glossed over and in some cases completely deleted from AC's official 1976 Institutional Self-Study Report, which was prepared specifically for WASC. In fact, the administration will again have to stand accused of trying to snow the evaluation committee. The original report submitted by the special student-faculty task force that studied the library and the other learning resources was deceptively altered by upline administrative officials. What AC published in the self-study report and what the student-faculty task force actually wrote were two different things.

For example, under the heading "Student Questionnaire Results," the library task force reported:

"Students strongly indicated that the study facilities of the A.C. Library are inadequate. Two hundred ninety-three (63 percent) responded that they spend less than 10 percent of their study time in the Library. One hundred thirty-five responded that the Library is too congested, and 59 reported that too much noise is a problem. Fifty-eight stated that better study areas are needed" (p. 8).

When the report of the library task force was published by AC's administrators in the self-study, all that they allowed to be retained from the original report was the following:

"Students indicated that there were not enough study stations" (p. 76).

Another case in point was the section on the appraisal of facilities. Notice what the original student-faculty committee reported in their task force report:

"Results of the March 1976 surveys conducted by the Library and Learning Resources Task Force indicate that students and faculty of Ambassador College find library facilities inadequate for their present needs" (Library Task Force Report, pp. 10-11).

Now notice how the text of the task-force report was radically altered by the administration. The self-study reported just the opposite:

"Results of surveys indicate that students and faculty of Ambassador College find library facilities adequate for their present needs" (1976 Institutional Self-Study Report, p. 78).

In this same appraisal section under the category of "Funding" a similar altering is found. First, notice the original evaluation of the task force:

"Collection deficiencies have arisen because funds for library development have not been commensurate with the rapid growth of the curriculum. Since the 1973-74 academic year, 264 new courses have been introduced into the curriculum. While there have been modest increases for current journal subscriptions and reference materials, course-related book expenditures have remained essentially at the 1972 level.... Because 264 new courses have been introduced since 1973-74, appropriation of between $198,000 and $211,000 beyond the normal operating budget should have been made. Unfortunately, these funds have not been made available; therefore, library development has not kept pace with the rapid growth of the curriculum" (Task Force Library Report, pp. 14-15).

Now read how AC's leaders tried to cover up the library's real problems by publishing statements diametrically opposite to what the task force found and reported:

"Certain collection deficiencies resulted because funds for library development have been limited. However, a special $25,000 appropriation for library development was included in the 1976-77 budget. The proportion of institutional expenditures for library operations is in line with the 1975 Standards for College Libraries. Special funding such as the $25,000 appropriation should help to overcome any long-term collection deficiencies" (1976 Institutional Self-Study Report, p. 80).

These changes did not constitute a minor rewording here and there, but were underhanded attempts by those at high administrative levels to create a better picture than actually existed by (1) distorting the facts and (2) withholding negative information found in AC task-forces reports. One wonders how AC can claim to be a character-building institution if its leaders are guilty of such deception. Obviously those in control at AC are more interested in the cosmetic appearance of AC than in its inner strength or weakness. Rather than appropriate enough money for the library, they chose instead to build four tennis courts, to contribute $250,000 to build a playground in Jerusalem, and to pour six million dollars into Quest/77.

IV. Educational Programs. Ambassador College offers a broad range of majors for such a small college. On the surface it appears to be a well-rounded program. In terms of facilities and the logistics of implementing these programs in certain areas, there needs to be a greater coordination. While solving these difficulties is of major importance and will take some time, they are for the most part growing pains which will disappear with the development of the faculty and a careful analysis of each program.

V. Instructional Staff. Since the fall of 1974, the faculty of Ambassador College has increased in size from 72 to 132 (1976 Institutional Self-Study Report, Table 11, p. 52). Academically the faculty composition has provided the strength that has allowed the college to reach its current level of academic professionalism. A major weakness that must be confronted, however, is that many are only part-time personnel and cannot devote full attention to the needs of a growing institution.

A problem that the college may be facing in the future, however, is the loss of key personnel-especially those who are not members of WCG. In light of the problems concerning academic freedom and tenure, plus the question of whether or not AC is making strides to solve its administrative problems, some instructors are reevaluating their professional careers and are wondering if they are not just wasting their efforts because of the lack of commitment on the part of the Armstrong administration to allow the necessary changes. Unless AC administrators quit their foot-dragging, Ambassador may stand to lose more than a few instructors. Without a strong faculty AC cannot expect to be accredited.

VI. Student Activities. The college offers a wide range of student support services that are, for the most part, controlled by the administration. Student body officers are handpicked and appointed by the administration rather than elected in a general student body election. WASC even suggested that the college should "study the feasibility of selecting student body officers through elections rather than appointment by the administration" (WASC Evaluation Report, 1977). President Armstrong has made it perfectly clear, however, on several occasions that "democracy will not flourish at Ambassador College."

Since such doctrinal teachings of the church pervade even the area of student government, it isn't surprising to find that freedom of speech is also in short supply. Censorship of the Portfolio, AC's student newspaper, is an example of this. Any subject which is considered too controversial will be summarily axed from an issue. If an article or editorial disagrees with some administrative policy, the same thing happens. This past spring one of the Portfolio staff reporters wrote an article criticizing the extravagance of a particular party and dance that happened to be President Armstrong's brainchild. Needless to say, his article was never printed. But to top that off, President Armstrong called the student into his office for a conference. The student was threatened with dismissal and loss of a scholarship. This kind of action can only be detrimental to the college as a whole.

If students subject themselves to this kind of action, they are only kidding themselves. With the obvious lack of practice of academic freedom for the students, it seems unlikely that the institution will be accredited in the near future.

Conclusion. In the past four years Ambassador College has experienced tremendous academic growth-which can be attributed to the maturity and dedication of the faculty and some members of the administrative staff. Ambassador has been transformed from a vocational training center for the Worldwide Church of God into an institution of higher learning. It has come of age and must separate itself from the Worldwide Church of God and its government.

So far, the Armstrongs' selfish desire to maintain their rigid control over the institution-even to its detriment-has prevented it from becoming accredited. But while the Armstrongs must bear the main responsibility for AC's inability to achieve accreditation, the other administrators, faculty, and especially board members who claim their hands are tied in the matter will also be held accountable because of their silence. For by their silence they in essence condone the chicanery.

Students who have been lured to AC by the siren song of the finest this and the finest that, who have listened to the hollow promises of imminent accreditation, and who have wasted their money and time on a practically invalid degree are the real victims. Many who have gone back to pursue higher degrees at other colleges found that they were forced to backtrack-sometimes for four years before they could continue into a Master's or Ph.D. program. A few have been more fortunate and have only had to pick up a few credits in core courses to pursue their desired degree. But no one needs the problems associated with an unaccredited degree.

In the final analysis it boils down to this: Unless AC's Board of Trustees makes a definite decision in the next few months to honestly alleviate the Armstrong authoritarian stranglehold on them, it is more than likely that accreditation will continue to be Ambassador's missing dimension in education.

The Booklets Nobody Wants to Talk About

Since its inception in 1947, Ambassador College (AC), in conjunction with the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), has published dozens of religiously oriented booklets on a vast number of intriguing subjects. These unique booklets, most of which claimed to bring some "new truth" to light, were primarily responsible for bringing thousands of sincere people into the doctrinal embrace of the WCG. Hundreds of teenagers, including many with previous college experience, decided to attend AC because they had been convinced by AC's booklets that AC disseminated knowledge no other college in the world taught or even knew of.

In the last few years many of the key booklets that built AC and the WCG have been discontinued-more often than not due to flagrant error-or rewritten and drastically watered down. AC personnel and WCG members were never told why these booklets were dropped or heavily revised. However, Ambassador Report feels the AC student and the WCG member are entitled to know the reasons, which are stated in the following obituaries:

The Proof of the Bible-For years this booklet, along with Does God Exist?, was thoroughly read and studied by all aspiring to become a baptized member of the WCG. Any person who counselled for baptism used to be asked if he believed in and had proved the Bible was definitely God's word. Those who hadn't read AC's booklet on the subject had a difficult time answering the minister's questions.

Yet in 1972, this fundamental booklet was mysteriously discontinued. The reason? In it Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) dogmatically declared that skeptics could disprove the Bible and God's very existence if they would go to the Mideast and construct even a small city on the site of New Tyre. In 1969 it was brought to the attention of AC theologians that the area of ancient Tyre was covered by the buildings of Sur and had been for many decades. If you desire to know more about this booklet's glaring inconsistencies, read the accompanying article titled "Herbert Armstrong 'Disproves' the Bible."

1975 in Prophecy-Of all HWA's booklets, this one is perhaps the most shocking and terrifying one he ever authored. It attempted to graphically portray the terrifying events prophesied in the Bible that he felt would befall mankind between the time he wrote (in the mid-fifties) and Christ's return-which HWA and the WCG felt would occur in 1975, if not before.

Each passage in the booklet seemed designed to strike fear into the reader and cause him to "get right with God" quickly-HWA's way, of course. Notice some of the things he declared:

"Most Europeans are becoming distrustful of the United States.... They are thinking more and more about the coming United States of Europe! We Americans, with the British, gave them the idea .... They are going to unite against us!... The stage is all set! All that's lacking now is the strong leader-the coming Fuehrer! ... Probably Germany will lead and dominate the coming United States of Europe" (p. 4).

"That Nazi organization went underground! Their plans for coming back have been proceeding, under cover, since 1945! Already Nazis are in many key positions-in German industry-in German education-in the new German army!.. But this time the Nazis... plan to head and dominate a United States of Europe.... they plan to strike their first blow... on the centers of American industry!... You'll find this prophesied in Daniel 2 and 7, and more specifically in the 17th chapter of Revelation" (pp. 5-7) (HWA's excessive emphasis removed throughout).

On pages 11, 12, and 13 are pictures of extreme flooding and drought in the U.S. accompanied by alarming statements like this:

"While modern science and industry strive to prepare for us a push-button leisure-luxury-world by 1975, United States Assistant Weather Chief I. R. Tannahill warns us unofficially to really fear 'the big drought of 1975.' But the indications of prophecy are that this drought will be even more devastating than he foresees, and that it will strike sooner than 1975-probably between 1965 and 1972!" (p. 10.)

As the booklet progresses, HWA reiterates that "the German-dominated European combine will blast our [U.S.] cities and industrial centers with hydrogen bombs" (p. 14). He adds: "And so now God is about to punish!... It's later than you think!" (p. 18.) Then HWA boasts that "these prophecies are as certain as tomorrow's sun" and proceeds to prophesy: "Millions of lukewarm inactive professing Christians will suffer martyrdom-and that before the anticipated push-button leisure-year of 1975 dawns upon us!" (p. 20.)

To provoke even greater consternation in the reader's mind and to create a sense of urgency, he concludes: "You have been warned!... You can take this lightly, let it slip from your mind.... If you do, you have now read your fate-and I say to you on authority of God Almighty that it is absolutely sure!" (p. 31.)

As history has shown, HWA's "inspired" warnings supposedly based on divine authority were nothing but the apocalyptic ravings and vain imaginations of a misled, self-styled prophet claiming the authority of God Almighty. But one doesn't need to fear HWA or his predictions anymore when he claims to speak with God's authority, according to Deuteronomy 18:22: "When a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, if the word does not come to pass or come true, that is a word which the Lord has not spoken; the prophet has spoken it presumptuously, you need not be afraid of him" (RSV).

By 1969 AC officials decided it would be wise to remove the booklet from public scrutiny, realizing HWA's predictions didn't appear to be panning out. The booklet's obvious anti-German bias was proving to be an acute and continuing embarrassment to the Armstrongs as they began courting European and German leaders. Furthermore, the booklet set dates for specific events, and these dates appeared to be inaccurate even then.

Though the booklet suffered from a terminal case of typographical diarrhea-HWA's excessive use of italicized and capitalized words used to stress the extreme "importance" of his "inspired" message-the gruesome illustrations were considered by AC officials to be even more distasteful. In view of these liabilities, the booklet was quietly sentenced to death and killed.

If you haven't yet read this booklet, Ambassador Report urges you to. We can promise you it'll open your eyes! But whatever you do, you have been warned!

Divorce and Remarriage-How often HWA crowed that only the WCG, of all the world's churches, was fulfilling the last verse of Malachi: turning the hearts of fathers to their children and the hearts of the children to their fathers. A few thinkers long had trouble squaring the boast with statements in this booklet that forced any couple to split apart and live separately if either member had a living former mate and wanted to become a WCG member and inherit eternal life.

In late 1973 AC published HWA's revised edition, incorporating the same adamant stand as the 1953 version but adding a few more erroneous proofs. Because of the controversy that had already been aroused, HWA sent the manuscript to the press, insisting no one be allowed to see it and completely bypassing the normal editorial channels. When the finished booklet appeared, the controversy intensified. During the time of the WCG's split in early 1974, the booklet was withdrawn by HWA at the urging of Al Portune, Robert Kuhn, and Stan Rader to avert an even bigger crisis.

At the WCG's ministerial conference in mid-1974, a complete reversal of the previous merciless D&R policy was announced by both Armstrongs. It was heralded as a revelation from God. (Actually, Garner Ted Armstrong [G TA] later confessed in 1976 that he had known this "new truth" on D&R for over 6 years. Also WCG members had previously shown WCG ministers several books that contained essentially what the Armstrongs now claimed was new revelation.) A hastily thrown together study paper was handed to the assembled ministers a few days later. This paper faced for the first time the long-ignored "Pauline permission" of I Corinthians 7 which recognized the validity of divorces obtained by an unconverted person.

For months afterward WCG officials attempted to write a new booklet on the subject, but they were unable to come to a consensus on what the booklet should say and afraid to bring their efforts to HWA's attention. So today, the WCG has no booklet available to the general public explaining its beliefs on divorce and remarriage. More shocking still, in practice, almost anybody who desires is now able to divorce and remarry-with the WCG's blessing.

But sad to say, HWA has offered no real apologies for the thousands of lives that his false and carelessly written teachings on divorce have ruined-not a word of regret for cruelly ripping apart happily married couples that were legitimately married in God's sight. Rather HWA praised his followers for remaining loyal to him and obeying his teachings rather than the Bible's.

A True History of the True Church-This booklet by Herman Hoeh, produced by AC in 1959, audaciously proclaimed that the WCG was God's only true church on earth today and attempted without success to prove it by quoting historical material out of context and trying to fit it into HWA's erroneous understanding of 19-year time cycles, history, and church eras-a colossal church error which even GTA admitted publicly. Most of the booklet's historical facts were actually lifted from A History of the True Church, a totally unscholarly work by A. N. Dugger and C. O. Dodd, published in 1936.

A few years ago the WCG booklet quietly dropped out of sight, though long-time members everywhere are still under the assumption that the teachings of the booklet are sound and that the booklet proved its erroneous premise: that a single, true, organized, continuous church group, culminating in the WCG, has included all true Christians of all ages, pastored and taught by ministers from an unbroken line of ordinations.

Recently, when quizzed about his father's "one true church" doctrine, GTA confessed to Joseph Hopkins: "I don't believe that, either... except for the invisible church, the Body of Christ. But it is definitely not necessary to belong to the Worldwide Church of God in order to be saved" (The Armstrong Empire, 1974, p. 246).

Does God Heal Today?-This booklet, published by AC in 1952, was killed in 1968 because the WCG feared law suits and bad publicity as a result of the booklet's statements urging total reliance on God-to the exclusion of medical authorities-for healing. Meanwhile, WCG brethren still depended on its teachings for divine healing, and many died tragic, heart-rending deaths having complete faith in the booklet, unaware that (1) the WCG was scared to print what they believed was God's truth for fear of civil authorities and (2) that the booklet's teachings were not biblically correct.

During times that local authorities might become involved because of nontreatment of a serious illness of a member or a member's child, ministers were strictly commanded to "keep the church [meaning the Armstrongs] out of trouble," even if it meant going to hospitals or doctors. But there was seemingly little concern for the unnecessary sufferings of the people involved. A former WCG deacon from New Jersey relates a sad story that further illustrates this point:

"...concerning the WCG policy on healing. Many people suffered needlessly while headquarters personnel took care of themselves. I recall one very grave incident where a young girl was suffering from appendicitis. Many prayers were said for her by members, and visits were made by the ministry for anointing and counseling. In a serious situation like this the counseling would also include a warning that if the child were to die (which she did, it ruptured) to be prepared with a story for the authorities so as not to get the church involved. The church was to be protected at all costs (even lying)."

In the years following the booklet's withdrawal, several top AC officials and/or their wives had "repair surgery." News of this "lack of faith" spread quickly on the WCG grapevine, unsettling WCG members who were still being taught that they should depend totally on God for healing, not medical science. By 1973 a number of WCG ministers began seriously questioning the validity of the healing doctrine in view of the fact that so many members who depended on the booklet's teachings were suffering unduly or dying. They called for meetings to resolve the questions, but nothing came of their pleas.

In 1974 the WCG ministry was told that people could go to doctors and that they didn't have to depend upon God to heal them unless they had the faith. The WCG gave no biblical reason for this sudden drastic shift in policy, and many ministers and members felt this was heresy. (Eventually this new, radical interpretation helped provoke turmoil and a split in the WCG's British churches.) In 1974 David Antion and Paul Flatt were put in charge of drafting a new doctrinal paper on healing. When they presented their study paper to a large group of ministers, it was given a favorable reception, but it was soon swept under the carpet (like most doctrinal research was) because it raised serious questions with the WCG's old booklet on the subject, which HWA still believes was inspired and correct, and because HWA was in the process of completing a revision of the old booklet without considering any of the new research papers.

Truth About Makeup-The makeup issue threatened to split the WCG in the 1950s until HWA ruled in 1955 that it was a sin for a Christian woman to wear makeup. HWA's own daughter refused to submit to his decision and was promptly excommunicated from the WCG. In 1958 Garner Ted Armstrong wrote that "it was God the Father and Jesus Christ who made the decision on make-up! They revealed to their human servants the plain truth on the subject..." (The Good News, Jan. 1958, p. 7).

To HWA, it was of paramount importance for people everywhere to heed what he felt were God's feelings about makeup. Hence he authored a booklet on the subject, based on a Jan. 1957 Good News article and published by AC in 1964 and 1968. The booklet lashed out at anyone who would dare be caught wearing the slightest touch of makeup:

"In every single case where painting the face is mentioned in your Bible, God labels the woman a whore!... How does God label you?" (p. 20.)

"It may be difficult, at first, for many women to realize that makeup on the face is actually one of those things that is an abomination in the sight of God-that its use is a sin-a violation of God's Law..." (p. 23).

"...God's people must be cleaned up!... This thing of painting the face is now labeled by Jesus Christ as a sin! It is a transgression of God's Law..." (pp. 26-27).

"... most women will say: 'I wear it to look nice'-or 'to avoid offense.' They say it in words that sound harmless. But God knows your hearts better than you do-and he knows that the heart of women... is 'deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked.'... To whom does this woman wish to 'look nice'?-to God? No, for to God she looks like a painted artificial prostitute!" (pp. 42-43.)

"My own mother very emphatically declared that no lipstick ever touched her lips-a fact in which she took great satisfaction" (p. 18).

To stress the importance of avoiding makeup, HWA concludes in his booklet:

"God tells us what is sin, and He tells us that this vain use of facial makeup is sin!... the penalty for this sin is death for eternity in a Lake of fire!" (p. 44.)

HWA's makeup ruling proved to be a major stumbling block to women wishing to enter the WCG. One college girl confessed: "I cried when I found out I had to give up makeup because I looked so ugly without it. Later two women in the church came up to me and said I ought to be anointed [for healing] because of the way the skin on my face looked. This made me feel even more ugly and inferior, but gradually I learned to accept my appearance, though from time to time people made belittling remarks about it."

AC coeds were often embarrassed when showing visiting women around campus because invariably they asked: "Why don't you AC girls wear makeup?" What was the AC girl to say to her painted guests: "We don't wear makeup because God says only whores wear it"?

In the years following the makeup decision, several tried to convince the Armstrongs that their makeup doctrine was nonsensical and unbiblical. But they were brushed aside as heretics. After all, GTA had said the makeup ruling was made by "God the Father and Jesus Christ."

But in the early 1970s more and more people exerted pressure to have the booklet removed. They finally succeeded, and it was formally discontinued when the Oct. 23, 1974 ministerial bulletin declared wearing makeup okay after researchers had proved that, without exception, the "proofs" in the booklet were arrived at by using scriptures out of context and reading meanings into the scriptures that weren't intended. Though HWA's explanation of one of the scriptures was influenced by an erroneous translation quoted and accepted by Adam Clarke's commentary, HWA quoted two other commentaries and proceeded to leave out parts of their explanations that contradicted his preconceived conclusions. Had his research been more carefully done and had he consulted modern reference sources, he would not have reached the absurd conclusion he did.

In spite of the fact that HWA finally killed the makeup booklet, he never apologized for blaspheming God's name by claiming God looked at women who wore makeup as whores, nor did he apologize for wresting the scriptures to make it appear that wearing makeup was a capital sin.

The Mark of the Beast and Who Is the Beast?-These two booklets were copyrighted by AC in 1952 and 1960 respectively. Both were based more on specious reasoning than fact. In both booklets, HWA took basic Protestant and/or 19th-century Adventist interpretations and reshaped them to fit his own ideas by extracting isolated historical events out of their context and fitting them into highly symbolic prophecies. It is obvious to the student of history that the author has a bad and unscholarly habit of conveniently overlooking parts of history that contradict his prophetic theories.

In late 1969, AC's Chancellor Herbert Armstrong began meeting such European leaders as King Leopold of Belgium and Franz Josef Strauss of Germany, both Catholics. Since the booklets not only called the Catholic church the great whore of Revelation 17 and spoke very disparagingly of it, claiming it would again soon martyr those who opposed it and those who refused to worship on Sunday, but also predicted that a United States of Europe composed of 10 nations would fight Christ, the booklet threatened to become an acute embarrassment to HWA and to the WCG's German office and churches; therefore, it had to be discontinued.

Compendium of World History-Believing "the modern reconstruction of ancient history without God is almost 100% erroneous" (vol. I, p. 20) and that "that modern interpretation of world history stands in open conflict with Scripture" (vol. I, p. 1), "evangelist" Herman L. Hoeh decided to write a world history from the Bible's perspective and thus show modern historians the proper way to approach and write history. Hoeh received his doctor's degree in theology from AC upon completing volume I of his compendium and his doctor of philosophy degree from AC after writing volume II-although there was no one at AC even remotely qualified to evaluate his dissertations.

Volume I carried copyright dates of 1963, 1963-65, 1966, 1967, 1969, and 1970, while volume II had dates of 1963, 1966, and 1969. Each revision was invariably followed by a long list of errata.

For over a decade students at AC were compelled to study the haphazardly written "compendium" to pass AC's dreaded world history class. In late 1973, students heaved a giant sigh of relief upon learning they wouldn't have to wade through the undocumented assumptions, the convoluted reasoning, and the long king lists and genealogies which clutter the pages of the compendium. Soon, the compendium even disappeared from AC's bookstore. But many were bewildered. Why was "the world's greatest history book" by "the world's greatest historian" (according to HWA) suddenly unavailable?

Gradually those who checked around discovered that the compendium contained flagrant errors in chronology and in the reconstruction of history. The reason? Hoeh based his book on his own private biblical interpretation which was colored by HWA's British-Israel theories. Though being unschooled in Semitic and other ancient languages, having had few if any history classes at an accredited college under a qualified history professor, and never having specialized in any specific area, he felt his biblical knowledge and understanding more than compensated for his deficiencies in other areas.

As he compiled historical data for his book, he ignored or discarded facts that didn't fit snugly into his biblical framework and the historical-philosophical interpretations of HWA. Sometimes he had to quote sources out of context or simply invent evidence to amass proof for a particular point, but he overcame any qualms he may have had about this, feeling God was revealing previously hidden truth to him as he researched. But students who checked the original sources were often aghast at his shoddy if not dishonest scholarship.

In any case Hoeh's two-volume compendium is now out of print and no longer used in AC history classes. Indeed it is difficult to find any scholar-even inside the WCG-who is willing to defend "the world's greatest history book."

Military Service and War-This 72-page booklet was published in 1967 by AC to assist male WCG members and AC students evade the draft and decide why they should become conscientious objectors. This booklet was not offered to the public, and it was dropped as the Vietnam war was ending.

The Truth About Masonry-Published in 1961 by AC, the masonry booklet was authored by AC's former dean of students and psychology instructor Jack R. Elliott, in partial fulfillment of the requirements for his M.A. from AC. The booklet was written to inform WCG members of the evils of masonry and is no longer being sent out.

It claimed "membership in the Masonic Lodge, as much as membership in any of the [religious] denominations, is incompatible with obedience and service to God" (p. 43). It asserted that Masonry's "oaths are antisciptural and that its secrecy is likewise contradictory to the Bible and pagan in origin" (p. 16). In a stinging indictment against Masons everywhere, Elliott declared that Masons "do not promote God's rule, but ignore it and set themselves up as the wise leaders... feigning benevolence by giving charity to the orphans and widows, while they privately endeavor to build their own prosperity" (p. 40). This booklet was mainly circulated internally in the WCG lest its public image be tarnished, in accord with its normal practice of portraying itself one way to the public and another way to its supporters.

The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy-This AC production (which is still in print), long one of the most heavily requested and intriguing booklets ever written by HWA, was originally a series in The Plain Truth which was edited into a 26-page booklet in 1954. Its main teachings were simply a patent paraphrase in many places of Rev. J. H. Allen's 377-page book, Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright (1902).

In 1967 HWA's 1954 version was enlarged to include 226 pages. This mammoth edition was extensively revised again in 1972 because it set dates for the fall of the U.S. and Britain that didn't materialize and because of gross historical and biblical errors. Recently Dr. Hoeh "doctored" the 1972 version, surgically excising 75% of the material out of it. Because of challenges that could not (or would not) be answered honestly, he removed all the historical "proof" (actually, there never was any proof) and 75% of the biblical "evidence."

Gone is the older version's whole section on Jeremiah's commission, the planting of the throne in Ireland, and the accounts of Tea-Tephi and the lia-fail stone. Several members of the former doctrinal committee-HWA recently disbanded the committee-state that the basic tenets of the booklet are unprovable, either from the Bible or from history. GTA has even expressed in an interview with Joseph M. Hopkins that belief in British-Israelism is "not essential to salvation. It hasn't been proven to my satisfaction," he confessed, "that the Ten Lost Tribes relocated in specific places in northern Europe. It certainly is not a necessary doctrine" (The Armstrong Empire, 1974, p. 245).

Still Other Problem Booklets. One by one the key booklets that set AC and the WCG apart as unique are being phased out, never to be heard from again. AC's booklets on pollution and the feminist movement no longer exist. AC's booklet based on GTA's interview with Franz Josef Strauss, Is the United States of Europe Coming Soon?, was quietly dropped. (When Strauss visited AC in early 1970, AC officials were so worried Strauss might see the booklet-what did AC have to hide?-that they instructed students to remove the recently published booklet from their dormitory bookshelves and hide it until Strauss left.) Who Will Rule Space? has been shot down and killed. Most of AC's editors privately acknowledge that AC's booklets on evolution are in grave need of revision due to their simplistic and often completely unscientific "scientific" claims.

The booklet entitled Tithing, written by John Schroeder (GTA's ghost writer) and Brian Knowles and edited by GTA to replace Ending Your Financial Worries, offered no convincing biblical reasons why a Christian should tithe and is basically a waste of paper. When HWA read the new booklet, he became boiling mad, yelling that all the "proofs" had been omitted. Though a number of the leading WCG ministers do not even believe in tithing, none dared tell him his "proofs" were only misapplied scriptures quoted out of context and blended with a large amount of wishful thinking. His plain truth about tithing was just plain error.

A number of AC's booklets were discontinued not only because of factual error but also because it seems the Armstrongs were afraid some of their worldly contacts would notice what they were preaching and judge them to be lunatics. For instance, God Speaks Out on the New Morality was killed and reemerged as The Missing Dimension in Sex, partly because the former booklet stated that Simon Magus was the Peter who founded the Catholic Church and that the Catholic church was responsible for the Western world's belief that sex was evil and inherently unclean. HWA still believed this to be true-though research can never show Simon Magus founded the Catholic church-but HWA was developing a friendship with King Leopold of Belgium at the time and didn't want Leopold to find out what he preached about the Catholic church because Leopold was a staunch Catholic.

For more than two decades HWA has preached and written that an Israelitish U.S. and Britain would be destroyed by a revitalized, ten-nation U.S. of Europe dominated by the Satan-influenced Roman Catholic church and led by the Germans whom he claims are the modern descendants of the Assyrians. But when he began meeting world leaders and developing friendships with them, he stopped writing about the Catholic church in prophecy and Germany being modern Assyria.

Why do HWA and GTA shrink back when it comes time to tell world leaders how they should live their lives and what is prophesied in the Bible? The New Testament ministers bravely proclaimed God's truth to world leaders without flattery and equivocation (Acts 24-26, I Thes. 2:1-6).

Why does The Plain Truth no longer contain prophetic teaching but has page after page of glowing accounts of HWA's (and Rader's) personal overseas exploits and insipid, shallow, ministry-of-tourism-type travelogues by Gene Hogberg? Why hasn't HWA told his followers about the major errors in the booklets that have been quietly discontinued?

These are questions you ought to strongly consider before financially supporting Herbert Armstrong's gospel-preaching efforts and before reorienting your life to conform to the teachings found in Herbert Armstrong's publications.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

What the Armstrongs Say About Other Churches

"I began to see that the real message of the Bible is not known or understood... by the churches that call themselves Christian. I began to see that... the blood of Christ is not the trunk of the tree. That is not the main point" (Herbert Armstrong, Ministerial Conference, May 1976).

For the entire length of their ministry, Herbert and Garner Ted Armstrong have insisted that they absolutely do not believe in proselyting. Yet they have built the Worldwide Church of God by spending a huge portion of their time attacking other Christian churches, attempting to discredit them, and cleverly influencing their members to defect to the Armstrong brand of Christianity. For instance, in a sermon before over a thousand people on July 24, 1976, Herbert Armstrong declared:

"The gospel had not been preached until God raised me up to preach it. People say, 'Who does that Armstrong think he is?' Am I bragging? Am I boasting? No, I'm just saying a fact. That gospel you never heard from any preacher except one from this church. You never heard it from Billy Graham. You never heard it from any Protestant preacher. You never heard it from any Catholic priest."

A month later, on August 28, 1976, he self-righteously asserted in another sermon:

"I had to learn that the churches do not get their religion out of the Bible. They get it out of their own mind. They get it by twisting the Bible."

In a co-worker letter dated November 19, 1976, Herbert Armstrong made an incredibly vain and postposterous statement:

"It is true that Baptists, fundamental Methodists, and other Protestant denominations, do teach some things as we do-but they have the branches and twigs of the tree-not one of them has the real trunk of the tree-with its main branches. In other words, not one of them knows what spiritual salvation really is, what the kingdom of God (Christ's whole Gospel) really is, why God put humanity here on earth: what is our real ultimate human potential, or how we shall reach it."

On another occasion, Herbert blasted the Lutherans for preaching Christ to the world (as did the apostles):

"One of the floats in the Rose Festival Parade was 'the Lutheran Hour preaching Christ to the world,' not preaching the gospel of the kingdom, [but] preaching Christ! Deceiving the world! That's what they do. It's not the gospel! It's the person. They believe on him. They say, 'Believe on Christ and you shall be saved.' Those who believed on him in the 8th chapter of John were crying out for his blood. They wanted to see him killed. That's the way it's been today and that's been what's been preached. That's not the gospel... .No one is preaching the gospel to the world or has done it in 18½ centuries but this Work" (Jan. 3, 1974).

Herbert Armstrong has long viewed himself as God's special representative to warn the world of its sins and impending doom unless it repents. He feels he is directing the "greatest Work in 1900 years on earth!" (Co-worker letter, Aug. 19, 1976, p. 5.) He feels no one else alive but him is proclaiming the "true gospel to the world today-or has done so since the first century" (co-worker letter, Jan. 27, 1974, p. 6).

His controversial son, Garner Ted, also parrots the same self-righteous message:

"There is only ONE Church on the face of this earth that has been consistently... preaching the ONE true gospel of the Kingdom of God, telling you exactly what these times mean! There is only ONE Church that has dared to tell you in definite, specific, point-by-point, detailed order the events that are yet to occur.... Where is that ONE Church Jesus built? It is where the work of that Church is being done! And THIS WORK that you are reading of right now-that you hear over The World Tomorrow-this work is the only genuine work that is carrying out Jesus' very commission just as He said it would be doing!... God forbids you ever to join in with the worship of counterfeit church bodies..." ("Should You Join a Church?", reprint article No. 570, pp. 3-4).

Herbert Armstrong believes he heads the one true church of God (The Worldwide Church of God) on earth today and that all other churches are, according to his own words, "the Devil's churches":

"Satan is the god of this world. Now his chief church we know as the Roman Catholic church. And we know how she's represented in the 17th chapter, the book of Revelation-[as] Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots. Who are the harlots? All the Protestant churches" (May 7, 1974).

Herbert Armstrong's letter answering department echoed the same biased thought in letter No. 937:

"The tribe of Dan settled primarily in Southern Ireland (as proven in Mr. Armstrong's booklet, 'The United States and the British Commonwealth in Prophecy').... Today, the tribe of Dan is still given to idolatry following the traditions of their ancestors. They are, as a nation, an integral part of the false mystery system God labels as 'MYSTERY, BABYLON THE GREAT' in Revelation 17:5. This is a great false church, a worldly church.... Notice in Revelation 2:20 this same false church is likened to that wicked 'woman Jezebel.'... God says He will smite her children with death because they have known the 'depths of Satan' (Verses 23-24). Jezebel's children, then, are those who have been taught at an early age her abominable idolatries and filthinesses (Rev. 2:20) and are deep in her doctrine (Verse 24). This woman Jezebel symbolizes the Roman Catholic Church. Most Danites (Irish) are members of this false church from birth, attending her schools, festivals and idolatrous religious worship services ....

"Since the nation of Ireland, the modern Danites, are in the 'depths of Satan' and do not know God's true way.... "

At the Jan. 1972 ministerial conference in Pasadena, Garner Ted attacked Rex Humbard:

"My father said to me one time after watching the Rex Humbard television program: '...You know, Ted, these people are saying some of the things that sometimes I think we ought to be saying.'... I think the man's a fake from the word go. But nevertheless he is a complete, unabashed, unashamed, unafraid fake. He comes right out with statements about God and about Christ and about conversion and about salvation...."

Ambassador Report would like to go on record against these holier-than-thou, malicious diatribes directed at other sincere Christians. How can a minister claim to represent God and yet expend his energy trying to discredit other Christians? Granted, all Christians and their churches have flaws-but so do the Armstrongs and their church.

One of the most obvious themes of the Bible is love-especially in the New Testament. Jesus declared emphatically to his disciples that all men would be able to recognize his true disciples by their love for each other (John 13:35). We hope the Armstrongs and their church will quit wasting time and money attempting to discredit other churches and proselyte their members. Before Herbert Armstrong and his church judge another church to be a church of Satan, they should thoroughly examine their own teachings-many of which they have already had to admit were in gross error-lest they themselves be found worshipping God in vain by "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

TWISTED TEACHINGS ON TITHING

The Worldwide Church of God, like a monstrous predatory creature, sucks its members' financial lifeblood by twisting the Bible's teachings on tithing to extort money from them.

The Ambassador Report staff asked several Worldwide Church of God (WCG) members if they believed in paying tithes, and each one responded assertively, "Of course I believe in tithing!" We then inquired how they defined "tithing," and each one, in essence, replied, "Tithing, according to the Bible, means giving a tenth of one's salary to the church."

What these members don't realize is that they are not following the biblical laws on tithing, and they never have been! Though the WCG has long claimed to follow every word of the Bible literally, it has completely ignored the Bible's laws and instructions on tithing and has instead substituted an unworkable, unbiblical maze of rules designed mainly by Herbert Armstrong. Herbert's method of tithing resembles the Bible's about as closely as Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) resembles Christmas. Let's look for a moment at how terribly the WCG has twisted the Bible's teachings on tithing.

Tithing in the Old Testament. God related to Moses precisely how he wanted the Israelites to tithe, and Moses recorded God's instructions in Leviticus 27:30-32:

"All the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land or of the fruit of the trees, is the Lord's.... If a man wishes to redeem any of his tithe, he shall add a fifth to it. And all the tithe of herds and flocks, every tenth animal of all that pass under the herdsmen's staff, shall be holy to the Lord" (RSV).

It is obvious from the above passage that God commanded the Israelites to tithe on (1) agricultural produce and (2) every tenth animal of their flocks and herds. Nowhere here or anywhere else in the Bible does God ever state that an Israelite or, for that matter, a Christian should tithe on anything else. God never told the Israelites or Christians to tithe on their monetary wages-and these people weren't all farmers by any means. He never commanded them to give a tithe of all the fish they caught or of all the copper they mined, nor did he require they give a tenth of the money they received from selling pottery, chariots, sandals, garments, etc. In fact, even The Jewish Encyclopedia and The Encyclopedia of Jewish Religion (under "Tithes") state that the Israelites tithed only on agricultural produce and livestock.

Jewish reference sources point out that every seventh year was a sabbatical year and no tithing was permissible therein. (See The Jewish Encyclopedia, "Tithe," p. 151.) It's a shame the Worldwide Church of God doesn't adhere to this aspect of the biblical tithing law.

Recipients of the Tithe. The Bible clearly delineates who was authorized to receive the tithes of the people in Numbers 18:21, 24:

"To the Levites I have given every tithe in Israel for an inheritance, in return for their service... in the tent of meeting.... therefore I have said of them [the Levites] that they shall have no inheritance among the people of Israel" (RSV).

The Levites, however, didn't retain all of the tenth for themselves, but gave a tenth of their tithe to the priests who attended the altar (Num. 18:25-32). The priests didn't tithe at all.

It is important to note that the tithe was given only to the Levites who were serving at the tabernacle (or later the Temple). That's why Moses instructed the Israelites to bring their tithes to the place where God had placed his name (Shiloh and later Jerusalem):

"But you shall seek the place which the Lord your God will choose out of all your tribes to put his name... thither you shall go, and thither you shall bring your... tithes and the offering that you present" (Deut. 12:5-6, RSV).

Nowhere in the Old or New Testaments is anybody but the Levites authorized to take the tithes of the people. Nowhere are Christian ministers given the right to demand or accept tithes. Jesus or Paul could not have accepted tithes from the church as they were not Levites. Of course, the Gentiles Paul preached to weren't in the habit of tithing anyway since God never required Gentiles to tithe in the first place, but only Israelites. (In fact the produce of Gentile lands was considered impure until certain rabbis allowed the tithes of a few Gentile lands to be accepted because so many Jews dwelt there.)

Even in Nehemiah and Malachi's day the Israelites were still commanded to bring their tithes to the Levites who placed them in the Temple's storehouse (Nehemiah 10:35, 37, 38):

"We obligate ourselves to bring... to the Levites the tithes from our ground, for it is the Levites who collect the tithes.... the Levites shall bring up the tithe of the tithes to the house of our God, to the chambers, to the storehouse" (RSV).

The Israelites were often forgetful of their tithing obligation (Neh. 13:10-12), so Malachi also admonished the "sons of Jacob" (Mal. 3:6) to "bring the full tithes into the [Temple] storehouse, that there may be food in my house [the Temple in Jerusalem]" (Mal. 3:10, RSV).

The preceding facts on tithing in the Old Testament were condensed from a large number of papers submitted to the doctrinal committee, including the papers authored by David Antion, Harry Eisenberg, Don Abraham, Lester Grabbe, Allan de Jager, Garry de Jager, and Brian Knowles. The well-supported conclusions of these papers were basically ignored by the Armstrongs and were quietly relegated to archival files or trash cans and forgotten.

Tithing in the Christian Church. Contrary to the assumption of some, the early Christian church and ministry were not supported by tithes but by freewill offerings. Many Christians pooled their goods and shared their possessions equally (Acts 4:32-37). There was no "third tithe" collected for the poor-as in the WCG-but rather the apostles urged each Christian to give according to his means (II Cor. 8:2-15; 9:6-12; I John 3:17-18).

It was the Catholic church that instituted tithing in the Christian church. Notice this admission in the New Catholic Encyclopedia, vol. XIV, pp. 174-175:

"The early Church had no tithing system. The tithes of the Old Testament were regarded as abrogated by the law of Christ.... But as the Church expanded and its material needs grew more numerous and complex, it became necessary to adopt a definite rule to which people could be held either by a sense of moral obligation or by a precept of positive law. The tithing of the Old Law provided an obvious model, and it began to be taught.... The Council of Macon in 585 ordered payment of tithes and threatened excommunication to those who refused to comply."

Interestingly the Worldwide Church of God brands almost all of the Catholic church's additions to the early Christian religion-Christmas, Easter, Halloween, etc.-as utterly unbiblical, but when it comes to tithing, the WCG eagerly leaps onto the Catholic bandwagon and even goes far beyond the Catholic church by adding a second and a third tithe.

Of course, the WCG's system of tithing doesn't even resemble the Bible's. And nowhere does the Bible say the church has the right to take Old Testament laws-such as those on tithing-delete part of them, reword them, twist them, and then require a Christian to keep the "new, improved" laws. (Besides, the Armstrongs have always stressed that their followers should believe them only if what they say is in the Bible.)

The preceding facts on tithing in the Christian church were taken from several lengthy research papers submitted to the WCG doctrinal committee by Harry Eisenberg, Richard Davey, Lawson Briggs, Don Abraham, Garry de Jager, Allan de Jager, and the managing editor of The Plain Truth, Brian Knowles. Yet their findings were all but ignored by the Armstrongs. When the WCG's tithing study paper (dated Sept. 24, 1974) emerged, these comprehensive papers were not included. Rather only a few selected papers were reprinted for the ministry to examine, and several of these papers were altered so as to obscure or hide the authors' original conclusions.

Tithing's Detrimental Effects on People. The WCG's tithing doctrine isn't a quaint, harmless philosophy by any means. Thousands of people will attest to that-though those people are never quoted in WCG publications. Ambassador Report has heard numerous heart-rending stories about how families gave thousands of dollars to the WCG in tithes and as a result were left destitute at retirement. In England and Australia, many WCG members are unable to afford to eat meat more than once a week, according to WCG ministers themselves-all due to the WCG's oppressive multiple tithing system. It has been reported that a number of members have even had to skip meals every week to pay their tithes.

One former member wrote that after seven years of tithing, "we were never really financially blessed. In fact it will take awhile to get out from under the pressure of accumulated bills caused by tithing and ignoring pressing responsibilities."

But what is so diabolical about the WCG's unbiblical tithing system-which demands a first tithe be paid on one's income, a second tithe be saved from one's income for use only at WCG festivals, and a third tithe be paid every three years-is that widows and those who can ill afford to give up to 30% of their gross income each year are coerced into allocating their hard-earned money to the WCG through fear and intimidation. In the past the WCG has preached that any member who refused to pay tithes would be cast alive into the lake of fire. Notice one blatant instance where Garner Ted Armstrong, in a Feb. 7, 1977, letter to the WCG members, resorted to similar scare tactics to extort money:

"Some have even begun to STEAL directly from God!... They have forgotten that they are not 'giving' God His tithe, since it is not theirs to 'give!' . . . It is INIQUITY which means SIN, to steal God's tithe!"

In a recorded sermon originally given on Nov. 6, 1976, and later played in most WCG services worldwide, Ted stressed that "failing to tithe nets death." In the April 8, 1975, issue of the WCG's ministerial bulletin, Garner Ted attempted to make those who were lax in tithing feel as though they had all but committed the unpardonable sin:

"I cannot IMAGINE any person claiming to be 'converted'... claiming to be a 'Christian,' yet having an attitude of resentfulness and rebellion toward giving God His prior claim [10%] over our own incomes" (p. 179).

At the May 1976 ministerial conference Garner Ted urged the ministers to "use [in sermons] some of the statistics" he had given them "about the rapid decline in third tithe-meaning the poor fund, the poor tithe" to cause the church members to feel guilty about not paying third tithe. He admonished them to "preach those scriptures [on aiding the poor and on third tithe] fearlessly and remind people that that [paying third tithe] is an absolute obligation that can keep them out of the kingdom more quickly than practically anything else if they neglect it-that you can lose salvation through neglect of the poor just about more quickly than any other way."

It's refreshing to learn that the Armstrongs are beginning to show some "concern" for the plight of the poor in the church by urging the members to give more to this fund. (The purpose of the third tithe fund is to help the fatherless, the widows, and the needy-at least that's what members have been told.) It's sad to say, but the third tithe fund would be many millions of dollars larger than it presently is if the Armstrongs hadn't secretly authorized using its funds to buy jet fuel, to furnish and redecorate high-ranking ministers' homes, and to pay ministers' salaries. Somehow using this third tithe "poor fund" for these things-when there's not enough money to help the needy church widows-seems like a "Robin Hood in reverse"-robbing the poor to give to the rich.

The Worldwide Church of God constantly tries to imply, based on Malachi 3, that one who does not give a tenth of his monetary income is somehow "robbing God." But since God never gave the Christian ministry the right to collect a tenth of anything-be it monetary income or agricultural produce-the church that demands a tithe of its members is in reality "robbing" its members, as God looks at it.

The WCG ministry seems to lack the faith in God to believe that he will reward those who seek him (Heb. 11:6) and supply the finances the ministry needs-so the ministry has instituted a man-made, unbiblical tithing system that takes a much greater portion of a person's income than did God's Levitical system, which didn't require a tithe be paid on a person's monetary income or a tithe be paid every seventh year. The WCG's lack of faith in God certainly is displeasing to God, as is the manner in which it twists the scriptures to try to support the tithing doctrine. Could it be that the WCG ministers are worshipping God in vain, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men? (Mark 7:7.)

WCG Ignores Truth About Tithing. The preceding facts on tithing were taken from over 40 bulky papers advocating Christians do not have to tithe that were submitted to the top leaders of the Worldwide Church of God since late 1973. Regrettably, the WCG leadership has still utterly refused either to openly acknowledge the existence of the facts in these papers or to refute them. In July 1975, however, the WCG did publish a revised booklet on tithing entitled Tithing. Though touted as a "complete, well-researched" booklet by Garner Ted Armstrong in a July 21, 1975, letter, it is little more than a rambling discourse on the mind of God, the merits of Christian giving, and the needs of the Worldwide Church of God, coupled with a complex maze of unbiblical, man-made rules to aid people in determining what to tithe on.

In spite of this well-publicized booklet, the WCG's income continued to plummet as thousands quit tithing. In April 1977, in the midst of another deep financial crisis, the WCG unveiled yet another long-winded booklet on tithing-Your Best Investment- written by John Schroeder and Ted Armstrong. The authors lash out at Christians who would salt away a portion of their money for a future emergency, rather than giving every extra penny to the WCG. While this is terrible financial advice to give a church member, this advice, if followed, will certainly help the WCG end its financial worries.

As expected, the booklet supplies no scriptural proof that Christians should tithe, though it is replete with gross overgeneralizations, excessive usage of italics and exclamation marks, hollow rhetoric, and intimidating statements such as "it is iniquity, which means sin, to steal God's tithe!" (p. 36.)

The authors admit "Christ... did not specifically deal with the tithing law anywhere in the Sermon on the Mount. And it is not dealt with specifically and pointedly anywhere else in the New Testament" (pp. 52-53). Yet the authors somehow conclude that since tithing wasn't specifically abrogated by the New Testament, it is still in force. Now if the old covenant tithing laws given to ancient Israel are still in force, so are all the other Mosaic laws not specifically rescinded. But the WCG ignores 90% of the Mosaic law and doesn't even come close to adhering to the law's clear instructions concerning tithing. To get around this obvious discrepancy, the WCG declares that since it is the true church, it has the right to determine "the modern application and expansion of the Old Testament principles and laws" (p. 53). Of course, the authors conveniently forget to mention that the WCG has long condemned other churches-especially the Catholic church-for giving biblical laws "modern applications," while ignoring the plain commands of scripture.

In fact, neither this newest tithing booklet nor the older one advocate following the Bible's guidelines for tithing or for supporting the Christian ministry, but rather both advocate following the Worldwide Church of God's own set of guidelines. Still, the final choice belongs to the WCG member. He can follow God's plain commands or the commandments of men!

Separation of Church and State?

$2.5 Million Federal Handout to Armstrong Cult

After nearly two years of review, the Federal government through its General Services Administration and Department of Health, Education and Welfare, appears poised to "sell" a choice parcel of real estate to Ambassador College for no more than 20% of its assessed value. The market value of this prime property is conservatively estimated at $2½ million.

The property in question is the historical, seven-story Vista Del Arroyo Hotel and nineteen surrounding buildings. They stand on 15.3 acres of scenic Pasadena landscape overlooking the picturesque Arroyo Seco.

The Vista property dates back to 1882, when a popular boarding house catering to wealthy families was located there. Later, the hotel was built on the site. During World War II, the hotel was taken over by the armed services and used as a military hospital. After the war it was used by various Federal agencies before being declared surplus property in November 1975.

An administrative services act passed by Congress in 1949 provides for disposal of such public properties at "100 per cent public benefit allowance." Federal agencies have first choice, but if no government agency has need of a property then cities, nonprofit organizations and educational institutions are able to put in a request. If no one in the above categories steps forward, the facility would be placed on the open market and sold to the highest bidder.

As it turned out, no other Federal agency desired the Vista property, and Ambassador College was the only educational institution expressing interest. Ambassador then took all steps necessary to secure the 80% discount given to educational institutions that qualify. An additional 20% discount would be allowed should the college become accredited.

Ambassador officials say they plan to use the building for a library, health center with hospital wards, general offices, studios and classrooms for the arts.

Initially the property transfer had smooth sailing, and it appeared the transaction would be concluded by April of 1976. However, stiff opposition arose from many concerned Pasadena citizens and civic-minded groups. Mounds of evidence were presented at the Federal and local level documenting much of the controversy that has been the trademark of the Armstrongs and their church and college. Among the charges documented were lack of academic and religious freedom, absence of democratic procedures, and the official policy of forbidding college students and church members from voting or any other "contacts with the governments of this world." The Worldwide Church of God also strongly discourages any of its members from becoming involved with the military services in either a combatant or noncombatant role.

Some examples of the denial of basic human rights at Ambassador College are:

"You can stay at Ambassador College as long as you keep your mouth shut... and don't tell other people what you think you believe, or try to convince them to believe your way. Because if you do that, then I'm going to bounce you out of here like a half-inflated basketball, buddy!" (Garner Ted Armstrong, sermon to AC students and faculty, Dec. 7, 1974.)

"I am... thankful that democracy will not flourish at Ambassador College" (GTA, sermon to AC students and faculty, Feb. 28, 1976).

"I tell you there are too many of us that are trying to see how close we can get to this world, how close can we get to Satan's way and still get into the Kingdom of God. So now I hear sermons from this pulpit that now we can vote! That is not Christ's way! What made a whore out of mother Rome? It was her contacts with the governments of this world!" (Herbert Armstrong, sermon to AC students and faculty, July 24, 1976.)

Affidavits were filed with HEW in San Francisco by numerous former students and employees of Ambassador College documenting their expulsion or dismissal from AC due to religious and/or racial discrimination. Dr. Roderick C. Meredith, evangelist and top official in the WCG, reflected the long-held church position on race with these comments before an Ambassador College congregation on August 9, 1975:

"But you know this is the land of Manasseh. [This identification is based upon the church's belief in the Anglo-Israel racial theory.] Now our Negro members, and other members, whether they be Oriental, or Mexican, or whatever, understand that... and if Mexico City had an Englishman for a mayor it would seem just a little bit odd... and if Peking had... a Belgian for a mayor, that would seem just a little bit odd, and something might be a little wrong there. But we have a black mayor, here in Los Angeles... I'm not reflecting on him at all. I'm just showing you what has happened. The mayor of our capital, Washington, D.C., is a black man, and the police chief is also, and most of the other leading men in the city, because the white people have actually fled the whole capital. And when foreign people come to the nation's capital... they are surrounded by people who are not Manassites... That's not a blessing, that is a curse!" [See page 25 of this issue for more of AC's racist commentary. Also read "The Real Cause of the Race Crisis" by Herbert Armstrong, The Plain Truth, Oct. 1963.]

These statements and actions by AC officials are clearly in violation of the intent and purpose of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. It does appear that the Federal Government and the men directly responsible for the proper disposal of the Arroyo Vista property are suffering from an acute case of bureaucratic myopia. Or is it chronic, since they have spent two entire years at taxpayers' expense prolonging what should have been an efficient investigation and subsequent decision. It was reported to this publication that Mr. Charles Fuller, HEW official in San Francisco, is one of the chief proponents of Ambassador receiving the property, an assessment we would tend to support based on his cool reception of a group of us who presented documentation at his San Francisco office. In addition, there is evidence that Stan Rader's carefully cultivated friends in Washington are working overtime to facilitate this giveaway.

Since AC and the WCG first applied for the Vista Del Arroyo, we have held the opinion that even if they were qualified to receive what had been bought and maintained with public tax dollars, the full market value should be paid-not an 80% discount as it presently stands-especially since the Armstrong theo-political machine takes in capital at the rate of over $1 million per week. (In 1975 total income was $66.5 million compared with Billy Graham's $30 million.)

This proposed handout is an issue that should enrage any taxpayer whether he's familiar with the Worldwide Church of God or not.

COMPUTER SNOOPER

It's no secret that Israel as a nation was required to tithe under the old covenant, just as it's no secret that the Israelites were commanded to tithe only on farming produce and on every tenth animal of their herd or flock (Leviticus 27:30-34). For instance, if an Israelite shepherd had eighteen sheep in his flock, only the tenth animal would be holy to the Lord. In such a case the "tithe" would merely be 1/18 or 5.6%-not a straight 10%. Israel was never commanded to tithe on wool, milk, fish, or the profit resulting from manual labor such as the making of clothes or pottery or the building of homes.

It's important for the reader to understand that Jesus himself in his profession as a carpenter was not required to tithe on the profits he made. Yet the Worldwide Church of God, through carefully calculated inference, would have its members falsely believe otherwise. Why?

Simply stated, the WCG must teach a doctrine of tithing to support its many-faceted corporate activities and its leaders' opulent life-styles. These extravagant activities embrace lavish concerts in California and Wisconsin, executive trips on church-financed jets to Rhodesia, Acapulco, Tokyo, and Paris, and a $6 million literary panacea called Quest/77. Ten personal homes of the Armstrongs are now supported by the tithepayers, in addition to over ten automobiles.

Pay and Pray. Herbert Armstrong, the self-styled, 85-year-old "apostle" of the WCG, dogmatically insists that the only reason a person is called to his church is to support him in his personal efforts of bringing the "one and only true gospel" to world leaders:

"For one great purpose you were called....That is: to get Christ's Gospel of the Kingdom of God proclaimed as a witness to all nations...."

"For forty years in this Work the doors to these nations were closed to us... But now, at last, God is opening the doors in several... big-population nations...

"You and I were called now, in this age, for the purpose of getting the true Gospel to these nations. Except for that purpose, we would not have been called now!

"God's Church is proclaiming to the whole world the very Gospel God sent to mankind by Jesus Christ-and no one else is, or has, for 18½ centuries. Your part in that Work is the only reason you were called to conversion NOW....

"I rejoice in great gratitude to God that you are all solidly behind me in this great present phase of God's Work... The income is making a good start up since January 1st. Pray earnestly that it will continue." (Member letter, 2/11/74, pp. 2, 3, 9.)

The financial support "solidly behind" Herbert comes from members who are commanded to pay a first tithe on their income, a tithe of their second tithe (second tithe is saved yearly by each member to attend WCG conventions), a third tithe every third year, plus liberal offerings for special emergencies, building construction, etc.

Over the years, the Armstrongs and their chief assistants realized that many members slacked off on their donations and tithes when faced with desires for material goods or financial hardships. (Most members who didn't have financial hardships when they entered the church ended up mired deeply in debt after a few years of giving close to 30% of their income to the Armstrongs.) For years, the WCG leaders had no quick way to check up on how much each member or minister was giving so they could keep a prod on those who were becoming lax in this regard. But all their worries along this line ended when Ambassador College purchased a sophisticated computer.

Ambassador College Enters the Computer Age. In 1967 Ambassador College purchased its first computer, an IBM System 360 Model 30. Today, 10 years later, the South Pasadena Avenue facility houses a $3 million IBM System 370 Model 158. Although there have been significant staff reductions in the last three years, the annual data processing budget still is close to $1¼ million. A major computer system called "ACTS" consolidated all campus-wide subscriber files into one major computerized file of information. All information relative to a particular subscriber became available for computer terminal display or for analysis with other subscribers in computer printouts. Every contribution made by a supporter can be viewed on a computer terminal. The date, amount, and type of contribution (i.e., holy day offering, building fund, festival fund, poor fund) are all available on a computer terminal for perusal. Also, some very personal information giving even reasons for disfellowship, marital separation, and sexual problems are present on some subscriber's files.

The creators of this computerized system envisioned it to be a tool to provide service to others; however, the Worldwide Church of God hierarchy, putting their trust in things of men and not in God, has used the system to pry into the private lives of individuals and to make conclusions about people and their spiritual lives based solely on partial physical evidence.

Garner Ted Armstrong wrote S. E. Anderson, a prolific writer on the subject of Armstrongism:

"We do practice tithing. The first tithe is 10 per cent to carry out God's Work-and no one checks up to see if a person pays. It is between the member and God" (12/31/73, p. 7).

In the April 8, 1975, ministerial bulletin of the Worldwide Church of God, Garner Ted makes the following striking statement:

"NEVER should the doctrine of tithing or the spirit of giving be used as a CLUB over people's heads, anymore than the doctrine of baptism, the receiving of God's Holy Spirit, or the laying on of hands is used as a club.... It is not the policy, as is stated in the paper, to excommunicate or disfellowship because a minister may find (and there is no way by which he COULD really find information other than the divulging of it voluntarily by the individual member) that a member has been unfaithful in tithing. This should never be grounds for disfellowship" (pp. 179-180).

Beautiful words coming from Garner Ted, but what does Ted mean when he writes that there is no way to find out the information about whether or not a member is tithing? He and almost every minister who read that statement knew it was a lie! Wasn't Ted aware of his Sept. 11, 1973, statement naming "delinquent co-workers" as part of the reason the WCG's income was not increasing at the rate he had hoped for? How did he know if a co-worker was "delinquent" or not unless someone had checked the co-worker's donation record?

Computer Tithe Checks. In an interview with Keith M. Hunter, director of the Ambassador College Data Processing Center from 1965 through 1973, he related how the concept of computer tithe checks all began:

"In early 1968 Roderick C. Meredith, then head of the U.S. church ministry for the Radio Church of God, now the Worldwide Church of God, was taking a tour of the new computer facilities at 55 North Vernon. I briefed him on the system that we were developing and showed him some printouts of donation information. His eyes seemed to widen as he realized the potentialities of such a system. He asked me to look up the donation records of two men who were about to be ordained as deacons. It turned out that one was tithing and one was not (according to Meredith). Mr. Meredith immediately set up a policy to be administered through Dan Porter, then head of the Church Administration Department, that all ordinations and elevations in rank would be done subsequent to a tithe check."

Some may question the integrity of Keith Hunter's statement and cry "sour grapes" or "that's just his opinion." However, the diamond-hard data of official documentation from the Church Administration Department bearing the signature of Roderick C. Meredith makes clear the painful truth that the WCG endorsed spying on its members' donation records. (As Rod Meredith himself would say about the following statement, "Get the point, fellas!")

"Should any minister have good reason to suspect that a member is not tithing because of financial reverses, continual indebtedness, failure to find and hold a good job, etc., he may request that a strictly confidential check be made by the 360 Computer on the member's tithing record. This should be done through the Church Administration Department here at Headquarters. Frankly, fellow ministers, we have good reason to suspect that many of our "members" are NOT paying a full tithe! Without becoming snoopy or "picky," keep your eyes open to this probability and all of you try to bring a strong sermon on God's command to tithe if you have not done so recently. Collectively, this may result in multiple thousands of additional dollars for God's Work!" (Ministerial letter, 3/1/68, p. 5.)

The Worldwide Church of God, through a supposedly "God ordained" ministry, openly sanctioned suspicion of the entire flock under its charge. That is a fact that can no longer be charged off to "sour grapes." Notice further evidence of "tithe spying" in another document from the same superintendent, signed, "Your brother in Christ":

"Also, we are beginning to look into the tithing situation. Up until we had our computer, it was very slow and difficult to check the tithing record of brethren. We still do not intend to do this all the time and try to 'catch' people at all as some denominations apparently do. But, in order to help them fulfill their responsibilities, we are going to make spot checks in certain Church areas from time to time." (Ministerial letter, 1/28/69, p 6.)

Some have condoned the practice of computer "tithe spying" with the argument that major corporations do checks on potential employees before hiring them. They argue further that even major leaders in government are asked to divulge their financial holdings before they are approved for certain positions. However, there is a wide gulf of difference between the tithe spying covertly authorized by Rod Meredith and carried out secretly on unsuspecting members and the actions accepted by the government or business organizations-who are accountable to the public. First of all, these employee "checks" are known by the prospective employee. Secondly, an employee's religious donations are never the basis of any decision regarding employment or promotion. And third, the amount or consistency of an individual's donations is not the basis for dismissal from employment, as is practiced by the Worldwide Church of God, Inc.

Fully knowing better, Meredith adjusted to a brief pang of conscience in authorizing the covert procedure by saying that "other denominations apparently do the same things." No proof, of course. But since Meredith feels, like other top WCG administrators, that all other churches are of Satan, then certainly some of them must stoop to such heinous tactics. However, the reader should be assured that the "true church of God" does not intend to spy on its members "all the time... to try to 'catch' people," according to Rod Meredith's words. No, in true Christian benevolence, the Worldwide Church of God spies on its members and employees to help them "fulfill their responsibilities," as Meredith explains.

Notice a further quote from the same document:

"In making a few of these [tithe checks] already we have been SHOCKED to find that even some of our LEADING MEN-those recommended for the Visiting Program Training Class [at that time, the all-important step for the local church man to reach the ministry] -were not tithing at all! Most of them, of course, were tithing, but many, even of this group, were giving very sparingly in offerings and to the Building Fund." (p. 6.)

History shows that those men whose donation records sank too low were removed from the Visiting Program Training Class and never managed to qualify for the ministry. Some of these men even found themselves cut from the Ambassador College payroll at the first convenient "layoff."

Keith M. Hunter, who is currently director of Data Processing for the University of Southern California, related some very interesting information concerning other administrators who personally requested tithe checks from him:

"Generally the requests I received were delicate, sensitive, and highly political. I received requests from Herbert Armstrong, Ronald Dart, Frank Brown, David Jon Hill, Albert Portune, A1 Carrozzo, Leslie McCullough, and Dan Porter. The requests generally involved ministers and headquarters personnel. Leslie McCullough followed the headquarters example, annually requesting tithe information concerning Ambassador College, Big Sandy employees. Some of the requests I received were:

"(1) Frank Brown requested information on Osamu Gotoh to determine his level of contributions during a particular two-year period (1971-72). It turned out that he had only one $10 contribution on his record. Other tithe checks on the same individual always indicated negligible giving.

"(2) After the requests for large donations and even borrowing for the 'work' were made, Herbert Armstrong requested a tithe check on all the airplane pilots to determine if they had responded.

"(3) All U.S. ministers were selected from the computer files and their contribution records were checked in-depth during the years 1972-73. One minister in the Midwest that I knew personally was given a great deal of problems by the administration over his donation situation.

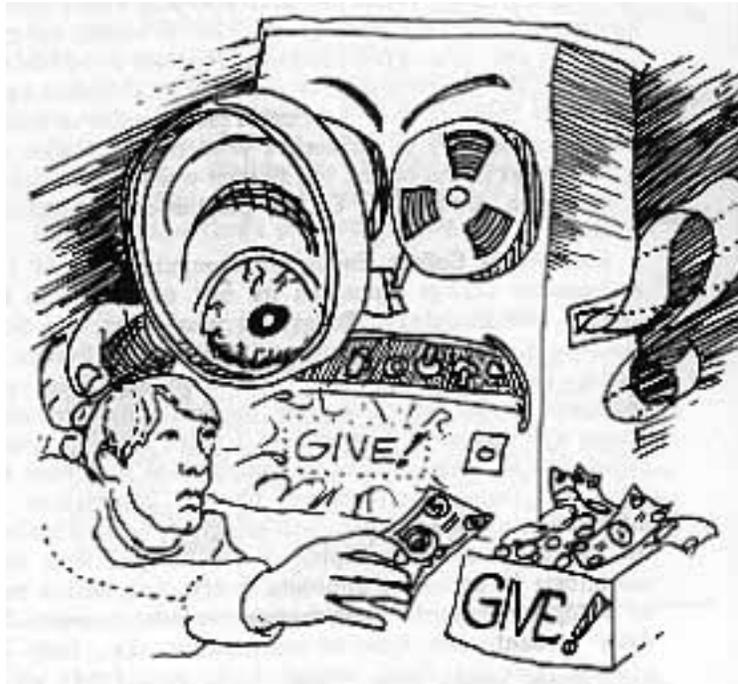

"(4) On several occasions when Pasadena employees were to be promoted, a tithe check was made to determine loyalty, devotion, etc.

"(5) A1 Portune, former vice-president of finance for Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church, annually requested listings of noncontributing headquarters employees.

"(6) The Visiting Program frequently requested listings of whole church areas around the Pasadena headquarters area. The Reno, Nevada, church had some scathing sermons accusing members of not tithing, disloyalty, etc., after a cursory analysis was made of the church donation record. Those requesting the listings, which were technical in nature, did not know how to read them and probably made many unsubstantiated conclusions.

"In addition, having scanned many of these reports before giving them out, I've noticed that Herbert Armstrong himself did not tithe in the normal way taught by the church. In one particular year his donation record contained only four donations. He did not tithe on each paycheck as the rest of the church was commanded to do."

What Can Be Done. In this article, we have presented evidence from Ambassador College data processing supervisors who were actually ordered to carry out tithe checks via the computer. We have also presented irrefutable documentation that the Worldwide Church of God ministry was aware of and participated in these clandestine thrusts into the personal, private lives of members of the same brotherhood.

Ambassador Report would like to go on record condemning the WCG's unethical, gestapo-like practice of prying into members' donation records while publicly giving the impression that a person's name and any other facts gathered on him will be kept strictly confidential. We detest the practice of using a person's donation record to determine which employees to lay off-especially since (1) giving a specific amount of money to Ambassador College and/or the WCG is NOT a requirement for employment there and (2) this method is discriminatory in that it is used selectively against church members but not against nonmember employees or friends or relatives of the WCG leaders.

It's time for knowledgeable members, employees, and former members to stand up and speak out with one voice against this heinous practice. It's also time for members, if approached by a nosy Ambassador College official or WCG minister and asked about their donation record-as several have been-to forcefully reply: "My donation record is none of your... business" and end the conversation right there. After all, you, the member, pay his salary!

Financing the Church -An Insiders View

In the last three years, almost 100 ministers of the Worldwide Church of God declared that the WCG's tithing system is immoral and unscriptural. These men either resigned or were forced out of the WCG. Some wondered why they didn't just stay in the church, accept a pay raise, and keep their ideas to themselves. They explained that as a minister of Jesus Christ, they had a responsibility to God to teach the whole truth to their flock, and if they were no longer allowed to teach what the Bible said on a subject, such as tithing, their consciences wouldn't allow them to remain silent-especially when they knew about the terrible suffering poor members underwent due to practicing tithing.

Nevertheless, about a dozen of the highest paid WCG leaders decided they could remain within the church, continue to claim to be a representative of Jesus Christ, and teach the church's doctrine of tithing-even though they have all privately admitted that it is totally without biblical support.

Because of the large number of WCG members worldwide that have been adversely affected by the current "commanded-tithing" misinformation (see our Letters section), Ambassador Report has taken the position that members have a right to know any information submitted to the doctrinal committee that could clarify any misimpressions about what the Bible says on tithing and that could relieve any unnecessary financial hardships.

The doctrinal committee has received over 40 papers on tithing from prominent and respected WCG ministers, writers, and researchers. One of these people in particular occupies a position of respected prominence, and as such might be looked upon by many individuals as a promulgator of issues of public importance.

He is Brian Knowles, the managing editor of The Plain Truth-a magazine purporting to be "an educational service."

Ambassador Report feels that the public in general and WCG members in particular are entitled to read a fair representation of his researched, expressed, and written comments on the subject of tithing. We do not impute any positive or negative value to his conduct or performance as a Christian, a corporate official, or a human being but feel the weight of his corporate perspective and his humanitarian judgment ought to be brought to bear upon the subject of tithing for the benefit of the general public. Therefore, Ambassador Report would like to present several papers and memos on tithing authored by this individual. This will allow members for the first time the right to determine the extent to which the Armstrongs have suppressed the doctrinal committee's freedom to speak out and publish the true nature of their findings on tithing. We ask each member to personally compare and contrast the following material with the church's most recent booklet, Your Best Investment. (The following material written by Brian Knowles has been edited for spelling and punctuation and the italics have been removed, but his wording remains unchanged.)

THE DOCTRINAL COMMITTEE

Regarding the subject of tithing: I think the doctrinal committee has utterly lost its way. In fact I don't think they ever found it to the first place. GTA pretty well put the kibash on any objective study on the subject. I think his mind is made up, the doctrine (the basic part of it) is obviously an untouchable sacred cow. I see a sign hanging around the tithing principle which says, "Do Not Disturb!"

I'm convinced that at least 2 or possibly 3 other major doctrinal subjects will fall into the same category: (1) the commission. (Actually, the whole basis for our prophetic teaching is included in this.) (2) Church government. (I think changes can be made below the Armstrong level only.) (3) The covenants.

Once the subject of the covenants breaks wide open I'm afraid we're in for real trouble. This to me is the biggest single priority that exists right now. It deals with the basis of our entire set of practices and beliefs-at least the ones that make us unique.... If the "truth" about the covenants is unveiled to our membership, our entire ship could sink. And I'm sure it will eventually.... I'm afraid our doctrinal and theological house is built upon subjective sand and the winds are beginning to howl with ever increasing intensity.

I have personally given up on the doctrinal committee. When I show up it is only to take notes. It is obvious that Dr. Hoeh and other right-wingers question my attitude, thinking, and right to contribute.... The Game Plan now seems to be "don't rock the boat anymore. Let's not make any more changes for awhile. We've done enough. Let's stabilize what's left and get on with the job of preaching the Gospel according to Ezekiel and Elijah (to come)." I think Dr. Hoeh and others have very effectively neutralized the effectiveness of the doctrinal committee for now. Lester Grabbe is the one voice of reason who is still able to make contributions-and only because of his devastatingly accurate scholarship.

The doctrinal committee deck is being stacked in the same way Nixon loaded the Supreme Court.... Objectivity and honesty have fallen in the streets, and we grope at noonday as in the night. It is now an exercise in futility with all changes being token and minimal The idea is to get back to the winning game of the early and middle 60s.

I agree... that we are likely to continue to lose people from the ministry and the laity unless we are suddenly taken with a massive dose of honesty and repentance....

I'm convinced we lack faith in God to provide for the needs of preaching the Gospel-and we lack confidence in the loyalty of our membership to support it. We have never admitted that the Holy Spirit can collectively lead the entire church into anything. It must always be "from the top down" and by authority. We have a form of godliness but....

TITHING IN THE NEW TESTAMENT

Christ Upheld Levitical Tithing Law. Matt. 23:23-(a) upholds Levitical tithing law which would prohibit Christ or the apostles from taking tithes since they were not Levites. (b) Confirms that this law was agricultural (mint, anise, and cummin) and not monetary.

Christ came-not to do away with the commandments-but to maintain them (Matt. 5:11-19). This would include the Levitical tithing law since the temple was still standing for 29 years after Christ's death and all during the establishment of the NT [New Testament] church. If the Jewish NT Christians had been tithing to both the Levites and the apostles, it could have cost them up to 60%+ of their incomes (according to our reasoning!). (cf. Lev. 27:30-34; Matt. 5:17-19; Matt. 23:23.)

Matt. 22:16-21-The money (taxes) was rendered unto Caesar and the agricultural tithe to the Levites as God's representative.

Like the Pharisees, we have placed greater emphasis on tithing than on the weightier matters of the law!

Did Jesus Teach Apostles to Take Tithes? If he [Jesus] had, he would have been violating the same law he himself had upheld. The apostles were not Levites. (Matthews' name-Levi-is no proof he was a Levite, as many non-Levitical Jews have that name.) Jesus was of Judah. For Christ and/or the apostles to take tithes-especially while the Levitical system was still functioning (up to 70 A.D.)-would have been to violate Numbers 19.

Christ Set Up a Different System for Financing the New Testament Church. Luke 10:3-16, Matt. 10:9-10, Matt. 6:25-34 are said to show the system Jesus established for the support of His New Testament Church. Essentially, this means living off whatever the people give of their own free will. Under this system, the ministry would rely on faith for sustenance while preaching the gospel. They would not be forced to become corporate executives in order to support a vast financial empire.

Under our system the finances come before the preaching of the gospel. With "Christ's" NT system the gospel was first preached-the sustenance came later.

Acts 4:32-35 shows how the activities of the Pentecost and Jerusalem gathering period were financed. People sold houses and lands and donated funds which the other less fortunate people-not the apostles-shared. No tithe is mentioned here. They were not coerced to contribute. Rather, they saw where God was working and responded.

Acts 5:1-11. The sin of Ananias and Sapphira had nothing to do with tithing. They were punished only for lying.

Paul's Teaching. Paul upheld the Levitical tithing law. He said "...the sons of Levi... have [present tense] a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law..." (Heb. 7:5). This was about 64 A.D. or later-long after the NT Church had begun.

Paul taught another way of financing the New Testament ministry: Acts 20:28-35 (v. 35-weak = "needy" -Moffatt; "poor"-Rien).

Paul did not take tithes of the Ephesians. He was not a Levite. It would have been against the law for him to do so. He worked with his own hands, supporting not only himself, but also "them that were with me" (v. 34).

In other cases he accepted support from "other churches," but not the Corinthians (II Cor. 11:8).

If tithing were a NT law, then Paul would have been causing them to sin when he didn't accept it. He would have been spiritually negligent if he did not teach tithing. He would have caused them to be "cursed with a curse" for not tithing!

II Cor. 11:9-The Levitical tithing system was never called a "burden"-none of God's laws were burdensome. Yet Paul said it would have been burdensome to the Corinthians to support Paul financially.

I Corinthians 9. If we take this chapter to prove NT tithing, we are reading into it what is not there. Tithing is not referred to. Paul did show that he was entitled to material support-but that he was not seeking it (v. 15). If tithing were the subject, why then didn't Paul refer to the tithing law in Leviticus or Numbers instead of to Deut. 25:4 about the ox treading the corn? Because the tithing law referred only to the Levites-v. 13.

V. 14-What "the Lord ordained" is found in Matt. 10, Luke 10, and Luke 12-trusting God in faith for whatever voluntary support was offered.

Did Early NT Church Tithe? The New Catholic Encyclopedia states: "The early Church had no tithing system... it was not that no need for supporting the Church existed or was recognized. but rather that other means appeared to suffice" (art. "Tithe"). This is confirmed by the Encyclopaedia Britannica-11th edition-and the Americana.

Is Hebrews 7 "The Tithing Chapter"? This chapter allegedly confirms that the tithing law was transferred to apply (once again) to the Melchisedec Priesthood of which Christ is the representative-thus necessitating payment to his ministers.

The real subject of the chapter, however, is the superiority of Christ's priesthood over that of the Levites. The subject of tithing is merely one of several examples to show the superiority of Christ's function over the Levitical system.

In verse 9 we are told, "Levi... paid tithes in Abraham...." Why didn't he pay them himself if the law of tithing was in force prior to Lev. 27?

The "change in the law" referred to in verse 12 has nothing to do with tithes being paid to the apostles or the New Testament Church.

The only "commandment" referred to in this chapter is that of Levitical tithing and that commandment is said to be "disannulled" (set aside) in verse 18. All commandments concerning the Levitical priesthood are set aside today since it is not functioning.

While Mormonism teaches that its ministry is the Melchisedec priesthood, the 7th chapter of Hebrews plainly states that Christ himself is the only priest after that order. (See Joseph Smith's work, The Pearl of Great Price.)

Even if we were to tithe today according to the Levitical law, it would still not be a monetary tithe.

When tithing was finally introduced into the Catholic Church long after the first century, it was in the form of a voluntary offering.

By the Synod of Macon (585) it [tithing] became compulsory under threat of excommunication. Civil authorities were used as enforcers. Later, tithing was ended as a law with the French Revolution. (See New Catholic Encyclopedia article "Tithe.")

There was no law in the Old or the New Testament which ever required a monetary tithe of one's income. The concept of a monetary tithe is not of God. It was man-ordained because Church leaders could not trust God in faith for support and did not wish to place themselves at the mercy of the people for sustenance.

What If Everyone Tithed? If everyone tithed every time money changed hands (in buying and selling), any given sum of money would be tithed on not once, but many times over. Finally, those who received tithes-if they chose not to spend money-could end up with all the money in circulation. The economy would collapse. Take an $800 salary and see how many times it is tithed on ....

On the other hand, under God's Levitical system, something was only tithed on once (twice-to High Priest?). A person with nine head of cattle could not tithe until he had ten. The system never impoverished anyone.

Our tithing system, on the other hand, can and does impoverish some people (especially middle class and below). It insures that certain people will never be able to save up enough money to make a major purchase-if their earning power is below a certain level. Witness Australia.

We are beginning to parallel the Catholic Church in which the Popes and Cardinals lived in lavish splendor while many of the people were suffering deep poverty and want.

Does the Church Have Authority to Make Tithing a Law? Matt. 16:19 regarding "binding and loosing" is offered as a proof that we do. This contradicts Deut. 4:2 about adding to the Word of God, however, Matt. 16:19 in the KJV is a mistranslation. Williams' [translation of the Bible] has it right: "Whatsoever you forbid on earth must be what is already forbidden in heaven, and whatever you permit on earth must be what is already permitted in heaven."

Other Negative Aspects. We should not be sending money to sustain foreign office and college workers at a level better than the local people. "Ambassador College Quality" can be offensive to local people who are struggling for economic survival. We should live at the standard of the society among which we are working. Are we exporting American luxury or the Gospel of Christ?

In the meantime, we are forcing some (many?) church members to live at a standard below the neighborhood in which they live. (Their gross may be the same or even higher-but their net is less.)

Many P.T.'s [Plain Truths] are wasted-are actually reduced to level of "junk mail." Fancy equipment is purchased and never used. Whole departments [at headquarters] are in chaos with constant redefining of roles, layoffs, changes, etc. Our efficiency is almost nil.

Oral Roberts and Billy Graham are able to have a far greater impact on society with budgets about a third the size of ours.

If we dropped the man-devised monetary tithing system, we would be forced to draw closer to God, develop greater efficiency and true economy, [and] be less arrogant with the people. We might even see the signs God promised would accompany the preaching of the gospel. God would provide our material needs.

"Second" and "Third" tithes are also misunderstood in their Old Testament usage and don't apply today anyway since the whole system stands or falls on the first tithe.

RECOMMENDATIONS AND CONSIDERATIONS

After studying the issues of tithing (all three [tithes]) for some time, I think we may draw certain conclusions which provide a basis for understanding and decision making in this area. Perhaps these points will succinctly summarize the real issues:

(1) As Dr. Hoeh pointed out on one occasion, we still have needs. The ministry and the preaching of the Gospel still have need to be financed somehow. There is a need to finance the annual festivals. We still have the poor and the widows with us and always will, as Christ said. They still need financial help. The Church must arrive at some system of taking care of these three primary needs.

(2) We have no biblical evidence that the Old Testament tithing system was practiced by first-century Christians. There is no New Testament instruction regarding tithing (tenthing).

(3) We know that the Levitical tithing system was still in force until at least 70 A.D. The Church began in 31 A.D. Are we to believe that a double system of tithing was being practiced during those 29 years?

(4) Hebrews 7 does not appear to enjoin tithing on modern Christians. The "change in law" seems to refer to the whole administration rather than to the specific command regarding tithing. The subject of tithing is introduced in this section as an analogy (as D&R in Romans 7) to show the superiority of the Melchisedec priesthood (of which Christ is the only representative) over that of the Levites. The subject of whether Christians should tithe is not under discussion here.

(5) I Corinthians 9 does not mention tithing specifically. Nor is tithing the subject under discussion. If tithing were being discussed, Paul would have quoted the law of tithing from the Torah. Instead he quoted Deut. 25:4 regarding not muzzling the ox that treadeth the corn ....

The subject here is the support of the ministry. It refers to the physical sustenance of the ministry on a personal level (i.e., Paul, Peter, and the other apostles). It does not have-even in principle-anything to do with the financing of a globe-girdling, gospel-preaching corporation. It defines no fixed or minimum percentage. To suggest that I Corinthians 9 teaches tithing or to say it gives us the authority to command the membership to tithe is to distort it far beyond its original meaning and intent.

(6) If tithing was (and is) a divine law enjoined on New Testament Christians, then Paul was grossly negligent in not teaching it. He would have caused people to be cursed financially according to our present understanding (based on Mal. 3). Yet Paul received support only from the Philippian Church (Phil 4:15), and even then he merely spoke of "giving and receiving"-not tithing.

(7) The Church does not have the authority to add to the laws of God. The Pharisees did so and bound "heavy burdens grievous to be borne," Deut. 4:2; 12:32; Matt. 23:4. We should be silent where the Bible is silent, speak where it plainly speaks, and be vague where it is vague. We dare not go beyond the Bible and add many laws based on "expediency."

(8) The principle of the New Testament is simple, cheerful giving based on personal volition. God loves a cheerful giver. Where your treasure is there will your heart be also. It is more blessed to give... etc., etc.

(9) What, then, may the Church do without going beyond the authority of God's revealed word?

We could ask our members-encourage them-to support the Work (i.e., the Corporation) to the extent of 10% of their income, or more, if they feel they can afford it. We should not command or demand the tithe, but we can encourage people to use it as a basic minimum by which the Work can anticipate a reliable and consistent support of its membership.

This would provide a stable figure upon which the corporation could tentatively budget. WE SHOULD IN NO WAY PENALIZE A PERSON WHO DOES NOT-FOR WHATEVER REASON-TITHE. It is not a divine law for New Testament Christians.

Tithing thus becomes a matter of faith-a voluntary act based on the person's willingness to support the preaching of Christ's own Gospel.

(10) We might consider the principle of statements of intention regarding first tithe as a means of budget projection.

(11) THE ANNUAL HOLY DAYS:

The principal reason for traveling to Jerusalem in the Old Testament was the Tabernacle and later the Temple. Each Holy Day was connected with a sacrifice.

Today, there is no real reason for long pilgrimages to distant Festival sites. We have no temple, no sacrifices. The main reason to keep the Festivals today is to understand the Plan of God.

This can be done in local areas just as the spring festivals are kept. We will lose nothing of the meaning of the days if we keep them in local church areas.

The Fall Festival could be observed by keeping the first and the eighth days as Sabbaths with AM and PM services on which we could ask for an offering. (Technically, however, only three offerings were required under the Old Testament system. We take up seven- cf. Deut. 16:16).

The remaining days could be regular work days with services held each evening in local halls.

This would have several advantages. The people would hear just as much preaching. They would not have to save a second tithe of their income to attend annual Festivals. They would not lose time (and sometimes jobs) from work. Their income would not be interrupted. They would not have the sometimes impossible logistics of long treks across the country to distant Festival sites in dilapidated autos, with sick children, accidents, etc. We would not have to have congested Festival sites, taxing facilities to their limit, all across the country. (The Feast sites have become large, unwieldy and unpleasant for many people, especially those with large families. The Feast is often an ordeal instead of a joyful occasion. Of course there are others who find it a pleasant break from routine, and probably most look forward to it.)

Under this system, people would have considerably more money they could (in many cases) put into the financing of the first commission! This could mean a considerable increase in income for the Work as a whole! The money would be going where it is most needed instead of down a rathole. It would protect hundreds of jobs (lost annually by Feast attendance). This would mean fewer unemployed people in the Church, and that in turn would help the income.

The Feast days would still be observed and the meaning would not be lost-but the cost would be cut down drastically. It would ease an enormous burden off the shoulders of the people. The income of the Work could increase as a result!

Note: We have no indication (exception: Paul) that the New Testament Church traveled great distances to observe the Feast days. Almost nothing is said of the Feast of Tabernacles in the New Testament at all!

People could be encouraged to keep a savings account for the Festivals. This would amount to whatever their particular needs were. They could save for offerings, special dinners at fine restaurants, gifts for their children, etc. They could share this with widows and others. The ministers would also save this money, preventing a double standard from occurring. It would be no fixed amount

....

Third tithe could be abandoned and replaced by a major Emergency Fund. The needs of this fund-i.e., specific financial goals-could be made known to the membership annually. (This could be run somewhat like the Red Feather campaigns in which a "thermometer" graph is used to show how far from the goal we are, etc.) At the end of the year, members could receive a report showing what was accomplished by the fund. Thus the needs of widows, orphans and other emergencies could be taken care of without the need to levy a "tithe" on the people.

If all of the above is rejected for political, philosophical, or financial reasons, I think any "tithe" that is asked of the people should be on the net. I think the simplest way to define the net is "taxable income."

Summary: The above recommendations would theoretically not hurt the Work in any way. They could improve the financial picture overall-both for the corporation and for individual Church members.

They are in harmony with biblical revelation. They add nothing to the Bible and take nothing from it. They are within the legitimate bounds of Church authority. They solve the exegetical problems connected with tithing in the New Testament. They do not in any way jeopardize the knowledge of God's Plan of Salvation as illustrated through the annual Holy Days. They still take care of the needs of the people. They might improve the financial picture for the Work as a whole since they free up more personal money among the Church membership.

I sincerely hope such measures can be adopted by the Church.

Intimidation at Ambassador College-A Case History

Shortly before leaving my position as Director of Research for the Garner Ted Armstrong television program, I was given the responsibility of gathering all the research material I could find on the subject of "tithing" for Dr. Charles Dorothy's Doctrinal Research Team. In the process of completing this assignment, two things occurred which began to cause the administration to reevaluate my unquestioning loyalty to the Armstrongs.

(1) Mike Holman, a supervisor in the Data Processing Department, quietly informed me that he had been directed to run another extensive tithing check on church and college employees. A person's tithing record was being used as an index of his loyalty to the Armstrongs and of his "conversion to Christ."

We had always been solemnly assured, in sermons and church literature on "tithing," that the records of one's donations were inviolate and confidential-that giving was something deeply personal between an individual and God.

My wife and I had learned, approximately eight months before this event, that the tithing records were exploited for numerous purposes. We decided at that point that we were not going to allow ourselves to be the willing recipients of this kind of invasion of privacy, so we sent in our tithes and offerings in such a way as not to show up on the computer. It was also at this time that we began to donate a portion of our tithes and offerings to charitable causes. Anyway, the net effect was that Mike Holman's computer printout showed no record of our tithes or donations.

During a May 31, 1977, interview on CBC radio, Robert Kuhn, executive assistant to Garner Ted Armstrong, was asked this question: "Does the church keep tabs on who does and who does not contribute?" Kuhn answered: "No, in no way is that tabulated or analyzed by a person and sent to a minister. In no way has that ever been done to the membership .... Nobody will ever check and has ever checked on ... the membership's tithing record."

(2) During this same "tithe-check" period, Robert Kuhn informed me that he was under intense administrative pressure to terminate Harry Eisenberg, one of my employees, because he was not tithing and had been doing some "talking" to others about his research on tithing. Harry was one of Robert's close friends, and Robert was asking me to structure some type of "budgetary layoff" in my department so he could discreetly get rid of Harry without a hassle. I told Robert that I would not fabricate a reason to terminate Harry because he was a highly competent employee who had done excellent work for me. Robert called me at least twice a week during the next month begging, urging, demanding, and pleading that I terminate Harry for him because the administrative pressure on him was getting so intense. My basic response to him was that he was my up-line supervisor and he would have to be responsible for terminating Harry if it was going to happen because I was going to stand in his way. I felt that the responsibility I had to protect my employees from this type of institutional harassment offset my organizational responsibility to simply click my heels and obey orders. I also told Robert that I had discussed Harry's situation with the current managing editor of The Plain Truth (Harry's former supervisor), who had originally asked Harry to research the subject of tithing, and it was our mutual feeling that tithing was a personal thing between an individual and God-not a criteria of employment and something to be related to tangible job skills. Robert said he personally agreed, but he was being forced to get rid of Harry-the pressure was just too intense. Finally, Robert terminated Harry over my objection and the "Reason for Termination" blank read, "budgetary cutback and layoff," which had become the standard official cosmetic statement for religious layoffs on personnel records. If you wish to read Harry's own story, see Ambassador Review, June 1976, "Executive Action," p. 22.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Excerpts From the Tithing papers

Since Harry Eisenberg first submitted his controversial paper on tithing in mid-1973, the Worldwide Church of God's doctrinal committee has received close to 50 papers and memos on the subject of tithing. The vast majority of these papers were zealously kept out of general circulation because they showed conclusively that the WCG's tithing doctrine was full of specious reasoning and misapplied scriptures.

Below are the conclusions from three papers on tithing submitted to the doctrinal committee that the WCG ministers and members were never shown. The first excerpt is taken from "Is Tithing a Principle We Should Follow?" (written in March 1974):

"God will abundantly bless any church that steps out in faith and depends upon him for spiritual and monetary support, but he is not pleased with those who try to extort money on his behalf by causing people to live in fear of retaliation or of being disfellowshipped if they don't give a minimal fixed amount to his church. Ministers who are serving God need not fear he will forsake them or their church and refuse to provide their daily bread! If he cares for the lilies of the field and for the birds of the air, how much more shall he care for his own children!"

The second excerpt is taken from the paper "I Corinthians 9 and Tithing," written in July 1974 by a member of Ambassador College's theology department:

"Alternative #3 is personally one which I do not want to face up to. It is somewhat frightening to think of going to a 'volunteer' system after we have relied on a tithing doctrine for a good portion of our income for so long. On the other hand, if it is decided that the New Testament does not teach or presuppose tithing, I frankly think this is the most responsible alternative. To try to teach a 'principle of tithing' from a general philosophy and Old Testament examples has its drawbacks. No one doubts everything belongs to God. But if clear examples or commands cannot be found in the New Testament, we would have serious problems of consistency in claiming to be the New Testament Church which Christ founded, based on the Bible with the revelation of God incomplete apart from the New Testament.

"The New Testament cannot be understood apart from its Old Testament background. The Old Testament is as fully inspired as the New. But if we judge tithing purely on the Old Testament, what in the world are we going to do about sewing fringes on our garments (Deut. 22:12)?"

The third excerpt is the conclusion to the paper "Christian Tithing," written in August 1974:

"Without imputing motives or implying that no one has honestly faced the entire issue, I want to urge that everyone face the issue honestly. We must ask ourselves these questions:

"1. Is it possible we don't want to admit that the pastors of the Associated Churches of God were right and in consequence tend to blind ourselves to the Bible facts about tithing?

"2. Is it possible that we don't have the faith to believe God will support the Work in the style to which He wishes it to be accustomed without a tithe law imposed on the people?

"3. Is it possible that we don't want to admit that years ago 'we' were 'sold a bill of goods' so to speak, and did not as we have prided ourselves really PROVE the doctrines we accepted?"

THE MANPOWER PAPERS

In 1961 at the behest of the Armstrongs a "manpower committee" comprising 15 of the leading men of Ambassador College (AC) was formed. The noble purpose of this committee was to evaluate AC students-especially male students-and determine whether or not to employ them at AC or in the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) upon graduation. The Manpower Committee, however, quickly degenerated into a high-level gossip session in which a group of corporate misfits combined to destroy the reputation of numerous students whose only offense may have been intellectual resistance to the doctrinal intimidation and personal prejudices of AC/WCG officials while attending to their formal education.

Before any discussion of a student began, his picture was projected onto a screen. Then, as the members of this "spiritual jury" stared at the student's image, each one of them divulged information - often given to them confidentially in private counseling sessions - gathered on the student. This information often included a student's background, racial and genetic heritage, sex and dating problems, attitudes, and physique, in addition to biased personal assessments of a student's potential worth to the organization.

Below Ambassador Report is reprinting a number of statements made in these manpower meetings that aptly illustrate the mentality of the Ambassador College administration in the 1960s. Little if any concrete evidence for the allegations, innuendoes, or rumors in the following quotations was ever formally submitted, probably because it never existed. All students were tried in absentia and never given a chance to reply to the biased information disseminated in these meetings that sullied their reputations. Yet the essence of what was said in these meetings was carefully typed and distributed to several leading men at AC in Pasadena, the vice-chancellor of AC's Texas campus, and AC's Personnel Office. (In order to protect the identity and reputation of the students mentioned in the following statements, we will refer to all male students as "X" and to all females students as "Y." We have gone to great lengths to delete anything that we felt could lead to the identification of a student.)

RACIST COMMENTS

"Like most Negroes he is reserved, timid, and not as warm and spontaneous as he could be.... Most of our Negro leaders are partially white and don't have the normal dull mind of the average Negro."

"X has a lot of ego. He is a Jew, and a Jew feeds upon applause, people appreciating him, living in the limelight, being a performer, so they are hard to convert-but once converted Jews can be the best instrument in God's hands there is."

"Mr. Meredith feels a lot of this apparent haughtiness and cockiness is the results of the English class distinction bred in him.... The English people tend to be that way.... The English do this naturally."

"He is converted, yet like most Germans, is hard to love.... It is most imperative that we all get to know him."

COMMENTS ON SEX PROBLEMS

"He has had a sex problem since he was ten or twelve years of age; and since he came to college he has been able to overcome it several months at a time, but continually lapses back into it."

"He is all but a practicing homosexual, has a masturbation problem, and apparently is only here to protect himself from the draft."

"He is starry-eyed, has a glassy stare when speaking, is hard to listen to because of his poor eye contact-this may be a result of excessive masturbation in the past."

"X was disfellowshipped from the Church several years ago because of homosexual problems."

"She comes from a mother dominated home, a pragmatic home, and she needs a 'he man' to solve her problems."

"Y has an excellent I.Q. of 123, but is neurotic.... She is unbalanced, she has sex problems and has masturbated from the time she was about 12 years of age.... She had an affair with a man in the... Church. She doesn't fit here, she is a wrong influence. She shows definite deep influence from demons."

"She acts like a lesbian, but is not-her fear and dislike for men is a result of demon influence as well as the result of an affair she had with a man that discussed her with men. She and her family have consulted spirits in the past...."

"He often looks glassy eyed, is washed out, enervated, which is unusual because he works out with weights and is athletic.... It's interesting-he gave an Attack Speech this morning on masturbation-people tend to attack most vociferously the very thing they are fighting."

"And although we would not say he is a weird personality, he has a few, weird, creepy characteristics. Dr. Hoeh wondered if he doesn't have mental sexual problems, that he may be an intellectual homosexual, not that he's ever physically committed such an act, but does he think about [it] ? We need to sound him out and find out."

"Y has had dating problems with the fellows, a strong sex drive, a record of instability..."

"He does confess to mentally fornicating with our girls every day of his life. Before he came into the church he used to masturbate twice a day-he is a sexual pervert in his mind. He has had demon problems...."

"X was also discussed as a possible man for the Sermonette List, but when we found he was also guilty of necking (though done very lightly), he was rejected from the Sermonette List.... Mr. Apartian had talked to X before and will talk to him again to find out whether this was a quick goodnight kiss or could be classified as petting."

MARRIAGE MANIPULATION

"Mr. Smith said whoever counsels them in the final outcome should certainly write her father and tell him we will do all we can to discourage her marriage if he wants us to.... After further discussion we all feel best to advise them to throw cold water on it...."

"Mr. Meredith has already counselled him to postpone any engagement plans, primarily because Mrs. Armstrong was horrified when she heard about them."

"The Manpower Committee saw no objections to a marriage sometime in June."

"Mr. Hill said X had counselled him about marrying Y.... Dr. Hoeh did not feel, however, that she should tie herself down to him-she is a terrific girl, should be a Minister's wife...."

"Mr. Armstrong just recently made an ironclad rule that any Senior who wants to marry a Freshman is automatically out of college and if he doesn't take that in a right attitude is out of the Church."

"X and Y were making marriage plans when advised to put it in God's hands, break off the wedding plans, and wait until a later date.... it is doubtful she can be sure she and X are actually in love."

"Mr. Portune said he called the engagement between X and Y off-that he did not believe X was stable enough or ready for marriage."

"Mr. Elliott brought up the problem of Senior men speaking for Freshmen girls a few weeks after they have arrived on campus.... We are not bringing girls to Ambassador College to marry Senior students after only being here a month or two-we are bringing them here to train them to be wives and mothers, which should mean at least two years at Ambassador College."

"X was going steadily with Y until Dr. Hoeh counselled him to consider marrying a Russian.... Mr. Portune brought out, however, that he had counselled them and told them that they could not get married for a year and a half after graduation and they both know that they cannot get married.... These students need to learn that unless God is with them they have no business getting married in the first place.... Let's give them the test, make them... quit running from one minister to the next... and wait the year and a half after graduation as Mr. Portune told them to do in the first place.... Take the emphasis off sex and marriage and get it on the desire to seek the Kingdom of God."

"Y and X are in love, but they were told they must not get married until the Feast of Tabernacles, 196- [1½ years after this was written]. This will be quite a trial on both of them."

"He has effeminate tendencies and is definitely a fringer. We need to tell him we don't want to live his life, but we advise him not to get married-that the marriage will not work...."

"Now Y is over there and she is getting romantically involved with a weak student named X. His stock is weak. If we were cattle raisers we would not begin to allow such mating to take place. Breeding is very important."

"X is too close to Y, we need to break them up-either he goes or she goes. He is too polished, he needs Texas [Ambassador College's Texas campus), he needs to get a little manure under his fingernails...."

"He is interested in Y.... Mr. Apartian mentioned being disappointed with both of their attitudes, because he told them to break it off-but she loves him.... She is sanctimonious, like he is, and we only have eight years left anyhow [8 years till 1975, the year the WCG predicted Christ would return]."

"Mr. Portune... says he [X]... is a clod... a clown in the eyes of the other students, a prolific eater-eats everything in sight. X is only $15 in debt. He wants to marry Y. She... comes from good stock, is a nice-looking girl, beautifully shaped, and is only $438 in debt. Mr. Hill [said X]... has an odd approach, hasn't produced, and can't identify himself with the problems. He is like an unemotional fish and needs to attack something and get stirred up. Mr. Blackwell wondered then if it might not be best to... separate he and Y for awhile... and let him know this is it-sink or swim."

"Dr. Zimmerman... counseled him... to put cold water on his plans with Y.... During the past summer he was sent to... look for work, primarily to separate he and Y.... He later came back to ask Dr. Zimmerman to ask again for approval to get married. Dr. Zimmerman told him again to throw cold water on it.... X felt he could.... Dr. Zimmerman doesn't feel any consideration should be given him toward marriage, that he should be told again to put cold water on it. Mr. Meredith said he should be told not to even think about marriage for one or two years at least"

GENERAL COMMENTS

"X is odd, he came to talk to Mr. Meredith about his inability to sweat in prayer, after Mr. Meredith's sermon on really putting your heart and all your being into prayer...."

"X was told he must lose five pounds a month."

"X is also odd, finky, but has a good mind.... He has been too steeped in music...."

"He was recently given a lie detector's test which shows him to be a liar and a thief, but since the test is not infallible, and he staunchly maintains his innocence, we cannot be sure that he is a thief and liar. The lie detector records only conscious thought, however, and he was grilled for more than eight hours...."

"X is... very hard to get to know-there is always a question in our minds as to what is going on in his mind."

"X... has had a perpetual health problem (constipation)."

"Y is weird; she is not normal; she is extremely neurotic. We wouldn't be surprised if she didn't someday try to destroy herself...."

"Some of the students just had a big party at which they played questionable music, with a wrong beat, drank too many beers, got involved in the wrong kind of dancing...."

"Mr. Meredith, when reading about the wretched background he [X] came from, added that X's mother and father get in real "knock-down-and-drag-out" fights, get involved in sexual perversion, and have a wretched relationship. She has a Pentecostal background."

"Mr. [Ted] Armstrong read the resume for X and the comments made at previous Man-Power Meetings-with the comment that X is an 'ass.'... Being an ass is no condemnation, it is far better to be an ass than to be effeminate, a weakling, or a problem."

"Mr. Garner Ted Armstrong opened the meeting.... Mr. Armstrong further stressed the need for pooling our information from both colleges [Ambassador College's campuses in Pasadena and in Big Sandy] by receiving their [man-power] notes for graduating seniors and supplying them with ours."

"Mr. Armstrong could see no reason why they should not get married. His future is already mapped out for him."

"He is somewhat boyish... having been reared without a man in the house, and has taken on many womanish ways-although we don't feel he is effeminate."

"After the previous Man-Power comments were read on X, it was brought out that he is a product of his environment. Richard Plache said his father is extremely odd, a character, is self-righteous, egotistical, and is a constant problem. Like his father, he goes to bed at night wanting to die.... he has a clinging, fishy handshake, showing complete lack of strength, character, etc.... Mr. Meredith explained the need for all of us, as Man Power Committee members, to get beneath the veneer of these men and fully know their problems...."

"Mr. Meredith... said... he is dull.... Richard Plache added... that... X's parents have the same slow, dull, sluggish ways In fact, he has a younger brother who is far worse than he is-is much more buffoonish , duller, and has almost no life or spark at all. Mr. Portune feels... we could send him out for a trial as a warm body... to the minister and assist the minister in some of the routine visits."

"Mr. Armstrong read the previous evaluations of X which included comments on his family background.... He is in love with Y and they eventually want to get married. Mr. Armstrong found it a little hard to understand a mutual attraction between them.... He is sincere and he assures us he really loves Y and that there is a mutual physical attraction as well as the intellectual. Most of us might not find her attractive because of her thick wrists and ankles and blocky build...."

"Mr. Armstrong said the Admissions Committee needs to be more strict and forceful in turning down people who have physical handicaps"

"Y is not a very pretty girl, she is not a great intellect, but she will make someone a very fine wife."

"Neither Mr. Armstrong nor Mr. Meredith feel that this is the right girl for X; she is a peasant-type girl, is slightly dumb and immature."

"Mr. Hill... says there are no problems except for a few effeminate flareups now and then, a womanish tendency, but he does have good dignity, a good mind...."

"He is a liar, a fink, a queer, and has lost job after job."

"X has a self-righteous attitude. He... has a semirebellious attitude... is another one of those whom we cannot seem to get to know."

"He continues to show disrespect for authority, talks disparagingly of the leaders of the work over the breakfast table... has many signs of hidden rebellion. His children are constantly on the spanking list at school.... He is a dirty player, fouls others continually."

"X appears to have a bad attitude some, or most of the time. The whole attitude of that family has never been too good."

"We need to get to know X and jar him into cooperation...."

"X is weak, effeminate, unable to rule his house and unable to master his marital problems"

"He is slow, dull, unable to think, and is all but completely lacking in zeal."

"X is a hard worker, but he doesn't seem to know his own mind."

"She had a breakdown in Mr. Buzzard's class the other day-she couldn't stop crying. We don't want 'odd' people-people obviously demon influenced. We should not hesitate to kick her out at the end of this semester, unless there is a drastic change."

"He is not emotionally unstable as girls normally are, nevertheless, he does have an emotional problem."

"X is still somewhat girlish, although not queer; he lacks the strong masculine quality. He has a weak voice like Richard Nixon...."

"He did finally come to talk to Mr. Elliott, he told about kissing in the bedroom, where another student saw him, but he didn't tell everything. He went behind the science class building, behind Mr. Meredith's house, and fondled her breasts, etc., and she is the one who told this to Mr. Elliott."

"Mr. Ted Armstrong said there are still security leaks in our manpower committee that must be stopped. Word got back to X that we had discussed him in a recent manpower meeting, but what he heard was 5th or 6th hand, perverted, warped, and only a small percent correct."

"Unless he goes into the field [ministry], the draft may snatch him up. Someway we need to legally classify him as doing ministerial work of some nature. Mr. Hill classified X as an assistant to him, dealing with theological responsibilities, as a ministerial assistant, and he was reclassified without any problem. He suggests we write the same kind of letter he did to the draft board.... "

"X took Y, W, V, Z, and the girls signed out to go to the Student Dance. Instead they went to a football game, and when it didn't prove exciting enough they went to a park and played touch football themselves. Some other people joined the party... and they wound up going to the sister's house of one of the people they met and staying till 2:30 in the morning dancing and drinking. When they brought the girls back they were fearful of getting caught so they dropped the girls off on Orange Grove Boulevard. The girls cut through the Orange Grove Manor property and signed in-but they falsified their time.... His father is cocky, conceited, has constant financial problems... is often bothered with demons, etc."

"...the sewage of X's activity continues to flow through to us He is one of the worst scum who has ever walked across this campus"

Ambassador Report feels that the manpower mentality still predominates at AC. Some have cited the discontinuation of the comprehensive Manpower Committee in 1970 as a sign that all is now well. However, a memorandum from the committee's chairman, Gainer Ted Armstrong, indicates that there is still cause for concern:

"...it will be no handicap whatever for various departments to obtain useful information about prospective employees, or for a smaller group to make requests concerning prospective ministerial assistants...." (Memorandum to All Committee Members, Manpower, Jan. 8, 1970.)

Most of the men who made the assessments and final decisions in manpower meetings are still college administrators, student counselors, department heads, or policymakers for the general student body. They still advise and counsel students, becoming familiar with each student's most intimate problems. Yet the mentality of many of these men remains basically unchanged to this day. It is painfully obvious from their sermons and articles that their positions of prejudice and disregard for students' rights still exist, public pronouncements to the contrary. The reason these harmful prejudices still exist is because the mentality of "ministerial privilege" has never been significantly discouraged nor discontinued from private practice among Ambassador executives.

Ambassador Report feels that student and public awareness of AC's disregard for its students' rights is imperative in order to discourage further abuse by members of the administration. Also, we encourage all AC students to be aware that what they reveal to AC counselors and/or WCG ministers may one day be used against them or passed on to others.

A reliable source inside AC has informed us that one administrator currently secretly records his counselings with students and church members and later has the conversations typed by his secretary for future reference. In light of this report, we feel the need to notify all AC students of their legal right to complete confidentiality in matters of spiritual guidance and their right not to have their personal problems and identities divulged to AC or WCG officials for reasons of employment or any reason whatsoever.

California law clearly states that under no circumstance is a minister allowed to divulge or otherwise disseminate information supplied to him by an individual seeking spiritual guidance. Confidentiality is implied, and any breach of this confidence (especially for reasons of discrimination in employment) is prosecutable under the law.

HERBERT ARMSTRONG - MAN ON THE MOVE

Every month Signature magazine, published by Diners Club Inc., features the story of a man considered to have been unusually successful in the world of business. Since Herbert Armstrong felt he, too, was a man of unusual success "in the world of mammon" (p. 9 of his autobiography, 1973 edition), that he had "training and specialized experience such as comes to few men" (p. 273 of his autobiography, 1967 edition), and that he had made the equivalent of "$25,000 a year or more" before he was 30 (ibid., p. 281), we in turn felt compelled to give Herbert Armstrong his day in court by featuring him as this month's "Man on the Move."

We pick up Herbert's story at the height of his "28 fat years" when his income supposedly topped today's equivalent of $35,000 (p. 261 of his autobiography, 1973 edition). (A few years later, he upped the figure to $70,000, and in the May 1977 Plain Truth on page 3 he claimed his early salary was equal to $150,000 today.) What follows is an amazing summary of Herbert Armstrong's "success story" as presented in The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, 1967 edition:

1917: At the height of his self-confessed affluency, Herbert decided to marry Loma Dillon. He moved into a furnished apartment rented from a family away on vacation and lived there six weeks (p. 199). Upon return of this family, he rented another apartment from yet another vacationing couple for a month. Then he rented a single bedroom of another apartment with dining room and kitchen privileges. Loma by this time was pregnant (p. 209). About Thanksgiving 1917 he moved into a single room of an apartment on a subrent basis (p. 212).

1918: With an alleged income of $22,000 (p. 221), he rented a house in Indianola, Iowa. But after three months he moved back to Chicago where he rented a room from a family with an apartment (p. 217). During this time and the next few years, he "did not work more than four or five days a month" (p. 221). In November he felt he could finally lease a full apartment (p. 255) but decided instead to rent an old house filled with furniture from his father-in-law. He shared this house with another couple for six months.

1919: He moved into the hotel in Maywood for a few weeks, then into a furnished house on Fourth Street.

1920: He moved into a new apartment, his first since his marriage (p. 226). Late that year depression wiped out his business. Everything he touched "turned to failure" (p. 234). At this juncture in his life, his "28 fat years" came to an end; now his 28 years of poverty began (p. 235).

1922: He had to give up his apartment. His piano was repossessed because he could no longer keep up the payments (p. 239). Loma and her two daughters were sent back to live at his father-in-law's farm. Herbert hung around night clubs and started drinking (p. 240). Next, he moved into a single room. After being three weeks behind on the rent, he moved into a second-rate hotel on Chicago's north side. Finally even this grew too expensive, and he sought refuge at his father-in-law's farm. He proved unable to help him very much due to lack of experience. He spent most of the fall and winter resting and recuperating.

1923: After resting, he decided to find something to do (p. 257), but he soon bogged down again. He had to borrow $200 from his dad. He started a laundry advertising business in Vancouver (p. 278), envisioning an income of up to $500,000 per annum (p. 280). But then "the bottom fell out" again. He made $50 a month, but this wasn't enough to support his family (p. 281).

1926: He worked 30 minutes each week, having nothing but "time" on his hands (pp. 284, 290). He spent all his time studying religion at the Portland Public Library. He "spent a solid six months of virtual night-and-day, seven-day-a-week study" (p. 295). He finally admitted he was a failure, but he found joy in defeat (pp. 296, 300).

1927: He was reduced to real poverty, often going hungry (p. 320). His study of the Bible became a passion (p. 330) that lasted 3½ years, night and day (p. 343), while his family almost starved.

1928: He fell behind in paying rent, and his electricity was shut off because he didn't pay his bills. One time his children were crying from hunger, and all he had for food was macaroni, which he boiled by using torn-up magazines for fuel. At this time he even lacked the salt to season the macaroni with (p. 355). He worked 30 minutes a week for $50 a month, but that wasn't enough to pay his rent or keep his family "fed and alive." He rejected a job offer of $8,000, explaining that he "worked in spurts" and went into a "slump for a week or a month" during which he could accomplish little or nothing (p. 359). Instead he took a local survey job that paid the exact amount he needed to prevent his being evicted (p. 361).

1929: He moved into a house in Portland. Soon he had another crisis of hunger and desperate need (pp. 361-62). He accepted a job offer to throw two truckloads of wood into someone's basement for pay. While piling the wood, he winced every time a person passed by because he felt so ashamed at being seen doing menial work. He thought people would think he was a "down-and-out bum." He says that working with his hands was a humbling experience (p. 363). Later that year he peddled "miracle clay," hoping to make his million (p. 364), but the stock market crashed, and he couldn't get the financing he needed to start a business (pp. 367-68). He felt selling clay was the only means to keep his family alive. A neighbor had to help him out with food (p. 369).

1930: He hit rock bottom financially (p. 369). When his wife was due to give birth, he hadn't paid his previous hospital bill, and the hospital would not admit Loma (p. 370). He prayed for firewood, food, money, and a winter topcoat (p. 373). His parents brought him food and fuel, his brother bought him a coat (p. 375), and Loma's mother's last will provided the exact amount of money he needed (p. 374). At one time Loma didn't have enough to eat and couldn't nurse her baby. Herbert's credit was not good in any store (pp. 378-79). He peddled aluminum utensils from door to door (p. 381). His father had to pay his house rent for him (p. 383). He obtained a car from his dad (p. 384) and moved in with his parents in Salem (p. 384).

1931: He was still dependent on aluminum utensil sales. He felt he couldn't employ high-pressure methods as a Christian and hence couldn't make the big money others made. He earned just enough money to keep his family from starving (pp. 393-94). He moved into a house in Salem (p. 397). Here he earned $20 per week working as an evangelist (p. 409), but his salary was cut off, and he had to return to advertising for 15 months (p. 429).

1933: He returned to the religion business (p. 445), moving to Astoria. He was rehired as a minister at $3 per week (p. 458). Although he was "required to live another 14 years in the barest and most modest financial circumstances," he never had to go hungry again after that time (p. 454).

This then is the "success story" of a man who, according to his own words, "had been unusually successful in the world of mammon." He was a man truly on the "move"-from apartment to apartment during the time he claimed he was making the equivalent of anywhere between $22,000 and $150,000 in today's money. He was a man who moved from job to job, from one failure to another-until he struck it rich in religion in the 1950s. During his so-called fat years, he admittedly worked no more than four or five days a month. When his "lean years" struck, he often worked only 30 minutes a week. He studied the Bible while his family languished in poverty. The only account of his doing physical work for pay is presented by him as a humiliating experience that made him feel like a "down-and-out bum." (What is so humiliating about physical work?)

Those who have known Herbert Armstrong, including members of his own family, contend that the reason he experienced poverty was simply due to the fact that he was lazy and unwilling to do physical work. They claim that he had a life-long reputation as a moocher and a leech. His account in his autobiography certainly seems to lend support to this conclusion.

Things began to move in Herbert's direction only after he embarked on the business of religion after breaking away from what he claimed was "God's true church" in Oregon.

At the Pinnacle of "Success." None can gainsay the fact that Herbert Armstrong has been an astounding success at building a fundamentalist church organization from the ground up to where the church's annual income exceeds $60 million-a figure that is at least double what Billy Graham's organization takes in.

Now Herbert is no longer forced to move from apartment to apartment as a pauper, depending on relatives for handouts. He owns five luxurious homes as richly furnished as any you would find in Beverly Hills. He has confided to several students that his Pasadena home at 210 South Orange Grove alone is worth at least $500,000. (While most of Herbert's "property" is in the name of the church or college for tax purposes, he still has complete control over it.) Just recently he married again, moving into a magnificent home in Tucson, Arizona. He made this expensive move during a terrible financial crisis in his church that resulted in the closure of Ambassador College in Big Sandy, Texas, and the laying off of dozens of long-time employees. Many wondered why Herbert didn't set the example of sacrifice for the church members in this crisis by liquidating some of his personal assets. Instead, while asking all the church members to dig deeper into their pocketbooks, Herbert was busy flying back and forth between Tucson and Pasadena in his private jet establishing his fifth home. Informed sources from the church's business office claim that Herbert's spending sprees over the last few months have been largely responsible for bringing his church to the brink of financial collapse.

The Secret of Herbert's "Success." It hasn't been his managerial skill or his business acumen that has vaulted his church into its prominent role among fundamentalist sects. Indeed, for years his church and colleges have been among the most inefficiently managed organizations anywhere-according to hundreds of present and former employees. No, the secret of his financial success lies in his adoption of a tithing doctrine that requires members to give between 20% and 30% of their annual income to his church. True, his claims of having a unique understanding of the Bible and of Bible prophecy attracted the tithepayers, but now, even though his prophecies have been discredited and he has been forced to make radical doctrinal changes on divorce and remarriage and Pentecost, his church is still rolling in money, compared to other churches-all due to his tithing doctrine.

Still on the Move. In the last nine years, Herbert has been on the move more than at any other period in his 85 years. Due to his jet aircraft, he has been able to move from one Hilton hotel suite to another throughout Southeast Asia as he calls on dictator after dictator. But while Herbert has been away, the mice have been at play. During his travels-when he should have been home mending fences and settling doctrinal disputes-two costly blowups rocked his church, causing him to lose thousands of tithe-paying members. (One came in 1974, and the other was in England in 1976.)

At the rate Herbert and his son are consuming church funds and losing members, it appears possible that Herbert will make yet another giant move: into bankruptcy.

Now that he is reaching the end of his road, he can look with pride on the magnificent buildings he has built and the money his organization has wasted. In these things he is truly a success. But when it comes to giving people the happiness, success, prosperity, and peace of mind he promised them, he has been largely unsuccessful-as this issue shows. His false biblical teachings have caused suicides, bankruptcies, and hundreds of premature deaths. They have broken up thousands of happy marriages, wrecking the lives of all involved. His teachings on tithing have kept tens of thousands of members hovering around the poverty level. In many cases, it is too late for him to undo the harm he has caused by his recklessly researched teachings-even if he were to decide to attempt to right the wrongs he has caused. So in his final years he will have to overlook a rich life of failure and prepare for his ultimate move-out of the picture!

THE INCREDIBLE STORY OF MR. MISSION IMPOSSIBLE - AMBASSADOR COLLEGE'S ILLUSTRIOUS "PROFESSOR" GOTOH

After a comet-like rise to power and prestige in the Worldwide Church of God, Osamu Gotoh, the one-time "Mr. Mission Impossible"-who, as if by magic, opened the doors to oriental palaces for Herbert Armstrong-suddenly seems to have disappeared from the Ambassador College scene. A peculiar pall of silence seems to have enshrouded the former glory of Nippon's shining star.

Because of "Professor" Gotoh's extensive travels with Chancellor Armstrong to Asian capitals, Ambassador College employees used to jokingly quip: "Nobody knoweth where Gotoh goeth." Now people are openly wondering what's become of him, especially because Herbert Armstrong has often expressed how valuable Gotoh is to the church: "I couldn't do the job of getting the gospel to the world without him!" (Bible study, Pasadena, Mar. 14, 1975.)

Osamu Gotoh's Rise to Power. Osamu Gotoh heard of Ambassador College (AC) in 1966 through a close friend who had enrolled at AC's British campus, according to Herbert Armstrong in a Dec. 29, 1970, co-worker letter. Attracted by the obvious display of opulence at AC's Pasadena campus, Gotoh came and offered his services as a translator, at the same time expressing a desire to obtain a B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. from AC. His credentials at that time were that of "Rev.," even though nobody to this day knows where he got his ministerial training and which denomination ordained him. It seems he was a self-styled "Rev.," performing as an itinerant preacher on an obscure Japanese-language radio station on the West Coast.

The Department of Justice and Immigration conducted an investigation on Gotoh a few years ago and, according to one of their agents (name on file with the staff ), Gotoh was a one-time Tokyo taxicab driver who later became engaged in religion. It was speculated that Gotoh made his initial high-level contacts in Japan way back then, right inside his taxi while driving adventurous dignitaries to where the "action" was in town.

Gotoh enrolled at AC in the fall of 1966 as a freshman. He somehow managed to avoid the customary entrance exam and set out on his academic career. After a faltering first semester with an abundance of Cs which, according to his instructors, were rather "flattering," he finally bombed out at the end of the next semester and had to be dropped for academic inability in the summer of 1967. During the course of the year's work, the "Rev." managed to draw an F in an elementary Bible course. (Gotoh's transcript is on file with the staff .) To enable Gotoh to save face, AC officials permitted him to withdraw, which he did.

Later that year, Gotoh emerged as the head of a newly created Japanese department with the academic rank of "instructor," even though the previous semester he had been dropped for academic incompetence. He now claimed that he did not really need to go on at AC since he held the equivalent of a Master's of Theology. He further explained that the reason he didn't possess the proper academic credentials was because General MacArthur ruled that postwar Japan could not confer degrees.

Gotoh's Cornucopia

Japan's Ministry of Education emphatically denied this in an official letter. The reason Gotoh didn't have an academic degree was simply due to his not having had an education that warranted such a degree. Gotoh submitted an undated transcript to AC that showed he had attended Aoyama Gakuin. AC wrote to Aoyama Gakuin for his official transcript and discovered that the transcript Gotoh had submitted to AC had been forged, the grades had been "jacked up," and that he had attended there only one year (from 1947 to 1948). In a letter dated Oct. 7, 1970, the Ministry of Education pointed out that the reason Aoyama Gakuin didn't confer degrees was that "before 1949 Aoyama Gakuin was classified as 'Senmon-Gakko,' neither a university nor a college, [and] Senmon-Gakko could not give academic degrees."

This cock-and-bull story about an "equivalent" degree and MacArthur's ruling was swallowed by AC's administration. Herman Hoeh, then dean of faculty, dutifully listed Gotoh as having an M.Th. in the college bulletin, but he was forced to withdraw it the following year after an inquiring third party demanded documentation of this pretentious claim.

In the academic year 1968-69, Gotoh was quickly elevated in rank from instructor to assistant professor and then to associate professor, and soon Gotoh began introducing himself as "Professor Gotoh."

Beginning in 1969 Gotoh began arranging meetings with Asian heads of state for Herbert Armstrong. Herbert thought these meetings arranged by Gotoh were little short of miraculous, and he felt God must be working with and through Gotoh to perform the feat of getting him audiences with Asian leaders. (Little did Herbert realize, but every day of the year heads of state are granting interviews to editors and reporters-and one can hardly say God intervenes to bring this about. When leaders learned that Herbert would give them expensive gifts, write glowing accounts of their nation, and print their photograph on the front cover of his magazine The Plain Truth, an internationally circulated, full-color magazine, it was no wonder that these leaders were willing to grant a 30-minute interview to Herbert and have their picture taken with Herbert, Rader, and company.)

To reward Mr. Mission Impossible for his loyalty and success in furthering Herbert's gospel and to enhance Gotoh's image in the eyes of world leaders, Herbert elevated him to the highest academic rank possible: full professor. Herbert himself made the announcement and told the congregation that from now on Gotoh is to be referred to as "professor." And, in order to lend more prestige to Gotoh's office, Herbert ordered the formation of an Asian Studies Department, even though there were neither the faculty members nor the students interested in such a program to warrant such a move. There were any number of genuine Ph.D.'s at the college at the time, and yet not one of them was accorded the title "professor." Gotoh occupies a lone spot in the history of AC-having no academic credentials and being an AC flunk-out but having been a "professor" nonetheless.

In a Dec. 29, 1970, letter to his supporters, Herbert introduced Osamu Gotoh as the man responsible for introducing him to Prince Mikasa, brother of Japan's emperor. He explained the miraculous way God had brought Gotoh to AC and how the WCG's Japanese work would get off the ground the following July 1-all due to the efforts of Osamu Gotoh, Mr. Mission Impossible.

The Beginning of the End for Gotoh. As Gotoh's overseas trips-both with and without Herbert Armstrong-grew longer, more frequent, and more expensive, he came under close scrutiny by several top AC/WCG officials. It was reported by reliable sources that Gotoh was taking "God's Work" for a ride. An AC Financial Affairs official reported that Gotoh had a lavish expense account which eventually exceeded $100,000. This account was strongly suspected of having paid for more than just his business expenses. A listing of his American Express (credit card) charges, billed to the WCG, shows the accusations are not all contrived. A few of his billings were: (1) $6,703.31 in July 1974, (2) $5,957.45 for Aug. 16, 1974, and (3) $8,239.91 for Aug. 22, 1974. Charged to his credit card were purchases from Gucci, Hermes, and other exclusive shops, from jewelry shops in Thailand and Hong Kong, from camera shops in Tokyo and Germany, and from Dunhill in London.

As opposition to Gotoh and his activities increased, so did Herbert Armstrong's unmitigated praise of Gotoh:

"...Oh, Mr. Gotoh. And there's a man-don't sell him short! Some people have tried to strike at me by belittling Mr. Gotoh. And when you strike at him and say derogatory things about him, you're striking at me. I couldn't do the job of getting the gospel to the world without him!! He is a very important phase of it. And he's a very effective man.

"Come to me with your criticism of Mr. Gotoh. Don't go to someone else-I dare you!! Come to me! Mr. Gotoh predicts ONE THOUSAND baptized members after one year of the "Japanese

Work." And we're just getting it lined up, ready to really go now. It's going to get off the ground very soon.... The Work is going forward as it never did before. Believe me!" (Pasadena Bible study, Mar. 14, 1975.)

Those high AC officials who got to Herbert with criticism of Gotoh's activities were quickly brushed aside by such comments from Herbert as: "I don't care what kind of person he is, and I don't want to hear. All I know is that God is using Gotoh to help me preach the gospel." At the 1975 Tucson Feast of Tabernacles site, thousands of WCG members received a tongue-lashing from an irate Herbert for spreading rumors about "Professor" Gotoh, who was said to be engaged in international smuggling. Herbert not only gave Osamu an unequivocal vote of complete confidence, but he also held him up as a paragon of honesty and integrity out of whose book church members could take a few pages-not knowing that earlier on June 6, 1975, Gotoh was apprehended at the L.A. International Airport carrying a substantial undeclared amount of jewelry. This information came from the Department of the Treasury in San Pedro, Calif., which commissioned an agent to compile a case against Gotoh. According to an official spokesman of the government agency, Gotoh, if tried by a jury and convicted of the crime, could have received up to five years in jail and a $50,000 fine.

Gotoh, by this time, had left the United States. The agent in charge told the editors at that time that they "had a case but no body." The agent felt that with the material in their possession the District Attorney could be convinced that Gotoh was not just a small, one-time offender but a big enough fish to warrant a large-scale investigation.

Unfortunately the case never went past the D.A.'s office. Some high government official intervened and squelched any further efforts to bring Gotoh to trial. After this incident, Gotoh resigned his chairmanship over the Asian Studies Dept. and his position on AC's faculty. Soon his lavishly decorated office was dismantled. According to reliable sources another official in the administration confiscated a hoard of jewelry, watches, cameras, and radio equipment. On top of it all, the business office allegedly cancelled Gotoh's executive privileges, his expense account, and his credit cards.

At last report, Gotoh is still on the payroll of Ambassador International Cultural Foundation (sponsored by the WCG), drawing a $23,000 salary. But nobody seems to know for sure what he is doing and where he is. He is now free to enter and leave the U.S., as the Department of the Treasury is no longer after him. Their spokesman, however, admitted that the department had been under "pressure from above" to lay off Gotoh. He would not elaborate any further.

Now in The Plain Truth and in WCG sermons and co-worker letters there is no mention of the illustrious "Professor" Gotoh-the man Herbert Armstrong called "the miracle of God" a few years ago. The light of Nippon's shining star has waned to where it is but a faint flicker.

No one knows whether Osamu Gotoh will play any future role in the Worldwide

Church of God and Ambassador College or not. We leave the speculating up to the reader. But we want our readers to remember that Gotoh is the man of whom Herbert wrote: "...this man from Japan has been converted and baptized! He not only believes in Jesus, the Christ, he BELIEVES CHRIST..." (co-worker letter, Dec. 29, 1970, p. 2).

---

Holly Ruiz was married for 18 years to Enrique Ruiz, director of the Mexico City office of the Worldwide Church of God. In 1975, she left the Worldwide Church of God and was divorced. She now lives in South Pasadena with her two children and works as a secretary. The following interview reveals a great deal about the inner workings of the Worldwide Church of God and the life-style of its leaders.

MARY E. JONES: Ms. Ruiz, I'm holding a rather unusual letter in my hand. It's dated April 14, 1975, it's on Ambassador College stationery, and it's from Garner Ted Armstrong to you. One passage that is of interest is a statement of Ted's that says, "I admired and respected you as Enrique's wife. Holly, never did I entertain any idea, God knows, of any sort, concerning you and me." Now what is it in your estimation that took place that would cause Garner Ted Armstrong to write such a statement? Tell us, if you would, the background of this letter?

RUIZ: Evidently, Enrique confronted Garner Ted about some statements I had made about money Ted had given me.

JONES: How much money had Ted given you?

RUIZ: Well, Ted gave me money on many different occasions. For instance, the first time he showed any special concern for me was in 1968 when my husband and I were sent to Mexico. Garner Ted told me in his car that he had given Enrique $1,000 for me. He told me, "That money's for you, Holly, to do anything you want with. You can redecorate your kitchen or whatever, but the money is for you."

This was when Ted told me that he wanted me to have a house with at least five bathrooms-it had to be a very big house. At this time, and later, he gave me the impression that he was very concerned for my welfare to the extent that he was willing to spend whatever money necessary to make me happy. Ted even told me, "Holly, I can fly down any time you need me. It would only take three hours."

All the time we were in Mexico, we lived up to Ted's hopes by never living in homes with less than "five or six bathrooms." The homes had servants' quarters and were beautifully furnished. One such home (we'd had three different ones), Herbert Armstrong simply raved about. He loved the opulence and would talk about it often saying that it was the most beautiful house he'd ever seen. That was the one with the beautiful garden where we had seven or eight peacocks roaming the grounds.

JONES: Where did the money come from that allowed you to live in such luxury?

RUIZ: I don't really know. Enrique took care of things like that. I remember one time when Enrique wanted to buy $1,000 worth of dining room furniture, he asked Garner Ted for the money. Well, Ted told him to simply take it out of Third Tithe funds. [Editor: WCG members were led to believe that the Third Tithe Fund was used solely to help widows, orphans, and the poor.]

JONES: Was the whole house furnished with Third Tithe funds?

RUIZ: I believe so.

JONES: Were there other ways in which Ted showed special concern for you?

RUIZ: Yes, at one time there were letters sent out to ministers saying that none of them were to bring their wives to a ministerial conference in Pasadena because the expense would be too great. But Enrique received a telegram from Garner Ted saying, "Your wife is invited" and that he [Ted] would pay for it. In fact, this happened year after year, and every trip we took to a conference cost a minimum of $700. This included expensive hotels, dinners, etc. Other ministers' wives weren't allowed to go along at church expense. We even took our children, and for others this was never allowed. At times we'd spend a week or more getting to the conferences-taking small vacations for ourselves-and the WCG paid for them. We'd also spend a lot of time going to the Feast of Tabernacles every year. The church also paid for this.

JONES: Were other ministers allowed to take vacations of this nature?

RUIZ: Oh no. In fact, one field minister told me that they would have to be with the organization ten years before they were allowed to take a vacation. The only vacation they received was when they went to the Feast of Tabernacles.

JONES: What about top executives in the church? Did you know of any of them taking vacations paid for by the church?

RUIZ: There were quite a few who took trips to Acapulco. Herbert Armstrong would come down occasionally. Whenever he would come down, we'd hold large dinners in the finest hotels for him. Everything was very expensive. For instance, we ordered three bottles of Dom Perignon champagne every night. During the day some of us would spend our time water skiing.

JONES: Then these trips were in no way connected with church business but were purely for pleasure?

RUIZ: Yes.

JONES: Was anyone else involved in the Acapulco trips?

RUIZ: Yes, any time Herbert was there his entourage would also be there. This usually included Rader [the organization's attorney] and his family, Herbert's daughter (Beverly Gott), the pilots, his chauffeur, and other members of his staff. I remember one time when Herbert Armstrong spent five days just waiting for a phone call from Osamu Gotoh. Other executives such as Raymond McNair, Ronald Dart, Rod Meredith, David Antion, and Richard Plache would also come to Acapulco.

They were all on expense accounts and never paid for anything, including gas, restaurants, and hotel accommodations. Everything was paid for by the church.

There were two occasions when Beverly Gott came down to Mexico on vacation, and Herbert asked us to watch over her. One time she spent two weeks with us, and we were given over $500 by Herbert to show her around. Another time Herbert asked us to go with her to Puerto Vallarta where we spent a great deal of church money just showing her around.

JONES: Was there anything about these trips that involved the church or church business?

RUIZ: No, we just went along to keep her company.

JONES: Is Beverly Gott a member of the Worldwide Church of God?

RUIZ: No, I believe she was disfellowshipped years ago.

JONES: Did you ever travel anywhere else with one of the Armstrongs?

RUIZ: Yes. There were other times when I traveled with Herbert Armstrong. Once I went with him to New York City in his private jet. I also took several car trips with him in his limousine. One was to Lion Country Safari near Anaheim, California. Also, there was the time that Garner Ted took my husband and I to Mexico in his private jet when we first moved there in 1968.

JONES: Were any of these trips on the Church's sabbath?

RUIZ: Oh, yes. I remember going to Cuernavaca with Herbert. Nothing was mentioned about the Bible, or the fact that it was the sabbath. We went to restaurants as usual, drank, etc. Of course, Herbert Armstrong never talked about the Bible. All he ever talked about was himself-it seems that's all he ever talks about. He likes to extol his riches and how everyone has to look up to him. One story he would repeat over and over again was about his brother once loaning him an overcoat when Herbert didn't have any money and how he's now the one who gives his brother money.

JONES: Did any of these trips ever include laymembers of the church?

RUIZ: No. We [indicating her husband, herself, and the Armstrongs] never mingled with laymembers or went anywhere with them. And after leaving church services everyone seemed relieved. Everyone behaved very differently after they left church services. It was as if they were putting up a facade for the church members. After services we would go out to dinner and drink and be ourselves.

JONES: Have you ever seen either of the Armstrongs drunk in public?

RUIZ: Both of them. I've never seen Herbert Armstrong sober after 8:00 at night. I used to notice this when I stayed in his home during conferences and on trips. He would fall asleep in his chair, and Rader would have to take him to bed. His daughter once told me never to call Herbert after 8:00 because he was always in a stupor by then.

As for Ted, he was always getting drunk, and when he was drunk, he was more carousing. Often he would bring his guitar to nightclubs and sing.

JONES: Did Herbert ever behave immorally?

RUIZ: Not like Ted, but he used to talk about sex a lot. In fact he was often obsessed with sex. He told me once that he knew more about sex than anyone else. A few years ago Herbert told me that he had a crush on a young Philippine girl. He brought her over from the Philippines and set her up in a really nice apartment. However, when he found out that she had another boyfriend, he sent her back. He also had a crush on one of his young secretaries. He wanted to marry her, but Ted wouldn't allow it.

JONES: When were some of the other times that Ted gave you money?

RUIZ: In late 1974, I was thinking about leaving my husband, so I drove up to Pasadena from Mexico to discuss it with Ted. Well, he was in a week-long conference at the time so I took a vacation to Las Vegas, the Grand Canyon, and Zion National Park. When I got back to Pasadena, I asked him to reimburse me for the $500 I'd spent on the vacation. He joked with me about spending so much money, but he told me he would have it delivered to me that same night.

JONES: Did he deliver it himself?

RUIZ: No, he had an employee deliver it to me that night at Mrs. Gott's house where I was staying.

Actually, I'd probably spent more like $1,000 on this vacation. I had driven to Pasadena from Mexico in a car the church provided for us and had spent a lot of money getting there, but I only asked Ted for $500 of it back.

At any rate, after I asked Ted for the money, we talked about the problems I was having with my husband and that I had been thinking about leaving him. At this time, Ted offered to send Enrique and me "anywhere in the world if it'd make me happy." He also offered to send us on another vacation, anywhere we wanted to go.

JONES: "Another vacation"-had he sent you on one previously?

RUIZ: Yes. In either late '73 or early '74, I can't remember which, Ted sent us to Europe and the Mideast on a "fact-finding" tour. We traveled all over Europe-all at the expense of the church-although we really did nothing in connection with the church.

JONES: So did you go back to your husband after that?

RUIZ: At that time, I decided to go back to him, but I finally left him for good in 1975. At that point, I decided that since Ted had given me money in the past I would ask him to help me with finances since I had no family in the area and no job and had been with the church for a number of years. He gave me over $1,000, and I was surprised at how easily he gave it to me. He seemed to love to give me money. I suppose it gave him a feeling of power and wealth. Herbert also gave me $200 to fly back to Mexico to collect my belongings.

JONES: Did you discuss leaving your husband with Ted? How did he feel about it?

RUIZ: I went to Ted after I broke up with my husband, not only to get help financially but also because I was concerned about the effect our separation would have on the church members in Mexico. Ted told me not to worry about that and that he understood how I felt. He explained that he too had had similar problems, but that his father had forced him to remain married and that he didn't feel it was fair. He told me that he had taken off with one of his stewardesses to Colorado. Then he asked me if I'd ever committed adultery at all, and I said no and that I didn't intend to. He seemed rather taken aback by that statement. I suppose he was leading into something, but I cut him off. This upset him, and he said that he just thought it would be possible that I had [committed adultery]. He said that he felt it would be typical because of his own frustrations and miserable condition. Earlier he told me he had had to cancel a conference in order to see me, and I said I was sorry to have bothered him. He made some comment about having ministers around all the time but that he didn't always have me.

JONES: In other words he made it very clear that he was available to you?

RUIZ: Yes.

JONES: After this did your husband also leave the employment of the church?

RUIZ: Yes, along with a substantial amount of "severance pay"

JONES: How much severance pay did he receive?

RUIZ: $19,000. Why my husband received so much has always been a question in my mind. Either it was because Ted was embarrassed by the circumstances of my going back and telling Enrique about the money I'd received in the past and the way Ted behaved around me or it was because of the so-called contacts for the work that Enrique told me he was making.

JONES: What type of contacts was he referring to?

RUIZ: Well, Enrique was spending a lot of time finding out where to contact show girls and strip-tease artists. One time he was trying to contact La Tigress, a very rich and famous strip-tease artist in Mexico. I asked him why, and he said that she could be another important contact for "the work."

After I left my husband, I told Ted about this, but he didn't seem at all surprised. I also told him that Enrique was spending up to three days a week at the horse races, and Ted just laughed.

JONES: You told Garner Ted Armstrong, vice-president of the Worldwide Church of God, that one of his top executives was making overtures to notorious strip-tease artists and claiming that they would be useful contacts for the work of Jesus Christ, and Garner Ted Armstrong said what?

RUIZ: He only laughed and said, "I don't know why, but I just like that guy."

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Garner Ted Armstrong, bigger-than-life TV and radio evangelist, offers absolute answers to a world full of confusing and difficult questions. He offers free advice, free literature and assurance that his way of life is Christ's way of life. His Madison Avenue approach to religion has made him one of the most successful in the business of mail-order salvation.

But while being one of the most successful, Ted Armstrong is also one of the most controversial. In early 1972, Herbert W. Armstrong (Ted's legendary father; founder, pastor general and self-proclaimed apostle of God's "only true church ") was forced to put Ted out of his church and wrote that Ted was "in the bonds of Satan." However, during all this Ted's "problem" was never specifically defined, and all rumors regarding his alleged sexual impropriety and excessive life-style were staunchly denied. For six long months Ted's golden voice was not heard on the church's radio broadcast, and no new television programs were filmed. Although old broadcasts of HWA were aired across the country the church's income plummeted. The old legend did not have the drawing power of his son. Shortly thereafter, a fully "repentant" GTA was reinstated into his father's church with all of his former rights and privileges.

Most adherents to the religious teachings of HWA and GTA dismiss the allegations of GTA's sexual misconduct as vicious rumors spawned by Satan in an attempt to thwart the work of God. Others find it interesting and even sensational, but might ask why should anyone delve into a man's personal life and expose what he does in private. Still others will take the attitude of "What does it prove, anyway?"

Perhaps in different circumstances these arguments might be valid, but because Garner Ted Armstrong has presented himself as a shining light, a messenger of truth, and a preacher of purity, it is important to know if he is truly what he says or merely a Master showman. Does he practice what he preaches? Does he apply the same standards in his own life that he (as a self-styled representative of God) requires from others?

This article intends to profile Ted Armstrong and will give an insight into the man and how he operates. It is not intended to be a bitter diatribe against him, but rather an examination of the facts to determine if he, in the flesh, is equal to the illusion created by his media image.

Garner Ted Armstrong was born on February 9, 1930, in Portland, Oregon - the fourth and youngest child of Herbert and Loma Armstrong. According to his father, "Ted... was born as a result of an almost incredible miracle of healing only three weeks before his birth!" (The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, p. 377, 1967 edition). The miracle? Loma had been "healed" of her anemic condition which had been aggravated by the family's poor diet. Her healing or recovery was helped by a few nourishing meals provided by Herbert's parents (Ibid., p. 374). Herbert attributed this to "an almost incredible miracle" and dedicated his newborn son to God "for Him to use as He had need" (Ibid., p. 377).

The years 1930-33 were lean ones for the Armstrongs. Herbert began his public ministry in late 1930 but preached only occasionally. He continued doing odd jobs to support his family until early 1933.

During this time HWA's work had taken him to Astoria, Oregon, but his wife and children remained in Salem. Early in July 1932, Ted became seriously ill with pneumonia, and Herbert rushed home to anoint the child. Not only did Ted have pneumonia but "...he had been, to that time [he was all of 2 years and 5 months], dumb-unable to talk... He would point to whatever he wanted... grunting 'Ugh! Ugh!'" (Ibid., p. 449). Sometime between the age of six months and a year, Ted had fallen out of his crib and had landed on his head. Herbert and Loma had attributed his inability to speak to this fall. When Herbert anointed Ted, he not only asked God to heal his son's pneumonia, but also asked God to restore Ted's power of speech. Supposedly Ted recovered immediately and began to say a few words by the next day. Again Herbert claimed a great miracle and commented about it in his autobiography.

"Words have been pouring like a torrent out of his mouth ever since.... God gave him his voice by an unusual divine miracle" (p. 450).

According to HWA, had it not been for this miracle, we could never hear Garner Ted's voice today.

In late February 1933 (Ted had just turned three), Herbert became the minister of a small group known as the Church of God, Oregon Conference. From this time on HWA launched himself into his ministry with fervor. Not only was he ministering to the small church in Salem, but in October 1933, he made his first radio broadcast. Several months later, in early 1934, the first Plain Truth magazine (at that time a simple mimeographed paper) was published.

So Ted's formative years were spent in the fledgling years of his father's evangelical work. Both of his parents were extremely busy and had very little time to spend with their children.

Still, Herbert expected strict obedience to his authority and often punished his children severely if he caught them disobeying one of his directives. At a very early age Ted developed an inordinate fear of his father which he carried with him most of his life. Evidently, Herbert didn't realize this until late 1971, as he explained to a group of ministers in Pasadena.

"But Ted and I had the most frank talk we have ever had about... a month or five weeks ago over in Big Sandy [Texas]. It took up most of the morning. And Ted began clear back to the time he was a little boy. He said, 'Dad, all my life I've been afraid of you, and I've tried to avoid you.'

"Why Ted, I didn't know that,' [I replied]. It hadn't been apparent.... And Ted, from the time he was a little boy, got to thinking I was unfair and cruel, and he learned... not to fear me in the way he should-the way we should fear God but to be actually frightened-physical fear. And I never knew that until four or five weeks ago" (Herbert Armstrong, Ministerial Conference, January 1972).

Ted graduated from high school in Eugene, Oregon, in 1947. This same year Herbert decided to move his religious headquarters to Pasadena, California, to take advantage of the broadcasting facilities available in the area. Ted moved to California with the rest of his family.

Eventually the fear of his father and the embarrassment of his religion turned to loathing. In a fit of rebellion, Ted left home and joined the U.S. Navy in May of 1948, to escape his father's authority. He enlisted for three years, but a compulsory wartime extension lengthened his hitch an extra year. In early 1952, he received an honorable discharge and returned to Pasadena.

Although Ted did not immediately accept his father's religious philosophies, he was not adverse to working in his father's mail processing office. Before long he was elevated to the position of office manager. In the fall of 1952, he enrolled at Ambassador College.

In December of that same year Ted accompanied his parents to Gladewater, Texas. While HWA was finalizing a land transaction with Roy Hammer, Ted was busy "courting" Hammer's daughter, Shirley. After the land deal had been finalized, the Armstrongs returned to Pasadena. Shortly thereafter, the Armstrongs made a hasty trip back to Texas to arrange Ted and Shirley's marriage. They were married on March 8, 1953. In September of that same year, Herbert announced in church that God had performed another great miracle. Ted and Shirley were the proud parents of a healthy, "premature" baby boy. (Several ministers who were around at the time have related the embarrassment they felt concerning this especially in light of the fact that this six month "premie" was a 7 lb. fully-developed baby.)

Ted continued his studies at AC. Before the end of the spring, 1953, term he underwent a "spiritual conversion" and was baptized as a member of his father's church. He continued as office manager during his college career and began to carve his niche in the microcosm of his father's religious organization. In January 1955, Ted was ordained to the ministry.

Ted quickly started climbing to the top of his father's organization. He began writing articles for the Good News and Plain Truth magazines. He also shared the "World Tomorrow" microphone with his father, his brother Richard and two other ministers-Roderick C. Meredith and Herman Hoeh. Before long his golden voice and glib manner of speech forced the other speakers to devote their energies elsewhere. No one could match Ted's charisma and media appeal.

Although Ted had his own style, his message was the same as those who had come before him. And often especially in regard to prophecy-his conclusions and analysis were either falacious or inaccurate. For example, he preached for years that according to Bible prophecy Great Britain would never be allowed into the European Common Market. His written prophecies were no more accurate. Notice:

"Two years ago, Mr. Herman Hoeh showed in this magazine how God's word prophesied disease epidemics would strike the United States in two short years! Those epidemics are beginning now! And they will grow much worse! God prophesies that finally, within the next fifteen years, fully one third of our whole population will die of disease and famine!" (The Plain Truth, Dec. 1957, p. 23.)

About a year later, in an article entitled "Nationwide Epidemics Are Spreading," he placed great prophetic significance on a story about a child who had died from an attack by fire ants.

"No light 'interesting' news item, this-but a real, down to earth PLAGUE that is growing WORSE AND WORSE!... Jesus said certain specific things HAD TO HAPPEN prior to the 'end of the age'" (The Plain Truth, Nov. 1958, p. 4).

But like the prediction that the WCG would "flee to a place of safety" in 1972 and many other inaccurate and false prophecies, these worldwide plagues and epidemics also failed to materialize as Garner Ted said they would.

By January 1958, Ted was being recognized as a leader in the organization. His father appointed him vice-president of both the college and the church. In late summer 1958 after his brother Richard died as a result of injuries sustained in a tragic auto accident-Ted was given more responsibility. But much of Ted's new authority was in name only. He still lived in the shadow of his father and several others who held responsible positions. His inability to operate independently from his father and others in command continued to plague him for years.

For approximately ten years this power structure (HWA as president and GTA as vice-president) remained fairly constant. As well as his executive duties, Ted taught a few college courses, carried on as one of the two voices of the "World Tomorrow" broadcast, wrote numerous articles and booklets and acquired his M.A. and Ph.D. from Ambassador College. By the late 1960s the organization had begun to expand its media coverage, and Ted took on the added responsibility of making a weekly television show.

Then in 1968, HWA drastically altered the organization's hierarchy by appointing seven additional vice-presidents. At the same time he made Ted executive vice-president. Ted, however, had no real authority over the other vice-presidents because Herbert had given them direct access to his office-they could by-pass Ted whenever they deemed it necessary (which was often). Still, at least on the surface, the status quo was maintained until the summer of 1971.

Ted's Problem. By this time, word of Ted's sexual improprieties had begun to filter through the ministry. For at least a year, Ted had been having an affair with his stewardess. Of course, this was not his first affair-Ted had had numerous adulterous relationships with many other women-but this relationship was different. Herbert could not dismiss it as another one of Ted's passing flirtations. Ted was ready to leave his wife.

"I went in to my father and went 'blah' and had a great big written thing and told him I was getting a divorce and that I was leaving and that this was going to happen. And when I left, I left with a trailer full of my goods and never intended to come back..." (GTA Pasadena ministerial meeting. March 7, 1974, tape 2, side 2, ref. 6454).

Herbert Armstrong could not afford to ignore this attitude, especially in light of the church's doctrines on divorce (see the article "Home-Breaking-Armstrong Style"). Ted had determined that he was no longer bound to his wife and was free to marry another.

"...I had already in my own mind convinced myself I wasn't even bound to my wife... I was in my mind divorcing her. I left with a trailer full of clothing and a stupid little girl..." (GTA, Big Sandy ministerial meeting, March 4, 1974, tape 5, side 2, ref. #052).

In July of 1971, Herbert was forced to relieve Ted of his duties and send him on a leave of absence, ostensibly for "health reasons" (see article "Profligate Son"). In a letter dated September 26, 1971, Herbert informed the church membership that Ted would not be speaking during the upcoming Feast of Tabernacles. However, Ted prevailed upon his father to let him speak. According to schedule, Ted spoke to members gathered at feast sites in Big Sandy, Mt. Pocono, Jekyll Island and Squaw Valley.

During Ted's stay in Squaw Valley, his "problem" reared its head again. After preaching a stirring sermon, Ted took off to spend the night with his stewardess. The next day he flew to his next stop in Penticton, but word had already gotten out to his father and the other executives. They intercepted him there. Ted was again relieved of his executive duties. In a letter to the church, Herbert covered up Ted's adultery once again, and stated that he had sent Ted on a much needed vacation.

This charade continued for several months. Ted did take an extended vacation, but by January 1972, he had returned to Pasadena and participated in a ministerial conference. His return was short lived.

On the night of January 30, 1972, HWA, Stan Rader (legal counsel for the organization), and several leading evangelists confronted Ted in his home about his affairs with his stewardess and others. On that night, it became painfully obvious to those present that Garner Ted had been using his natural glibness for a lot more than just sermons and broadcasts. On that night, Garner Ted Armstrong acknowledged that he was involved in extensive, extra-marital sexual conquests. Finally HWA was forced to disfellowship his son and send him into exile.

At this time, Herbert forced Ted to end his longstanding relationship with the woman who had been his stewardess. Ted and Shirley were sent to Ted's A-frame in Colorado in an effort to get them to put their lives back together. Ted's stewardess was transferred, under an assumed name, to work in the WCG's New Zealand office.

Again Herbert Armstrong was forced to offer an explanation to the church. In a letter to the ministry which was read to all church members-Herbert stated that Ted had a "personal emotional problem" and was in the "bonds of Satan." Herbert stated that he had been forced to put Ted out of the church, and that he had taken away his ministerial authority. Ted could be allowed back into the church but never as a minister. No word was said about his adultery.

Qualifications. Shortly after this, Herbert Armstrong commissioned David L. Antion (WCG evangelist and GTA's brother-in-law) to research and write a paper regarding the biblical qualifications of a minister. In a nine-page memo dated April 24, 1972, Antion argued the question of whether or not a man can "sin as to disqualify himself from the ministry even though he might repent and be reinstated in the Church as a member" (Antion Qualifications Memorandum, p. 1). Antion then listed the character requirements of a minister of the Church of God.

"Timothy 3:1-7....'A bishop must be blameless.' The word 'blameless' means 'irreproachable' or 'above reproach.' The Amplified Version says, 'Must give no grounds for accusation but must be above reproach.' The Phillips translation says, 'Must be of blameless reputation.'

"Here is what the Expository Dictionary of New Testament Words has to say about this word. It literally means 'that he cannot be laid hold of, hence, not open to censure, irreproachable.'

"There is an entirely different Greek word used in Titus 1:67. It is also translated 'blameless' but it has a slightly different meaning. It 'signifies that which cannot be called to account, i.e., with nothing laid to one's charge (as a result of public investigation). It implies not merely acquittal, but the absence of even a charge or accusation against a person. This is to be the case with elders.' (Expository Dictionary of New Testament Words, p. 131.)

"Hence a minister must give no cause-nor can a reason for accusation be found in his conduct.

"The reason for this qualification is important. A minister represents the Church. If his conduct can be attacked-if his life and character are liable to investigation and accusation through misconduct-the whole Church of God can be accused!"

On page three he also stated:

"Though a minister does not get his authority from the people-he still must have a good report of the people. And it should be as much a good report from the outside as it is within the church when it comes to his sincerity, integrity, and moral life...."

"It is made clear that there is an active devil. He is waiting for the Church to appoint a man to the office of the ministry whose reputation is questionable.... The only defense here is that a man be chosen who is ABOVE REPROACH-one with a good report from without-honest, moral, faithful, etc ."

"These qualifications are not some lofty set of standards.... they are the minimal character requirements for God's ministers.... it is insistent and imperative that God's ministers have these as the minimum requirements." [The report then cited and expounded over 20 scriptural references.]

Antion concluded his paper, touching briefly on the case of King David, and showed that the issue was qualifications, not whether or not a man repented and was forgiven.

"David did commit adultery. Though God winked at his taking a number of wives which he married and to whom he performed all the functions of a husband-support, children. conjugal dues-his greatest sin was the taking of the wife of Uriah and the murder of not only Uriah but of several men along with him. In the light of this colossal sin many of us ask, 'How can David be a man of God-a man after God's own heart?'

"But here is what we know from the scriptures. First, David did repent bitterly of this sin - i.e., he never did it again! Second, he repented permanently the first time it was brought to his attention by a true servant of God. He did not argue or excuse himself in anyway or justify his sin by new doctrine or any other excuse....

"God's servants are His human leaders of the people. Their example of leadership, their character, their lives should be of the highest qualifications. If the leaders fall below what is expected even of their followers then disrespect ensues-loss of confidence occurs-people look for other more sterling leadership.

"To date in the Church of God-no minister has ever been restored to office who has disqualified himself and was once removed from it. This list includes [ministers' names deleted]....

"The same basic principle has applied generally to deacons....

"Again, the question is not one of repentance and forgiveness. It is a question of qualification and what the word of God says about returning to the highest office of all-the ministry of Jesus Christ" (Ibid.. pp. 8 and 9).

Crisis Management. Of course, Herbert decided to ignore the evidence presented by David Antion because that was not what he wanted to hear. He needed a way to solve the crisis in "the Work." 1972 had not started off well, and it was progressively getting worse. When the church didn't "flee" to a place of safety many members lost their apocalyptic zeal. Then Ted was banished soon after, leaving many in a state of confusion and low morale. Also, because Ted was "out of the church," he was no longer making broadcasts. All this added up to a significant drop in income. Herbert needed Ted back in order to get "the Work" back on its financial feet.

In late May 1972 (only one month after David Antion had submitted his paper on qualifications), Herbert met with Ted. Several days later (June 7, 1972) Albert Portune, Sr., David Antion, Ron Dart and Stan Rader accompanied Herbert back to the A-frame in Colorado and discussed the situation with Ted. The men returned to Pasadena, and the board voted to reinstate Ted in the church and allowed him to make broadcasts once again. Soon after this meeting, he was awarded full reinstatement to the ministry, and he returned to his former executive duties.

After all the problems, how did they manage to ignore the issue of Ted's qualifications? Easy—Herbert asserted that his son was above the pronouncements of scripture. Albert Portune explained the situation at a meeting in Kansas City several years later.

"But let me tell you what the answer is to that and what Mr. Herbert Armstrong has legislated.... Ted is above the scripture. These are his [HWA's] words. I sat there and lived through them. Ted was divinely called. He [HWA] proves that by the fact that Ted could not speak for two years and was given a voice... that Ted has these gifts and all of these other factors... therefore Ted is above the scripture. We can't judge Ted like we judge any other minister. We can't judge Ted by Timothy and Titus. You have to judge Ted only by divine calling. Then he has vague references to vague scriptures back to Hosea..." (Kansas City meeting, Sept. 22, 1974, tape 3, side I, ref. #066).

So, Ted was reinstated to his former positions with all the rights and privileges thereof. For several months it appeared that everything was back to normal.

Cat's Out of the Bag. The cover-up, however, had not been complete. By the fall of 1973, many field ministers were aware of Ted's adulterous behavior. Although most remained silent on the matter, a few considered it a matter of conscience to tell their congregations. John Mitchell, minister of the Shreveport, Louisiana church, started the ball rolling over the Thanksgiving weekend in late November 1973. That situation was momentarily smoothed over, but by early 1974, practically the whole ministry was in an uproar.

Not only were there questions regarding Ted's qualifications, but other doctrinal issues were coming to the fore. Among these were divorce and remarriage, healing, tithing, binding and loosing and some administrative problems. Suddenly the ministry wanted immediate answers from headquarters. Most were unhappy about the lack of communication coming from Pasadena, and were concerned about the extent of Ted's problem and the ensuing cover-up.

The Meeting in Richmond. In February 1974, Albert Portune, Sr. and David Antion flew to Richmond, Virginia to meet with many of the ministers in the eastern United States. After a brief discussion about their feelings on the matter, Antion and Portune spent several hours laboriously answering ministers' questions. At this meeting most wanted the rumors about Ted verified or denied. They were not vindictive. They just wanted to know.

One minister asked that Antion and Portune discuss the personal problems Ted was having.

"Not because as a human being I think it's important but because, unfortunately for him, his personal problems have caused a lot of other people personal problems... Now it has been rumored that he committed adultery... Would you say that was true?" (Richmond ministerial meeting, tape 2, side I, ref. #170.)

Both Antion and Portune answered in the affirmative (tape 2, side I, ref. #175).

The minister then asked:

"He [GTA] had admitted apparently to certain of the evangelists and regional directors in private that he had illicit relations with one individual. The rumors have hit at an all-time high of 200. Now what is the balance?" (Tape 2, side 1, ref. #182.)

Al Portune, Sr. replied to the ministers:

"...I don't know how many times, I just don't know. But whether it's 25 or whether it's 225, I don't know. Somewhere between those two points" (tape 2, side 1, ref. # 198).

The minister still wanted to make sure and asked:

"Didn't he [GTA] state, himself, to the evangelists that it [Ted's sexual misconduct] was 200 times?" (Tape 2, side 1, ref. #201.)

This time David Antion fielded the question:

"I don't remember that-I personally don't remember the number. He [Ted] just said that there've been dozens of times or, you know, many times, or some big figure. I know it impressed us all with the fact that he could remember dates and places and situations and so on.

"I would say here that a lot of it was not outright adultery a lot of it was flirtation, a lot of it was necking, making a pass and so forth....

"He needs to feel attractive. He likes to know that he's handsome. He likes to know the girls will go for him and all that. And I think there's a psychological need, personally, when I analyze it, rather than just a great need for just sex, you know" (tape 2, side 1, ref. #210).

At this same ministerial meeting A1 Portune, Sr. was asked another pointed question concerning Garner Ted's life-style:

"I'd like to know: Is it an absolute fact that it's [Garner Ted's sexual misconduct] continued over about a 19- or approximately 20-year period on a somewhat regular basis as various affairs and so on have happened? Without naming names... an evangelist... said that he understands there have been 38 different women that he [Ted] had involved himself with?" (Tape 2, side 1, ref. #351.)

Al Portune's frank response was:

"It's probably true. I've been very, very close to Ted on a friendly, person-to-person basis for many years. I worked for him as his personal assistant way back when. And he has told me things about his life before marriage when he was in the service, and I think that's where it really began, and in his own words he said, to me he said, 'it has continued and it has never stopped'-meaning up to the time when he was having his problem. So it is over all the period of his adult life" (Albert Portune, Richmond ministerial meetings, tape 2, side 1, ref. #356).

Portune and Antion also discussed the circumstances surrounding Ted's reinstatement to the ministry in 1972 and the meeting at the A-frame in Colorado in early June of that year. One minister specifically asked if repentance was talked about.

Albert Portune answered:

"He [Ted] sat there in that chair. He called himself every dirty name that he could think of.... He constantly does that. He still does that today....

"The subject of repentance in that way-in the sense that he was conscious of the need for being sorry and the fact that he was evidencing to me from tears and through reproachments to himself and not being worthy to so much as lift up his eyes....

"All he could think about was just that empty microphone back there, and because of his dirty rotten sins he wasn't there doing his job... if God would just give him the chance and that type of thing.... That was the context of his repentance" (tape 2, side 1, ref. #240).

David Antion interjected at this point:

"Of course, one of our problems was that we went out to Colorado totally cold. There was not a word on the plane. Not-and I'm telling you-not a word as to what we would say when we got there. There was no stated purpose. In fact, I really didn't quite know why we were going....

"Mr. Armstrong didn't say what we were going for. We got over there and were supposed to talk to GTA. I assumed... we're going to go out, and Mr. Armstrong is going to start talking to GTA, and he's going to start asking him some questions... 'Ted, how's your marriage? Are you really repentant? Are you sorry that you did this? Are you sorry the way you've acted? What do you have to say for yourself?'

"That kind of thing did not happen. We kind of talked around, and it was obvious by GTA's mannerisms that he was meek and he was... conciliatory and he was humble....

"We started talking about the work, and he started talking about himself-thinking about the empty microphone.... Then he said, 'Well, how are things?', and I think Al said something about 'Well, things aren't very good with the work. Things are pretty bad.'...

"Then Ted said, 'Well, how's the broadcasting going?'... Well, the mail was down... Mr. Portune said, 'Well, I think you need to come back... I think you're the man God has anointed to do it.'

"And then GTA started crying, and he said that he wanted to be back so bad.... He made all kinds of promises.... It was a moving situation.

"Mr. Armstrong was taken by it... and I mean to tell you, within two hours from that point Mr. Armstrong was saying, 'Ted, when can you come back?' Stan Rader said, 'We can get daily television.' We started saying, 'We can get campaigns, we can get advertising.' And that's the way it was.

"Mr. Armstrong said, 'How soon can you come back?' and GTA was ready to come back....

"Ron Dart said, 'Oh, that's great, now we can get going.' Then everybody started talking....

"I thought, 'Wait a second, wait a second, wait a second.' I had already turned the qualifications memo in. Mr. Armstrong must have read it... " (tape 2, side 1, ref. #250-297; ref. #339).

Peyton Place. In late March 1974, a very disillusioned David Antion wrote a personal letter to Ted Armstrong. Below is a portion of Antion's letter. (Letters of the alphabet have been substituted for some of the names.)

"March 29, 1974

"Dear Ted,

" . You were right when you said it just about killed me to find out about the things that happened in '71= 72. I didn't want to know. I knew nothing up until that time. I didn't go searching or asking.

"In August of 1971, S told M about the situation with G.... When I heard what was happening, I went straight to the study-fell on my knees and bawled like a baby.

"I knew nothing else at the time. Not until November or December of 1971 did I find out about anything more than G. It was Jon Hill who first told me that there were other girls. He seemed quite surprised that I didn't know this. In fact, he was quite shocked that I should be shocked.

"Then it was Rod Meredith who implied to me about others and seemed to be hinting at M being one of them.

"I went home and in conversation with M asked her if you [Ted] had ever made passes at her. It was shattering. But it was in the past-before M and I were engaged-and had been repented of.

"During those months there was the usual witch hunt of those who kept bringing up more and more names and incidents. I know it hurt [evangelist's name withheld] too for I saw him break down and cry when he heard. Then in February or March-perhaps April-of 1972, when everything seemed to be over, J and... [her husband] came to California for a visit...

"One night when I came home from work, M started telling me about what J had told her. J told how she thought you [Ted] were in love with her. She [J] told about the passes you made at her and said she felt she was in love with you also. In fact it was J who first spotted and became suspicious of your relationship with G at SEP [Summer Education Program]. J went into quite a bit of detail with M and from what I gather seemed to enjoy doing so....

"J was thinking recently. M told her about what happened in the past during M's college days. J was surprised at that. Then M shattered J who was thinking you were in love with her. M told her that you did not love her any more than you loved the others. This, according to M, really seemed to infuriate J who seemed to want to believe that she was special."

Ted was infuriated by the letter. How could Antion have had the audacity to put this down in writing? Ted ordered Dave to destroy his copy, which he did. However, in his rage, Ted carelessly left his copy on his desk at the television studio long enough for an enterprising employee to make a copy.

Soon after, David Antion began to assume a low-profile existence at the college. He maintains his ministerial status and teaches a few classes at AC, but he judiciously avoids certain issues like qualifications for the ministry because it is economically expedient for him to remain on the Armstrong payroll, drive his Mercedes, and live in a quarter-million dollar home that church tithes built.

Sweet Irony. There can be no denying that Ted's personal problem-so long hidden from public view-is adultery. Ted has even admitted this himself.

"I know of about five or six or eight or ten [WCG ministers] who have committed adultery.... You want some leveling done here today? I am not the first case!" (Big Sandy ministerial meeting, March 4, 1974, tape 5, side 1, ref. #082.)

He flagrantly broke the WCG's doctrine on sexual conduct; yet he still had the gall to stand up and preach highly volatile sermons against our "decadent society," wife swapping, adultery, etc. And while he so dogmatically enforced "God's laws" regarding sex, and quietly stood by while hundreds of happy marriages were broken up due to "spiritual adultery" (see the article "Home-Breaking-Armstrong Style"), Ted was out doing the real thing with WCG ministers' wives, AC coeds, his secretaries, etc. This is tragic behavior for anyone, but inexcusable for a man who claims to be a minister of Jesus Christ.

So What? Evidently, the criteria used to judge Ted's performance as a minister and church member is not the same as that used for the rest of the church and ministry. Obviously, if Ted were any other than the son of Herbert W. Armstrong, he would have been disfellowshipped and publicly marked long ago.

Unfortunately, sincere, trusting people continue to listen to this hypocrite. They do not listen to him because they have refuted David Antion's research on biblical qualifications for the ministry, or because they have tested those who say they are apostles and are not (Rev. 2:2). They listen because he is Garner Ted Armstrong, son of the legendary apostle of God's "only true church." To question his authority borders on blasphemy. Some people desperately cling to such illusions. In the real world though, illusions are not enough, and while Garner Ted Armstrong could be anybody's Hollywood matinee idol, he is not qualified to be anyone's minister.

IN BED with GARNER TED

---

"I know of about five or six or eight or ten [Worldwide Church of God ministers] who have committed adultery and who upon repentance have been allowed back. You want some leveling done here today? I am not the FIRST CASE!"

-GARNER TED ARMSTRONG

On March 4, 1974, at Big Sandy, Texas, evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong met with approximately 70 ministers of the Worldwide Church of God. It was during this meeting that Garner Ted admitted:

"A man in the ministry committed adultery... I talked to him in great sympathy... and he was totally repentant... I know of about five or six or eight or ten who have committed adultery and who upon repentance have been allowed back. You want some leveling done here today? I am not the first case!" (Big Sandy ministerial meeting, March 4, 1974, tape 5, side 1, ref. #082).

Later in that same meeting (tape 5, side 2, ref. #052), a WCG minister, Robert McKibben, respectfully asked Garner Ted the following questions:

MC KIBBEN: "Well, let me ask you Mr. Armstrong point blank. Have there been young girls that you have..."

GARNER TED: [Interrupting] "Absolutely not!"

MC KIBBEN: "When I say young girls, I'm talking about college students."

GARNER TED: "No!"

MC KIBBEN: "Employees?"

GARNER TED: "No, no one else of any size, shape, race, color, creed, religion, or age!"

MC KIBBEN: "So you're saying, then, that you have not committed adultery?"

GARNER TED: "That's right. I have been accused of things like that behind my back that have come to me from other sources that are just incredulous...."

MC KIBBEN: "Well, the information that I had was that you had committed adultery."

GARNER TED: "Way back before I was out, but in a completely different way than you think, or anybody else thinks... I was beside myself. I had already in my own mind convinced myself I wasn't even bound to my wife Shirley. I was in my mind divorcing her. I left with a trailer full of clothing and a stupid little girl...."

During the Big Sandy meeting, Ted attempted to create the impression that if it could be interpreted that he had committed adultery, it had only happened once with "a stupid little girl" when he was in a disturbed frame of mind. This, of course, was outright deception. The following interview, in conjunction with the articles "Garner Ted Armstrong-Son of the Legend" and "The Profligate Son," proves conclusively that Ted, indeed, committed adultery, and that it was not just once with just one silly little girl.

"In Bed with Garner Ted" is an interview with one of the women who had an affair with Garner Ted Armstrong. Her story is not the only one told to us, but is probably the most graphic in detailing Ted's techniques of seduction. She and her husband consented to relate the story with the hope that it might help people to realize the kind of man Garner Ted Armstrong is. Her identity has been withheld to preserve the integrity and harmony enjoyed by her family.

AMBASSADOR REPORT: How did you first personally come into contact with Ted Armstrong?

RESPONDENT: I was told by the student body president that I had to see Garner Ted Armstrong. It was almost as if the student body president had a list of certain girls who wouldn't be allowed to be baptized without counseling with Garner Ted. He didn't tell me why, just that I had to see Ted first. So I made the appointment and went into his office. I remember him sitting there looking among the papers. He didn't even look up, as if to say, "I know who you are. You're nothing." I just stood there waiting and finally he said, "Oh, yes, there you are," so he started telling me, "I hear you want to be baptized," and I said, "Yes." From that point forward, I didn't say anything. He started telling me how I was one of those vain freshman girls and how I probably had everything I wanted and he knew that I had been "Miss This" and "Miss That" in high school and things weren't that way at Ambassador College. We all had to repent of our past lives and humble ourselves. Otherwise, if we hadn't repented, they [the ministry] wouldn't baptize us at all.

He said I had a horrible walk-that I probably had seen some movie star walk that way and so I had spent a lot of time working on it... and I had to stop that. By this time, I think I started crying, and it gradually got worse. I wasn't crying out loud, just sobbing, and then at the end, he said, "Is there anything you want to say?" But I couldn't say anything because I was too scared and upset and really disgusted with myself because I believed him-I believed everything he said. So, I just shook my head "No," and he said, "Well, when you feel like you have repented and you feel like counseling about these problems or faults, then you can call for another appointment."

*****

I called for another appointment and Ted's secretary said to meet him in the library on Saturday morning. He was completely different this time-all happy and smiles.... He asked me if I had repented and if I felt I was ready for baptism, and I said, "Yes," I felt like it, but I didn't know for sure. I was really depending on him to tell me if I was ready or not. And he said, "Okay, you can be baptized this afternoon in a group.... I don't think he ever mentioned the Bible or scriptures either time. I know he didn't have a Bible with him.

REPORT: After your baptism into the Worldwide Church of God what was your next encounter with Ted?

RESPONDENT: I really had very rare contact with him. I baby-sat once [for him] when I was a junior or senior. Then he drove me home, but that was about it, other than just seeing him in church and saying a few words here and there.

"...we headed toward my girlfriend's bed:"

---

REPORT: During that period of time did he ever indicate to you that you were in any way special to him?

RESPONDENT: No, not during college.

REPORT: What about later on?

RESPONDENT: Let's see. It was pretty soon after graduation.... After graduation, I went to work full time at the Letter Answering Dept., and I was working as a typist with the stenorette machine answering letters.... We were all under Dr. Zimmerman at the time.

One day Dr. Zimmerman called me in and said that Garner Ted wanted to know if I wanted to be transferred to Imperial [Schools]. I could tell that he [Dr. Zimmerman] really didn't want me to go. I said that if that's where I was needed most, I would be happy to go, although I was happy there. He said, "Well, just say the word, and you can stay." I didn't feel like I should stay. I really, you know, felt like I might be doing more there (at the WCG's Imperial Schools), so anyway, I was transferred.

A few months later, I noticed that every time Ted would call, I felt that he was very businesslike, and I would get his call right through to whomever it was he was wanting to talk to. But then time went by and he would spend a little more time just passing the time of day and teasing me about Texas or saying something...the way Texans talk.

At the school banquet at the end of the year, I started getting the feeling that he was sort of singling me out. I thought this over in my mind. One night in particular, I was going along with another couple of teachers and his [Ted's] wife and everyone was having a real great time. We were telling a lot of jokes. Everyone was real happy, and I felt that Ted kept looking at me. I thought maybe he wondered if I was happy or not because all the ministers were sort of concerned about the other girls who were single. Each minister sort of had his own little pet girl. And I wasn't anyone's pet, I felt, at the time.

But anyway, after the banquet, we were going to the car and Ted asked this teacher that I was with if he and his wife were going right home or if they were going somewhere, and he said, "No, they didn't have any plans," so Ted said, "Why don't you come on out with us to this restaurant." I never even heard him say so, but I got the feeling that Ted definitely wanted me to come, so the teacher said, "Yes, how about going over there with the other group?" I said okay.

We were sitting around sort of a round bar, and I was sitting by (names deleted) on the one side. There were some more teachers, the Lochners, and Ted and Shirley [Garner Ted's wife] on the other side.

I think in all these little get-togethers, Ted was always, naturally, the leader. He would do all the singing, and we would sort of chime in with him.

At that stage that was the first time it really hit me that there was definitely something there. I don't remember him looking at anyone else, and he was always saying, "Would you like another drink?" and sort of looking out for me. So after going home that night, I was still wondering, and I thought it was really funny that he was looking at me, because he had everything, and it's just really fun for him, but it wasn't too much fun for me thinking, "Is he serious or not?"

*****

Another place I came to know him much better was around the basketball court because it was all very homey and buddy-buddy.... Ted started the basketball program. Some of the faculty members were really quite good at it, but Ted wasn't. He really wanted to be, so the faculty members really went out of their way to accept him in the group because they respected him tremendously, and they felt if they could help him, I'm sure, they felt there would be ways he could help them also.

Every Friday afternoon there would be basketball. All the girls would go out, and sometimes they would be cheerleading. Since I was Dr. Lochner's secretary, I kept the score book and the clock and everything. And every time Ted would do something like make a goal or whatever, you could tell he just really wanted everyone to know. The girls would always let him know they thought he was really great, and he would come over and say, "How did I do?" I would tell him how many points he made, and he would say, "Wow, I'm getting better, aren't I?" or "I played a lousy game today," or whatever. So you know everyone never disagreed or said, "You are a lousy player," or "What are you doing out there?" No one would consider saying that.

He never really got that good, but you began to look at him more like a human. It's like someone who is a friend. I think that is sort of how it (our relationship) started. He was a friend, and if you needed something, you felt a little more apt to go to him and he would listen to you instead of looking down on you and your problem.

After the game, they would have me go and get beer, and they would have the beer afterward or go over to the office and have the beer. Occasionally he would say, "Boy, I wish I had a secretary like you," and I thought, "Well, I'd love to be [your secretary], you know, get a better job, or be moved up," but I never did say anything.

At times he would be gone out of town for a few weeks, and then he would come back and call up and start all over again, talking or telling me about his trip or something. So finally one day he called. This was just a week before graduation....

I had been out of college 2 years at this time. He called late in the afternoon when I was usually through for the day. Normally everyone went home early on Friday, but that particular Friday, a lot of parents came in. I had a lot of people and students to take care of, and I was really busy and he wanted to talk. It was very rare of him to try to keep me on the line because there were phones all over the office where you can push a button and hear what was going on. But he never really talked that long. This day I could tell he wanted to talk, and I said, "I really can't because I've got a lot of people here." He said, "Okay, I'll call back in a few minutes. Maybe everything will be cleared up because I want to talk to you about something."

"He wanted my promise that I would never tell Father."

---

I always had the guilt feeling of what have I done, you know, I'm really going to be corrected! So he called back, and I was still busy, but he said, "Go in the back room" because he was familiar with the whole building. "Go in the back room and we can talk back there," he said. All the teachers had gone home. There wasn't anyone around who might listen in, but I am not sure if he knew that or not, but he might have guessed it.

So I went back, and I was all set for something really bad, and then he said, "I just want to talk awhile and see what you think of me as a man, as a person, and how I"-I think he said-"how I compare with the other men" because he asked me who I felt was really the type of man I knew there that I really respected. I said, "Well, I really respect Mr. Lochner. I really think he has a lot of character, he is fair, and I haven't seen anything wrong with him, as far as his doing anything wrong. I also think a lot of Mike.... I mentioned those two to him as the two all-around men who I could respect. Then he was sort of silent, just kind of waiting, and I said, "You know, I think that you are probably better than they are because you have so much going for you, ability"-but I don't remember if that is exactly what I said. But he replied, "Oh, you do?" just like he was waiting for that. And then he said, "You know, that really makes me feel good. I don't know if you should tell me that or not because it really does something to me." I said, "Well, you asked me so I told you," and he said, "Well, that is what I wanted to hear." I said, "Well, I guess I'd better get back. There are still a lot of people here."

I felt that is what he wanted me to say. That was the end of it so I went back up front. That was Friday. When I was told this, it made me feel like everything was tying together.... I was sure that he was interested in me as a person because my sister and I had invited [names deleted] over for dinner that night and... [one of them] mentioned how when Ted had driven by while going home that he was wondering how far I had to walk, indicating he was concerned about me. I thought if he is telling other people about me or mentioning me to someone else in his family, that must really mean something-but it really doesn't mean a thing, looking back on it.

On Sunday, I went to the office. I went to the office almost every Sunday, I believe, just to do this and that because my desk was usually a mess. It's such a mad house during the week. I straightened it up or graded papers or something like that. My girlfriend would usually go with me, but this weekend, she was out of town visiting her parents because she was a teacher. And so this Sunday I was grading papers, and there were a few teachers there-a few of the men. We would usually have coffee or tea with each other, and they would be going back and forth from the classroom on their various projects. I remember hearing the phone ringing. I answered it and it was Garner Ted. He said, "You're working today, huh?" I said, "Well, not really. There are a few things I need to get done that I can't do during the week." And he said, "You shouldn't be working today." And I said, "Well, I usually do on Sunday."

Later, he called again, but this time he said, "How would you like to come up for a drink?" I said, "Oh, I don't think I should." And he said, "Well, it will probably do you good. There is nothing wrong with it. Just come on up." Ted said it like it was ridiculous to think anything otherwise, like it was maybe an invitation that wouldn't be extended again. Possibly that is what he wanted to convey. I don't know for sure, but I decided it wouldn't hurt anything; so I went up. I didn't feel comfortable....

But I went up and I remember I was sort of shaky because I thought anytime you do something extracurricular with a married man, even letting him take you to the store, there is always that something that might go wrong, you know. There might be something there that would come up, and you would have to decide if you want to go right or left. And I think I knew then, down deep, although I couldn't really say it at the time, but I must have because... I have always been the type that would feel rather guilty when doing something that was wrong, even before [becoming a member of the] Worldwide [Church of God]. I think I was that type.... I went in and I was surprised-very surprised at the way he was dressed, because I had never seen him dress sloppy my whole life except one time when I was a freshman.... I had never seen him anything but neat before except one time years ago. And I got the feeling that he didn't care so much how he looked, and that it smelled... like he had been drinking. I don't know how heavily, but I know definitely that his breath was very alcoholic. His breath was sort of a mixture with I don't know what else. I don't think it was cigarette smoke, but it was almost like it was, that and alcohol....

That should have sent me running, but anyway, he was sitting behind the desk, and he had a real sort of far-away gaze in his eyes. He didn't look alert like he usually did. When I came in, he just looked at me for awhile, and then he pulled out the drawer and started getting out two glasses and a bottle of something.

At that time, I never drank anything but beer. Beer was even new for me when I came into the Worldwide Church. And I said I didn't care for anything. It was really awkward, really, because I didn't want to drink and so he didn't say anything. There was no light conversation like there had been over the phone all those other times and he wasn't bubbly, but he came around the desk and... he came over and put his arms around me. I was sort of by the door frame, and he sort of held me there, not forcefully, but just, anyway, then he started kissing me and that's when I got this breath. He hadn't shaved, I guess, since the day before Church, the previous day which was Saturday, and his beard was scratchy. My mind couldn't focus on a thing, and I thought, "Let me out of here." It was like he was a little bit drunk or something. Cause if he had been drinking it was probably that, and yet, I was sort of in a "trance" because of the newness or whatever. He stayed there five or ten minutes. Then he maneuvered me over to the couch (I wouldn't say pushed, but encouraged me) and then he kept on kissing me, but I wasn't ready to give in to him, so I pushed him off and went into the bathroom and looked in the mirror at myself.

I remember looking and sort of getting second thoughts and naturally, he was... so he got the glasses of whatever it was and brought one. At that time, I guess I felt the need of it because I took a swallow of it, and it was very strong. Then he stood behind me and I think he was trying to reassure me and possibly trying to influence me not to turn away. All this time, there wasn't much conversation. It was mainly, I guess, two minds, one mind against the other. So I kept thinking. I was trying to get something going conversational-wise, and I said, "Oh, you'd better get going to the basketball game. The men are already down on the court," because they were warming up when I came by. And he said, "Oh, that's right," and that did get his mind back on a talking plane. Then he said, "I guess I'd better change and go down pretty soon, and I guess I'd better shave."... Anyway, then he followed me out to the elevator with more kissing. I got in and went down to the office and around to the basketball court, not on the court itself, but on the bench, away from the court, and just sat there and watched the men.

---

All this time, I was trying to think. Yet my mind wouldn't cooperate, and I couldn't get myself really on a path. I wanted to follow a definite path because I knew that there was a right way to go and a wrong way. And I remember thinking-wanting God to lead me-and yet I knew there was no way He was going to come down and do it for me.

So I went back to my car and back to the apartment and sat there and thought. Then I was in a "trance," and there were many things I should have been doing, but I didn't. I just sat there for a long time until the phone rang and it was him.

It was about four in the afternoon.... He mentioned, "I guess you are surprised that I know your phone number." I said, "No, I'm not really." Then he said, "What are you doing?" and he was much more like he had been previously on the phone. It was like he was over whatever he was going through there in the office. He was very personable over the phone. He mentioned that he would really like to see me and talk to me and that he guessed he couldn't.

I said, "Well, my girlfriend is out of town." Then I thought, "Well, there goes my out. I told him she's gone." He said, "Oh, well maybe I could come over." I was going to be there and, like I said, like a fool, I told him the address and everything and how I was upstairs and made it very easy for him.

He said he would probably be there that night around 7:30 or 8 he thought. Eight o'clock came and he didn't show up, so I really thought he wasn't coming. Then he called and said he was in a restaurant, the service was very slow, and he would be late in getting there but for me to go down to the corner and get a beer and do something until he could get there.

This shows how people will do things. I didn't want a beer. I didn't want to walk down there. It was a very muggy night. It was foggy and misty and, in fact, I think I took an umbrella and a raincoat. It was rather wet, not the type of night you want to be walking alone.... But that late at night, I walked down to the corner and bought a beer or two, and I don't think I even drank one, but anyway, I had been back to the apartment about only 30 minutes when he came.

Over the phone he was very warm, but these two times I was with him the conversation wasn't what you would call normal. I can't remember saying, "Well, you are finally here." I'm not the type to say that anyway, but I can't remember him saying anything like "Well, I am finally here" either.

It was almost like in one swoop, one entrance, one motion that he was over with his arms around me and unzipping my dress. It all seems very cold and hard-hearted now to think about it, like he was thinking, "Well, we only have so much time. I have to get in and get out."

But anyway, I was still under his spell so I know he put his arms around me, and he kissed me a few times, but it was while he was unzipping my dress. Then he turned me around, oh, I don't know, but anyway, we went into the bedroom.

It was a very small apartment but the bedroom was fairly good size. Anyway, we headed toward... my girlfriend's bed. We sat down there and he started taking my dress off. When he got my dress off, I said, "This is my girlfriend's bed, and that is my bed over there." And it was really like the conversation was almost stifled. He started undressing, and I finished undressing myself. He started it and I finished it.

Then he... pulled out-I guess there are a lot of words for it-a prophylactic, and I said, "Oh, no, I don't want you to use that." And he said, "It is the safest. It is the only thing that really works. It is the only way." And I said, "Yes, but I would like to have a baby." He said, "Oh, no! You think you do, but you really don't. It would be much worse for you to have a baby than not to."

I thought at the time this was goofing my life up so much I couldn't recover later. It was almost as if everyone would know what I had done, because I knew what I was doing, and what I would have done after it was over. And I guess I would be living my life alone and it would be so much better to have a baby even if it was better to not have anything. And yet, he was definitely not going to let me do that, so I gave up and so.... And at various times, he would say, "Delicious, delicious!" and I thought at the time, "Well, I guess it is good that he feels that way even though.... You know it's funny. A woman needs so much more than that, and you would have thought he would have known. Oh, at that point, after intercourse, he went right to the bathroom to clean up and wash it down and all. He was in there several minutes, and I just felt drained.... so I didn't even dress, but he came right back into the bedroom.... He knew exactly what he was going to do and that was getting dressed to prepare to leave.

REPORT: Did Garner Ted say he loved you or express any affection?

RESPONDENT: No, in fact he dressed, he was completely dressed, and I thought, "Well, I guess I ought to get my clothes back on." Then after he got through putting on his tie and everything, he sat on my roommate's bed. I was still sitting on my bed, and I thought, "Now is when we can have our little conference."

Then he said, "Now the first thing I want to say is that I don't ever want you to tell your father about this." I said, "Well, I don't plan to." I wouldn't have told him in a million years. I mean now I might if he were still alive.... The first thing that he wanted to really get my promise on was that I would not ever tell my father. That's why I think it's possible maybe at this stage he had had dealings with fathers and he knew his biggest problem might be with the father of an unmarried girl. And then after this, he said, "You know, I can't leave my boys," so evidently he had already thought that I was thinking that maybe he thought my next statement was going to be "Can we leave," you know, "Can you leave your family and come with me?" which I hadn't even bothered to consider. And I said, "Well, I'm not even thinking of such a thing."

---

I really expected him to mention not to go to his father and not go to his wife or not to go to some person, but no other person was even brought into the picture, just my dad, and that he [Ted] couldn't leave his boys.... [Later] he said, "Now it's sort of scary-this other minister was shot just a few days or weeks ago because he was in a motel room with a girl who wasn't his wife." I said, "Yeah, it is."...

Well, that was the only conversation. I think he felt he got his point across and got my promise not to tell my father.... I did say something. He probably knew I had one request. The only thing I said was, "Can we go somewhere together and have a drink or something?" In other words, it seemed so abrupt for him to leave. I wanted him to stay, I guess, because it would make me feel better-cleaner or something, I don't know, and he said, "Oh, no, there are so many people who know us... that I just couldn't take a chance." I don't know if he said "I'd better be going" or what, but we had gone to the living room, I remember, and when he got ready to go, I know I must have been looking very downcast because that is what I was feeling, and he just reached over and got hold of my hand and sort of shook it like "everything is going to be okay." Then he went out the door... and he flew.

The next few days were some of the most miserable of my whole life. I felt so alone. I thought that at least he would call me and encourage me not to go to pieces and tell me to get my life back together even though we had made a mistake. I just expected that sort of thing, but he didn't call and I didn't call anybody.

I feel pretty positive it was on a Wednesday that I decided to stay after school and write a letter. I wrote a long letter. I guess it was very emotional, and I went over to his car... and just dropped it in on the front seat and went on home.

The next morning about ten he called and said, "Why did you do such a stupid thing to write that letter?"

I said, "To me it wasn't stupid!" He said, "I want to see you right away. Come on up to my office." And I said, "Oh, okay." I was feeling a little bit on the belligerent side toward him by this time because I felt if he didn't care about me then I really shouldn't care about him. Yet I was sort of warning him, if I remember correctly, in that letter that if I didn't hear from him, I was going to have to talk to somebody. When I came up to his office, I don't remember having to wait. I just walked on in and said, "Hi" and went on by. At first he was very, very disgusted with me-oh, very, and sort of treated me as if I had done a very foolish thing.

He said, "It was very dangerous and foolish for you to leave that letter there because Al Portune could have walked by and seen the letter, and he reads my mail and he feels free to read things." Anyway, [he said it as if]...one of the most horrible things that could happen to him would be for Al Portune to read that and find out what had been going on. So I said, "Okay, I won't write any more letters, but I just felt like I had to talk to someone, and I still feel that way." He said, "Well, you can talk to me anytime. I am right here. I want you to call me, but don't talk to anyone else, just call me."

And there was still kind of a disgusted tone in his voice. I didn't argue or say anything, just sort of waited, and then he looked at me and said, "You know, I really have wondered if you aren't demon possessed." And I said, "Well, I can assure you, I am not!" I knew I wasn't and I think he could see I wasn't even going to budge. I wasn't going to doubt myself along that line, and he said, "No, I guess you are not."

And then, looking back, this was his next approach and the one that worked. He said, "You know, after reading that letter, I drove down to the Rose Bowl and read every word and tore it up into little tiny pieces so that no one could ever put it together again, and my boys were all in the back seat." It was like I was really dragging them down too, because I wrote the letter and Ted had to go through all that with them. He continued, "You know, after reading that letter, in one way it did me good because it really hit me what I had done-and I went into my bathroom and I got on my hands and knees and repented. I even vomited, I was so sick of myself."... He kept saying he was sick of himself that he could do such a thing.

And I thought, "Well, that's great, because I ought to repent too of doing it and, hopefully, I won't ever do that again." That really got through to me because I really believed him then and that that was the course to take too.... I felt that Ted was being truthful. [I thought] he had really repented and if God forgave him, who was I, and I knew that I needed forgiveness too. I guess that's one thing that everybody feels. You know what you have done in the past, and you know how it feels in your heart when you can forgive. Well, he-was so convincing....

That was pretty much the end of that interview, and he just encouraged me if I had anything on my mind or a problem to call him, which I never did because I was just used to him calling me, not me calling him. I didn't like to go through secretaries and that kind of stuff. I don't think he ever gave me a private number, no he never did. So I was on my own again....

I was around him quite a bit the following summer [working for the WCG's Summer Education Program]. I felt some responsibility to not get into a situation where that [sexual relations with Ted] would ever happen again and to stay far enough away from him that "he" would be safe. It sounds crazy, but that's the way I was.... There was a bathroom and shower and all that stuff [at the Summer Education Program], and there was an outer office that the secretary would use. I worked there and Ted would just be casually in the office.... I don't think he really did anything there, but he was in there one day. He had ridden a horse to the back door and left it outside and came on in and had done a few things, and I went in. He asked me if I was enjoying everything and how it was going and just things about the summer program. I don't think he worked up to it especially, but he suddenly said, "Hey, how about taking a shower together?" Looking back, it was like he had the liberty to ask me that because of what we had done.

I said, "No, I don't think so. I'd better not do anything like that." He just looked like "I guess you don't want to do something like that," so I just turned around and left the office. I didn't stay around any longer....

Herbert Armstrong "Disproves" the Bible

In 1958, in the Ambassador College Publication The Proof of the Bible, Herbert W. Armstrong thundered authoritatively "Here is how you can disprove the Bible and the very existence of God-if there is no God, and IF the Bible is not inspired! Just go over and build a small city on the site of New Tyre .... Now there is nothing to prevent them [skeptics] from building a city there on the site of New Tyre, except that the Bible they scoff at says they CAN'T!" (p. 20, emphasis HWA's.)

Today, as HWA says, skeptics and atheists are unable to build a city on the site of New Tyre-but not because some mysterious, unseen hand grabs them by a lock of their hair and throws them into the sea every time they try. They are unable to build a city there because the city of Sur (population 15,000) has been resting unobtrusively on the precise location of ancient Tyre since 1766 (Cyclopaedia of Biblical, Theological, and Ecclesiastical Literature, vol. X, p. 620). In fact, when HWA himself visited Tyre in 1973, he was forced to admit that "there were quite a number of new high-rise buildings [there]. But, no more are to be built-and by government order, the new structures are to be dismantled and carted off" (The Plain Truth, Jan. 1974, p. 17). But the very fact that modern Sur exists on the site of ancient Tyre-whether these high-rise buildings had been erected or not-means, according to HWA, that the Bible has been disproved and that God must cease to exist.

Now God is not about to commit suicide to make HWA's fallacious reporting look good. HWA is just going to have to suffer the consequences of his foot-in-mouth disease.

HWA's Fallacies Concerning Tyre. HWA came to his erroneous conclusions because his research into Tyre's history was careless and faulty and his biblical exegesis was inaccurate. If he hadn't tried to force his interpretation of Ezekiel 26 to fit the historical records, he would not have made such a blunder.

He read in Ezekiel 26 that Tyre's walls would be broken down and its stones, timber, and soil cast into the sea (vs. 12). He read that Tyre would become a bare rock (vs. 14) and would no longer be inhabited (vs. 19-21). But the historical account said no such thing. What was he to do? He noticed that the people of New Tyre had constructed a sea wall that had reclaimed some land from the sea, so he falsely concluded all of New Tyre was built in this lowland area. Hence he confidently wrote that "Alexander the Great, after demolishing the buildings of New Tyre, demolished this huge sea wall which had reclaimed the lowland space on which the actual city of New Tyre had been built.... God turned the ocean upon the city, and the deep waters cover it to this very day. New Tyre has remained from that day to this like the top of a rock!" (p. 19.)

What History Says. HWA did not succeed in reconciling Ezekiel's prophecy about Tyre with the historical record. History states that Alexander scraped most of Old Tyre into the sea, but much of New (insular) Tyre, though burned in the siege, was left intact. Rather than destroy the city completely, Alexander peopled it with new colonists and appointed a new king over Tyre. The city revived so rapidly that 18 years later it had the strength to hold out for 15 months against one of Alexander's former generals (Nina Jidejian, Tyre Through the Ages, Beirut, 1969, pp. 80-81).

History further declares that in the Roman period Tyre's "population overflowed its bounds and occupied a strip of the opposite mainland including the ancient Palaetyrus" (Encyclopaedia Biblica, p. 5, 226).

HWA tries futilely to assert that the complete site of ancient insular Tyre was inundated by the sea when Alexander demolished the sea wall that had reclaimed some lowland space and that the subsequent revivals of Tyre were not built on the actual site of New Tyre. Some have noticed the remains of a wall and a few columns just offshore from modern Sur and felt perhaps a sunken city lay beneath the blue waters of the Mediterranean, but aerial photography and diving observations by a French team in 1934-36 showed beyond doubt that the walls were the breakwater of the Egyptian harbor, not a section of a submerged city. There is simply no submerged city lying off the shores of insular Tyre.

Both Roman Tyre and modern Sur are located on top of the site of the biblical Tyre. Notice what S. W. Matthews, writing in National Geographic, Aug. 1974, p. 165, stated: "...today the Phoenicians' Tyre lies buried beneath these paving stones and columns of a Roman metropolis. Only a small dig reaches down to the lost world of the Phoenicians." And where do the Roman ruins lie? They lie under the city of Sur and to the south of it.

It appears that many of Ezekiel's statements in chapter 26 were more poetic than literal. Certainly ancient Tyre's might has vanished, the city has been devastated by armies that covered the city like the waves of the sea, and the original inhabitants are no more. Perhaps Isaiah 23: 13-18 coupled with Ezekiel 26 indicates that Tyre would be destroyed only temporarily or perhaps the prophecies of Ezekiel 26 remain yet to be fulfilled. But in any case the statements of Ezekiel 26 were never intended as "proof scriptures" for the existence of God.

HWA's Fallacies Concerning Babylon. Not only did HWA make himself look like a fool with his specious statements about Tyre, but he put his foot into his Mouth again when he attempted to explain the prophecies against Babylon. He quoted Isaiah 13:19-22 which describes a Babylon that "shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah." Isaiah further states that at an unspecified time in the future Babylon shall not be inhabited nor shall Arabs pitch their tents there, but wild beasts shall lie there. Based on these dire pronouncements, HWA dogmatically asserted that Babylon "is absolutely uninhabited today." He further added that "Babylon, like Tyre, defies the skeptic to rebuild its site. God declares, through the pages of the Bible, that it CANNOT be done!" (p. 38.)

HWA even mentions how he made a cursory visit to the site of Babylon, talked with the caretaker of the museum there, and came away satisfied that the prophecy had been fulfilled. Again, however, his sloppy research proved to be his undoing.

It was brought to the attention of AC's theologians that HWA's statements about Babylon were incorrect for several reasons: (1) Three villages exist inside the central walls of the ancient city. (2) A military camp sits inside the central walls. (3) A modern hotel stands next to the museum with a permanent staff of at least 18. (4) Some Arabs do pitch their tents in Babylon. (5) A few businessmen from the nearby city of Hilla have permanent homes in Babylon. (6) The area has many domesticated animals, but no wild ones.

The Booklet Killed. When the ministers at AC realized the extent of the errors in The Proof of the Bible concerning Tyre and Babylon, they decided the booklet had to go and gingerly notified HWA through an unsigned memo written by David Jon Hill. HWA exploded, as expected, but was mollified when assured that it wasn't his fault but the fault of the Seventh-day Adventists' book Prophecy Speaks, from which much of HWA's booklet was purportedly derived.

So on Oct. 31, 1972, Hill wrote in an interoffice memo: "The booklet 'Proof of the Bible' has been killed by HWA. Please destroy existing stock." But the remaining booklets were not destroyed. Orlin Grabbe, former AC instructor in Old Testament Survey, explained why in a widely circulated letter: "50,000 copies still on hand were still sent out, because having recently advertised the booklet, it was decided it would be unwise to disappoint and thus antagonize the customers! (Obviously, a great regard for truth, huh?)" In fact an editorial staff member was told by the pastor of one of the WCG's European churches that the booklet should continue to be sent out with all its errors because it did such a good job bringing people into the WCG. One wonders if God is getting so desperate to get members that he has to resort to deception!

Can a Few Prophecies Prove the Bible Is Inspired? Now The Proof of the Bible lies discredited and buried, but does this prevent HWA from boasting how he "proved the Bible"? Oh no! Has HWA told the WCG membership of the booklet's fallacies or made a retraction? Of course not! That would tarnish the image of infallibility he has so carefully cultivated. Meanwhile many WCG members go on smugly but ignorantly feeling they alone, of all Christians, have literally proved that every word of the Bible is inspired. Neither HWA nor they ever stopped long enough to ask themselves a simple question: Can one prove the accuracy and validity of every event and statement in the Bible simply by showing that five or six prophecies in the Bible have come to pass?

The answer should be obvious. Plainly it was asinine in the first place to even think that one could prove the whole Bible simply by showing a few prophecies out of hundreds came to pass. It's a shame such nonsense as The Proof of the Bible was ever published by Ambassador College and pawned off as inspired truth!

TITHING PAYS OFF!

"Tithing pays off!" says Herbert Armstrong, founder of the Worldwide Church of God. Obviously, to those receiving tithes, it does, as the above photos show.

While the Armstrong's Plain Truth magazine publishes articles about the deterioration of world conditions, the nearness of Armageddon, and worldwide famine (complete with photos of starving Biafran children), the leaders of the WCG are enjoying the sumptuous life-style of indulgent potentates while many of their supporters are on the borderline of poverty. As Herbert Armstrong has often said to friends, "Do you know of any king who lives like this?"

See our article "Fleecing the Flock" for details of the Armstrong money-making techniques.

Top: STANLEY R. RADER RESIDENCE (general counsel and vice-president for financial affairs), 840 Loma Vista, Beverly Hills, CA.

Stan and his wife Natalie reside at this little bungalow, one block north-of Sunset Boulevard. The estate is on 2.49 acres of prime, astronomically priced Beverly Hills property. As one would expect, it has all the amenities any other Beverly Hills Taj Mahal might have-tennis courts, statue-studded Roman swimming pool, saunas, projection rooms, guest house, etc. The Worldwide Church of God owned the estate for several years and kept it well-furnished, decorated, and maintained for the Raders, who occupied it on a life trust-estate basis with property in the church's name. But on January 10, 1972, it was signed over to Stan and Natalie as a joint tenancy with right of survivorship.

Should anyone be interested in a more detailed look at the property, contact the Mike Silverman Realty Agency in Beverly Hills. An appointment could be arranged to view the estate since Rader has listed the house for sale at $2,000,000. (Bets are now being taken on whether Stan will tithe on the net or the gross amount of profit he stands to make.)

Inset: ROBERT L. KUHN RESIDENCE (assistant to Garner Ted Armstrong), 357 Waverly Drive, Pasadena, CA.

With his Jensen-Interceptor parked out front, Robert lives in the home formerly occupied by Roderick Meredith, past director of the entire WCG ministry. Although the exterior appears plain, it is anything but that inside. Situated on 0.8 acres, it has 7,000 square feet in floor area. Most interesting is the report that Robert bought the home just a few years ago, with some help from his millionaire father, for approximately $90,000 cash. This occurred during a cash flow problem in the church and was heralded by the Armstrongs as a generous offer (generous to whom?). In November 1968 a $70,000 remodeling job was done on the home, and this year his tax assessment is on the low side, $197,600. One Pasadena real estate broker estimates the current market value at $325,000. One might say that Robert got himself a bargain-compliments of the tithe-paying church brethren.

Situated on 1.3 acres of luxuriantly landscaped property, Ted's sprawling two-story contemporary home appears nearly hidden by the lush foliage of this little Garden of Eden. The tax assessors lumped this lot with Ron Dart's (current head of the church's ministry) home when assigning the assessed value since Ambassador College is legal owner of both. Total assessment was $560,000 for both lots. Taking the percentage that Ted occupies, one can approximate his home's tax assessment at $398,000. It must be remembered these figures are not market values, which generally are significantly higher. Also, the market value would reflect heavily the liberal use of imported woods and stone throughout the house.

Lower right: HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG RESIDENCE, 210 South Orange Grove, Pasadena, CA.

Just one of HWA's five personal homes, this one is situated along Pasadena's "millionaire's row" on South Orange Grove Boulevard. A modest two-story mansion of approximately 7,200 square feet, it is lavishly appointed throughout. Just across the street, a similarly sized estate in a run-down, "fixer-upper" condition is listed for sale at $425,000. So, it is anybody's guess what this immaculately maintained property would bring in today's market.

THE PROFLIGATE SON

"Al, let's get one thing straight! I'm a no good, fornicating, adulterating son of a bitch!" These highly emotional words initiated a private conversation between Garner Ted Armstrong and me at 10:05 a.m. on Wednesday, May 16, 1973, in the seclusion of his television studio office. This was not the first or the only time Ted ever admitted that he was an adulterer. In spite of repeated public denials, Ted has privately admitted that he has been guilty of flagrant, continuous adultery and fornication for almost a quarter of a century-as a church member, an executive, and an evangelist!

I first learned of Ted's licentious activities in 1965. At that time it came to light that a Worldwide Church of God minister was committing adultery with two coeds who worked with him. Upon being discovered, he claimed that if Garner Ted could commit adultery and get away with it, then he could too. Herbert Armstrong didn't buy that excuse for one minute and promptly fired the minister, disfellowshipping and publicly marking him. Quickly, the whole sordid affair was swept under the rug, while Ted came out lily-white.

By this time I was becoming suspicious of Ted's activities. Upon further investigation, I found that Ted was supposedly involved with a girl who was "out to get him." Ted had simply weakened under pressure, I was assured, and finally succumbed to her aggressive advances. This time it was again easy for me to give him the benefit of the doubt, so I rationalized that he had slipped once, under great duress. Reasoning that he was in reality human, I tried to dismiss and forget the whole distasteful situation.

Ted's Problem Surfaces Again. In 1967, when the upset husband of one of Ted's victims informed me that his wife had had sexual relations with the handsome radio evangelist, I listened incredulously. I thought it had to be sour grapes or perhaps professional jealousy that motivated this allegation. But when the husband heatedly insisted that his complaint was true, I began looking further into the matter and finally went to Ted and talked to him personally. Ted openly and readily admitted to me that he had conducted an affair with this girl, but he exclaimed that the girl had repeatedly pursued him by showing off her shapely legs, flaunting her exciting body suggestively, and giving him the overt "come on" until in desperation and weakness he gave in. Ted expressed that he hoped his father (Herbert Armstrong) didn't have to be advised of this because this knowledge would "break his heart." (Little did I know then that his father had been aware of his son's adulterous affairs since the early 1950s, but his father had chosen to ignore that side of Ted's character. In fact, Herbert often refers to Ted before church audiences and remarks, "This is my beloved son, in whom I am well pleased.")

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Al Carrozzo became a baptized member of the Worldwide Church of God in 1956 and was soon ordained as a deacon. In 1961 he sold his profitable plumbing contracting business and came to Ambassador College in Pasadena. He was ordained to the ministry and was eventually elevated to the rank of pastor. Later he was appointed regional director over the western half of the WCG's U.S. ministry and churches. At the same time he was director of the counseling and guidance office in Pasadena, district superintendent of the headquarters district, and director of the housing office. He also served as an instructor at Ambassador College, teaching the epistles of Paul. On Nov. 13, 1973, after giving over $60,000 to the WCG, he severed his relationship with Ambassador College and the WCG, declaring: "I cannot compromise with the Word of God!" Al Carrozzo will soon write a book on the Armstrong church. If you would like more information on this book or other related subjects, you may write to him at P.O. Box 129, Vacaville, CA 95688.

Ted then elaborated to me in his defense that he felt he was specially "called" to preach his father's gospel. He declared that he must preach against adultery in others, even though he, himself, was personally guilty. "Put me behind bars, slip my food to me, keep me in solitary confinement," he said dramatically, "but put a microphone in front of me because I must preach this message to the whole world!" Once again I wrongly concluded that Ted had slipped under "emotional pressure." Sadly I walked away and tried to forget it.

Later it dawned on me that Ted is a sterling actor, a powerful persuader—one who can make you feel guilty for even approaching a delicate subject. One Worldwide Church evangelist summed it up succinctly: "Ted can charm the rattle off a snake." Unfortunately, he charms people too. Glib as an orator and possessing awesome mental dexterity, Ted can change black into white, turn silk into wool, and refine sin into baseless allegations and rumor.

It wasn't until a few years later that I learned of his continuous sexual exploits over more than 20 years, both on and off Ambassador College's Pasadena campus.

The Plot Thickens. Ted's problem surfaced again in mid-1971 when Al Portune Sr., then vice-president of financial affairs for the church and college, regretfully informed me of a serious problem in the "Work." He exclaimed that this problem "could destroy the Work!" This was the beginning of the unfolding of an almost unbelievable series of events. It is indeed a telling commentary that the Armstrongs were able to keep this problem hidden so long from the eyes of the public.

By July 1971 Herbert Armstrong could no longer contain Ted's promiscuity nor hide it from certain top administrators. It was then that Herbert decided to send Ted on a leave of absence. When Ted returned in about two months, Herbert was evidently not satisfied with Ted's repentance, so he once again exiled his son. Members of the church, however, were led to believe that Ted had been removed for health reasons. Notice how cleverly Herbert words the letter announcing Ted's dismissal:

"My son, Garner Ted, has been doing the jobs of five or six high-executive-caliber men. He does a half-hour radio broadcast daily-seven days a week, a half-hour telecast every week, besides meeting many speaking engagements... traveling over much of the world for important radio and television interviews... writing articles, doing an immense amount of study, research... and lately he has been taking about 95% of my executive duties as President of the colleges and the Church.

"He is forced to go at high tension-drive!-drive!-drive! Some three or four weeks ago, he said to one of our Deputy Chancellors that if he had the audacity, temerity, or nerve, he would ask me if he might take a leave of absence for a few weeks, for complete relaxation..." (member letter, Sept. 26, 1971, pp. 1-2).

"And you know the one thing Christ couldn't abide was a hypocrite" (GTA, sermon. November 6, 1976).

Herbert prepared the church members for Ted's imminent absence while distorting or overlooking the real reasons for Ted's exile. The letter continued (page 2):

"Plans had been made for him [Ted] to speak at every U.S. and Canada Feast site again this year. I decided it was just too much high pressure, and we cancelled out these engagements. I want him to take possibly a couple months of complete relaxation from such high-paced and strenuous activities...."

The reader should note that "pressure" was given as the cause for relieving Ted of his strenuous duties, when, in fact, the ministerial uproar over Ted's whoremongering and arrogant life-style was responsible.

Shortly after the letter had been mailed out, Ted convinced his father to allow him to speak at the Worldwide Church of God's (WCG) Feast of Tabernacles after all. Ted then proceeded to preach to the church members gathered at Big Sandy, Mt. Pocono, and Jekyll Island and then flew over to Squaw Valley where I was preaching.

What the World Needs Now Is Love, Sweet Love. I sat enraptured with thousands of other church members in the Squaw Valley arena as Ted preached a very persuasive sermon entitled "What the World Needs Now Is Love, Sweet Love." He was indeed preaching his "commissioned" gospel. Little did all of us realize that this powerful orator would spend the entirety of that very night with an Ambassador College stewardess in a Tahoe cabin loaned by a WCG member.

Garner Ted was "found out" and his father was notified. Herbert and a few fellow ministers immediately flew to Penticton-Ted's next stop-and there intercepted Ted, forbidding him to continue his festival preaching circuit. On October 9, 1971, Herbert relieved Ted of his executive duties and responsibilities at Ambassador College and in the Worldwide Church of God. In the hopes of covering up Ted's problem, Herbert again informed the gullible church membership in an October 14, 1971, letter that the young Armstrong was overworked and needed relaxation:

"A short time ago I sent a general letter to the Church membership explaining the serious need for Garner Ted Armstrong to be allowed a leave of absence by reason of ill health-not physical, but frayed nerves and excessive high tension which has built up over a period of years due to the heavy and crushing responsibilities of his office.

"After starting his leave of absence, he felt he would be up to making the circuit of the Festival sites. He felt the imperative duty to speak at these sites. I agreed. But after Squaw Valley, his fourth site, tensions had built up until his nerves were at razor-edge, and he could not continue."

Herbert's last statement is especially deceptive. Informed sources have pointed out that he knew perfectly well why he was forced to intercept Ted at Penticton. His purpose was to prevent Ted's continuing his circuit of preaching at the Feast sites. Yet he writes that Ted's "nerves were at razor-edge, and he could not continue." This was a deliberate lie!

Ted and the Masseuse. Shortly thereafter Ted was sent to Hawaii with his wife and two close friends. The male friend was instructed to watch Ted every single second. He did pretty much, only losing the defrocked profligate son for a couple of hours. That was all Ted needed to become "involved" again. While Ted was still in Hawaii, the Ambassador College mail receiving department in Pasadena received a letter from a woman who managed a massage parlor in Hawaii. The letter explained that there was a young masseuse in her employ who had been trying to come out of a life of sin because of watching Garner Ted on TV. This madam related that the young masseuse had been horrified into nightmarish disillusionment when she recognized Ted in the massage parlor. Now, the madam wrote, the masseuse was extremely distraught from witnessing the suave religionist there, especially upon learning of his whole purpose for being there.

I heard about this incriminating letter from Rod Meredith, a WCG evangelist, and tried to gain access to a copy, but evidently Herbert had it intercepted and continued the cover-up. Pressure began to mount, however, and Herbert was finally forced to send Ted into indefinite exile in Colorado. In another two months or so, Ted was again brought back. But once again, Ted's adulterous affairs were discovered, and again Herbert Armstrong was forced to take action.

The Confrontation. On January 30, 1972, he and a few select men went over to Ted's home. Around 10:30 p.m., Garner Ted came home from a Los Angeles Laker basketball game and was stunned to find his father, most of the headquarters leadership, and Stan Rader waiting in his living room. Upon learning the purpose of their visit, he flew into a reactionary rage during which he openly admitted he had had illicit sexual relations with some 200 women-and that was his "conservative estimate"-during his two decades of association with his father's church. Among his consorts were literally dozens of youthful, wide-eyed coeds, plus several who became executive or ministerial wives. On this occasion Ted was given an official letter of disfellowship.

Upon disclosure of the shocking magnitude of Ted's adulterous activities, top personnel at Ambassador College rushed home to interrogate their spouses. Many a disillusionment yet lingers with them to this day.

This drastic action by Herbert Armstrong came after Ted had been forgiven on several occasions. But it seemed that every time Ted repented, he repeated his immoral activities until they were again uncovered. Actually this repent-repeat-reprimand cycle had been going on for years.

During the January 30, 1972, confrontation with his father and the leading ministers, Ted also confessed to having an intimate sexual relationship with an Ambassador College stewardess. His relationship with her allegedly began in the summer of 1970. In a private conversation I had with Ted on May 16, 1973, Ted admitted to me that his affair with this girl had begun in Jerusalem, but he denied that it was merely a "look, lust, and grab" affair. (He did admit he had had numerous affairs that were of the "look, lust, and grab" variety.) He asserted that with this girl it was different. He stated that she became very special because he was experiencing emotional "lows" during this time. One day, he explained, when he stood sobbing at the memorial to the 6 million victims of Nazi persecution, she put her hand on his shoulder to "comfort" him. And that was the start of their relationship. Their clandestine, adulterous affair continued until the problem was brought to the attention of Herbert Armstrong in the summer of 1971. Instead of removing Ted from the ministry for good-as he had done with other ministers guilty of adultery-he precipitated a vast cover-up, much like former President Nixon attempted. There is one major difference though: Herbert had been covering up Ted's sexual looseness since the early 1950s.

It was in the early 1950s that Garner Ted earned his reputation as a lady's man while in the U.S. Navy based in San Diego. He confided his conquests to several others in the WCG ministry, including myself. On the Ambassador College campus, Ted, no doubt, found a change of pace from his previous duties, but as for his character makeup, only the uniform seemed to change.

I was stunned to learn the gross extensiveness of Ted's sexual looseness, but, as a result of the events on January 30, 1972, when Herbert Armstrong disfellowshipped his son, I honestly felt Herbert was "dealing with the problem." Rather than being discouraged, I was somehow reassured that Herbert hadn't spared even his own son, but had dealt strongly with adultery within the ministry of Jesus Christ.

Ted in Exile. During Ted's exile at the Colorado A-frame, Dave Antion, a WCG evangelist, was commissioned by Herbert Armstrong to write a paper about the qualifications for Christ's ministry. Antion's thoroughly researched paper left no doubt that, in accordance with numerous biblical injunctions, Garner Ted Armstrong had irrefutably and permanently disqualified himself from ever again assuming the position of minister of Jesus Christ.

At the time, the leading ministers and I all thought Herbert really wanted to know about Ted's qualifications, but later we found out he was trying to learn all the main arguments against his son's return so he could persuasively refute them. Herbert forwarded Antion's paper to Ted, who promptly dismissed it, claiming the biblical arguments didn't apply to him because he had been "called to preach the gospel from his mother's womb." This defense, then, turned out to be Herbert's argument in favor of Ted's return to full status and authority, in spite of Herbert's earlier pronouncement that Ted, even if returned, would not occupy ministerial office.

Garner Ted Reinstated. In late May 1972, Herbert met with his son privately for 7 hours, and on June 7, Herbert Armstrong, Al Portune Sr., Dave Antion, Ron Dart, and Stan Rader flew to Ted's Colorado retreat to see if Ted seemed to be repentant enough to be allowed to resume his duties. Ted put on a convincing emotional display of typical Ted Armstrong repentance. Besides, most of those present were convinced that Garner Ted had to return. Too much time had already elapsed, causing the organization's income to plummet by the millions. Ted's hands had been dutifully slapped, and ministerial outrage had begun to show signs of assuaging.

So on June 8, Herbert's "womb-sanctified" son was reinstated in the WCG, restored to an elevated position (in spite of an earlier promise from Herbert Armstrong that this would never happen). Once again, Ted was allowed to make radio and television broadcasts purporting to be a minister of Jesus Christ. Just 42 days later, on July 20, 1972, Ted was totally reinstated to his full evangelist rank in the ministry, he was placed back on both college and church boards, and he was named executive vice-president of the Worldwide Church of God. This was done in spite of ministerial disapproval among a few high-ranking holdouts and without any public announcement at all.

Herbert's quick reinstatement of Ted after 20 years of adultery was in marked contrast to his handling of a former WCG minister in 1968. This man's sin? He committed a single act of adultery! For this sin he was fired from his job, removed from the ministry, disfellowshipped from the WCG, and his sin of adultery was detailed in a special assembly for all employees and students at Ambassador College.

Year of Revelation. During this time I maintained a wait-and-see attitude. It was difficult to make myself believe that the two men I respected most—Garner Ted and Herbert Armstrong—were total frauds! It was even more difficult for me to believe that Herbert was less than 100% sincere and honest. However, on May 22, 1973, at 1 p.m., Ted left me with no doubts as to his father's real motivation, intentions, and modus operandi. In a private, three-hour meeting in his office, Ted told me he specifically disagreed with his father on many issues, including doctrine. He explained that his dad desperately wanted to be accepted by the world, and that was the reason he was traveling around the world continuously, seeking the favor and audience of world leaders.

Ted admitted that he had seen his father "stone drunk" on dozens of occasions. He stated that his father had told him that he (Herbert) would do anything to keep the "Work" afloat-including lying, stealing, and bribery. I was shocked, of course, but later I personally saw Herbert "stoned" on several occasions and caught him in numerous lies. I began to see those lies in his member and co-worker letters, and these lies have continued to this very day.

The year 1973 was one of revelation for me. I learned of Ted's profound and long-enduring sexual activities, Herbert's total cover-up, corruption at the highest level in the WCG, Herbert's pleasure blasts around the world under the guise of preaching the true gospel, squandering of vast sums of money on extravagant art treasures, exploitation of gullible and hard-pressed people, gross doctrinal error, and suppression of human beings-mentally, emotionally, physically, and spiritually. Yes 1973 proved to me that dishonesty was a way of life with Ted and his father, and that way of life hasn't changed to this very day.

Garner Ted's "Repentance." Has Garner Ted changed? Did he really repent? One thing is sure: Ted "repented" many, many times. He has been called "the professional repenter." He can cry on cue.

Upon returning in mid-1972, Ted was supposed to state publicly that he had sinned against God and his wife. He promised to make it plain just what his sin involved. He had agreed at the meeting with his father and several ministers in the little A-frame in Colorado on June 7, 1972, that he would return and "come clean." It just never happened. On June 14, 1972, I wrote in my diary: "GTA returned to Pasadena, today, for the first time since January 31. NO immediate signs of repentance." On June 26, I wrote that I had just talked to Robert Kuhn on the phone and that he had stated that an evangelist's wife told him one of Ted's assistants was "fronting" for Ted at Brookside Winery. "She knows because Ted came out of a back room with a girl on his arm."

Since then, Ted has been seen in Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe, and Reno gambling and drinking. He continues his playboy life-style on his frequent plane trips. His sarcastic harangues and doctrinal duplicity are invariably followed up with administrative tyranny. The crush-all-rumor approach, merciless terminations, and condemning diatribes have become administrative trademarks of Garner Ted Armstrong. His emotional overreactions, impetuous responses, and "shoot from the hip" modus operandi are all blunt testimonials of his continued lack of any real repentance.

When I resigned from the Worldwide Church of God ministry in 1973, it was my sincere desire-and it still is-that Garner Ted Armstrong would repent. When questioned by the press then, I even refused to divulge the full extent of Ted's immorality in hopes that he would repent. I now know, however, that unless these sins are exposed thousands will continue to put their trust, not in God, but in Herbert Armstrong and his profligate son.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Ambassador College's Participation In Jerusalem Dig Ends

Israeli archaeologists announced on Dec. 8, 1976, that they had completed their excavation at the southwest corner of the Temple Mount (Los Angeles Times, Dec. 9, 1976, part I, p. 16). The excavation was begun in Feb. 1968 by Hebrew University and the Israel Exploration Society, under the direction of Dr. Benyamin Mazar.

Ambassador College joined the dig in Dec. 1968, primarily due to the efforts of Drs. Ernest Martin and Herman Hoeh. Herbert W. Armstrong, in his typically modest fashion, proclaimed the dig "the most important archaeological excavation of our time" (co-worker letter, Dec. 10, 1968, p. 2) and committed over $100,000 per year to it.

Later in a Dec. 10, 1968, letter, HWA boasted that the excavation was "one of the most important scientific projects under way anywhere on earth today." He stated that "it will mean great prestige and recognition of Ambassador College." On page 3, HWA explained a new aspect of his commission:

... I did not realize until recently we were also commissioned to... clean up the filth and rubble in that area that was the original Jerusalem and City of David.... Why is that important? Because Christ has said he will yet choose Jerusalem.... His throne will be there.... Jesus is to sit on David's throne! Where was David's throne? It was on this very spot where we are now cleaning up and hauling off the rubble of century after century of accumulation! ...So there is a physical preparing, as well as [a] spiritual, in preparing the way for Messiah's coming! Further. God says we are to shout, with amplified power, to the cities of Judah the glad Message that the Messiah is soon coming. This [participation in the excavation] is leading to the opportunity to do this (Isaiah 40:1-11)" (HWA's emphasis removed throughout).

Now that the excavations adjacent to the south and west sides of the Temple

Mount have been terminated, it is obvious that the excavation didn't accomplish what HWA claimed was one of its paramount objectives: cleaning the rubble off the site of David's throne. However, nowhere does the Bible say any such preposterous thing had to occur before Christ could return, though it does refer to a great earthquake striking the city before his return. The excavation was not located at the site of David's throne anyway, as Dr. Martin and Professor Mazar repeatedly told HWA. The site of David's throne is 200 yards south of the dig area.

Also, HWA had hoped his financing of the excavation coupled with his political contacts in Israel would buy him favor with the Israeli government who could grant him air time over Radio Jerusalem to preach his gospel to the Jews. But this dream never materialized either.

Thus after 8 years and over $1,500,000 spent on the excavation and the Ambassador College students who took part in it, another of HWA's grandiose projects has failed to yield the stupendous results he predicted.

Home-breaking - Armstrong Style

Dean and Laurie (not their real names) were a happily married couple the day they began listening to the "World Tomorrow" broadcast. Through repeatedly hearing the Armstrong message and then reading the Armstrong follow-up literature, they became convinced that the Armstrongs were honest and preaching "the truth." After deciding to become members of the Armstrong church, they wrote and asked to be baptized by the Armstrong ministry. They found, however, that before they could be granted church membership, they had to answer some very personal questions regarding their marital relationship.

Grueling Grilling. The interrogation they received from the ministerial counseling team got as direct as any police inquiry. With Dean at her side, Laurie had to unravel the facts surrounding her teenage "love life," courtship, and ultimate marriage to another man whom she had been married to for a short time before she met and married Dean. Though it was an extremely difficult, unbelievably embarrassing experience for her to recall her past, the ministers pursued into the delicate, the tender, the private-all in the name of God! The episode was as difficult for Dean to hear as it was for Laurie to relate.

Pointed ministerial questioning took up the entire evening. Obviously, Dean and Laurie were on the defensive, parrying darts of interrogation to which they were totally unaccustomed. Laurie had to go back and recall the sexual activities of her young life, revealing, in elaborate detail, delicate intimacies with other men. All of the better-forgotten past was dredged up for notes, comment, and ministerial judgment. The whole affair was prefaced by the ministerial warning not to shade the truth.

Over and over the whole story had to be repeated for clarity's sake, for proper emphasis, and to assure the certainty of the most important points. The couple was told that if they were thorough enough and accurate enough this ordeal would not have to be repeated. After all this the ministers conducted a complete and final summation, which, supposedly, put the whole matter in proper perspective.

Finally, it ended. The ministers counseled briefly with one another, nodded agreement, and gave their determination: "Laurie is 'bound' to her first husband." The decision was almost impossible to take. But, they were assured, God's judgment would prevail in the hearts of the converted. So before Dean and Laurie could be baptized into what they considered to be God's true church, they had to separate. They were told they were "living in sin" and that their only child was the product of an "adulterous union." It was decided that Laurie was to keep possession of their little boy and Dean was to move away. To refuse would have meant disallowance of baptism, church attendance, and fellowship. No greater decision had ever entered their lives.

Under the prevailing pressure and the implications of spiritual intimidation (the Great Tribulation, Gehenna fire, lost salvation, etc.), Dean and Laurie decided to separate and divorce, since Dean would be allowed to remarry. Armstrong doctrine considered that Dean had never yet been "legally" married. The one stipulation: Dean had to remarry within the Worldwide Church of God. Laurie was to remain unmarried for the remainder of her life, or as long as her first husband (unseen for years) remained alive. Strangely, it would have been perfectly right and proper, according to WCG teaching at that time, for Laurie to attempt to break up her first husband's current marriage and remarry him-in spite of their feelings for one another and in spite of the children involved. But to marry another would be sin, and to remain with Dean would likewise be sin.

Dean never remarried but remained single for five long years in abject agony, longing to be with his loving wife and child. The disillusionment and depression was awesome. Laurie was in constant misery, at times hoping that her first husband would meet with a fatal accident which would free her to reunite with Dean. The trauma continued until one day, five years later, a minister of the Worldwide Church of God discovered that a "slight" error in judgment had been made in their case and that they were "bound" to each other after all. The Worldwide Church of God offered no apology for its meddling interference, no regret for inflicted heartache and time lost, and no compassionate empathy over the error which forced them to live apart, in mental and emotional agony.

Nothing but their love for each other had preserved them until the Armstrongs' church government got around to quite matter of factly "correcting" the organizational mistake. Though together again, their relationship was damaged. Their marital lives were besmirched and sullied by the false teachings of a man-Herbert Armstrong-who loudly claims divine inspiration as "God's lone apostle today."

Case History Number Two: John and Joan. I shall never forget the case of John and Joan (not their real names). It was considered a borderline case and the local minister was unable to make a decision. As the district superintendent of the area I was called in to finalize a decision. After much deliberation and the arduous grilling of each individual, I had to decide that based on the doctrinal pronouncements of Herbert W. Armstrong, John was "bound" to a previous mate and that the present relationship was organizationally untenable.

John and Joan were a very attractive young couple with two lovely children. More than anything else, they wanted to become members of "God's true church." They were convinced that the Worldwide Church of God was that true church, so when I told them that, according to the church's teaching, they would have to separate, they limply acquiesced, but in deep sorrow. The agony of that moment haunts me to this very day. I can still visualize the young, vulnerable couple sobbing in each other's arms as their two children looked on in bewilderment and then joined their mommy and daddy in a prolonged crying session that seemed like it would last forever.

They decided to separate in order to join the church. Their lives were ruined, the family was shattered, the children were disoriented, and a loving foursome ended up in shambles. I imagine the damage is still running its course for all four of them. The Armstrong empire, however, keeps right on going, amassing its power and wealth without a worry or personal concern whatsoever for the lives of those it has injured down through the years.

Case History Number Three. I recall a case where a young man had been in the Armed Services during World War II and learned that he was about to be sent overseas. Fearing that he might not return, he hastily married the first girl that came along. They lived together all of three days before he left the country. During his three-year duty overseas, his young wife decided not to wait around and began dating others. The young serviceman ultimately received the traditional "Dear John" letter, and that was the last he ever heard from her.

Years later, when he decided to join the WCG, Herbert Armstrong's "theology" ruled that his first marriage was a "binding" one, and the now middle-aged man became obligated to live out the remainder of his life alone.

Case History Number Four: Buck Taylor. It was in the late 1960s that the now deceased Buck Taylor began to attend church, fully convinced that the Worldwide Church of God was the divine instrument of God on earth. He and his wife had both been married previously, and they now had three young children. Again, because of the Armstrongs' organizational structure for handling divorce and remarriage cases, I followed through on my official responsibilities. We put the couple through the "grueling-grilling" drama in the style dictated by the Church Administration Department. Both Buck and his wife had to unravel their past sex lives, going back many years, to the complete satisfaction of our question sheets. Things that each party had never known about the other were brought out in explicit detail. Discontent soon reigned, and the rapport they had once had was successfully broken.

They were told to separate in order to obey God, which they did, in the midst of the greatest emotional trauma of their lives. Buck went on to gain church membership, living alone.

Many years later, in early 1973, after he had thoroughly studied the subject of divorce from the Bible's perspective, Buck rewrote his own case history with new understanding. He hoped to get an impartial review before the ministry, claiming that he had definitely defrauded his first wife, according to Matthew 5:32 and 19:9. He felt these scriptures proved his first marriage could never have been a "binding" one in the eyes of God, though the WCG had ruled otherwise. With great confidence he pursued his investigation, but the ministry-showing no concern for his suffering-was disinterested in resurrecting the matter. Finally, he was forced to write a personal letter to Herbert W. Armstrong, appealing for an "audience" and hearing in the light of his new understanding. When summoned into the "awesome" presence of his church leader, he naively felt privileged and believed it was for an objective review of his case history.

It wasn't so, nor was it ever intended as such. In typical "kangaroo-court" style, Armstrong began his accustomed tirade against Buck's prebaptism sins, the need to "keep Israel's camp clean," and Korah-like rebellion against God's constituted church authority. The "dressing down" didn't take long, but it was effective. Not only was his case history completely ignored and disparaged, but without even understanding why, Buck Taylor was mercilessly "disfellowshipped" and banished from the Worldwide Church of God.

That very evening, Friday, April 13, 1973, Herbert W. Armstrong formally and arrogantly "marked" Buck Taylor from the pulpit before the Pasadena congregation, publicly revealing the sins committed by Buck long before his baptism. Buck was never the same. Totally disillusioned, depressed, discouraged, and despairing, he was broken as he had never been before.

Buck later became so disturbed over this vicious breach of privacy and trust that he filed an $11 million suit against Herbert Armstrong and the WCG. But before a decision was reached in the case Buck died from a heart attack brought on by the stress of the whole affair.

These four cases are by no means isolated instances. At Herbert Armstrong's Pasadena headquarters descriptive records of each and every visit and counseling are filed. There are thousands of such case histories on file. Pages and pages of information covering multitudinous questions had to be written up and sometimes taped to satisfy the Armstrongs' hierarchical line of divorce and remarriage judges. Since many eyes were to see the private disclosures of the intimate relations of various divorced individuals and their mates, they had to be formal, clear, perfectly typed, and have plenty of descriptive elaboration. There had to be many copies, meticulously exact and with enough amplification that a stranger 3,000 miles away, reading it for the first time, would be able to arrive at an Armstrong-like decision. Once typed, copies were sent to "headquarters," the area district superintendent, and various others.

Unquestionably, divorce and remarriage investigations and writeups were the most grueling, enervating task for the Armstrong ministry-the most time-consuming, wearying, and embarrassing. Many months, if not years, were needed for some decisions. One such report consumed fourteen typewritten, single-spaced pages, as taken from a battery of cassette tapes. And that particular writeup had to do with only one prior marriage. Multiple marriage cases usually required several separate sessions, each lasting several hours.

As an executive working directly in the Church Administration Department, I gained from the records an intimate overview of the complexity, agony, and intimidation extant throughout the Armstrong empire. In fact, in the Pasadena church district alone we ministers were personally working with no less than 300 victims of Herbert Armstrong's divorce doctrine.

But what was the cause of all this suffering?

The Original Teaching. The Worldwide Church's original doctrine on divorce was found in Herbert Armstrong's booklet Divorce and Remarriage. In the booklet and in sermons Herbert Armstrong proclaimed that once a marriage had been "bound" it could never be "unbound." For the Worldwide Church of God there was no such thing as divorce, either approved or allowed in the Bible. "You can look from one end of the Bible to the other," he would rave, "and you won't find any such thing as divorce." According to him there were simply no circumstances in which two people might divorce and eventually wind up matrimonially yoked to somebody else. There was, however, one small "loophole" in the doctrine. That loophole was centered around a statement Jesus made concerning "fornication" (porneia in the original Greek). In Matthew 19:9 and 5:32, Jesus said: "Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery" (KJV).

To Armstrong this statement showed that premarital sex was the only reason for two mates to "divorce." And this "divorce" was considered to be an annulment, even if the parties had been married for 60 years. Armstrong said the English word "fornication" had to refer to a sexual act committed prior to marriage. His explanation was that if an unmarried person had had sex relations prior to the wedding ceremony, he or she was obligated before God to explain the circumstances to the prospective mate. If such explanation was not forthcoming and it could be determined that the "injured" mate would have rejected the marriage in the first place, then the marriage was not considered "bound," but rather was considered to have been a fraud. The couple was said to have been living in an unyoked, unblesed, unapproved state for all their marital years. To Armstrong, God had never been in the marriage, the wedding ceremony had been a sham, and their marital lives had been fraudulent.

If one mate learned of premarital sex by the other mate after marriage, then the injured mate was obligated either to "put away" the other mate immediately or else to forgive him and remain with him. If a rejecting decision was not immediately forthcoming, Armstrong contended, then the marriage became binding in God's eyes. There could then be no disunion (outside of death), regardless of any subsequent circumstances.

First Doctrinal Committee. As a result of unrest in the church, a doctrinal committee was formed in early 1972, of which I was a member. I began to question this "sacred cow" doctrine. We began discussing the Greek word porneia which had been translated as "fornication" in the King James version. We learned through reputable scholars that porneia actually meant "sexual immorality" or "unchastity" and was translated as such in many New Testament versions of the Bible. Porneia included fornication, adultery, whoremongering, homosexuality, sodomy, bestiality, perversion, and the like. It could in no way be restricted to Armstrong's lone definition of premarital sex.

This was a revolutionary discovery. It meant that divorce and remarriage was acceptable if one of the two mates had been previously guilty of, or was presently practicing, any one of the many forms of sexual immorality while married—not just "premarital sex" as Herbert claimed. Many of us were overjoyed at this revelation because this meant the church now could allow many couples that the church had previously split up to live together after all as husband and wife.

As the doctrinal committee began to unveil its findings and other new insights into established biblical truths, some Pasadena loyalists stealthily reported our discoveries to Herbert Armstrong, who, upon learning what was happening, summarily disbanded the committee. From the pulpit he shouted that he would research the entire divorce and remarriage doctrine and write a new, more up-to-date booklet, summarizing his inspired conclusions. From the erstwhile doctrinal committee he selected a few members who had unflinchingly supported his time-honored viewpoint to help research the issue.

The summer of 1973 evidenced many sermons built around his studies and the amassing of his manuscript. Vehement denunciations against "modernism," "liberalism," and "licentiousness" provided appropriate flak to dispel the hapless and disinterested church member from doing any personal research. Grave and fiery warnings went out against any Worldwide Church minister who would arrogantly quest after "new truth" that God could only dispense from the "top down." Headquarters evangelists dutifully warned against lay-member and ministerial arrogation of doctrinal duties and responsibilities beyond their range of knowledge. The strongarm word was: "lay off."

Herbert Armstrong personally warned all of his ministers at each of the Feast of Tabernacles sites (fall 1973) that they were not to delve into, study, research or discuss church doctrine among themselves. Questions were being engendered, and questions, he said, were of the Devil. Elders were to perform their headquarters-oriented duties and disseminate only what had been taught them at Ambassador College. At the Feast of Trumpets' services in Pasadena, Garner Ted Armstrong told ministers not to discuss or entertain doctrinal questions. "Any minister who dares to bring up such doctrinal issues," he bellowed wildly, "will be defrocked before the week is out." Later, in Pasadena, Herbert Armstrong announced that the "committee" was unanimous in its conclusions—there being only one person with "very minor objections." With his past interpretation forcibly sustained, divorce and remarriage became a closed issue, and anyone who disagreed with him was said to have disagreed with God and should "get out." Such was the openness, the Christian attitude, the spirit of joy, and the atmosphere of love around Ambassador College during the last half of 1973.

New Booklet. In October, the completed divorce and remarriage manuscript was secretly sent to press, avoiding all normal editing channels. By early November the new booklet, Marriage and Divorce, was finally released. In it Herbert Armstrong took a doctrinal position with which no recognized Bible scholar in the world today agrees. The real essence of this booklet's argument can be found on page 35:

"The Church of God for 40 years has said it [porneia] refers to an illicit sex act committed PRIOR to being bound in marriage...."

What authority other than "the church" did Herbert quote to substantiate or prove his personal concept of marital fraud? Absolutely none. He simply stated with self-proclaimed authority, "The Church has maintained that, the husband having been unaware of it [illicit sex by his mate] until after the marriage ceremony...a fraud was committed. And God, knowing of this fraud DID NOT BIND them" (p. 35).

In Herbert's mind he had been right all along, and his old foundational divorce and remarriage booklet was vindicated. He bellowed from the pulpit, "God would not allow his apostle to be wrong on such an important issue for over forty years." Here finally was the inspired truth God had revealed and this, Herbert W. Armstrong promised, would never be altered. And he admonished with growling gravity, "If any of you don't like it, or won't accept it, you can get out!"

On November 13, 1973, I resigned from my church position as a direct result of this booklet. In a private conversation with Garner Ted Armstrong and Robert Kuhn on November 27, 1973, I made it abundantly clear how I felt about the New Testament concept versus Herbert Armstrong's concept of divorce and remarriage. Ted said that he had known for over ten years that his father's teaching on the subject was wrong. He had even approached his father about his own marriage (at one time he had believed he was not bound to his wife), but his father's strong arm prevailed.

For over ten years Ted had continued to preach and teach his father's errant view on divorce, despite the fact that he knew it was in error and had already destroyed hundreds of church families. In all probability Ted would still be teaching it today had his father not been coerced into making drastic changes in the doctrine.

History Making 1974. In early 1974 pressure began to mount regarding many doctrines of the church. Divorce and remarriage was at the top of the list. Over 40 ministers and thousands of members left during the first three months. It became alarmingly apparent to the Pasadena leadership that unless something dramatic was done several thousand more members and ministers would leave the church and income would begin to drop dramatically.

Yielding to pleas from several top executives, Herbert Armstrong quietly and surreptitiously discontinued publishing the much touted and publicized booklet (Marriage and Divorce). All remaining copies were recalled at headquarters, and the work which purported to represent God's final authority and official church doctrine on divorce was no more. The booklet that was conceived of, nurtured, and given birth to by Herbert was officially canned. At this point, however, the doctrine still remained unchanged.

Because of the uproar over several church doctrines including divorce and remarriage, Herbert Armstrong finally called a special worldwide conference in Pasadena in May 1974. Traditionally all ministerial conferences were held in January, but because there was such discontent in the ministry and membership, Herbert was prevailed upon to call this special May conference, which he opened by suddenly changing his life-long position on divorce and remarriage.

Only days before the conference opened Dr. Herman L. Hoeh had introduced to Herbert the "new pivotal understanding" that God does not "bind" all marriages. This was the "key" to the limited doctrinal change. Herbert, however, continued to stubbornly cling to his old definition of porneia for nearly two additional years.

There had been no new special committee formed to research the traumatic subject. Outside scholarship had not been invited, nor was it wanted. The Foundation for Biblical Research, a research group founded in 1973 by Dr. Ernest L. Martin, former head of Ambassador College's department of theology, had already published a booklet entitled Marriage and the Bible months before, and both Armstrongs proudly claimed that neither had read its contents. Ironically Dr. Martin's booklet discusses the Worldwide Church's new "key" in the first five pages. Asking for no discussion on the matter, Armstrong simply sat in his special (papal?) chair inside his own lavish auditorium and announced the gargantuan change as though the damages of the past had been inflicted by someone else and he had been called in at the last minute to "straighten things out." It was as though his only responsibility had been to transmit "inspired" truth from God and that he had never had an active part in formulating any of the original doctrine. The WCG's merciless, erroneous policy on divorce and remarriage ended within one-half hour from the commencement of the conference.

Though decidedly in the dark for the most part, his ministry readily and dutifully accepted his revelatory pontification, perhaps because they knew that any such change would inevitably free thousands who had been living in, were living in, and would have to live in bondage under Armstrong's original doctrine.

Let me state emphatically from personal, firsthand experience of over 18 years in that organization that there would have been no change whatsoever on divorce and remarriage or any other doctrine of that church if there had not been profound and extensive pressure on the Armstrongs to alter it. Any considerable loss of ministers and members meant a loss of money, and it is money which makes their organization go round. It was their obsessive fear of mass defections and resultant lost tithes which brought about the doctrinal change in divorce and remarriage and nothing else!

DIVORCE AND REMARRIAGE COMMENTS

"I have never read Bob Sarrett's paper on divorce and remarriage. I refused to read it because I wanted to look my father in the eye and say, 'Dad, I never ever read his paper.' And I don't have great big agonizing questions on the subject [of divorce and remarriage] at all!"

Garner Ted Armstrong
Ministerial Conference, 1/4/74

[Editor: Robert Sarrett, a WCG layman, wrote Herbert Armstrong a letter in 1974 mentioning a number of doctrinal points that he had written up and numerous others he would like to write up. In the nine-page letter he refers to a lengthy letter he wrote to the WCG's Letter Answering Dept. on May 7, 1967. This letter recommended several changes in the church's divorce and remarriage policy. Sarrett's comments are a telling commentary on the church's openmindedness toward doctrinal research.]

"...[My letter on divorce and remarriage] was done through official channels and in the right attitude. It was dated May 7, 1967.... What I said in that early letter, seven years ago, especially about I Cor. 7, was EXACTLY the same thing as was proclaimed from the pulpit by you and your son.... But the sad problem has been a horrible communications breakdown. I was constantly suspected of demonism, intellectual vanity, lying, or what have you by the ministry back in those days.... Mr. Armstrong, in reality, the honest and simple truth about D&R has been in the Body [of Christ] for at least seven years.... But because of the emotions involved, the refusal to grant recognition that someone could question Church doctrine and still be sincere and loyal, and the resultant breakdown in vertical communications, it has taken seven long years to get it solved.... As is so common with the things that I write, nobody ever responds to me personally and goes over with me the things presented, especially if they disagree.... If they had sat down with me... some of these problems might be years behind us."

Robert Sarrett
Letter, 5/30/74

"Nobody is denying that there are people out here that are practically close to suicide because of divorce and remarriage situations."

Garner Ted Armstrong
Ministerial Meeting, 3/7/74

"You know, I knew the truth about porneia over six years ago, and it was formally and finally approved last week by Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong. And I have never preached it or taught it or exacerbated it or tried to divide the Work over it in the history of all that time."

Garner Ted Armstrong
Sermon in England, 1/17/76

As it is, Herbert Armstrong has never publicly admitted his personal error, apologized for the anguish he caused, made restitution to the injured parties, or offered compensation of any kind. It just isn't built into his life-style or character to do so. Herbert felt he shouldn't be blamed for teaching gross error on divorce and remarriage because God never brought the errors to his attention. Instead of apologizing for breaking up happy marriages, Herbert praised those who steadfastly followed his erroneous teachings and condemned those who dropped by the wayside to follow the truth. Obedience is the greatest virtue in the Worldwide Church of God-especially when the church teaches error, because it then becomes a "spiritual trial" that members are obligated to endure:

"Brethren, this very experience ought to teach all that loyalty to God and to His Church must always be placed first, over supposed or real wrongs or personal grievances.... I want all of you to know...how much I and all loyal ministers appreciate deeply from the heart the faithfulness of those of you who have endured this anguish in order to be obedient to our God" (Herbert Armstrong, member letter, May 14, 1974, page 11).

This is a typical example of the twisted, perverted, and destructive pontification of Herbert W. Armstrong. Instead of using his own name, he substitutes God's. He had been responsible for inflicting anguish, grief, and heartache upon thousands of trusting victims, and yet he had the unmitigated audacity to proclaim that they were right to follow him when he was wrong, even though the apostle Peter declared, "We ought to obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29). Herbert feels that loyalty to him must be placed first over real wrongs. Even when his teachings are destructively in error he believes members must endure personal anguish in order to be obedient to him. To do otherwise is "rebellion," and in the Worldwide Church of God rebellion is the most cardinal sin of all.

The "New, Improved" Doctrine. The Worldwide Church of God membership was led to believe that the "new, improved" divorce and remarriage doctrine announced at the May 1974 conference was at last accurate and conclusive. Not so! The definition of porneia went totally undiscussed at the May conference because everyone knew that Herbert would not alter his view on its meaning. In fact, Herbert still felt he was right about porneia and that the scholars were completely wrong in their explanations of God's laws on divorce and remarriage:

"First, we all had to consider that we cannot accept any of the arguments so far advanced by others trying to use reason or to research in meanings of the Greek and the Hebrew language and all of the arguments which are merely human reasoning to try to prove something that is not in the Bible. I went through all of that, and I had to reject it because it was twisting of the word of God. Not one thing that had come out could be accepted. A book was circulated here written by a minister who admitted he was trying to find a way to get around the thing of marriage and divorce, and he never could. But he reasoned his way out of it. Usually they put most of their argument on the Greek word porneia. Now I'm here to tell you the Greek word porneia as Jesus used it in Matthew 5 and 19 means 'fornication'-a sex act committed before marriage.... Any marriage bound by this church-God has bound it. It's bound for life, just like we've always said."

At this time Garner Ted outwardly appeared to agree with his father on the meaning of porneia. On the last day of the conference Ted answered written questions regarding the subject of divorce and remarriage in the auditorium. When he came to the question "What is the meaning of porneia?", he responded, not with the truth as he knew it, but with the cryptic remark "Look it up." Ted had known what porneia meant for years and, had he spoken up years before, he might have prevented untold suffering and anguish in the lives of thousands of innocent people. But unlike the ministers of the New Testament, he felt it was better to teach errors and lies and let thousands of marriages be broken up than to upset his father by recommending a change in the church's divorce and remarriage doctrine. In the 1976 ministerial conference, Ted openly prided himself over the fact that, when faced with the choice of teaching what he knew the Bible said about divorce and perpetuating false doctrine, he chose the latter.

"And I knew literally years before the decision was ever made what the real full meaning of the word porneia was! I had studied it on my own. No one heard me making any attacks against the church, against my father, or writing contrary material. What I wrote is still in my file in private."

It's amazing a person could actually be proud of having kept the truth about a Bible doctrine hidden for years- especially when knowledge of that truth could have prevented so much misery in people's lives. I suppose if one wishes to know exactly what Ted really believes about the Bible, that person should read the papers buried in his files- because after reading the statement by Ted quoted above, one can never be sure he really believes what he preaches.

It wasn't until January 1976 that Herbert conceded privately that he was wrong on the meaning of porneia and that the scholars had been right all along. Nevertheless he has made no official statement to the church correcting the false teaching he perpetuated at the May 1974 ministerial conference.

Church Teaching Today. To be as objective and fair as possible, I recently contacted a prominent Worldwide Church scholar to learn firsthand about the WCG's current teaching on the subject of divorce and remarriage. After a three-hour interview, the scholar admitted that he honestly didn't know what the official teaching of the church was on divorce. He said there were many ideas, theories, and feelings afloat, but not enough unanimity to foster a concise booklet to replace Herbert Armstrong's 1973 absurdity. However, I was able to gain the following general conclusions while in Pasadena:

- (1) Porneia now means "sexual unchastity," and this is grounds for divorce and remarriage.
- (2) Desertion by a mate (I Cor. 7) is grounds for divorce and remarriage.
- (3) Departure of an unbelieving mate (I Cor. 7) is grounds for divorce and remarriage.
- (4) Fraud or premarital sex constitutes grounds for divorce and remarriage.

Ironically much of this is similar to Guy Duty's book, Divorce and Remarriage: A Christian View. This book was much criticized from the pulpit during the summer of 1973. As it turned out, Guy Duty really did have the Christian view, whereas Herbert Armstrong was forced to alter his "inspired position." Without so much as an apology or regret, the Worldwide Church of God's view on divorce and remarriage is now similar to that which Guy Duty arrived at decades ago. One wonders if Duty's book is still banned on the Ambassador College campus as it was in 1973.

A New View. Very recently Herbert W. Armstrong, age 85, remarried in Tucson, Arizona. His new wife, the former Mrs. Ramona Martin, is 38. She has been married previously and her former husband is still alive. Evidently Mr. Armstrong has forgotten his two noted works on the subject of divorce.

With Herbert and Ramona there was no ministerial interrogation, no delicately private revelations, no clerical intimidation, no reviewings of any divorce and remarriage booklet, no prohibitions against cohabitation, no threatenings about Korah's rebellion, no demands for separation, no visiting cards, and no divorce and remarriage writeup. These things were for the "other guy." And after all, times do change, don't they?

THE PROPHECY GAME

Everywhere we turn today it seems we are beset by self-proclaimed "prophets" trying to make a profit by predicting the future for us. We can read our daily horoscope in the local newspaper, consult a palm reader in our area, read what the ten leading psychics predict will befall Liz Taylor, or tune in to radio evangelists proclaiming what the Bible foretells for the future. Most of these prognosticators do well to have a prophetic batting average as high as .200. Looked at another way, these seers are wrong more than 80% of the time! It's no wonder these "prophets" fare so poorly, according to Roderick Meredith, for only one organization on earth today is being used by God and only that one fully understands prophecy:

"The popular, denominationally supported evangelists often make statements like this: 'I believe that God may use Russia to punish America for her sins.' Or, 'It now seems likely that World War III may come within five years.'... They use the words 'may,' 'could,' or 'might.'... The truth of the matter is that they dare not be specific about the future because they just do not know what the Bible says is going to happen! But on 'The World Tomorrow' broadcast and in this magazine we have dared to unlock the Bible prophecies and apply them to specific nations and events that are now being affected.

"There is no other church or work on the face of this earth that either understands or dares to proclaim these vital warnings!... This is the very Work of God!... You are now being warned!" (The Plain Truth, Roderick Meredith, Aug. 1957, p. 6.)

This is quite a claim and, in the interest of truth, bears further investigation. Is God speaking through Worldwide Church of God (WCG) ministers and its founder Herbert Armstrong? Do they understand Bible prophecy and what will occur in the future? The fairest way to find the answers to these questions is to examine some of their most significant predictions over the last 40 years. First, let's look at some of Herbert's earliest predictions (the excessive capitalization and italicization of words have been deleted in all quotes in this article to facilitate typesetting and readability):

"...the year 1936 will see the end of the Times of the Gentiles.... we may expect the present worldwide depression, time of trouble and fear of war to continue until the year 1936!... quickly after that time, we may expect to see the heavenly signs of the sun and moon becoming dark, the stars falling.... which shall be followed by the 'Day of the Lord.'" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, June-July 1934, p. 5.)

"Mussolini and the pope will hatch up an idea between [them] of setting up a world headquarters at Jerusalem-and so Mussolini's armies will enter into Palestine (Daniel 11:41), and eventually will capture just half of the city of Jerusalem! (Zechariah 14:2)." (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, March 1938, p. 8.)

"Mussolini will fight Christ!" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Jan. 1939, p. 4.)

"Once world war is resumed, it must continue on thru the great Tribulation, the heavenly signs, the plagues of the Day of the Lord, and to the Second Coming of Christ, at the last battle, at Armageddon!... But this you may know! This war will be ended by Christ's return! And war may start within six weeks! We are just that near Christ's coming!" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Aug. 1939, p. 6.)

"The Italians will capture both Palestine and Egypt." (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Aug.-Sept. 1940.)

"God has decreed that Joseph-Great Britain and the United States-are to utterly consume and annihilate the Turks from off the earth!" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Nov.-Dec. 1940, p. 7.)

"It is part of God's prophesied plan that Britain shall be invaded and conquered ...." (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Nov.-Dec. 1940.)

"Bible prophecy does indicate that Hitler must be the victor in his present Russian invasion!... Hitler will emerge from this Russian campaign stronger than ever, free to turn the entire might of his forces against Britain-and America!" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Sept.-Oct. 1941, p. 7.)

"But Hitler (or his successor if there is one), and the False Prophet shall fight against Christ!" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, March-April 1943, p. 6.)

So far, as is obvious, Herbert Armstrong struck out every time he came up to bat in the 1930s and early 1940s, but his prophetic batting average for the 30s and 40s was not quite zero as he correctly predicted that Germany would "rise again," as did other news analysts. But Herbert's failures in the first 19 years of his ministry didn't bother Herman Hoeh who, like Herbert, felt that God had changed his mind about sending Christ back to earth in the 1940s, thus giving Herbert's church more time to warn the world:

"Yes, it seems that God is allowing us another 19-year cycle to complete the carrying of his gospel of the kingdom to this sick and dying world.... There is a tremendous job to be done in the very short period that lies ahead of us." (The Plain Truth, Herman Hoeh, June 1953, p. 13.)

In the 1950s Roderick Meredith, Herman Hoeh, and Garner Ted Armstrong began to assist Herbert in proclaiming his prophetic witness to the world. Believing the Great Tribulation would start in 1972, instead of around 1936 as Herbert had previously prophesied, they busied themselves with the task of writing new and terrifying doomsday prophecies based on Herbert's somewhat shaky understanding of Bible prophecy:

"God Almighty has spoken through His servants the prophets that He will punish our people for their sins. He will let our own lust cause such droughts, floods, pestilences and famines that we will be totally consumed and carried away captive to other nations as slaves within twenty years." (The Plain Truth, Herman Hoeh, Oct. 1955, p. 16.)

"Plagues are coming-and, according to this prophetic warning, in about two years from now! Our cattle have already suffered from the drought. Soon we shall find that the hoof-and-mouth disease will spread out of control! Rabid foxes, squirrels, muskrats will attack our children. For seven long and frightful years, we are going to suffer as never before-until we be left 'few in number.'..."

"This seven years of national trouble takes us-if the dates which appear so definitely indicated by these prophecies are correct-from 1965 to 1972!" (The Plain Truth, Herman Hoeh, April 1956, p. 22.)

"Two years ago, Mr. Herman Hoeh showed in this magazine how God's word prophesied disease epidemics would strike the United States in two short years! Those epidemics are beginning now! And they will grow much worse! God prophesies that finally, within the next fifteen years, fully one third of our whole population will die of disease and famine!" (The Plain Truth, Garner Ted Armstrong, Dec. 1957, p. 23.)

"Germany's coming Führer-who will lead within probably 13 years from now a 10-nation union in Europe (Rev. 17:12-13)-is 'the king of the north.' He will 'stretch forth his hand upon the countries: and the land of Egypt shall not escape' (Dan. 11:42). There is going to be a falling out between Nasser and his German supporters. Nasser's Nazi advisers are yet to turn upon him. Germany will take over the Suez from Egypt. Germany will take over Syria's oil pipelines, now under Nasser's control." (The Plain Truth, Herman Hoeh, Oct. 1958, p. 4.)

In 1959, Rod Meredith once again humbly assured Plain Truth readers that his church alone was accurately predicting the future:

"We have been daring, as no other church on earth, to proclaim definite, specific prophetic events to occur-and they have been happening!... For the specific prophesied events which this Church alone proclaims will soon be demonstrated as a physical reality! There will be no reasoning or argument about this. You will see and feel these things happen!" (The Plain Truth, Rod Meredith, June 1959, p. 32.)

As the years ticked by, Herbert and his followers sensed Christ's return was nigh, and they redoubled their efforts to shout their prophetic message to the whole world with more power and conviction than ever:

"All of these internal troubles, combined with the rapid rise to power of a frightening huge combine in Europe, are going to spell out great disaster for the United States and Britain in the '60's.... It is going to happen! No amount of reasoning, 'spiritualizing away,' arguing, doubting, scoffing, or disbelieving is going to change it! Almighty God, in His inviolate Word, thunders from His great throne in the universe that these very prophecies are going to come to pass!" (The Plain Truth, Ted Armstrong, Mar. 1960, p. 10.)

"In Joel 1, in Matthew 24, Mark 13, Luke 21 and John 13-in Revelation 6, and in other prophecies, a revolution in the weather-leading to unprecedented famine by around 1970-72 is prophesied. In its wake is prophesied frightful disease epidemics! A third of the people of the U.S. and British Commonwealth nations will die of this scourge." (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Feb. 1962, pp. 5, 7.)

"The unification of Germany? Perhaps it will take place sooner than we expect! The unification of ten nations in Europe is certain to be brought about within a very few years." (The Plain Truth, Ron Kelly, Sept. 1964, p. 20.)

"Frankly, literally dozens of prophesied events indicate that this final revival of the Roman Empire in Europe-and its bestial persecution of multitudes of Bible-believing Christians-will take place within the next seven to ten years of your life!" (The Plain Truth, Rod Meredith, Feb. 1965, p. 48.)

"Bible prophecy indicates that the final attack on the U.S. and Britain by this coming 'Beast' power could easily be launched perhaps as early as the spring of 1972-or earlier ...." (The Plain Truth, Rod Meredith, May 1965, p. 45. )

"The 'Day of the Eternal'-a time foretold in more than thirty prophecies-is going to strike between 5 and 10 years from now!... I am not writing foolishly, but very soberly, on authority of the living Christ!" (The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong, Feb. 1967, p. 47.)

"It doesn't take an understanding of certain 'Bible doctrine,' or necessary agreement with it, to admit to yourself candidly that what Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong was faithfully proclaiming back before, during and right at the close of World War II, and what he and others who have since come to join him in this great work of God have been proclaiming day in and day out ever since-is actually happening before your very eyes!" (The Plain Truth, Ted Armstrong, Nov. 1962, p. 21.)

Everything in 1967 seemed to Herbert Armstrong to be on schedule, prophetically speaking, except that God hadn't allowed him to warn the nation of Israel. Suddenly that opportunity appeared:

"Right now, just prior by not more than five to seven years, to the coming terrible Day of the Lord, the living Christ has moved swiftly to open the all-important door that has been closed since the days of the original apostles!

"...Almighty God has opened to The World Tomorrow [broadcast], exclusively, the gigantic door of superpower radio from Jerusalem!... We have signed with the Hashemite Government of Jordan, a five year binding contract...." (Co-worker letter, Herbert Armstrong, April 17, 1967, pp. 3-4.)

To Herbert this was a sign from God that God was truly working through him and no other church:

"And when this time came, to whom did God open up these precious radio facilities? Not to Roman Catholics... nor the Protestants! Nor the Coptics.... No, He has opened it exclusively, by binding contract with the Government of Jordan, to His Work.... This proves which voice on earth today is God's own voice.... If you ever had any doubts whatever about where the real Work of God is, you ought to be sure now!" (Ibid., p. 6.)

Just as Herbert was making ready to do his first broadcast over Radio Jerusalem, the Six-Day War broke out and the Israelis captured the radio station, making Herbert's contract to broadcast on the station worthless. It seemed strange that the living Christ would lead his apostle to sign a contract with the Jordanian government to send his message out from Jerusalem, Jordan, when Christ knew that East Jerusalem would soon fall to the Israelis. But the WCG leaders were so busy preaching their prophetic message that they never paused to consider whether or not God had just delivered a stunning rebuke to their apostle. Soon afterward Garner Ted Armstrong was proclaiming over the airwaves that a temple would be built in the next few years in Jerusalem and Britain would not join the Common Market. The Plain Truth carried these predictions:

"There will very soon be a Temple in Jerusalem, with daily sacrifices once again being offered.... Jerusalem will be surrounded and captured...by the Fascist-Nazi armies of the European Empire, already starting to rise now out of the Common Market." (Herbert Armstrong, June 1967, p. 2.)

"Will Britain ever be admitted into the Common Market? Probably not!" (Raymond McNair, Feb. 1970, p. 27.)

Even though the casual observer may have felt the WCG's prophecies were little more than hot air, he couldn't pass final judgment on their accuracy until 1972 had come and gone-since most of the WCG's prophecies hinged around 1972. Well, 1972 was about five years ago, and now it's obvious to any who will look at the facts that Herbert and his church do not understand prophecy and never have been inspired by God to understand it. But has this fact caused Herbert to hang his head in disgrace and humbly apologize for misleading people in God's name? No it hasn't. Instead he feels he is above apology:

"We do not set dates!... Yet in our human zeal and enthusiasm for getting this greatest mission on earth done, we have a few times come close to it or appeared to-and that we deeply regret...if we...appear to set a date, I feel I do not need to apologize!" (Tomorrow's World, Herbert Armstrong, Feb. 1972, p. 31.)

One would think after one gigantic prophetic failure after another during a span of over 40 years that Herbert Armstrong would throw in the towel and give up trying to foretell the future-or at least buy a new Steuben "crystal ball." Instead of that, he is doing the same thing he did in the late 1940s and early 1950s-moving his erroneous predictions forward two or more decades into the future and claiming they will occur at that time:

"During this generation-within 60 to 90 years or less-from 1927-Christ will come again ...." (Co-worker letter, Jan. 20, 1977, p. 4.)

A moving scene from one of Herbert Armstrong's testimonial dinners. These dinners are an integral part of Herbert's mission of warning world leaders of the prophesied, soon-coming holocaust. The above dinner, held in Thailand, obviously yielded "much fruit!"

So now Herbert would have us believe Christ will return between 1987 and 2017- since Christ didn't make it in the late 30s, in the early 40s, or in 1975, as Herbert had previously prophesied.

The WCG's prophetic blunders ought to generate certain questions in a perceptive mind: How could Herbert Armstrong and his ministers be God's only true ministers and yet be incorrect in their predictions more often than Jeane Dixon or other famous psychics? Why has almost everything that Herbert and his church have predicted since 1934 been way off base? A Plain Truth writer was inspired to record the answer over 20 years ago:

"But who today understands what the prophets foretold? Why, only the ministers today whose word comes to pass!-those who are appointed and guided by God to preach the truth! Those whose utterances do not come to pass have not spoken the prophecies truly. We give you here the record of what we have been proclaiming for the past 2 years-a message which no other voices, to our knowledge, have been proclaiming.... But what we have been warning you about is happening!-precisely as we have stated.... This is how you can know that our work is not of men but of God!" (Dec. 1956, p. 3.)

Looking at the Fruits. The leading WCG ministers attempt to rationalize their ridiculous prophecies with half-thought-out quips like "a few wrong predictions never hurt anybody" or "we were just trying to fulfill our commission in Matthew 24:14 to preach a witness to the world." (Evidently many have never realized Matthew 24:14 is a prophecy, not a commission to the church.) Speaking in a ministerial conference in January 1974, Ted Armstrong was also at first reluctant to admit that the church's false predictions had caused serious problems for anybody:

"[We prophesied in] fifteen years the U.S.A. will no longer be a nation, and 15 years has come and gone. Was that a mistake or not" ? Yes! But why get violently emotional about it? We were utterly sincere at the time it was said! We all believed it, and furthermore that kind of copy never caused anybody to lose out on salvation, or drop out of church, or make a wrong move in their personal lives, or to throw the word of God to the ground...."

Only moments later Ted all but contradicted himself by offering justifiable reasons for a person to "get violently emotional" about a prophecy that failed. He began to name a few of the "wrong moves" that had been made in personal lives:

"But '72 was the date that, you know, everything hinged on that. Nobody saved any money, nobody bought any property, nobody thought about laying up for his children's children.... We [thought we] were all going to flee or be taken away to a place of safety and everything would be left behind so [we thought]: "Why put any roots down?"

So even Ted begrudgingly admits false prophecies do cause harm in people's lives. Some WCG members, believing the "end of the world" was coming between 1972 and 1975-as the church had prophesied so often-postponed needed dental work. Others decided not to buy homes, while still others sold theirs and gave a portion of the cash they received to the church. Some young people decided not to go to college but took jobs instead to earn money for the church, hoping to thereby help Herbert fulfill the prophecy found in Matthew 24:14. Many gave their savings to the church and even borrowed money in response to Herbert's pleas to help his church avert another financial crisis-especially after being told Christ was coming soon and their money would be worthless then. Now some of these people are almost penniless, but the church says, "I never knew you."

To God, prophesying falsely is not a light matter. The Bible carries dozens of warnings from God for Christians to watch out for false prophets who "through covetousness" with "feigned words" shall "make merchandise" of them (II Peter 2:3, KJV). (The RSV renders it: "In their greed they will exploit you with false words.")

How could one recognize a false prophet? "You will know them by their fruits," Christ answers (Matt. 7:16, RSV). Continuing the analogy Christ explains, "A good tree is incapable of producing bad fruit, and a bad tree cannot produce good fruit" (Phillips translation). What do you think Christ would say about the WCG's false prophecies in view of Matthew 7? To those WCG ministers who remain unrepentant he will declare: "Depart from me, ye that work iniquity" (Matt. 7: 23, KJV).

BOBBY FISCHER SPEAKS OUT!

"Fischer does not merely outplay opponents; he leaves them bodily and mentally glutted.... Fisher himself speaks of the exultant instant in which he feels the 'ego of the other player crumbling.' "

-George Steiner, Fields of Force

---

"Fischer is... the strongest player in the world. In fact, the strongest player who ever lived."

-Larry Evans, U.S. International Grandmaster

Bobby Fischer is the undisputed "psych-out" champion in the world of chess. On this cerebral battlefield, he has crushed many an ego with his ferocious, relentless attack coupled with his steely-cold logic and near perfect strategy.

Bobby was born in Chicago on May 9, 1943, but grew up in Brooklyn, New York. On his sixth birthday, he received a gift of destiny from his sister Joan-a chess set. Since that time, little else interested Bobby, who played chess for hours every day. Consequently, his knowledge and skill grew enormously.

In 1956 he won the junior chess championship of the United States at the age of thirteen. The next year he won the prestigious U.S. championship. He continued his meteoric rise, and in 1958, he placed fifth in the interzonal tournament at Portoroz, Yugoslavia, thus qualifying at fifteen years of age as the youngest International Grandmaster ever.

He spent the next decade preparing for the chance to gain the title he coveted most: world champion. In 1972, on the island of Iceland, Bobby finally got his shot at the crown. There he single-handedly took on the entire state subsidized Soviet chess machine and became world champion, defeating Boris Spassky in a grueling match. Several years later, Bobby unfortunately forfeited the title back to a Russian, Anatoly Karpov, over a dispute regarding international tournament rules. However, Bobby still has amassed far more FICA tournament points than any other player in history, thus qualifying Bobby as one of the greatest chess minds of all time.

But as well-known as Bobby's chess history is to the general public, precious little has been reported on his long association with the Worldwide Church of God. Bobby's immersion in the "Ambassador experience" for over ten years has proven to be his greatest battle of mind and ego.

In this rare interview, Bobby Fischer describes in his own words his relationship with Armstrongism and explains how even he, the "psych-out king," was able to be out psyched and manipulated by the Armstrongs through long-term exposure to subtle religious mind-control techniques. The interview itself was conducted by several staff members at various locations in the Pasadena area over the course of several weeks. What proved more effective than a formal question-and-answer format was a loose discussion style that fit Bobby's personality better. The following are the most valuable excerpts, organized under various topic headings.

WHY BOBBY CAME TO US

LEN ZOLA: Bobby, how did you first come across our publication, and after several years of not making any statements to the media, why have you chosen to share your thoughts and perspectives regarding the Worldwide Church of God with us?

BOBBY FISCHER: I was walking by Bungalow News store in Pasadena, and a copy of Ambassador Review [the predecessor of Ambassador Report] was in the window. I'm really glad you guys put out that magazine. You really put a lot of work into it. I was coming around anyway, but that sped it up. It might have taken me another year or two to get where I am.

I didn't even want to give an interview in a sense, because my privacy is very important to me. But I feel that it is my duty to help out people, to help even one person. I just worry about the people in the Armstrong organization and those who may come into it. Why should they have to suffer because we rationalized that we didn't want to do anything?

"I'm not interested in getting my money back. I just want to make sure that nobody gets ripped off mentally."

---

I called you up about this. I hardly know you guys, but I want to help you. I think your publication is going to reach the people I want to reach. I really think that people should have information to make intelligent choices. I believe this.

Really my story is no different than that of any other jerk that was sucked into the organization. The only difference would be that I, Bobby Fischer, was saying it, and people would be more interested because of my name, my veracity, and the fact that I gave a lot of money.

However, I want to emphasize that I'm not trying to destroy the college or the Armstrongs. I know the Bible says, "Vengeance is God's." I'm not trying to "get" those guys. And I'm not interested in getting my money back. I'm trying to protect others. I just want to make sure that nobody gets ripped off mentally. That's the most important thing. I am not necessarily backing the whole magazine, but I'm using it because it is a good forum to get my views across.

INITIAL CONTACT WITH WORLDWIDE CHURCH

LEN ZOLA: Was it in 1962 or around then that you said you first became involved with the Worldwide Church of God? Did you flip the radio to the Worldwide Church of God's radio broadcast by accident?

FISCHER: I had some personal problems, and I started listening to a lot of radio ministers. I listened every Sunday all day, flipping the dial up and back. So, I heard just about every guy on Sunday. And then I heard Mr. Armstrong, and I said, "Ah, God has finally shown me the one, I guess. This guy really has power. authority. He doesn't talk like the other guys. He really knows his stuff!"

When I started listening, it was to Herbert Armstrong mostly. Then Herbert and his son were alternating every day for awhile. One day it was Herbert, and one day it was Ted. Then it was Herbert just on Sundays. And eventually, Herbert was just phased out.

Well, I kind of split my life into two pieces. One was where my chess career lies. There, I kept my sanity, so to speak, and my logic. And the other was my religious life. I tried to apply what I learned in the church to my chess career too. But I still was studying chess. I wasn't just "trusting in God" to give me the moves.

WHAT TITHING HAS DONE FOR ME

ZOLA: As you continued to listen to the WCG's "World Tomorrow" broadcast, did you begin sending donations?

FISCHER: I never gave any money to a work or any church. I didn't believe in that stuff. But I got a whole bunch of literature from Armstrong. I felt guilty after awhile about getting so much. I was getting The Plain Truth for a couple of years. I had written for every last piece of literature I had ever heard him offering. Finally, I sent him five bucks or something. Then I got a co-worker letter. And then later on I sent them maybe $20. And then I remember in late 1963 I was in some tournament, and I said, "I'll send the whole tenth." It was a really big decision.

BILL HUGHES: In 1972 when they got that money from you [$61,200], did they discuss what proportion they ought to receive?

FISCHER: No, no. I wanted to do it. I was enthusiastic!

HUGHES: What was it that you won in that chess tournament?

FISCHER: I don't know exactly. It was about $160,000, plus I received a lot of royalties. I made about $200,000 that year.

HUGHES: Well, didn't you donate more than 10% of your winnings?

FISCHER: Yeah! Well, I told them that I wanted to give them a double tithe. Whatever it was, I wanted to do it the very right way, whatever that was. I did it on the gross amount. They cleaned my pockets out frankly. I have some money left, but not that much. I've got some assets. It's amazing they didn't get everything. Now my only income is a few royalty checks from my books. I was really very foolish, but I thought I was doing what I had to do. When I sent those checks off, I really didn't have the slightest qualms, no regrets, not the slightest. I don't really regret it that much, to tell you the truth, even now.

Now that I think about it, I never heard Armstrong once say, "Well, that's nice Bobby that you want to help us, but don't forget your family. Help them too." The Armstrongs never once said that.

You know, I didn't improve my living standard one bit either. It wasn't like I just didn't help my mom. I didn't do anything for myself either. You know I don't even have a car. About the only luxury I got was quite a few $400 suits. I got ten maybe. But still what I'm saying is that that is still not a lot of money spent on me considering all the money I made. It wasn't like I was living high on the hog and neglecting my mom, but she's living real poor in a crummy apartment in England. She doesn't even have a bathroom. I just saw her a few months ago. I have to help my mom now. She's an old woman. She could soon be gone and here I was giving money so that Rader and these guys can have their parties in Beverly Hills. This whole thing is so sick.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF ARMSTRONGISM

Church members shouldn't let themselves be confused. They begin not trusting in their own judgment, and then they're finished. That's a terrible, terrible thing. First, they get conducted in with a nice sweet program, no money, everything free, free, free. And then they get sucked in, and suddenly a few lies get mixed in. They are told that their human nature is wicked and these nice people who gave them all these things wouldn't be lying to them, would they? And then I think once you start distrusting your own mind you're finished. From there you just get more and more confused. Once you think that your own mind is not your friend any more-your own conscience and your own mind is not your friend-then I think you are on your way to insanity. You have been stripped bare. All your defenses are gone. You must trust Armstrongism, his ministers, doctrines, and organization. Otherwise you're going in the wrong direction, and you know where that leads.

Herbert Armstrong claims to be freeing you from the world's churches, freeing you from all the trash you've heard all your life. He's freeing you, and finally you're coming to know the truth that will set you free, free, free, and the next thing you know you are really a zombie. You are completely under the power of Armstrongism. Good luck... you're going to need it.

"...once you start distrusting your own mind, you're finished."

This idea of Herbert's that you can't trust your own thoughts-that's the key doctrine that I think has to be blasted out. I would say that if there's one thing that is the whole essence of Armstrongism, that's it. That's how he screws up your mind. That's how he hangs on to people.

I have to discuss some of the things Herbert has done to me-how he screwed up my mind-just to let people know that this is for real, because if anybody tried to live by the letter of the law... it was me. I truly tried to be obedient. The more I tried, the more crazy I became. The pressure he puts on you! You can't do this, you can't do that, you can't tell your friends this, you can't see unconverted people, you can't eat this, you can't eat that, on the sabbath you have to rest, you have to listen to the radio program every day, you have to study the correspondence course... and then you're supposed to pray....

"They'll never come up with a better con than this."

I can remember times coming home from a chess club at four in the morning when I was half asleep and half dead and forcing myself to pray an hour and study [the Bible] an hour. You know, I was half out of my head-stoned almost.

And every time you try to think a sane thought you think it's of the devil. They keep pushing that thing. They keep pushing about this tremendous struggle that goes on between God and the devil. And the devil keeps injecting his thoughts into your mind. They really got you coming and going. I don't think that they will ever come up with one better than this. They'll never come up with a better con than this. They are playing with people's lives like toys.

PROPHETIC FOLLIES

The real proof for me was those [false] prophecies. Everybody has a different way of looking at it, but to me that shows he [Armstrong] is an outright huckster.

Like the Bible says, when a prophet makes prophecies that don't come true, then that guy is not of God and you don't have to be afraid of him. Yet church members are afraid of him [HWA]. And he's failed umpteen times. This guy, Armstrong, in terms of religion, is the world's biggest loser.

[Next Fischer spoke about Herbert Armstrong's prophetic failures during and after World War II.] Okay, he could have made those mistakes, and I'd let them go. But he made mistakes again in 1950, 1952—the same trap over and over again. And he was dead wrong—100% wrong. He blew it all, and he pulled it again and again and again and again. And here I was in the sixties reading this stuff sincerely and believing it. And I should have known that it was all just a pack of lies. He was just playing with me. Lie after lie, letter after letter.

"Either God is a masochist and likes to be made a fool of, or else Herbert Armstrong is a false prophet."

---

But I was really upset in 1972 when Herbert Armstrong refused to apologize. He could have just apologized and said, "I became overly enthusiastic. I wanted Christ to return so badly. Everything seemed to fit. Please excuse me. I won't do that again."

I thought, "This doesn't seem right. I gave all my money. Everybody has been telling me this [1972 would be the date the WCG would flee to a place of safety] for years. And now, he's half-denying he ever said it when I remember him saying it a hundred times. And then on top of it, he won't even apologize for saying it." When you put it all together, it's hard to accept his sincerity. That's the problem.

And what convinces me even more that I'm right is when I talk to Dr. Robert Kuhn and a few others. When I talk to him, he has no answers. When you press him about these prophecies, he says, "Well, Herbert thought he was right."

And I said, "Yeah, he thought he was right. I can accept that the first time. What about the second time?" Kuhn replied, "Well, he thought he was right. He convinced himself he was right."

"Once I quit tithing, my mind started to clear up."

"Okay, what about the third time?"

"No, he convinced himself."

I said, "How many times did he convince himself? You mean he never once thought, 'Well, I've been wrong all these times. Maybe I'd better go back and reanalyze the whole thing from A to Z?"

"No, he didn't. He was so convinced."

I said, "I can't accept that, Robert. That blows my mind that a guy can make a hundred prophecies and think he's right every time and be sincere every time. That is impossible. And that's utterly impossible unless he's insane!"

This is a joke. If you talk about fulfillment of prophecy, he's a fulfillment of Elmer Gantry. If Elmer Gantry was the Elijah, Herbert's the "Christ" of religious hucksters. There is no way he could truly be God's prophet. Either God is a masochist and likes to be made a fool of or else Herbert Armstrong is a false prophet.

REFLECTIONS ON THE WCG MINISTRY

Basically, I don't want people to do anything rash because they think God is smiling down when they talk to a minister. That's the thing people have to be disabused of. It makes me sick to think these two-bit salesmen are running around pretending they're God, and people buy it. And I shudder to think how they're ruining lives. They don't even think. Ministers just speak what they've been taught.

My main concern though is that people don't get ripped off by these local ministers. To me this is the most vicious thing. The people hear new ideas and they want to obey God, so they listen to these guys, and their lives are ruined. These guys will ruin your life in five minutes flat. They'll tell you to move. They'll tell you to change jobs. They'll tell you not to have an operation. They'll tell you to marry this person. And people do it.

And if you ask questions or say something derogatory, they'll hit you back and insult you right away. Like I once said to this minister, "I think GTA is obnoxious." He replied, "I think you're obnoxious." They're fast on their feet.

FISCHER ON HERBERT ARMSTRONG

Herbert Armstrong has a way with words. You know, he seems so sincere. He has all the right principles: dedication, hard work, perseverance, never giving up. He's dogged; he's persistent.

You know, from reading his stuff and listening to his sermons, you'd think he was very interested in God. But when you meet him personally, there is nothing there at all.

I find Armstrong to be an egomaniac. He sitteth in the temple of God saying great things as if he were God. He apparently wants to leave his permanent mark on all he comes in contact with and can bring into submission. He is simply a mad man who would love to rule the world.

"Herbert Armstrong keeps encouraging people to give up everything for the kingdom, but why doesn't he set the example himself"

I was looking through some of his old co-worker letters-so phony, you know. He talks about this world and how evil it is and all, but actually he's really of this world with all these high-pressure sales tactics. That's exactly the stuff he talks about-the stuff he was doing as a kid that he supposedly outgrew. For example, he continuously tries to frighten and panic you in his coworker letters about the supposed imminent end of the world-so that you will empty your bank account before him. Articles in old Plain Truths tell you that you haven't much time to develop character to prepare for Christ's return-to take the last train to sanity by joining Armstrongism. The idea is constantly drummed into your head that you must obey God=Armstrongism before it's too late. You must decide now. Time is running out .... This kind of super high-pressure salesmanship leads people to make rash decisions, based on fear, often made against their better judgment. This is the very essence of Armstrongism (i.e., fear, panic, guilt).

He is even more advanced than Madison Avenue because he is willing to give you his literature indefinitely almost, whereas the Madison Avenue people kind of want that quick return. He is much more insidious because he's combining the most powerful and evil techniques of everybody .... This guy is voracious. He never quits on you. He wants you. You can turn against him completely and he would still want you back. He'd still want your mind. He never gives up on getting your mind.

Oh, man, he keeps encouraging people to give up everything for the kingdom, but why doesn't he set the example himself? He plays on your emotions. That is what he does. He pretends that he is trying to get away from that. That's what "the world" does. They play on your emotions and weaknesses, but he plays on them the worst. There is no depth at all in his spiritual approach.

People have committed suicide under the tremendous barrage of Armstrongism's subtly induced feelings of self-hate and hopelessness for this life.... Like he tells you to be interested in the next life, but he's interested, in this life very much.

Really, people are just getting one side of this whole story all the time from Herbert Armstrong. He's so convincing, you know. I don't think anybody has a more convincing style than he. This Armstrong-I was thinking if you had to think of one word to describe this guy, if you could only use one word, I would use "dangerous."

The only thing that refutes his style is true facts-hard facts.

[Next Bobby tells what it was like taking a tour of Ambassador College campus with Herbert Armstrong and one of Herbert's old friends.] Herbert was with this old man, and he [Herbert] must have said the same thing about ten times. He said, "I've done all right, haven't I, Cliff?" And he said, "Oh, yes, you've done fine, Herbert. This is a beautiful college you've got here. And this beautiful land is beautifully kept up."

And Herbert replied, "Well, I see that everything is kept up. I see to it personally that all this property is kept up." "Well, Herbert, you've really done fine." So we walked awhile longer. And then Herbert stopped again, saying, "I've done all right, haven't I?" So the other man repeated, "Yes, you've done great. You really have." And then it would start all over again a little later. And I thought, "What the hell is going on here? Man, have I gone ...? I gave my money to this? I must be nuts. I can't believe this!"

"I've done all right, haven't I, Cliff?"

Herbert Armstrong remarked to Clifford DePuy (January 2, 1973). DePuy was publisher of a trade journal and employed Herbert Armstrong as an advertising salesman from 1915 to 1922.

FISCHER ON GARNER TED ARMSTRONG

I've tried to carry out what Garner Ted says to its logical conclusion. You know, it never seems to form. He carries things to a point but not to a conclusion. If you go to the conclusion with all this stuff, it comes out bad. By the time you've thought enough to come up with a good answer, he's on about 18 other subjects already. He gives you a very obvious kind of snow job.

Now I understand. I never understood how it could be that Herbert Armstrong seemingly had so much love and compassion and his son seemed so selfish and nasty. They're just the same people. They just have a different way of doing it, you know. Well, Herbert wrecked his son. I can see how that old man could ruin his son. I think GTA is just a massive inferiority complex.

ZOLA: Did you ask Herbert what was Ted's sin? And did he or did he not tell you it was adultery?

FISCHER: No, I didn't want to insult him. Why, did you hear that we had a conversation?

ZOLA: Yes.

FISCHER: I met Herbert in the Hall of Administration, and he started to talk to me about his airplane and flying. And then he started going off on some wild tangents that may be significant. Then, it meant nothing to me. He was talking about stewardesses on the airplanes and how one of them was tempting Ted. I didn't know what he was talking about. I thought it was raving stuff, because I had no idea what he was talking about. I was wondering why he was telling me this. But he didn't admit anything.

See, I wasn't at that stage trying to find the loose brick. I wanted to believe. I feel that if Ted had done something 3 years ago, and nobody knew about it, it would be cruel to bring it up.

But this is different. This is a way of life, apparently from what I'm starting to hear. I'm sure if there's all that smoke there's plenty of fire. Now if a guy is that calloused to make it a way of life, I don't see how his feelings are going to be that hurt. Anybody in the spotlight preaching purity while doing all this on the side has to know it's going to come out. He has to know that, or maybe he's nuts, right? But it is a shame. You would think that if Ted is rational, he could pull himself together and could see himself. But he is not rational apparently.

What if I was coming on the air every day for 20 years telling people: "Don't play chess" and then I ran home and played chess every day? I don't know how he does it. It's too much!

WHAT CHURCH BRETHERN MEAN TO ME

I like church people. I don't really feel these are bad people. But Herbert has exercised this power and authority over the church people for years. He knows that no matter what he says, they keep coming back for more. Have you noticed the people around the college and church? They are all very immature. Everybody, no matter how young or old, stays immature. And they get back so little for all that they give. Here in Pasadena, the employees do all right because they are on the receiving end of donations from all the people in the rest of the country. But "out there" the local church people get nothing back-except bad advice and co-worker letters.

I'm not even going to say that all the doctrines of the church are necessarily bad and that members should reject everything. That is not my point. My point is that they should be thinking for themselves.

In the Eric Hoffer book, True Believer, the greatest danger to an authoritarian organization like the WCG is when the authority is relaxed a bit-they ease up on the people a bit. Then, the true believers begin to lose their fear. Most people are sheep, and they need the support of others. With enough people like us, the people will see they are not alone. Then it can be just like an avalanche.

CLOSING REMARKS

Well, I know what Armstrong is going to say [in reaction to this interview]. He'll say, "His [chess] career is finished. He's bitter." Or, "He's disturbed. He was a fringer. He was never with us."

It's all so sad, though. It's very tragic because it's just the opposite of what we got into it for.

Anyway, I can't imagine anybody not having their minds cleared after reading your publication. Our mind is all we've got. Not that it won't lead us astray sometimes, but we still have to analyze things out within ourselves.

Your conscience-God gave you that conscience. He had to give you protection from this evil world. He gave us our minds. We can think!

FLEECING THE FLOCK

It was February 18, 1970. A small group of ministerial students were spending an evening with Herbert W. Armstrong, the founder of the Worldwide Church of God. Those of us who had been invited were given a glimpse of a life-style which in today's world only a very few are able to afford. At his home, a small mansion on Pasadena's South Orange Grove Boulevard (once nicknamed "millionaire row"), we were surrounded by rare antiques, expensive paintings, and Steuben crystal. The carpets were luxuriant; a Steinway grand stood in the corner of the drawing room.

The gourmet cuisine served at dinner was excellent as were the European wines—all four of them. We had been shown a large number of expensive paintings and objets d'art and, as was his custom, Herbert would relate what he paid for each and what they were now worth. That theme carried over into the conversation at dinner. Then, as the servants began to clear the table, he turned to one of the guests and said, "What do you think all of these beautiful things on the table are worth?" Of course, none of us had even the slightest idea. And so, he was able to proudly proclaim, "Over $125,000!"

He was quick to point out, however, that art objects of this quality were so rare that they were in fact "priceless." The sculptured, foot-high, solid-gold saltcellars were, for instance, the only known copies of those once owned by Louis XIV. (They had been specially made for Herbert by Harrod's of London.) The crystal goblets were identical to those found on Queen Elizabeth's table. The supremely crafted cutlery was of solid gold. The tablecloth was made of the finest Belgian lace. The gold-covered china was of the finest craftsmanship and formerly belonged to Czar Nicholas II of Russia.

As we sat there sipping our four different wines and eating off the czar's china, I couldn't help but think of the incredible contrast all this presented to the meager existence of so many members of Herbert's church—the very ones who were, through their tithes and offerings, making all this possible. I had personally known many Worldwide Church of God laymembers who were barely able to keep their families fed, let alone properly clothed, because of the large amounts they felt compelled to contribute to the Armstrong organization.

Ironically, just five days after the above occasion, one such beleaguered church member, a dedicated employee of the organization, wrote his minister and outlined the tragic financial straits he had come to as a result of obeying the church's teachings. The following excerpt, though a bit lengthy, shows in detail the type of deprivation inflicted on many who have come under the influence of the Armstrong organization and its teachings:

1. Automobile: The automobile is unsafe to drive.

A. The brakes are in poor shape; sometimes they lock the right or left front wheel, and to unlock it one must back up. This happens while driving.

B. The engine is too heavy for the front suspension, and I am in fear of the front suspension collapsing.

C. The exhaust system is leaky and fills the auto with oil smoke and fumes while driving.

This automobile must be replaced. I risk my family's life every time we drive in it; I had Mr. Schreiber check it, and he said to replace it this year before the Feast.

2. Clothing

A. My wife has no underwear, has had none for a year or more. She has only one brassiere and one slip and both are in very sad shape, ripped up, etc. She has no nylons and only one pair of socks.

B. She only has one good dress and with constant wear it is going fast. She has only one pair of shoes, and they are one size too big. When she stands in them, there is a one-half inch gap at the heel, she only has one coat, and it is all ripped up inside. My wife needs clothing badly.

3. Clothing

A. My clothing is in sad shape also, but better than my wife's. I have only one suit I can wear. It is a summer suit I got from used clothing, and when the seams go, I will have none. I have no pants I can wear anywhere. If it were not for the uniforms at work, I would have none at all; to change clothes I have a choice-a uniform from work, my suit, or one pair of levis with holes in them. My shoes need repairing. My socks are all full of holes at the heels; I do have three or four sets of underwear that are good.

B. My children's clothes: If it were not for used clothing, they would have none. We do good to keep them in shoes as they need them. Their feet already have corns because of the wrong shoes in the past; we are finding that used clothing is not able to supply their present needs. They are growing to a size that is not available. There is no money available to go to a Thrift Shop.

4. Our Furniture

A. Most of what we have will be usable for some time, but some items need replacing.

B. The bed my wife and I sleep in is 23 years old, and we are continually being cut by springs coming through the mattress. I woke up one night with a spring stuck into my thigh and had to lift myself straight up off of it. We cut out an average of one or two springs a week; I feel it is also a cause of my constant back problems, but I have no money to replace the bed.

C. We have only two dressers for seven people and this is not enough; because of this we keep the children's clothes in cardboard boxes in the closets. The rest I feel we can get by with.

5. Entertainment

We rarely go any place through the year except to the Feast [of Tabernacles]. I have taken my wife out to dinner once in the past five years. I don't recall that I have ever taken my children any place except at the Feast of Tabernacles. We have gone to the zoo with the children once since being in the Church and that is 10 years or so.

6. Medical/Dental

My wife needs dental work badly. We owe Dr. Howell $35.00 now, but we don't have any money to pay him. My children have never had a dental or eye checkup and they need it. I need glasses. I went to the eye doctor two years ago and was told this but no money. I also need some dental work, but mine is small.

7. Imperial Schools

We owe Imperial [the Worldwide Church of God's now defunct private schools, offering grades 1 through 12] $577.20, and it will take $65.00 per month to pay them off by next school year. We are currently paying $40.00 when we have it. We will have another child in school next year, plus our three.

Summary

I am sorry to be a burden to this work, but I do have a large family to feed; my children eat like adults, and they do wear clothes. If we lived on a ranch in Arizona, we could probably live cheaper, but we live in Los Angeles and there are just more expenses here. I am not demanding. I am only showing you my condition as it is. I will get by as long as I can, but we are getting close to the end of our rope. Please advise me!!

This poor member's dedication and "good attitude" cannot be denied. But he shouldn't have been surprised by his poverty. Not when you consider that he was giving away nearly 40% of his net income in first tithe, second tithe, third tithe, regular offerings, holy-day offerings, special emergency offerings, church emergency loans, building fund contributions, and Spokesman Club dues! And this doesn't include the income he lost by passing up employment opportunities to keep the Old Testament sabbath and holy days, as the Worldwide Church of God teaches.

The Armstrong organization has always been quick to publish letters from individuals claiming all kinds of financial success ("blessings"), divine intervention, and good luck that supposedly resulted directly from obedience to the church's teachings concerning tithing. However, letters such as the one we have quoted above somehow never made it into print. In our Letters section in this issue we have included a number of letters that describe some of those cases the Armstrong neglected to mention.

This Is the Life! The $60,000,000 per year tax-free income that the Armstrongs are able to garner and that they exclusively control attests to the effectiveness of their methods. As Herbert has often stated, "Tithing pays off!" One of his editorials was once titled, "This Is the Life!-Real Abundant Living!" True, for the one receiving the tithes tithing does pay off. But life has been a lot less abundant for thousands of those who have diligently applied Herbert's tithing laws as found in his booklet Ending Your Financial Worries (often jokingly referred to by some WCG higher-ups as "Ending Our Financial Worries").

The Armstrong tithing doctrine with its related church practices and policies is a study in fallacious reasoning. (See the article "Twisted Teachings on Tithing" for further information.) But it is when we see how this contributed money is spent that we begin to realize we are dealing with something worse than just biblical misinterpretation.

For example, let's look at what Armstrong calls "third tithe." Most WCG ministers teach that this tithe is to be paid on one's income during every third year in a cycle of seven. (Some WCG ministers, including Garner Ted Armstrong, teach that it should simply be paid every third year.) For each of those third years the laymember is instructed to send 10% of his gross income (from each paycheck) to headquarters. Unlike the first and second tithes-which are calculated on all income each year (from each paycheck) and which are used respectively for the general operation of the church and the keeping of the feast days-third tithe is supposed to be used solely to help the destitute.

Notice these statements by Albert J. Portune, formerly the WCG vice-president for financial affairs:

"Why did God command a third tithe anyway? God instituted the third tithe for a very real and important use. Without it many in God's Church would go hungry and homeless ... In God's Church today, just as it has been in all ages, there are the widows, fatherless, strangers. -God anticipated the needs of the widows, fatherless and sojourners... Therefore God has commanded a third tithe for the support of the stranger, the fatherless and the widow who have no visible means of support." (The Good News, Nov. 1962, p. 7.)

In a February 1970 Good News article entitled "How You Can Receive an Extra Blessing!" Frank Brown, the assistant to the church's financial vice-president, wrote basically the same thing but mentioned in passing (p. 12) that third tithe funds were at times used "for the incidental needs of the Levite." (He was using the term "Levite" to refer to the church's ministry.) However, he went on to say:

"There are no spongers or malingerers taking advantage of a huge expensive bureaucracy! All those who benefit are genuinely in need.... Third tithe help does not go to the lazy, idle, shiftless or able-bodied who are perfectly capable of working."

The reader would logically infer from the above statements that third tithe funds would go exclusively to members really in need. He might deduce that third tithe funds would also occasionally go for a small payment to poor and unemployed ministers for food or rent. It all sounds very nice until one discovers how much of that money in the third tithe fund was siphoned off for other uses of which 99.9% of the members were totally unaware.

I have before me a large stack of approved and signed Ambassador College requisitions supplied to Ambassador Report by one of our sources. Space does not permit me to quote all of these. Here, summarized, are just a handful of those from the one year previous to Frank Brown's article:

Date	P.O. #	Recipient	Description	Amount
1969	20904	D. Apartian	Furniture, carpets,	$22,000
1-29-69	18634	Ron Dart	Appliances, Drapery	$5,000

7-10-69	20123	Ron Dart	All furnishings, interior and exterior, wall coverings, etc.	$40,000
11-3-69	22124	R. Plache	Furnishings, upholstery, drapes, carpets, and misc	$25,000
1-21-70	23367	D. Antion	All furnishings, interior and exterior, wall coverings, etc.	$40,000

All of this money came from the church's third tithe account, and it is so stated on each requisition. It's anybody's guess as to what justification was used for taking money supposedly designated for "the widow and the fatherless" and using that to increase the equity of corporation-owned homes valued at between $100,000 and $300,000. The ministers living in those homes were already earning over $20,000 annually, had expense accounts, company cars, and paid only token rent.

On two occasions in 1974 a tape recorder caught Garner Ted Armstrong actually admitting to fellow ministers that third tithe funds were being used for purposes other than the sustenance of the widows and orphans of the church. Notice:

"...it is true that massive segments of third tithe as it built up in the balances of this work were used both for ministerial homes and for ministerial salaries." (Garner Ted Armstrong, ministerial conference, Jan. 3, 1974.)

"But you know it [third tithe] is still being used for your salaries. It's still being used for church homes." (Garner Ted Armstrong, ministerial conference, May 7, 1974.)

That was in 1974. Informed sources have indicated to us that there has been no change in these practices. For instance, third tithe funds were recently used in providing furnishings for Herbert Armstrong's Tucson home (his fifth home).

Feeding the Falcon. Ministerial salaries and homes are not the only items third tithe funds are used for. Though never revealed to Worldwide Church of God laymembers, the third tithe account (now called "the poor fund") has been used to defray the high cost of maintaining and operating several private aircraft—primarily Herbert Armstrong's $3.5 million Gruman Gulfstream II and Ted Armstrong's $2.5 million Fanjet Falcon.

Ambassador Report has in its possession a tape recording of Garner Ted Armstrong discussing the third tithe fund and admitting:

"In the neighborhood of 10 years ago the policy was placed into effect... payments for the original Falcon C model were aided or helped by that fund." (Garner Ted Armstrong, ministerial conference, May 1976.)

This was in stark contrast to what he had stated at the ministerial conference on January 3, 1974:

"How many of you think that the Falcon is being paid for out of third tithe? It's a lie. The Falcon's never been put on third tithe. It got out that third tithe was being used for the Falcon. It's an absolute lie."

Third tithe funds were used for the jets, but who authorized it? According to one Ted Armstrong statement, it was Albert J. Portune. According to Albert J. Portune, it was Herbert W. Armstrong. In February 1974 evangelist David Antion commented on this at a meeting in Richmond, Virginia:

"...about that time Al [Portune] had a conscience problem and he just went to Mr. [Herbert] Armstrong and said, 'Do we have to use third tithe? That doesn't look good. It's bad. It's not right to use the third tithe fund to fly jets and pay for all that fuel.'"

A Gift Is a Gift. While the "poor fund" monies are being used for decorating ministers' homes and paying their salaries, many long-time members who have contributed heavily to the church find that the church has little desire to help them when they are really in need. The Los Angeles Times carried a story in its Orange County section on May 14, 1977, that shows this quite clearly. The article titled "Church Gets Home, Public Her Bills" was written by Times staff writer Thomas Fortune. Notice these excerpts:

"Because Hazel Hall signed over the title to her home as a gift to her church, the public has ended up paying for the 83-year-old woman's care at a convalescent hospital here. The bill, picked up by Medi-Cal and Medi-care, is running about $700 more per month than her Social Security income. Mrs. Hall's house in Costa Mesa could be sold for $37,500 to $40,000. Money from the sale could pay for several years of convalescent care for Mrs. Hall, who is immobilized by a stroke and won't be returning home. But the home cannot be sold. It is a lifetime estate, to be inherited upon Mrs. Hall's death by the Worldwide Church of God. The church holds hundreds of such lifetime estates, signed over for the most part by elderly people...."

"Not long before her stroke, Mrs. Hall received a letter that began: 'Greetings again from the legal office of God's work.' The letter said that her will, deeding the house to the church, was in safekeeping in her file. It asked her to fill out an inventory list and return it in an enclosed, stamped envelope so it could be placed with her will. Items listed were jewelry, bank accounts, stocks and bonds and other valuables...."

"Audrey Etchison, Mrs. Hall's 54-year-old daughter, says she does not think it is right that the church should get the property, yet not accept responsibility for her mother's medical and convalescent bills. 'My mother is not a charity case. She has this home. She should not be the state's charity. She should be the church's charity,' she maintains. Mrs. Etchison said she has tried to bypass the church's legal department and make 'a moral plea' to Garner Ted Armstrong. But by the church's accounting 'a gift is a gift.' Randell Dick, personal aide to Armstrong, says, 'There can be no strings attached that would violate Mrs. Hall's trust. Otherwise, we would be setting up our own insurance company and go broke.'"

Mr. Randy Dick is wrong-very wrong. Mrs. Hall's "trust" is being violated. On page 14 of the earliest edition of Ending Your Financial Worries, for years the church's official booklet on tithing, Herbert Armstrong wrote:

"...a third tithe was commanded. It used to be set aside in every walled city, 'within thy gates' (Deut. 26:12), for the 'widow, the fatherless, and the stranger'-as a kind of insurance program."

Nowhere in this booklet does it say that third tithe funds were to be used for the ministry. Herbert said, "It is altogether different from the first tithe" (p. 14) and is "a kind of insurance program." That is also the way I have personally heard it described from the pulpit by dozens of WCG ministers. Mrs. Hall, an 83-year-old invalid widow who gave all she owned to the church, should have been eligible for monetary assistance from the WCG, but as she and thousands of others have discovered, it didn't work out the way the church promised it would.

Setting the Example. Earlier in this article, I referred to certain purchase orders from 1969-1970. It is interesting that during this same period of time when "poor fund" monies were being used to lavishly outfit certain ministers' homes, Herbert Armstrong was writing letters to the church members bemoaning "the work's" financial plight. I have compared the co-worker letters of 1969-70 with authorized requisitions, receipts, and other financial records from the same period. If "the work" was really experiencing a lowered income, you wouldn't have known it from the way Herbert was spending money. For instance, on page 2 of a letter to his fellow "co-workers" dated December 9, 1969, he wrote:

"If ever we needed large sums-into five figures and more... it is right now!"

On January 2, 1970, he purchased a pair of "Marbo Antique Rock Crystal Candelabra" for his Pasadena home. They cost $6,090.00. Then in his March 30, 1970, letter to church members (pp. 1-2) he wrote:

"I ask of all who can and are willing.... go to your local bank and borrow whatever you are able-$100 to $1,000.... And you should not obligate yourself to monthly payments except what you will be able to pay over and above tithes and offerings for the Work ... For this is serious-the most serious crisis since 1947 and 1948."

The very next day, March 31, 1970, he purchased a "pair of French porcelain vases" for $2,079.00.

In a letter to his "co-workers" dated January 29, 1969 Herbert Armstrong encouraged all those who had loaned money to the church to turn those loans into outright donations. To encourage all to do this he claimed to be setting an example:

"...I myself had several thousand dollars on the books as a loan.... I have just given the entire amount as a donation, and I shall not try to deduct it on my income tax, but keep on contributing up to 30% out of my income. I have paid income tax on all that money-and now I will sacrifice any tax advantage in donating it, because that way I can put more money into the Work.

"As it is today, I do not own any property-not even an automobile. What, then, if some unexpected emergency should come along, that would need this sum of several thousand dollars I am donating? I have thought of that, of course. The answer is, I have a God to trust, and I shall rely on Him!"

I have in my hands a photostat copy of an Ambassador College computer printout titled "Worldwide Church of God Listeners Loan Report, Dec. 1971." After Herbert W. Armstrong's name we find this information: Status Loan Number 49; Type of Loan-AD; Repayment Date-12/31/71; Repayment check number-Miscellaneous; Amount of Repayment-$50,334.54. Apparently, by 1971 Herbert no longer felt it wise to "rely on Him." Maybe he can explain this in a future co-worker letter.

This money-making technique of supposedly "setting an example" has been used often by the Armstrongs. Ted Armstrong recently even used it on his own church executives. In his letter to the church dated April 27, 1977, Garner Ted announced that there would be a 10% across-the-board salary cut for church executives because of financial problems in "the work." He explained that he was taking the lead by cutting his own salary 15%. He neglected to mention, as we have learned from a reliable source, that just a few days previous he had nearly doubled his own television department salary (just one salary he receives).

Of course, when you consider that the Armstrongs have exclusive control of a $60,000,000 per year, tax-free income, any discussion by them of voluntary salary cuts or personal sacrifice for "the work" is completely ridiculous. As one proverb attributed to Stanley Rader says, "What really counts is not what you own but what you control." It makes little difference what the size of Herbert's salary is when you consider that he has an unlimited expense account. It makes no difference whatever that he owns no automobile. He has a chauffeur plus exclusive use of a Rolls Royce and numerous Cadillac limousines.

Herbert also has a very substantial art collection. It is so large, in fact, that for years he has been unable to find the space necessary to display it all. Some pieces are on loan to friends and subordinates. For instance, at one time evangelist Roderick Meredith had $70,000 worth of Herbert's painting hanging in his home. Much of his collection is simply warehoused. Obviously, Herbert would prefer that the public remain ignorant of his art-buying obsession.

A few years ago, unknown to Herbert, the church's business office assigned a photographer to photograph and catalog Herbert's collection for insurance purposes. Quite by accident, Herbert came upon the man as he was shooting the stored artwork. Herbert flew into a rage and summarily fired him. Having personally wandered through one of Herbert's art storage rooms and observed the still attached prices, I am convinced that estimates of his collection being worth $500,000 are much too low. The fact that all of this may not be legally in his name matters little. It has been purchased at his pleasure, and it is all under his control. What it adds up to is that Herbert is a very wealthy man-at church expense.

The same applies to Ted. He makes an obnoxious practice of mentioning how much pressure he is under and how much emotional stress he endures for "God's work." Those who have worked with the man, however, know that this is utter nonsense. He lives a life-style that would be the envy of any wealthy sportsman or millionaire superstar. He has, for instance, the exclusive use of any of ten cars. According to one source, he owned 15 until very recently, but, alas, austerity measures at Ambassador College prompted him to cut back. He has reserved for his personal use at least five homes. The private jet he flies, a Fanjet Falcon (by the time you read this he will have taken possession of a newer jet that is now on order), is theoretically not his personal property, but that makes little difference. The jet is more of a personal toy than it is an evangelical tool.

During the summer of 1973, I worked as an instructor at the WCG summer camp in northern Minnesota. I can vividly recall how each week Garner Ted would pass through from California. He was not at all involved in teaching, counseling, or the administration of the camp, nor did he normally give sermons or lecture to the campers. The purpose of the trips was purely for pleasure. Each Thursday or Friday Ted and his guests would fly up from California in his jet. From Orr, Minnesota, they would fly a smaller plane north into Canada to Ted's private fishing camp. On Monday, they would come through Orr again on their way back to California. Now, who do you think paid for all of this?

If you'd really like to find out, you won't get much help from the church's business office. Once while still a tithe-paying WCG member, I called the church's accounting office to obtain some general information about the church's income and expenditures. I was repeatedly transferred and stalled. Finally, I was connected to the legal department. They informed me that the church did not make available the information I was requesting to the public or to individual laymembers.

The Accountants. The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, which is to accountants the equivalent of what the American Medical Association is to physicians, has a very clear rule regarding the absolute necessity of independence in its members. Article 1, section 1.01 of the AICPA's "Code of Professional Ethics" states:

"Neither a member or associate, nor a firm of which he is a partner, shall express an opinion on financial statements of any enterprise unless he and his firm are in fact independent with respect to such enterprise.

"Independence is not susceptible of precise definition, but is an expression of the professional integrity of the individual. A member or associate, before expressing his opinion on financial statements, has the responsibility of assessing his relationships with an enterprise to determine whether, in the circumstances, he might expect his opinion to be considered independent, objective and unbiased by one who had knowledge of all the facts.

"A member or associate will be considered not independent, for example, with respect to any enterprise if he, or one of his partners, (a) during the period of his professional engagement or at the time of expressing his opinion, had, or was committed to acquire, any direct financial interest or material indirect financial interest in the enterprise, or (b) during the period of his professional engagement, at the time of expressing his opinion or during the period covered by the financial statements, was connected with the enterprise as a promoter, underwriter, voting trustee, director, officer or key employee.... The word 'director' is not intended to apply to a connection in such a capacity with a charitable, religious, civic or other similar type of nonprofit organization when the duties performed in such a capacity are such as to make it clear that the member or associate can express an independent opinion on the financial statements."

The Armstrong organization's books are audited by the firm of Cornwall, Rader, and Kessler, Certified Public Accountants. It is my opinion that this firm lacks the required independence to be able to audit the Armstrong corporations' books in an unbiased manner, and therefore all statements made by them concerning these corporations should be highly suspect.

Henry Cornwall is the treasurer of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation. Stanley Rader has for years been receiving fees and salaries for his work as an Ambassador College instructor, chief legal counsel to the Armstrongs, an executive for the World Tomorrow's advertising agency, and, of late, as AICF director and Plain Truth associate publisher. Numerous attorneys have commented to us that it is amazing Rader has not yet been challenged in the courts on grounds of "conflict of interest." In one year alone he received, along with his partner Cornwall, $76,000 in accounting fees plus $55,900 as the organizations' general counsel. What he was also receiving for his other responsibilities we don't know.

We do know, however, that Stan Rader has been receiving numerous "special benefits" from Ambassador College. For instance, besides an unlimited expense account, he has servants whose salaries are paid for by the church. In that stack of approved requisitions discussed earlier are thousands of dollars worth dealing with redecorating a residence at 840 Loma Vista, Beverly Hills, California. That is Stan Rader's Beverly Hills home. One requisition for "all vinyls and carpeting for the Rader Residence" and "cleaning of draperies in the breakfast room and the family room" alone totals $5,553.88. Stamped across this requisition in bold print is the word EMERGENCY. We hope the Raders were able to weather that crisis. We can imagine how difficult it would be for them not to have their draperies in perfect condition.

Another questionable area surrounding Rader involves ownership of the college's aircraft. We have on tape this comment by Stan Rader concerning the church's jets:

"Actually I am a one-third owner of the aircraft which had been leased to the college, and the college is paying a very fair price for them." (Stan Rader, ministerial meeting, Pasadena, March 7, 1974.)

Why he should own approximately $2 million worth of what was believed to be the church's assets is a question we'd like him to answer.

Where Has All the Money Gone? Unfortunately, Stan Rader is just the tip of a very ugly iceberg. A far more important area of ethical impropriety revolves around the question of what has become of those assets accumulated through the many years of repeated Armstrong appeals for money. Those of us who have contributed to the Armstrong organization were led to believe that our contributions were to be used for one specific purpose-namely, the spreading of the gospel. Implied, inferred, and often stated in those appeals was the concept that in order to get that gospel out the WCG needed to purchase presses, broadcasting equipment, school buildings, college facilities, church buildings, convention sites, and a summer camp. What has become of all those assets purchased "to get the gospel out"? Over 80% have been sold or are up for sale. What's become of all the resulting money?

Ted, in recent appeals, indicated that there was to be a greatly expanded radio and television outreach. However, a glance at the church's radio and television log shows the Armstrong program is now on fewer, not more, stations. Some of the money, of course, has gone to purchase and furnish the new Tucson homes of Herbert Armstrong, Ted Armstrong, and Stan Rader. And, ironically, as The Plain Truth magazine is dwindling in circulation, frequency of publication, size, and quality, Herbert Armstrong, according to New York Magazine, has invested $6 million of church funds into a corporation publishing Quest/77 magazine.

A quick perusal of any issue of Quest/77 clearly reveals that its worldly tone, use of outright profanity, message of man's hope lying in himself, and humanistic philosophy are all diametrically opposite to everything Herbert Armstrong and his son ever preached or claimed to believe in. Quest/77 may be an informative and entertaining publication of high quality and wit, but the fact remains that it was founded with funds that were contributed by sincere and trusting Christians who were led to believe that those contributions were to be used for something very different. It's the same as contributing money to the Cancer Society and discovering later that the money was used to finance a cigarette factory.

Considering that during the last few years the WCG income has actually been dropping a bit, it's possible the Armstrongs are getting tired of the religion racket and are just moving on to greener fields. Whatever the case, they have raped the church and through the fear of hell fire, Armageddon, and "the end" are financially bleeding its members dry. I am reminded of the scriptural analogy: "the church is the body of Christ." If that is so, at the hands of the Armstrongs the church is experiencing a reenactment of the crucifixion.

It's time the leaders of the WCG be called into accountability. The WCG membership must demand that the WCG open its books to an audit by CPAs who have no connection with the organization. This is essential to regain the trust and loyalty of all the members. Surely if everything is in order, the church officials have nothing to fear or to hide. If this is not done, contributors should simply withhold their tithes and offerings in protest until this is done.

Maybe those who are still supporting the Armstrongs will wake up. But then again, maybe Herbert was right all along when he once pointed at his congregation and said, "You people are all dumb sheep!"

SPYING IN THE NAME OF GOD

The Worldwide Church of God's (WCG) rise from country-bumpkin church to eminence as a super-media cult is a fascinating financial success story. Starting in 1934 with a handful of backwoods country folk and barely enough money to subsist on, Herbert Armstrong proceeded to build a powerful fundamentalist church that garners more money per year than Billy Graham's and Oral Roberts' organizations combined.

In the early years the going was rough and the rewards few and far between. Herbert's efforts to build a large, stable church met one defeat after another, according to his autobiography. As soon as he gathered a group of followers in a city and turned his evangelizing efforts to another area, the first group fell apart. When he turned a group over to another minister whom he supposed he could trust, he claimed the minister suddenly became disloyal to him and turned the members of the group against him.

Partly because of these frustrations, Herbert decided to found a college to train men for the ministry who would remain loyal to him and his church. He reasoned that if he took young, impressionable minds and taught them the Bible according to his viewpoint, they would believe exactly like him, remain loyal to him, and enthusiastically assist him in proclaiming his unique gospel message. He was absolutely right.

During the 1950s his college-Ambassador College (AC)-produced a number of young, zealous, unswervingly loyal assistants made over into his image who adopted his teachings unquestioningly on practically everything. These men began to share Herbert's dreams and preach his message with fervency, but they were also haunted by his main fear: that of having loyal, tithe-paying church members-in whom they had invested time and money-leave the church over doctrines or follow some other religious leader or a disaffected member.

As AC and the local churches fathered by Herbert grew, the WCG leaders realized that they must never allow questioning of the church's basic doctrines and policies or criticism of the Armstrongs and the ministry, lest the church be split into small warring factions, as had happened several times in the early history of Herbert's church. Thus they attempted to cow the members into submission to their authority with intimidating statements that went something like: "To doubt is to be damned"; "Questioning doctrines is of the Devil"; "If you don't obey God's true servants and his apostle Herbert Armstrong, you will eventually be thrown into hell fire and burned up for all eternity!"

Still the WCG leadership realized that all members couldn't be intimidated by words. The leadership sensed it had to also possess the ability to detect and take effective action against any who dared threaten the corporate entity. So, feeling a need to preserve Herbert's church at all costs-but lacking a basic appreciation of their fellow man-the WCG leaders initiated a variety of malignant spying practices throughout the church and Ambassador College to insure that they would keep absolute control of the lives and minds of the AC students, faculty members, and church members. These methods, without exception, work at cross purposes with man's inalienable rights while showing little love for those unsuspecting people subjected to them.

Keeping Tabs on Fellow Students. When new students first set foot on the campus of Ambassador College-called "God's College"-they were embarking on an experience that was destined to change their beliefs, their values, and even their appearance. They were to be made over in the Armstrong image. The 1968-69 Student Handbook, describes what AC intended to do to the student:

"You are about to embark upon a most important phase of your life. At Ambassador College you will become conditioned for a new profession and a new social behavior to correspond to that profession" (p. 11, emphasis ours).

The WCG leaders weren't kidding when they wrote about reconditioning each student. The college officials in the 1950s and 60s took it upon themselves to manage every aspect of a student's life. They told Joe and Jane Student when to get up in the morning, how to make their beds, how long to pray, how to dress, whom they could date, how many times per year they could date an individual, which social functions they must attend, and when to go to bed. College officials did their level best to get to know each and every student: what was going on in each student's mind, what his deepest problems and hangups were, his past sex problems, etc.

But the college administrators didn't stop with this. They went so far as to encourage AC students and employees to spy and report on each other, especially if someone deviated even slightly from the strict policies of the WCG, which controls AC. They also appointed dormitory monitors to keep a watchful eye on the students. The monitors filled out and submitted special cards to the dean's office on students' attitudes, social life, prayer habits, spiritual condition, and study habits. The Student Handbook (1968-69) discussed a monitor's responsibilities:

"Each dormitory is staffed with a House Monitor, a Monitor for each floor or apartment, and assistants in each room.... These students are dedicated to the ideals of the college and to serving you.... It is your responsibility as a Monitor to get to know ALL the students; to help and encourage them insofar as you are qualified, and be able to refer them to the proper channel for guidance; to see that the students are obeying college rules... to write a weekly report which is due at the Dean of Students' Office at 8:00 A.M. every Monday; to check sign out cards and record violations; to turn in special monitor reports on individuals who have significant problems or who have made special progress. (p. 52).

AC administrators required female students to sign out and sign in when they left their dorm and returned. They had to list their destination and the name of their male escort. The administration publicly claimed these cards were filled out only so a student could be found in case of an emergency. Yet the cards were eventually turned in to the dean's office for evaluation, enabling the college to keep tabs on who dated who and how often. If a student insisted on ignoring AC's dating rules, he could be dismissed for displaying a "bad attitude" and for failing to obey God's "servants."

College students and employees, as well as WCG members, were encouraged in college forums and assemblies to divulge their deepest problems to WCG ministers, who often doubled as AC administrators. Those who didn't get the hint to voluntarily become a "known quantity" to the administration were sometimes called in, often because other students had reported them for such "sins" as listening to rock music, holding hands with the opposite sex, sleeping too late, not dating enough, or perhaps for not attending Friday night Bible study at the college.

When students counseled for baptism, they were encouraged-often by two ministers at a time-to reveal their innermost sins or problems to the ministry. Hesitancy to reveal everything (headquarters ministers often already had copies of local ministers' "visit cards" loaded with information on the individual) was invariably met with a psychological assault against the individual's personality. The attack always focused on the individual's declared or undeclared "vanity," and information already in the files was introduced in a roundabout manner so as to make the minister appear almost omniscient. The student quickly became a "known quantity" to the administration. Facts gleaned in these counseling sessions were committed to memory and often reduced to writing, only to emerge again in "manpower meetings."

AC's Manpower Committee. As the student body burgeoned, it became tougher for the college directors to get to know each student. So a "manpower committee" was instituted in 1961 to discuss graduating students' merits and demerits to enable the AC/WCG leaders to decide whom to employ. These meetings allowed 15 to 30 college faculty members and department heads to assemble and discuss intimate, confidential material that each one of them had garnered on individual students from counseling sessions, dorm reports, etc. Often the characteristics that seemed to carry the most weight were a person's dating habits, nationality, physique, past emotional or sexual problems, or the "spiritual" condition of his family. (Be sure to read "The Manpower Papers.")

What was said about a student in manpower meetings often determined whether or not he would be hired by the WCG or AC. Many a student was denied the job he had his heart set on because of certain evidence that was uncovered from his past life and discussed in these meetings. In the late 1960s, however, those who survived the close scrutiny of the manpower committee had to face yet another test.

Lie Detector Tests. In late 1968 some money and a few other items were stolen from AC's men's dormitories. The following week, in a sermon and later in a student assembly, Herbert Armstrong sternly commanded the guilty party to step forward, pronouncing a curse on any guilty person who didn't. Not a soul dared.

Obviously infuriated that no one would confess, Herbert Armstrong authorized administering a lie detector test to all of AC's male students. An AC graduate recounted his gruesome experience:

"Each student was notified when to come over to the second floor of what is now the Library Annex for his examination. One day I received a note in my mailbox informing me I had to take the exam the following day at 3 p.m. The thought went racing through my mind: 'If I flunk the test, I'll be kicked out of God's college, and I'm innocent. Psychologists say the lie detector test is accurate only 85% to 90% of the time. What if it is wrong and says I'm guilty?' I tried to put those thoughts out of my mind, but I was still nervous. At last 3 p.m. arrived, and I stepped into the building on time-anxious to get it over with. Because the testing was behind schedule, however, I had to wait another 30 minutes, and I sweated every minute of it.

"Finally a security guard summoned me into the examination room. I was seated in a chair and had devices attached to me. I felt like I was being put into the electric chair to be executed. I was asked a set of questions over and over for what seemed like an eternity. Finally, it was over. Still shaken, I went back to my dorm thanking God that the machine had told the truth. This was one of the most humiliating experiences of my life. It was as though I was guilty until proven innocent."

Unfortunately, some were never proven innocent. One barrel-chested weightlifter type failed the polygraph exam three times. This person did not fail because he was lying or because he had stolen anything. He failed because he had extremely high blood pressure, and the trauma of the test only exacerbated his bona fide medical condition. Nonetheless, he was never given a position of "responsible" employment by the church or college, in spite of the fact that he had given many thousands of dollars in tithes and offerings. Extreme as this abuse may sound, another individual was actually expelled from college after taking the lie detector test. Notice what was written about him in the "manpower notes" taken at manpower meetings:

"He was recently given a lie detector's test which shows him to be a liar and a thief, but since the test is not infallible, and he staunchly maintains his innocence, we cannot be sure that he is a thief and liar. The lie detector only records conscious thought, however, and he was grilled for more than eight hours..." (vol. III, p. 68, emphasis ours).

Shortly after his dismissal from the WCG and AC, the former Dean of Students (who presided over the 1968-69 polygraph period) related that hidden cameras were employed during this time. He mentioned that video tape equipment caught students smoking cigarettes and even masturbating. Two-way mirrors were utilized at the institution to catch students "stealing" milk and beer. Special identifying dyes that would not show up on one's hands until a few minutes after contact with the object that was coated with the dye were also used in student surveillance.

Keeping Tabs on Church Members. The WCG officials applied their "big brother" tactics not only at AC but also in their churches worldwide via Ambassador College trained ministers inculcated with a dorm-monitor mentality. Ministers were instructed, primarily by Rod Meredith, to visit each and every church member regularly and check up on their "spiritual" condition and their family lives. David Jon Hill, in a visiting program meeting on Dec. 16, 1962, explained how a minister should prepare to visit a WCG member:

"Plan the procedure of your visit before you arrive at your destination. Discuss with your second man a little of the background-what you know about the problems of the household, etc."

Following a visit with a member or prospective member, the minister was required to fill out a "visit card" on each household or person he visited and mail it to AC in Pasadena for filing. Rod Meredith went so far as to tell prospective ministerial trainees in a 1970 speech class that they should never visit a member and then go to their car and fill out a visit card on the member in front of his home, but rather they should drive out of sight around the corner before filling out the card. Notice Meredith's explicit instructions to ministers regarding how to report a visit:

"Enclosed is a supply of the new Visiting Cards.... Ideally, the cards should be filled out immediately after the visit in your car. Perhaps down the street and around the corner.... Think carefully and describe the highlights of the visit, the problems and attitudes.... If deep problems and complications arise, you may wish to type an additional 'Problem Report' on any one person or family occasionally.... Normally two carbons of these should be made and sent to Headquarters- one for us and one for the District Superintendent..." (ministerial letter, 12/24/65, pp. 2-3).

Surprisingly, the normally staid, placid WCG membership became extremely irritated by constant ministerial "pry and spy" visits. The visits raised such a furor that a four-page article by Garner Ted Armstrong was written to all members rebuking-you guessed it-the members for their attitudes, not the ministry. The article, titled "The Visiting Program... or Gestapo... Which?" opened with the question, "Are Christ's servants on the Visiting Program brethren, or spies? Are they sent to 'check up' on you, to 'watch' you-or to serve and help you?" (The Good News, May 1964, p. 3.) Garner Ted admitted that some families would not answer the door when WCG ministers dropped by and others were "secretive with the men on the Visiting Program." He confessed that disrespect for the visiting program was a "serious problem" and asked the members what they had to hide-all but implying that the ministers were indeed searching for something.

Deacons Spied Too. The AC graduates that became ordained WCG ministers took the "watchdog" attitude that permeated AC with them into local churches all over the world. They bequeathed this heinous "watch your brother" system to the deacons under them. One New Jersey deacon, a long-time WCG member, explained how deacons were used for spying:

"A few years after becoming a member of the Worldwide Church of God I was ordained a deacon. At the time I thought it was about the greatest event of my life, but sad to say I found out in later years that it only drove me deeper into a very misguided and somewhat corrupt organization.

"...Shortly after my ordination I was informally told by my minister and some of the local elders that part of my responsibility was to keep them informed about the behavior of the members that I came in contact with. My minister directly told me that I and other deacons were his eyes and ears since he could not possibly keep in contact with all of his people all of the time.

"Some of the things we were to watch out for were bad attitudes, lack of study and prayer, not keeping the Sabbath or for that matter any disagreement with Worldwide Church policies or doctrines. One of the worst offenses anyone could commit was to bad-mouth a minister or anyone in authority, especially Herbert W. or Garner Ted Armstrong.

"Many of the local elders and deacons would carry a notebook and jot down anything they saw that was not in accordance with WCG teachings. This information was then passed on to the minister for his evaluation and action.

"My wife was also told by a local elder that as a deacon's wife she also should circulate about the congregation and if per chance anything was picked up along these lines to let her husband know about it...

"With the information that I gathered and passed on via telephone or verbally, I myself caused many a visit to be paid on members by a minister or local elder... As you no doubt know, attendance of members at services was checked each week by us, and if some were delinquent too often, a visit was made by a minister....

"It was not uncommon for a husband or wife to turn his or her spouse in for some infringement of church policy or doctrine, and if the crime was bad enough, a visit from a Minister would follow....

"I was guilty of many of the things mentioned, and I can only say that I look back in disgust and regret to what I had allowed myself and family to become. I only hope that those I affected will forgive me even if they don't know I prayerfully asked for forgiveness...."

The Spying Methods Change. In the early 1970s, to save money, the WCG ministry was instructed to visit people only if they requested it. Garner Ted Armstrong discontinued the manpower meetings because " 'the manpower' committee meetings have become more and more a waste of time for the majority of those attending, and only partially useful in practical placement of personnel." He explained that "it will be no handicap whatever for various departments to obtain useful information about prospective employees...." Garner Ted also announced that he had had the Dean's extensive file of student dorm report cards burned, and he banned the dorm report-card system. In addition he threw the AC coeds a sop when he stated that a woman didn't have to report who her male escort was on the dorm sign-out cards.

Just when the casual AC observer began to think AC's nosy, "I am my brother's keeper whether he likes it or not" attitude was mellowing, the AC directors, unknown to outsiders, were already busily utilizing new, more sophisticated methods of monitoring the behavior of their unsuspecting students and brethren.

Tithe Checks. In early 1968 Rod Meredith toured AC's new data processing center. Discovering to his pleasant surprise that the computer listed every contribution donated by an individual, he ordered Dan Porter from that day forward to check the tithe and donation records of all prospective ministers and of all ministers due to be elevated in rank. The ministry was notified of this new policy in a March 1, 1968, ministerial letter from Rod Meredith.

AC's computer soon proved to be everyone's favorite new toy. Though it didn't address the ministers with the "Mister" they were accustomed to, it gave them something the holy spirit never did-insight into the real attitudes of the "dumb sheep" (HWA's term for the WCG members) that they "watched" over.

As time passed, the ministry consulted their new-found crystal ball more and more frequently. The tithing records of whole church areas were subsequently checked via the computer.

Curtailment of Freedom of Speech and Religion at AC. Freedom of speech and religion has always been restricted at AC. While a student can belong to another church, he is quickly reported by the "system" if he discusses personal beliefs that differ with those of the WCG. Some have even been kicked out of college for talking too frequently about their beliefs.

In late 1973 and early 1974, college officials and members actively spied on the private lives of AC employees and WCG members. One official memorandum (document AR-147) reported that "on Sunday cars with Ambassador College parking stickers were seen parked at Dr. Martin's [a former AC faculty member] home." Then the memo stated the name of one person whose car was parked there. The memorandum also stated that "films were taken by a member in San Marino... of people entering [the] YMCA [for a religious meeting]. We should be getting duplicates of film later on."

In mid-1974, Jim Reed, a member of AC's data processing department, went to a religious meeting not sanctioned by AC. Spies reported it, and the next day he discovered a note attached to his apartment door. The note was from his supervisor, telling him not to bother reporting for work the next day. Several other AC employees and students were dismissed for religious beliefs they espoused or for attending non-WCG religious meetings. Numerous affidavits to this effect are currently on file with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in San Francisco and can be summoned under the Freedom of Information Act by interested parties.

An affidavit on file with the General Services Administration in San Francisco (dated May 12, 1976) delineates an eyewitness account verifying spying by church officials:

"It was then that... a 'close aide' of Garner Ted Armstrong was dispatched with the knowledge and approval of G. T. Armstrong to see if I or any other AC employees were attending Dr. Martin's lectures. On February 8, 1975... [the aide] parked his van across the street from the lecture hall. Then a photographer in the back went to work. He peaked out through curtains covering the side window, and began snapping picture after picture of those entering the lecture hall. My wife, young son, and I... passed directly in front of the camera. On other occasions, both before and after the above incident... [the aide] and various accomplices 'staked out' Dr. Martin's lectures."

Several AC/WCG employees and ministers even related to this writer that they strongly suspected their phones were being bugged. They have good reason to suspect it. According to the U.S. Attorney General's office, "eavesdropping" on telephone conversations is not illegal, since it implies the consent of one of the parties of the conversation and/or the owner of the phone. Ambassador College, as registered owner of the institution's pervasive Centrex system, has implied consent to eavesdrop on any conversation on any phone paid for by the college- and that includes all the Centrex phones in the homes of college and church executives. Technically this practice-if the college should choose to employ it-is beyond prosecution.

Ambassador Report has also discovered that both Herbert and Garner Ted Armstrong have electronic eavesdropping devices in their fourth-floor office suites that enable them to secretly listen in on classroom lectures. More than one faculty member has been dismissed from the college under somewhat questionable rationale. The verification of such a listening device lends credence to the worst of suspicions.

The Ministerial Masters. Both the Armstrongs live their lives in continual danger-the danger of discovery. Any unplanned emergence of the truth about their personal lives and practices could severely cripple their capacity to generate more financial resources. They have never minimized the danger of this possibility and are continually on guard to protect their own manufactured facade, as well as their church's. The fact that the Armstrongs and their hierarchy are accountable to individual members-who in many cases have given their life's savings to the church-is viciously contested and constantly downplayed by the Worldwide Church of God, Inc. There is, however, little danger that the members would attempt to expose their shenanigans to the national press because members are basically unaware of how the church is run and what the personal lives of its leaders are like.

The Armstrongs do fear, though, that high-ranking executives who know "what's going on" will quit in disgust and leak "negative information" to the press-as several have already done. Anticipating this eventuality, the Armstrongs have initiated executive spying.

The Spy Orders. Ambassador Report has in its possession documents that absolutely verify the use of covert spying by members of the WCG administration against other top executives of that same organization. The first paragraph of one such document, AR-531, makes it clear that Garner Ted personally ordered the probing:

"Mr. GTA asked me to inquire of ministers attending the Cincinnati campaign concerning the recent regional meetings held in Cincinnati and Richmond. The following is the result.... The meetings were conducted by David Antion and Ed Smith... Several said they felt that there was a 'powerful spirit' working in the meetings. The following statements are reported to have been made by DAVID L. ANTION during the meetings on Monday, February 25: 1. The church governmental structure is all wrong...."

The informant went on to note telephone calls, classify the nature of these calls, and even the manner in which information was introduced in the meetings, carefully detailing inferences, implications, and emotional content. The report went on to monitor another meeting, noting and recording the names of those present and the length of the meeting. The report was terminated after a similar analysis of a third meeting.

A second report that was given to our staff, AR-313, is in the handwriting of a ranking executive/evangelist of the WCG. The executive recorded a large amount of defamatory information on a fellow evangelist in the church and submitted it personally to Herbert Armstrong. It begins:

"Dear Mr. Armstrong,

"X and others have recently brought to my attention certain information (facts) which is of such a nature that it must be brought to your and Mr. Ted Armstrong's immediate attention.... we would be derelict in our duty if we didn't inform you of the material in this report without further delay...."

The exhaustive, 19-page report claimed to present "incriminating" quotes from the mouth of a certain disliked evangelist and included testimony of over two dozen other executives. Every single one of the statements was levied against this minister behind his back! (Which scripture in the Bible justifies this treacherous treatment? Is this the way Christ intended his ministers to behave toward one another?) Almost no attempt was made to establish the context of the evangelist's purported statements. Not only was the report biased, but the man was not given a chance to answer the charges against him-or even told that charges against him existed. The report even described his affection toward his children in a negative tone. It went on to accuse him of assaulting an individual at a sports event and in general took every opportunity to attack the man's motives for certain internal judgments he had made on his job.

In promoting surreptitious monitoring of its executives, the institution is behaving like a shark that turns on its tail and begins to devour itself.

Thousands of loyal members have been forced out of the church by the suffocating Armstrong belief that God gave them the sole right to supervise and limit the flow of ideas into the minds of their members. The Armstrongs have on many occasions censored the views their students and members can be exposed to-especially concerning Bible doctrines. They feel they should choose the persons or groups their followers should associate with. In doing this they do not present themselves as the servants they purport to be ("minister" means "servant" in the New Testament). Instead they present themselves as ministerial masters. Anyone who opposes or differs with them is said to be against God and for Satan, and immediately the organization moves to rid itself of that individual-no matter how much he has given to the organization in time, service, and money. Such individuals are expendable pawns in a chess game to be used or sacrificed according to the Armstrongs' whims.

The Armstrongs have played the corporate game well, succeeding where most fail. In fact, there has been nothing in the confines of organized religion they have been unable to accomplish-so long as they were not asked to love their fellow man. In that respect, however, they have failed miserably.

It's a disgrace that the Armstrongs and certain leaders in the WCG have passed themselves off as God's humble servants and preached about loyalty, love, and service while they were engaged in spying on church members, monitoring their lives, prying into their secret sins, and gossiping about, recording, and filing juicy tidbits they uncovered.

The Worldwide Church of God would be a refreshingly different church if its leading ministers would adhere to one biblical statement they seem to forget while spying on their employees and members: "The whole law is fulfilled in one word, 'You shall love your neighbor as yourself'" (Galatians 5:14). But those who ignore that verse had better heed the following one: "But if you bite and devour one another take heed that you are not consumed by one another."

HERBERT ARMSTRONG'S RELIGIOUS ROOTS

During the Ministerial Conference in May 1974, Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) applied Paul's statement from Galatians 1:11-12 to himself- "The gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Then Herbert added: "I say the same thing, brethren!" Not wanting to be outdone by Paul, Herbert claimed that he too learned "by the revelation of Jesus Christ." He went on to say, "I was not converted as the result of the teaching or preaching of any man."

In a sermon on July 24, 1976, he declared, "I came to the truth in a way I know of no other church leader. I know of no other minister who ever came to it by himself through the leading of God in that way."

The Origin of Herbert's Unique Doctrines. The truth is, however, that many of the teachings of the Worldwide Church of God were plagiarized from other religious leaders and were not "revealed" personally to Herbert by God, as he claims. Consider for a moment that a SeventhDay Adventist publication, Prophecy Speaks, was reprinted almost verbatim with many of its gross inaccuracies in Herbert Armstrong's Proof of the Bible booklet. (Read the article "Herbert Armstrong 'Disproves' the Bible" for further information.)

Much of the material in HWA's book, The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy (copyright 1967), was extracted nearly verbatim from John H. Allen's book Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright (written in 1902). Rather than give Allen the credit he deserved, HWA claimed God had revealed to him the "master key" that unlocks the meaning of the Bible's prophecies. He stated that this special key was "the identity of the United States and the British nations" (The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy, 1967, p. 8). However, the British Israelism theory, which taught essentially the same thing as HWA wrote in his book, had been in existence at least 50 years before Herbert ever came on the scene.

On at least two occasions different Ambassador College employees have discovered boxes in Herbert's basement containing magazines entitled The Remnant of Israel, as well as a great deal of other related religious material. All this material was published by G. G. Rupert (1847-1922) of Britton, Oklahoma. When we compare Rupert's beliefs with Herbert's, we find them to be identical in many respects. (This subject was researched for the WCG in a paper written by Richard C. Nickels in 1972.) Some of the teachings that Rupert and Herbert Armstrong both advocate are: tithing, observing the sabbath and the holy days of Leviticus 23, keeping the Ten Commandments, observing the Passover on Nisan 14, church eras, a form of British Israelism, the correct name of God's church is "Church of God," man doesn't have an immortal soul, Christians shouldn't observe Christmas and Easter, the holy days foreshadow God's plan, anointing and laying hands on the sick, sending anointed cloths to the sick, avoiding any military service, not voting, not electing church officers or ministers, there is only one true church, not eating unclean meats, the end is near, and singing psalms rather than the traditional Protestant hymns. (See The Remnant of Israel by G. G. Rupert, April 1919, June 1919, Sept. 1921; also see Is There a True Church Organization by G. G. Rupert, written in 1919.)

The significance of this discovery is that it shows Herbert's main beliefs were not uniquely revealed to him by God but were simply taken from other ministers and publications and pawned off as his own unique, divinely revealed teachings.

At the May 1974 Ministerial Conference Herbert Armstrong continued to perpetuate the idea that all his beliefs came directly from God: "I did not go to any minister, to any seminary, to any religious school, to any religious denomination, any man or group of men, but I was taught by God in his Book." The truth is that HWA ripped off the research and teachings of others and palmed them off as his own, and then even had the audacity to claim that God had something to do with it!

Adolf Hitler stated in Mein Kampf: "The great masses of the people... will more easily fall victims to a big lie than to a small one." Herbert had duped many with his "big lie" regarding the origin of the teachings of the Worldwide Church of God.

Herbert and His Association With the Church of God. A second "big lie" that Herbert tells is that he was never a member of the Church of God groups with whom he associated: "For some years I worked in cooperation with the Church of God.... I never joined them-never became one of their members" (member letter, May 2, 1974, p. 2).

Research, however, has once again shown that accuracy is not one of Herbert's strong points. David M. Kauer, secretary-treasurer of the Church of God (7th day), Denver office, stated in a letter to B. R. Guillory dated March 19, 1974, that "Mr. Armstrong was a minister of the Church of God (7th Day)." John Kiesz, long-time minister of the Church of God (7th Day) and associate of HWA till 1945, stated in material mailed from Stanberry, Missouri, on March 26, 1973, that "Brother Armstrong... received his credentials from the Salem [West Virginia] group about the fall of 1934. I was one of the officers of the Salem Church of God at that time." Carlo E. Rasmussen of the Church of God (7th Day), Salem, West Virginia, office stated in a letter to P. Boehnhardt, dated February 27, 1973, that "Mr. Herbert Armstrong was a member of this Church of God and was even one of the Seventy Prophets until he departed on his theory of British Israelism, which he preaches today. The other officers in the Church studied this teaching for one whole year and concluded it could not be proven through the Scripture."

The following quote is from a letter written by HWA to the Salem Church of God on January 29, 1934, just three weeks after his true church had supposedly begun: "I hasten to follow your suggestion, and enclose herewith my acceptance of the ministry of one of the Seventy." The acceptance states:

"I am anxious to begin on the ministry... in the one body, and am determined... to live and teach the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus, as found in the Holy Scriptures, and as outlined in the Constitution of the Church of God.... Will you please record this my acceptance, and have credentials issued to me...."

Note that HWA acknowledged that they were "the one body."

In a letter to Salem, West Virginia, dated August 15, 1934, HWA affirmed that his views were "in harmony and accord" with their "40 Points of Doctrine" and that his teaching was "not out of harmony with that of the other ministers of the church."

Well, one lie leads to another. Herbert now says: "I was not a member of this Salem organization, nor did they pay me any salary" (member letter, May 2, 1974, p. 4).

Elder Straub, one of Armstrong's fellow ministers in the Church of God who now lives in Lodi, California, was contacted by telephone in early 1974 by Martin Lieber. Here's what Elder Straub said on the subject:

"Just the other day... when I talked to Brother Helms I said, 'Why he [HWA] claimed he never took any money from the organization.' He [Helms] said, 'Oh, that's a big fib.... Everything he ever got never got to any place else but him-he hung on to it pretty tightly.'"

Elder Straub continued, referring to a confrontation with Herbert in 1935:

"When he [HWA] said that he never received that money, Elder Haber [the treasurer] went to his briefcase and he got a check, over $500. It was over $500 which was cancelled by Herbert. He said, 'Herbert, what is this here? You never received any money from the organization? What is this here?'... That was too convincing, I mean, that was an open falsehood."

Chris W. Royer of the Church of God (7th Day), Salem, West Virginia, office stated in a letter to Bill Hughes, dated July 22, 1976, that "it is time consuming to go through old records. However, in our ledger we find that Mr. Armstrong received pay as late as March 1937."

Yet Herbert recklessly declared:

"I received no salary or remuneration of any kind from either the Salem or Stanberry organization....' The story that I went out from them... is 100% false! I was never even a member of them" (member letter. May 2, 1974, p. 4).

Herbert did leave the Church of God, but why? Did he have a genuine conscience problem over a doctrinal point? Officially, "it was basically his teaching on British Israel and the observance of the Feast Days which led to his separation [in 1938] from the church" (Kauer letter, March 19, 1974). At the Ministerial Conference in May 1974 HWA claimed that he didn't leave the Church of God because of doctrinal reasons but because he merely got so busy that he "just didn't have time to work with them anymore."

In an April 1939 Good News article (p. 7) he justified his leaving the Church of God and starting his own work by declaring:

"Our heavenly Father never planted any super-organization, or established any church government, or set men in authority over either spiritual or financial affairs, in the New Testament Church."

Now that HWA's church organization has grown large and wealthy, he has disavowed his 1939 statements.

So by Herbert's own admission, he "fell away" from what he stated was the one true church of God. Remember, HWA said the Philadelphia era began in August 1933 (The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, p. 492), and yet on January 29, 1934, he affirmed in writing that the Salem Church of God was "the one body"-God's one true church.

Here, perhaps are the real reasons why HWA left the Church of God as put forth by some of his fellow ministers:

John Kiesz: "The real reason seems to have been because of his uncooperative attitude.... Nobody can work with him."

Brother Helms: "Herbert wouldn't study.... Herbert was always the big man and everybody else was the little man."

Elder Haber: "He [HWA] said that he didn't have to pay any attention to anybody."

Elder Straub: "Here was the point. We put him on the radio. It was the church.... But he wasn't willing to study with the ministers, and what the Church of God was teaching.... There was no way of reasoning with the man.... He had his way, he ordered the people...."

In 1935 the ministers offered him a study [of British Israelism], to sit together and study it out; they wanted to know. And he flatly denied and said, 'There will be no study. I'm going to preach what I think should be preached.' He's definitely an independent man that takes nothing from nobody.... He won't listen to any reasoning. What he says just goes. How can one man be so sure?"

It is obvious, then, from history and from the mouths of several different individuals that HWA did not receive his teachings from God by revelation and that he was both a member and minister of the Church of God-which he called the true church and which he left.

Herbert Armstrong has wanted to build a new church headquarters building for several years and recently discussed plans with his architects for another fabulous building on the Ambassador College campus. In fact, he tried to make an announcement of these plans in a recent co-worker letter. Unfortunately, Ted Armstrong and Robert Kuhn excised Herbert's announcement because finances were tight and with Ted putting the finishing touches on an emergency letter asking for more money, it would look bad for Herbert to be planning a new building. Nevertheless, inside sources report the desire for this "last erection" remains a strong passion in Herbert's heart. Whether he will ever get his wish remains to be seen. In the meantime, after studying literally hundreds of Herbert's famous co-worker letters, we of the Ambassador Report staff believe we can capture the spirit of that glorious yet future co-worker letter in which Herbert makes the grand announcement.

DEAREST CO-WORKERS in the Gr-r-r-eatest Work on Earth:

Here I am flying at 55,666 feet above Africa on my way to visit Uganda's president, Idi Amin. As I type, mother Earth is making her last dying revolutions around the sun, and the end time we have lived in since 1934 is drawing closer to the end. As I sit here stupefied in these dizzying times sipping sherry, I KNOW as never before that we are running down the home stretch of the gun lap to victory. Why just a year ago the governments I visited were toppling right after I left them. Now they're failing even BEFORE I can get there to give them MY wonderful GOSPEL-the good news of the get/give principle.

Brethren, it's now obvious that the four horsemen of the apocalypse are beginning their prophesied ride. Just yesterday I learned the jelly bean crop in Alberta has been virtually wiped out by a virulent venereal disease prevalent among boll weevils. Groups of Communist Eskimo guerrillas are running rampant in Alaska. Our respected News Bureau informs me that there have been 12 cases of swine flu in the U.S., and 12 is a complete number, the number of beginnings-and this IS just the beginning of sorrow. One-third of Americans are prophesied to perish in horrible disease epidemics, and they are beginning. You HAVE BEEN WARNED! Yet skeptics sneer at my prophecies, claiming they never come to pass. But co-workers, to doubt is to be DAMNED!

Now for some great news-another NEW giant step forward for the Work. I can now announce that the auditorium was not my LAST erection! Co-workers, I am the organ through which the Great Creator is reproducing himself. God's Work never stops growing! I plan to erect another fabulous building that will compare favorably with our auditorium, the greatest building in all the world! This new erection will rival the Great Pyramid in design excellence, the British Parliament in stateliness, the Pussycat Theater in drawing crowds, Versailles Palace in cost, and the Watergate Hotel in notoriety. It will be a 19-story skyscraper (in honor of the holy time cycle, on which this Work is based) to house our 1,500-volume library and Dr. Hymen Haywire's rare book collection.

We have diligently searched the scriptures and sources that agree with my way of thinking to determine how to design this edifice. Our doctrinal committee members voted unanimously for my plan-it was really God's plan because I have God's mind. (It's true 15 of them resigned, but for health reasons only.) We agreed that the whole structure should be designed on the principle of church government-the biggest and MOST important on TOP and the dumb sheep holding up the bottom. (The Bible does call you sheep, brethren, and with good reason.) Hence each story of the building will be shaped like a fat, giant square. The top one will represent me and be the biggest, and as you get closer to the bottom, each square will progressively get smaller. The whole erection will rest on a revolving solid gold turntable donated by the widows of the Pasadena church. The turntable will make one revolution every 7 hours (7 is a biblical number of perfection), stopping to rest on the 7th day-unless I'm entertaining foreign dignitaries.

The first-story walls will be composed of solid Steuben crystal. As people enter the structure, they will see a 12-foot-high statue of me in Steuben crystal-donated free of charge in recognition of my purchasing $1,000,000 worth of Steuben crystal. There will be a giant opening in the middle of the first 7 stories in which palm trees and imported African climbing vines will grow. My dear friend, President Kenyatta of Kenya, promised to ship me hundreds of live African birds to fly in the building's center section, which will have a mammoth jewel-incrusted chandelier with 10,000 lights hanging from the ceiling.

Each floor will house specific departments. On the first levels will be editorial offices, janitorial storage areas, and a huge room to house bird feed for the African birds. On the 8th floor will be a mahogany sauna room for key AC officials and WCG pastors.

Lately, I've noticed many of our top men here at HQ are spending their whole afternoon away either at lunch or at the handball courts. To keep them nearby when I need them, the new edifice will house a plush restaurant designed in Corinthian architectural style. It'll be called the Red Light House and will serve my two favorite delicacies: chopped Italian Carrozoh and Roast Martin Supreme. On the floor below the restaurant we will construct several air-conditioned handball courts complete with a ministerial-faculty locker room furnished in typically austere AC style-a Hama-skin carpet, famous ancient Grecian art works, and the finest imported African ivory urinals and pink onyx shower floors. This will put real quality and character where it's MOST NEEDED in the Work. Co-workers I know some will accuse me of extravagance because of this. But believe me, it's extremely important that I impress foreign dignitaries with AC's emphasis on culture rather than on its immaculate lawns. Remember, though, God's way is quality-NOT extravagance!

The 13th floor will be reserved for Mr. Saintly Raider, my only counsel, to decorate as he pleases-since he owns 51% of the building.

The offices of Garner Stud Headstrong will adorn the spacious 18th floor. He will be served by a comely secretarial staff providing full services. Stud's office will come complete with a bed in case he, as the second most important man in the world after me, has to work late into the night rehearsing for Hee Haw or planning hunting and fishing expeditions.

Atop the 19th floor above my office will be a special heliport so Ambassador executives can be ferried to and from the airport where their respective jets are hangared.

This new structure will be dubbed the Indira Gandhi Memorial Library. I've met her several times on my round-the-world gospel-preaching flings. She ran her nation so much like I run AC and the Worldly Church of God-like God's government-that I chose to honor her in this way. The library, by the way, will be housed in the basement. (There was no other place for it once space was allocated for the restaurant, handball courts, and the executive office suites.)

To pay for this $100,000,000 structure, I'm reinstating the doctrinal committee with explicit orders to find biblical proof for a 4th, 5th, and 6th tithe. Personally, I feel the book of Lamentations will provide the solid scriptural proof I want.

This marvelous library building will further accent AC's long-time stress on academic excellence. While the college's academic division has gone unaccredited for the 29th year in a row, the college's landscape engineering division again won the award for the most ostentatiously landscaped college in the world. AC is the only college in the world with a 10 to 1 gardener to student ratio. That's one of the many unique advantages AC offers over other pagan colleges that only teach one how to earn a living. But with this new building, people won't come to AC just to sniff the flowers. They'll come to seek knowledge.

To properly dedicate this grand structure, I'm budgeting $1,000,000 to fly the premier orchestra of Southeast Asia-the Manila Philharmonic Orchestra and Marching Band-over for a dedication concert. It's true the construction crews will have to WORK on the sabbath and the holy days to finish the building on time, but God didn't object when we did this to finish the auditorium on time for Vienna's second-best orchestra.

Now for a serious matter. You co-workers have been letting down in prayer because the income is only up 25%. What do you think my airplane runs on-peanut butter, honey, and pickles? As Malachi surely meant to say, "Not by might nor by power nor by my spirit, but by MANDATORY TITHING! Will a man ROB God's Apostle?" Brethren and co-workers, you've got to sacrifice MORE! Give me your money while it still has value. Go without food twice a week instead of once a week, as you are presently doing. Remember, you were called to support me. Without your money, it is impossible for me to please God. This Work can do nothing without the almighty dollar. Some have thought God would be displeased if they starved their families to support my Work. I think NOT! You all KNOW I think not!

I want to again stress that my trips are not for personal pleasure or aggrandizement. They ARE bearing fruit! I have converted 7 people in Japan in the last 8 years of conducting personal testimonials-and 7 is a perfect number. As a result of making new acquaintances with world leaders on these trips, I've found a buyer for the Big Sandy campus-which we can't afford anymore due to the spiraling cost of jet fuel. One of my "Japanese sons" will buy the campus for $50,000, and I'm selling before he lowers the offer. By the way, I have put Saintly Raider over the Work's money now that he's been baptized. He has assured me repeatedly that he'll TAKE CARE of me!

I have a new booklet to offer-the MOST IMPORTANT SINCE THE BIBLE was written. It's The Missing Dimension Unveiled at Last! This book is loaded with dogmatism, dozens of statistical surveys from 19th-century works, doomsday sketches, and pictures of me and Raider- everything but strong biblical truth. We just can't AFFORD to mention the Bible in this booklet lest we offend the world leaders I hobnob with. Though none of the apostles preached the gospel like this, remember, God IS leading me. This booklet is absolutely free of charge-we couldn't sell it if we wanted to. But don't forget that God loves a cheerful tithe payer.

I have just walked through two more closed doors. I can see an Unseen Hand in this in spite of my eyesight. Huge Heftner has asked to meet me and my son Garner Stud, who is now the Vice-Editor-in-Chief of The Blind Truth. Heftner wants to use my unique explanation of cause and EFFECT as the basis for a new series of articles on sex, which is aptly being titled "Open Wide for the Worldwide." So we will reach 20 million Plowboy readers with the true gospel-news about cause and effect. I intend to run full-page ads in Plowboy offering a new booklet, Just What Do You Mean ... Only Two Positions for Sex? In this monumental booklet, I reveal for the first time in human history what the Third Position is and why it's utterly pagan.

But Satan is angry. He's out to get me and my son Stud. Remember 3 things: (1) No one who kept faithfully giving 30% of his income to this Work has ever left. (2) No one who has kept his heart in the Work has ever allowed the truth to influence him to leave. (3) Everybody who attempts to put his personal relationship with God and obedience to him ahead of this GREAT WORK-and God's government on earth-always ends up leaving sooner or later. So hold fast to the faith I once delivered you. Don't forget, God binds in heaven what my church-even in unrealized error-has bound on earth!

Brethren, I'm deeply concerned for your well-being. Nothing else is on my mind-except the delights of marriage. So keep praying and PAYING, and you'll be blessed.

MODERN MODERN MOLOCH

Human Sacrifice
in the Armstrong Church

"So the child is a vegetable and can't move anything except her eyes and is lying there when she could have had a normal life. It's too late. You can't go back and change that. Now, does God lay that at the door of the entire church? Is that Mr. Herbert Armstrong's fault?" (Garner Ted Armstrong, ministerial meeting, March 7, 1974.)

The preceding tragedy occurred after a young couple with a very sick child decided, based on the Worldwide Church of God's teaching and their minister's advice, to abandon confidence in modern medical science and instead "trust in God." The consequences of that decision were, as Garner Ted indicated, not only tragic but quite permanent. Unfortunately, the case is not an isolated one.

I recently asked a former high-ranking minister of the Worldwide Church of God if he knew personally of any cases of church members dying as a result of the Armstrong healing doctrine. This is what he told me:

"Yes, absolutely. Many. I can specifically recall one case that plagues me even yet and that's ---'s little boy, five years old, who had spinal meningitis. Dr. McReynolds, the Seventh-day Adventist doctor who worked with the church, was advising them to take the child to the hospital and try a new treatment that was 90% to 100% effective. The people asked me what they should do, and I kept saying, 'Read the booklet [Herbert Armstrong's healing booklet], follow God, and have faith.' So they did. They remained faithful to the doctrine of the church. I didn't tell them to do it, but I sure encouraged them. And the little boy died. I remember it so well because it was such a tragic incident, and Dr. McReynolds was so angry. He just flailed at me and said, 'That's just an absolute waste of human life, and there's no reason for it,' and he just let me have it.

"I know of literally scores or hundreds of cases like this. There's no way to determine the exact number of people who were affected. We're talking about a forty-year period. I think thousands actually died over the years as a result of this doctrine."

Faith, Physicians, and Monkey Pus. As with so many other doctrines of the Worldwide Church of God, the healing doctrine's official codification took the form of a booklet written by the church's founder Herbert W. Armstrong. Titled Does God Heal Today?, the 21-page publication (copyrighted in 1952) was distributed through Ambassador College, the church's educational arm, for almost 20 years.

Herbert Armstrong answered his booklet's title question by saying that God never changes. He healed in the past, and he heals today. Unfortunately, his booklet went much further than simply extolling God's love and omnipotence. The fanatical nature of his teachings can be easily seen in the booklet's subheads: "God the Only Real Physician," "Scripture Labels Other Modes of Healing Idolatry," "Medicine Condemned as Idolatry," "The Pagan Origin of Medicine."

Strangely, according to Herbert Armstrong's way of thinking, modern medicine should play virtually no part in healing the sick. He claimed the real purpose of physicians was "to prevent sickness, not heal after you are sick!" (Does God Heal Today?, p. 15.) Further, he taught that trusting in medical science is a sin!

"We take the broken bread unworthily if, and when, we take it at communion service and then put our trust in doctors and medicines, instead of in Christ—thus putting another god before Him!" (p. 14; the excessive usage of capitalized and italicized words in WCG literature is omitted from the quotes used in this article.)

What then was the sick Christian to do? Herbert's answer is found on page 19:

"Here's God's instruction to you, today, if you are ill. If we are to live by every Word of God, we should obey this Scripture. God does not say call your family physician. Instead, notice:

"'Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil...!' (Jas. 5:14-15).

"He does not say, call the doctors and let them give medicines and drugs, and God will cause the medicines and drugs and dope to cure you. Yet that seems to be the way many professing Christians believe, because it's what they practice.

"Instead God says call God's ministers. And let them pray, anointing with oil...."

But what if that alone didn't work? The little booklet answered that one too:

"Don't pay any attention to how you feel, or what you see, after you have called upon God for healing. Just know you are to have it-and that's that!" (p. 20.)

Sadly, for many who followed this advice to the letter, the results were exactly "that's that"-they died. (In fact, Herbert Armstrong's own wife and son Dick died, preferring to forgo normal medical attention and instead trust God for healing.) Some, of course, were "healed." But many who did survive a serious illness without medical assistance did so with much needless pain and suffering.

To the suffering Christians who were tempted to call a physician, Herbert, in another booklet titled What Is Faith?, offered this advice:

"Your healing, God has promised, shall be according to your faith. Faith is trusting God to do that which He has not yet done. After the healing is completed, you no longer need to exercise faith.... but your faith must remain firm and steadfast, and patient, regardless of what you see or feel, until God actually heals you, as He has promised to do....

"The instant you yield to the devil's influence over your human nature and render a verdict that God will not do what He promised just because He has not done it yet-that moment you make God out a liar-you lose all faith in God; and you thereupon break your part of the agreement, which is to have faith and keep on having faith, and trusting God, and relying upon Him, until He performs what He promised..." (pp. 12-13).

Herbert Armstrong's writings constituted official doctrine to the Worldwide Church of God. But he was not the only church writer to teach on this subject. One typical article that appeared on the subject of healing was "The Origin of Medical Science" by Donald G. Wofford, a member of the news department of Ambassador College. It was published in the October 1959 issue of The Good News, then a church magazine for baptized members. The article was also distributed during the next ten years as a reprint for those requesting it.

The author of this article found great significance in the fact that ancient Egypt, Greece, and Rome had physicians who in many cases used techniques somewhat similar to modern methods (i.e., drugs and surgery). He also attempted to connect the practices of modern-day doctors with the techniques of ancient idol-worshipping physicians:

"Baalzebub, the god of medicine, was the 'god of dung' or the 'god of filth.' Ancient physicians guided by their god Baalzebub used filth to try to prevent or cure disease, just as today doctors inject people with polio vaccine made from monkey pus.... Haven't most of you had pus and other filth put into your systems in the form of diphtheria, tetanus, smallpox, polio or other 'shots'?

"Baalzebub was called by various names in various parts of the world. In ancient Greece he was known as Aesculapius and 'appeared in the form of a serpent'-a type of Satan!... Even in ancient times men believed God worked through the doctors with their knives and drugs. But they did not realize that this was not the true God of the universe, but it was 'the god of this world' (II Cor. 4:4), Satan the Devil. He appeared as a serpent in the garden of Eden and deceived Eve into taking of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Yes, Satan the Devil is the founder and perpetrator of modern medical science!" (p. 6.)

The article concluded with a sobering warning:

"...(Rev. 21:7-8). The word here translated 'sorcerers' comes from the Greek pharmakeus which means one who prepares or administers drugs-'a druggist' or 'a pharmacist' or a 'poisoner.'... Drugs are poisons and every 'poisoner' is going to end up in the lake of fire unless he repents.

"Either we trust God to heal our diseases... or trust in medical science-which won't help us and which God terms 'sorcery,' 'witchcraft' and 'idolatry'-and suffer agony now and an excruciating death-the second death in the lake of fire" (p. 8).

The Wofford article was not an isolated example of this type of writing, nor was it in any way considered heresy by the Armstrong organization. Its sentiments were in complete harmony with Herbert Armstrong's healing booklet. The same fanaticism on medicine and healing was disseminated for years in other articles, sermons, letters, and especially in private counseling by WCG ministers.

For instance, notice the following quotes, all taken from articles written by WCG ministers:

"You can go to doctors for your healing if you want to-the Church of God advises you that this is not the way to be healed. It is just not within the power of another human being to forgive your sin and heal your body!" (David Jon Hill, The Good News, Aug. 1964, p. 8.)

"Jesus conferred this power on His Apostles and they continued-after His death-to heal in this same miraculous way. Throngs of people were raised up whole and sound because of the divine intervention of God. Those who asked in faith were healed!

"The ministry of God has the very same power today.... You can have faith God will heal you! But You May Die! (Clint C. Zimmerman, The Good News, Feb. 1965, p. 3.)

"To rely on any foods, supplements, medicines, drugs, knives, or even on fasting, for healing (and none of these can, ever have, or ever will heal!) is to break the commandment against idolatry!" (Garner Ted Armstrong, The Good News, June 1964, pp. 4, 22.)

Obviously, to church members the doctrine of healing had many ramifications. Members, for instance, often saw no need in carrying health insurance. Parents often refused to have their children vaccinated for school. (Just recently during a severe measles outbreak among children in the Los Angeles area, many WCG parents refused to allow their children to be immunized against measles.) Church members would not contribute to the March of Dimes, the Heart Fund, or the Red Cross because they felt these organizations used "the devil's way" of medicine. Many members even went so far as to refuse X-ray checkups or Novocain when getting dental work performed. Ironically, dental work itself was okay-one of the many inconsistencies in the church's practice of the doctrine. At one time, members were even advised that they shouldn't take aspirin-because it was a drug-but members were often encouraged by certain ministers to take vitamins to solve their health problems.

The doctrine also had a profound effect on those converts who happened to earn their living in any facet of the medical profession. In almost all cases, for instance, registered nurses employed by hospitals were required to quit their jobs and find other employment before they could be baptized. The same applied to medical technicians, pharmacists, and, as one 1964 official church directive shows, to all hospital employees including janitors and gardeners! Physicians who joined the church could continue to practice, but only in a limited way since surgery and drugs were taboo. A number of physicians did join the church over the years and some were actually employed by it to function in a limited capacity. I personally heard Garner Ted Armstrong on a number of occasions smugly comment that when members of the press asked him if he believed in doctors he would reply, "Sure I believe in doctors. We even have a number on the church's payroll." He of course, would neglect to mention the large number of prohibitions placed on doctors by the church.

Recently, one informant provided me with photostat copies of numerous "visit cards" that the Worldwide Church of God has on file. (At my request, the names of the interviewees were removed to protect their privacy.) "Visit cards" were the reports ministers filled out after counseling with church members and potential members. I have seen a number which clearly indicate that ministers, on many occasions, attempted to offer medical advice that only a doctor would be qualified to give. Instances of spiritual intimidation are also evident on these cards. For example, before me I have copies of visit cards one minister filled out after counseling sessions with a prospective member in 1970. The minister wrote this after his first session with the individual:

"Has a severe asthmatic condition. Attitude toward church and healing very good, but dependent on daily use of medication to forestall attacks. Very difficult situation."

The prospective member was advised to make a study of faith and healing. After the second visit the minister wrote:

"Counseled for baptism. Advised to wait pending outcome of decision on asthmatic drugs."

After the third visit he reported:

"Making excellent progress toward getting rid of asthmatic drugs. Has taken no shots in several weeks. Approved for baptism."

Watching Out for the D.A. By continuing to embrace its bizarre healing doctrine, the Armstrong organization exposed itself to both serious legal difficulties and notoriety. Secrecy, therefore, enshrouded the church's belief in healing. Ministers were continually admonished by headquarters to use great care in the handling of medical problems.

The church's legal department helped prepare a list of instructions given to ministers in the late 1960s to help them handle these problems. In many ways the list of instructions, titled "How to Deal With Health and Medical Problems," amounted to nothing more than a crash course in how to lie effectively. The following excerpts shed a great deal of light on the methods used by the Armstrong organization in keeping both legal authorities and the news media ignorant of what was really occurring:

"I. Advising on Health Problems. Caution must always be exercised in advising on a person's health problems, lest you be found to be practicing medicine.... If a person practices medicine without a license, and the patient should die, the wrongdoer could be prosecuted for manslaughter or murder! Now you can see why extreme caution must be exercised in advising brethren in God's Church concerning their health problems...

"II. How Prosecution Begins in Case of Death. ...As this type of case is not so well known as the obvious type of crime such as murder or robbery, there is always the possibility that he [the D.A.] might choose not to prosecute. This is the type of circumstance where a 'contact' is invaluable. The prosecutor might easily be persuaded by a friend to drop the matter so long as the newspapers have not made major news of it....

"Just Take Out the Tubes"

letters on healing

In our files are numerous letters which document the disastrous consequences of one of the most regrettable aspects of the "Ambassador Experience"-the Armstrong doctrine of divine healing. The following excerpts and condensations represent only a few of those letters.

...my wife became very ill with chronic ulcerated colitis. After she had lost considerable amounts of blood, the local deacon granted us permission to take her to the hospital for transfusions. Well, she was there about two months and the minister told me on the sly one evening at the Spokesman's Club meeting that he'd just take out the tubes, stop all medications, and accept the resurrection, that is, just let her die. This was after I had told him about the prognosis by the attending doctor: She either had to have immediate surgery or she'd die.

I never told my wife at the time about what the minister had said and she went ahead with the operation. It was just a matter of time before she made a successful recovery ....

I fell into disfavor as a consequence of the operation and was badmouthed in [church] services. But I just ignored it and accepted what they had to dish out.

Louisiana

It seemed that all too many members were constantly on the alert to spot someone faltering in their faith or committing some sort of unchristian act, like taking an aspirin. This brings a very sore point to mind concerning WCG policy on healing. Many people suffered needlessly while headquarters personnel took care of themselves. I recall one very grave incident where a young girl was suffering from appendicitis. Many prayers were said for her by members and visits were made by the ministry for anointing and counseling. In a serious situation like this the counseling would also include a warning that if the child were to die (which she did, it ruptured) to be prepared with a story for the authorities so as not to get the church involved. The church was to be protected at all costs (even lying). I can remember getting a sermon about just this type of situation. I also remember riding with a local elder to visit someone who was sick at the feast. The elder was telling me about how sick his daughter was and that he had prepared a story for the local authorities should she die. (She didn't in this case.)

former Deacon New Jersey

...If you saw a doctor, took medicine, entered a hospital or had surgery, Your name was not mentioned in church and hence you got no prayers or sympathy. I desperately needed prayers and visits from those I thought to be Christian people. If you had a kink in your back and were not able to attend services for a week or so, it was played up big as a bad illness from the pulpit, you were anointed [by the minister], and lo and behold the next sabbath you were there smiling and healed

Illinois

Regarding divine healing, we were admonished to trust in God, and well we should, but when our first son was sick near death, the local minister told us to take him in to a hospital. Apparently now our faith in God didn't matter, only how it would look for the WCG (actual local minister's comment) if our son died. We took him to the hospital and he lived. Maybe God in his mercy was trying to show us then that these people from the WCG only "healed the hurt of my people slightly," as it says in Jeremiah 6:14....

Canada

...I have almost lost my eye sight. I needed surgery but didn't have it done because we were told it wasn't right while the Armstrongs did what they pleased... I have personally known people [in the WCG] who have let their children die when they could have taken them to a doctor and saved them.

California

I have read a copy of Ambassador Review which was brought over by Mr. Charles Hunting while on a visit he had with a group of us. Being one of the many who suffered through the wrong decisions made by the ministers in the WCG resulting in the untimely death of my wife at the age of 34 years and my having to give up employment to attend to my two children then aged 1 and 4 years, I am glad to know that there are people who are courageous enough to publish the facts concerning the WCG.

Northern Ireland

One thing about Ambassador College: If you want to feel guilty, filled with dread, negative, superstitious, and generally fearful, then to be under their administration is the answer.

I almost died twice because of their fanatical nonbiblical teachings on healing. Once with appendicitis. This occurred not long after being told that it would be idolatry and a compromise of my faith to seek the help of a medical professional, and if I weakened or didn't rely on God for healing I would suffer eternal death. The second occurrence was when I injured myself lifting and acquired a hernia. I sought the ministry three or four times during a period of 6½ years and repeatedly was told that to have an operation was out of the question, due to the fact that God could intervene.

England

On entering the WCG I was told we did not need health insurance as "faith in God was our insurance." My husband became disabled in 1972 and consequently instead of being eligible for free coverage until death, we are currently paying $69.50 per month for same.

Washington

After nearly 14 years in the WCG and another year with a similar group, I am left financially and physically broken. But I accept the responsibility for it since I allowed myself to be mesmerized by the Armstrongs and later by R. C. Cole.... What is there left to say? Of course my family and I went through certain traumas. We watched a person [in the WCG] waste to death rather than go to a physician. Another young person died of appendicitis rather than going to see a doctor. I sit here in continual pain and hemorrhaging because years ago I was "afraid" to visit a physician, and today I can't afford it.

But are we so different from any of the others, many of whom have suffered even worse?

Oregon

"III. Suggestions for Avoiding Prosecution... Don't say anything!... Don't mention divine healing.... If legal circumstances or wisdom demands that you answer, then be succinct and discreet.... If the investigator should know something about anointing with oil, there is no need to assume that he knows that the practice of medicine is held in disrepute. It might be good to draw an analogy to the Catholic Church, and the fact that, 'We, as they, anoint with oil.'...

"Do not mention faith healing under any circumstances.... Deny any knowledge that the ailment was serious. Or if this cannot be done, then: (a) Place the time when the seriousness first became apparent as close to the time of death as possible. (b) Take the shortest period of time possible for the length of illness. (c) If the question of a doctor should arise, it might be met with, 'If I had any idea that she was that sick and that a doctor could have healed her, I certainly would have called him immediately.'

"Befriend a doctor with at least an affinity for our religious beliefs.... a doctor might recommend some course of medical treatment that he feels would absolutely save the person's life, but which we would consider absolutely inimical to God's law. If the person died, then the doctor would be a powerful witness for the prosecution not only to prove gross neglect but Proximate cause as well. Also, unless the doctor held an affinity for our religious beliefs, he could contact the District Attorney if the patient was a minor and request that a court-appointed guardian be named. The court could then take custody of the child, and the guardian consent to such a course of medical treatment... When rejecting medical service or drugs, predicate the refusal on the the grounds of risk or potential adverse results.... If the matter is serious enough and the particular doctor sees no possibility of adverse effect but only 100 percent success, then the patient or parent can merely state they would like to obtain further consultation and advice on the. subject...

"During the steps when an illness becomes serious, keep as many people out of the house as possible. Do not tell outsiders about the seriousness of an illness or your belief in divine healing. The more people that have knowledge of the subject, or are present during the final stages, the more potential adverse witnesses you have. Only one antagonistic person, with a sufficient amount of first-hand knowledge, can furnish enough testimony upon which to pass a successful prosecution....

"Do not attend an informal, requested hearing at the District Attorney's office, unless unusual circumstances dictate otherwise. A strong general rule is that a parent should never go to the office of the District Attorney to discuss such a case.... In one case the prosecutor admitted that he could never have tried the case without the statements given by the mother. After the child had died, she stopped in his office, at his request, and told him everything about the case. She even signed a statement to that effect. She also made statements to certain officials in the Coroner's office. They proved certain facts that he could not have proven otherwise.

"Don't involve the church.... When brought into contact with medical men, be friendly, but firm. Be careful not to mention the Bible, religion, or the Church of God.

"IV. What to Do in Case of an Untimely Death. When there is an untimely death in the Church with overtones of divine healing having been relied upon, prompt action is necessary in order to avoid prosecution and bad publicity... the local minister should immediately contact Headquarters by telephone and notify us of the circumstances... After receiving this information, either Mr. Rader or Mr. Helge [WCG attorneys] can consult with the local minister by telephone, and ascertain if there is potential criminal liability or bad publicity for the church member, the minister or the church."

Around 1968, to further conceal from the public its position on medicine, the Worldwide Church of God began to cease offering the Does God Heal Today? booklet on the church's "World Tomorrow" broadcast. For a time, if a listener were to somehow find out about the booklet, it was sent, but before long even this practice was discontinued. Eventually, those who requested it were simply informed that it was "out of print." Those of us who were ministerial students at Ambassador College in 1970, however, were still able to get copies of it from the college press, as were field ministers.

The booklet may have been declared "out of print," but the doctrine it taught was most certainly still in effect. A late 1969 letter to the entire United States ministry written by Roderick Meredith, then director of Church Administration, contained this statement:

"Many, many others have serious cases of cancer or are afflicted with other serious ailments. And, as I mentioned recently, this seems to be a growing trend in the Church. Although the booklet on healing in its present form has been cancelled, we should continue to preach this doctrine to the converted members of God's Church with earnestness and fervency!"

An Exercise in Doublethink. With few exceptions the Worldwide Church's ministry continued to preach and privately teach the healing doctrine exactly as Herbert Armstrong always had. The absence of a written doctrinal statement, however, did have an effect on members. Some began to study the subject on their own, and a number of "true believers" began to wonder whether the Armstrongs were not in fact watering down their healing doctrine.

The doubts increased when, in early 1970, Herbert Armstrong admitted that Roderick C. Meredith, the director of Church Administration, had recently undergone surgery to repair a detached retina. To many believers this seemed inconsistent with official church doctrine, and Meredith spent no small amount of time attempting to explain away the incongruity. He claimed repeatedly that it was only "repair surgery" that had been performed and that he had not looked to the medical profession for healing. In a letter to the church's ministry, dated March 9, 1970, he wrote:

"We knew God could, of course, heal the eye. But Mr. Armstrong felt that in this case it involved something we could do and probably should do under the present circumstances. Therefore, I arranged to get the best specialist available through a special eye institute attached to UCLA and had this repair surgery performed..." (p. 7).

Then on April 8, 1970, he wrote this regarding his eye operation and how the ministers should explain it to church members:

"In explaining this matter, there are two principles to stress: first, we should never cut into the body in order to cut out part of the temple of God's Holy Spirit-that is, remove part of the liver, appendix, etc. Secondly, we are not to operate in order to 'heal' a disease of any sort" (p. 8).

Church members could not help but be totally confused. When, for instance, would one have surgery performed where the goal was not healing? And, how many types of surgery are not in reality for repair purposes? Church headquarters offered no concrete answers. Nor did Herbert Armstrong offer a change of doctrine to his church. By 1973, however, he did come to believe that the old booklet needed to be redone.

The Promise of More to Come. At the ministerial conference of January 1973 a tape recorder caught Herbert Armstrong making these statements:

"We have a booklet on healing that we have called in and stopped circulating.... The information that's contained [in the healing booklet] is all right. I haven't read it for years and years, but I don't think I'm wrong about that. I think the information it has is all right. But it isn't properly written..."

"I have no doubt in my mind that what is called medical science today has merely come on down to our time. It's the same old ancient thing that came out of paganism. It is not something that our God has supplied and heals through. It is something that the God of this world, Satan, has supplied, and he's got his little emblem doubly on their [the medical profession's] insignia-the two snakes..."

"I don't think we ought to put in writing, for example, that any member in such a job [as registered nurse] ought to give it up, because some reporter would get hold of that-he could make something of it. But we can privately tell our people things like that. ..."

"And while we have been practicing healing and we've had some miraculous examples of healing, for every one of those, I don't know whether there have been 10 or 100 others where we have not had it. Now there is one thing that we do not do and we can't do and this is to just come out and say in any way that would be open or public-and you have to be careful about even saying this in one of our own church services because it may be more public than you realize-that we forbid people to go to a doctor or to take medicine."

Herbert W. Armstrong worked on the new booklet for the entirety of 1973. Then on January 3, 1974, he declared:

"I have the booklet on healing almost complete, and it goes a little more thoroughly into these things than the other edition. The doctrine hasn't changed one iota. We have to clarify a lot of things about when do you go to a doctor and when don't you and a few things like that... don't go around doubting and thinking that maybe the church is wrong. Too many have been doing that, and you who do are the servants of Satan."

Herbert simply refused to believe that he could have been wrong for so many years on the healing doctrine and other doctrines such as divorce and remarriage. It was this attitude of obstinateness with regard to doctrinal change which more than anything else brought about the church crisis of February 1974 when dozens of ministers and thousands of laymembers defected from the Worldwide Church of God to form the Associated Churches of God.

During the special ministerial conference of May 1974, the impression was given that a clarification of the church's healing doctrine would soon be made following a period of research. Then, in the September 23, 1974, issue of the church's ministerial bulletin, there appeared an article on healing by Herman L. Hoeh, a headquarters evangelist and for years a right-hand man to Herbert Armstrong. To the casual observer unfamiliar with the Armstrong organization's public relations methods, the article appears vague but innocuous. A casual reading might even leave one with the misimpression that the church had changed its decades-old position on medicine. The first half of the two-page article titled "Healing: Teaching and Administration" mentions a number of modern medical tools: X-rays, antibiotics, insulin, digitalis, and open heart surgery. None were actually condemned, yet none were clearly approved within the context of the church's teachings as found in Does God Heal Today?

Possibly what is most significant about the article is not what it said but what it didn't say. Only two months before, in July 1974, the Foundation for Biblical Research had published its 39-page booklet Healing, Medicine, Physicians. The booklet, written by the former head of Ambassador College's department of theology Dr. Ernest L. Martin, thoroughly debunked all the essential points of the Armstrong healing doctrine and took a sensible position on the subject, not unlike that held by the vast majority of Christians today.

The booklet was published and read by literally thousands of members and former members of the Worldwide Church of God. Yet Dr. Hoeh's article did not even mention it, nor did he refute its arguments. And, nowhere did he admit that the church's teachings as found in Does God Heal Today? were unfounded, biblically incorrect, or dangerous to the life and health of any who take them seriously. It is also important to realize that nowhere in his article did Herman Hoeh instruct the ministry to actually encourage laymembers who are ill to seek competent medical assistance. Instead, midway through the article we find these statements:

"God, who made everything, designed the interaction of chemicals in the human body to support life; but the most educated men are mere babes in understanding these interactions. How much better and easier to trust God for divine healing than to rely on the limitations of human skills. Perhaps more than anything else, healing expresses the deeply personal relationship between an individual and his God...."

"Mr. Armstrong points out that the individual's faith and the minister's faith are paramount in how far one trusts God, or how far one entrusts himself to men with their varying degree of skills and knowledge (p. 495)."

The tone of these statements is obviously less fanatical than what is found in the "out-of-print" healing booklet; yet the meaning is not at all different. While possibly giving some in the general public the illusion that the church was changing its position on medicine, the article not only put up a smokescreen around the essence of the Armstrong doctrine, but it also totally ignored the arguments of those who were most effectively assailing it.

Interestingly, the editor's comment at the head of the article and the article's concluding paragraph promised further clarification in the form of a new booklet by Herbert Armstrong:

"Editor's Note: A new booklet on healing, written by Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong, is scheduled to go to press some time after the Feast of Tabernacles. ..."

"The new booklet is a great step forward. All ministers will be sent advance copies."

The promised booklet was never distributed. In fact, it never even came off the press. The reason? A few leading WCG officials, according to informed sources, collaborated to keep the booklet manuscript in limbo, lest it become another embarrassing liability.

Almost two years later during the ministerial conference in May 1976 a "Statement on Healing" was issued to those attending. The brief, typed statement was less than half the size of Dr. Hoeh's short 1974 article. It was never published in any official church publication and has not been made available to laymembers in printed form. Though more liberal in tone than anything ever printed before on the subject, it in no way repudiated the contents of Does God Heal Today? Significantly, it contained no indication of having been authorized by the church's founder and Pastor General, Herbert W. Armstrong. He was not present at the conference when the statement was expounded, and there is good reason to believe that not only was he unaware of its contents but that he would also have disapproved of its tone had he read it.

In the July 1977 issue of The Plain Truth, Herbert Armstrong wrote an article, actually Part I of a series, entitled

"The Plain Truth About Healing." It contains no mention of his original booklet on the subject, the doctrinal disputes of the last few years, or the "Statement on Healing" of 1976. It does not mention the 1% to 10% success rate the church has had by practicing divine healing, nor does it mention the story of the little girl who was crippled as a result of her parents' confidence in Herbert's teaching. Instead, of all things, the article contains Herbert Armstrong's interpretation of Christian history from 27 to 100 A.D. He concludes the article by promising to get back on the track in future installments and discuss healing. We are also promised a booklet (sound familiar?). A number of individuals who are privy to the contents of the series' manuscript have informed us that the series offers little promise of doctrinal reform or clarifications. Barring a church crisis in the next few months, the series will prove to be nothing more than a vague rehash of the old healing doctrine, carefully edited to avoid notoriety and legal difficulties.

With only a few exceptions, virtually no one at the church's Pasadena headquarters now denies himself or his family needed medical attention in favor of divine healing. Yet, many laymembers worldwide, for want of a clear directive from their "apostolic" leader, do deny themselves and their families needed medical attention and are still clinging to the church's established healing doctrine, as it was taught them. Today, few if any Worldwide Church executives and ministers would publicly acknowledge belief in the official Armstrong healing doctrine as found in Does God Heal Today? Yet, the church's Pastor General has refused to openly acknowledge the errors of the doctrine or clarify the church's present position by publishing a clear, authorized doctrinal statement. That is very regrettable.

The amount of damage already done by the Armstrong healing doctrine is immense. There is, of course, no way for us to know exactly what WCG ministers are teaching today in private. We do, however, continue to hear reports of individuals still putting their faith in Herbert Armstrong's erroneous doctrine. Very recently, there was a case in Washington where a woman who was a Worldwide Church of God member died as a result of denying herself competent medical attention.

What Should Be Done. Ambassador Report, would like to see the leadership of the Worldwide Church of God discontinue its perpetuation of anti-medical bias, superstition, administration secrecy, and biblical misunderstanding. The Armstrong church is trying to give the general public the impression that it is a truly modern, rational, and humanitarian organization that has rejected the fanaticism and foolishness of its past. If that is the case, then why doesn't it immediately make public a detailed, clear, printed statement of the church's doctrine of healing, fully authorized by the church's Pastor General? Why doesn't it publicly repudiate the errors in its old booklet, Does God Heal Today?, and explain clearly which of the booklet's statements are accurate or inaccurate and why?

Ambassador College has in its computer files the names of many thousands who were sent copies of Does God Heal Today? We propose that each individual who has received that booklet, as well as every living church member and former member, be informed through an official letter that that booklet contains statements that have resulted in biblical misunderstanding and advice that, when practiced, has often proven not only harmful but fatal.

We further propose that every effort be made to locate those who have suffered as a result of the organization's healing doctrine. In many cases no apology could possibly be adequate to those who have suffered as a result of following the church's teachings and advice. Yet, we feel that an apology is an appropriate place to begin. We would then like to see the Worldwide Church of God offer medical assistance and financial compensation wherever appropriate.

Finally, we suggest that the Worldwide Church of God reassess its priorities with regard to the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation's dispersal of church funds to organizations such as the March of Dimes, the American Cancer Society, and the United Way. These organizations do wonderful work and perform much needed services. However, charity should begin at home. For years, the Worldwide Church of God condemned these organizations as being "part of the world" and encouraged its members not to contribute to these organizations but instead give their money to "God's work." Thousands did just that. While denying themselves and their families medical services, health insurance plans, and savings for medical emergencies, they contributed and sacrificed to the point of self-deprivation so that "God's work" could survive its repeated financial crises. Now many of these same people need medical assistance but do not have the means because of the financial sacrifices they made over the years. For the AICF to attempt to improve the church's image by dispensing church funds to the charities the church formerly condemned and at the same time ignore the plight of so many of those who for years supported the organization is nothing less than a mockery of the most fundamental teachings of Christ.

Maybe it is too much to expect an organization to change after 40 years of calloused disregard for the welfare of its members. But I believe it is time that the Armstrong organization be less concerned with its public image and more concerned with serving its people in the true Christian spirit.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

The TEN COMMANDMENTS Revised At Ambassador College

The Armstrongs and their myrmidons have spared no effort to inform people that they believe in and uphold the Ten Commandments. However, they never state which version they're referring to. There is the King James version that they teach to church members and students and the "Reviled Slandered version" they themselves practice. We are publishing the "Reviled Slandered version" so Ambassador College (AC) personnel will know which set of rules their leaders are playing by:

- I. You shall have no other gods before the Lord-but the doctrines of Herbert Armstrong demand equal time. For it is written in Herbert's booklets that only those who put Herbert's "Work" first in their lives will inherit the Kingdom.
- II. You shall not make a graven image-unless it enhances the beauty of AC's campus. Once you have made a sculpted image, you can't bow down to it. Bootlicking, however, is not idolatry and is perhaps advisable at AC as long as you don't literally drop to your knees.
- III. You shall not take God's name in vain or misuse it-unless done in Quest/77- though it's all right to attach God's name to unbiblical prophecies and to doctrines for which there is no proof.
- IV. Remember the sabbath to keep it holy. The seventh day is the day you must attend church services even if a ding-a-ling is preaching. But remember, you can't work on that day, nor can your manservant, though it was okay to permit Gentile construction firms to erect the Ambassador Auditorium and the Student Center on the sabbath. It's okay to let outside promoters use the campus on the sabbath both to seat people and to park cars for the Rose Parade-so long as you're cut in on the profits. Also, it's fine for apostles to fly on the sabbath and to give lavish banquets for Asian dictators on that day.

V. Honor your father and mother, though starving parents are no shame to a person whose tithes honor Herbert first.

VI. You shall not kill, but shafting, lateraling, and character assassination are fine-if done for the good of Herbert's "Work."

VII. You shall not commit adultery unless you are pastor-ranked or higher. Adultery by low echelon ministers and laymen should be revealed to church administration and recorded and filed, but adultery by pastors or evangelists must be covered up for the "good of the church."

VIII. You shall not steal, but it is ethical to employ fear to extort money from people who can't really afford to give. It's all right to tell people they must tithe or they will end up in the lake of fire-especially if "God's apostle" needs the money-even though the New Testament clearly shows Christians did not tithe to the church.

IX. You shall not bear false witness, but to cover up an apostle's or an evangelist's incompetence, it's permissible to slant facts, quote only sources that agree with you, or tell people only as much as you want them to know while indicating you are divulging all the pertinent details.

X. You shall not covet anything that is your neighbor's, including his wife, but if she consents, that's her husband's problem.

New Commandment: You shall love your neighbor as yourself-especially if he has something on you.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Press Reactions

The American press's reaction to our last issue of Ambassador Report was both enthusiastic and encouraging. It is impossible for us to know exactly how many newspapers have carried stories about Ambassador Report, but we suspect the number is around two hundred or more. We do know that articles very favorable to us (and not so favorable to the Armstrong-Rader group) have recently appeared in the Los Angeles Times, the Pasadena Star News, the Minneapolis Star, the Denver Post, the New York Times, the National Examiner, the Idaho Statesman, the San Antonio News, the Atlanta Journal, the Houston Post, the Pittsburgh Post Gazette, the San Francisco Chronicle, the Sarasota Herald Tribune, the Fort Wayne News Sentinel, the Shreveport Journal, the Tri-City Herald, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, the (New Jersey) Herald News, the Boston Globe, the Montreal Gazette, and the Washington Post, to name just a few. (Please don't hesitate to send us any news clippings about the Report from your area.)

Excellent reviews of our last issue have also appeared in a number of respected Christian publications including Christianity Today (November 18, 1977) and Eternity (February 1978). A few not-so-Christian publications have also found the Report more than a little interesting. The managing editor of the American Atheist called, praised the Report, and ordered copies for his staff. "Born again" Hustler publisher, Larry Flynt, wrote us a personal note of congratulations and ordered a dozen copies for friends. The press's feelings toward Ambassador Report have been in many cases more than congratulatory. Russell Chandler of the Los Angeles Times wrote: "Ambassador Report is the first concerted attempt to document many of the accusations." Willmar Thorkelson of the Minneapolis Star said of the Report, "It may be the most devastating expose of a religious group ever published."

Besides the attention we have received from the press, we have also been avored by excellent media coverage. Many of our readers have reported hearing about the Report on local radio and television news programs. Some stations even called us and broadcast our phone interviews. Co-publishers Bob Geringer and John Trechak have appeared on a number of radio talk shows and on NBC-TV's "Odyssey" program. Bob Geringer and Co-publisher Len Zola were even invited to speak before the Unitarian Church's congregation in Pasadena.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Ambassador Reactions

Ambassador College's official reaction to the last issue of Ambassador Report was both predictable and pathetic. Within days after it was mailed, Stanley Rader, attorney for Ambassador College, began parroting the traditional denials. He told the Los Angeles Times that the information contained in the 92-page issue was "without foundation in fact." To the Pasadena Star News he said that it was "total, total falsehood." Although not referring directly to Ambassador Report, The Worldwide News quoted AC attorney, Ralph Helge, as saying "certain dissident alumni and former church members are spreading wild, false, and unlawful information."

While labeling us as liars, the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) gave no proof, logical defense, or specifics about what we are supposedly lying about. Significantly, the WCG has not sued us for libel, despite claims that they are planning to. The November 21, 1977, Worldwide News reported:

"Mr. Rader said the Work and all individuals connected with it who are disparaged will exercise their rights, as did Paul his Roman Citizenship, to the fullest extent of the law."

Rader isn't the only one who's threatened us with a lawsuit. Garner Ted Armstrong made this comment in the Nov. 7, 1977 "Pastor's Report":

"...[the Work] will take] appropriate legal action in the future, so that those who would seek to destroy this Work by such nefarious schemes can finally bear the full responsibility for their actions.... The Work and all individuals connected with it are disparaged by the Report and will exercise their rights... to the fullest extent of the law, choosing their defendants, their actions, their issues and their forums to redress the wrongs and to punish the irresponsible who would attack God's work."

In November, Rader told the New York Times and Time magazine that Ambassador College (AC) would soon be suing the publishers of the Report. Yet, five full months have elapsed since the publication of the Report, and we have still not been sued for libel. The fact is, Rader knows that legal action against us by the WCG or AC would be suicidal for him, AC, and the WCG. Rader is well aware of the fact that once sued we would, by law, have the power to subpoena any documents we need to defend ourselves. As a result of this, vastly more damaging information than that contained in our last issue would be proven and become public record. We would not fail to publish our findings.

Cornwall's Cynical Comfort

Although Ted Armstrong and Stanley Rader are afraid to specifically address the issues raised in the Report, one individual is to be commended for his courage—Henry Cornwall, the secretary/treasurer of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation and director of the Worldwide Advertising Agency. He has probably done more for promotion of the Report among the ministry of the WCG than anyone else.

Cornwall published a newsletter to the WCG ministry that he called the Media File. In the second issue, dated November 1977, he opened with:

"... I was unaware that the publication Ambassador Report was going to hit the streets and create such demand on my time that I practically would have to push almost everything else aside.

"I have been advised by Dr. Robert Kuhn that Mr. Ronald Dart has advised Mr. Garner Ted Armstrong that the Ambassador Report is of no consequence and no concern to the brethren, the ministry, the Church, or to the world. I take exception to that comment... because I am on the firing line and although I have not yet heard from the ministry I know at least how vitally concerned the brethren and the world are.

"I have therefore decided in this personal to address myself to Ambassador Report and give you [the ministry] the answers.... I must mention that before I spoke with anyone I consulted with Mr. Rader.... He helped me to formulate some of the answers. . . ."

In this issue Cornwall does indeed address the Report. Not only was he kind enough to print a picture of the cover of the AR, but he also reprinted a copy of the letter we sent to all radio and television station managers giving our address and telephone number. He went on to discuss a number of articles in our publication. The following are his comments about specific articles:

BOBBY FISCHER SPEAKS OUT

"Mr. Stanley Rader is now moving on the offensive on Bobby Fischer's behalf to redress the wrongs [?] that he has suffered in the publication of comments defamatory of him [?] and the Church. Mr. Rader and Mr. Helge are donating their services [while on church salary] as they donate their services to others in need. "

ACCREDITATION

"The article on accreditation contains many defamatory and false statements.... It is Mr. Rader's opinion at this time that the College will be accredited after the next visit of the accreditation team in February now that these false issues have been eliminated." [Editor: It is now March. Is AC accredited?]

FEDERAL HANDOUT-VISTA DEL ARROYO PURCHASE

"In my opinion no one has ever seriously considered that the College would be so independent that it would not be directly or indirectly influenced by the Church. It has been stated by both Mr. Ted Armstrong and Mr. Herbert Armstrong that the Church will continue to support the College only as long as it operates in a manner consistent with the fundamental values of the Church, and the College would never accept the Vista property or any governmental help if it meant abandoning any such values even for one moment." (Editor: This is why the college is not accredited!]

PROFESSOR GOTOH

"Professor Gotoh was in fact stopped by Customs in June 1975, and it is true that at that time various items of personal jewelry and personal property... were seized.... Mr. Gotoh was never prosecuted nor convicted of any crime and his personal property was returned to him. In my opinion, the entire article can be judged in the same light.

"Moreover, Mr. Gotoh has not been employed by the Church or College for some years, although his services have been used overseas as an independent contractor....

"In light of Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong's illness and a variety of other factors, Mr. Gotoh's visibility will be less and less in the future and he has already been advised of this."

HOME-BREAKING

"...you should know that Mr. Rader successfully defended the earlier [divorce and remarriage] doctrine as it existed at the time in 1968 in the highest court of the State of Ohio. Subsequently, as you all know, in 1974 the doctrine was modified in that the Church jurisdiction was narrowed."

FLEECING THE FLOCK-TITHING PAYS OFF

"...I do not mean to suggest that there would not be some argument that could be made, even in the Church, that the Armstrongs could get along without airplanes-and the airplanes should be considered in setting forth priorities for the Work-but the setting of priorities has always lain and still lies with the Armstrongs."

HOMES

"In my opinion... his [Stan Rader's] home today is worth about $3 million and cost him only $450,000. But is it not right, and shouldn't a professional with a high degree of expertise in the area of investment and finance use his knowledge for his own benefit as well as that of his clients? Shouldn't he be proud to have had the foresight to buy [from the WCG] so cheaply property that would appreciate so much?"

It is interesting to note Rader's own defense of his life-style as reported in the Pasadena Star News on October 29, 1977:

"Rader maintains that the church members know how and where their leaders live, and that the mansions which house Garner Ted Armstrong, Herbert Armstrong, Rader himself, and other ministers of the church, are owned by the church, and represented no personal amassing of wealth.

" 'Why not ask the archbishop of the Catholic church in Los Angeles how he lives,' Rader said. 'What some people call luxurious, other people don't.'"

To Rader's dismay Rev. Joseph Pollard immediately informed the Star News of the Los Angeles Archbishop's life-style in a letter to the editor published November 5, 1977:

"Stanley Rader . . . seems to defend the fact that he and other officials of these institutions live in mansions.... The Archbishop, Cardinal Manning, lives in a three-room apartment at the Priests' House on Second and Main in the Skid Row area. His life-style, like his living quarters, is a model of Christian simplicity and a witnessing to Gospel values which his clergy and people admire and appreciate."

Now let's return to Cornwall's comments on Ambassador Report:

SPYING IN THE NAME OF GOD

"There has been some question about use of the computer to 'spy' and 'keep tab' on members. You should know better than anyone that until very recently there would be no truth in such an allegation at all because policy was exactly the opposite, and although policy is still exactly the same in respect to brethren there was a slight change with respect to the ministry when it was discovered in an indirect manner almost by accident that some ministers were not tithing." [Editor: The computer cannot "accidentally" reveal a minister's tithing record. It must be specifically programmed to do so.]

IN BED WITH TED

"...about Mr. Garner Ted Armstrong, as that concern related to alleged events of 1971-72 or earlier, [this] was addressed by the Church in 1972 in accordance with official Church policy and in accordance with official administrative procedure. These matters were officially regarded by the Church as closed as of December 1973, when Mr. Garner Ted Armstrong was restored to all of his offices after his return in June 1972 from a six-month leave of absence."

Despite Mr. Rader's alleged approval of Cornwall's comments in the Media File, Garner Ted wasn't so appreciative. In a December 8, 1977, letter to the ministry,

GTA made these comments:

"I was quite disturbed over the nature of the second so-called 'Media Report,' [sic] since I had told Henry very frankly I was dissatisfied with the entire idea, and mentioned to him that it had been without any prior consideration on my part, and totally without authorization....

"I am positive Mr. Cornwall will comply with my wishes as set forth in my letter, but should he not, and intend to persist in the publication of the so-called 'Media Report' [sic] for any purposes of his own; then I am instructing all of you pastors and/or associate pastors of churches to return any future mailings from the Worldwide Advertising Agency....

"It is not for the Worldwide Advertising Agency, in an agency/client relationship, headed by a non-baptised, nonmember of the Worldwide Church of God to address itself to the most hypersensitive issues involving recent scurrilous attacks against the leadership in the church, church policies, church doctrines, and Ambassador College....

"Personally, I could not help but be incensed at the second edition, most specifically, since, to me, it seemed to only unwittingly recreate unnecessary redundancy, and even proliferation of scurrilous material in an attempt to answer or defend against such material and ... tends to keep the 'pot stirred up,' and therefore to give cynical comfort to the enemies of the church and the college."

To Cornwall, GTA had this to say in a December 8, 1977, letter:

"As you know, I expressed casual disappointment and disagreement with your so-called 'Media Report,' [sic] following its initial number.... With the publication of the second number, I now feel it incumbent upon me to explain to you what must be ironclad policy.

"I request and require that you cease publication and distribution of the 'Media Report' forthwith....

"In order to satisfy your new found need to issue media reports... I will require that your office provide me with a monthly brief on any and all pertinent data which you feel would be significant and of use to me...."

Needless to say, after the publication of Cornwall's third Media File, Garner Ted Armstrong was outraged and fired Cornwall and terminated the Worldwide Advertising Agency's contract. A recent issue of the Worldwide News shows the appointment of Dick Janik of Ed Libov Assoc., Inc. in Cornwall's old position.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

The Power Struggle

Cornwall isn't the only one to lose his job since the publication of Ambassador Report. In the November 14, 1977, Pastor's Report the WCG made this surprise announcement:

"After consultation with Stanley R. Rader... and Ray Wright, Business Manager for the Church, Garner Armstrong notified Osamu Gotoh that the Worldwide Church of God would no longer require his services as Consultant for International Affairs... during the past two years [Gotoh] has spent the greater part of his time in Japan other parts of the world where he has been rendering services to the church in connection with Mr. Herbert Armstrong's overseas visits and campaigns..."

The most startling announcement, however, was predicted by Publishers Gerringer and Trechak in the Los Angeles Times (12/22/77):

"A power struggle reportedly is building within the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College because of the age and ill health of Herbert W. Armstrong...."

"Stanley R. Rader, general counsel for the church-college, denied any struggle, but a group of former church members say that persons close to Armstrong are aligning themselves with Rader while others are siding with Armstrong's son, Garner Ted, 47.

"Two of the former church members, Robert Geringer and John Trechak, say that the struggle is reflected in letters that the younger Armstrong wrote to ministers of the church and to Henry F. Cornwall, an associate of Rader's and head of Worldwide Advertising Inc., which handles advertising for the Armstrong organizations. There also have been strong exchanges between Cornwall and Ronald Dart, one of Garner Ted Armstrong's top aides....

"Geringer said there has been talk for months within the Armstrong organizations about how the forces are lining up on Rader and Garner Ted Armstrong's sides. Geringer and Trechak point to Media File, a publication started last month by Cornwall's advertising corporation and distributed within the organizations, as evidence of the growing split Cornwall is a close associate of Rader....

"But in his report [Media File], Cornwall also accused Dart of 'doing everything possible to destroy my reputation at headquarters and outside of headquarters.' Cornwall threatened to sue Dart if he did not receive an apology. But Cornwall told The Times that he met last week with Garner Ted and Dart and 'resolved all differences' with Dart....

"Rader said there is no foundation to reports of a power struggle.... Rader said he and the elder Armstrong and Garner Ted 'have always worked closely together.'

"However, Geringer and Trechak said it is 'common knowledge and has been for years that Garner Ted and Rader do not get along.'

"Over the years, Rader, 47, has been a constant companion of the elder Armstrong, accompanying him on most of his world trips.

"Garner Ted's confidants; on the other hand, are Dart and Robert Kuhn... ."

The Pasadena Star News (1/28/78) carried the final announcement:
"Ambassador Director Resigns."

"Stanley R. Rader, for many years the chief spokesman for Pasadena's Ambassador College and its parent organization, the Worldwide Church of God, has resigned as an officer and director of both the church and college.

"He will become senior consultant to the church and remain personal advisor to Herbert W. Armstrong, famed radio evangelist who founded both the church and the college, said Armstrong in a news release....

"The resignation follows lingering rumors in the church and college community of a power struggle between Rader and Garner Ted Armstrong, son of the founder, since a heart attack idled the elder Armstrong some five months ago....

"Rader, for more than two decades the close personal advisor of Herbert Armstrong, discounted rumors that there is a power struggle between himself and Garner Ted Armstrong....

"There is no rift,' he said. 'But that doesn't mean that Mr. Herbert Armstrong and I, or Mr.

Garner Ted Armstrong and 1, don't have differences of opinion.'

"The resignation was not forced, Rader said, and was not an attempt to remove him from a position of authority or power base.

"I would not like to have control of the organization,' Rader said. 'I have never thought of it. That has not been my calling. Whoever leads the work must be involved in the spiritual aspect rather than the so-called secular side,' Rader continued. 'That's where the leadership must come from. If there were a struggle for power, you would have to look to a different element for the source.'

"Of the immense wealth of the organization, Rader said, 'If anyone had that in mind to control, that person would have to be characterized as morally and spiritually reprehensible....'"

AMBASSADOR REPORT

An angry Gary Bagley points to the problem. He says Garner Ted Armstrong committed adultery with his wife. Bagley picketed the AmbassadorCollege administration building, but his sign was confiscated by the police.

Ambassador Picketer Arrested

On Monday, December 12, 1977, the AR staff, as well as the rest of Pasadena, became aware that Ambassador College was being picketed. That morning Gary Bagley (44), a current member of the WCG, began demonstrating in front of the college's Hall of Administration. He was carrying a large sign that read: "Garner Ted Armstrong Is an Adulterer, If Not, Sue Me." Reactions to Bagley's picketing differed greatly. A number of AC students and employees approached him and told him he was a liar. His response, however, thoroughly disarmed these critics: "My wife's one of the women Garner Ted has had an affair with."

A number of Pasadena citizens reacted by encouraging Bagley. Two "little old ladies from Pasadena" crossed the street to tell him they always suspected "hanky-panky" behind the expensive outer facade of Ambassador College. People drove by and honked in support, others yelled "right-on." Many, who never had the misfortune to be associated with the WCG, stopped their cars and discussed the allegations with Bagley. One AC employee told him, "If it wasn't for my job, I'd be out here helping you." Many other employees responded favorably.

A few, however, were more than a little naive. One minister's wife was furious and approached Bagley, but left in tears when she became convinced his charges were true. Over 100 students questioned him, primarily regarding GTA and his ministerial qualifications. He claims that at least 75% walked away satisfied with his scriptural explanation.

After two days of picketing, a couple of supporters were helping him march. The Los Angeles Times interviewed and photographed him. GTA had to drive around him when he came to work. The biggest worry for AC, however, was the attention he would receive from the guests at the "Gene Kelley special" that was to be taped (for commercial purposes) in the "House of God" later that week.

When the picketing first began, AC attorneys had maneuvered legally, but failed to get him off the street because Bagley was complying with all city ordinances regarding the conducting of a public demonstration. After a few days, however, AC's attorneys were able to formulate a legal stratagem to force him off the street before he attracted more attention. On Thursday, December 15, only a few hours before the $25- to $100-a-seat audience was to arrive for the "Gene Kelley special," two men approached Bagley. They represented themselves as Ralph Helge's assistants and began to discuss monetary restitution as a solution to his grievance with the WCG. He rejected their offer, but after a few minutes of talking they announced they were actually undercover policemen and they arrested him for attempted extortion. Thus, due to close cooperation between AC and the city of Pasadena, an embarrassment for both was averted, and no one picketed the "Gene Kelley special."

Why had Gary Bagley picketed AC? His story is as pathetic as that of thousands of others. He was a divorce and remarriage (D&R) case. During his first six years in the WCG, he was not allowed by the church to date or marry. When he was finally allowed to marry, his new wife confided that she had had an affair with evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong. For years the Bagleys hid this fact, thinking that his affair was GTA's one mistake. It wasn't until about a year ago that they discovered that that affair wasn't GTA's only slip, but was only one episode in a lifelong chain of sexual conquests. The shock and suffering that resulted from this discovery prompted Bagley to "go to his brother" to seek restitution for the wrongs the organization had perpetrated in his life. So he gave Attorney Helge "a message to that effect" for GTA. When GTA ignored Bagley's request, he then decided to "take the problem to the church" (Matt. 18:15-17) by way of his sign, since no other presentation to the church would be allowed.

Mr. Bagley's trial is set for March 28, but no one seriously believes he will be convicted of anything. Few even believe the case will ever get to trial. In the meantime, however, the picketing has been effectively stopped and another WCG victim who is trying to get justice is being harassed by the Armstrong organization.

Chess Champion Becomes Pawn

On December 18, 1977, Ambassador Report was served with a $3.2 million lawsuit prepared by Ralph Helge of Rader, Helge, and Harms-attorneys for the WCG. The suit, filed on behalf of former world chess champion Bobby Fischer, alleges intrusion of privacy, public disclosure of private facts, fraud and deceit, mental and emotional distress, appropriation for commercial use, and more.

Not only are the allegations without foundation, but the plaintiff's attorneys have offered no evidence whatsoever to prove their accusations. Some of the charges are actually quite ridiculous. For instance, the suit alleges "invasion of privacy," yet it was Bobby Fischer himself who first contacted the staff of Ambassador Report. It was he who voluntarily brought to us copies of all his tithe and offering receipts. And, it was Bobby who once even suggested that we include a phone number with his interview so that people who were interested in personally talking with him could call, leave their name and number, and have him return the call.

The request for $3.2 million in damages borders on the ludicrous, especially considering Ambassador Report's financial position. But, of course, money is not the real goal of the suit. Paragraph 62 of the complaint alleges that Bobby Fischer has no complete or adequate remedy at law since the Report is without money to pay damages to him and that "unless restrained by order and injunction of this court, the defendants have been and intend to continue publishing, selling, distributing and otherwise marketing said Ambassador Report...." In a nutshell, the intent of the suit filed on behalf of Bobby Fischer by Armstrong's attorneys is to put Ambassador Report out of business, once and for all.

In recent weeks certain facts have come to us from sources within the Armstrong organization that clearly reveal that Bobby Fischer is being "used" by the Armstrongs and their associates "to get Ambassador Report." The Report has caused the church monetary setbacks. So, it is in their interest to see the Report stopped or at least harassed. The following statement made by one WCG official and quoted to us by an inside source confirms that: "We can't touch them on 29 of their articles, but we'll get them through Fischer!"

But where does Bobby Fischer personally fit into the picture? Whose side is he really on? That is difficult to determine, but one thing for certain is that he is now a different Bobby Fischer than the one who came voluntarily to us in January of 1977, vehemently denouncing the leadership and tactics of the Worldwide Church of God.

Additional reports coming to us regarding Bobby's whereabouts and relationship with the WCG seem to paint a bizarre picture of mental manipulation and direct control by the Armstrong hierarchy. In 1972, after defeating Boris Spassky for the world chess crown, Fischer disappeared from the international limelight. At the invitation of WCG officials, he came to Pasadena. He was put up in a luxury apartment owned by the WCG, wined and dined by church officials, chauffeured in a church-owned limousine, and flown to exotic places with Herbert Armstrong in the church's private jet. The fact that Bobby donated $61,200 to the WCG that year may, have had something to do with the royal treatment he received. However, a comment made by a top-ranking WCG evangelist and overheard by one of our staff reveals a more sinister reason. He said in effect: "We had to get Bobby to Pasadena and within our sphere of influence where we could watch him and control any statements he might make to the press about the Worldwide Church of God. A co-worker with the kind of media attention he was attracting could be damaging to the work of God if unmonitored statements concerning us were errantly made to the press."

Since 1972, Fischer has continually maintained residence with several high-ranking WCG officials and their families. He presently resides with a pastor-ranked minister who heads an orientation and reeducation program apparently designed to help the WCG field ministry adjust to the many recent changes within the Armstrong organization. We have learned that this official threatened to throw Fischer out of his home when he discovered that Ambassador Report was publishing an interview with the chess champion.

Another clue in this unraveling case is the anxiety Bobby began to express at the conclusion of his meetings with us. He became suspicious of people following him and of certain people finding out that he was talking with us. Then, as abruptly as he came to us, he disappeared without leaving a hint as to where or how we could safely contact him. We did not hear from him again until after the Report had been printed-eight months later!

We can only speculate on the pressures that have been brought to bear on Bobby. The entire mental transition that has apparently occurred within Fischer is remarkably similar to a mental condition called "floating," a word coined by cult deprogrammers. It describes a state of mind in which a cult member becomes disenchanted with his religious regime and is unsure about what to do next with his life. It is a time when a person vacillates between "lives"-when he is most likely to recognize that his religious dreams have been shattered but subconsciously longs for the security of the life within the cult. More often than not, the cult, with its highly structured life-style and specific demands on members, offers the "easier" answer to questions about life and how to continue living. Cult leaders are often very adept at applying subtle pressures to a "floating" member to get him back under their control. We feel this is exactly what occurred to Bobby Fischer and that he is now back under the influence of the Worldwide Church of God.

Presently, this legal harassment continues to be a considerable drain on us, not only financially but in the time and effort being diverted away from the main task at hand. However, we are confident that this WCG-fomented lawsuit will be recognized by the court as groundless, intended solely to harass, and will be dismissed in a matter of weeks.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Bottom of the Barrel

In a December 24, 1977, sermon in Pasadena, WCG pastor Richard Rice bemoaned the worsening reputation of the WCG worldwide. He began by stating: "The reputation [of the WCG] at this point in time isn't that bright, frankly." He admitted part of his cause for concern was due to a recent series of articles released by the Associated Press wire service concerning several U.S. religious groups. (These AP articles on the groups headed by Billy Graham, Oral Roberts, Rex Humbard, Garner Ted Armstrong, and Reverend Ike appeared November 25, 1977.)

Confiding in his congregation, Rice commented that all the other religious groups "came out pretty good and unscathed, for the most part." But the Worldwide Church of God, he said, "didn't fare quite so well. As a matter of fact, we came out about the last on the bottom of the list, the bottom of the barrel. The reputation of God's church around the earth right now, and especially in America and Canada, isn't quite that pure and quite that pleasant."

Is it any wonder?

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Tithe or Else!

Late last year Ambassador College's attorney Stanley Rader told Associated Press that "tithing is purely voluntary" in the Worldwide Church of God. (See AP news release for Friday, December 9, 1977.) Rader conveniently forgot to mention the pressure tactics AC and the WCG employ to ensure that faithful members will continue "voluntarily" tithing. One example: sending letters to AC employees urging them to authorize the church to deduct their tithes and offerings from their paychecks. Many employees, enraged at Ted's not-too-subtle hint, ripped the letter to shreds and ignored the message.

Undaunted, Garner Ted sent a new "Policy Statement on Tithing" to "all employees" on January 3, 1978. In it he commented:

"It always has been the policy... that the Worldwide Church of God does not run general 'tithing checks' by means of its computer data on the general laity."

Somehow GTA failed to remember that tithe checks have been run on whole church areas since 1968. Read "Computer Snooper" in our last issue.

"However," Ted continues, "such a blanket guarantee is not given to employees of the College, A.I.C.F., and/or the Church, whose salaries derive directly from the tithe-paying constituency of the Church. In fact, such information may be important to departmental managers in determining merit increases from time to time, and/or bonuses for service...."

Ted concluded with the admission that he "had assumed this policy was being practiced de facto"-which is what Ambassador Report revealed in its last issue.

Some employees, interviewed by Ambassador Report, stated that they thought Ted was getting desperate because one-half of the employees at AC have stopped tithing. They said, a little fearfully perhaps, that they felt-at least hoped-Ted was bluffing, but that they still wouldn't tithing no matter what he threatened to do.

Ambassador Report wonders when Ted is going to institute computer "prayer checks" and require all employees to report their prayer time to the data processing department. But even if Ted does this, we expect Stan Rader will assure the press that "Prayer is voluntary-just like tithing."

Myrmidons Meet

The annual ministerial conference of the Worldwide Church of God took place as usual in January at the church's "House of God" in Pasadena. The highlight of the conference apparently was the spectacle of Garner Ted Armstrong hugging Stanley Rader, Stanley Rader hugging Herbert Armstrong, Herbert Armstrong hugging Garner Ted Armstrong, and all three hugging each other to the standing ovation of the over one thousand assembled ministers and ministers' wives. Very touching. But what was actually accomplished at the conference? Apparently very little, except that Garner Ted further solidified his position.

As Herbert Armstrong, the founder of the Worldwide Church of God, grows more feeble, losing touch with the organization he fathered, his son is slowly consolidating his power as the new spiritual "head" of the WCG. Garner Ted Armstrong, for years known as "Playboy Ted," appears to be finally realizing the gravity of his new spiritual role in the WCG. In his younger years he resisted and tried to undo his father's strict authoritarian rules, but no more. With age comes "wisdom." He appears to have finally discerned that to retain control of his flock he must give his sheep a little room to graze while being careful not to let them think for themselves or roam at will.

Armed with this new understanding, Ted told the ministry at the January 1978 conference exactly what they must believe and teach to remain in the employ of the church. To each WCG minister Ted dispensed the "Systematic Theology Project," a 400-page packet of documents detailing the church's stance on each of its doctrines. The ministers were not asked whether they agreed with it or not, nor were they given the option of editing or revising any of its pages. They were simply told to either preach these doctrines or get out!

The presentation of the tithing doctrine was representative of the tone of the "Systematic Theology Project" and of the whole conference. In the section on tithing, one scripture after another was wrested from its context, and one weak argument followed another. But the section concluded on a dogmatic note with the statement that "the responsibility of whether and how tithing should be applied and administered today must, in the final analysis, rest solely with the Church" (p. 11). Of course, by "church" it is meant not the actual "church" but the Armstrongs. It is interesting to note that now the organization-primarily Garner Ted-is the final authority on how tithing should be applied-not the Bible. This teaching was a total about-face from the organization's May 1976 statement: "The Church policy on tithing administration is that the individual must make his own decisions in all these matters, before his God . . . rather than have the Church detail the specifics" ("Statement on Faith and Financial Responsibility," p. 2). Could it be that the organization's falling income influenced the recent change?

The "Systematic Theology Project" did have one bright spot, however. The WCG finally admitted officially that it was not a sin for its members to go to hospitals and doctors-as the last issue of Ambassador Report had challenged its leaders to admit. We were glad to see the church respond to one of the changes we urged it to make.

Still, in the long run, it is painfully evident that Ted is determined to stick with the strict, old-time religion that his father had so successfully sold for over 40 years-no matter what the Bible says. And as for those people who have been devastated by the church's erroneous doctrine on healing and other doctrinal deceptions such as "D and R" and mandatory tithing, Garner Ted has, in effect, said: "Frankly, I don't give a damn!

College Administrator to Shovel Manure?

An informed source in the college administration revealed that more than one hundred students have left Ambassador College since the beginning of the fall 1977 semester and that a number dropped out at the semester break to attend local California universities-which are accredited and generally have much lower tuition costs. In the past Herbert Armstrong crowed loudly about how students forsook other colleges to attend AC. Now, however, students are forsaking AC for the accredited curriculum of Pasadena City College, California State University, U.C.L.A., and other respected institutions.

Increasingly, AC students have become upset with the hypocrisy of AC's officials who claim they know God's way of life but practice a life-style alien to that which they teach. Others complain about a lack of freedom to express their thoughts on even non-controversial issues and say that there is a lack of academic freedom at AC. But most of all, students are perplexed by the college administration's fickleness in charting AC's future. The administration claims to be actively pursuing accreditation while regularly talking of possibly closing down the Pasadena campus or moving AC to Texas-a move which would squash any chance AC has of achieving accreditation in the near future. Though it now appears that common sense may prevail and AC will probably remain in Pasadena, the faith of many a student in AC's "infallible" leadership remains shaken.

Several students have voiced concern over President Armstrong's stated intention "to cut more than $1 million out of the present academic budget" (sermon, December 10, 1977). Those who wish to see the college accredited were further alarmed when Ted indicated in the same sermon that he'd like to cut several faculty members who "teach various things that I do not think are necessary to get into the kingdom of God, and so therefore God's money isn't going to support it." This is a blatant abridgment of academic freedom and again strongly shows Ted is not overly serious about really attaining accreditation and living up to the responsibilities that would accompany it.

In the midst of all this confusion and lack of direction, some students are apparently making their voice heard. They have formed the Ambassador College "Coalition for Student Rights." On a flyer they passed out they called for nonmandatory forum attendance, the right to elect their own student body officers (student body officers are presently appointed by the dean), and the right to choose the clothing style and hair style of their own preference. They also voiced objections to AC administration censorship of The Portfolio (AC's student newspaper). The flyer pointed out that the student body has no control of the student body fund-which consists of money earned by the student body for student activities. One student claimed that the student body earned about $15,000 ushering and selling programs and refreshments at the 1977 Super Bowl football game but that the students were never told where the money they earned went.

Evidently the "Coalition for Student Rights," though remaining anonymous to avoid expulsion from AC, has sent out other flyers and attempted to contact President Garner Ted Armstrong and evangelist Ron Kelley. In a December 10, 1977, sermon, Garner Ted Armstrong mentioned that they "told Mr. Kelley that he ought to go back to Texas and shovel manure." Ted, obviously perturbed that any student would dare challenge the authority of an AC administrator, said, "My response to that is, 'That's his job here, and as soon as he identifies the manure, out it goes.' " We just hope and pray Ron Kelley will somehow be given the ability to recognize manure when he sees it, and we recommend he start right at the top of the organization.

For years AC administrators, when confronted with a problem or student objection, have solved the problem by expelling or disciplining the person who brought the problem to their attention. We feel President Armstrong should look into the issues raised by the "Coalition for Student Rights" and work with all members of the student body to resolve the problems rather than expel more students. Wouldn't this be the intelligent, Christian approach?

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Vista del Arroyo Update

Since our article exposing the proposed $2.5 million federal handout of the Vista del Arroyo property to the Armstrong cult, several significant things have occurred. Sufficient outrage by taxpayers was generated, resulting in a reported influx of mail and phone calls to various U.S. senators, congressional representatives, and other government officials. This heat was transferred predictably to those HEW and GSA bureaucrats responsible for the proposed property giveaway.

After more than two years of attempting to analyze and decide on the transfer, they apparently could not now just change their original position and openly reject Ambassador College's application on the basis of damaging information made available to them two years ago. After all, what would their superiors think of their competency or lack of it? How could they save face? If the transfer was allowed, however, a taxpayers' lawsuit challenging the transfer was sure to come and sure to bring a lot of publicity.

A simple, uncomplicated solution was found: Offer Ambassador College the property with a clause written into the contract stating that the property could never be used for religious purposes. That would take care of the separation of church and state question and also allow the Armstrongs to accept or decline the offer without causing any embarrassment to the federal government.

Ambassador College's reaction to all this was best summed up by comments Garner Ted Armstrong made in a sermon to students and faculty on December 10, 1977:

"I had a lengthy telex from Mr. Helge, of which I can divulge a portion to you. There is a paragraph, a very lengthy paragraph, in the letter which really does turn over-if we wish to walk in and to accept it sometime in the middle of the month of December-the Vista del Arroyo property to Ambassador College.

"But unfortunately there is already a suit under way on the basis of that same deadly paragraph from some organization which is arguing in the courts that some theological institution has utilized properties granted by HEW for religious purposes.

"Now, I have to say that here we are looking at the acquisition of a very large and beautiful building, and as I said in the 'Personal,' if God opens that door we will walk through it-if we are convinced it is God who is doing it and God wants that building for Ambassador College.

"But the federal government never gave anything to anybody, except our enemies abroad. Our enemies abroad receive money with no strings attached.... But there is not one dime of government money that goes into any domestic source whatsoever that is not followed by petty bureaucrats working at what they think is underpay for their skills who are going to very closely supervise that government money; and where government money goes, government controls follow. . . .

"Now the paragraph in [the contract from] HEW says that any such properties may not be used for religious purposes ... All we've got to do is play little games and pretend to HEW that we're not a religiously oriented college, that we're just a secular college, which we are not and never will be. And then we just accept this thing in cagey little language or other and then walk into it, and then all we need is just one dissident student-and I notice we've got a lot of those anymore, both inside and outside where all the rest of the inside ones belong. All we need is one such person to write his deadly letter, or start his little publication, or start his little movement, and we've got a giant lawsuit from the federal government to kick us out of the Vista del Arroyo.

"Now, he [Ralph Helge] is dealing with the HEW attorneys both in San Francisco and in Washington, D.C., on that particular paragraph, and he's opened negotiations for its possible redraft. Now if and when it can be redrafted to where there is no such danger, then we'll look at it from that point of view....

"I will not walk into that building over there with government strings attached that say we cannot use it to house our theological library, to have a Bible study, or something of that nature, and to be vulnerable to some young thugs [he means us!] coming down here and starting some lawsuit just deliberately in order to cause us as many problems as they can. I just don't want to take that on. I'd rather just say, 'Forget it!'"

Grassroots Efforts Effective

We have received a large number of letters from many of you asking what you can do to assist us. Needless to say, we appreciate your enthusiasm, and we would like to encourage everyone who wants to join the fight in publicizing the Armstrong fraud. We feel that much can be accomplished by individuals working at the local level.

For instance, many have written us about how they have approached friends, neighbors, and WCG members and told them about Ambassador Report. Most responded favorably, but some were very hostile, assuming the Report was nothing but undocumented accusations. However, when these same people were handed a copy of our last issue and shown how carefully written and well-researched it really was, most promised to read it and consider the "other side of the story." So tell your friends about the Report, but be sure to show them a copy of our October 1977 issue, or purchase one to give to them.

A more enterprising ex-member not only told friends about the Report, but he also contacted the news media in his area. He told a surprised reporter of a major newspaper about his experiences in the WCG and offered the reporter a copy of our publication. One thing led to another, and within a few days the paper published a major story on the Armstrong cult and Ambassador Report. Our friend didn't stop there, however. He went to a local TV station, urged them to read the Report and asked them to decide whether dropping the "Garner Ted Armstrong" program would not be in the best interests of their viewers. Within three weeks, the station dropped the program entirely.

The following excerpts from letters show further how effective your action at the local level can be:

I wanted to let you know of a recent development locally. Recently I had the opportunity to spend an hour-and-a-half talking with one of the talkmasters who is on a Dayton talk radio station. Some of our friends who live in Dayton had heard this man talk about having received Ambassador Report and having stayed up until two or three in the morning reading it. He has been in Dayton for about 7 to 8 years, and when my wife and I were still true believers in Herbert's church, this man was considered to be an enemy of "the work." He was always commenting against the church on his program.

I called from my job in Dayton and talked with this man off the air. I encouraged him to expose the cult as much as possible and offered to talk to him personally and give him some additional information beyond what he had read in the Report. He was interested in talking to me, and it worked out for me to go down to his home, an unusual happening.

Just two days ago my wife talked to a friend who heard this man refer to my visit with him. He said on the air that he had gone against his usual policy and allowed someone to come to his home who had been a member of the WCG. He said that the church was worse than he had imagined.

This man plans to call Al Carrozzo and have him on the talk show via phone. He also indicated he'd like to do the same with someone on the Report staff.

We appreciated the chance to visit with you [co-publishers Len and Marg Zola] when you were in Pittsburgh. The more we become involved in trying to expose the WCG on a local level, the more we appreciate your efforts. We are writing letters and sending AR's to major networks. Also, on a local level to radio stations.

Also, would it be possible for you to put us in contact with others who might want to write letters, possibly some in Minneapolis? If letters come to major networks from all parts of the country, it will be more effective.

If it is not too much of an imposition, we feel that if someone were to act as an information "clearing house" to enhance and concentrate the effort of our group and others throughout the country, our thrust would be much more effective in exposing the organization. We feel your group could be the nucleus of such an effort. You can be assured of our continued support

Pennsylvania

Here in California, one woman is calling the owners of halls in which WCG church services are held. She is telling them about the organization, her experiences in it, and showing them a copy of our publication. Another ex-member "advertised" Ambassador Report by placing flyers that gave details about our magazine and our address on WCG members' cars during sabbath services. In Washington state, another person interested in helping the cause talked to local newspaper reporters, and this resulted in a story about the WCG and AR.

Newsmen of the press/media are constantly looking for interesting stories. If you really want to do something about the Armstrongs, contact your local reporters. Show them an AR; tell them about your experiences. Also, if you have an interesting story to tell about your experiences in the WCG, write or type us a letter about it. We'd be happy to print it. (Of course, we will keep your name confidential unless you specify otherwise.)

Another thing you can do is contact Ambassador College via its toll-free number (1) (800) 423-4444 (operational except in California, Alaska, and Hawaii). Let its officials know your inner feelings about their conduct and policies. If you want to see certain practices changed at Ambassador College, speak up! Tell them!

What's Next?

All of the free publicity we have received has helped us to reach many more people than we could have otherwise. We believe, however, that there is still much that we can do. It is not enough for us to reach just the WCG membership. We also want to reach as much of the general public as possible. After all, that is where the constant flow of new Armstrong victims comes from.

We are now running ads for Ambassador Report's 92-page issue in a number of publications including Spotlight, Universal Life, and Eternity. We have also begun a direct mail advertising campaign. Flyers, advertising the Report's last issue, have been sent to over 500 religious publications and 700 religious libraries across the United States. We have sent flyers to over 9,000 professors of religious subjects-that's just about every professor of religion in the United States! We have also begun to send out one to three thousand flyers per week to the pastors of church congregations across the nation. A mailing list (on computer) for the pastors of all the churches in the United States has been made available to us. There are over 125,000 of them, and, if possible, we will reach each one of them this year with at least a flyer. It could mean that by the end of this year many millions of Christians around the nation are going to know what the Armstrong cult is all about and are going to be able to thwart its attempts to sucker more hapless victims into its fold.

We intend to accomplish all this and more during the next few months, but what we actually do accomplish will be directly proportionate to the interest and financial assistance you, our readers, give us. In the Pastor's Report, Garner Ted wrote: "The so-called Ambassador Report ... is being published... for the sole purpose of making money for themselves and harming the Work." Contrary to what Garner Ted Armstrong says and what some people think, Ambassador Report is not a money-making venture. True, we have been forced to put a price of $5.95 on our last 92-page issue, but that was necessary for three reasons: (1)

In order to get the Report into people's hands we found it necessary to advertise, and that costs money. (2) Hundreds of people were requesting our last issue for themselves and friends but were not helping us to defray its costs, and (3) the legal harassment we are under from Rader and Company (via Bobby Fischer) is costing us a great deal of money to fight.

We hope all of you will realize that we are small-we don't even have an office but operate out of our homes. We are poor. We still owe thousands of dollars, including a substantial amount to our printer for our last printing. And, we are not making a profit. In fact, not one of us has received one cent in wages or salary for the many thousands of hours we have worked on this project.

We think Ambassador Report is accomplishing a great deal. It is making it increasingly difficult for the Armstrongs to rob people of their tithes and offerings. And, as our mail shows, many WCG members are rejecting the Armstrongs after reading the Report.

We want to continue our work. There is a lot more that we can accomplish, but that will require your help. We hope you will generously continue your financial support of Ambassador Report.

For those of you who are financially supporting the Report, we would like to again offer a reprint of the incredible 1939 Good News article by Herbert W. Armstrong entitled, "Did Christ Reorganize the Church?" In this article, which is no longer available from AC or the WCG, Herbert Armstrong shows how the Bible condemns autocratic church government (obviously, he's changed his tune since then). If you don't already have a copy, ask for one. You'll find it interesting reading.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR 4 June 6, 1978

Dear Friends:

We had hoped to send you another full Ambassador Report by now, but unfortunately our financial situation has made it impossible to publish a May/June issue. Nevertheless, we thought you'd like to know bit about what's been happening. Here are some of the latest developments.

The Bobby Fischer lawsuit has, for all practical purposes, died. Mr. Fischer has refused to testify against the Report, disobeying a court order to appear for questioning. As press coverage of the case increased- all negative to the WCG- and as Bobby's cooperation with his attorneys declined, Rader and Helge's plan to stop the Report via Fischer exploded in their faces. They attempted to bail out by persuading the court to grant them permission to drop Fischer as a client. This "double-cross" apparently convinced Bobby that he indeed was being "used."

Fischer lashed back in a letter he recently distributed to AC employees and WCG members. In it, he accused the Rader-Helge law firm of lying and conspiring against his best legal interests. Bobby also contended that Rader and Helge were taking their orders from a "Satanical Secret World Government."

In response to Fischer's letter, the Pasadena Star News, April 5, quoted Ralph Helge as saying: "If Fischer is making a very wide distribution of this letter, we are forced, compelled and pushed into protecting our reputations from damages. If the distribution is broad, we may determine that we have to take action against him."

It's quite an ironic twist that the men who ran to Fischer's aid and "donated" their legal services would now threaten legal action against their former client.

Regarding the Gary Bagley trial, we have very little of real substance yet to report. You will recall that on December 15, just before the taping of the Gene Kelley Special in "God's House," Gary Bagley was arrested on trumped-up extortion charges while picketing Ambassador College with a sign that stated Garner Ted Armstrong is an adulterer. (Mr. Bagley's wife had been one of Ted's victims.) The arrest put an end to Bagley's picketing and spared Rader's AICF and the city of Pasadena no small degree of embarrassment.

Outraged by the arrest, Mr. Bagley was eager for the opportunity to prove his innocence. When plea bargaining was suggested he refused all offers ("Innocent men don't bargain!"). Then when he enthusiastically appeared in court March 28, as scheduled, he was shocked to discover that the Judge was postponing the trial to May 22. It would have been rescheduled to an earlier date, but WCG attorney Helge claimed that that would have interfered with his spring vacation. (WCG officials are a/ways on vacation, it seems.)

Then on May 22 the trial was again postponed to June 9 because the judge needed more time to consider lengthy arguments by Helge that the subpoenas of Herbert W. Armstrong, Stanley Rader, Roderick Meredith, Dibar Apartian, and David Antion should be quashed on grounds of religious freedom and privacy. All five, plus Helge, had been served subpoenas the previous week by AR publishers Bob Geringer and Len Zola. Marshals have repeatedly attempted to locate Garner Ted Armstrong to subpoena him also, but he is nowhere to be found and has apparently left the state. Maybe he's on vacation too.

Just hours after being served, Stanley Rader and Herbert Armstrong were back in Arizona and now claim that they are no longer legal residents of California and therefore will not appear in court. Herbert Armstrong also claims that he has no information of relevance to the case. Yet, oddly, his name appears as one of those bringing the charges against the defendant!

What will transpire on June 9 is anyone's guess, but whatever happens it appears that the organization's plan to stop Bagley's picketing has backfired. As one Armstrong official said privately, "We can't drop the charges now. If we do, Bagley will sue the pants off of us for false arrest!"

He's right.

You'll be reading about this trial in the papers, so as HWA used to say- "Watch!"

Some of you have asked about rumors that we had been burglarized. Yes, it's true. The apartment door of Bill Hughes, our business manager, was found kicked in one evening and the apartment completely ransacked. The contents of every drawer, every box, and every closet had been emptied onto the floor.

Strangely, nothing of purely monetary value was taken. A color television, a stereo, and cash were untouched. The only items missing were Ambassador Report research documents and about 200 related tape recordings. Fortunately, we had duplicate copies of everything safely stored elsewhere. In spite of the fact that it's been months since the break-in, the Pasadena Police Department has turned up no concrete evidence in the case. We, however, know who was responsible for the break-in.

By now, many of you will have heard that Ambassador College has officially closed its doors as a four-year liberal arts college. Here are some of the incredible details:

In November 1977, a small group of students formed the AC Coalition for Student Rights, an activist group, demanding immediate compliance with accreditation standards and increased student rights at AC. In handbills passed around campus, they accused President Garner Ted Armstrong and his administration of stalling on implementing the academic and administrative changes necessary for accreditation. GTA publicly lashed out at this group, ridiculing and condemning their proposals. A February 6, 1978, Ambassador Portfolio editorial belittled the coalition.

On February 11, GTA preached a scathing sermon about one of the most "important" issues in Christianity- men's hair and sideburn length. Referring to AC's male students, he stated, "I may be willing to say that if 50% of the ear lobe is visible behind some of these curly locks, that I might be satisfied with that." The Coalition for Student Rights responded immediately by distributing more leaflets on campus. They wrote: "Mature Christians should be concerned with the weightier matters of the law- love, justice, mercy, truth- like the apostles. Only immature Christians cling to pharisaical dress codes, hair length and sideburn standards, etc." They accused the Portfolio of misrepresenting the coalition's goals and reminded everyone that the Portfolio was censored by the college's administration.

By this time it was obvious from GTA's speeches that he was extremely angered that students would dare challenge his pontifical authority and imply his orders were not an exact reflection of God's mind. In a letter to administrative personnel dated March 10, 1978, Ted passionately- but not too accurately- described conditions at AC. He wrote: "Ambassador College is at a crossroads. Deep seated emotions boil up within various dissident elements.... An anonymous 'student coalition' makes obnoxious demands; theft is prevalent; violence against students; an attempted rape; burglaries and the like sully each academic year. Entirely too many of our young men seem determined to appear slovenly, as sloppy as they possibly can, with ugly unsightly wisps of teenage facial hair...." (Perhaps these "surly young thugs," as Ted referred to them, couldn't afford new clothes after paying AC's high tuition costs and 20% of their income to the WCG in tithes.) Ted went on to say, "We are still actively pursuing regional accreditation." (The fact is, if Garner Ted had pursued accreditation with the same vigor he had pursued women over the years, Ambassador would have been accredited long ago!)

Two weeks later it was announced that AC would not accept the Vista del Arroyo Hotel property from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare afterall. This was a major victory for Ambassador Report, as for two years we had fought

AC's bid for the right to acquire this property. Interviewed by the Pasadena Star News, Rader readily admitted the reason for the last-minute decision. He said, "Essentially, we did not want to buy a lawsuit. That's what it comes down to."

For once, Rader made a truthful public statement. Ambassador Report had prepared for and was about to begin legal action to block the transfer just as the announcement was made. But that announcement wasn't the last one.

On April 7, Garner Ted dropped his biggest bomb by announcing that AC would leave Pasadena for good and move to Big Sandy. Pandemonium reigned. Students sat stunned. A few rejoiced; many cried. The faculty, as a whole was enraged, especially when they found that the college's board of trustees had not even been consulted by GTA before the announcement. Many were whispering that Ted, exhausted by the Coalition's pursuit, had finally blown a fuse. Others felt this was just one more indication Ted was actively trying to destroy his father's work. (Ted had previously closed the Big Sandy and Bricket Wood campuses, Ambassador Press, Imperial Schools; killed the Good News magazine; demoted and exiled most of the evangelists who supported his father; and watered down many of his dad's doctrinal teachings. Meanwhile certain faculty members scurried down to Big Sandy, hoping to grab the best homes available before their fellow teachers arrived. Many instructors were cursing the fact that just one year ago they had been forced to sell their Big Sandy homes and transfer to Pasadena. Now they would have to sell their Pasadena homes and move back to the "sticks."

And what was Ted's brilliant reason for moving to Big Sandy one year after closing the Big Sandy campus? "We will solve once and for all our identity problem. We can say, 'There is the church in Pasadena. And in Texas there is the college.'" As usual, this was just so much B.S.

Within days hundreds of flyers dotted AC's campus, again compliments of the Coalition for Student Rights. Their leaflet, entitled "Are You Fed Up With Administrative B.S.?" opened with the statement: "In a November 29, 1946, Co-Workers' Bulletin, HWA promised that AC would 'soon' be accredited. In 1968, 1972, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, and 1978, GTA promised that full accreditation was just around the corner, and that he was actively seeking it! How long will this propagandist treadmill of empty promises continue?" The worst, however, was yet to come.

Herbert Armstrong, huffing, puffing and behaving like a wounded, enraged bull, came roaring back onto the scene. Though everyone had assumed he had one foot in the coffin, he appeared as strong as ever and was on the warpath. HWA stripped Ted of his executive powers and announced he was reassuming total control of AC and the WCG. On May 11, another bombshell was dropped when HWA announced that AC would indeed close its doors for good. Many faculty and students openly voiced their bitterness, frustration, confusion, and anger, while a number, still in a state of shock at seeing AC flushed down the drain, exhibited quiet resignation at the closure, claiming it was probably God's will. But Bob Gerringer, in a CBS-TV news interview, said the college was just a "political football being tossed around" in the Rader-GTA power struggle.

Then to add insult to injury, in a May 21, 1978, letter to the church, HWA blasted his wayward son, accusing him of not agreeing of with THE WAY in which Christ was building the college and the Work through me." He added: "You began changing WAYS and personnel over to your WAY.... You kept many things from me." With his son totally disgraced, HWA announced that Stanley Rader, who had been ousted by GTA in a power struggle only a few months before, was being reappointed to the boards of directors of the church and college. After all this, would you believe Rader had the audacity to deny that there was a power struggle taking place? He did! (L.A. Times, May 13, 1978.)

But this was not the end. Unbelievably, HWA, who many claim is becoming increasingly senile and easily swayed by whomever he happens to be with, reinstated his son Ted as the church's gospel spokesman. This occurred just days after he had declared Ted a virtual Judas for going totally contrary to Christ's way. (An informed source mentioned that Ted had been removed because of excessive gambling losses in Las Vegas but that Ted convinced his dad to reinstate him after describing some of Rader's personal activities.)

With total confusion prevalent at headquarters, doctrinal chaos is breaking out in the church like measles. On March 11, Herman Hoeh, long considered HWA's "doctrinal oracle," proclaimed that a new study paper by Robert Kuhn (a "converted" Jew) and Lester Grabbe (Ph.D. in theology, Claremont University) had been accepted by GTA as new truth. Their paper proved HWA was wrong concerning the date the Jews kept the passover. Hoeh told his congregation that Herbert had not been allowed to see this paper because he had a weak heart and the excitement that could be caused by reading such a paper- which HWA would consider heresy- would overwhelm his weak heart. Hoeh called the new teaching "a revelation that God has given" and remarked that from now on HWA would mainly function as "a father figure." As far as we know, HWA is still unaware of this paper and Hoeh's conclusions. However, reliable sources indicated that HWA just recently condemned the mammoth Kuhn-Grabbe-GTA "Systematic Theology Project" that GTA had given to the whole ministry in January as the official codification of all WCG doctrine.

The chaos at "headquarters" is not the WCG's only problem. The Melbourne, Australia, church is reportedly in turmoil, and most of the members of both the Belgium church and a Toronto-area church recently defected. And while neglecting to mention how many had dropped out, GTA admitted that in 1977 less than 1,000 men, women and children were added to the church's attendance rolls. In January, 1978, only 20 were added. WCG growth has virtually stopped!

Now just as we go to press, Rader has announced that AC will, after all, open again in the fall, but only as a one-year "Bible school," offering an unaccredited and worthless 30-unit certificate in Armstrong theology. One surviving faculty member said the certificate would be worth about as much as the degree the Wizard of Oz gave the scarecrow. As a sure indication of the anticipated quality of education, Rader said he will personally teach a course in ethics! AC will also have a two- or three-year graduate school of theology for those interested in a career in this rapidly disintegrating religious fraud.

The AC administration turned a deaf ear to students who had pleaded with the college to allow them to complete their degrees. However when WCG officials discovered that closing AC would make it impossible to obtain a tax writeoff on AC's buildings the decision was made to let an amputated version of AC remain. Meanwhile, the college is again, apparently, negotiating with the Morman Chruch, hoping to sell the Big Sandy campus to that organization. Of course, it goes without saying that the Armstrongs' latest idiocies have completely destroyed Ambassador's chances of ever being accredited.

It had been our hope that somehow Ambassador College would be transformed into a legitimate institution. Nevertheless we suspected all along that the Armstrongs were quite willing to destroy the college rather than see it wrested from their control. You will recall that on the cover of our very first issue (the Review) we even asked the question: "Ambassador College- will it survive?"

It is obvious to us now that Ambassador cannot be legitimized. It is also obvious that the majority of ministers and members still in the WCG are brainwashed beyond human hope. We'd like to help them, but we aren't naive, nor are we ignorant of Christ's admonition: "Let them alone: they are blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." (Matt. 15:19)

What, then, would we like to accomplish? Two things: (1) the complete exposing of the Armstrong cult to the general public, and (2) the liquidation of all Armstrong organization properties through litigation (being prepared now) with the resulting funds distributed to the victims of Armstrongism. Whether or not the AR will be able to continue on to these goals, however, remains to be seen.

As of right now, Ambassador Report is well over $7,000 in debt. To many, this would be a trifling amount, but in our position it is a substantial burden. Unless we can find a way to eliminate that financial barrier, it will be impossible for us to publish another issue of Ambassador Report. No matter what happens, we will, of course, continue to send what literature we've already published to those requesting it. We will also attempt to find other means to disseminate to the public the information accumulated in our files. But unless we substantially reduce our liabilities, we will simply not be able to continue publishing new Reports.

It is also becoming increasingly obvious to us that even if a way can be found for us to continue publishing, we will have to limit our mailings only to those who have, during 1978, assisted us financially.

There are quite a few who have been more than generous in financially supporting our efforts. To those people we can only express our sincere gratitude. (We wish we could do so to each of you personally.) But frankly, the majority of those on our mailing list have not so much as sent us a note of thanks.

We are not complaining! Most who have gone through the "Ambassador experience" want nothing more than to simply forget the whole thing. They sympathize with our efforts but apparently don't want to be reminded of the past. We understand completely. And that is one more reason we will not be sending future AR's to anyone unless they specifically request that we do so.

We intend to continue our efforts to expose the Armstrong cult, but for the good of our families and ourselves we must put a limit on our own degree of sacrifice. Unless the financial means can be found, the AR will no longer serve as the vehicle for disseminating the results of our investigations. We do sincerely hope, though, that we will be able to continue publishing the Report.

To those of you who have helped us in the past and to those of you who are helping us now, our sincere thanks.

On behalf of the Publishers,
John Trechak

---

AR 5 August 21, 1978

Dear Friends:

With Garner Ted Armstrong's departure from his dad's church, all hell has broken loose in the "Worldly" Church of God (WCG)-the church that claims to be the "one and only organization telling world leaders the way to world peace." As we reported in our last newsletter, Herbert Armstrong-who for the last ten years has been wining and dining kings and tyrants-finally found out that his son had been slowly and subtly dismantling "God's Work" while he was off in Southeast Asia. Enraged, Herbert stripped his son of all executive authority, but as our last news letter went to press, we learned that Herbert's golden-throated son had somehow talked his way back into his dad's favor. At that time it looked as if Garner Ted the "professional repenter" had won another bout with his dad. But since we mailed our last letter, an incredible series of events has unfolded.

On June 13 it was announced that Ted had been commanded to take a six-month leave of absence. He was accused by Stan Rader, Herbert's lawyer, of taking God out of the work. What really irked Herbert, though, was that Ted was taking him "out of the work." (One GTA offense: using "Garner Ted Armstrong Productions" in place of "Worldwide Church of God" on corporate letterheads.)

Time Magazine Carries the Story

By this time, the power struggle for control of the WCG had become national news. On June 19, Time magazine, quoting Rader and Ambassador Report, came out with a provocative article on the "byzantine power struggle" between Ted and Rader. During this time acrimonious letters were flying back and forth and heated discussions were taking place behind the scenes between the proud old warrior and his rebellious playboy son.

Finally, in an eight-page letter to members and co-workers dated June 28,

Herbert, breathing out fire like a wounded dragon, condemned his son's recent actions, revealing how he had long "covered up" his "son's sins and mistakes." He admitted, just as Ambassador Report had claimed, that he had been "a respecter of persons" and that he had protected his son "to the detriment and harm it has brought to God's Church and Ambassador College!" But Herbert justified this unbiblical favoritism by saying that "love covers." He should really acquaint himself with the apostle Paul's command to Timothy concerning sinning elders: "As for those who persist in sin, rebuke them in the presence of all..." (1 Tim. 5:20, RSV). When it came to other ministers' sins, Herbert has often publicly brought out all the sordid details to his congregation. But when his own son committed adultery-over and over again, Herbert suddenly invented this shallow "love covers" argument. In fact, even to this day Herbert refuses to admit that his son was an adulterer, claiming his faults were drinking, gambling, and rebellion against apostolic authority. If Herbert had heeded the words of Ephesians 5:11- "Take no part in the unfruitful works of darkness, but instead expose them" (RSV)- the church would have been a lot better off.

In the June 28 letter referred to above Herbert asserted that Ted "has subtly been destroying me.... He sent me by special personal messenger the day before yesterday a seven-page single-spaced typed letter literally breathing out 'threatenings and slaughter,... the most hostile embittered father-dishonoring letter I could imagine-except under Satan's inspiration."

Ted, claiming his dad was being subtly manipulated by Stan Rader and the church's right-wing evangelists and realizing his dad's heart was hardened against him, had taken the unpardonable step of going to the news media with his side of the story. In an AP wire service article, Ted "predicted a downfall of the religious empire because of its leaders' lavish spending habits and poor financial management." In a June 26 Los Angeles Times article he charged that the church was "shot through with fear. People are fearful to say what they know, fearful to talk to each other, fearful their phones are bugged, and fearful of their jobs." You know, that's exactly what we pointed out in our 1977 issue of Ambassador Report. Ted also admitted that "the church has been forced by inflation and extravagant expenditures to borrow money to meet its payroll." These comments caused Herbert to blow an apostolic fuse. He disfellowshipped and exiled his dazed son, claiming "his entire attitude the past weeks and months has certainly indicated the impossibility of leading him again to repentance."

Garner Ted Armstrong's furniture was removed from his Pasadena home by movers. He's now living near Tyler, Texas.

Garner Ted Strikes Back

For one month Ted disappeared from the public spotlight amid speculation that he was preparing to put on a new act of repentance for his dad. But suddenly, without warning, Ted attacked. In a rambling apologetic nine-page letter to all WCG ministers dated July 25, Ted announced the formation of the Church of God, International. We understand its board is composed of Ted, his wife Shirl, and his brother-in-law Guy Carnes. To divert suspicion that he was writing the letter simply to draw WCG ministers into his camp, he claimed he composed his letter because "there are those who are interpreting my silence as tacit admission of some 'guilt' of some sort.... Now, I must write a partial reply...."

To gain sympathy from his readers, he began by saying, "I have recently received a letter from Mr. Rader, offering me a $50,000 (before taxes) salary per year, for retirement.... In the letter, he goes into great, legal detail about my remaining silent about certain confidential information I have concerning the work. Further, he offers me the free-rent use of the Tahoe Cabin. However, it is stated that this 'retirement' salary and the access to the cabin may be terminated at any time 'with or without cause.'... I utterly reject all such offers, and all such strings attached.... Such offer is tantamount to taking God's tithes ... and paying me not to preach the gospel with those tithes!"

We fail to see why Ted was so upset with Rader's generous offer. Being second in command in the WCG, Ted himself had engineered and/or approved such "deals" with a number of former high-ranking WCG officials who "knew too much." Ted never before griped that these "unearned gratuities" were a waste of God's tithes. Why now?

On page 3 Ted reveals that the WCG has denied him his mail marked "personal," "confidential," or "private," and Ted encloses his June 12 letter to Pasadena Postmaster K. Wilson as proof. Amazingly enough, it was Ted who tried to prevent Ambassador College students from receiving their mail back in February 1976. (See "Mail Censorship Sparks Student Protest," Ambassador Review, June 1976, p. 28.)

Next, Ted bewails the fact that he was being denied his "Justly deserved and honestly earned severance pay." But for years it was his own policy to not give severance pay to ministers who went to the press with the church's dirty linen! Obviously he doesn't feel guilty pocketing tithe money sent to his dad while plotting to form his own church.

Ted also objected to the manner in which he was disfellowshipped and marked "with character-destroying innuendo." But when Milo Wilcox, a WCG minister for almost 9 years, was suspended, disfellowshipped, and marked on the sabbath all because of a mere rumor, Ted never condemned this as unethical. In fact, when Milo demanded an apology, Ted had him fired. Perhaps Ted has forgotten the role he played in cruelly and mercilessly disfellowshipping and marking Ernest Martin, Al Carrozzo, Ken Westby, George Kemnitz, Jim Morrison, Richard Plache, and dozens of others. Ted, however, thinking his motives and actions are righteous and pure declares, "Though I have been 'marked'...I bear it gladly.... I can only believe that God is moving to allow this to happen so that His perfect purpose and will be made known. I believe He is tired of the mindless, confusing, constant change; tired of corporate inertia; tired of the strength-sapping drain of huge imponderable expenses constantly depriving the main part of His commission from being done."

With his usual hallucinatory braggadocio Ted wrote: "I have never been merely a paid voice; an alter-ego; an employee. Never was I proclaiming the message of some man- I was no mere hireling, paid a wage to speak what others told me to speak; I was, specially equipped; formed, tempered, tried and tested, shaped and created...." He went on to state: "From henceforth, I will bow my knees to no man." Of course, by this Ted doesn't mean that you should feel this way. After all, if everyone did Ted wouldn't have a church at all. Would he?

In closing Ted rejoices that he no longer has to associate with the hypocritical bootlickers who surrounded him in Pasadena. He angrily writes, "Some of these men didn't have the courage to come to me, face to face, and voice their complaints-but my father has admitted they had been coming to him for about one solid year, behind my back, to get rid of me." Maybe Herbert is guilty of judgment based only on hearsay and gossip but Garner Ted's finally getting a taste of his own medicine.

Herbert Armstrong Explodes

On July 31, Herbert retaliated by launching a stinging attack against his son whom he said he loves "above all people on earth." He accused Ted of raising "a hand against his father" and attempting "to draw away disciples" (Pastor's Report, p. 1). One of Herbert's charges was that Ted's radio and TV programs were becoming secular. Herbert conveniently forgot how it was he-not Ted-who introduced the secular approach not only on "The World Tomorrow" broadcast but in The Plain Truth.

Warning his hirelings, Herbert wrote: "I know many of those former ministers [who have forsaken the WCG] have had to take jobs working with their hands to earn a living. That is justice!" The statement reveals much about Herbert's attitude toward money, work and religion. Of course he neglected to point out that many of those who have left the Armstrong ministry and gone into honest work are now earning two or three times what they did as his hirelings.

In a letter to Ted included in the Pastor's Report, Herbert told Ted: "You completely overstepped the authority I delegated to you." Then Herbert explained how, when he was under authority, he "took criticism" and "took orders." This argument didn't convince Ted for one moment that his actions were wrong for Ted was well aware of how his dad had left the Church of God back in the 1930s and started his own church after refusing to cooperate with the other Church of God ministers and constantly undermining their authority. (For complete documentation of this, read "Herbert Armstrong's Religious Roots," Ambassador Report, 1977 issue.)

Herbert also tried to cow Ted into submission by referring to himself as "God's anointed" (p. 3). But Ted knows this is only so much religious rhetoric. Herbert was ordained, not by another Church of God minister but by lay members of the Oregon Conference of the Church of God (Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, 1973 edition, pp. 365-66). Ted also knows that Herbert didn't receive some special baptism from God or even from a Church of God minister. Herbert himself admits a Baptist minister baptized him (The Good News, August 1969, p. 4).

Following Herbert's diatribe was a long-winded letter by "Mr. Loyalty," C. Wayne Cole. His letter is, in fact much more logical than Herbert's, and he zeros right in on Ted's Achilles' heel- his own statements. He quotes Ted as saying during the January 1978 Ministerial Conference: "If I leave this Work-don't follow me. I know the lesson of Absalom.... The quickest way for me to destroy myself is to attack my father.... I have said publicly to the area coordinators if I cannot write a deep lesson of loyalty to my own father... how could I ever expect loyalty on down the line " (p. 9).

When you get right down to it, Garner Ted is guilty of doing the very thing he has condemned vociferously for years. Rader, who is an expert in this area, rightly called Ted a "hypocrite," saying that all Ted "is trying to do is lead people away to follow him" (Pasadena Star-News, July 31, 1978). When a member of the press asked Ted, "Do you intend to compete with him [Herbert] and draw members away from his church?" Ted replied with a self-contradiction: "Of course not. That's not my purpose at all. He left me no choice. I think he knew that I would have to continue to speak and to preach" (Los Angeles Herald Examiner, August 6, 1978).

But what caused Ted to do the unthinkable and split off from his dad? Perhaps his comment in the Herald Examiner (August 6) answers the question: "My father is a very strong, self-willed man. He was trying to spank his boy (now 48 years old), and this time his boy just wasn't going to be spanked. He always starts out his talks that he was called when I was 3, and in his mind I think he thinks I am 3."

GTA- Sheep Rustler

No matter what Ted says, it's obvious to all that he is trying to lure away his father's sheep. In a July 31 letter to the entire membership of the WCG Ted not only attempts to counter the allegations made against him but attacks some of the bedrock doctrines of his father's church. Here are a few excerpts:

I did not start Quest... I never even bought a subscription. I spoke out strongly against demon art in the magazine; against taking God's name in vain in its pages, pictures of naked architects on the cover, and other things which I felt were not in the interests of the Church.

My father wanted accreditation from the beginning-but on his own terms.... he still chooses to equate accreditation with "secularism" or "satanism," and will not change his mind. Of course, accreditation is merely the insuring by professional educators that Ambassador is actually giving its students what it says it is giving them; only trying to determine whether the substance of real education is there, as well as the form; only striving to insure that real academic excellence is maintained-so students aren't "ripped off" by shallow, non-professional educational practices.

He said, toward the end, that we "didn't have enough money" to conduct "colleges," but then went into detail about giving away money to a King in Thailand, to educate ignorant hill farmers to quit growing pot, and start growing vegetables, instead.

My father's new governmental ideas are not Biblical, at all. There were many times in history, and there is predicted to be a time in the future when there is more than one man of equal rank in God's work!

Check Hebrews 3:1, and find out who in the Bible, exclusively, is ever called "God's Apostle!" Paul calls himself "an Apostle" or "the Apostle of Christ"-but only Jesus Christ Himself is called "God's Apostle!" I am embarrassed for my father for all the many powerful statements of the assertion of authority!

The Gospel is much, much more than just "an announcement." Read I Corinthians 15:1-6 and see! Its primary focus is on Jesus Christ and "him crucified"-and on the fact of His life, teaching, example, death, burial, and resurrection," as well as the fact that He is the soon-coming King and world-ruler. I intend preaching it all as God so wills and inspires.

Pray for my father, that he can see Satan's wiles at work right around him.... I believe Jesus Christ wants to see some humility, and some service, and some kindness, and some meekness, for a change, and is growing tired of seeing all the claims of great office, power, authority and hearing shouting, angry messages which produce fear.

If you would like to read Ted's letter in its entertaining entirety, why not write Garner Ted requesting your own FREE copy. His address is: P.O. Box 2525, Tyler, Texas 75710.

The psychological technique used in Ted's letter is almost a carbon copy of Herbert's 1939 Good News article which justified his defiance of "church government" in breaking away from the Church of God, 7th Day. It's certainly ironic justice that Ted should use the identical break-away defense that his father used when he drew away members and their tithes in 1939.

For those readers who have not read the "39 article," we strongly recommend that you write to us for a free copy. It's an excellent item to give to friends or acquaintances still in the Armstrong cult because it's Pope Herbert's own "inspired" words.

Ted's New Church

Garner Ted's new church is picking up steam rapidly. A week ago he announced to a new congregation of 75 in Tyler that his church was making over $2,000 a day from donations and that he had a good response to his first radio broadcast. He intends to go on new stations immediately. One individual who was present at the first service of Ted's church told us Ted looked like a new man-happy, relaxed, fulfilled. The same individual also visited the Big Sandy church where Herbert was preaching that very sabbath and said Herbert looked grim and bitter.

The church members in Pasadena are noticeably discouraged because, with Brian Knowles, Dave Antion, and Garner Ted-the church's most fluent speakers-now removed from the sermon schedule, they know they will be subjected weekly to the long-winded, unimaginative harangues of the right-wing ministers. Church attendance has already plummeted, and with Ted's magic voice gone, it is expected to drop even further. The WCG's donor income (as opposed to co-worker income) has also dropped drastically, and WCG officials are frantically selling off assets to obtain cash. Stan Rader told the Los Angeles Times (August 5), however, that the WCG "is more stable how than it has been at any time in the past 10 years." One source says that, contrary to Rader's rosy statements, the WCG may already be in receivership but that this is being kept secret from the members by the church and its bank. We are investigating this and hope to give you more details in a future Report.

One ex-member made an interesting observation concerning the present father-son power struggle. He reflected: "You know, it's interesting how Herbert has said for so long that it was his commission to turn the hearts of children to their fathers (Malachi 4:6), and yet Herbert has never been able to win the esteem and affection of his own son." Several in fact have asked us what caused Herbert, knowing the charismatic drawing power of his son, to treat his son so harshly and alienate him. On NBC's "Tomorrow" program hosted by Tom Snyder (July 28) Stanley Rader hinted that it was the publicity surrounding Ted's "emotional problem" (adultery) which was responsible for his removal from office. But what apparently incensed Herbert above all was Ted's refusal to submit to his apostolic authority in every detail and Ted's comment to the Los Angeles Times that "it is my belief that before long all that will be left of the Armstrong empire will be the AICF and Quest magazine."

Herbert, stung by Ted's penetrating logic, replied: "He [Ted] has spread the point blank lie that Mr. Rader is now actually heading the Church and Work. Brethren, I brand that as a Satan lie!... I have given the direct order to Mr. Rader to sell or dispose of the magazine Quest/78 as soon as possible."

The Fate of Quest/78 and Everest House

Nevertheless, Quest/78 is not going to be sold-at least not for six months or a year, if ever, according to Rader. Roger Lippross, a top WCG publishing official, commented at a July 12 meeting at Ambassador's press that Rader has put Quest under his personal control in the AICF. Guess that shows who's really the boss once and for all!

Not only does Rader have increased control over Quest, but now he has quietly placed the WCG's new publishing venture, Everest House, under the AICF. Almost nobody in the WCG, though, is aware of what the Everest House publishes and who founded it. Even its catalogue is kept out of church members' reach, lest they learn what it is publishing. Stan Rader gave birth to it and hired its present operating head, Lew Gillenson, in 1977. Everest House shares office space with Quest/78 in Pasadena and New York City. Informed sources stated that the New York office suite, located at 1133 Avenue of the Americas, costs $18,000 per month for rent alone and that additional office space has been acquired.

The fall 1978 Everest House catalogue offers 22 books for sale, a number of which run completely counter to the WCG's long-time teachings. (Keep in mind that the WCG is subsidizing Everest House with tithe money from its members.) For instance, Dark Dimensions-a Celebration of the Occult, advertised on page 1 of the catalogue, has accounts of homosexual acts, a brutal mutilation, sadism, sex perversion, and paints the occult in a very favorable light. Then there's the book Strange Seed, described as "a contemporary novel of unutterable terror," as well as the books How to Make Your Own Knives and Living Jewish, something you'd never suspect a Christian organization would subsidize. The LTR Money Book is billed as "the personal finance guide for every kind of living together relationship." It includes practical financial advice for heterosexual and gay couples and contains instructions' for gays who desire to marry or divorce. Zen Running, the last book listed, discusses how to let your mind go, through the use of Zen.

On July 12, Roger Lippross said that Everest House and Quest/78 are dismissing all their WCG employees and will accept no new ones because the church members get too emotionally involved and this causes problems and bad publicity. What he is really saying is this: Church members become disgusted and enraged when they see the trash and anti-church material Everest House and Quest/78 publish. So all the art work, layouts, jacket designs, copy editing, and typesetting previously done by WCG employees in Pasadena will soon be done undercover in New York-out of sight from the prying eyes of "emotional" church members whose tithes are helping to foot the bill.

Termites Get Revenge at AC Library

Not only have there been disconcerting upheavals in the church recently, but Ambassador College (AC) has been having monumental problems of its own in,

of all places, its library. AC's main library building has been a health hazard since April 27 when exterminators used the toxic pesticide lindane to exterminate termites there. The fumes permeated the whole building, and soon 16 of the 18 employees there became ill. Several quit, and most of the others, refusing to see a doctor because of the church's teaching on divine healing, prayed to God for help. Eleven weeks later, the college administration made a half-hearted attempt to alleviate the problem by installing charcoal air filters throughout the three-story building, but typical of ACs "high regard" for the well-being of its employees, AC officials didn't replace the charcoal in the system soon enough-it would have cost money- and soon afterward many of the library employees in the main building became ill again. A number of the library's patrons also complained of getting headaches after being exposed to the library's atmosphere. One employee was checked for nerve damage, and many reported headaches, chest pains, dizziness, respiratory problems, and unusual exhaustion. A noted toxicologist and an industrial hygienist confided that all the exposed staff members will now have an increased sensitivity to the DDT family of pesticides because lindane is a cumulative poison that resides in body fat permanently.

Now the main library building, housing everything but the periodicals and the termites, is closed until the problem is remedied. However, the building was not closed because of AC's concern for its employees' welfare. It was shut down because the employees refused to work inside the building.

This is not the tragedy it would seem, though, because the college's chancellor, Herbert Armstrong, in the June 26, 1978, Pastor's Report, just condemned the "leaven of intellectualism" that "was coming in and gripping the college." He vowed that he was "going to root that out of Ambassador College." Since the library is a silo of "intellectualism," it is expected that the library's value will be downplayed in the future and that students will be encouraged to seek truth solely from Herbert's writings, not from the library's extensive collection of religious reference material.

A Load of Nonsense

As many of you know, Herbert Armstrong recently boasted in a May 21, 1978 co-worker letter that he was to co-host a charity function with Queen Elizabeth. Suspecting that something was amiss, we wrote Her Majesty and expressed our dismay that such a collaboration was to take place. Ambassador Report also wrote to the British Home Office, the BBC, and the News of the World newspaper. We were not alone. Other concerned individuals also wrote Her Majesty and voiced their concern for her reputation. There was little to be worried over, however. The following transcript of a July 2 BBC broadcast tells the story:

Broadcaster: Over the years we've carried out a number of reports on the activities of an organization known as the Worldwide Church of God, a multi-million dollar American concern, run by a millionaire called Herbert Armstrong and his playboy son Garner Ted Armstrong. Through its magazines Plain Truth and Quest, the church actually seeks members who are prepared to stomp up three-tenths of their income. Well, recently the Worldwide Church of God has been in some state of array. Its star preacher Garner Ted no less, once suspended for immoral conduct, has been suspended again. Members have apparently been leaving in droves and in California there's now an organization called the Anti-Worldwide Church of God. Meanwhile over here members have been receiving an extraordinary letter from millionaire Herbert Armstrong himself. Ted Harrison reports:

"God's great work to the whole world," writes Herbert Armstrong, "is, truly, going ahead now as never before with a new start. July 8 I am scheduled," writes Herbert, "to co-host an important premiere of a charity motion picture to raise funds for the handicapped children in Britain. Queen Elizabeth II has promised to co-host this premiere and banquet- and in the event she is unable to be present, either Prince Charles (the next King) or Prince Philip will be there." Quite an accolade for Herbert Armstrong and his church it would seem. But the plain truth of the matter is Herbert Armstrong's claim is a load of nonsense. Buckingham Palace has no knowledge of such an occasion. The Queen, in fact, has a day off on July 9, no premieres or banquets in the diary of any kind. And Prince Charles will be in Aldershot. The only charity we could find which had planned to have a film premiere on July 8 was the Society for Mentally Handicapped Children, but the premiere has been postponed, and the only dealings they've ever had with the Armstrong organization was three years ago when they had to complain to Herbert for using the charity's name without permission and inaccurately in one of his publications. I twice telephoned Herbert Armstrong in California to ask him about his extraordinary claim, but on both occasions I was told he was unavailable. So to cast some light on the matter I went to see a former member of the church and a man who knew Herbert Armstrong well, Sir Anthony Buzzard. He told me that one of Herbert Armstrong's main ambitions was to meet top people around the world.

Sir Anthony Buzzard: He felt that if he could do that he would have preached the gospel to the nations through getting at their leaders and after that has been done it was his firm belief that the end of the world would come. I'm sure that to meet Her Majesty the Queen would be his ultimate ambition. He's always had a great love of England, and he would look upon the Queen as being a direct descendant of King David because he believes, or believed certainly when I knew him, that England and America are the descendants of the lost tribes of Israel, and therefore to meet the direct descendant of David would be the highest privilege I think he could conceive of.

A July 2, 1978, News of the World article by John Clare said this:

Cheeky Church Boss's Royal Boast

The cheeky leader of a religious sect told his followers he would be hosting a film premiere with the Queen this week. He said that if she would not come, Prince Charles or Prince Philip would share the honours with him.

But Buckingham Palace has never heard of the man-86-year-old Herbert Armstrong, head of the California-based Worldwide Church of God. And the Queen will not even be at Thursday's premiere in London of the adventure film, "The Wild Geese," starring Roger Moore and Richard Harris. The guest of honour will be the Duchess of Kent.

Yet in a newsletter to his 65,000 members, Mr. Armstrong announced: "I am scheduled to co-host an important premiere to raise funds for handicapped children. Queen Elizabeth II has promised to co-host."

A spokesman for Evan Lloyd, producer of "The Wild Geese," said: "Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Rader have been invited to attend the premiere as representatives of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, a charity of which Mr. Armstrong is chairman of. We know nothing about the Worldwide Church of God. It was originally hoped that the Queen or Prince Philip would attend the premiere, but there was never any question of either Mr. Armstrong or Mr. Rader co-hosting the event. They are just ordinary guests and would be treated in the normal way."

The WCG's Future?

With all the problems besetting the WCG, people are asking in private what will happen when Herbert passes away. We say, "Watch Stan Rader!" He will control the AICF, and informed sources say the majority on the church board is now composed of Rader supporters. If this is the case, Stan Rader (with the board) would legally be in control of the church and the college with all their assets. And who knows? Perhaps on his death bed Herbert will ordain Rader as the church's next apostle.

AR Update

We had hoped to give you an update on the Bagley situation, but Mr. Bagley's trial has again been postponed. The trial is now scheduled for some time in November. We will give you information on this trial and other legal activities regarding the Armstrongs as soon as they occur.

For those who would like more information on Bobby Fischer, we recommend reading "The Pawn Who Should Be King" by John Trechak. It appeared in the August 14 issue of New West magazine. Copies may be obtained for $1.50 by writing to: New West, 9665 Wilshire Boulevard, Beverly Hills, California 90212.

Some have wondered if it's still possible to obtain copies of the large 92-page, illustrated issue of Ambassador Report we published in 1977. Yes, it is. And for those of you who are supporting our efforts we would be happy to send copies at the discounted price of $3.95 each, including postage. Also, if any of you are interested in obtaining bulk shipments for resale or free distribution, please contact us, and we'll be happy to work out an appropriate arrangement.

The recent upheavals that have rocked Armstrong's empire have prompted many letters to the AR from confused and upset WCG members asking for help. Many members are now, at long last, squarely facing the same reality that we all have had to face—that we've been suckered by a bunch of con-artists. Here's one letter typical of the many being received:

I am a confused member of the Worldwide Church of God and I need help very badly. Please tell me, what is going on at headquarters? Who is right? Is it Herbert Armstrong or his son Garner Ted? Is Mr. Herbert Armstrong really in his right mind or is Stanley Rader dominating him? Maybe none of them are right, I just don't know anymore! I only know that I am going out of my mind, my family is being destroyed.

Please help me. I must know the truth. Is Mr. Armstrong an apostle or a fake? Yesterday I talked to my minister (Jim Tuck, Huntsville church) about all this mess. I asked him if it was true about Mr. Armstrong getting a $200,000 a year salary and all he could think to say was "don't you think he's worth it?" He also tried to scare me with gehenna fire if I did not support Mr. Armstrong.

After receiving the AR and related newsletters, this particular individual contacted us again to thank us for all the eye-opening and liberating information. He related that it was the means by which he and his family were able to break the mental and spiritual stranglehold the cult had had on them. In addition, he did make a final contact with his former minister, Mr. Tuck, regarding the AR. Tongue-tied for any refutation of the facts, Tuck's final pronouncement was, "Well, if you believe the Ambassador Report, there's nothing more I can do for you."

We feel the WCG ministry has done quite enough to their members, and it's certainly gratifying to the AR staff as we're sure it also must be for our supporters to know that more and more people are being freed from the Armstrong cult through all of our combined efforts.

To those of you who responded to our last letter, our warmest thanks. Though we're still operating "in the red," your help has made it possible for us to continue publishing. We hope none of you mind the "newsletter format," but we think it still gets the facts out. Again, thanks to all of you.

Sincerely,

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR6 September/October 1978

Dear Friends:

The one-time euphoric mood that used to permeate the Pasadena campus of Ambassador College has turned to one of pessimism and gloom. Ministers and campus personnel are increasingly wondering: What will become of the Worldwide Church of God-and its millions of dollars of assets-when Herbert Armstrong meets his Maker? Will Stan Rader become the church's new Messiah and Ramona (Herbert's wife) the church's new Queen Mother? Will Rader and the church board call Al Portune Sr. back into service, or will a fanatical right-wing coalition of evangelists wrest control of the church and take it back to the way it was in the fifties? These questions are increasingly being asked by worried members and curious outsiders. Even the prestigious Time magazine, in a June 19, 1978, article, asked: "Who will eventually succeed the aged and ailing Apostle Herbert?" Then Time replied: "Recent convert Rader appears all-powerful, but he is not a minister and has numerous enemies." Other media sources are all but declaring Stan Rader the heir apparent.

"Ex-Jewish Convert May Inherit Church's Wealth"

The above headline, although no revelation to AR readers, is shocking in that it appeared as a front-page headline along with Stanley Rader's 6" x 6" picture in the October 12, 1978, evening edition of the Pasadena Star-News, as well as nationwide in other Knight-Ridder newspapers. Here are some perceptive statements from that article:

"Four months after the ouster of TV evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong, the troubled Worldwide Church of God has a new crown prince-a formerly Jewish lawyer-accountant who could inherit the rich religious empire of Armstrong's father. Stanley Rader, smooth-talking adviser to ailing 86-year-old church patriarch Herbert Armstrong, has emerged as victor in an apparent power struggle that pitted father against son, with Rader in the middle.... Rader compares the father-son schism of Herbert and Garner Ted to the biblical story of David and Absalom: 'The son wanted to destroy everything the father had built Where Ted made his crucial mistake,' he says, 'was he tried to run me down in the eyes of his father and that tipped his hand.'"

One of Rader's most shocking comments was the following remark:

"Mr. Armstrong has said publicly very often that I am a son in whom he is well-pleased.... The only other one he ever said that about was Ted Armstrong."

The article concludes with the following comments:

"Mr. Rader is very clearly the victor in what was a power struggle,' Garner Ted says. 'He moved into my office, into my desk; his secretary sits where mine sat.' On Rader's desk is a portrait of the grandfatherly Herbert Armstrong with the inscription: 'I was shooting the moon on you.'"

Herbert Lashes Out at His Son "With Love"

Herbert has launched another bitter tirade against his wayward son Garner Ted, all the while claiming he loves Ted "as David loved Absalom" (co-worker letter, September 25, 1978, p. 4). He accuses Ted of being "on a campaign of vilification against his father, and worse, against God's church.... to destroy his father and God's church and craftily win over the people's tithes to him!" He rambles on, stating, "My son is now holding 'Personal Appearance' meetings in strategic centers where he hopes to attract God's people, not the world.... He is no longer a man whose word may be believed...."

Rader told the Tucson Citizen (August 22, 1978) that if Ted "were interested in doing the work of God, he would never have been put out of the church." Ted retorted: "I'm doing the very same thing that paid Stan Rader's salary for more than 20 years. He [Rader] is welcome to his opinions, but what he said and the other charges he's brought against me are befuddling, bamboozling, and utterly impossible."

Later Ted admitted that former friends of his in the ministry were suspicious of Rader and that Rader's relationship with Herbert "got so close that the older Armstrong wanted to make Rader a minister the very same day he was baptized into the church. That was absolutely unheard of."

*Note: At this point in the article appeared two photographs of the Armstrong and Rader homes. Unfortunately, we had only a photocopy of this issue of AR to work with. The photographs in the photocopy were of such poor quality that they were unusable. Tucson-area desert hideouts of Herbert Armstrong (left) and Stan Rader (right).

Indeed Rader and Herbert have been constant companions the last few years. Both men are residents of Tucson, Arizona. Herbert lives in a $160,000-plus home at 7845 Calle de la Escarpa on Tucson's far northeast side, while Rader resides at 8101 North Como in the Tucson National Estates on the city's northwest side. Rader has functioned lately as Herbert's mouthpiece, as Herbert seems afraid to meet with the press. When a reporter and a photographer from the Tucson Citizen called on Herbert, "they were greeted by an entourage of aides, including his chauffeur and dog trainer, who shield the elderly church leader.... Moments later the assistant, who turned out to be Rader, opened the door and said it was 'impossible for virtually anyone outside the church's upper echelons to talk to Armstrong'" (Tucson Citizen, August 22, 1978, p. 1).

When asked why Herbert remains so inaccessible, Rader declared, "His relationship with the church is identical to that of the pope's to worldwide Catholicism." Of course, Rader neglected to mention that the pope isn't afraid to meet with the press and does so often.

Rader later went on to tell the reporter that Ted "was secularizing the broadcasts." Yet a minute later Rader, referring to Quest/78, conceded that the WCG publishes "the finest secular magazine in the country, though we might be interested in selling it because many members don't feel it's related to what we're doing." What does Rader mean "might be interested in selling it"? Has he forgotten that Herbert declared: "I have given the direct order to Mr. Rader to sell or dispose of the magazine Quest/78 as soon as possible" (member letter, June 28, 1978, p. 7)?

Herbert too has charged bitterly that Garner Ted had secularized the church's radio and TV programs (Pastor's Report, July 31, 1978). This accusation was the biggest joke we've ever been asked to swallow. Anybody who has sat through Herbert's long-winded sermons in the late sixties and early seventies knows it was he who secularized both the broadcast and The Plain Truth-all because he felt nonreligious people wouldn't go for a religious format. Evangelist Raymond F. McNair's notes from the 1966 ministerial conference (January 9-19) show positively that, way before Ted came into dominance in his dad's church, Herbert approved secularizing not only the church's radio broadcast but also had the word "Bible" removed from the heading on every page of the "Ambassador College Bible Correspondence Course." Note how McNair recorded Herbert's comments:

Mr. Armstrong mentioned the big problem we have with the broadcast--tailoring it to suit the right audience. We could not get on some of the big U.S. stations if we are "religious." Now the format of the broadcast includes (1) world news, (2) human interest stories about human problems, (3) Bible significance and connection between these, especially relative to Bible prophecy. The average person doesn't have an interest in spiritual things and will not listen to a radio talk which is "religious."

Mr. Armstrong said he thought it would be better not to put the word "Bible" on the correspondence course. He also stated that it would be good to use the name of "Ambassador College" (instead of

It should also be noted that Herbert's testimonial dinners in Southeast Asia are almost totally secular, devoid of any mention of the gospel of Jesus Christ, Jesus' blood, his resurrection, and the need for men to repent of their sins and obey God. Matthew quotes Jesus as saying, "Every one who acknowledges me before men, I also will acknowledge before my Father who is in heaven; but who ever denies me before men, I also will deny before my Father who is in heaven" (Matthew 10:32-33, RSV). Could it be that all along Herbert has been ashamed to mention his professed Lord and Master Jesus Christ before kings and presidents? Does Herbert really value the friendship of world leaders more than the approval of God (see James 4:4)?

A Rising Star Named Garner Ted

While Herbert's church is decreasing in power and wealth, Garner Ted has astounded everyone with his rapid rise to public prominence once again. The October 7, 1978, Los Angeles Times announced that he is now broadcasting on eight stations and is forming congregations in Fort Worth and Oklahoma City. Ted even has a surprising amount of secret support on AC's campus. In the past weeks his followers have dropped hundreds of leaflets around campus giving his new address.

We are also pleased to report that Ted has announced a "full financial disclosure" policy for his new church. He said church organizations must follow the highest code of business ethics and also demand responsible directorships. He asserted that his church's board of directors will include lay members not employed by his church. In addition his church will have an annual outside audit by persons NOT connected with or employed by his church to avoid conflict of interest-something his dad's church has long been criticized for.

From the looks of it, Ted-now that he is out from under the heavy heel of his dad-is pursuing a much more open-minded course and is a lot less pharisaical than his dad. If he can learn to work with others and delegate authority-things his dad never did well-his star could rise higher than his dad's ever rose. Already Ted is saying that-he hopes to bring $10 million to Tyler, Texas-his headquarters-within a year. WCG ministers McDowell and Dart joined him, as did Al Portune Jr. If Ted's income continues to rise and the WCG's income continues its downward slide, look for several dozen WCG ministers to abandon ship and try to ingratiate themselves with Garner Ted.

A Tale of Two Tabernacles

This year's "Feast of the Jews" had a decidedly bipartisan spirit. As Herbert "Stronger-Than-Ever" Armstrong "visited" most of his festival sites via videotape recordings, Garner Ted Armstrong held services in his palm booths on Jekyll Island, Georgia.

At St. Petersburg, Florida (one of the three sites Herbert did visit personally), he gave a rather brief sermon after being helped by others to his easy chair on the stage. Most of his speech was a sarcastic harangue about Ted: "I hear Garner Ted is having himself a little feast up at Jekyll Island. Around 17 people! Ha! Ha!" Actually Herbert's remarks were made either in ignorance or in jealousy since Ted actually had 520 paying customers at his beach party. (Herbert drew nowhere near that many people at his first feast site at Belknap Springs a few decades ago.) In addition Ted outclassed his dad in per capita "take" at the offering tables. On the first offering, Ted's total collection was $12,000 or $23 per person average.

On the trivial side, Ted's devotees had a new songbook to sing from. Ted is using a collection of what he himself had called in past times "old, blasphemous Protestant hymns." But in classical, pharisaical form, he ordered his congregation to pen out all offensive words, such as "cross."

Income Up in WCG?

In a September 25, 1978, letter to members and co-workers, Herbert Armstrong declared emphatically: "The income is UP!... The business office announced Tuesday the Church owes less than any time in many years." Herbert, however, neglected to mention the liquidation of some major property assets. As usual, he neglected to state whether the income was up for one week, one quarter, or one year. Garner Ted, on the other hand, indicated to a reporter from the Tucson Citizen that income for the WCG "was down 17 to 20 percent and attendance also was down" (August 22, 1978).

But what is the income really like? In a September 25, 1978, Good News, "Treasurer's Report" Stan Rader revealed in a statement of income and expenditures that the church took in $67,161,300 in 1977, but spent $1,259,200 (or 1.87%) more than they received as revenue. That's bad enough! But what was really disturbing was that Rader's report was merely "excerpted" from the [WCG's] financial statements, which are prepared in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles and fairly represent the results of operations for the calendar year ending December 31, 1977." We would like to ask: Why didn't the WCG just print the approved income statement and balance sheet in the first place? What does the church have to hide? We hear that the "excerpted" revenue and expense categories printed in the Good News were altered somewhat and "simplified" from the church's audited financial statements. We feel that any organization in the business of preaching ethics and morals to others ought to set the highest possible standard for its own conduct-especially when that organization has come under repeated fire for alleged financial improprieties. The WCC often quotes the scripture: "Abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thes. 5:22, KJV). If the church leaders sincerely wish to practice what they preach, the only course of action for them to pursue is to print an uncensored, unedited balance sheet and income statement right away.

Rader's report is so deficient, however, that it offers no indication that about $2.4 million is spent yearly on mortgage payments for the auditorium. There is no category listing expenditures for the AICF, though $3.4 million was spent for Quest/78 magazine. (Sources indicate that direct AICF-Quest expenses came to over $6 million in 1977 alone and that when overhead and indirect expenses are counted, the total rises to between $8 million and $9 million.)

Another indication that the church's income is plummeting is found in the June 19, 1978, Good News. On page 3 the church admits it has lost 10,000 members from 1972 through 1977 with an accompanying estimated donation loss of $22 million. Knowledgeable sources stated unequivocally that both figures are on the low side, claiming the church has lost closer to 15,000 members and $45 million in donations. With Garner Ted's new church busy grabbing up WCG members and with Herbert's totally ineffective radio and TV programs, it is expected that the WCG's income situation will continue to worsen in the immediate future-even though the selling off of church assets may keep the income artificially high for awhile.

Bricket Wood Campus Sold for Almost Nothing

Since the closing of Ambassador College's campus in Bricket Wood, England, WCG officials have been desperately trying to sell that facility to shore up the organization's wobbly financial status. Rumors were that they had courted offers from Arab oil sheiks to Great Britain's Football (soccer) Association. Now, finally, the campus has been sold for a pittance of what it was actually worth.

The Hertfordshire Advertiser, a local St. Albans-Bricket Wood paper, reported the sale on September 29, 1978. Speaking of the campus, it reported: "It has been bought by the Central Electricity Generating Board for use as a... college for a figure close to the 2-million-pound [about $4 million] asking price.... The board has bought the whole of the college, which covers about 130,000 square feet, together with the sports and recreational facilities, 50 acres of grounds, and an adjoining 140-acre farm." In a Daily Mail article, appearing September 28, 1978, British writer Peter Cliff adds that the campus deal also included an "Olympic-size swimming pool; a running track; tennis and squash courts; a gymnasium that converts into a lecture theatre... and ten cottages."

Further details were disclosed in the Hertfordshire Advertiser: The Board intends to use the college "for management training courses lasting between three days and three weeks to teach new techniques to all levels of management.... The Board intends to sell the farm at some time in the future. It expects to move in about a year's time after existing dormitories have been converted into study bedrooms for about 130 people." The Board also hopes to be able to share the college's sports facilities with the local community. A spokesman for the Board said: "We think we have got good value for [our] money because it would have cost us substantially more for a purpose-built establishment." The (London) Daily Mail, with a circulation of 1.8 million, had this to say:

"Ambitious young executives will soon be learning how to run power stations in the delightful rural surroundings of the former stately home at Bricket Wood.... And after stressful days they will presumably be able to relax in saunas, jog a mile or two and work off managerial paunches on the full-size football pitch.

"The place was wanted as a training college because the Board's present one at Buston, Derbyshire, is considered too cramped. It's also inconvenient for London. The premises in Hertfordshire are not yet ready. Thousands of pounds will be spent converting dormitory accommodations into individual bedrooms. But that is no problem to an industry which showed a record 298 million pound profit over the past year....

"Ambassador College, as it now is, started life early this century as the country residence of East Indian merchant, Sir David Yule, a former director of the Midland Bank. In the Sixties it was sold to an obscure religious sect."

To many former Bricket Wood students, it sounds as if the WCG gave the campus and its property away for less than half of what it must have actually been worth. But at least now the grounds and facilities will be put to a more productive use. Remember how Herbert used to rejoicingly shout that "the sun has SET on the British Empire"? How justly ironic it is that, as the sun sets on Herbert's little empire, the British have taken over one of his last major overseas outposts.

"Satan" Given "God's College" in Texas

Accountant-lawyer Stanley Rader announced on Halloween (October 31) that a cruel "trick" was going to be played on long-time supporters of the WCG. He gave a special "treat" to what WCG members would consider to be one of Satan's churches when he announced that the church's largest piece of property-the Big Sandy campus-was being sold to F. William Menge of Lynchberg, Virginia, who is buying the property for the James Robison Evangelistic Association (Pasadena Star-News, November 3, 1978, p. 15). Rader claims the 1,600-acre wooded preserve in east Texas will be liquidated for a price of slightly more than $10 million. This sale will serve to fill the WCG's depleted coffers and help alleviate a chronic cash-flow problem. But now that the Big Sandy campus has been sold, the church will have one less large asset to sell next time a financial crisis hits the church-and with Herbert running the church and stepping out blindly on faith, the church has a crisis about every three months. (Of course Rader has assured everyone that there is no financial crisis. And once the church pockets the $10 million, he will be right-at least for three or four months.)

WCG in Turmoil in Australia

There are signs that the WCG is in deep trouble in Australia, and a storm may be brewing on the horizon. A former deacon of 19 years said that the three Melbourne churches had lost between 40 and 50 members in the last few months, as well as one minister, three deacons, and one deaconness. When asked why he had left, the deacon commented that, during an overseas trip, he had learned about corruption and mismanagement at the top in the WCG. He explained: "The statements of Jesus Christ that you would know false prophets by their fruits and that you do not gather good fruit off a corrupt tree are completely ignored by the Worldwide Church of God members. The fruits of the organization have only recently been revealed to many of us. So much that has happened has been carefully covered up and hidden from us in Australia" (New Life, August 17, 1978, p. 6).

New Life also reported on Garner Ted's departure from the WCG and discussed the 1977 edition of Ambassador Report. The writer described it as "a scathing attack on the Armstrong organization," "one of the most vicious attacks ever made on a religious cult," and "an almost unbelievable journalistic tirade."

Another Australian source writes that people in the Australian churches are "unsettled" and "tithing contributions have decreased." He reveals that "ministers are not happy with the current situation" and that he thinks "things will continue to deteriorate." He tells us that the Associates Exposing Pseudo Religious Cults recently demonstrated at one of the Plain Truth lectures, and the demonstration was shown on the TV news. In fact the WCG has been featured in a negative light twice on TV in Victoria in the last few months. Ex-WCG members are circulating a small newsletter in Australia. (Their address is P.O. Box 193, Caulfield East 3145.)

We would like to urge all of our readers, especially in countries outside the U.S., to send us news clippings about the WCG in their areas. In this way we can keep our 8,000 readers worldwide better informed about happenings in the WCG.

Spying Continues at AC

Academic eavesdropping is once again in vogue at Ambassador College. In the article "Spying in the Name of God" (Ambassador Report, 1977) we reported that Chancellor Herbert Armstrong had an electronic eavesdropping device in his fourth-floor office that enabled him to listen in secretly on most class lectures at Ambassador College. After we exposed this crude invasion of privacy, several disturbed faculty members disconnected the listening devices found in the ceilings of the classrooms. But now, with Herbert back on the campus scene, he has seen to it that the spy devices are in good working order, according to faculty sources.

Note: At this point in the article appeared three photographs of the listening equipment in Herbert Armstrong's office. Unfortunately, we had only a photocopy of this issue of AR to work with. The photographs in the photocopy were of such poor quality that they were unusable. If you have an original of this issue and can loan it to us, or if you can scan the photographs and send them to us in digitized form, please contact us at youngambassador@altavista.com -The Archivist

An enterprising employee, however, has managed to do a little counter-espionage of his own by snapping three pictures of the spy device in Herbert's office with the lion himself present. As you can see from the first photo, there are two phone-like pieces of equipment directly behind Herbert's desk on the left side of the picture. As the photographer moves in closer, we can distinguish that one of the devices is a telephone and the other resembles a phone but isn't. A third photo zooms in even closer to the push-button listening device and gives us a peek at the classroom numbers on each of the buttons. The S numbers are rooms in the Science Hall (Academic Center), the F numbers are rooms in the Fine Arts Hall, and the A numbers are rooms in Ambassador Hall. In the last few years, the numbers on the classroom doors have been altered so that they no longer coincide with the numbers on Herbert's listening device, but that won't prevent Herbert's itching ears from hearing anything that transpires in the classrooms. In fact, with this device, he should even be able to overhear the innocent church mice chattering about church gossip.

The Case of the Poisoned Library

As we reported in our last newsletter, AC's main library building has been a health hazard ever since termite exterminators used the pesticide lindane there in April. The building was finally closed because the library employees refused to work in its poisoned atmosphere, but it was reopened in mid-August. On September 5, however, it was again closed because the staff once again became too sick to work in its environment. (Even the wife of evangelist Rod Meredith complained that she had experienced difficulty breathing along with burning eyes after about ten minutes in the building.)

In desperation the library staff moved the card catalog out of the contaminated building to the Library Annex, but in a short time the employees began to feel ill just working around the card catalog, so the catalog, like "an accursed thing," was quickly returned to the morgue-like main building.

Ambassador College officials, becoming alarmed over the situation (after six months), have finally hired Dr. Mark L. Carlson of the Department of Community and Environmental Medicine of the University of California (Irvine) to examine the library employees affected by the lindane. This move may have been precipitated by our last newsletter and the death of Allen Manteufel (43), a WCG elder. It was widely rumored that Manteufel had spent many hours studying in the library during the last few months and had been affected by the lindane. The Good News reported that he "complained of an inability to breathe"-a symptom experienced by many of the library employees-and was rushed to a hospital "where he went into shock with a collapsed kidney and liver" (September 25, 1978, p. 16). However, to date there has been NO medical evidence that his death was caused by lindane poisoning. Nevertheless, we urge all affected library personnel to seek the proper medical attention now before another tragedy occurs.

News You Might Have Missed

It seems that the Rader gang has played what can only be termed a cruel practical joke on Garner Ted by legally reserving the name "The Church of God, International" in 48 states. (GTA already had reserved the name in Texas and California.) Garner Ted is contemplating filing a complaint against Rader, Helge, et al., in Georgia on the alleged grounds that Herbert's signature was forged on the document reserving the "International Church" name. Ted feels it was a feminine hand that signed for Herbert. In addition, Rader and Helge have sent a letter threatening possible litigation to a Los Angeles radio station for allowing Ted's new programs to be broadcast. This cheap-bluff technique is a favorite ploy of a law firm of the caliber of Rader, Helge, et al. Nevertheless, Ted has asked in a letter to his brethren to "please pray that God will keep these doors open before me, and let the programs go out, that Satan will not 'get an advantage of us,' or hinder us in any way!" Now that we know Satan is working for-and against both sides, everyone can breathe easier.

As WCG income continues to drop and as defections increase, morale is worsening at headquarters. A guarded source reports that at a recent dinner attended by the Robert Kuhn's, David Jon Hill's, Wayne Cole's, and David Antion's, the main topic of conversation was "what happens when this thing folds up?"

* * * * *

Herbert Armstrong is constantly crowing about the archaeological "dig" "the Work" is sponsoring in Jerusalem. In a May 21, 1978, co-worker letter, Herbert declared that "the AICF... is preparing the very SITE of the THRONE on which Christ will sit at His coming." It would really be tragic, Herbert would have his gullible supporters believe, if Christ didn't have the AICF frantically helping him locate and tidy up the site of his throne. As the Apostle tells it, the archaeological community of Israel is beside itself with gratitude for Ambassador's invaluable contribution to Middle Eastern archaeology.

Surprisingly, however, The Jerusalem Post (August 29, 1978) doesn't even mention Herbert's "great" contribution. The Post explains that "the excavation is sponsored by the Hebrew University, the Israel Exploration Society and the Jerusalem Foundation, and is being financed primarily by a group of South Africans headed by Mendel Kaplan."

In Herbert's latest brethren letter (September 25, 1978) he manages to surpass his previous antics. (Remember his fantasy about Queen Elizabeth?) He now claims that he has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for his accomplishments in furthering world peace—even though his organization has been torn by bitter dissent and strife for years and even though he is at war with his son Ted. Unfortunately Begin and Sadat edged out Herbert in the final balloting. Undaunted by this setback, Herbert is now proclaiming on the inside cover of his new book, The Incredible Human Potential, that this volume of old, rehashed Plain Truth articles is "the most important book since the Bible!" He claims "the greatest superlatives could not do justice to its magnificent message." Will anybody dispute Herbert's claim on next year's Nobel Prize for Literature? Well, Herbert admits with a sigh in his letter that it is impossible for a "man of God" to win the Nobel Prize.

We were recently privileged to read one of the finest essays ever written about Herbert Armstrong. It is entitled "The Requirements for Being an Apostle of Jesus Christ." It is by Dr. Ernest L. Martin, the former Dean of the School of Theology of Ambassador College. A free copy of this essay may be obtained by writing to:

Dr. Ernest Martin, Director
Foundation for Biblical Research
P.O. Box 928
Pasadena, California 91102
Phone: (213) 793-1144

Under the auspices of the Foundation, Dr. Martin has published a large number of excellent theological booklets (and lectures on cassette tape) dealing with the many fallacies of Armstrongism. We recommend them highly. Many of our readers write to us with questions of a purely theological nature. Though we'd like to help, we personally feel that we are unqualified to answer many of these technical questions about the Bible. We strongly recommend that you contact those who are qualified in that area. Dr. Martin is one such individual. We hope our readers will avail themselves of the Foundation's excellent services.

Just as we go to press we've learned that Stan Rader's protege, Ray Wright, has been removed as the WCG's head of finance because of alleged improprieties. We plan to investigate the matter and report on it further in a future newsletter.

Ambassador Report Popular on Campus

Herbert loves to bray incessantly about how effective and interesting his writing is, but he holds other journalists' writing in utter contempt: "When they write, nobody pays any attention to what they write" (Pastor's Report, September 18, 1978). Well lately people have eagerly been lining up to read a certain newsletter in departments all over campus. This newsletter, however, isn't Herbert's-but Ambassador Report. Several of our on-campus supporters spread a few newsletters around campus, and employees were fighting over the few available letters just to get a peek, all the while pretending to disapprove of our letter's revelations. We are tickled that campus employees recognize the informative writing present in our letter, so unlike the long-winded, repetitive diatribes replete with typographical diarrhea that characterize Herbert's constipated and uninformed writings.

One employee commented that our newsletter was like a light shining in darkness. Another shook his head in disbelief, wondering how we seemed to have our finger on the pulse of church and campus activities and how we seemed to know so much "inside" information. Still another felt we were guilty of "twisting the truth accurately." (We wonder how one could twist anything and still do it accurately?) People on campus aren't the only ones reading our newsletters. Here are a few of the comments from our readers worldwide: (Our readers' names are not divulged, in respect for their privacy, unless they specifically authorize the use of their names.)

Letters

It was very nice to hear from you again so soon. So much better than waiting for the annual Report.

The "newsletter format" is great. You needn't be apologetic about it. It's doing what you want it to do—getting the facts out-and getting them out to the people you're trying to help and who need this information now, at a crucial time in their lives.

We waited many months for the first issue of the Report's predecessor, Ambassador Review, at a time when we were filled with fear and guilt over our disenchantment with God's "true church" and its "anointed" hierarchy. We hope you will continue to publish the newsletter. There is a real need for it.

-California

I received your updated newsletter and was simply overwhelmed by its contents. If only I could get others to listen with an open mind and get them to see that the "Armstrong cult" is nothing but an organization that's out to rip them off- how much better off they would be, especially financially but also mentally.

A lady I know gave the local library in Gladewater, Texas, a copy of your 1977 Ambassador Report, and the librarian had so many calls for it that she ordered another copy from you. The librarian had the copies out where people could see them, and it got back to the Armstrong outfit. Two big shots from the WCG came down there and demanded that the librarian get rid of those magazines immediately. She said, "Well, this is still supposed to be a free country where we still have freedom of speech and religion, and I'm not going to dispose of them." So they left very upset.

-Texas

I am very grateful and appreciate very much what your staff has been doing to expose this Worldwide Church of God, Armstrong. His boat here is now beginning to shake and rock. Someday we hope it will sink.

I have just been disfellowshipped and marked last month, only a week ahead of GTA's excommunication. I was able to save my best friend from the bondage of Armstrongism through your publication. The local Pastor did his best in a three-hour marathon "dialogue" with my friend on doctrinal issues, to no avail. He simply lost too more sheep in his flock (my friend and his wife). Soon there will be more. Let's keep up the good work.

-Philippines

I am just one of the many confused members of the WCG. If you dare ask a question of the minister, you get one of three basic answers: (1) You were never really converted, (2) You are rebellious, (3) An implied: You are too dumb to understand. I know this because I "did dare" and did get treated this way; I did not get an answer to my question.

-Missouri

I received your publication, Ambassador Report, only three days ago through a now disfellowshipped member. I feel I cannot resist writing and letting you know how much light it has thrown on me. I have been a member of the WCG for seven years, and I reluctantly admit to being conned. For four of those seven years I lived in poverty because 20% of my gross pay went in the usual tithes. During those years I had three children and a wife to support. I worked nine hours per week overtime, neglecting my family life as a result. After I had paid rent and necessary bills, my wife fed us on $8 per week. I ran up bills to clothe us. These bills could not be paid because of tithing, and I almost finished up in court for nonpayment. My wife who is also a member is not a demanding woman and never complained. The pressure went on and on until I stopped three years ago. I have not tithed since then. In that three years I have provided adequately for my family and built a home, and all this time my wife thought I had been tithing until I told her yesterday. I have lived a lie feeling guilty all these years. What a fool I was. I have worshipped HWA and GTA for 12 years, but now I have awakened to their deception.

-New Zealand

Your type of expose of the facts was very necessary to shock most of us into facing facts and quitting. But when we quit, along with the blessed relief, there was also a great vacuum. You realized this in your first edition and printed places to contact people still interested in church. The biggest tragedy of the Armstrong mess is when people quit them, they blame God for it all and no longer want anything to do with Him. Maybe you could also mention to upset people who don't know where to turn that there are two excellent Bible cassette programs they can join. These people will send a catalog of speakers on hundreds of subjects, and you can study in your own home to get your mind straight before you "try" another church. We were brainwashed into believing that all other churches are wrong and are Satan's churches and maybe some are afraid to try them.

They have tapes such as: "The Marks of a Cult" (#581-BRE), "Armstrongism-Worldwide Church of God" (#906-MAW). These are very revealing.

Tapes are offered free by these two companies: Faith Bible Media, Inc., P.O. Box 140, Sterling, VA 22170 and Bible Believers Cassettes Inc., 130 North Spring Street, Springdale, AK 72764.

Besides Ambassador Report, are there any other writings on the Armstrong cult that you could recommend?

-Washington

Editor: Yes. One book we highly regard is Armstrongism: Religion or Ripoff by Marion J. McNair. This well-documented 339-page book sells for $7.95 hardbound and $4.95 softbound. Copies may be obtained by writing to Marion J. McNair, P.O. Box 398, Mt. Dora, Florida 32757.

A friend of mine read a published letter by a pro-GTA "Committee of Twelve" group which contained some startling information on Stanley Rader's personal activities. Do you know where I can get a copy?

-California

Editor: We understand it is being distributed by GTA supporter Larry Gilbert Johnson, 108 East Fox Street, Beebe, Arkansas 72012.

On September 30, 1978 I went to a meeting in Hackensack, New Jersey, where GTA spoke to about 60 to 80 people. He spoke for about two hours, then had a question and answer session.

One question he was asked was: "What is your salary going to be in your new church?" He said, "$28,500" and made a comment about Ramona Martin being paid $36,000 per year.

He also mentioned that "it was costing $11 million to finance the ministry yearly," when he was in the WCG and that it is now costing "$14 million," which he claims "blows his mind."

He was asked a question concerning Stan Rader. Ted claims that when HWA was about to "baptize" Stan, HWA wanted to put him into the ministry. Ted said, "I was against this because he couldn't speak" and a few other reasons. He also said that he had sent a letter to that effect to HWA but that it never got to him. Instead Ted claim Rader got hold of the letter and never said anything to GTA at HWA about it but kept it to himself.

New York

Let he who is without sin cast the first stone. Are you all of a sudden so perfect you can try to discredit Mr. Armstrong and GTA? So you feel they've sinned. That's not for you to decide-or for that matter any of us. God says, "Judge no man." In other words keep you views to yourself-we weren't born yesterday.

The "truth" is supposed to be freely given. "Freely you have been given." Why are you charging for the [1977] Ambassador Report?

Anonymous, Canada

Editor: Because, unlike the garbage put out by Apostle Armstrong, Ambassador Report is worth something! Even if your interpretation of Matthew 10:8 were correct-and it isn't-it would still not apply to our endeavor, as our purpose is journalistic, not evangelistic.

However, if you still believe your interpretation of Matthew 10:8 is correct, we suggest you write to Herbert Armstrong and ask him why his new book, The Incredible Human Potential (being published by Everest House), is to be sold in bookstores for $8.95.

As for "Judging": If you are referring to Matthew 7:1, read on to verse 2. We consider it perfectly fair for others to judge us by our own criteria. We don't fear that. Maybe you also ought to read Matthew 7:15-23 about how to determine if a person is a false prophet. Matthew says, "You will know them by their fruits." We ask you: How can a church member determine who is of God and who isn't unless he first looks at the fruits and then makes a "judgment"? Ambassador Report is simply showing the world the bitter fruits of Armstrongism. We also believe, as did the apostle Paul (Eph. 5:11, RSV), that false apostles, like roaches, are best controlled by exposure to glaring light.

Concerning your last letter, I culled some interesting statements regarding "secularization" of The Plain Truth from WCG letters and publications.

Then:

"This new policy was inaugurated in July 1968. At that time, we changed the editorial format of The Plain Truth. It became secular in appearance and language." -HWA, co-worker letter, March 27, 1970.

"The Plain Truth is a secular, not a religious publication." -HWA, co-worker letter, November 19, 1969.

Now:

"I am deeply sad to say the same spirit of carnal secular intellectualism that infiltrated God's college has also infiltrated his magazine." -HWA, Good News, September 11, 1978.

"God has brought me back from death because his Plain Truth had gone secular- God had been virtually booted out the window." -HWA, Good News, September 11, 1978.

It should be obvious who is really responsible for "secularizing" The Plain Truth when it's expedient and then de-"secularizing" it again.

-New Jersey

I went for two days to the recent Feast of Tabernacles. There was a film about the AICF with a Mr. C. W. Cole in it. Those people were taking photographs of HWA every time his picture appeared. They are worshipping a god-yes their god HWA.

-South Carolina

This, plus the Vince Lombardi article with its gratuitous use of blasphemy and obscenities, was strange indeed for a "quality" magazine published by "God's only true church"! The above comment came from a mother whose children turned their back on her in their "dedication" to Herbert Armstrong. Unfortunately it's a situation even some of us have been guilty of creating when we were in the brainwashed state due to Herbert's teachings. How identical this case is to that mentioned by Jesus in Mark 7:7-13!

It is most rewarding for us to know that our efforts are encouraging and helping so many victims of the Armstrong fraud. We thank all who are helping to make our publication possible.

Sincerely,

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR7 January 21, 1979

Dear Friends:

As most of you have undoubtedly heard, the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) is in the midst of its greatest crisis ever. Because of the complexity of the situation, we decided to delay our November-December issue until now. We have been following the momentous events of the last few weeks very closely. Here is what has transpired:

The Lawsuit

Since Garner Ted Armstrong's expulsion from the WCG, many members of the church have become increasingly concerned over the rapid liquidation of church and college properties at a time when the WCG has claimed record-high income. Many deeply committed members of the church have been heartbroken to see college properties and church festival sites put up for sale while millions of tithed dollars are diverted to the costly world tours of Herbert Armstrong, the secular Everest House Publishing Company, Quest magazine, and other Ambassador International Cultural Foundation projects.

In late 1978 a handful of concerned WCG members obtained legal counsel about the matter and were put in contact with Hillel Chodos, a distinguished Beverly Hills attorney noted for his expertise in litigating major corporate fraud cases. A legal brief was prepared and presented to the attorney general of California. (Coincidentally, Ambassador Report, completely unaware that any of this was occurring, also contacted the attorney general's office expressing concern over the same matters.)

The attorney general, working in close cooperation with Mr. Chodos, took immediate action. A civil suit was prepared listing the following plaintiffs: Earl and Shirley Timmons of Altadena, California, John and Paula Tuit of New Jersey, Ronald Quinlan of Staten Island, New York, and David Morgan of Pasadena, California. Also listed as a plaintiff are the People of California because monies contributed to nonprofit corporations are, by statute, deemed monies held in public trust and therefore subject to monitoring by the attorney general on behalf of the people.

Listed as defendants are: the Worldwide Church of God Inc., Ambassador College Inc., the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation Inc., Herbert W. Armstrong, Stanley Rader, Ralph Helge, Henry Cornwall, Robert Kuhn, Ray Wright, Osamu Gotoh, plus five firms with ties to certain of these individuals: Worldwide Advertising Inc., Wilshire Travel Inc., Gateway Publishing Inc., Environmental Plastics Inc., of Dallas, Texas, and the accounting firm of Rader, Cornwall, and Kessler.

Among the charges of the suit are the following: (1) that Herbert Armstrong and Stanley Rader have siphoned off ("pilfered") millions of dollars of church funds annually for their personal use, (2) that there has been a failure to provide an adequate accounting of the church's financial position as required by state laws governing charitable institutions, (3) that there has been a refusal to hold regular meetings of the corporations or to allow voting on matters affecting the governance of the organizations, (4) that there has been improper co-mingling of funds among the church, college, and foundation, (5) that there has been a liquidation of church-owned properties "on a massive scale," including about 50 parcels in Southern California, (6) that written records of financial dealings have been removed from the church's Pasadena office, shredded, and destroyed.

The suit does not ask for any monetary damages for the plaintiffs but calls for an accounting of all funds and financial transactions, especially of Herbert Armstrong and Stanley Rader. The suit also calls for the replacement of the trustees of the nonprofit corporations.

The "Raid"

On Tuesday, January 2, Judge Jerry Pacht of the Superior Court of Los Angeles issued a temporary restraining order placing the assets and financial records of the church and related corporations under the control of a receiver, retired Judge Steven Weisman. This was done (on an ex parte motion) because it was feared that church financial records might be destroyed or church assets liquidated before a full hearing could be held. The fears of the attorney general's staff were to later prove well-founded.

The following morning (January 3), armed with the court order, Judge Weisman, deputies of the attorney general, various state law enforcement officers, and a contingent from the Pasadena Police Department swooped down upon the Worldwide Church of God's Pasadena headquarters. Administrative offices and vaults containing property records and bank accounts were cordoned off. State security officers were posted at key points to prevent records from being removed. Also seized were financial records from the Rader accounting firm in Century City.

The swift action by the attorney general put the Armstrong organization in total confusion. Some workers even locked themselves in their offices. Stan Rader was called away from a game of tennis to be informed of the raid by a phone call from Ellis LaRavia. Rader then called Mr. Gary Gittler, one of his lawyers. Gittler went to the college and, while refusing to identify exactly who he was working for, attempted to convince Judge Weisman that the court order was somehow legally deficient. Weisman disagreed, and the operation continued.

Realizing the magnitude of the crisis, C. Wayne Cole, director of the church's ministry, flew to Tucson with church leaders David Antion, Herman Hoeh and Ray Wright to confer with Herbert Armstrong. For once Herbert acquiesced to good judgment and appointed Cole his Acting Executive Director for the duration of the crisis and pledged total cooperation with the investigation. Herbert then issued a signed press release announcing Cole's appointment. Judge Weisman concurred with Cole's appointment and was hopeful that order was about to be restored to the chaotic situation.

Unfortunately, less than 24 hours later Armstrong removed Cole from his new position and declared, "I will not submit to the state." This dramatic change of attitude came after Stan Rader made a phone call to Herbert on Thursday saying Weisman had fired him as head of the church. (Weisman has denied ever saying any such thing. Indeed, he is not authorized to interfere in ecclesiastical matters.) The charge put Rader—who was to have been displaced by Cole—back in control and along with him Ralph Helge, Ellis LaRavia, Raymond McNair, and Roderick Meredith.

Rhubarb in "God's House"

The following morning, the new regime asserted its authority by calling a meeting of church and college employees in the "House for God." Speakers included Rod Meredith and Raymond McNair, who said, "We have the opportunity to shake and move this nation more than has ever been done." Raved McNair, "When the government of God comes to this earth, it will not be a democracy." As the meeting of about 1,500 persons neared conclusion, Wayne Cole attempted to take the podium to tell his side of the story, but a phalanx of Meredith supporters blocked his path. The lights went up, loud music began playing, and the microphone was quickly dismantled as Meredith grabbed Cole's arm and threatened to call the police. Cole backed away only after supporters of Meredith and himself engaged in a shoving match during which two of Cole's men were punched. The Cole group retreated, flinging charges of "outrage" and "travesty" as they left.

Judge Weisman who was present was appalled at the spectacle and vainly tried to convince those present that they were violating their own scriptural belief that chaos should be avoided. Weisman, an elderly, mild-mannered man who walks haltingly because of the after-effects of polio, wanted to reason with them. He tried to explain that although he would have liked Cole as the executive officer in the receivership proceedings, Herbert Armstrong was still the spiritual head of the church. He told a group of elders: "We are not adversaries. I am here as a neutral party to supervise an investigation of expenditures of charitable funds. We're all working toward a common goal. I don't know if there has been a siphoning off of funds; I hope there is nothing wrong, but you are entitled to know."

To all of us at Ambassador Report it is obvious that Judge Weisman is doing his very best to protect the church's assets in a very difficult situation. Earlier in the week after repeated noncooperation from Rader's staff, Weisman confronted Virginia Kineston, Rader's secretary, with the question, "Are you personally loyal to the church or to Mr. Rader?" When she answered "Mr. Rader," Weisman fired her. Other employees who were also asked that question but were unable to decide where their loyalties lay were suspended from their jobs for one week (with pay) and told to make up their minds. Said Weisman: "I wanted people loyal to the church here."

When Wayne Cole fled the raucous meeting at the college auditorium, he was followed out of the building by 25 ministers from across the country who had come to Pasadena for a regional directors meeting. Cole's demotion (and later disfellowship) was a major disappointment to the moderate wing of the ministry. Said one perceptive elder: "Cole was the church's last hope."

Sabbath Court Battle

Late afternoon on Friday the battle shifted to the downtown Los Angeles County courthouse where the head of Rader's legal defense team, Allan Browne, attempted to show that the receivership was causing the church irreparable harm and should be lifted. The stifling courtroom was packed to overflowing with bus loads of Ambassador College students, employees, and church members who had been encouraged to attend to demonstrate their "support for Mr. Armstrong." The only witness in the four-hour hearing was Judge Weisman who testified that since the moment he arrived on campus Wednesday, he had met with obstruction and had been thwarted in his efforts to obtain church documents for protection during the investigation. He also testified he closed off access to the church's Swiss bank account.

Hillel Chodos pleaded with presiding Judge Vernon Foster not to lift the receivership, saying it would take Rader only 20 minutes and a pack of matches to do away with crucial evidence. The most dramatic moment came when Chodos presented some of the evidence discovered in only two days of investigation: a shredding machine from Rader's office and the executive payroll checkbook for the church (found at the Worldwide Advertising Agency's offices in Century City). Checks drawn in just the last few days before "the raid" included one to Herbert Armstrong for $40,000; one to Natalie Rader for $1,144; one to Rader's secretary, Virginia Kineston, for $2,500 (marked "bonus"); and checks to Rader for $2,400, $4,940, and one for $35,000 marked "bonus."

Although Judge Foster modified the receivership somewhat by ordering Weisman, for the next week, not to interfere in the normal day-to-day operation of the church, he absolutely refused to remove the receiver. The proceedings ended at 8:30-well past Friday sunset.

The Propaganda Barrage

The following day, the Pasadena congregation of the WCG was treated (subjected) to a three-and-a-half-hour Sabbath service consisting of a Dean Wilson sermonette, a legal report from Ellis LaRavia, and a sermon from Roderick Meredith who said: "We are in a war. Let's see if we are faithful warriors." Meredith then proceeded to announce the disfellowship of Wayne Cole, David Antion, Robert Kuhn, and Ben Chapman. (We understand these four "cooperated" with the court-ordered receiver.)

All of this was then followed by sermons from, of all people, the church's lawyers, Stanley Rader and Ralph Helge, who castigated the judges and courts as being agents of Satan. Rader accused Wayne Cole of being the equivalent of a Nazi collaborator and also had this to say about the future of the church: "We are going to have a ministry that's not divided. We are going to have church government as it was here up until about ten years ago. And we are all going to know what the doctrines are, and we are all going to agree."

Just hours later campus hostilities escalated to a direct face-to-face confrontation between state security officers assigned to guard church financial records and Ambassador College security officers who, under orders from Meredith, attempted to enter the college administration building and change locks. The Pasadena Police Department was notified, and the following morning the State Department of Justice assigned 20 additional armed security officers to protect the church's records.

The next day Rader tried to whitewash the episode by claiming to the press that Meredith's raiders were simply trying to go about their normal business (on Saturday night?). Said Rader, "my people were turned away. They were denied access to their offices.... We don't work a 40-hour week. How do you think this organization could be so successful if we only worked 40 hours? It's successful because we have gifted, inspired, indefatigable workers for God." When asked if he classified himself in that category, he replied "yes."

Monday morning brought no letup to the campus hostilities and confusion. Rader arrived at Ambassador College, along with his chauffeur John Kineston and Ralph Helge, to find a full contingent of news reporters and cameramen awaiting him. Rader appeared shocked to discover his office suite locked to prevent the removal of records. A four-hour meeting between the Rader gang and the receiver ended in a stalemate, whereupon Rader's attorney Allan Browne petitioned Judge Foster once more. Foster ordered that Rader be allowed access to his office and to church records but only in the presence of Judge Weisman, the receiver. Foster made every effort to see that the church's operations continue as usual. However, he also saw the importance of maintaining the receivership.

The "Media Event" Begins

On Wednesday, January 10, hearings began as scheduled in Los Angeles Superior Court to determine if the temporary receivership would continue. For days previous to this the entire Ambassador Report staff had mobilized to alert the press and media to what was transpiring. Among those who covered the hearings were representatives from Time magazine, the Los Angeles Times, ABC-TV, NBC-TV, CBS-TV, KTTV, KFWB News Radio, National Public Radio, City News Service, and Associated Press. Newsweek asked John Trechak of Ambassador Report to cover the hearings for them.

The same morning the hearings began, the Los Angeles Times carried a story by Bert Mann and Michael Seiler that was a major scoop. The Times was able to obtain a church financial document for the 1975-1976 fiscal year that was later to be submitted as evidence. Here is an excerpt from the Times article:

"The 1975-1976 fiscal document shows the church spent $1.7 million on travel, lodging and public relations, including expensive meals and gifts for what church officials claim was the courting of foreign dignitaries.

"The lion's share of the money expended was spent by Osamu Gotoh, said to be a former Tokyo cab driver who at that time was the coordinator of church activities in many countries. Gotoh's services were dispensed with after Armstrong had the heart attack in 1977 that curtailed his travel. But other substantial portions were spent by Armstrong and Rader.

"Among the items listed were:

"-$564.15 for June 25 and June 28, 1975, meals at Perino's. Only Gotoh's name is listed under the heading 'Purpose of Payment' on the document.

"-$38,494.81 owed Trans World Airlines by Gotoh for a globe-girdling trip in August that took him to many of the world's major capitals, including Paris, London, Rome, Geneva, Tel Aviv and Tokyo, with side trips to Addis Ababa and Nairobi.

"-$2,902.03 to cover costs at the Beverly Wilshire for guests described only as 'Senator Bunsei Sato' and 'Japanese senators.' These same visitors also rung up a $2,588.60 bill at a West Los Angeles limousine service, which the church covered.

"-A bill for $5,739.27 described only as an American Express card bill for Gotoh at the Imperial Hotel in Tokyo.

"-A bill to cover Gotoh's Diner's Club card bill of $1,519.75 for Gotoh in a Japanese night club.

"-Another American Express bill to Gotoh for $6,325.40 to cover expenditure described only as 'hotel bill-Switzerland.'

"-Three bills from Perino's covering an unknown number of meals totaling $2,304.40.

"-Bills from the Hilton Hotel-Jerusalem, paid by Rader on his Diner's Club card, totaling $10,131.11. The bills are all dated Feb. 25, 1976, but no details are given.

"-A Steuben Glass bill of $12,402 described as '1 Moses, 1 Pyramidon, 1 Excaliber, 3 Pillal of the Griffin.' No other description is given nor are the recipients of the gifts stated.

"-$26.12 for 'Golf balls for King Leopold.'

"-A July 9, 1975, bill from Gucci in Paris for $1,162.10. No explanation given on document.

"-Three Aug. 27, 1975, bills, from Gucci, Beverly Hills, paid by Gotoh's credit cards, totalling $1,215.82. No further details.

"-A December 23, 1975, bill on Gotoh's Diner's Club for purchases from Christian Dior, Paris, of $645.46.

"-Another Gotoh bill, charged to his Diner's Club card, for $2,124.24 on Dec. 18, 1975, for a purchase, details unknown, from Siberian Fur Store, Kowloon, Hong Kong."

The article went on to quote Rader's excuses for the expenditures. Also reported was Allan Browne's confirmation that the church did indeed have a Swiss bank account and gold bullion. But said Browne: "Is there anything wrong with that? Is this the beginning of the state telling the Pope what kinds of robes he can wear or that he should not live in such splendor in the Vatican?"

$150 per Hour

Wednesday's hearing opened with Hillel Chodos voicing a strong objection to church funds being used to pay Rader's lawyers. Sixty thousand dollars had been paid out the previous night to Allan Browne's firm and another law firm as advance payment for legal fees. Judge Julius Title expressed utter amazement at the large number of lawyers Rader had representing him in the case. Besides Ralph Helge and his associates, there were two other law firms with large staffs for each. Title ordered the defense attorneys to return a good portion of the amount they had received. Money for services already rendered (at a rate of $150 per hour per lawyer) was allowed, but advance retainer fees are improper in cases involving money in a trust, said Title. Further, he ordered that half of the fees already earned be paid by Rader and the other defendants and not by the church. He also ordered that no further legal fees for individuals be paid for by the church.

Early in the proceedings Judge Title denied defense attorney Allan Browne's motion to end the receivership based on constitutional law. Browne has claimed repeatedly that the receivership and related investigations interfere with his clients' freedom of religion. Judge Title (as had Judges Pacht and Foster earlier) did not see a First Amendment violation. Nor was Title moved by Browne's assertion that the United California Bank had called in $1.3 million in demand notes owed by the church and that "a million dollars worth of [WCG] checks have been bouncing...."

Rader Takes the Stand

Thursday's court session was the most revealing to date. Stanley Rader was put on the witness stand to answer questions about his financial dealings with the church. Rader testified that under the terms of the employment contract he has with the church, he gets $200,000 per year plus expenses. He also admitted that under the agreement he would receive $100,000 per year plus expenses to the year 2003 even if he stepped down as adviser to Herbert Armstrong. Here is an excerpt from the Los Angeles Herald Examiner of January 12, 1979, which gives details of the financial benefits Rader has received from his associations with the church as obtained from his testimony:

"-The church financed his purchase of a $300,000 Beverly Hills home in 1972 which Rader sold last year for $1.8 million. He said he pocketed the profits.

"-The church paid most of the taxes on Rader's home. Asked why, he said, 'that would take a long theological explanation.'

"-The church recently bought Rader a $150,000 house in Tucson, Arizona, so he could be near the 86-year-old Armstrong, who now lives there following a major heart attack last year. It also paid for all the furnishings.

"-Rader's law firm has been the only legal counsel used by the church for many years. The amount of its reimbursement was not brought out.

"-An accounting firm in which Rader has been an associate does all of the church's books.

"-Rader set up a corporation to buy airplanes and lease them to the church in an arrangement through which the church paid the full price of the airplanes and Rader's firm made a profit.

"-Rader organized an advertising firm known as Worldwide Advertising, which handled all advertising, radio and television shows put on by the church. Rader recently stepped out of that firm.

"Rader's answers at first were hesitant and convoluted. Superior Court Judge Julius M. Title at one point instructed him: 'Mr. Rader, I think it would be helpful if you would listen to the questions-you are a lawyer-and respond to the questions.'

"Hillel Chodos, the attorney for the plaintiffs, sought to show that Rader has exercised complete legal control over matters which involve his self interest. He suggested that Rader has given misinformation to Armstrong to keep him from hiring independent counsel, and from knowing the true nature of the current investigation."

It was while Rader was on the witness stand that his counsel Allan Browne introduced into evidence and showed a ten-minute promotional film prepared by the church. It was entitled "Herbert W. Armstrong-Ambassador of Peace." Unlike Stanley Rader who sat transfixed at the edge of his chair in the witness box as he watched his leader prancing about on the screen to symphonic strains, the press was duly unimpressed, perhaps even embarrassed. Ironically, the film has "God's Ambassador" declaring: "People are concerned about self-what they can accumulate. That is the cause of all the world's problems!" (This is one Armstrong teaching Ambassador Report agrees with. In fact, we're convinced that Herbert Armstrong himself is living proof of the statement's veracity.)

Conflicting Testimony

Rader was only the first witness. Jack Kessler of the accounting firm of Rader, Cornwall, and Kessler was next. We now quote from the Los Angeles Times of January 12. (We do so because some may believe we are prejudiced and are perhaps fabricating these quotes. For those who have doubts, please write to the newspapers quoted and purchase a copy of the issues from which the excerpts are taken.)

"William Kessler, a certified public accountant and lawyer active in the accounting company, was asked by the attorney representing both Rader and the church if Rader benefited in any way from the firm.

"No...he's not a partner or an employee,' Kessler said.

"Kessler said he and the other partners merely 'bought' the company from Rader, not for money but for 'an exchange of promises.'

"We promised him to service his clients (primarily the church, Ambassador College and Ambassador International Cultural Foundation) to the best of our abilities... and he promised us not to compete with us and that we could use his name.'

"What, if any, profits Rader has made from the four companies remained unclear as the hearing adjourned late Thursday afternoon."

The next witness to take the stand was Virginia Kineston, Rader's secretary. Here is how Anne Sutherland of the Pasadena Star-News (January 12) described her testimony:

"...Virginia Kineston, Rader's personal secretary, testified about the events of the first day of the receivership, when retired Judge Steven Weisman arrived on the campus.

"She described the receiver's arrival as 'A swarm of people came in. Our office was under siege.'

"Mrs. Kineston's clipped, tersely worded testimony was in direct opposition to that given in court last week by Weisman, who testified about the difficulties he had faced in attempting to take control of the church documents.

"Mrs. Kineston, attired in a shimmering emerald green dress, said that Weisman fired her without ever asking her about her loyalties, and also said that Armstrong and Rader 'were out.'

"Judge Weisman had earlier testified that after encountering difficulty in securing control of documents, he asked Mrs. Kineston if her loyalties lay with the church or with Rader. When she replied 'with Mr. Rader,' he terminated her. (She was reinstated two days later, after Weisman, attorneys and church officials worked out some of the logistics of the limited receivership.)

"Mrs. Kineston also denied shredding any material the day that Weisman arrived, adding that she did not know if anyone else had used the shredder. She said the office shredding machine was regularly used to dispose of other materials, such as the time that someone sent some pornographic mail to the offices. 'Of course I've used the shredder,' she snapped when questioned by Chodos."

John Kineston, her husband, was the next witness. We again quote Ms. Sutherland's account:

"One of the more dramatic conflicts in testimony presented in court concerned John Kineston, Rader's aide and chauffeur, who allegedly removed documents from Rader's office after the receivership was imposed Jan. 3, which Kineston referred to as 'the day of the raid.'

"Kineston vehemently denied the allegations. He said that he took no church records and did not drive in a Cadillac limousine to Burbank airport, where the church's jets are kept. He also denied being near the campus transportation building or the data processing building, where financial records are kept.

"During the period in question I most assuredly, definitely never went near the building,' Kineston testified....

"But the next witness to take the stand told a different story, causing a flurry of note-passing and conferring among the defense attorneys and defendants Rader and church counsel Ralph Helge, who sat a few feet behind their four attorneys.

"Chester Roberson, a church member who has worked for the church as a gardener and mechanic for the past 25 years, said that he saw Kineston come to the transportation building the afternoon of Jan. 3, carrying something in his hands.

"Chodos showed Roberson some accounting ledgers, and asked the mechanic if the objects in Kineston's hands resembled such items. 'Yes,' replied Roberson in a direct manner that contrasted the articulate manner of Rader's colleagues.

"Roberson testified that he then heard Kineston decline to have gasoline pumped into the car, saying that he was afraid that he would be seen leaving for Burbank.

"Roberson also said that he saw Kineston enter the data processing building late Saturday night. After witnessing this, he added, he and David Morgan, one of the plaintiffs in the lawsuit, reported the incident to a nearby policeman.

"After scoring a point that caused obvious consternation in the defense camp, Chodos also appeared stunned when one of his witnesses, secretary April Cowan, testified that although Kineston did appear in the transportation building, he was not driving a Cadillac.

"Chodos asked the young woman if she had conferred with Helge, and when she replied that she had, he ended his questioning....

"Willis John Bicket, accounting manager, was called to the stand by defense attorney Allan Browne to describe the effect the receivership has had on the daily operations of the corporations.

"Bicket, who, like other church supporters maintained eye contact with Rader while testifying, said: 'We are in a crippled condition.'"

The 99.9% Victory

Friday, January 12, was the third day of the hearing. No further testimony was heard as each side was allowed only 30 minutes to present their closing arguments. Allan Browne, the lawyer for the defense, spoke first. He reiterated previous arguments he had made stating the only action acceptable to his side would be the termination of the receivership.

Hillel Chodos then very eloquently summed up the arguments for the Attorney General's side. (Space does not permit us to run the entirety of his comments in this letter. Perhaps we can in the future.) Chodos argued that in the church's literature the tithes are said to be God's money, but that in court the church's leaders claimed it was theirs to do with as they wished. Chodos said the members contributed the money for a specific purpose, namely God's work, not for the personal pleasure and profit of the trustees of the funds. He castigated Rader for his conduct as the church's general counsel, saying: "He has millions of dollars that must be disgorged [and returned to the church]." Said Chodos of Rader's conduct: "It's the most extraordinary thing I've encountered in all my years of litigation!"

Receiver Weisman spoke briefly to the court, telling how his duties as receiver had been continually obstructed and asking that he be given greater control to carry out his responsibilities. Said Weisman, "I am the lone voice in the foxhole at the front lines."

Judge Title's detailed ruling on the matter brought shock to many of Rader's followers who were sitting in the courtroom. Title ordered the receivership to continue pending trial on the civil charges leveled by the state. Until then (probably four to six months or more) the receiver should "possess," "supervise" and "monitor" all church assets and records. The receiver was instructed not to interfere in ecclesiastical matters but does have extensive powers to hire and fire. The only exceptions to the latter being Herbert Armstrong and Rader, who cannot be removed without Title's permission. Of course in that case they could still function ecclesiastically (presumably, however, without pay).

In making his decision Judge Title said that the evidence of misappropriation of funds was a "cause for concern." He commented that "astonishing amounts of money have been expended by Armstrong, Rader and others" and that the matter would have to be open for examination at the time of trial. Title also expressed concern that the church's administration was a "one-man operation" in spite of the fact that it is filed with the state as a charitable, nonprofit corporation supposedly having a board of trustees. He said evidence suggested that in recent years Herbert Armstrong's "one-man operation" had become, with Rader, a "two-man operation" and that with Herbert Armstrong's advancing age and poor health "perhaps it is a one-man operation again." Title also expressed concern over Rader's involvement in several financial transactions, including his aircraft-leasing firm that leases jets to the church, the purchase and sale of his Beverly Hills' home, and his employment contract with the church that gives him $200,000 per year plus an apparently unlimited expense account. Said Title, "I question the legality of his present employment with the church."

*Note: At this point in the article appeared two photographs of Hillel Chodos and Stanley Rader. Unfortunately, we had only a photocopy of this issue of AR to work with. After the hearing Allan Browne, Rader's lawyer, said he would appeal the decision immediately. Rader, however, was silent for the first time since the receivership began and when questioned by the press as to whether he would now cooperate simply said "no comment." Ambassador Report asked Hillel Chodos to assess the results of the hearing. Said Chodos: "We won. We got 99.9% of what we wanted."

Herbert Fights Back

Of course, throughout all of this, Herbert remains out of state in Tucson where he cannot be subpoenaed by the attorney general of California. But Herbert hasn't just been sitting on his hands! Oh no. He's been up to his old tricks.

On January 7, three days before the January 10 hearing even began, Herbert wrote a letter to the church. Here is one excerpt:

"Our Great God is still on His throne! God has given his Work a TREMENDOUS VICTORY against the most MONSTROUS conspiracy and attack Satan ever launched against God's Work!

"I want here to give you the true inside story. You've probably read of the outrageous false charges against myself and Mr. Stanley R. Rader in 8-column front-page banner headlines, or heard it on TV news. But we were vindicated in the court, the conspiracy actually triggered by Satan broken. And God's Work SURGES ON!" (Emphasis his throughout.)

Herbert then went on to equate the attorney general's actions with a Satanic attack upon the church when in fact the legal action was brought to protect the church from having its assets liquidated. Herbert continues:

"But when this suit came for a hearing in court, Friday afternoon, January 5th, GOD GAVE US THE VICTORY. Although our records were seized, NO EVIDENCE of any wrongdoing had appeared."

Nonsense! There was much evidence of wrongdoing, and as a result the judge refused to lift the receivership. Here is another quote from Herbert's letter:

"Last Wednesday we had the astonishing situation of Christ's Apostle having been put out of God's Church under color of authority of the State government, and Wayne Cole made the HEAD OF THE CHURCH by the state civil government!"

Ridiculous! Herbert was never removed by anyone. The state has no authority to remove him from his ecclesiastical position as spiritual head of the church and never attempted to do so. That was very clearly stated by Judge Foster on Friday, January 5, and reiterated later by Judge Title on January 13. In fact, it was Herbert himself who put Cole in charge of the church (under himself, of course) on January 3. And Herbert wrote and signed a press release announcing that appointment. We even have a copy of it in our files.

Herbert's January 7 letter is absolutely outrageous, but for sheer insanity one would have to look far and wide to find the equal of his letter to the church dated January 14, 1979. Comparing the attorney general's action of protecting church assets to Herod's attempt at murdering the infant Jesus, Armstrong wrote that charges of "lavish spending" etc. were a "monstrous lie." He then continued:

"Now the State of California has appointed a Receiver, whose pay and expenses for his supporting staff are to run much higher than either mine or Mr. Rader's ever did, and who is using GOD'S TITHE MONEY TO PAY PROSECUTION EXPENSES AND TO DESTROY GOD'S CHURCH!

"MONEY SENT TO THE USUAL ADDRESS will be used by a Receiver appointed by the State.

"The State has seized and tied up all our Church funds. So send a special offering to me, personally, for our legal defense and to save the Work-to Herbert W. Armstrong, c/o General Delivery, Tucson, Arizona, 85731."

The fact is the receiver's budget is quite limited and is being used to perform many business functions that Armstrong and Rader should have themselves been performing all along. For instance the receiver's staff is now doing an audit of the church's finances to ascertain exactly what is the true financial state of the church. Another expense which Judge Weisman has incurred is in the area of security. He has found it necessary to hire extra security people to protect church records because of the continuous obstruction he has encountered from the Rader-Meredith gang. These expenses would have been far lower had there been cooperation. As for Herbert's charge that tithe money is being used to pay for someone's prosecution, the fact is there have been no indictments yet, but maybe Herbert has had a vision. The attorney general's people are, of course, on government payroll, not on church salary.

At the end of the letter Herbert had this to say:

"I have to ask you to SACRIFICE AS NEVER BEFORE. Send the most generous offerings it is possible for you to send to defend God's Work.

"And please state in your letter, in your own words, that this money is YOUR ENDORSEMENT OF MY APOSTLESHIP, AND THE MONEY IS TO BE USED FOR DEFENDING GOD'S WORK AS I, Christ's Apostle, deem best.

"CONTINUE TO SEND, for the defense of God's Work as generously as possible, even at sacrifice, to the address below until I notify you otherwise-and make it payable to ME, PERSONALLY .... SACRIFICE AS NEVER BEFORE!"

The above letter was secretly run off the press in the early morning hours of Monday, January 15. However, a conscientious insider passed on word of the letter and Judge Weisman was able to stop the mailing of about 60,000 of the 85,000 letters. As the embargoed letters sat waiting at the Pasadena Post Office, Judge Title backed up Weisman's action, saying Herbert's letter was a direct violation of his court order.

It's not hard to see why. Herbert's letter is a perfect example of the very type of conduct he is charged with in the lawsuit (i.e., using church resources to obtain money for personal use). Judge Title had even specifically ruled that church funds were not to be used to pay for the legal defense of any individuals. If church members do as the letter suggests, Herbert will collect vast sum of money while the Worldwide Church of God, already financially drained, will go into bankruptcy. This is exactly what the receiver's installation was aimed at preventing. Judge Weisman's action was a wise and necessary one. But again his orders were circumvented. Some letters were secretly distributed and many church members around the country received calls from ministers and deacons who read them the letter on the phone. In the last few days we've heard stories of members selling personal property and sending what amounts they could obtain to Herbert in Tucson.

Hillel Chodos called Herbert's letter "inflammatory" and said it was "unfortunate" that he had taken this course. Said Chodos: "It certainly isn't cooperation. It has always been our belief that the members of the church are fine people and law abiding... and that they would be eager to see the affairs of the church brought into proper order and that all rumors that aren't true are finally quashed. We would hope that all members will be eager to cooperate, but we can't protect people from their own foolishness."

And foolishness it certainly is when professing Christians so quickly throw out all reason, even ignoring the very scriptures they have for years professed to believe. For instance, look at I Peter 2:13-15:

"Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evildoers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God..." (KJV).

Now let's look at another passage often quoted in past years by Herbert Armstrong, Romans 13:1-4:

"Let every person be subject to the governing authorities. For there is no authority except from God, and those that exist have been instituted by God. Therefore he who resists the authorities resists what God has appointed, and those who resist will incur judgment. For rulers are not a terror to good conduct, but to bad. Would you have no fear of him who is in authority? Then do what is good, and you will receive his approval, for he is God's servant for your good. But if you do wrong, be afraid, for he does not bear the sword in vain; he is the servant of God to execute his wrath on the wrongdoer" (RSV).

In addition to these scriptures, also look at Isaiah 59, Matthew 5:25-26, 39-40, John 3:19-21, Isaiah 5:20, and Proverbs 18:13, 17. Obviously, neither obedience to constituted authority nor reason, tolerance, or compliance with scriptural admonition prevail in the Armstrong organization today.

Federal Court Hearing

Tuesday morning (January 16), as two dozen church members picketed and prayed outside the federal courthouse, attorneys for Rader asked U.S. District Court Judge Robert Firth to declare unconstitutional the Los Angeles Superior Court decision which had put the church's earthly affairs into Judge Weisman's hands. They also asked Firth to award the church $700 million in damages for the court's action. But in the first hearing on this matter Judge Firth refused to remove the receiver, saying that the state court judges had sufficient reason to impose a receivership. Said Firth: "It is obvious at this stage that it would be foolish to intrude the federal court into the proceedings taking place in state courts." He also said that "Judge Title and others over there have arrived at a conclusion-Judge Title apparently after a three-day hearing. I just don't have quite the degree of ego to interfere." His later comments also revealed skepticism as to the merits of Rader's $700 million lawsuit against the state. (The argument will continue in federal court on January 29.)

The hearing was not without its colorful moments. Allan Browne attempted to defend Herbert Armstrong, saying: "The press is crucifying him! He's cut off. He can't communicate!" (Perhaps Mr. Browne could solve the problem by asking Herbert to come back to California.) Browne also raved: "The beaches of Normandy look pale to what's going on here." But Browne's histrionics were no match for the clear logic of Chodos who said that the attorney general never intended to interfere with communications between the spiritual leader and his followers. But the money involved in the letter was under the protection of the state. Chodos' words brought a chorus of groans from the courthouse audience packed with Rader supporters. But Judge Firth, irritated by the vocal demonstration, said: "One more outburst and this courtroom is going to be cleared."

On Tuesday the WCG also filed a written appeal of Judge Title's decision with the state Court of Appeal, but that court may take many days or weeks to decide if it will even consider the matter. Knowledgeable observers say it is unlikely that the state Court of Appeal will overturn the rulings of the Superior Court.

Church Records, Assets Missing?

With each new defeat in the courts it appears that the pro-Rader forces at Ambassador are becoming more desperate to hold together the rapidly disintegrating Armstrong empire. Rumors of break-ins and theft at church headquarters are rampant and apparently not unfounded. On Friday, January 19, a spokesman for Judge Weisman told the Los Angeles Times that security at the church's headquarters had broken down and vital assets, including gold bullion and coins, expensive paintings, and computer tapes containing financial information may be missing.

A. Sheridan Atkinson, chief operating officer for Weisman, said he was "getting no cooperation" from church leaders in his attempts to locate church assets. Weisman has also found it necessary to fire one outside private security firm and replace it with another in what were described as "some weird circumstances." "All I can tell you for sure is that we've had our armed guard security system violated two or three times this week," said Atkinson. He said that in one instance his auditors entered a headquarters vault Tuesday night to check the computer tapes stored there against an inventory list. The vault, however, was left unguarded for several hours early Wednesday morning when a guard left his post. A check later in the morning indicated two missing tapes that apparently contained a summary of the church's financial interests and a membership list. He said that church personnel later gave him two tapes, but he had no way of knowing if they were the same two tapes taken out. Atkinson told the Times that he fears-but cannot prove-that the gold, paintings, and computer tapes were removed from church headquarters and spirited away to church-owned property in Arizona. Atkinson said the reason he had doubts as to what occurred is because church employees are slowing down his work. He implied that those with information valuable to his investigation were being close-mouthed about what they know.

Ambassador Report has learned that not only are employees who cooperate with the receiver being ostracized but some have also been suspended or fired for refusing to obey superiors who've instructed them to disobey the court's orders. Apparently some have even been threatened with violence. Rader has also beefed up security forces at the church's headquarters with numerous burly but untrained church members to "guard the property." The only real purpose of this "goon squad" is to intimidate those who wish to cooperate with Judge Weisman. Indeed, it's a madhouse on campus. Wild accusations are flying all over, and employees are running to the right-wing leaders urging them to fire fellow employees who are not as fanatical as they are. The mood seems somewhat reminiscent of the purges in communist China. The only difference is that this is taking place at the headquarters of the "true" church of God. Said one minister concerning the campus pandemonium: "I'm staying away from the Armstrong campus. Those men have killing in their eyes."

Time to Flee?

Herbert Armstrong has called a ministerial conference for Monday, January 22. It will be held in Tucson, Arizona, where he is out of reach of the California attorney general. What will transpire is anybody's guess. Rumors are rampant, however, that the WCG will abandon its California operation and move its headquarters elsewhere-probably to Arizona. Some church officials are even talking of moving everything to another country-perhaps Israel.

Tonight (January 21), as we go to press, we have learned that Stanley Rader has announced at a press conference earlier today that the church's entire operations will indeed be moved out of state immediately. He also predicted that within one week no money would be flowing into the coffers of the Worldwide Church of God. Whether or not Herbert Armstrong has authorized this incredible decision, or is even aware of it, remains to be seen. One thing is certain however. Unless the WCG's employees and members begin cooperating with Judge Weisman and his staff, the Worldwide Church of God's operations will not be revived and its income will virtually cease. Bankruptcy will be right around the corner.

Church members, as usual, are not being told the whole story. The Worldwide News, most members' only source of information on the lawsuit, is slanted, incomplete, and inaccurate on many of the key details of the suit and the court hearings. The Worldwide News (January 15, 1979) published different news clippings, trying to appear as objective as possible, but what the members aren't aware of is that a number of the most incriminating articles on the church were not reprinted. The articles that were reprinted omitted numerous statements that put Rader and the church in a bad light, and the editors didn't even have the honesty to indicate these omissions with ellipsis points. But evidently the church's top officials don't wish the truth to come to light. Notice Rader's self-professed method of dealing with accusations against the church: "I, too, cannot understand why, upon hearing any of the flagrant rumors, which have been recently brought to my attention, you [ministers] cannot simply respond to others, 'That is not true!'" (The Worldwide News, Jan. 15, 1979, p. 2.) (The answer to this is simple, Stan. Maybe some still believe lying is a sin, and when they hear rumors that are true, they have great difficulty saying, "That is not true.")

To add to the confusion, members are being told by their ministers and by Herbert that the church is being unfairly "persecuted" and that "Satan is attacking." Members don't have access to all the facts, and consequently many are going to send their hard-earned dollars not to the WCG but to Herbert personally. These sincere and dedicated people will not realize that by doing so they will not only be throwing away their money but will be destroying the very church they love. If any of our readers have friends in the WCG that they wish to help, we offer this suggestion. Send them a copy of this newsletter along with a note encouraging them to read it and get all the facts. (Reproductions of this newsletter can be made very easily by simply taking the issue to any photocopy service. Most charge about 5¢ per page for copies.)

Meanwhile, Garner Ted Armstrong, Herbert's son, isn't rejoicing over the recent chain of events, but he isn't keeping silent either. Ted finds it incredibly ironic that the Attorney general is having to step in and do the very thing he recommended to his father last year-put the church finances in order. Ted told the Pasadena Star-News on January 6: "I tried to tell my dad. I was overruled." Ted also stated that he complained to his dad of the involvements of Rader in outside corporations that were doing business with the college and church and warned his dad that such should not be permitted. "When I found out there were five or seven or eleven corporations Rader was involved with, to my mind, it was a simple matter of conflict of interest," Ted explained. "That is why I went beating a steady path to Tucson [where his dad lives]. I pleaded with dad, 'Please, 'we've just got to get rid of this sort of thing.'"

Ambassador Report will continue to monitor the events in Pasadena, and we'll report to you as soon as we are able. We have been absolutely swamped with work-corresponding with and providing information to various government agencies, providing background information and leads to the press and media, talking to disenchanted and confused WCG members, ministers, etc. We hope you'll forgive us for not being as regular with our newsletters as we should. Thanks again to all of you who are making our publication possible.

Sincerely,

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR8 March 14, 1979 (Jan.-Feb. Issue)

Dear Friends:

So much has transpired in the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) during the last few weeks that many are understandably having difficulty making sense of the news reports coming out of Pasadena. In this newsletter we hope to bring you up-to-date on what has occurred and shed some light on the chaos surrounding the WCG and Ambassador College. We begin where our last newsletter left off.

Atrocities and Alibis

On January 21, as our last issue went to press, Stanley Rader announced that because of the court-appointed receivership placed on his organization, the WCG would move its headquarters out of California to a "safe haven." Exactly where that would be was not stated, but Rader hinted that he and Herbert Armstrong might begin traveling continuously "to fulfill missionary responsibilities." Said Rader of Pasadena, "There'll be no fresh money coming here." Rader railed against what he described as "atrocities" perpetrated by the receiver, retired Judge Steven Weisman. Rader complained: "It's impossible for us to conduct business as usual."

Rader claimed it was necessary for the headquarters of the church to be moved because the Ambassador College property had been "desecrated" by the receiver's smoking on the premises, by his allowing disfellowshipped members to enter campus property, and by his auditors working on the sabbath. He explained that when the desecration is cleansed, the church would reclaim its Pasadena property. One can only speculate as to where this new doctrine of building desecration and sanctification came from. In coming up with these alibis Rader conveniently forgot that the concert series in "God's House" brings many smokers on campus who regularly light up. He was never upset over that, it seems. Rader also conveniently forgot that Herbert condoned construction workers laboring on the sabbath and holy days to build "God's House" (the Ambassador Auditorium).

Herbert Armstrong leaving a Tucson medical clinic on Jan. 11.

And Herbert never thought it wrong to have disfellowshipped members trod on the "holy ground" before. We all remember, for instance, how Herbert's disfellowshipped daughter Beverly was not only allowed to attend church services but was put on the church's payroll to serve as a hostess on Herbert's "missionary" jaunts.

The next day marked the beginning of the church's annual ministerial conference. Though normally held in Pasadena, this year's conference was held in Tucson, Arizona, where Herbert Armstrong is out of reach of California subpoenas. On the opening day of the four-day conference the 550 attending WCG ministers and their wives heard Apostle Herbert deny all allegations against him, claiming the charges were brought only because the world hates Jesus Christ. He did not answer the charges of the suit in any detail nor offer any real evidence to back up his claim of innocence. What then was the cause of the church's legal difficulties? According to Herbert, it was Garner Ted Armstrong who "spearheaded" the attack after being "brainwashed" by dissidents. He offered no proof of this either.

Sit-in and Lock-out

While Herbert's colorful Tucson performance was interesting, the really big news of the day was occurring in Pasadena where approximately 2,500 men, women, and children of the WCG staged a sit-in at Ambassador College. (Remember when the church condemned such behavior as "demon"-strations? In fact the January 1964 Plain Truth and a 1973 reprint article (#860) entitled "The Christian Attitude-Respect Government Authority" said the following: "Those who refuse to submit to authority...shall receive to themselves damnation.... That's the penalty for any who resist constituted authority. That's the awful judgment God renders on those who incite civil strife, or who create incidents by so-called 'Peaceful demonstrations' or 'sit-ins'....")

Although Rader later said the demonstration was spontaneous and not ordered by him, Ambassador Report was told by many church members that they had received phone calls the previous night from church officials telling them to be there and, if possible, to bring their children. This happened in spite of the fact that Rader had that same day stated he thought there would be "physical conflict." Apparently the safety and welfare of their children was secondary as many WCG parents kept their children out of school and brought even little toddlers to the demonstration. One veteran newsman commented that in all his years of covering the local news it was the first time he had ever seen parents use their children in such a way.

The sit-in brought more legal conflict. In court that morning Judge Title ordered Rader's attorney Allan Browne to tell the demonstrators to disperse and allow the receiver to carry out his responsibilities. Said Title, "All the things going on out there [in Pasadena] are not coincidental and accidental. It doesn't appear that by coincidence thousands of people would converge on this campus.... There has been a determined effort to frustrate the orders of this court." Title told Browne that if he did not advise the church members to disperse, he would order deputy sheriffs to the scene. Browne, however, told Title, "I can't guarantee it." To which Title responded, "I think Mr. Rader can guarantee it."

The "Ecclesiastical Service"

In spite of all this, Tuesday saw no letup in the obstructionist tactics. The sit-in continued, and the receiver and his auditors were still locked out of the administration building. Now, however, church leaders cautioned the demonstrators that the sit-in must assume the atmosphere of a worship service. Explained one church leader, "We want the meeting to be ecclesiastical.... Apparently, it's our only defense." Church members put up signs saying their demonstration was an "ecclesiastical service," they sang hymns, and listened to the piped-in voice of their apostle speaking from Tucson. Declared Herbert, "Being subject to the laws doesn't always mean to obey them. I wonder if people aren't going to have to go to jail." This brought applause from his flock in the Hall of Administration. Earlier Herbert stated that he would be willing to go to jail himself if it was necessary. However, he has yet to return to California where this boast can be put to the test.

The over-crowded conditions in the administration building caused concern on the part of the Pasadena Fire Department. When the fire department arrived to investigate the possible violation of fire-safety regulations, a fire marshal was told that those engaged in the sit-in could easily exit in case of fire. The Report learned, however, that not only were the doors locked but two-by-fours had been put through some door handles, and some locks had had toothpicks jammed into them to prohibit unlocking. Fortunately, there was no fire.

Ambassador Report Publishers Len Zola, Bob Geringer, and John Trechak were at the scene for much of the three days of the Ambassador sit-in but were unable to get inside the administration building to witness firsthand the activities of those occupying the building. Some reporters, however, were able to gain entry. Here is an excerpt from a remarkable article by Richard Jenkins and David Willman that appeared in the January 24, 1979, Pasadena Star-News:

As loyal followers of Herbert Armstrong listened to his piped-in voice during the sit-in, fire department vehicles arrived at the scene. A Pasadena Fire Department officer (right photo) was told that demonstrators inside the building would have no difficulty exiting in case of fire.

On the third day of the sit-in sheriff's deputies and Pasadena police officers were mobilized in a nearby park. Fortunately, they were not needed.

"On the first floor, the atmosphere was reserved-some who had arrived during the night slept, while children played tag amidst the grown-ups. Many read Scriptures or attentively listened to taped statements from church leaders - including Herbert W. Armstrong himself....

"Meanwhile, in the fourth-floor nerve center of Armstrong's $80 million church complex, a small cadre of church officers continued to map their struggle against a state investigation into the finances of the embattled church.

"The men and their secretaries, inside the church's posh executive offices, shifted from looks of concern to bursts of confidence. But Armstrong and his top aide-Stanley R. Rader-were not present. In Rader's absence, his massive desk was occupied by a man in his 20s who wore a tailored three-piece suit.

"'We'll occupy the (college) buildings... one at a time,' proclaimed one of the men.

"Earlier the same man, pointing to vaults standing empty and file drawers with no files in an adjacent room, maintained that it took church officials three days to figure out the combinations to the vault locks. Many of the vaults had been off-limits to the church since the state attorney general's office sealed off the ornate facility when the court-ordered receivership began Jan. 3.

"But the official added that the vaults had not been used to contain anything of value. 'We never did use those cabinets or the safe,' he said.

"He then said that the membership list on the church computer system - used to store confidential information - had been scrambled. He added that the scrambling had been carried out to prevent retired Judge Steven Weisman-the court-appointed receiver of the church's financial affairs-from obtaining the full list of contributors to the church.

"A half-dozen other church officials seated around the room were discussing plans to oust Weisman and his forces from another Ambassador building.

"Another of the young men entered the office and reported that personnel hired by Judge Weisman, assumed to have occupied the church's press services building, had not left the building.

"'Perhaps someone could get in there posing as a vendor or something,' someone suggested.

"'Those people never leave the building,' the first man complained.

"'They have to sooner or later,' the other replied.

"Moments later, a secretary rushed into the room to announce that 'reliable sources' had indicated that the press services building, assumed to be under Weisman's control, was actually vacant.

"The reaction was both swift and triumphant. One of the men hurriedly gathered a small crew and headed off to bar the doors from the inside with wire and boards.

"'It's like a battle,' a young church officer had explained, prior to the latest skirmish."

Tuesday afternoon attorneys for both sides were once again back in court. Before the hearing Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Tapper told the press, "I don't seek mass arrests." He added that he only wanted the doors unlocked at Ambassador and the unobstructed continuation of the investigation. Judge Title ruled that the receiver and his staff be escorted and protected by sheriff's deputies in order to carry out their duties. The court order allowed the members to continue their sit-in and demonstration unhampered as long as they did not interfere with the business of the receiver and his aides. Title's order came over objections by church attorney Allan Browne who said he feared a repetition of the tragic events at Kent State."

The above photo appeared in a recent edition of The Chronicle. It had this caption: "The three-day sit-in by members of the Worldwide Church of God never reached a confrontation or violent stage. Here, Robert Geringer and Len Zola (far right), co-publishers of the Ambassador Report, are told to leave campus, by other church members. Geringer and Zola, although long critical of the Church and its practices, have never been disfellowshipped, they say, with either the required visit from a minister or a letter. They didn't leave." Within days of this incident, co-publishers Bob Geringer, Bill Hughes, John Trechak, and Len and Margaret Zola received disfellowship letters from Roderick Meredith. However, the intimidating letters are being ignored as the procedures outlined in article 3, section 3, of the church's articles of incorporation were not adhered to, making the disfellowships null and void. In fact, in like manner virtually all disfellowships of the last 20 years are invalid.

Billy Clubs and a Bible

At 8 a.m. Wednesday morning A. Sheridan Atkinson, the chief operating officer for Weisman, was escorted to the administration building by two uniformed sheriff's deputies and a plainclothes officer. The doors of the main entrance of the building were barred by timbers thrust through their perpendicular door handles. An adjacent smaller door had had its inside and outside handles removed. At the rear entrance a deputy accompanying Atkinson attempted to unlock the doors but was unable to. Door handles there had also been removed to prevent Atkinson's entry. Then as the estimated 1,000 members inside the building (there were an estimated 2,000 elsewhere on campus) sang "Onward Christian Soldiers" and other hymns, church deacon Wayne Pyle, who was standing guard outside the door, began arguing vehemently with Atkinson. Yelled Pyle, "If you want to come in, you're going to have to break the door down.... You will have to arrest us.... You are our enemy but we'll pray for you - we'll pray for God to take care of you. "

In front of the assembled newsmen and TV cameras, Atkinson tried to reason with Pyle, explaining that he too was a Christian and believed in moderation in all things. He gave no command to break down the door. Instead he held up not only a copy of Judge Title's court order but an open Bible and said calmly, "I believe in the same God they do." But, he said, "They ought to read the 13th chapter of Romans," referring to Paul's admonition that Christians be subject to civil authority. Atkinson also told Pyle that he agreed that we ought to obey God rather than run but explained, "We're not here to interfere with spiritual matters." Pyle, however, remained adamant while Atkinson, declining to use his full authority, "turned the other cheek!" and walked away to discuss the situation further with his staff.

It is interesting that Stanley Rader, who was on campus that morning was not present during the Atkinson confrontation. It is also noteworthy that after Atkinson left, church loyalists in the auditorium heard a message broadcast by Herbert from Tucson in which he recounted how the apostle Peter had been put in jail. Then Herbert added, "Many of you may have to be subjected to the same thing." All this, of course, happened while he remained safe in Tucson.

At this point the receiver could have used force to gain entry to the building. In fact, that possibility was contemplated as nearly 200 riot-equipped deputies and Pasadena police officers were assembled at a nearby park awaiting the command to move in. But Weisman was reluctant to take such drastic action. The spectre of breaking into a building where people were singing hymns and arresting women and children was not his wish. He sent word to Rader, saying, "I have so much respect for religious freedom and the right not to be interfered with that I would like to work out something that respects your religious freedom." Rader finally agreed to meet with Weisman at Allan Browne's office in Los Angeles, and by 3 p.m. a compromise, of sorts, was reached.

About an hour later the demonstrating church loyalists were shocked to see Rader entering the administration building with Weisman, who accompanied him to the executive suite. Obvious to all was the fact that Rader was giving the receiver access to the building. A short while later as Weisman quietly left the Hall of Administration Rader spoke to the weary group: "There is no peace. There is still a war. Not until we get the attorney general punched out and the receiver punched out will there be peace. We're still in a state of all-out war. We've been invaded by an army of the state of California. There were 250 armed members of the sheriff's force ready to break down the doors"

Cheers greeted Rader's rhetoric, but many were apparently confused as to what had been accomplished. Jackie Knowles of the Pasadena Star-News wrote (1/25/79): "Only Stanley R. Rader was smiling broadly. Worldwide Church of God members who had been camped out for two nights at the church headquarters in Pasadena looked numb and confused after Rader finally escorted a court-appointed receiver into the building Wednesday afternoon. 'The whole idea was to keep out the receiver,' said one of the organizers of the sit-in, Wayne Pyle, with unhappiness written across his drawn face."

Ms. Knowles also quoted another member overheard saying to his minister, "'Why are you so happy if the receiver is still here?'" Indeed, the only concession Weisman had made was that he would move his office from the Hall of Administration to the nearby press facilities building where the church computer is located and where records are stored. Rader acknowledged that many members did not like the results of the sit-in and wanted to demonstrate their faith by being arrested.

By the next day, however, the demonstrators were gone. Dick Lloyd of the Star-News (1/26/79) wrote of what the scene was like once they left: "Magazines were askew, blankets lay strewn about, toys were scattered, chairs stood in disarray, lint covered the carpets, fingerprints tarnished once shiny windows, extension cords rested in agonizing contours across the floor. The blackboard still voiced a lecturer's message on endurance now for the later joys in 'The World Tomorrow.'... Dolls, cups, clothing, wrinkled newspapers and a myriad of other articles added to the disorder." Dick Lloyd also interviewed Deacon Wayne Pyle, who said he was "really bewildered. The whole point of being here was to keep the receiver out, and they let him in." In retrospect, however, he self-righteously thought the whole episode "made the state look like a fool."

Meredith and Company

Meanwhile, while all of this was occurring, a number of announcements were made at the Tucson conference that demonstrated the strength and solidarity of the conservative wing of the church's hierarchy. For instance, the new director of pastoral administration (worldwide) is Roderick Meredith, an arch-myrmidon noted for his almost lemming-like loyalty to Herbert Armstrong. A Meredith protege, Dennis Luker, ordained an evangelist at the conference, is now assistant director of pastoral administration. (Meredith and Luker both held almost identical positions in the pre-1972 era.) The new deputy chancellor of Ambassador College is Raymond McNair, perhaps appointed to this position because of Herbert Armstrong's recent admonitions against the leaven of intellectualism. Acting as administrative assistant to Meredith and Laker is Wilbur Berg. Burk McNair, also ordained an evangelist in Tucson, is now the headquarters area coordinator. Returning to his role as roving evangelist is Gerald Waterhouse (a.k.a., "Mr. Millennium"), long noted for his long-winded, almost hallucinogenic discourses detailing the Armstrongian World Tomorrow.

At the conference Herbert Armstrong decreed that the keeping of birthdays and voting in elections were both again taboo. (For a short time during Garner Ted's era these "sins" had been allowed.) There has also been talk of changing other church doctrines back to what they were in the heyday of the church, but there were no official announcements that this will occur. Even if some old-time doctrines such as Monday Pentecost are resurrected, it is highly unlikely that the old doctrines prohibiting medical treatment and the remarriage of divorced persons would be reinstated, considering Herbert's constant reliance now on medication and his present marriage to a formerly divorced woman. We also doubt that the old makeup doctrine will be reinstated. In a recent Star-News article by Dick Lloyd it was pointed out that Mrs. Ramona Armstrong paints her toenails.

Nevertheless, the church's latest ministerial appointments indicate that the WCG is indeed returning to the hard-nosed Armstrong conservatism of the past.

Whose Side Is God On, Anyway?

Some ministers believe that if the church could only go backward to the way it was, it would somehow be rescued from its current plight. But one sees little evidence that God is intervening on the WCG's behalf now that the hated "liberals" have been kicked out and the church has taken a more conservative turn.

For instance, while Armstrong loyalists jammed the church's Pasadena headquarters for the three-day sit-in, an attempt was made to form a new church corporation in Arizona with Stan Rader and Herbert Armstrong as its two top directors. On January 24, Nicki Chayet, an attorney for the Arizona Corporations Commission, stated that corporation papers for "the Philadelphia Church of God," as it was to be called, had been filed with her office. (She said the first set of papers came in the mail Monday, January 22 (the day after the press conference in which Rader said he had no idea where the church's "safe haven" would be). However, among the questions left unanswered on the application forms was one requiring disclosure of whether any officer or director of the proposed corporation had been involved with a corporation placed in receivership in recent years. Also left unanswered on the form were questions pertaining to the proposed corporation's fiscal year and business address. The application was rejected.

On January 25, after nearly seven days of deliberation, three Los Angeles-based justices of the California Second District Court of Appeal denied a request from Worldwide Church attorneys to remove the receivership on the church. The church's petition was denied without explanation.

The same day, after being briefed on the case for two hours by Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Tapper, California Attorney General George Deukmejian said that the investigation of the WCG would proceed with no change of direction. The next day, Deukmejian reiterated his position saying that it is the duty of his office to see to it that charitable, tax-exempt funds are spent as prescribed in a nonprofit organization's articles of incorporation. He said the fact that seven judges had upheld the state's actions indicated that they were legal and warranted. But at a news conference the same day Rader blasted Deukmejian for not coming to his aid and said he was "going to make the attorney general eat those words." When asked why he thought the attorney general's office brought the charges, Rader said this concerning his former USC classmate, Deputy Attorney General Tapper (are you ready for this?): "We were in the same class. I was at the top and he was an also-ran.... He is out to get me!"

Atkinson Resigns

Rader's legal maneuverings have netted him no real victories so far, but he has not been without his moments of hope. On January 26, Sheridan Atkinson resigned as Weisman's top aide. Atkinson, the CPA who was the receiver's chief operating officer, said he was unhappy with the way the investigation was proceeding. (While at the college he claimed his phones had been tapped, and under the terms of the compromise agreement of Jan. 24 church financial records were not adequately protected.) On the other hand, Weisman apparently regarded Atkinson as not sufficiently sensitive to certain problems and too explosive. Atkinson said that because of his reputation for getting things done and as an internationally recognized Christian leader, Rader wanted him ousted as chief operating officer, implying that his removal may have been part of the Jan. 24 compromise between Weisman and Rader. Nevertheless, Atkinson commented, "I only want the best for this church. I am willing to be sacrificed as a symbol of government if it will help." Atkinson was replaced by his assistant Lowell H. Duggan. The firm now doing the audit is that of Peat, Marwick and Mitchell, one of the nation's most respected accounting firms and one noted for its expertise in investigations of this type.

On Monday, Jan. 29, Rader's lawyers were again back in court. U.S. District Court Judge Robert Firth heard arguments by Allan Browne that the federal court should intervene and remove the receiver appointed by the state court because, claimed Browne, the church's religious freedoms were being violated. Browne said the receivership's control over the church is as outrageous as telling the Pope that his robes should be synthetic rather than silk.

But Hillel Chodos declared, "I resent the comparison to the Catholic Church. The bishop of Rome doesn't transfer Castle Giddalfo into his own name and then pocket the profits." He went on to say that Rader and his colleagues may have a right to use church funds to entertain at Perino's 'but not to claim tax deductions on such things, transferring a greater tax burden to the rest of the public. Arguing that the constitutional rights argument was trumped up only to thwart the receiver, Chodos remarked, "You cannot perpetrate fraud in the name of religion and then wrap yourself in the flag and call out the name of the First Amendment." Browne's position, said Chodos, was the equivalent of saying, "If a man comes into court and says 'stealing is my religion,' there's nothing you can do about it." The two-hour hearing ended with Judge Firth taking the matter under submission.

Garner Ted Sued

The same day this hearing took place, attorneys Jack Kessler and Robert Palazzo filed a lawsuit against Garner Ted Armstrong on behalf of Stanley Rader. The suit claims that Garner Ted slandered Rader by accusing him of a conflict of interest when Ted made statements urging an independent audit of the WCG's finances. For this, Rader is asking a total of $551 million in damages. A few days later, the accounting firm of Rader, Cornwall, Kessler, and Palazzo filed another lawsuit against Garner Ted. This one is also a slander suit and asks for $13 million in damages. However, Garner Ted told Ambassador Report co-publisher, Robert Gerringer, that on March 1 a judge threw out both suits as legally deficient.

Weisman Gets Support

On the afternoon of Jan. 29 approximately 100 Worldwide Church of God members and ex-members gathered near the Ambassador Press Facilities building in Pasadena to show their support of Judge Weisman and to speak to reporters. The rapid mobilization of about 20 burly Ambassador security guards in front of the employees' entrance and the closing of the gate leading to the entrance made it quite clear that the group would not be allowed to see Weisman. Fortunately the pro-receiver group received only threats from the guards. However, the attitude of the security force was most evident. As a delivery truck backed up near the waiting group, one guard yelled out: "Run 'em over!" Perhaps the nearness of officers from the Pasadena Police Department prevented an "accident."

Nevertheless, despite all the threats, the group waited patiently on the sidewalk until the press and media people arrived. When they did, Howard Clarke, a WCG minister recently disfellowshipped after 25 years of service, read an emotion-filled statement of support for Judge Weisman and the Attorney General.

Said Clarke, "The state is not trying to take over the church. The church is not under attack, and the members of the church aren't under attack. No money has gone unnecessarily to the state. It is a phony issue [this issue] of church and state confrontation. What is being asked is a full accounting before the law. We above all as Christians should be open and above board. Why, if there is nothing to hide, should there be all this obstruction?"

Clarke said there were many members of the church who were supportive of the suit but who were unable to voice their feelings for fear of being disfellowshipped or worse. He stated, "There have been threats, and I know that during this situation there have been some that had to have police protection." This sentiment was later echoed by Dave Morgan and Shirley Timmons, two litigants in the suit who said they were told "...if we could get the six of you [all of the litigants] up against a wall and shoot you, we would." (That's a fine Christian attitude!) Dave Morgan said he was even threatened during one of the early court hearings.

Rader didn't stop to say hello.

Disfellowshipped minister Howard Clarke made an emotion-filled statement to reporters in support of the actions of the state.

(Incidentally, Ambassador Report has also received its share of threats too.)

Another member who spoke to the press was Mrs. Jean Myers, who said: "There are a lot of people in the church who would like the church cleaned up. This conspiracy at the top is unholy and ungodly, and we just want it stopped." Mrs. Myers said she still tithes "so that the gospel can go out." But of Herbert Armstrong's international ventures she lamented, "They go to the heads of nations, and instead of preaching Jesus Christ and Him crucified, he gives them this thing about giving and getting and wines and dines them, and they don't teach Christ. They deny Christ!"

Hillel Chodos showed up briefly for the meeting and spoke to some of the members. He said he was glad to see the group's support because, he facetiously added, he was "tired of being the only agent of Satan in this matter." However, there was no levity in his voice when he stated, "By virtue of all this maneuvering to send money to Arizona, he [Rader] is creating financial problems to the church that will make it difficult to pay widows and orphans, but he will pay himself."

During the press conference, Rader appeared briefly in a chauffeur-driven car but declined to get out of the car to speak to the assembled reporters. Instead, he appeared later on a news telecast stating that the church members who had participated in the news conference would be disfellowshipped upon identification.

The Paper War

The next week saw more delays in the court's scheduled hearings on the WCG suit. WCG attorneys claimed that Judge Title was prejudiced against their position because of his long friendship with the receiver, retired Judge Steven Weisman. The claim resulted in Title not being able to preside further over the case until this challenge was heard. Chodos, who is a member of the California Commission on Judicial Performance, responded to the accusation against Title, saying, "It's the kind of thing an attorney ought never do unless he has an extreme case. The ground of bias alleged against Judge Title is a cheap shot." This was especially true, he said, because Browne waved any objection to Title when at the beginning of the proceeding he was told by Title that Weisman was a long-time friend.

Nevertheless, attorneys for both sides met, ostensibly to decide on a judge to hear the challenge against Title. But when they could reach no agreement, the matter went to the chairman of the state Judicial Council, Supreme Court Chief Justice Rose Bird who decided that the challenge against Title would be reviewed by Orange County Superior Court Judge George Francis. He in turn considered arguments submitted by both sides and ruled on Feb. 5 that Title would stay.

The challenge to Title is a good example of the type of delaying legal tactics used by the Rader-Browne axis. Their objection to Title had as little merit as their drummed-up "state persecuting church" argument (which Chodos referred to as "a kind of first-year law school tactic"). It's gotten them little if any results while costing the church a fortune. But according to Rader this is necessary to keep the investigators from reviewing financial records that he says will prove him innocent. The argument doesn't go very far before it falls on its face. However, the constant legal maneuvering and obstructions have had some effect.

Weisman Resigns

On Feb. 6 receiver Steven Weisman told Judge Title that he had had enough. He said the difficulties he was being faced with and the stress it was putting on his health were forcing him to resign. "I'm doing this with regret," he said. "I've never backed off from a job in my life. But I don't need this harassment, this obstruction of what ought to be an orderly job."

Judge Weisman has received strong support from many members of the Worldwide Church of God and alumni of Ambassador College. For instance, only a week before, Weisman told one reporter that letters of support were flooding into his office. But much of what Weisman has been subjected to by this Christian organization has been agonizing for the man. Rader must take much of the blame for this. He has repeatedly urged noncooperation, has repeatedly belittled Weisman, and on at least one occasion even made fun of his polio affliction, comparing him to crippled Chester of "Gunsmoke." Said Rader, "You know, all of us can use a cane as a prop." Ambassador Report believes that insulting judges is not just un-Christian, it's stupid. But Rader apparently feels differently because, like a little kid who hasn't been taught not to pull down his pants in public, he even had his comments on Weisman published in the Feb. 19 Worldwide News.

Weisman is not the only person who has come under Rader's fire. Rader has been before the TV cameras almost daily attacking the attorney general, his subordinates, judges, and attorney Hillel Chodos, whose name he repeatedly mispronounces as "Chomos." One of our sources insists that this slip of the tongue is actually Rader's way of insulting Mr. Chodos. We, however, believe that Mr. Rader would not stoop to that type of thing and that, in fact, the habit, like his somewhat lilting cadence, is nothing more than some type of speech impediment. Yet we do wonder why, if this is the case, the mispronouncing of Mr. Chodos' name is repeatedly transliterated as "Chomos" in the Worldwide News.

Speaking of funny papers, remember Herbert's boast of co-hosting a benefit with the Queen of England? And the one about being nominated for a Nobel Prize? Well, the Worldwide News reported that Rader is considering running for attorney general of California. Oh, well, moving right along,...

The Paper War Escalates

On Feb. 6 legal maneuvering by Browne continued. An attempt was again made to take the receivership issue out of Title's court to another. Commented Title, "Very candidly, you've failed on your motion to disqualify me, and now you're trying to do it through the back door." The matter went to Presiding Judge David Eagleson who ruled that while ordinary matters of law would be referred to regular pretrial civil courts as in other civil cases, all matters directly or indirectly involving the receiver and his duties would be heard by Judge Title.

On Feb. 9 Rader's lawyers, Allan Browne, Allan Cooper, Allan Gabriel, and George Scheavelli, went before the state's Second District Court of Appeal asking for an immediate stay of Title's receivership order. That attempt, like others before, failed. However, the one thing accomplished by these time-consuming maneuvers was the repeated delaying of a hearing to decide whether or not Stanley Rader would be removed by the court from his position as the church corporation's acting executive head. Such an action was contemplated because of Rader's obstinate refusal to cooperate with the court-appointed receiver. The hearing on this motion may yet materialize.

On Feb. 13 Allan Browne was again back in Title's court, arguing that the receivership should be lifted. He suggested that a bond could be posted by the church to protect the church's assets while an appeal of the receivership was made. But Deputy Attorney General Tapper argued vigorously against such a move. So did the receiver, Steven Weisman, who temporarily remained in his position pending a decision on his replacement. Stated Weisman, "I want to respond to Mr. Browne's lack of knowledge to what's going on out there. It was only this morning that we had our mail service restored. There is no cooperation out there yet. We get our mail directly from the post office because they're opening our mail." Title told Browne to draft a proposal of a system whereby church documents could be protected without a receiver. In the meantime the receivership was to continue.

On Feb. 20, the WCG had another setback. A group of WCG loyalists who call themselves the Committee for Defense of Religious Freedom had petitioned the court to allow them to enter the legal war that was raging. Richard Osborn, the attorney for the group, said that the church's hierarchy was not in a position to protect the rights of the members because it lacked credibility in the eyes of the court. Osborn said the group's action was done independent of the church and was not being financed by it. (Osborn told the Star-News, however, that his first contact with church members came when he was called by Rader to the Ambassador campus during the big January demonstration.)

Nevertheless, the committee's attempt failed. Judge Robert Weil didn't feel additional defendants were necessary. Osborn had argued that his clients should be allowed to become separately represented parties to the suit because the issues involved were church and not corporate problems. But Judge Weil disagreed, saying, "The church is doing business as a corporation; that is valid and uncontested. So it submits itself to the rules - including the enforcement by the attorney general - of the rules of a charitable trust."

The next day, attorneys Allan Browne and Hillel Chodos were again in debate before Judge Title. Testimony was heard from several witnesses including Lowell Duggan, the receiver's chief operating officer, who told of the continued obstruction to his work. He said his requests for information concerning corporate aircraft, real estate transactions, and other financial dealings had been denied. Several witnesses testified that financial documents asked for by auditors or Employees of the receiver were "screened" by church attorneys if it was suspected that they might be "ecclesiastical." Chodos, however, said that "99% of the so-called ecclesiastical records are really the sensitive ones" that church leaders did not want to divulge.

On Feb. 13 as attorneys for both sides again debated the receivership issue, loyal followers of Herbert Armstrong demonstrated outside the court building. The photo on the right shows Rader's lawyer Allan Browne (far right) talking to the demonstrators.

The hearing left Judge Title convinced that the receivership was singly not working. Over strong objections by Chodos, Judge Title decided that he would in one week issue an order lifting the receivership. Church members were elated. Rader, however, wasn't thrilled. For weeks he had claimed that had there been no receiver he would have gladly turned over all records. He had claimed he had nothing to hide and was only fighting the receivership on principle. Now, Title said he would remove the receiver and give the WCG "one final opportunity to show good faith." But, Title made it very clear that the order would be contingent on alternative plans for the continuance of the investigation. He warned that if the removal of the receiver didn't produce the results he hoped for, it would be reinstated. March 1 was the date set for the next hearing on the matter.

No Bodies?

The following morning Rader held another of his frequent news conferences. He announced that he and the Worldwide Church would cooperate fully with the continuing audit of the church's finances. Now that was news!

But only hours later the war was back on again! That afternoon members of the receiver's staff and auditors attempted to close out the office of the receiver as was instructed by Judge Title only the day before. Someone alerted the Ambassador security department. Within minutes about a dozen men arrived to block the receiver's staff from loading audit records into the back of a car. Weisman's secretary feared violence and called the Pasadena police. Several officers were immediately dispatched to the scene. The confrontation ended when, in the interest of peace, the receiver's staff moved the boxes back into the building. After numerous telephone discussions between Judge Title, Steven Weisman, and the church's attorneys, Allan Browne agreed to allow the accountants' work papers to be removed. During the discussions Stan Rader and Ralph Helge arrived on the scene in a black Cadillac limousine. Helge was overheard saying to his men with a laugh, "Where are all the bodies? You haven't done your job if there are no bodies."

At Rader's news conference earlier that day Rader said that those who had initiated the legal action against the church would be punished, making reference to the church's $700 million federal suit against the California attorney general's office. A few hours later, Rader's prophecy notwithstanding, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Firth said that a judgment in the church's favor in that case would "create unnecessary state-federal friction" and the suit was thrown out.

Title's Injunction

On March 1, as scheduled, Judge Julius Title decided that the receivership which had been on the church since Jan. 3 would be dissolved. This meant that the church's business affairs would again be under the control and direction of its religious leaders. But those church loyalists who hoped that this would stop the investigation of the church were badly disappointed. First of all, the investigation of the church would continue under the auspices of the attorney general's office. Second, the dissolution of the receivership would technically not occur until Title signed an injunctive order that was to be drafted. And that would not occur until Weisman (in supposedly about 12 days) completed his report to the court. Title made it very clear that his injunctive order would both prohibit the sale of church properties and fixed assets unless 30 days notice was given to the attorney general and that the attorney general's auditors would be given access to all the financial records they needed.

Over strong protects by Browne, Title said the attorney general's investigators "are entitled to look at whatever they want to - for a full and complete audit." Included in this is access to a computer terminal and copy machines. Browne howled in protest: "They're asking to get into every internal financial document the church has had in 20 years." But Hillel Chodos countered by saying, "No independent accounting of church monies has ever been made.... The people have a right to an accounting of every penny." Title ordered that the identities of church members be kept confidential in the audit. But, said Title, all monetary matters were within the purview of the attorney general's audit. He also stipulated that henceforth church officials were required to turn over financial documents within five hours of their being requested by the auditors. He made it clear that the church was getting "one final opportunity" to cooperate. Said Title, "The hallmark test is... reasonable, cooperative, and nondisruptive conduct."

Within hours of the hearing Rader was hinting that, as before, he would not cooperate. A few days later Rader openly told reporters he would definitely not cooperate with the court-ordered audit of the church's books. When asked by reporters why he had previously said he would cooperate if the receivership was lifted, Rader said he had changed his mind.

The legal war was again on. On Monday, March 5, Rader filed a $13 million lawsuit against Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Tapper and attorney Hillel Chodos. Totally unperturbed, Chodos told the Star-News: "This complaint will be given the attention it deserves."

The next day, Rader's lawyers were at it again, this time before Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Thomas T. Johnson. They argued that the state had no legal grounds to file a suit and requested that the judge find the state attorney general's complaint legally insufficient. Judge Johnson took the church's motion for a demurrer under submission. Informed observers do not believe such tactics will prove beneficial to the church however. Church lawyers have been unsuccessful before three superior court judges, a federal judge, a state appellate court three-judge panel, and the state supreme court.

Receivership Resurrected?

March 12 was to have been the day that the receivership officially ended. But Judge Title had warned that Rader and the WCG must first prove itself with good conduct. They flunked the test. Judge Title stated, "Very candidly, the incredible resistance of the defendants to this audit has to raise a reasonable question in one's mind. It has to make a reasonable mind suspect that perhaps someone out there doesn't want that audit." Title appointed a new receiver, David Ray, a 49-year-old Beverly Hills lawyer and CPA with 15 years experience as a receiver. However, Title said he would allow the WCG to post a $1 million bond that would allow a stay of the order while church attorneys appealed the decision.

Rader immediately set about to raise the money for the bond. But as of this morning (March 14) the bond has not been posted. We were told only last evening that church members were being called and asked to immediately contribute $10 or more for the bond. In the mean time WCG loyalists are again engaged in a "spontaneous" sit-in at Ambassador College, vowing to keep out the new receiver. Yesterday (March 13) WCG employees were asked to forgo a paycheck or two to help the organization through its present financial difficulties. (Rader said he too would sacrifice a portion of his pay to the church!)

We find it amusing that through all of this Quest magazine has yet to be jettisoned and the AICF concert series continues on.

The Big Sandy Scandal

One of the reasons a receivership was imposed on the Worldwide Church of God was because it was believed that there were improprieties in the sale of the Big Sandy property, which was to have been transferred in early January of this year. As we reported in our last issue Judge Title could find no impropriety in that transaction and ordered that the sale be allowed to be completed. A series of strange events then followed. With Rader's apparent approval, a group of church members from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, filed a class-action lawsuit that sought to keep the proceeds of the sale of the Big Sandy campus in escrow until the litigation with the state of California reached completion. U.S. District Court Judge William Steger in Tyler, Texas, issued an ex parte temporary restraining order in accordance with their wish. The order would have effectively prevented money from the sale going to the Pasadena church headquarters under the receiver's control.

But as it turned out there was no sale! The deal never went through, and the circumstances surrounding the entire matter leave many questions unanswered. We do know that the church failed to deposit with the escrow company the documents and records needed to show clear title to the Property. As a result of this, southern evangelist William Menge, who had planned to purchase the property, bowed out of the deal.

However, according to Menge's attorney Hodge Dolle Jr., Menge has since been unable to recover over $500,000 he already paid out for the property. That money was not paid through escrow as is normally the case but directly to church leaders! Why was this done? According to Dolle, "It was good faith money required by the church. It was make or break on that point." Dolle said they had no luck in retrieving the money from the church officials, and they were preparing to sue for the return of the money. Rader has not commented on the matter.

Garner Ted on the Move Again

We don't wish to take much space in this issue to comment on Garner Ted's activities of late. Those of you who are interested in what he is up to can write to his new organization (P.O. Box 2525, Tyler, Texas 75710) for his monthly publication. However, we'd briefly like to mention that Garner Ted's new free booklet "The True Church - Is It Organized?" is most interesting. We think it starts with a number of erroneous assumptions and ends with some even more erroneous conclusions. However, it also has some good information, and we think it's well worth reading, especially from the standpoint of seeing just how much Garner Ted has changed on the "true church" doctrine. We're waiting with bated breath to see how his father responds to the charges against him found in this new booklet.

"60 Minutes" Does It to Rader

For the last two years or so it seems that not a week has gone by that we didn't receive at least one or two letters from readers suggesting we contact the producers of "60 Minutes," the popular CBS Sunday night TV program. Well, some time ago we did. Until now we have not been able to divulge that we have indeed had extensive contact with producer Norman Gorin and his staff. They asked that that fact be kept secret until now. "60 Minutes" is doing at least one segment on the WCG, and if it hasn't already aired by the time you read this, it will very shortly.

We haven't seen the script or a tape of the program, but Allan Maraynes, the researcher for the program, told us it was a real winner. Stanley Rader was "courted" for months by the "60 Minutes" people and was so confident he could "use them" that he was even quoted as saying he had them in the palms of his hands. Well, it didn't work out that way. Ambassador Report and others had provided "60 Minutes" with extensive documentation of Rader's activities. In over three hours of being interviewed on camera Rader said some remarkable things. But the capstone of the interview came when Mike Wallace produced a tape recording of Herbert Armstrong saying he would, in effect, like to get rid of Rader because Rader was trying to take over the church. (We have learned that the tape was made during a discussion between Herbert and Wayne Cole sometime on or around January 1 of this year.) Rader flew into a rage and had Mike Wallace and his crew evicted. (It'll all be shown on the program.)

Rader then went to a pre-scheduled news conference where, almost completely ignoring the whole purpose of the conference, he railed against the press. Describing the interview with Mike Wallace as "one of the most heinous experiences" of his life, Rader said the tape recording of Herbert's voice was obtained illegally and that he was going to take legal action against CBS. He never once denied that the tape was authentic, however.

Rader's conduct at the conference was nothing less than outrageous. When Pat O'Brian, a newsman with the local CBS affiliate, tried to ask a question of Rader, Stan refused to answer because the newsman was with a station that carried "60 Minutes." Rader yelled, "The press is the press! They can't be trusted and they're irresponsible!" Rader then threw his pencil, grabbed up some papers, and while mumbling invective, stormed out of the room in a fury.

Comic Strip Friends

During the last few months a comic strip called "The Wizard of Id" has achieved immense popularity in certain WCG circles. Some people see uncanny similarities between the characters in the strip and some individuals they know. The Parker and Hart strip is available in paperback at most fine bookstores. Here is an appropriate example:

Meredith the Sage

Before we forget! Recently an Ambassador College faculty member showed us an article he found in the September 1964 Plain Truth condemning civil disobedience. Its author was Roderick C. Meredith, the WCG's current director of pastoral administration. The advice he gave then is most apropos for WCG ministers now. Here is an excerpt we thought was remarkable:

"In his second epistle, the Apostle Peter warned that in our day there would be false teachers creeping in to lead the people into rebellion against constituted authority. He stated: 'But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that brought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction' (II Pet. 2:1).

"In verse 10, Peter described the attitude of these self-appointed leaders: 'But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise government. Presumptuous are they, self-willed, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities.'...

"It is the responsibility of every true minister of Christ to preach submission to law and constituted authority. Most of all, everyone should be taught wholehearted obedience to the laws and ways of the Great God who rules over the kingdoms of men.

"The extent to which modern preachers are failing to carry out this responsibility demonstrates the extent to which they are false ministers...."

You Can Fool Some of the People...

It is becoming increasingly evident that both Rader and Herbert believe the entire American public "just fell off a turnip truck." The WCG is now running expensive full-page ads in major U.S. newspapers in an attempt to marshal public opinion against the California attorney general. One such ad appeared in the Los Angeles Times on March 13. The banner of the ad read, "Attorney General Declares: All Church Assets And Records Are Public Property." Of course, that is totally ridiculous. The ad, which bears the signature of Herbert Armstrong, goes on to insinuate that the state intends to take over all churches and that the WCG is only the first on their list. Writes ad-man Armstrong: "This intention of the State to claim public ownership of all Church property, was, prior to that date [Jan. 2], kept a secret from the public." Herbert goes on to say that the WCG is fighting the state, not just to protect itself, but on behalf of all churches and individuals who believe in freedom of religion and in the separation of church and state.

Remember how Herbert used to rave that in his millennium there would be no separation of church and state? How there would be no freedom of religion? How true Christians today should not be involved in political matters? How all churches other than the WCG were "Satan's churches"? Well now, in this ad, Herbert writes:

"All Americans must be committed to the preservation of the integrity of our religious institutions and the freedom to exercise our religious rights.

"How can you help-what can you as an individual do?"

"Let everyone know that you as an American will not stand by and allow our freedoms to be so callously subverted. Contact your church pastor, write your congressman, write your senator, contact the media and let your views be known!"

Actually, this is not bad advice. Many of you have written to us asking if there is something you can do. Yes there is. Make your views known. We think the best place to write is to the attorney general of California. Don't write to the receiver, the auditors or the deputy attorney general. They have little time to read, let alone answer, mail. However, we believe letters to the state attorney general's office will make a difference. Here is the address: The Honorable, George Deukmejian; Attorney General of California; 555 Capitol Mall, Suite 350; Sacramento, CA 95814.

To those of you helping to make this publication possible, our sincere thanks.

---

AR9 June 1, 1979

Dear Friends:

This issue of Ambassador Report is our May-June issue. Our financial situation made it impossible to send out a March-April Report but this issue should cover the most pertinent developments of the last few months. To all of you who have written us, we'd like to express our thanks for your support and encouragement. We are sorry that we are not able to write all of you personally, but our limited resources make that impossible. We hope you will understand.

Receivership Update

In our last newsletter we reported that Judge Title of the Los Angeles Superior Court had reinstated a receiver over the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and its affiliated corporations. We also reported that Judge Title allowed the WCG to post a $1 million bond in lieu of the receiver for the duration of the time the church appealed his decision.

Rather than use corporate funds to post the bond, Stanley Rader appealed to WCG members to pledge their individual resources as sureties for the bond. In response to urgent telephone calls, members converged on the church's Pasadena headquarters to sign affidavits attesting to their individual net worth and guaranteeing that they would come up with the amount of their pledge, as Rader put it, "should they ever be called upon."

Judge Title ruled that he would allow individual sureties to be pledged, but if that were the option the church chose, the sureties would have to total $2 million. This did not deter the dedicated followers. Not only did heads of households sign, but also spouses and children. Each member was asked to pledge $3,000 -- although smaller pledges were allowed. In fact many pledged considerably more. One family pledged $9,000, another $69,000. Assets pledged included savings accounts, checking accounts, jewelry, automobiles, acreage, and houses. Ironically, Rader did not put up any of his own property as surety. He said that certain state laws prohibited him from doing so.

On March 16, over objections by the state attorney general's office, Judge Title accepted the individual sureties, and the receivership was stayed pending appeals. Since then the California Supreme Court has denied two petitions by the church that sought to overturn Judge Title's decision to reinstate the receiver. The WCG is now appealing to the U.S. Supreme Court. If and when the court will rule on the case is anyone's guess.

In the meantime, the state attorney general has intensified the charges against the church in amendments to the original suit brought against the church. One of the added charges is that funds were transferred from the church's nonprofit corporate entities to profit-making entities owned or controlled by church officials. This should not be difficult to prove. For instance, the December 19, 1978, Pastor's Report carried an article by Stan Rader and Ralph Helge admitting this very thing:

"These are the facts: Ted Armstrong, when he was serving in the office of Executive Vice President of the Church and President of the College, was the direct overseer of God's money. He authorized a member of his staff, Mr. Raymond L. Wright, to misuse monies that the faithful members of God's family had contributed. And, so none of you will doubt, we have that written authorization in our possession.

"Ted Armstrong authorized Mr. Wright to pay secretly, out of Church funds, God's money to a private corporation owned by Mr. Wright and Robert Kuhn in Texas. Ted Armstrong's act of authorizing such payment of Church funds laid the foundation and permitted a greater misuse of God's tithe money in subsequent months.

"In spite of the clandestine procedures involved, the scheme was uncovered during an audit by Mr. Jack Kessler, and others on the internal auditing staff.

"But there is good news in the final analysis. The experience has served to prove the effectiveness of God's auditing procedures...."

Then in a related matter, the January 8, 1979, issue of the Pastor's Report (p. 26) contained this information from Stan Rader:

"Ted Armstrong was less than candid when he revealed details about his own salary to the press. To set the record straight, in 1977, his earnings as reflected by his W-2 forms issued by the Church and the College were $174,645.78. As of January 1, 1978 his base salary was $150,000 per annum. (In addition to his use of three homes - in Big Sandy, Pasadena, and Tahoe - plus the cost of $750,000 per annum for use of the Falcon Fanjet and an unlimited expense account for him and his associates.)

"Several other members of his staff or very directly under his supervision were also very highly paid. Robert Kuhn was paid in 1977, $107,969.22 and in 1978 $83,702.36. Ray Wright was paid in 1977, $1of,969.22 and in 1978 $122,728.8l...."

One can only wonder where Rader was when all of this was occurring. The attorney general's investigators are undoubtedly wondering the same thing.

Rader Meets His Match: Mike Wallace

After he disposed of Garner Ted in 1978, Stan Rader began swaggering around like he owned the world. After all, he was the right-hand man of "God's Apostle." Even the court action brought by the California attorney general's office did little to stem Rader's arrogance. When he heard Mike Wallace of the top-rated "60 Minutes" CBS TV program was hot on his trail, that should have sobered him up a little. But it had the opposite effect. Rader, viewing himself as righteous David - the defender of the faith - was determined to "slay" the Philistine giant Mike Wallace, who represented the "big bad press" that always supposedly distorted facts about the church.

Upon meeting Mike Wallace, Rader turned on his charm. and gave him the royal treatment, determined to "use" Wallace to tell the church's (i.e., Rader's) side of the story on national television. At this time evangelist Raymond McNair was recommending "60 Minutes" to his students as one of the top programs on TV - a first-class news documentary. Meanwhile, word was circulating, that Rader was even hoping to turn The Plain Truth into a news magazine TV format similar to "60 Minutes" and that Rader hoped to lure Mike Wallace onto his staff to host the program.

Finally after Rader's long courtship, Wallace popped the long-awaited question, asking Rader if he would consent to an on-camera interview to tell his side of the story. Sensing imminent victory, Rader graciously agreed. At last, Rader evidently thought, he could put to rest all the rumors and charges against him and the church. Meanwhile, though, Wallace's professional staff did their homework. They conducted an extensive fact-finding hunt, interviewing everybody who had any relevant material on Rader and the WCG. Soon they had compiled briefcases full of vital information plus over 90 hours of film footage. Wallace digested the key information and proceeded into battle with Rader before the TV cameras. Rader seemed surprised at Wallace's preparation and tried to act undaunted, but he begrudgingly gave ground before Wallace's onslaught.

After Wallace pulled everything out of Rader that he wanted, he pulled the plug on Rader. Here's what happened in the final minutes of the interview:

Wallace told Rader: "Just a little while ago you were the bete noire [a person strongly detested] of Herbert Armstrong. Did you know that?" Rader: "I?" Wallace: "Yes." Rader: "When was this?" Wallace: "Oh, early January." Rader's reply: "No." Wallace: "Don't you believe it?" Rader: "Positive" Then Wallace offered to quote Herbert saying that Rader was trying to put himself into the leader's shoes. Rader replied in disbelief that he didn't think Herbert ever said that.

Next Wallace read a portion of a letter Herbert was drafting to send to Stan Rader. Rader still didn't believe Wallace could possibly possess such a letter from Herbert. Now Wallace played his trump card by offering to play a tape of Herbert reading the letter. (The tape recording Wallace played was a portion of two telephone conversations with Herbert that a source had recorded surreptitiously before "60 Minutes" began their investigation of Rader and the WCG.) In the letter Herbert asked Rader to step down from any church posts that might put him in line as successor to Armstrong. As Wallace played the tape, beads of sweat were visible on Rader's forehead. He tried to appear calm but looked slightly shaken. He was doing a slow burn. Finally Rader exploded, his voice cracking: "Now I say you've acquired this by illegal means. I intend to have my attorneys today not only sue you if you use this.... Mike, look, I think you'd better scrap everything because you're on my list. Okay? You're never going to live it down, Mike, I guarantee it.... you're contemptible.... I'd like you to get out of here, immediately! Then Rader stormed out of the room and went down to a press conference where he acted like a raving maniac, accusing the press of distorting the true facts.

The "60 Minutes" program about Rader and the WCG aired on April 15, 1979 - Easter Sunday. Rader had originally hoped to use the program to resurrect his and the church's badly tarnished image, but it turned out to be his crucifixion. As the segment of the program about Rader drew to a close, Wallace remarked that Rader is "currently under investigation by the Criminal Investigation Division of Internal Revenue for alleged tax evasion."

Following the interview, Rader and the church objected to Wallace using what they called "illegal tapes." The following week, "60 Minutes" dropped another bombshell as Morley Safer read letters commenting on the previous week's program. He quoted a letter from a WCG member objecting to the "illegal tapes," then said: "While we were playing those tapes for Mr. Rader, he was taping us with a mike under Mike's chair. He didn't know that we knew, but now he does. We've got the tapes!" (So does Ambassador Report.)

In an April 16 letter to brethren and coworkers, Herbert complained bitterly that "60 Minutes" had "used only a small portion of that interview on the air - just the portions they felt would make the church of the living God look bad." Then, Herbert claimed, "I do reproduce for you here the beginning of the taped interview, and I have left off when the conversation got into private personalities. Following is the real essence of the television interview between Stanly R. Rader and Mike Wallace...." But what Herbert wrote was not the "real essence" of the interview, but carefully edited excerpts from the first 20 minutes of the three-hour interview. So Herbert was doing the kind of deceitful editing he accused "60 Minutes" of doing.

The full three-hour tape of the interview is a shocking revelation about the inner workings of the WCG. When the Hawaiian WCG members heard a copy of the tape, over 90% quit the church in disgust. We hear that many more members worldwide left the church upon hearing copies of the tape - and remember, the tape being circulated came from Rader's "secret" tape recording, not from CBS.

During this crisis in the WCG, Rader's attempts at generating favorable publicity have all fallen flat on their face. Now Rader is even having difficulty coaxing newsmen to attend his often-called news conferences. One news-service official told the Report: "Rader's trying to use us to arouse public opinion in his favor. He wants his case to be tried in the papers instead of the courts. We're just not interested in giving him free publicity. Besides, he's been downright nasty to the press."

Politicians too seem reluctant to come to Rader's assistance. A recent telegram from Rader to California's Governor Jerry Brown asking for the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate the state attorney general brought no response. What prompted the telegram was the fact that during depositions Rader "discovered that the attorney general has in his files voluminous, stolen documents containing detailed accountings of all church activities for the past 27 years." But Governor Brown did not provide Rader the relief he sought. In fact, Brown has apparently ignored the whole thing.

Birds of a Feather...

Rader's attempts to woo the public, though mostly futile, have resulted in at least one odd alliance. HWA has for years branded all churches other than his own as being "Satan's churches." However, Stanley Rader, along with Ralph Helge, recently appeared on the "Festival of Faith," a controversial religious television program hosted by media-minister Gene Scott. (In Los Angeles, "Festival of Faith" is televised almost around the clock on Scott's own station, KHOF, channel 30.) Scott, a former financial consultant to Oral Roberts, is himself under investigation by both the state attorney general and the FCC over financial dealings. Rader, of course, had nothing but kind words for Scott as both pledged their mutual support in fighting the attorney general.

It is interesting that a frequent guest on Scott's program is his own legal advisor, the prominent lawyer, Edward L. Masry, who also is now under investigation by the attorney general in connection with another religious organization he represents, Morningland Church of Long Beach, California. In that investigation, the attorney general has alleged that Masry was involved in what, in effect, is described as a $10,000 bribe from Morningland to former Lieutenant Governor Mervyn Dymally to set up a legislative subcommittee to investigate the "harassment" of Morningland and the now infamous People's Temple.

Incidentally - for those unfamiliar with Morningland - this group, which has thousands of followers, was originally begun by a man named Donato, the late self-styled "Christ avatar for the Aquarian Age." His original name was Daniel Mario Sperato, and before getting into commercial religion he worked as an art and crafts director for the North Branch Boys Club of Long Beach. He died in 1976 of a heart attack; yet his followers insist that he "returned to his rightful throne beside our Holy Father." Sri Patricia, who was one of the nine women "gopis" Donato appointed before his death, is now the directress of Morningland. She teaches that Donato is now hovering 25 miles above the earth "in a spaceship."

In describing Morningland's doctrines, Los Angeles Times reporter Russell Chandler wrote, "Morningland concepts are amalgamated by vocabulary from Eastern religions, Scientology, popular metaphysics, 'Star Trek' and 'Star Wars.'" Morningland also has some remarkable similarities to the Worldwide Church of God. One is a large number of excommunicated members who claim that they have been "ripped off." Some disillusioned members have called for an investigation of the church, claiming its leaders practice mind control, break up marriages, and lure children away from home. Some deaths have been attributed to the church's belief in faith healing. Not unlike Rader and HWA, lawyer Masry and leader Sri Patricia claim the charges against their church are nothing more than accusations "trumped up" by disgruntled dissidents.

Whatever the case, in a recent raid on Masry's office, state investigators discovered that Masry had a dossier on California's current Lieutenant Governor, Mike Curb, a close friend of Ronald Reagan and formerly a producer for such prominent entertainers as Debbie Boone and the Osmonds. The dossier's potential significance was noted by many reporters. A front-page article on this matter in the Pasadena Star-News carried this headline: "New Expose Threatens Curb's Political Future." The whole Morningland-Masry-Scott matter is raising a lot of eyebrows in California. One cannot but wonder why Rader has allowed himself to become an ally of their camp. It is especially remarkable considering it was the attorney general's investigation of Scott's activities that prompted certain individuals (including us) to ask the attorney general to investigate the Worldwide Church of God in 1978.

Want Your Tithes Returned?

We recently received a letter from an elderly couple who wrote, "During the ten years we were members of the WCG we sent in $36,000 in tithes and offerings. We sure would be happy if we could recover any of that money." The letter is typical of many we have received. A lot of people feel they were "ripped off" by Armstrong and company. A few, who have now come to realize the disparity between their own sacrificing and the regal lifestyle of Herbert Armstrong, have thought that perhaps a sincere letter to the church, telling of their own needs and of their disillusionment would somehow result in their contributions being returned. Here is an excerpt from a Ralph Helge reply to one such letter:

"Now, with regard to the return of contributions, the law does not permit or require a charitable, nonprofit organization to return donations. Any such law or policy would clearly render the benevolent operation of charitable institutions impossible.

"The organization, as a nonprofit corporation, receives and holds all contributions in public trust to be disbursed only in accordance with and furtherance of its corporate purposes. It, therefore, cannot give funds away in violation of this trust. Further, any contributions which you have made have already been expended in furtherance of the corporate purposes, and they cannot now justifiably give you monies which others have donated for a different purpose....

"We are sorry to know that you are undergoing such bad physical problems at the present time and can only sympathize with you and pray that God's Kingdom will soon come so that we may all be relieved of those fleshly weaknesses that plague even the strongest of men."

You will notice that in his answer Ralph Helge uses the exact contention the state attorney general has used as a basis for the investigation of the church. In regards to that investigation Helge has repeatedly asserted the exact opposite of what he wrote in the above letter, namely, that monies donated to the WCG are not "held in public trust."

Planning to Sue?

It is exactly this type of two-faced arrogance that has led many to believe that the only way to get justice is through legal action. Increasingly, we are being asked by former WCG members whether or not we think they should sue the Worldwide Church of God. Their general argument, paraphrased, goes something like this: "When we were in the church, we received letters from Herbert asking for money. We were told that the church was in dire need. Now we find out it really wasn't. We were led to believe that the leaders of the church were sacrificing just as we were for 'the work.' Now we are reading in the newspapers that they didn't. We were told that Mr. Armstrong was on foreign trips trying to spread the Gospel of the Kingdom. Now we are finding out he was not so much as even mentioning the name of Jesus on these trips. When GTA was put out of the church, we were told that the rumors of misconduct on his part were not true. He only 'needed a rest.' Now we find out that that too was a lie. Had we been told the truth, we would never have given that money. We were lied to, defrauded, and robbed!"

There are also those who feel they were irreparably damaged when certain WCG ministers coerced them into leaving a mate because of the church's now admittedly erroneous divorce and remarriage (D and R) doctrine. Others saw mates, children, or parents suffer and, die after they were coerced into denying a sick loved-one medical attention because of the "healing doctrine" (also now admittedly erroneous). Still others are irate because they were unjustly disfellowshipped. After being "marked" and ostracized from friends, they have discovered that this was-all done in contradiction to the procedures as outlined in the church's own Articles of Incorporation.

It's clear to us that many have been treated unjustly and severely wronged. But we have been very reluctant to advise people to seek a solution in the courts. There are a number of reasons for this. One is the exorbitant costs involved. Not only can good lawyers be very expensive, but a court fight can last years, and the cost in terms of time, energy, and aggravation can easily be so high as to make a victory almost worthless.

A second reason is that the WCG, with its legal staff and financial resources, can put up a formidable opposition. One has only to read our last two newsletters to see this clearly. Whereas a typical plaintiff may have to struggle to raise $5,000 or $10,000 for a lawyer's initial retainer fee, the WCG, in many cases, would not think twice about spending $100,000 in legal fees to keep a key witness such as HWA or Rader from testifying.

A third reason we have been reluctant to suggest litigation is that, in spite of the fact that people have been wronged, it is one thing to have been victimized and another thing entirely to be able to prove it in court. Then there are other problems, such as the statute of limitations, First Amendment protection for churches, and the possibility of unprovable perjury by fanatic Armstrong loyalists.

Nevertheless, we do know of people who have sued the WCG over various matters and have gotten out-of-court settlements. It should also be pointed out that with all the legal activity currently surrounding the WCG, a great deal of information is being made public (via court testimony and depositions) that until now would have been virtually inaccessible to the average anti-WCG litigant.

If you are one of those who feels compelled to wage a legal battle, may we suggest that you (1) prepare properly by reading a few books on the subject of litigation and our legal system in general, (2) choose a lawyer carefully by shopping around, and (3) contact us about your plans. We've had some experience in this area, and we may be able to provide you with information of value. However, please don't ask us to tell you whether to sue or not. We cannot make your decisions for you.

We've mentioned in the past that some individuals have contemplated initiating class-action lawsuits against the WCG and its leaders. We know, for instance, of two separate class-action suits that have been prepared. However, they have not been filed, and we have been unable to learn what will become of them. Perhaps their future hinges upon the results of the state's current civil suit. Some of you have written us asking that we notify you should these develop. We would, of course, be happy to, if not personally, then at least through our publication. But this would really be unnecessary because if you should happen to be in that class on whose behalf a class-action suit is initiated, the law requires that you be notified.

At one time we ourselves hoped that a way could be found for those who had been victimized by the church to somehow be at least partially compensated. In fact, we've toyed with the idea of initiating legal action ourselves and have discussed the idea of compensation with a number of prominent attorneys. However, we've come to see that this is an unreasonable goal for two reasons: (1) The costs involved would be astronomical. As it is, the Report operates on a shoe-string budget, and we have no intention of going on a major fund-raising campaign. Nor do we believe our readers could even supply the funds. Most have already been financially bled white by the Armstrong cult. (2) Considering the incredibly large number of Armstrong victims in existence and the decreasing size of WCG assets, even a total victory in the courts might prove, from a dollar and cents point of view, very hollow indeed.

However, there is one other possibility of which all of you should be aware. The current lawsuit against the WCG has as one of its objectives the reorganization of the boards of trustees of the WCG, Ambassador College, and AICF. The state has clearly stated that it wants to bar Rader, Ralph Helge, and many if not all of the current board members from serving again because of the abuse of these offices.

How, then, would the new trustees be chosen? We haven't heard anything definitive on this from the attorney general. However, Rader asserts that the state wants to initiate democratic procedures in the selection of board members. If this is the case (and we have no reason to doubt it), then an amazing situation could easily develop. Because so many individuals have been disfellowshipped through improper procedures during the last five years and because so many WCG members on the WCG's computer list are in reality not loyal to the church's current hierarchy, it could easily turn out that a majority of those voting in such an election could elect trustees who could either dismantle the "Armstrong empire" or redirect the use of its assets toward purposes in keeping with the desires and needs of those who contributed financially to its formation. We're not "holding our breath," but the possibility does exist that in the event new trustees are elected something may be able to be done for the many victims of Armstrongism.

The Bagley Trial Finally Ends

One year ago Ambassador Report carried a story about Gary Bagley, a WCG member who was arrested and charged with attempted extortion after picketing Ambassador College. After more than a year of delays, Bagley's trial took place in March, and a jury of 10 women and 2 men rendered a guilty verdict. Sentencing was set for April 15. In a report to the court, Bagley's parole officer, citing Bagley's cooperation, general character, and lack of a criminal record, recommended in lieu of incarceration that he merely be fined $350 for his indiscretion. Concerned that Bagley might continue harassing the church, Judge Daniel Fletcher instead gave him a suspended sentence for his misdemeanor and warned that the suspension would be removed if he continued to harass church leaders. Judge Fletcher admonished the defendant that if he has grievances against the church, the proper recourse would be to pursue a remedy through a civil suit and not through other means. After the proceeding Bagley told the press that he was thankful that he would not have to spend time in the county jail but was still convinced that he was really innocent. Nevertheless, he said he had no intention of disobeying the court's order.

Thus culminated one of the oddest trials ever to involve the WCG. Ambassador Report covered the proceedings in their entirety. Our limited space does not permit us to relay to you all that occurred. (The transcript of the trial alone could fill a very large book.) But we still do want to share with you a number of observations we made in regard to this case.

The first point of interest is that in the fourteen months preceding the trial Bagley's attorney Richard Andrews subpoenaed Herbert Armstrong, Garner Ted Armstrong, Stanley Rader, Roderick Meredith, David Antion, Albert Portune, and Dibar Apartian. Andrews wanted their testimony to prove the extent to which information about Garner Ted Armstrong's private life was known (a major point of contention in Bagley's defense). Not one of these men ever testified. Meredith, Antion, and Apartian were excused from having to testify when Helge submitted statements from them saying they knew nothing that might have relevance to the case. Garner Ted's attorneys argued successfully in a Texas court and prevented his being required to testify in California. Similarly, Herbert Armstrong and Stan Rader, claiming Arizona residency, were successful in Arizona courts. Albert Portune, on more than one occasion, told Andrews he would testify, but on the morning the trial began, Portune was represented by Ambassador College attorneys who were able to successfully block his subpoena.

The second area of particular interest surrounds the main piece of evidence submitted by the prosecution, a tape recording of a phone conversation between Bagley and the church's lawyer Ralph Helge. In the conversation Bagley told Helge of how the church had ruined his life. He talked of the six years he was forced to live alone because he was a "D and R" case. He told Helge he wanted "restitution" for the damage done to his life. The remuneration that he felt to be adequate was "not a million dollars" but $30,000 for each of the 6 years the church said he had to remain unmarried.

One remarkable thing about this tape is the fact that it was recorded with Bagley's permission. Helge actually asked him if he could tape the whole thing, and Bagley not only cheerfully consented but cooperated in a microphone test - strange conduct for someone supposedly trying to make an extortion attempt. Even more remarkable is the fact that at no time during the conversation did lawyer Helge protest in any way whatsoever that what Bagley was suggesting might be illegal or even unethical. In fact, the impression one gets very distinctly is that Helge just wanted to get the facts straight and was going to discuss it all with Garner Ted Armstrong. Ironically, according to his own testimony, Helge never discussed this matter with Garner Ted, only with Stanley Rader and Robert Kuhn.

In his talk with Helge, Bagley told the lawyer that if the church would not be willing to make the restitution he was asking for, he would make public certain information he had regarding Garner Ted Armstrong. After the conversation, Bagley heard nothing from Helge or Garner Ted Armstrong and did not pursue the matter for six weeks. But then, in mid-December 1977 a frustrated and irate Gary Bagley appeared in front of Ambassador College with a sign which stated "Garner Ted Armstrong is an adulterer...." Four days later, shortly before the taping of a "Gene Kelley Special" in the "House for God," Bagley was arrested by two undercover Pasadena police officers who claimed they were working for Helge. (A tape of this conversation was also played in court.)

In the months that followed, Bagley refused all plea-bargaining offers from the district attorney's office, saying, "I'm innocent and I want this to go to court!"

During the trial Bagley was questioned as to why he hadn't sued the church rather than demand "restitution" as he did. Bagley explained that the church taught that it was wrong to go to "heathen courts" over a matter involving a fellow Christian.

(Apparently, in 1977 he still considered the leaders of the WCG to be Christians.) He cited Matt. 18:15-17 as the reason he had contacted Helge and later the church members via his sign. (Some years ago when one ex-WCG member sued the church for damages, Helge testified in that civil case that the ex-member should not be entitled to damages because he had not conformed to the church's doctrine of asking for a "hearing" but instead went to the world's courts.)

At the Bagley trial, when questioned about the church's doctrine in this area, Helge testified that if Bagley wanted a "hearing" on the matter, he should not have or gone about it the way that he did (of course, Helge neglected to tell this to Bagley during their phone conversation). According to Helge, all a member has to do, if he's been wronged, is to ask a minister for a hearing. Only a few days after Helge gave this testimony Bagley attempted once more to put the church to the test. Just prior to a sabbath service, Bagley approached the presiding minister at the WCG's Pasadena headquarters church. He told the minister he wanted a hearing. Not only was his request denied, he was told he could not attend the services and was ordered to leave the property. Then according to eyewitnesses, Bagley got down on his knees and pleaded with the minister to grant him a hearing. To this, the minister responded, "You could stand on your head and we wouldn't give you a hearing" So much for Helge's claim.

Ambassador Report asked Bagley's attorney what he felt about the trial and the jury is decision. Andrews told us, "I know the jury voted in accordance with their conscience. But this case was a highly complex one involving very unusual circumstances. I think they missed something. I'm personally convinced that Mr. Bagley never intended to do anything illegal. If that were the case, why did he let Helge tape record his conversation asking for restitution?"

Andrews continued:

"The average juror or man on the street has little idea of what brainwashing can do to a person. Since getting involved with this case, I've been amazed at how much people can suffer at the hands of supposedly religious people. In Gary's case there were 6 years of living in celibacy, poverty, and mental anguish. When he finally realized how he had been used by these men who he thought were God's representatives, it was shattering! He wanted things straightened out. He may not have gone about it the best way - that's not surprising considering the mental state he was in - but he was trying to get justice, not commit a crime. I'm really disappointed the jury couldn't see that. Perhaps a different jury from a different community would have voted differently.

"Of course, we're going to appeal. It'll probably take a year or so, but I think that verdict is going to be thrown out."

And what does Bagley feel now? He told the Report, "I really had hoped that the church leaders would see the damage that they've done to my life and grant me a proper hearing and restitution.... I still believe in God, but I sure don't have much confidence anymore in organized religion."

There is one more observation that needs to be made. Before Bagley's sentencing, Deputy District Attorney Aaron Stovitz angrily asserted that Bagley had indeed carried out his threat to expose the Worldwide Church of God and Garner Ted Armstrong's sins by means of the trial itself. Keeping in mind that it was Stovitz who brought the charges against Bagley (at Helge's initiation), and obviously not the defendant himself, it is ironic that the trial did bring out an incredible amount of testimony about the WCG and its leaders. Among those who testified about the church were Bob Gerring of Ambassador Report and Ernest L. Martin, director of the Foundation for Biblical Research, who testified as to the cult-like character of the WCG.

The court also heard sworn testimony from Jim Morrison and former WCG-minister Al Carrozzo. Both detailed the extent of Garner Ted Armstrong's promiscuity while a minister in the Worldwide Church of God. Much of their testimony was reported in detail by the press. There is, of course, no need to go into all of this again, but we should point out that the testimony given under oath by Messrs. Morrison and Carrozzo did totally corroborate the information regarding Garner Ted Armstrong which was published in our 1977 Ambassador Report.

On the Air With GTA

A number of our readers have written asking our opinion of Garner Ted Armstrong's new religious organization. Perhaps the following will give some idea of how we feel.

On November 28, 1978, Garner Ted Armstrong was interviewed via telephone on Roy Foxe's hour-long radio talk program, which is aired over station KDKA in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. When the program went on the air, Mr. Foxe informed Ted that he was sharing the microphone (also via telephone) with Len Zola and Bob Gerring of Ambassador Report. Garner Ted - much happier and more relaxed since leaving the war-torn environment of Ambassador College - seemed unperturbed.

The interview was rather lengthy, but some comments are worth printing. Below are some of the more choice remarks. (Because Ted spoke about 75% of the time, more space has been devoted to his comments than to those of Ambassador Report publishers Zola and Gerring.)

FOXE: Ted, you once before left or were thrown out of the Worldwide Church of God, and you came back to the fold. Do you envision a time that that might conceivably happen again?

TED: Not unless Stanley Rader were to utterly resign and my father, himself, were perhaps to think of following suit, and I could have a great big huge broom and a great big hose under a hundred pounds pressure and sweep and clean the whole mess out from top to bottom.

FOXE: There had been talk, as with the Jim Jones cult, of the Worldwide Church moving to another place, and Worldwide Church members at times when they were parting would say, "See you in Petra."

TED: Yes, this was prior to 1972. I began fighting against that as early as 1966. And I still have the tape and the sermon notes of my preaching against the idea and then being bitterly rebuked by my father that same afternoon....

FOXE: I heard you preached against your father's high standard of living, yet you have lived a pretty nice lifestyle yourself.

TED: Two of my personal friends have said my smoking heel prints are clearly visible up and down the mall where I have been dragged unwillingly into one monstrous financial misdecision after another.... I always had a sense of apprehension beginning clear back in the 1950s that the opulence and the extravagance would someday come home to roost. And I feel that it has. I feel that it was all through the 1970s. And that is why I myself have said so often that the people of the church should not be asked to sacrifice unless the leaders are themselves willing to sacrifice.... In the last two and a half years, I struggled very hard to try to prevent my father's marriage to a woman several years younger than my own wife. And I just felt that the church could not stand any more of this type of thing. I felt that it exposed a very human, let's say fleshly, Herbert W. Armstrong that I felt really should not be done.... My ouster finally did occur in about late May of this year. And frankly now that I'm all away on the other side of the tunnel and kind of looking back, it is really a whole lot happier world out here .... I've got to keep doing what I'm doing. Now so far God has blessed it.... My father just recently turned his back on 48 years of teaching and turned completely around and even used the Catholic word the "primacy of Peter," and in his desire to take the complete, sole, total authority for binding and loosing all doctrines, he has thrown to the winds 48 years of understanding to the contrary. I'm afraid I cannot go along with that.

FOXE: Would you like to make a comment on either Len Zola or Bob Gerrerger before I bring them on the air?

TED: I don't believe I know the former one. I'm sure I must have met him. Bob, I've not known well, but I've known and I knew his grandparents .... I did finally see an Ambassador Report - the last one, I believe [Ted is referring to the Sept.-Oct. 1978 newsletter], which I found to be quite interesting. And there were quite a number of things, a couple of few little minor things - errors - that I wish I could have corrected, but nevertheless Ambassador Report was quite intriguing, quite interesting. The first one that I'd seen.

ZOLA: I'd like to explain who we are. Ambassador Report is a group that we formed about 2½ years ago. About 15 people who had been students, graduates of Ambassador College, and also employees in sensitive areas - saw an incredible amount of corruption.... Garner Ted Armstrong, who claims now that he also saw that corruption for years, did nothing about it.... What we did upon seeing a lot of these things and finally realizing that we'd been conned was to form a group and publish what we had. It was not a matter of a bitter diatribe.... It was just a matter of throwing out the information so that people could make their own decisions after they had received the whole story.... If anything could categorize Garner Ted's previous statements, it would be that he has an incredible sense of a chameleon syndrome. He can change his comments to fit any environment he happens to be in at that particular moment. He made comments about us - the fact that he had only seen our magazine recently and that there were a few minor mistakes. We've got a Pastor's Report letter that he sent out to the ministry when he was, indeed, on top where he called our entire magazine "essentially untrue," whatever that means.... It is just interesting how there's just a few "minor mistakes" now, but yet while we were approaching him, he would not even listen to us, would not even accept an invitation. We sent him a formal letter to get together. He just said that if he would have had a chance, he could have corrected a few mistakes.... Well, we gave him so much opportunity, and he totally neglected us.

FOXE: Garner Ted, what about the discrepancy that is being suggested here?

TED: I really, honestly, and this is honestly true, don't remember that, but if I said it, I must have said it, and I'm sure that the content of it was described to me very likely by either Robert Kuhn or someone else. And that's perhaps unfortunate. What I alluded to just now my wife showed me a few days ago.... The most important thing in there [the newsletter] that I thought was a very great contribution... was [the discussion of] a great discrepancy between what my father is saying now concerning my alleged secularization of the Work and his own rather lengthy explanations about him desiring that I speak in more secular tones.... I didn't in all honesty read the first several copies of Ambassador Report. I didn't do so because I had been told that it was quite an attack on myself, and I just frankly am so sickened by that type of thing that it would have bothered my sleep. It would have tortured my thoughts. I simply did not want to subject myself to it.... Now I do understand... that there has been an embezzlement of $200,000 plus [from the Worldwide Church of God].... But how can I prove anything one way or the other if the organization itself will not charge this man with what did occur. I do not really honestly believe that my father is anything other than a very sincere man, but a man who has been very human, for he has made many mistakes - whose appetites most especially with regard for opulence, for finery, for the gilded edge, and so on led him into making, what I feel, are very serious mistakes.... When my father made me the executive vice-president of the church in 1973, I said in a very emotion-laden talk before him... that I had not only seen the infamous report ["Employee Frustrations at Headquarters"] that was presented to him by... Mr. Al Carrozzo, but I said, "Dad I want you to know what you're getting." I said, "If you are going to appoint me as the executive vice-president I want you to know that I happen to agree with every word that is in that report."

FOXE: What do you think is the possibility that Garner Ted is laying it on the line and the new leaf is a trustworthy one?

BOB: One has to just sit and wait and see whether or not Garner Ted will follow through. We appreciate his new policy of openness with his church.... A lot of comparisons have been made to Jonestown and the problems there.... there was an incredible discrepancy between the lifestyles of the people leading Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God and the lifestyles that were preached and taught to the individual. The same is true for the People's Temple members. I'm not saying that their lifestyles were the same, but there was a discrepancy. That is why Ambassador Report had to come out. I know that we printed some things that were sensitive to Ted, himself, and to many others. These were not meant as personal attacks, but they were the only way that the lay members and the little people could find out really how the top people lived.

Herbert's Broadcasts Ineffective

While Garner Ted's church is apparently growing by leaps and bounds, the WCG is experiencing a constant hemorrhage of members and ministers. WCG ministers are engaged in a mad scramble to enter the "noncareer ministry" - which means they can receive thousands of dollars in severance pay, remain in the good graces of the church, and begin seeking employment other than the WCG ministry. A number of ministers view the present WCG management structure as "intolerable" and "a reign of terror." Church attendance was down 3,000 at the feast of unleavened bread. Another disturbing fact facing the church is that Herbert's new radio programs are pulling in little mail and seem totally ineffective. Reliable sources indicate that the cost of getting new responses from listeners to Herbert's program has risen to several hundred dollars per response. When Garner Ted did the broadcast, stations were dropped when it cost more than $30 per new response. The situation has prompted Ed Libov and Associates to drop "The World Tomorrow," and thus Worldwide Advertising is again the agency buying air time for the church.

We have learned that Ted is being besieged by requests from radio stations to give them his religious program. It seems they want Ted's program as a substitute for Herbert's insipid broadcast which is hurting station ratings.

Armstrong's daughter challenges Stanley Rader

Last night I heard the newscast on TV with shocked disbelief. To think that Stan Rader could ask people to turn their homes over to the church! First it's give up some pay checks and now it's give their homes!

I would like to challenge Stan to be the first one to dip into that sacrificial pot - then if he has to forfeit on the bond his house can go too!

Stan Rader owns three houses and a stable of horses. (Stan-Wal Ranch in Tucson, Arizona). Most of the people he is asking to sacrifice either rent or live from paycheck to paycheck, meanwhile trying to pay three tithes and eke out an existence to be able to own one house! How many drive a Mazaratti plus a Mercedes Benz sport model and a limo? I think it's high time the sacrifice came from the top - and I am referring to Stan Rader.

Why is Stan so dead set against the audit of the books by the state? Eventually they are going to do it anyway and, if there is nothing to hide, why all this grandstanding? Every delay, every time he goes to court for an appeal it costs the church more money. (Nearly one half million dollars for just two months' fees to attorney Brown). Now we have this latest grandstand play - the bond! And if and when the terms are broken and it is forfeit?

Can't anyone who is unafraid to speak out see what is happening? The church is being drained totally and not too slowly - but surely going toward bankruptcy - and for what purpose?

If in January, when the receivership was ordered, the books had been opened, the audit might have been nearly over by now. All the costs of the many appeals, the loss of credibility and the damage to attorney general at no time tried to tell anyone what is going on - they only wanted to see the books.

Why so scared? If there are things in the records that show misappropriation of monies sent in, then it should be known and dealt with accordingly.

Instead, the lifetime work of my father, that beautiful campus, even my father's credibility is fast disappearing. The notoriety makes me ashamed.

Dad is no longer a young man - he is over there in Tucson in such seclusion he only gets the slant of news that is handed him by the adviser he trusts. Any other person who tries to give a whole picture is branded as a conspirator who is trying to do him harm. It hurts us, his real family, but what can we do? We can't protect him for if we try we will be labeled as "conspirators."

It will be a year next month since I've been able to have contact with Dad - yet when I last saw him everything was fine between us. Now I hear that Dad has been told that I am against him, that I hate him!

The last message by Wayne Cole (before he was axed), Bud Meredith, and Myrtle Stone, I've worried and stewed about Dad's welfare and health. There was a time late last summer and autumn that I even wondered if he were dead and we weren't being told. I couldn't reach him. I couldn't get his phone number and some of those writings, so anything that was being sent out did not have his inimitable style.

I was brought up to believe that God is Love. For the past nine months every publication I have seen has been a scolding, scathing denunciation of either my brother or of the church. What has this to do with preaching the Gospel? Dad is not here. He doesn't know all sides of the picture. Are you people who claim to be such dedicated church members going to stand by and do nothing all the while life work of the man you all claim to love goes down in bitter grief?

Are you going to stand by and even see his memory ruined with all this needless notoriety?

If there is nothing to hide why spend all your life savings "protesting too much?"

I know that you live in fear of losing your jobs if you stand up and be counted, but if you don't how long do you think your jobs will last? You can't be paid by a bankrupt corporation!

While all you thinking members cover in fear of your jobs, the church is being bled white by mounting court costs that were needless in the first place and now some of you blissful martyrs will no doubt give up your homes, not one of you will stop to ask, "Why only the rank and file are asked to sacrifice?"

The day the campus has to be sold to pay for a continuing notorious and needless squabble and you are all homeless and jobless and the life work of the man you all love is gone, perhaps in hindsight and sorrow you will look back and the light will dawn at last.

This is the most ridiculous and needless thing I can think of. Why don't you say, "Forget the bond. Open the books." Demand the books to be opened. You are a church. If you are without spot or blemish what are you afraid of?

Please wake up before it's too late. I am so weary of seeing our family name being dragged through a fiasco. I just had to say something. If you really love my father put a stop to this three-ring circus.

I am not a church member, as you all so proudly know, but the church, through my family, has always been a large part of my life and I am a most ashamed and concerned daughter who must finally speak out in horror and shock at this latest fiasco.

The above letter appeared in the Pasadena Star-News, March 18. Those of you who haven't yet seen it will find it very revealing. We certainly did. Since its publication, Garner Ted Armstrong has stated that he too is unable to reach his father, even by phone. This, combined with the fact that HWA's recent articles appear to be ghost-written, has led many to speculate as to Herbert Armstrong's true circumstances and health, both physical and mental.

Has Anybody Seen Herman Hoeh Lately?

Church oracle. Prophet. Pseudohistorian. Evangelist. Instructor. Nutritionist. Book collector. Editor. Counselor. Politician. Propagandist. Could this describe anyone but the one and only Herman L. Hoeh? The most gifted and versatile of the ministers, Herman was considered a dynamo of energy for 20 years. During his tenure he served as managing editor of The Plain Truth, senior editor of The Good News, dean of faculty, college instructor, vice-president of academic affairs, coordinator of the correspondence course, writer, archaeologist, minister, etc. When the church needed "proof" for some new teaching, Herman found it buried in some obscure scripture or in an ancient German chronicle. When Herbert needed historical and biblical support for a Monday Pentecost, Herman dug it up and then eloquently defended it dam to his last drop of blood, accusing supporters of a Sunday Pentecost of being tools of the devil. But when the word was circulated that Herbert might accept a Sunday Pentecost, chameleon Herman appeared almost instantly with detailed and convincing pro-Sunday arguments. In fact, he was one of the ones who recommended that the facts be presented to Herbert as "previously undiscovered new truth." It would have been suicidal to have told Herbert what he told several friends - that he had originally felt that Pentecost was on Sunday in the early 1950s. He also dared not explain to Herbert that the "newly revealed" facts had been available in other theological works all along and that Herbert had simply ignored them or never looked for them. (Actually for 13 years the church had Dr. Ernest L. Martin's lengthy paper proving Pentecost was on Sunday, but the leading ministers chose to ignore his facts at Hoeh's urging.)

But of late, Herman seems to have all but disappeared from the scene - even though the "right wing" is back in power. Why? It appears Herman made a rare political error. He chose to give a long sermon on March 11, 1978, in support of a new study paper which had been authored mainly by Lester Grabbe and Dr. Robert Kuhn. Their paper proved convincingly that Herbert was wrong concerning the date the Jews kept the passover. He made another blunder by calling this new finding "a revelation that God has given," while admitting it had been kept from Herbert because he had a weak heart. He also remarked that he felt Herbert would now function mainly as "a father figure." Unfortunately for Herman, a tape of this sermon was leaked back to Herbert. To say Herbert became furious as a wounded grizzly bear would be a gross understatement. Sources say Herbert wanted to fire Herman on the spot but was persuaded not to. Nevertheless, Herman has not been chosen to fill any key faculty or administrative position since Garner Ted was kicked out. This has left Herman with little more to do than preach a weekly sermon and play with his photo collection. Hoeh had "doctored" one thing too many.

For years Hoeh had had a knack for altering the right thing at the right time. He received his doctorate from AC after compiling a mishmash of chronologies and king lists into a compendium of world history. Students were awed by his convoluted wording and circular reasoning, never suspecting that he was quoting sources out of context and altering the authors' intended meaning. Each of his yearly revisions was proclaimed as "new truth," even though they contradicted the previous year's "new truth."

But Herman was apparently dissatisfied with altering mere historical facts and tried his hand at "doctoring" information of a more challenging nature. On September 17, 1965, while Dean of Faculty, Herman sent a note on his official stationery to a clerk in the Registrar's Office asking that his academic record be amended. He wrote:

"Please register me for the following:

Jan. 1963	5of Hist. of Ed.: Cath. Philosophy	3
	507 Hist. of Ed.: Early Jewish School	3
	508 Hist. of Ed.: Philosophy and the N.T.	3
	799 Dissertation Research	6

Add to Fall 1962 606 Seminar in Hist. of Ed. 2 and cut back
604 Sam. Ed. Cl. from 3 to 2 units in the business office."

In conclusion he said that this would give him extra units which would look good. Needless to say, these courses were not taught at Ambassador in 1963. On this same note, Mrs ----- wrote, "entered 9-20-65" and "OK, will go thru next week" and signed her initials. Of course, nobody cared one way or the other. Most Ambassador College courses were worthless everywhere else but Ambassador College anyway, since AC was unaccredited. So Hoeh had nothing to gain.

In 1974, when it came time to defend the church's erroneous tithing doctrine, Hoeh's "doctoring" services were once again in great demand. We have in our possession an inch-thick folder filled with tithing papers submitted by various church ministers. These papers were sent out to the whole church ministry under the title "Study Paper on Tithing" (September 24, 1974) - but not before Hoeh had made the papers palatable to the church leadership. To one paper he added a lengthy conclusion that differed significantly from the author's original conclusion. He rewrote another paper, radically altered the conclusions of several others, and added numerous paragraphs of propaganda to the remaining ones. After altering the final paragraph of one of the papers, he caused the concluding sentence to read: "Never has there been such a restoration of truth since biblical times" (p. 63). Restoration?? Truth?? "Distortion" would have been a better choice of words!

The World's Most Expensive Haircut

The Worldwide Church has had one desperate financial crisis after another for the last ten years, the chief reason being Herbert Armstrong's profligate spending habits. Herbert has long been an advocate of short, well-groomed hair for church males, and he always keeps his snow-white hair looking immaculate. But what most members are unaware of is that he may be receiving the world's most expensive haircut. It has come to light that Herbert has often had Ambassador College's barber fly to Tucson, Arizona from Pasadena - just to cut his hair. (It costs $130 to fly his barber round trip from Los Angeles via Continental Airlines - assuming the barber flies coach and not first class.)

We learned that on one occasion Herbert ordered his barber to fly all the way to Tucson on Friday, but at the last minute he had to cancel his haircut. So what did he do? He had the barber spend the weekend in Tucson - at the church's expense until Herbert was free. That haircut alone must have cost the church a minimum of $200, not to mention the fact that the barber had to cancel all his appointments at Ambassador College while waiting for Herbert. No wonder some students on campus are letting their hair grow longer than ever before.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor: We frequently receive criticism from readers who feel that by mentioning certain authors, churches, or organizations we are somehow giving our endorsement to everything they do. In the past we have commented favorably on the books of such authors as Joseph Hopkins, Marion McNair and Ernest L. Martin. The reason for this is that not only have these men put out intelligent, well-researched material, but as far as we know they haven't started cults, used psychological coercion to get contributions, interfered in the lives of their readers, or been theologically dogmatic. We also know that their efforts have helped many people to live better lives.

Unfortunately, the same cannot be said of everyone whose name and address has appeared in Ambassador Report. For instance, in one of our issues, we gave the address of one individual who was making a certain item available to the public. Since then we received a number of complaints from readers saying that they have discovered that this individual claims to be one of the two witnesses of Revelation, practices polygamy, and has incorporated sex rituals into the religion he practices with his closest followers.

Obviously, we don't advocate this type of behavior, nor do we believe that this kook is one of the two witnesses. However, we do feel that much of what he has published is of real "value" because it shows quite clearly just how wacky some people can get with religion. So please remember that even though we may not say so each time, we are not advocating that our readers believe everything put out by every group we mention in our newsletters. If there is one thing the "Ambassador experience" should have taught all of us, it is the importance of discernment. With that in mind, we have a number of really interesting letters we want to share with you. As before, for privacy reasons, names of correspondents are not listed unless they have given us specific permission to do so.

Rader Must Certainly Know

Stan Rader must be a fairly competent lawyer. As such, he must certainly know that accepting a tax-exempt status from the government automatically invites the government to become a financial partner of the church and specifically carries a financial disclosure responsibility. He shouldn't need the Supreme Court to tell him this. All he has to do is refuse tax-exempt status. Otherwise, all he has to do is show where the money is going.

-NORTH CAROLINA

I don't know if this advice came from Armstrong, himself, or from the local minister, but...

Each member has been advised to mite multiple letters (if possible about 25 each) and mail them to their senators and representatives, using different names on each letter. I don't know if they were to forge real names or use fictitious ones. I understand this is what the Jones cult members were told to do, also. Anyway, the purpose of the letters is to try to stop the government from investigating the church, claiming the Worldwide Church of God is a GOOD church and is being "persecuted." The members are doing this all right. My grandson told me, yesterday, that his mother and another member had two typewriters, and were both very busy writing these letters. He didn't know about the use of real names, but they were using different names. I understood him to say they planned to mail these letters from different localities.

...with inflation, we're really feeling the pinch because of the church rakeoff now. It was a nuisance before, but now it makes the difference between eating and not eating at the end of the month. The kids complain outright that they're hungry, but TRY to sway a true fanatic!

-WIFE OF A WCG MEMBER

Thank you! If only I had read the Ambassador Report when it first came out, I would have been a little richer and a whole lot wiser. Now with all the rumblings coming from Pasadena, it's like watching the Titanic sink.... This is amazing. I think this would make a great book and a fascinating movie if anyone would put forth the effort.

I just checked with the Secretary of State of Georgia, Corp. Dept., and found that "Pope Herbert" qualified in Georgia, November 30, 1978, as a Utah corporation d/b/a Church of God, International, Inc. with legal offices at 11768 Hogan Road, Sandy, Utah 84070. Herbert W. Armstrong, 300 West Green St., Pasadena, CA is listed as the President. Are you aware of this? In effect, he now heads up two different Church organizations. Certified copies of Georgia Incorporation are available at $4.00 from the Secretary of State, 225 Peachtree St., Suite 600, Corporation Dept., Atlanta, GA 30303, Attn.: Carol Fuller.

The CIA?

Are you acquainted with the "I.D.E.A.L. Society" (Individually Designed Ethically Aware Lifestytes) of P.O. Box 38191, Houston, Texas 77088? It appears they think Rader and HWA are tied up with the CIA. Do you have any knowledge of possible substantiation for their accusations?

-WASHINGTON

Editor: We have absolutely no evidence that Herbert Armstrong or Stanley Rader are involved in any CIA activities. Nor do we have any hard evidence that either is a member of any secret society or conspiratorial organization. However, there are many who feel otherwise.

I go to services in the Milwaukee, Wisconsin a.m. Church. Last month we were told we would have slides and a sermon on the early covenant of the Bible. We had a Mark Kaplan (a former student studying to be a rabbi, who ended up at Ambassador College) narrating about the Jews . The slides were on a reel which consisted of maps of Jewish treks, homelands, dress, etc. The second reel was mostly pictures of early Jews, Karl Marx, Trotsky, Disraeli, Einstein, the [Jerusalem] dig, the new park [in Jerusalem], the wailing wall, etc.

After this junk was shown, I noticed my heart was pounding. I was scared then, and the fear hasn't left me. I'm sorry I didn't write to you immediately, as the facts would be clearer.... I haven't been able to get that sabbath out of my mind. Were we being brainwashed in case of Armstrong's demise and a Rader takeover? I wish I had the answer.

-WISCONSIN

Having had many years of "experience" in the Worldwide Church of God - from the time when it was a "respected" organization to the present time when its credibility has all but vanished - I have frequently pondered the causes for the effects we see in the church today. Recently I read a fascinating book titled Fourth Reich of the Rich by Des Griffin who, I understand, is a member of the WCG. In this book the author reveals and historically documents the existence of a top secret organization known as the Illuminati. Their declared objectives include the discrediting and then the destruction of Christianity. Their ultimate goal is the establishment of a One-World Government.

According to evidence taken from the archives of the British Museum in London and presented in chapter eleven of Fourth Reich, the Illuminati infiltrates churches and other groups with "agentur" or "special advisors" and, over a period of time, destroys their effectiveness. In light of the staggering changes that have taken place in the WCG in recent years it may be a valid question to ask: "Has the Worldwide church of God been taken over by an agent of the Luciferian Illuminati?"

Copies of this thought-provoking, and educational book may be purchased for $5.00 plus 70¢ postage from Emissary Publications, P.O. Box 642, South Pasadena, CA 91030.

-TIM SARGEANT, OREGON

Years ago when Herbert Armstrong began raising money for his "House of God," contributors were given the impression that there were certain parallels between it and the Temple of Solomon (its interior color scheme, its use of gold, marble, and other expensive materials, etc.). We were, however, not told that the auditorium would in fact, have much in common with masonry and paganism. For instance, like the wicked men of Ezek. 8:16, WCG members at headquarters face east when they worship, not west as did the righteous worshippers at the Temple and its predecessor the Tabernacle!

Did you ever notice that, architecturally, the auditorium is really a large black box with a white top as is the Islamic Kaaba? The auditorium's seven steps to the stage and the dedication at its entrance ("to the Great God") are only two of many Masonic counterparts which have astounded those familiar with Masonry. It is interesting that years ago the WCG published a booklet exposing Masonry and its occult symbolism. But the booklet is no longer available from the church! I am presently working on a research paper entitled "Armstrongism: A Prolegomena to Masonic and Pagan Parallels." It will be completed shortly.

Ambassador Report Brings Results

All of your efforts are truly bringing results! Had the reports come sooner, my family could have been saved. Happy to say, my ex-wife is now an ex-member after reading your reports. (Heaven only knows I tried.)

-WISCONSIN

Nine years ago, when I was starting to give tithes to Ambassador College, my parents tried very hard to change my mind and have me join some other religion instead of the Worldwide Church of God. They told me that the Armstrongs were taking money from all the poor people and living like kings. It is strange how all that heat had helped me stay in the church.

Since that time I had given up a good-paying job, gone on welfare, refused other good-paying jobs because of the holy days, and avoided family celebrations because they were "pagan." In return, what I received were "brothers and sisters" I didn't care for, sermons and lectures that I've heard over and over again, and reading how happy Mr. Armstrong was visiting all the brethren in his jet.

I stopped tithing this summer when I realized that I wasn't receiving the blessings of Malachi 2:10. Also, I really wouldn't want to help someone live the kind of life I went through. And learning that Herbert W. Armstrong takes a $200,000 salary from the church was the last straw.

A friend told me that the church has a policy in which any member who reads Ambassador Report is automatically excommunicated. I told my mother this, and she said, "Send for the magazine right away!"

-NEW YORK

We were in that organization 18 years. We never knew what it was to have a joint of meat, or plenty of good food, or enjoyment. My wife worked until she was 67 years of age, to enable us to keep up with the tithes. It is a great relief to be free of this burden.

-ENGLAND

Received my copy of Ambassador Report several days ago. It was difficult to lay down until I had finished it from cover to cover. I felt at one time the WCG was the true church. Although not participating for some 4 to 5 years now, I still had a nagging feeling that maybe I was turning my back on God's one true church. Now that feeling is gone. It is such a relief to have my suspicions confirmed overwhelmingly with facts.

-PENNSYLVANIA

We Get "Hate Mail" Too!

A friend of mine gave me a copy of the garbage Report it is the Devil's work and anyone that has a right mind will think so. I don't know why God hasn't stopped you guys long ago but we will just wait and see. Your garbage is a direct persecution against God, and you will be called to Judgment.

Your Ambassador Garbage Report will never destroy God's true church. I did not read all the dirty work in the report. What I did read made me sick. It's all a bunch of lies! If you want to cause so much trouble why don't you go to Iran or Russia and see how long you would last. May God have mercy on you, the Ambassador Report garbage editors.

-ANONYMOUS, OHIO

Just had the profound revulsion of opening my mailbox and discovering your "literature." I just can't imagine the emptiness one's life must consist of such that dwelling on evil, negativism and the carrion of life situations, like so many vultures, is the one object of their efforts. If you're going to send this trash out - at least print it on toilet paper so I can get some use from it.

-BRISCOE ELLIOTT MINISTER, WCG

$50,000 Poorer

Because of our association with the WCG, we are about $50,000 poorer. I guess that's just a drop in a bucket to Stan Rader, who can write himself out a bonus check for $35,000, or to HWA; but it is still a lot of money to us. I know people in the WCG who gave up decent homes and moved into cheap places in order to be faithful in paying third tithes. Many gave up life insurance policies, did without dental work didn't buy glasses that were needed., and many other things. And the children suffered the Most.

Thanks to your staff for sending me the Ambassador Report last. year. We are now much better off. We didn't know how unhappy our family was while we were in the church. Financial blessings never came to us for being faithful in tithing. It seemed that the more we grossed, the less we had left. And always it was our children that had to do without something, so that we could afford the extra expenses incurred so that we could attend services (50 miles one way) or additional activities, Bible study, etc.

I also remember attending the funeral of a beautiful little girl that died because her mother was "faithful." The little girl had a bad cold that went into pneumonia. The family was very poor and didn't have much heat in the house, but the minister never went to see her so he didn't know what the conditions of the family were. The minister sent anointed cloths to the child. After several weeks when the child was much worse, the minister's wife told the mother that she would be allowed to take the child to a hospital to be placed under an oxygen tent but that she couldn't have penicillin. When the child was nearly dead, the father (who was not in the church) and mother wrapped her up and started for the hospital. When they arrived, the mother told the doctor that she thought it was too late. It was, and the doctor was kind enough to write it up as if she died just as she arrived at the hospital. Then the mother kept from showing any sadness at all because she believed that it was God's plan to keep the child from suffering later on. I never could buy that idea.

Was Not Allowed to Join

Thank you so much for the wonderful newsletter. I just passed my 82nd birthday, and that newsletter was a wonderful gift. As with all your reports, this will be shared with many of my friends, former members of the WCG.

Before my wife passed away she was a member of the Armstrong organization for 8 years . I became a member four years later. They would not accept me as I was a Star Route mail carrier and naturally Saturday was my heaviest mail day, and I was under contract. Of course, I wanted to join, so after four years I was given an OK by the Post Office department that I could transfer my contract to my daughter-in-law, and they would release me from the contract. I had two routes that paid exceptionally well, and all the time my wife was a member I paid them my tithes, but for the over three years she was in, I was not allowed to attend any services. After my route would be completed on Saturday, I would drive to the church to pick my wife up, but had to wait outside. Finally they did let me come in near the end of the service and attend their functions and dances. I remember one time I attended one of their dinners, and I was quite ill. My wife asked the elder if they would pray for me. They refused because I was not a member. She finally talked to the minister and pleaded with him to anoint me. after some time he finally told the elder to pray for me. To think I had to give up a good contract to join that church!

Father Was Right, Afterall

My husband isn't fond of a lot of reading, so I decided to read the Ambassador Report cover to cover, plus the three newsletters you sent. I just finished everything, which took about 4 to 5 days. I have been in the WCG for 19 years since I was 10 years old. My husband has been in since 1965, and last sabbath was our last!...

If my father knew what's happened in our family in the last couple of months, he'd turn over in his grave. He died a year ago last March, and we actually began seeing things were amiss in the WCG at that time. Our eyes eventually got wide open in June of this (past) year.

My family (dad, mom, me, and two younger brothers ) came into the church in 1959. After 15 months, my dad (who I see now was 19 years ahead of us) could see something was wrong and got out. He was what you'd call "hostile," but for good reason. I well remember the time he had to wait in line to ask the minister after church if it was okay for our cow to be vaccinated. He also knew the tithing thing was all haywire and the no-doctors policy was not right.

As a result of his "attitude," my parents had to separate and a few years later divorced. My father's life was ruined. He had lived through the depression, had no father as a boy, and had lived in orphanages because his mother had to find work. He had had a hard life. At age 32, he married a lovely woman who fulfilled all his needs to be loved. They had a good marriage. He idolized us kids and gave us the love he never got as a boy. He was "the best" daddy. We were a very happy family.

But from about 1960 on, it was hell. Our lives were drastically changed, and my daddy (whom I loved dearly), got the worst deal of us all. His lovely family was split and never was the same again. All his dreams were shattered. He and my mom had only been married 14 years (the happiest years of his entire life), and his family was his life. He took to the bottle and was an extreme alcoholic when he died last year.

It rips me apart to think of the agony that man went through for 17 long years and then to die as he did. He taught me more in dying than ever before, regrettably. But we learned so much after he died about what his side of the story was. As kids, we were led to think of him as the "bad guy." How I wish he were alive today so I could talk to him. I know he would rejoice that his wife (my mom) has quit and my two brothers and us as well.

-MISSOURI

Thank you so much for sending me that Ambassador Report of January 21st. I wish to let you know that the report of last June been making the rounds for months now and has opened the eyes of many in this vicinity and has prevented some 15 people from joining the WCG and has resulted in 14 others leaving the church.

-SASKATOON, CANADA

Since Armstrong is also active in this country [Germany], and practically no news coverage like in your country is available on this subject here, I have so far devoted two issues of a small information paper I am circulating to this very subject, mainly translating from your articles.

Editor: We've heard of many individuals and groups who have taken on the burden of copying and distributing our newsletters, For instance, there is a very dedicated group in Australia that has been distributing the Report and other anticult literature extensively in that country. We're very happy that they can do this as the high postage rates to Australia make it very difficult for us to effectively cover that part of the world. For those "down under" who may be interested, their addresses are: P.O. Box 193, East Caulfield, Vic. 3145, and the Association Exposing Pseudo-Religious Cults, P.O. Box 430, Mt. Waverly, Vic., Australia. The following is a comment from one of the fine individuals in the Australian group:

I ask, why do members of the WCG think that a few ex-members are prepared to do this, at cost to themselves?... If we were working in Satan's interests, wouldn't we be happier to leave our money in our pockets and leave the members of the WCG believing anything they are told? We would go our own way without any thought or concern for the members of the WCG. But no! We know the suffering, lost jobs, financial struggles, anxieties, double standards, isolation from family, and have learnt the spiritual deceit that makes all the former of no value to either us, our children, or in the eyes of Christ. Personally we feel that the biggest stumbling block for the members is to admit they have been deceived and that those who have left, whom they disfellowshipped at a man's command, whom they called "led astray" by Satan's influence, etc., were right after all and proved themselves to be discerners of the truth and stronger in character. After all, it does take character to leave the WCG because you know members will no longer associate with you and there will be a lot of "character assassination" behind your back. You know you'll need to find a whole new life and that relatives that you isolated yourself from, by way of false religious teachings and values, won't be so quick, in all probability, to welcome you into their fold. And I've heard members say they felt physically exhausted and even sick in the stomach when the where horrible truth came to them. However, all have claimed a feeling of exaltation and well-being once the truth is faced and accepted.

In closing, we would like to express our appreciation to all of you for your continued interest in our newsletter. Your letters of encouragement have really been our inspiration in keeping the Report alive. To all of you, our sincere thanks.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR10 November 19, 1979

Dear Friends:

During the last six months, we who live in the Los Angeles metropolitan area have been treated to weekly and often daily newspaper accounts of the continuing chaos in the Rader-Armstrong church. Many of you who do not live in Southern California are probably unaware of much of what has transpired since our last newsletter. So here is a brief rundown of the most significant happenings since we last wrote to you.

Rader Ordained

The big news was really not much of a surprise. We predicted it in 1976, in our very first issue: Stan Rader was ordained an evangelist. The well-executed sequence of events went as follows:

First Roderick C. Meredith was removed as director of the WCG's ministry. Then all WCG evangelists were stripped of their rank. The hierarchical structure of the ministry was reorganized with Joseph Tkach, a preaching elder, and Kevin Dean, formerly a steward on the church airplane, elevated to top positions under HWA. (Both Tkach and Dean are proven Rader loyalists.) The board of trustees was purged of anti-Rader trustees (Meredith and Luker). (Raymond McNair remained, as he is now in the Rader camp.)

In his September 20 co-worker letter, Herbert Armstrong hinted that his life might soon be coming to an end (an amazing admission for HWA). Within days, it was announced that Rader had been ordained an evangelist along with Joseph Tkach and Ellis LaRavia, a staunch Rader supporter who was at one time in charge of the landscaping department. Kevin Dean was ordained a local elder. Since then, Leroy Neff, another proven Rader loyalist, has also been elevated to evangelist rank. The Rader ordination shocked many WCG ministers. A few, including Fred Coulter, have resigned over it.

Is Stanley Rader qualified to be an evangelist? Most WCC ministers privately concede that Rader is virtually a biblical illiterate. A few months ago one newsman asked Rader if he would begin to obey the Lord (Mark 6:8) and go forth with neither scrip or money in his purse. Rader, misinterpreting both the question and the scripture, answered that the church was wealthy and did not have to worry about money. Recently, one writer asked him if the church intended to follow Jesus' admonition to "turn the other cheek" with regard to the attorney general's suit. Rader answered that the Bible also taught "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth." During the sermon at this year's Feast of Tabernacles, Rader is reputed to have asked the congregation to turn to "the book of Nebuchadnezzar" and then, of course, could not find the nonexistent book in his own Bible. We suspect the story is apocryphal, but the fact that it is told repeatedly by WCG ministers shows their attitude toward Rader's ministerial credentials.

As we go to press, we have learned that Roderick Meredith has been given a six month "leave of absence" in Hawaii. Few believe he will ever return to any significant position in the WCG. Perhaps he will not return at all.

The Paper War Continues

The state of California's lawsuit against the Worldwide Church of God continues to be mired in pre-trial maneuverings. A trial date has yet to be set and, as of this writing, Stanley Rader has yet to complete his deposition as ordered by the attorney general. Here is a synopsis of the main lawsuit-related incidents of the last six months.

May 23: The state Commission on Judicial Performance announced that it had investigated Judge Jerry Pacht's handling of the state's case against the church and had dismissed all allegations of impropriety against him. Rader had charged that Judge Pacht and the attorney general had acted improperly by not giving the church four hours' notice of the hearing that resulted in the state's action against the WCG. The commission, however, replied: "After carefully examining all facets of the complaint, the commission concluded that allegations of improper conduct are unwarranted and without foundation." Both Judge Jerry Pacht and attorney Hillel Chodos, who represents the plaintiffs against the church, are members of the commission. For this reason, said Jack Frankel, executive officer of the commission, the group went to special lengths in their two-month investigation. Also, neither Pacht nor Chodos took any part in the investigation of the complaint.

June 6: A lengthy article by Russell Chandler appeared in the Los Angeles Times, which revealed that as long as seven years before the attorney general filed the suit against the WCG, some officials within the church were alarmed about the organization's lax, accounting procedures, lavish spending, and other financial practices. The article was based on internal WCG documents "made available to the Times." One document was a by William Tate, who was a WCG member, a CPA, and a former vice-president of the Xerox Corporation. Another authored by James Johnson, a CPA who was an employee of both the college and the Rader-Cornwall accounting firm, stated: "I am shocked at the material misrepresentations we have made in regard to our reporting to the body of Christ [the church], not to mention creditors and other third parties who have been defrauded." Other memos quoted were by financial adviser Hod Pomeroy, financial vice-president Ray Wright, and church accountant Jack Kessler.

June 11: The attorney general's office announced it was not going forward with challenges to sureties posted by WCG members in March for the purpose of avoiding the imposition of a receivership on the church. Deputy Attorney General Lauren Brainard said the attorney general's office withdrew its objection to the sureties as it did not wish to occupy one or two months of court time on the relatively unimportant aspect of the case. Also, said Brainard, it was highly unlikely that the state would attempt to take possession of the posted sureties in the event that church assets became improperly depleted.

July 4: In a special Fourth of July address to the church, Stanley Rader declared: "Events of the last few days have conclusively demonstrated that state officials have lied, cheated, and stolen in furtherance of their crazed assertion of raw power, and have violated every constitutional guarantee of religious freedom in the process. Last Friday, we received, pursuant to a court order, a list of 819 documents belonging to the church which the state has in its possession. These documents were stolen from the church by the state and/or others...."

July 6: Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Thomas Johnson heard arguments on why/why not Herbert Armstrong should appear for a deposition. Allan Browne, attorney for the church, argued that Armstrong could provide written answers to questions rather than sworn oral testimony at a deposition. Part of Browne's argument was that Armstrong was in failing health. But Deputy State Attorney General Jams Cordi said that "the defendants have blown hot and cold on Armstrong's physical condition." The attorney general has asserted all along that Herbert Armstrong is not in good health and therefore not fully in control of the church.

July 14: The Pasadena Star-News reported that the National Council of Churches was coming to the defense of the WCG by volunteering an amicus curiae brief to the California Supreme Court. (The WGG has not refused the NCC's assistance in spite of the fact that the WCG has-over the years condemned the NCC as being "Satanic.")

August 2: The Pasadena Star-News reported that the WCG had filed a lawsuit against Earl and Shirley Timmons, two plaintiffs in the suit against the WCG, charging that they had wrongful possession of "confidential and ecclesiastical" church reports and documents. But Shirley Timmons explained: "When I was subpoenaed for my deposition, they wanted all my documents, and Mr. Chodos got it denied by a judge. It [the new suit] is just another method of harassment. I could give them a copy and there would be many left. I got a copy of a copy. The materials they want are what everybody has. I really believe it is harassment."

August 8: Superior Court Judge Thomas T. Johnson ruled that Rader would have to resume his deposition August 27. (Rader has yet to appear for this deposition, as he has repeatedly won delays through appeals.) In doing so the judge was not sympathetic with arguments that Rader should not give a deposition because his testimony might serve as a basis for possible future criminal proceedings by the state. Rader's attorney Ellis Horvitz argued that Rader should not be compelled to answer pre-trial questions posed by the attorney general because, in his opinion, Rader undoubtedly will not answer on the basis of the Fifth Amendment and because the state is searching for information on which to base criminal proceedings. Judge Johnson also denied the motion of attorney Ralph Helge that he and accountant Henry Cornwall not be required to give depositions.

August 30: Superior Court judge Thomas Johnson took under submission arguments concerning the attorney general's request for certain church financial documents. Though the hearing was a rather routine one, the WCG bused hundreds of supporters to the court building, where they staged a demonstration. (This has been the case at virtually every hearing so far. Not only do the demonstrators carry signs, but on one such occasion a number wore 1776-type revolutionary uniforms complete with drums and muskets!)

September 4: The WCG filed a suit in Pasadena Superior court seeking to prohibit individuals who are no longer affiliated with the church from turning over church documents to the attorney general.

September 5: Judge Johnson ruled in favor of the attorney general by requiring the church and others to turn over all requested documents.

September 18: A spokesperson for the American Civil Liberties Union said the ACLU was opposed to the state of California's action against the WCG. Ms. Nina Krout, assistant legal director for the ACLU Washington office said that the state of California in effect "established a religion" when it took control of assets and the management of the WCG. Also supporting this contention of the ACLU is Americans United, the Alliance for Preservation of Religious Liberty, the Institute for the Study of American Religion, and the Berkeley Area Interfaith Council. Ironically, it wasn't long ago that leading WCG ministers and Herbert Armstrong himself condemned the ACLU as being a "communist front." Now the WCG seems quite pleased with their support.

September 22: Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Thomas Johnson refused to grant a church request that Rader's deposition again be postponed. The deposition was scheduled for October 22. During the hearing, church lawyer Ralph Helge vociferously objected to Deputy Attorney General Jim Cordi's characterization of Rader's world travels as 'business trips.' Helge argued that Rader was "preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ," not "conducting business." Judge Johnson, however, ended the heated exchange by reminding the attorneys that such remarks were not desired by the court.

October 1: The U. S. Supreme Court, without comment, refused to hear an appeal by the Worldwide Church of God, which attempted to get a ruling that tactics used by the state of California against the church represented a violation of First Amendment rights.

October 10: Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Norman Dowds upheld the California attorney general's right to investigate the WCG's financial affairs. The decision came in response to a suit filed in April by a group of WCG members who argued it was unconstitutional to use taxpayers' money to investigate a church. Judge Dowds held that the challenged Corporations Code section clearly empowers the attorney general (without getting into questions of doctrine) to see how nonprofit corporations are complying with the trusts they set up. The judge quoted a 1939 U.S. Supreme Court decision: "Nothing we have said is intended even remotely to imply that, under the cloak of religion, persons may with impunity, commit frauds upon the public.... Even the exercise of religion may be at some slight inconvenience in order that the state may protect its citizens from injury."

October 11: The Los Angeles Times reported that the WCG had filed a $5 million lawsuit against three former WCG officials - David L. Antion, C. Wayne Cole, and Robert Kuhn - and their attorney, Mitchell Levy. The suit claim that between 1974 and 1978 the three church officials confiscated nearly 300 private memos and documents belonging to the church and that since May 21, 1979, the papers have been in their attorney's possession. The suit asks that the documents be returned and that the court award $5 million in punitive and exemplary damages and costs.

The Times also reported that another suit was filed by the WCG against C. Wayne Cole and his wife. The suit alleges that the church had loaned the Coles $30,000 toward the purchase of their Glendora, California, home, but that the Coles had failed to sign a promissory note and second deed of trust as they had promised to do. The suit claims that on January 8, Mrs. Cole filed a homestead declaration on the property. The church is seeking to have the homestead made subject off the alleged debt.

October 15: The U.S. Supreme Court, without comment, left intact a California Court ruling that Stanley Rader must submit to questioning. Rader had claimed that to do so would violate his and his church's First Amendment rights.

October 18: The Pasadena Star-News carried a story that quoted Rader as saying, "I would never cite the Fifth Amendment. " In April, Rader had given testimony in a deposition, but on the second day of questioning he declined to answer more questions when Deputy Attorney General Lauren Brainard advised him of his right to remain silent. Months of legal haggling followed, resulting in Rader being ordered by the court to resume the depositions.

Brainard said Rader is not a criminal defendant at this time and that at the April deposition he had been advised "that he had the right to refuse to answer any question that may tend to incriminate him.... It was my understanding at the time that he was clearly invoking the Fifth Amendment right of a criminal defendant to remain silent." Brainard stated that during the April questioning, Rader "virtually answered no questions."

October 22: Rader was to have appeared for a resumption of his deposition. Instead, a broadly smiling Rader announced to followers picketing the attorney general's Los Angeles office that he had just won another delay. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had intervened at the last minute to, in effect, allow more time for all of Rader's other appeals to be heard before resuming questioning. In describing the scene outside the attorney general's office, the Pasadena Star-News reported, "As he has on similar occasions, he [Rader] responded with his familiar greeting, 'God is on his throne. He has heard our prayers.'"

Rader currently has before the courts at least five petitions. These petitions seek to block the deposition of Herbert Armstrong; appeal a court order to produce documents for the state; seek to enjoin the state from using church documents obtained by third parties; seek to dismiss actions against church attorney Ralph Helge and accountant Henry Cornwall; seek to overturn a superior court order preventing Rader's attorneys from taking depositions from former church members whose information led to the state's suit against the church leaders. If all the appeals fail, will Rader answer the questions put to him? Rader's attorney, Allan Browne replied, "Yes, if they are proper questions."

Deputy Attorney General Brainard summed up the state's position on this when he said, "We want to ask Rader about the use of the assets of the church, college, and foundation. We want to determine to what extent he has personally benefited from his association with these charities and the extent to which that benefit was authorized or revealed to the board of directors and members of these organizations. A person in a fiduciary capacity with these organizations has an obligation to account for his use of these assets."

November 13: The Los Angeles Times reported that a total of 15 different religious and civil rights groups have so far come to support the WCG in its fight against the state. Included among the 15 are the Catholic Archdiocese of Los Angeles and the Unification Church of Rev. Moon.

More Lawsuits

The attorney general's suit is far from being the WCG's only legal problem. A $70 million libel suit against the Armstrong organization was filed in July by Leona A. McNair. Mrs. McNair is the former wife of Raymond McNair, the deputy chancellor of Ambassador College. According to the suit, the charges center around remarks made about her in the church's Pastor's Report.

Ambassador Report contacted Mrs. McNair requesting details of the suit but was told that she has been deeply hurt by the allegedly libelous statements made against her and does not wish to give the matter further publicity.

The WCG's lawyers, it seems, are on their way to becoming experts in libel cases. The WCG is involved in a number both as defendant and plaintiff. For instance, earlier this year the WCG initiated a libel suit against the London Free Press of Ontario, Canada; Kenneth Browning, a former WCG member; and George Manassas, a former WCG minister. The suit resulted from a series of articles about the church in the London Free Press. The WCG officially discontinued the suit in May. Ken Brown told the Report, "Their accusations were ludicrous - like something out of National Lampoon. We viewed the whole thing as harassment by the church, intended simply to make us 'eat legal fees.' They dropped the matter as soon as they saw we were willing to put up a fight."

The WCG has also brought a suit against the Pasadena Star-News. Our friends at the paper tell us that the suit has had a "chilling effect" on their coverage of WCG stories.

The following article appeared September 5 in the Regional News Section of the Eau Claire, Wisconsin, Leader-Telegram. We thought you'd find it interesting.

Barron farmer wins latest fight to recover church 'donation'

BARRON — What do people expect when they join a church?

George McElroy was looking for the "true church" when he became a member of the Worldwide Church of God nearly 10 years ago. What he found has left him wishing he'd never heard of the organization.

McElroy, 65, lives on a 160-acre farm in the town of Maple Grove south of Barron. He was divorced almost 20 years ago, and although he has three children, he lives alone.

BARRON - What do people expect when they join a church?

George McElroy was looking for the "true church" when he became a member of the Worldwide Church of God nearly 10 years ago. What he found has left him-wishing he'd never heard of the organization.

McElroy, 65, lives on a 160-acre farm in the town of Maple Grove south of Barron. He was divorced almost 20 years ago, and although he has three children, he lives alone.

Other churches

McElroy was affiliated with the Pentecostal and Lutheran denominations in the past, but was not a regular churchgoer and got most of his religious experience personally from his Bible.

Then, in 1963, he began listening to nighttime broadcasts of "The World Tomorrow" from stations in Little Rock, Ark., and Waterloo, Iowa.

McElroy said he was impressed with what he heard and began corresponding with church officials. "That's what I was looking for, what was the true church," he said.

McElroy said the church's founder, Herbert Armstrong, "had more information than anyone. He was answering my questions." But, McElroy added that now he feels, at the same time, the church "was programming my mind. We were told if we disobeyed Herbert Armstrong, it was like disobeying God."

McElroy was sent the church's magazine, "The Plain Truth," and subsequently, pamphlets and booklets containing the church's views on current issues and the fate of the world.

That was in the beginning, he said. Before he and the church were through, McElroy said, he was led to believe American society would crumble in 1972 and that to secure safety, he should tithe to the church. McElroy ended up deeding his entire farm and all his property, donating some $8,000 in cash and delivering several head of livestock to church officials.

That wasn't what he expected when he tuned in those first radio broadcasts, he said.

What he was looking for was an organization in which he could study the Bible.

Could learn bible

"I decided here was a place that I could learn about the Bible and it's not going to cost me anything," McElroy said.

So he signed up for a correspondence Bible study program and sent for literature the church printed on religion, ethics and other topics.

Things became more complicated.

"They have answers for everything," he said. "If you ask about their doctrine, they send you more pamphlets."

The mailings, Bible course and church convocations he attended dealt largely with tithing laws, McElroy said, and church members were told the importance of contributing to the church. "I wanted to be in the inner circle, pleasing to God," he noted. Money was not directly solicited, but he said of the church, "They program your mind and get out of the Bible what they want to get out of it."

McElroy said he was led to believe the Bible forecasted the destruction of the United States in January 1972. "They used the Bible to form and shape our minds that this whole thing was going belly up."

McElroy said the church preached the United States would be overrun by Germany, and that in turn, the Soviet Union would dominate the world. The faithful of the church would be given a place of safety at Petra in Jordan, and later, would return to claim the world for God.

Attends church retreat

Then, he said, he attended the church's religious retreat, called the Feast of Tabernacles, in Missouri in 1969.

There, he said, church members were told they could bequeath their property to the church or its training school for ministers, Ambassador College in Pasadena, Calif. "These guys are really schooled in public speaking. They can make your hair stand on end," he said.

McElroy said he talked with a church legal representative there, and on Nov. 1, 1969, made out a will disinheriting his own descendants and leaving all his property to the college. Later, on Dec. 15, 1969, he signed a quitclaim deed giving his land to the college but reserving his own right to live on the farm.

McElroy said he inferred that to be saved in the coming destruction, he had to tithe. When the time passed, McElroy began reconsidering the church, especially its tithing laws.

He explained that church members who lived in cities were required to tithe 10 percent of their gross income to the church, while farmers were to give 10 percent of their net income, but also the first born of their livestock. In addition, another 10 percent was to be set aside by everyone for expenses at the annual Feast of Tabernacles and whatever money remained unspent was to be turned over to the church. Another 10 percent was to be donated every three years for other funds.

Couldn't get ahead

"You can never get ahead being in a church like that, and they told us we could never get ahead if we didn't," he said.

McElroy said he tithed some $8,000 over the years of his association with the church. He also gave three beef cattle which he was told to raise and fatten and then butcher before turning over to church officials.

He said he complied with the tithing laws until one day, he heard a passage of the Bible pertaining to tithing read, and he understood it to mean farmers were only to donate 10 percent of their first-born stock, not all of them.

Sought explanation

McElroy said he asked a church minister for an explanation, but was not given an answer about the two different interpretations. "That's what pulled the trigger," he said.

So in 1972, McElroy asked for his land and money back, claiming he had been told when he signed the deed he could change his mind and reclaim his property.

The church refused, and in December of that year, removed him from membership.

Nothing happened until June 1978, when McElroy complained he had been misled into deeding his property to the college and church, that undue influence - in the teachings of the church and its pamphlets - had been used against him, and that he had been led to believe he could cancel the agreement conveying his property to the church.

The case came to trial in Barron County Circuit Court in August and a jury did find that undue influence had been used by the church to obtain McElroy's property.

Claims understanding

The church argued McElroy knew what he was doing and understood the agreement when he deeded over his land, and that too much time had passed for the claim to be valid. Church attorneys also claimed First Amendment protection.

The court has yet to decide how the property will be disposed. McElroy's attorney said the church could yet appeal the decision.

Meanwhile, McElroy is still living on his farm, and he still maintains his faith in the Bible, although his he is disenchanted with the church.

Charges manipulation

"They weren't ambassadors of God. They were just out here trying to manipulate people," he said. The Worldwide Church of God is a California corporation, founded in 1947. Before that, since 1934, it was called the Radio Church of God. Ambassador College was founded In 1947.

Church attorneys were not available for comment.

Courts Kept Estate From Rev. Armstrong

Two years ago, West Virginia courts prevented "The World Tomorrow" radio-TV empire from inheriting the home and money of four aged, senile sisters who had lived together 20 years.

Herbert W. Armstrong of the Worldwide Church of God appealed to the state Supreme Court in 1977, but lost. His petition said:

The four old sisters lived in a Follansbee house they had bought with "a brown paper bag containing $16,920 in cash." One sister also put $23,400 in a Chester savings account, jointly in the name of a niece as survivor.

The elderly foursome all died in a three-year period. One had written a will leaving everything to the youngest sister for her lifetime, then to the Armstrong revival ministry.

After the final sister died, the Bible prophecy sect claimed the home and the savings account. Nieces and nephews resisted, saying the four old women had lived together in a common trust, so one's will couldn't give away the assets of all four.

A Brooke County trial jury gave the inheritance to the nieces and nephews. Armstrong's appeal to the high court was rejected.

Scientology church loses suit

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A jury awarded more than $2 million in damages Wednesday to a 22-year-old woman who claimed the Church of Scientology defrauded her by failing to fulfill promises of improving her life.

The jury deliberated 18 hours over two days before reaching its unanimous decision.

In her suit, Julie C. Titchbourne of Portland alleged she suffered emotional distress as a result of her experience with the church in 1975-76.

She had sought $2 million in punitive damages, $500,000 for alleged anguish and suffering and $3,000 reimbursement for course fees.

After the jury award, Mrs. Titchbourne said she planned to use part of the money to study engineering in college.

Named as defendants were the Church of Scientology of Portland; the Scientology Mission of Davis in Portland; and the Delphian Foundation, an organization the church says is separate although staffed by scientologists.

The jury ruled the defendants committed fraud, awarding Mrs. Titchbourne punitive damages of $1.9 million and compensatory damages of $153,000.

In a statement, the church criticized the decision, saying: "This decision is a blow to all of those who cherish the right to practice their religion free from the harassment of psychiatrists and de-programmers who have appointed themselves self-styled inquisitors."

Earlier, Circuit Court Judge Robert P. Jones said nine jurors would have to agree to make an award.

He told the jurors that if they decided the church's promises were of a religious nature, and sincerely advertised as such, the church is protected by the state and federal constitutions. He said such protection prevents challenging the truth or falsity of a religious belief. Mrs. Titchbourne claimed the church courses she took failed to live up to promises to help her with her college classwork, develop her creativity and raise her IQ test scores.

WCG Financial Report Released

For the first time in its turbulent 46-year history, the WCG has published its audited financial report complete with footnotes (The Worldwide News, Sept. 10, 1979). The financial report was compiled by the internationally respected firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. Though Treasurer Stanley Rader admitted that only "selected footnote information" was included (why wasn't everything included?), nevertheless it appears to represent an honest effort by the church to show the public how church money is spent. We sincerely hope Stan Rader makes this a yearly occurrence, because for years the WCG's public financial disclosures have been vague, sporadic, incomplete, and misleading.

Before discussing some of the salient material contained in the WCG's just published 1978 financial report, we would like to lead up to it by detailing what few things the church has disclosed in past years concerning its finances.

For decades it was Herbert Armstrong's practice to deluge members with miscellaneous bits and pieces of irrelevant and often contradictory financial data at Bible studies and sabbath services. And once a year at the Feast of Tabernacles he read excerpts from the church's financial statements after commanding members not to write anything down. But in spite of his seeming candor, he never gave the trusting membership any professionally audited financial statements to examine. Those were considered top secret - none of the members' business!

But in the late 1960s and early 1970s, news of extravagant spending and misuse of church funds by the church leadership began to surface. In 1974, stung by charges of financial hanky-panky from leading ministers who left the church, the WCG published its income statement-for the first time in its history (The Worldwide News, March 18, 1974). However, the customary balance sheet and statement of changes in financial position were omitted, and almost all of the footnotes were strangely missing.

Meanwhile, almost monthly Herbert begged members and coworkers to send generous offerings to the church. By 1976 there were rumors that the church was in serious financial difficulty. Stan Rader, then the WCG's vice-president for financial affairs and chief adviser, immediately denied the persistent rumors. He told the Pasadena Star-News on March 14, 1976 that "the college and church are not in financial difficulty.... the church is stronger than ever before in terms of its human, financial and physical resources...." Yet, paradoxically, the very next day, March 15, Herbert Armstrong wrote an urgent letter to his supporters:

"I had to take you co-workers and brethren into my confidence and tell you we are close to one of those occasional financial crises.... I have to lay the problem frankly and candidly before you and ask you for SPECIAL efforts and for a VERY SPECIAL financial SACRIFICE for God's Work - a special and generous offering ABOVE regular tithes and offerings" (emphasis HWA's).

It was constant contradictions like this that caused everything Herbert Armstrong and Stan Rader said concerning church finances to be suspect.

It was not until 1978 that the WCG again published any detailed financial information. In June it published the percentage increase in donations from 1950 to 1977 (The Good News, June 19, 1978). In September it printed a 1977 income statement (The Good News, Sept. 25, 1978), but we explained in a newsletter that we questioned its accuracy because (1) Rader said the figures printed were "excerpted from the financial statements" and (2) certain WCG accountants told us privately that the categories and figures were combined, juggled, and/or renamed to cover up certain church expenditures.

In October, the WCG printed some confusing first-quarter figures (The Good News, Oct. 9, 1978) to counteract claims by Garner Ted Armstrong's church that WCG income had taken a nose-dive. (These claims later proved to be valid.) In November, the 1977 balance sheet was reprinted (The Good News, Nov. 6, 1978). Now, before we discuss the 1978 financial report, we would like to piece together the church-college-AICF net income figures taken (as printed) from the above-quoted sources:

For the Year Ended Dec. 31	Net Income	Expenses	Net Gain	Net Loss
1972	$54,262,700	$48,450,400	$5,802,300 ---
1973	55,988,500	55,555,100	433,400 ---
1977	67,161,300	68,420,500 ---		$1,259,200
1978	63,467,000	68,394,000 ---		4,927,000*

*One inside source has predicted to the Report that, unless the WCG can finally sell its Big Sandy, Texas, properties or other major assets, its net loss for 1979 may be as high as $8 million.

From the above table one can see rather plainly that in 1978 the church-college-AICF combined spent $4,927,000 more than it made in net income. But why? Why is the church which once boasted that its income increased 30% every year now faced with deficit spending? The 1978 financial report reveals one key reason for this shortfall of funds: Quest magazine and Everest House Publishers! The income statement shows that Quest/78 magazine and Everest House Publishers produced $3,870,000 in revenues but consumed an incredible $7,826,000 in expenses! That means that of the organization's $4.9 million income deficit, $3.9 million is directly attributable to Quest/78 magazine and Everest House Publishers. And guess what? Herbert Armstrong admits in a member letter (Nov. 22, 1978) that the church will have to subsidize Quest to the tune of $1,410,000 in 1979, $903,000 in 1980, and $95,000 in 1981. He hopes Quest will show a modest $334,000 profit in 1982 (if the church isn't bankrupt by then).

The Contribution of Quest and Everest House

But what have Quest and Everest House Publishers done for the Worldwide Church of God? Herbert Armstrong brags that "Quest is now recognized as the very TOP magazine in QUALITY in this country" and that "it is now beginning to add considerable prestige to the Worldwide Church of God" (Nov. 22, 1978). But has Quest advanced the "one true gospel message" Herbert alone claims to preach? No, not at all: His gospel message is not even allowed in the pages of Quest, nor are articles by him. In fact, Quest's philosophy is diametrically opposite to that of Herbert's magazine, The Plain Truth According to Robert Shnayerson, Quest's editor, Quest is "a new magazine for closet optimists, people who suspect the world is NOT going to hell." While Quest "takes a sophisticated stand against fashionable despair and disengagements" and trumpets man's excellence, The Plain Truth concentrates on showing how has failed, why the end is near, and why Christ must rescue a dying and corrupt world. While Quest discusses "new life-styles," The Plain Truth says the Christian life-style is the only way. In fact The Plain Truth stresses the Ten Commandments, whereas Quest took God's name in vain in its first issue. Now we have heard that Quest is sponsoring a lottery. Yet Herbert Armstrong wrote in his booklet Pagan Holidays -or God's Holy Days--Which? (a standard church publication for 22 years) that "lotteries and gambling are of the devil" (p. 43).

Everest House's first contributions weren't much better. Its first books contained accounts of homosexual acts, the occult, sadism, sex perversion, how to let your mind go via the use of Zen, financial advice for gay couples, etc. ad nauseam. (See our Aug. 22, 1978 newsletter.)

Other Revelations from the 1978 Financial Report

The footnotes of the 1978 financial report provide a wealth of information on the financial dealings of the top WCG corporate officers. Footnote 6 reveals that the "church entered into an agreement to lease a jet aircraft from Mid-Atlantic Leasing Co. through Excelsior Investment Corp., both of which are partnerships in which Mr. Rader held a one-third interest. Total payments made to Excelsior Investment Corp. over the 8½-year term of the lease were $4,785,000, representing principal payments of $3,113,000 and interest of $1,672,000.... The aircraft is included in the combined balance sheet at a cost of $3,808,000, less depreciation of $1,537,000." Later in the same footnote, we discovered: "Since 1969, the Church and the Foundation have retained the services of Worldwide Advertising, Inc., an entity in which Henry F. Cornwall...has a substantial beneficial interest."

Footnote 7 explains that "on July 30, 1976, the Church entered into an employment agreement with Mr. Armstrong. The agreement has a duration of seven years and provides Mr. Armstrong with an annual basic compensation of $200,000." Mr. Rader is said to have also received a similar 7-year agreement in 1976 worth $175,000/year. "The agreement also provided that, at the completion of the seven-year employment period or Mr. Armstrong's total disability or retirement, Mr. Rader will become a consultant to the Church for a 20-year period at an annual salary of $100,000."

Now you, the reader, can guess why Herbert Armstrong resisted making the church college financial report available to church members' curious eyes in previous years. However, had he done so, he might have diffused much of the distrust that developed over the years due to his secretiveness.

The 1978 income statement showed that the organization made $607,000 on performing arts and cultural events but spent $1,598,000 for support of these events. Also, of the 1978 expenditures, 19.2% went for evangelism, media, publishing, and editorial; 11.4% went to Quest and Everest House; and only 8.2% went for academic and student services. The fact that more than a tithe of the church's money went for Quest and Everest House makes one wonder what Rader's and HWA's true priorities really are.

Quest and Kennedy

Aside from the admitted fact that Quest is costing the WCG a lot of money, one can only speculate as to what its real purpose is. A recent issue, for instance, featured an article on politician Ted Kennedy. Quest received numerous letters criticizing the Ted Kennedy piece, including one which said, "Teddy's quests are stale and the antithesis of what your magazine seems to be about."

In the July-August issue the editor of Quest responded to such criticism by writing, "Senator Kennedy appeared on our May cover because the article inside was entitled 'Playing Politics, Democratic-Style,' and in that particular game he is generally considered the No. 1 player. Some readers feel that Quest/79 should avoid politicians, but the editors believe that quests for political power fit into the magazine's focus on achievement...." Maybe someone should send the editors of Quest a copy of Herbert Armstrong's frequently published article., "How Would Jesus Vote for President?" (Herbert Armstrong teaches that it is a sin to vote.)

Hang in There, Herbert!

Is Herbert Armstrong senile? Is he in control of his faculties? The answer to these questions is hinted at in Herbert's own writings. For instance, in the June 18, 1979, Pastor's Report HWA wrote, "In all this world's history God has never started an important Work, or Special Activity through a chosen human, and then, after that Special accomplishment is well-advanced, allowed His chosen human leader to be overthrown by Satan - or in any way to turn false! Yet those promoted high within that Work or special activity for God, have been allowed to turn false, against God's chosen leader" (emphasis his).

In the same article (pp. 2-3) he goes on to say that some ministers were in serious danger of becoming the "Laodicean era" of God's church; yet he claim "they are yielding completely to Satan's will!" We ask, how can God's churches be led by Satan?

On page four, he discusses his younger years. Oblivious to the fact that he was a high-school dropout, Herbert writes, "I had not neglected education and did possess the equivalent of post graduate degrees."

He then goes on to discuss his alleged "conversion," saying, "I did not 'put on' any new sanctimonious appearance, I was just natural - myself...." But wait a minute! Didn't Paul write in Rm. 13:14 that the convert should "put on" Jesus Christ? And didn't the apostle Paul also write in I Cor. 2:14 that "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them..."?

On page 5 Herbert, defending Stanley Rader, writes, "WHY, I ask again, WHY do some ministers and even some brethren lay members, think EVIL of Stanley Rader? Could it be because he is 'worldly-wise' and therefore able to give the Work a help none of us can give?" Yet the apostle James wrote, "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God!" (James 4:4).

It should be obvious to everyone that Herbert is slipping, but perhaps these mental lapses are not entirely his am fault. Not long ago, in a phone call to Ambassador Report, Garner Ted revealed to us that his father was taking many drugs. He described them as very potent petrochemical-based pharmaceuticals which he said he had even helped administer before his departure. All drugs have side effects. Many cloud the mind. Perhaps this is the reason behind the many odd statements emanating with HWA's signature or by-line.

GTA Productions Update

We recently talked to minister Ledru Woodbury who, not long ago, left the WCG, taking approximately 60 members with him. Some of these people formed their own church and incorporated under the name Church of God of Fruita. Mr. Woodbury, who has been retained as the group's minister (at no salary, incidentally), approached the Church of God International (COGI) with the idea of merging with them. He quickly became disillusioned, however, when he was informed that to do so, the church he ministered to would have to divest itself of its autonomy. Mr. Woodbury told us, "I was very disappointed. It [COGI] is already just a Garner Ted production. In another few years it will be another Worldwide Church of God."

Mr. Woodbury is now ministering to a number of small, sabbatarian congregations in Colorado, and he tells us he has a taped sermon program for those who are interested in his ministry. His address is: 1241 Twenty Road, Fruita, Colorado 81521.

The comment about Ted's COGI becoming another WCG is something we've heard from a number who've attended GTA's services. It doesn't surprise us. Ted has repeatedly stated that he's preaching the same things now that he always has. With GTA again doing television programs, it shouldn't take him long to build up another following.

One thing he is doing differently than in the past is recognizing that there may be Christians in churches other than his own. He has even responded favorably to overtures from the Church of God, Seventh Day (which Herbert calls the "Sardis" church). That church ran an interview with GTA in its magazine, The Bible Advocate, in March. It was rather enlightening. Copies of that free magazine can be obtained by writing to The Bible Advocate, P.O. Box 33677, Denver, Colorado 80233.

One final GTA item. A few months ago one of our readers wrote us: "Someone who knows GTA well told me that you wrote him a letter of apology for various things written about him in your magazine. If this is true I would like to have a copy of the letter...."

The story is not true. Why should we apologize? We've been very careful to publish only the truth. The one who should apologize is Garner Ted, for the part he played in devastating thousands of lives. If we printed lies, he should have had the guts to take us to court.

What in the World?!

Before Garner Ted Armstrong was banished from the WCG there were some in the church who felt once he was gone, the WCG would somehow be morally purified. But now, many are complaining to us that this has not happened. For instance, one headquarters minister we know has tape recorded his conversations with members about their sex lives. He even has typed transcripts on file. Why this is necessary we don't know.

Another headquarters minister collects pornographic photographs. This was thoroughly investigated by the Report and through an unusual set of circumstances we were actually able to see some of his extensive collection. It includes obscene photos of naked women - some were of church women whose faces we recognized - and naked men and young boys in homosexual-type poses. We can only wonder how this minister, known for his conservative moral views, obtained photos of naked women who attend his church. We can also only wonder what his interest is in photos of naked boys.

Homosexuality is, of course, not a rare thing in this world. Yet we were somewhat surprised when a Christian man wrote to us recently saying that his local WCG ministers gave a sex questionnaire to his congregation's teenagers (boys and girls, aged 12 to 19). Among the questions was one which asked if the youngsters wanted to hear about homosexuality. The man who wrote us, believing that the subject of sex is best confined to the home, has since left the WCG in disgust.

The Weirdos

While on the subject of aberrations, we would like to comment on a remarkable phenomenon occurring with increased regularity. The WCG has always had its "colorful" characters. Yet during the last year or so it seem it has attracted a disproportionate number of individuals who can, at best, be described as coming from society's lunatic fringe. This is not to imply that the WCG intentionally desires this. Indeed, HWA would, himself, undoubtedly be on the warpath if he knew fully about the situation. But still, one can only wonder about some of "the crazies" loose at headquarters.

For instance, there is hardly a week that goes by that some WCG member or employee doesn't call us saying he or she has found some fanatical flyer, letter, or pamphlet on his desk at work or in his mailbox. These seem to come from a variety of individuals, committees, and groups with different axes to grind.

Some are pro-Ted and anti-Rader. Some are pro-HWA and anti-Rader. Some are pro-Rader/HWA and anti-Ted, and on and on they go. Most, unfortunately, have one thing in common; they are anonymous. Perhaps some fear they will be fired if they reveal their authorship. More likely the author(s) have enough sense left to realize they will be netted and institutionalized, if detected.

One strange flyer was signed by a group calling itself "Masturbators Anonymous." The (satirical?) headline read, "Masturbating Your Way to Radiant Health." (The flyer claimed to be an advertisement for a publication with that title.) The flyer began "As we all know, there are seven laws to radiant health, a good sex life, being one of those divine, immutable laws. But you can't experience a scintillating sex life without understanding the plain truth about masturbation!!" The flyer then goes on to discuss the publication's contents: "Did God create masturbation for man - not the animals? Why don't animals have hands?... Were Sodom and Gomorrah destroyed for masturbating on the sabbath? Can you masturbate with a bad attitude and still be blessed on the sabbath? If it can be shown from the Bible that masturbation is not work but pleasure, then is it OK to do it on Saturday?"

Then there were two ads which appeared in the June 8 Pasadena Star-News:

"Personal to the Worldwide Church of God: The prophets of old could have more than one wife. If it was not adultery then, why is it adultery now? God does not change... or does he?
[signed] The desire of women, 666."

"To the Worldwide Church of God: The beast is HERE which has two horns like a lamb and speaks like a dragon. Who can know the secret of the image but the god that women love?"

If any of our readers can make sense out of any of this, please tell us. We certainly can't figure it out.

Trials, Tragedies, and Tithes

Much of what is now occurring in the WCG is very tragic. The chaos is apparently causing many to lose their mental balance. We have received numerous letters telling of divorces, wife-beatings, mate abandonment, and child kidnappings in families where the church's problems have caused severe domestic stress. Unfortunately, some WCG ministers have been either unqualified or unwilling to properly minister to families (by advocating tolerance, kindness, etc.) where one mate is not a WCG member.

Another tragedy is that the WCG's current financial difficulties have prompted some of its more fanatical ministers to offer financial advice to members, which, when applied, will leave many poor people even poorer. Mandatory tithing is once again being vigorously taught as required for salvation ("Non-tithing is stealing," writes HWA). Some WCG employees have even been "leaned on" to pay "back tithes." One such employee was Plain Truth managing editor Brian Knowles, who received a phone call from Rader's secretary, Virginia Kineston, after missing two tithe payments. He paid up promptly. Ironically, Brian had an article recently in The Plain Truth titled, "Is Yours A Fear Religion?"

Where Are They Now?

Readers regularly write us asking, What happened to Al Carozzo, the minister who "blew the whistle" on Garner Ted in 1973? Mr. Carozzo, who wrote two important articles for the Report in 1977, is a very successful building contractor and lives with his wife and family in Vacaville, California.

Mr. Carozzo, a sabbatarian, still spends a good deal of time in counseling those with spiritual problem and occasionally gives sermons. We recently contacted him and discovered that he is now involved in much more than only business and religious matters.

He told us, "I've become alarmed at the accelerated rate Americans are losing personal freedoms. It seems that free enterprise is constantly being bombarded by so called 'liberal elements' in society. If the trend continues, I personally feel our children and grandchildren will be living in a closed society with little or no freedom. Our country is great because our founding fathers were men of integrity who developed a system of government intended to provide freedom for men and women of integrity. I think freedom and responsibility go together."

Mr. Carozzo went on to say that he feels American family life is disintegrating, the welfare system is growing out of control, and government is much too large. To promulgate what he believes are the solutions to these problems, he intends to found an organization, tentatively called "The Liberty Foundation." He has plans to begin a 15-minute radio program and eventually start a college. He has put together a paper entitled "The Goals and Purposes of the Liberty Foundation." Those who are interested may contact Mr. Carozzo by writing to him at P.O. Box 129, Vacaville, CA 95688.

Another individual many ask about is ex-WCG minister Richard Plache. Like a number of former Worldwidars, Mr. Plache is now a charismatic Christian. He is often a guest speaker at various churches around the country, and he writes for World Insight, a charismatic publication edited by Ken Storey.

World Insight has a number of ex-WCG members on its staff. Tom Hall, formerly with Ambassador's television department and now a professional radio announcer in Los Angeles, is a contributor. Gary Alexander, once one of The Plain Truth's most prolific writers, is also a contributor. David Ord, a WCG minister in England until 1975, is assistant editor.

One very unusual publication put out by World Insight is a booklet called "The Worldwide Church of God in Prophecy." World Insight's address is P.O. Box 35, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Documentary Film

In August of this year, the publishers of Ambassador Report were invited to the premier showing of a remarkable documentary film. Produced by a group of very talented and zealous Christians, the documentary, "Cult Explosion," is well worth seeing. It contains interviews with former members of many cults with commentary by experts in religion and psychology.

Among the interviewees were a number of former Armstrongites: Mr. & Mrs. Gary Alexander, Suzy Hunter (the daughter of Mrs. Karan Armstrong) and her husband Keith Hunter (now an executive with Full Gospel Christian Businessmen's Fellowship International). Mrs. Hunter not only appeared in this film, but has been an eloquent anti-Armstrongism spokesperson on television. Here is what Stan Rader said on television about Mrs. Hunter's new-found love of God and disenchantment with Armstrongism:

"I see her turning her back on a heritage that maybe has made her good, if she is any good at all. I'd say the heritage that she has received here is what has made her good, that part of her that is good. We're all made up of good and bad. I'd say, the good part is what she got here and the bad part she picked up from someplace else."

For those who are interested, the 55-minute film can be rented from Creative Ministries, 925 Sherlock Drive, Burbank, CA 91501.

Looking for a Church?

Probably the most frequently asked question put to us by disenchanted WGG members is: "Where should I go to church?" Although some of us have attended services with a variety of different churches since leaving Worldwide, none of the Report's publishers are members of a denomination or church group at this time. But everyone has different needs. Churches can provide people with a sense of community, an opportunity for fellowship, new friends, educational opportunities and often meaningful worship services. Many individuals who have joined main-stream churches after leaving the WCG tell us they are very happy with what they've found.

Without advocating any one group and, as always, without trying to give our "endorsement" to anyone, we would like to mention some literature that may prove helpful to anyone searching for a religious affiliation.

As all of you know, often in the past we've mentioned the Foundation for Biblical Research (P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102). That organization has published an article entitled "The Biblical Principles of Fellowship." If you're facing the question of where to worship, it may prove useful. (Incidentally, the Foundation has also published a new booklet called The Tithing Fallacy, which is having a tremendous impact on many in the WCG.)

Another organization that has helped present and former Worldwidiers is the Concordant Publishing Concern (15570 W. Knochaven Road, Canyon County, CA 91351). They publish a wide variety of books and booklets on the Bible and have been of tremendous help to many of us. Concordant's spokesman, Dean Hough, told us that they have a free, introductory packet of material available to those who request it. It comes with a complete catalog and price list of all their literature.

Of course, not everyone wants to be a part of a church organization. We received a little tract entitled, "What Do You Mean... Nondenominational?" which put forth some very good arguments for nondenominationality. We are not offering the tract, but it had this return address on it: The Church of S.W. Denver, 9800 West Wesley Court, Lakewood, Colorado. Perhaps they can supply copies.

Some months ago, ex-WCG minister Richard Forkun sent us a research paper he wrote that thoroughly debunked many of Herbert Armstrong's most cherished anti-Christian dogmas. It covers such subjects as Sunday-keeping, Christmas observance, Christian fellowship, etc. Mr. Forkun asked us to publish it, feeling it could be of real help to many burdened by the dogmas fostered by the WCG. We agreed that the paper was, at least, interesting and perhaps of potential value to many. We have decided, however, not to run it as an article in the Report because of its length and because we thought it beyond the scope of our purpose.

Nevertheless, because some of you may be in need of help in this area, we will send a copy of the five-page paper to anyone requesting it. We do ask, however, that you send 50¢ per requested copy to cover photocopying and postage, as we do not believe it proper to apply Report funds toward non-Report projects.

Self-education

Over the years we have mentioned a number of books of special interest to WCG and ex-WCG members. These have included William Hinson's Broadway to Armageddon, Marion McNair's Armstrongism: Religion or Rip-off? and the sociological classic The True Believer by Eric Hoffer. Here are three other books we think many can benefit from:

1. All God's Children by Carroll Stoner and Jo Anne Parke. Chilton published the hardback, and Penguin has now published a paperback edition. Although it does not deal specifically with Worldwide, it is the best book we know of for helping concerned friends and relatives of cult members. It is well-documented and offers much sound advice for dealing reasonably with the cult member who will not listen to reason.

2. Religion may Be Hazardous to Your Health by Eli S. Chesen, M.D. The hardcover edition was published by Peter H. Wyden, Inc.; the paperback edition is by Collier Books. This book does not attack religion but offers "a psychiatric guide to the uses and abuses of God, prayer, and the church or synagogue." This book is now out of print and finding a copy may take some work. But the effort will be worth it

3. The Art of Clear Thinking by Rudolf Flesch is a psychology classic. A paperback edition is published by Barnes and Noble. Of special value is chapter 9, "How Not to Be Bamboozled" (something everyone needs to read before following Herbert Armstrong). Chapter 5 and 6 on language and translation are especially valuable for those who study the Bible.

Been Watching TV Lately?

Some of our readers have been calling us, wondering if one of us perhaps had something to do with certain fictional television shows they've seen of late. The answer is yes, but please don't ask us for details.

There have been a few shows on lately that we hope you've seen. If not, catch them when they are rerun. Here they are: "Mode of Death" (written by Abrey Solomon and Steve Greenburg, based on a story by Deborah Klugman) on "Quincy"; "Charlatan" (by Michael Vitters) on "Lou Grant," and "The Miracle Man" (by Robert James) which has already been rerun once on "Hawaii Five-O." All relate to religious rip-offs. Also, there will be a feature movie called "Religion" coming out in the near future. Produced by Norman Lear and starring Martin Mull and Fred Willard, this comedy will be one which ex-Worldwidiers will find particularly entertaining

Before closing, we would like to apologize for not getting out a newsletter since June 1, but we've been very busy. We would have liked to maintain our bimonthly status, but that has not been possible because of our personal responsibilities. For this reason, we have changed our publishing schedule over to a quarterly plan. This should help us in being more consistent.

Some have written us recently, asking if they had been dropped from our mailing list. No, our policy is to send the Report to whoever requests it. However, we do appreciate your financial support in getting the Report published. Incidentally, all funds we receive go only toward the Report. None are used in starting private lawsuits or for contributions to religious organizations of any kind. Every newsletter we have ever put out, including this one, has left us "in the red." It has only been through your generosity that we have been able to repeatedly get back "in the black" and continue publishing.

To all those who've helped, our thanks. And before we forget, our season's greetings and New Year's best wishes to all of you.

Sincerely,

THE PUBLISHERS

---

AR11 March 24, 1980

Dear Friends:

After many months of legal maneuvering, Stanley Rader exhausted all postponement appeals and was required to appear at a deposition on February 21. The deposition, however, proved unproductive. Rader, who was accompanied by a battery of lawyers, answered practically no questions. He then refused to appear for a continuation of the proceedings the following morning. He also failed to produce the documents he was ordered to produce before or at the deposition.

According to Lauren Brainard, the deputy attorney general now in charge of the case, the Attorney General's office will now attempt to get a contempt-of-court ruling against Rader.

As for the state's lawsuit against the WCG, some experts are now predicting that with the pre-trial delays that are still being thrown up, it is quite likely the case will not go to trial until 1981.

THE WCG WINS A FEW

Numerous Worldwide Church of God (WCG) ministers have repeatedly insinuated that the state of California's actions against the church constitute a persecution by a conspiratorial group of men in government. It is therefore noteworthy that the state has not won all its legal battles.

For instance, a lawsuit by the state against the Rader, Cornwall, Kessler, Palazzo accounting firm was dismissed recently in Los Angeles Superior Court for failure to show sufficient cause of action against the firm. The suit was dismissed "with prejudice," meaning the state cannot again bring the suit against the accounting firm.

The WCG, in a sense, also won a victory in the U.S. Supreme Court where, on December 10, the court ruled in favor of WCG member Thomas Byars in a case involving holy-day observance. Since joining the WCG, school-teacher Byars has taken a number of days off from work each year to observe the church's feasts. The school system attempted to dismiss Mr. Byars over his absences, but Mr. Byars fought back in the courts. The Supreme Court decision added weight to former court rulings that have defined the 1964 Civil Rights Act and an important 1972 amendment to that law.

HERBERT ARMSTRONG VISITS COMMUNIST CHINA

During early December of 1979 Herbert Armstrong, like thousands of American tourists before him, visited Communist China. But unlike other tourists, he unloaded gifts worth a reported $500,000 and gave three short speeches.

In one speech to top Chinese officials he said: "I'm tremendously impressed with what I have seen [in China]. Here I've seen, in what parts I have seen already, three-fourths [sic] or one-fourth of the whole world's population as far as I can see living now at peace. But the other three-fourths of the world is living in a state of turbulence,. and of fear, and of trouble, and full of evils. "

He then went on to say: "...the only hope of the world will be in a single one-world government with one military force and one government over all the nations on earth." The speech contained no reference to Jesus Christ, repentance, or the Bible.

Garner Ted Armstrong, obviously alluding to his father's China trip, wrote in his January 16 Now publication: "What a pity the Chinese people cannot be warned by a true servant of Jesus Christ not to become involved in an alliance against Israel-not to send their forces into the Mideast!"

During the China trip Stanley Rader also gave a speech. According to the December 6 Pasadena Star-News, Rader's topic was U.S. Constitutional law. The Star-News printed this excerpt from evangelist Rader's address: "The first amendment is in its most elemental terms a right to revolt, not just as an individual, but with group political force."

It is ironic that on December 6, the day the Armstrong party left China, the Chinese government "ordered the closure of Beijing's [Peking's] poster-filled 'Democracy Wall,' the main public forum for free expression in China, on the grounds that it had become 'an anarchistic phenomenon'" (Los Angeles Times, December 7, 1979).

HERBERT ARMSTRONG EXPOSED!

After Garner Ted Armstrong was banished from the WCG in 1978 for "conduct unbecoming a minister, " he remarked on one occasion, "Whatever I've been guilty of, my father's been guilty of in spades!" He didn't publicly give any details, and many thought the oft-quoted, cryptic remark to be a rather poor attempt at self-justification.

It now appears, however, that for once, Garner Ted was telling the truth. An extensive expose soon to be published paints Herbert Armstrong in as unfavorable a light as anything ever written about his son. The book is Herbert Armstrong and Get Versus Give by David Robinson, a highly respected former WCG minister and longtime confidant of Herbert Armstrong.

We understand that in spite of a certain sympathy on Robinson's part toward Garner Ted Armstrong ("When you realize the full magnitude of Herbert Armstrong's personal moral problems, it's no wonder Ted developed some of the weaknesses that he did."), Robinson has turned a deaf ear to repeated requests from GTA's wife, Shirley, that he not publish this expose. Robinson told the Report, "I don't care what anyone says or what anyone threatens. I may not be a great writer, but what I've written is 100% true, and this story needs to be told."

We hope that the whole story will be told and that between now and its publishing date nothing will be omitted. We've seen a copy of the book's manuscript and some sections are, quite frankly, very shocking. We will have more to say about it in future Reports. Those who would like to obtain a copy of the book can do so by writing to: John Hadden Publishers, P.O. Box 35982, Tulsa, OK 74135.

The cost per copy is $10.00, including postage. The book should be available by the end of April. We were told that only a limited number are being printed so it would perhaps be advisable to order early if you are really interested.

A REMARKABLE ARTICLE GIVES NEW INSIGHTS

During the last two years there have been a number of really fine articles on the WCG published in some of our nation's top publications. We recently saw one that we thought was especially noteworthy. It appeared in the March issue of The Atlantic and was entitled "Father, Son and Mammon: How Evangelism Pays." The author is William C. Martin, who teaches at Rice University.

The article covers much of what we've reported on in the last three years (the author is on our mailing list). It does also, however, offer a number of additional insights. For instance:

"What almost no one, including Garner Ted, recognized was that, should the church cease to exist, its assets, now worth an estimated $80 million, could be transferred into a non-profit foundation matching AICF's description. Such a transfer was made possible by a 1968 amendment to the church's Articles of Incorporation. According to the document, signed by Herbert W. Armstrong and Albert Portune, then secretary of the WCG, the board of directors and 5051 members of the church met at 363 Grove Street in Pasadena and voted in favor of the amendment in question. But Herbert Armstrong has never permitted voting on any matter pertaining to the church, the building at 363 Grove Street will hold no more than 400 people, and Portune, in a television interview, declared that no such meeting occurred. When I asked Rader about the document, he explained that 'it was probably a sabbath and each minister in the area read the proposed amendment to the members at the service that day, and since there was no voice of dissent, they were recorded as affirmative votes.' Reference to a foundation, he said, was just 'legal boilerplate.' That may have been the case when the document was written, but when I have shown it to present and former church members, they have grasped its implications immediately. I am confident they have not been entirely lost on Stanley Rader" (pp. 60-61).

"In fact, Mr. Armstrong's travels do not appear to have reaped much of a harvest. Rather, he seems to be playing a kind of religious tag; if he has his picture taken with a nation's leader, he somehow imagines he has preached the gospel to yet another land of lost and dying sinners. Garner Ted is particularly skeptical about the efficacy of this aspect of his father's apostolate. 'Never in the history of human endeavor,' he says, 'has so much money been spent by so few for so little. Those trips are just glorified autograph-hunting tours - window-dressing, like AICF and Quest. My father has gone on and on about the great good these trips were doing, but it might come down to a thousand dollars a word for some lecture on the "Seven Laws of Success" to the Civitan Club of New Delhi or the Rotarians of Nairobi. Dad has boasted about how he does not mention the name of Jesus Christ on these visits. If that is the case, why bother?'" (p. 63.)

"Though my sample was neither large nor scientifically selected, my conversations with a dozen or so present and former ministers of the WCG confirm the picture of them as thoroughly compromised men. One, who came to my hotel room late at night to avoid being seen in my company, said of himself and his colleagues, 'We have lost our health, our wealth, our self-respect, our courage, our manhood. Armstrong didn't think it all out and say, 'These are the moves I'll make and these are the stops I'll pull,' but one thing led to another and this is the result.'

"By surrendering their autonomy so completely, these men and women have not only vandalized the image of God in themselves but have almost certainly diminished their capacity to cope effectively with the inevitable loss of their leader" (pp. 64-65).

"What does Herbert Armstrong want? A year ago, he told Wayne Cole he wanted to appoint a board of directors that would take control after his death, working as an administrative team until a clear leader emerged. Though susceptible of deteriorating into a power struggle, this approach would probably have the best chance of accomplishing, in a more or less orderly fashion, what Max Weber called 'the routinization of charisma.' In fact, however, the elder Armstrong has moved in precisely the opposite direction, restructuring the ministry to transform what was once an elaborate hierarchy into a system in which each local minister is answerable directly to, and only to, Herbert W. Armstrong, Pastor General. As has been his custom for almost half a century, he legitimates the arrangement by proclaiming it to be the purest form of the Government of God. Those who continue to regard Mr. Armstrong as God's Only Apostle for our Time will accept his claim and follow him to the end. But when the end comes, as it must, the WCG is certain to experience devastating trauma" (P. 65).

For those who would like to see the entire article, we recommend that you check first with your local public library. If they don't have it, you can order a copy for $1.50 from The Atlantic, Subscription Dept., 8 Arlington Street, Boston, MA 02116.

CHURCH'S FINANCIAL POWER ERODING

Herbert Armstrong still boasts how his "work" is growing: "This is a truly great worldwide work! The Work is booming!" (letter to brethren and co-workers, Jan. 23, 1980.) But he's also not bashful about continually pleading for more money: "We must now be willing to sacrifice till it hurts!" (Ibid.) The fact is Herbert's work is actually sliding backward at an ever increasing pace!

In our November 19, 1979, newsletter, we included an analysis of the latest audited financial reports of the WCG, AC, and the AICF for the year ended Dec. 31, 1978 (The Worldwide News, Sept. 10, 1979). We reported that they took in $63,467,000 but spent $68,394,000—a 7.8% deficit. But what we didn't reveal was that their income's purchasing power since Jan. 1, 1973, has suffered a steep and serious decline. In 1978 they garnered $63,467,000, but that amount was worth only $39,087,864 in 1972 U.S. dollars.

In 1972, they pulled in $54,262,700 (The Worldwide News, Mar. 18, 1974). This 1972 income is actually 38.8% higher than their 1978 income adjusted back to 1972 dollars.

Another startling fact: They would have taken in $86,470,097 in 1978 had their 1972 income just stayed even with inflation—that is, if their real growth rate (after being adjusted for inflation) remained right at zero, they should still have grossed $86,470,097. But they didn't. Their income was only $63,467,000.

Indeed, this long-term drop in revenue is a reflection of deep problems in the Armstrong organization: declining membership and/or members giving a smaller percentage of their disposable income than before. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the U.S. real weekly take-home pay (adjusted for inflation) up through the-year 1978 was higher than it was in 1967. This means that, in general, each WCG member's take-home pay should have increased at about the same rate as did inflation. Therefore, even with no increase in membership, the Armstrong organization's 1972 income should have increased at the same rate as inflation and topped $86,000,000 at the end of 1978. But it didn't. It fell almost 30% short of this level.

	In 1972 $	In 1978 $
1972 receipts = $54,262,700	$54,262,700	$86,470,097
1978 receipts = $63,467,000	$39,087,864	$63,467,000

(Calculations based on consumer price index data from U.S. Dept. of Labor and on compound interest and present value tables.)

Not only is diminished purchasing power crippling the Armstrong group's attempts to recruit new members, but other electronic media preachers are seizing an increasing share of the lucrative U.S. religious market. The incomes of these apostles of the airwaves are fast gaining ground on the WCG's large income. For instance, Los Angeles Times religious writer Russell Chandler estimates that in 1979 Oral Roberts grossed $60 million, Pat Robertson (700 Club) $58 million, Jim Bakker (PTL Club) $51 million, Jerry Falwell $50 million, Billy Graham Assn. $30 million, Rex Humbard $25 million, and Jimmy Swaggart $20 million (Feb. 25, 1980, p. 3). And remember, many of these evangelistic organizations do not even have local congregation ministers being supported through their budgets. In other words, their media impact is far greater than the WCG's.

For decades Herbert claimed his work had grown at 30% per year and bragged that this was proof positive that God was backing his evangelistic efforts fully. But his work's real purchasing power over the last six years has plummeted by more than 30%. Does this mean - by his method of reasoning - that God has withdrawn his blessing from Herbert and forsaken Herbert's work?

It seem likely that Herbert's church lost even more ground in 1979 and will report less than $60 million gross income-largely due to the massive lawsuit pending against the church and the unstemmed tide of ministerial and member defections.

PLAIN TRUTH STAFF PURGED

For more than a year it had been rumored that many of the members of the editorial department - specifically The Plain Truth staff-were closet dissidents. It was alleged that they were committing the unpardonable sins of not tithing and not attending sabbath services. To make matters worse, The Plain Truth was headed by Managing Editor Brian Knowles, who had written a paper disproving the WCG'S sacrosanct tithing doctrine. So it was no surprise when, after years of plotting, the WCG's right-wing succeeded in getting Brian Knowles axed, along with his entire staff. The news came around Thanksgiving, 1979. (Ironically the PT had previously been purged just before Thanksgiving in 1974 and 1976.) Herman Hoeh is once again the senior editor, and Dexter Faulkner has been given the title of managing editor. Gone are Brian Knowles, Lawson Briggs, Bob Ginskey, Ron Beideck, Pam (Antion) Hart, and Linda Martens. (Greg Smith resigned before the purge, and George Ritter, Carole Ritter, and Paul Graunke all resigned earlier in the year.) But there are still a few more closet liberals in hiding, and their time will come sooner or later. Interestingly enough, almost 85% of those who ever worked for the editorial department have become "dissidents." The reason is obvious: If you are truly qualified to analyze, edit, and write - and if you have a conscience - you will also be sensitive to the gaping holes in Armstrong theology and the gross hypocrisy that permeates the church hierarchy.

MORE LEGAL BATTLES

WCG officials informed the departing Plain Truth staff members that they would not be receiving severance pay - which, according to published church policy, was one week's pay for each year worked. Lawson Briggs, Ron Beideck, and Bob Ginskey complained about this arbitrary and discriminatory treatment to the California Department of Industrial Relations, Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The church, after being challenged by the state labor commissioner, initially, agreed to pay half of the amount claimed by Lawson Briggs and the full amount claimed by Ron Beideck and Bob Ginskey, although the church denied it had any legal obligation to give departing employees severance pay unless it deemed the person spiritually deserving.

In addition, Ginskey, Briggs, and Beideck, along with Dan Cafourek (an accountant) Ted Gould (a minister and longtime WCG/AC personnel director), George Myers (a carpenter), and others are taking legal action against the church to obtain their annuity pay. (In June 1978, Ted Gould alleges that the church initiated an annuity program to make cash payments to laid-off employees who had put in 10 years of service to the church/college but who were not at retirement age. Later in 1978 the standard was lowered to seven years of employment.) Their legal action is still pending.

It will be interesting to see the outcome of these various claims against the WCG over severance pay, retirement pay, etc. Many WCG/AC employees have been laid off in the last few years and especially in the last few months. If all of these individuals were to be paid the severance pay and retirement benefits many believe they are entitled to, it could perhaps amount to more than a million dollars.

It's no wonder then that just six days after Messrs. Gould, Beideck, Ginskey, and Briggs filed their initial complaints, Herbert Armstrong issued this declaration, "To All Department Managers and All Employees:"

"As of this date, I am suspending all employment, compensation, and benefit policies contained in the Employee Relations Policy Manual, pending study of same. These were all proposed without my knowledge or authority,

"The same applies to all Employee Benefit Manuals.

"These policies were never authorized or approved by me or the Board of Directors, and were only discovered by me today. No one has ever been authorized to set policies in either the Church or College except myself and the Board of Directors."

This unilateral declaration has, of course, proven very unpopular with many WCG employees. WCG employees let go now will apparently not be eligible for the same benefits as those kicked out of "God's Work" before Herbert's unilateral declaration. Of course those individuals will not mind as they will have been allowed to serve "the Apostle" a little longer. (Ha!)

MORE CHURCHES

The Worldwide Church of God, which itself is the result of a splitoff from the Church of God, Seventh Day, has seen a number of its leading ministers and members leave and form competing "churches of God": Church of God (Shreveport Conference) - John Mitchell; the 20th Century Church of God - Al Carozzo; the Associated Churches of God - Westby and Kemnitz; the Church of God, The Eternal - Raymond Cole; the Church of God - Carl O'Beirn; the Church of God Seventh Era - Larry Gilbert Johnson; the Church of God, International - Garner Ted Armstrong; etc. (All of these churches cling to the biblically unprovable doctrine that the name of a Christian church must have the words "church of God" in its name.) Now there are a few more "churches of God."

One is the Biblical Church of God, founded by former WCG minister Fred Coulter (Box 744, Monterey, CA 93940). He offers interested individuals a cassette tape ministry and a magazine named The Bible Answers. His contributing editors consisted of: Lawson Briggs (former WCG editor and writer, and a WCG/AC employee for 25 years), Carl Franklin (former WCG minister), Jean Franklin, George Johnson (former Plain Truth and Good News writer), and Velma Johnson.

Another apparently new Church of God is the Church of God, Kelowna, P.O. Box 2362, Station R, Kelowna, BC, Canada, V1X 6A5. We're not sure who heads this group, but we have seen some of the literature they publish. We found one piece, dealing with Herbert Armstrong's early religious credentials, particularly interesting.

Another newly formed church is The Family Church of God, 3124 Yukon Ave., Costa Mesa, CA 92626. This congregation of about 45 members is headed by former WCG minister Rick Gipe. They do not have literature available, but Mr. Gipe tells us that anyone in his area who wishes to fellowship with this group or counsel with him may do so by calling him at 714-926-6417.

Incidentally, Mr. Gipe told us he is another ex-WCG employee who is involved in a legal battle with the WCG over thousands of dollars worth of annuity benefits and severance pay. Like the similar cases covered earlier, this one could have important ramifications for many former WCG ministers and other employees.

Another church we were recently made aware of is the United Church of God, P.O. Box 45, Lake Winola, PA 18615. This Sabbatarian church is headed by former WCG minister (left in 1974) Richard Wiedenheft and publishes Focus on Truth, a monthly theological newsletter. Mr. Wiedenheft recently wrote to us and sent along an extensive catalog of sermons on cassette available from the United Cassette Library, P.O. Box 1413, Scranton, PA 18501. These two organizations have ties with the Association for Christian Fellowship, formerly the Associated Churches of God.

STARTING YOUR OWN CHURCH

With the WCG's disintegration causing such a proliferation of new churches, it was only a matter of time before some ex-Worldwidiers started an organization offering just about everyone the opportunity of starting their own church.

Yes, that's right! You too can be ordained and have your very own church (and obtain the many tax-exemption benefits claimed by those in the "ministry"). "It's easy," says Tom Williams, former WCG minister, former Associated Churches of God minister, former insurance and diet-plan salesman, and now president of Liberty Ministries International (LMI).

LMI offers seminars and literature about their program and publishes Liberty Line, a quarterly edited by Gary Alexander. As many of you probably know, Mr. Alexander was formerly a contributor to The Plain Truth and his name currently appears as a contributor in the staff boxes of both Ken Storey's World Insight and Garner Ted Armstrong's Twentieth Century Watch. Liberty Line's subscription price is $12 per year ($15 in Canada, $18 foreign), and their address is P.O. Box 11105, Richmond, VA 23230.

Quite a number of former WCG members have already signed up with LMI and started their own church. But one individual who was wooed by the LMI group told us: "I just don't think it's worth the $3,000 they wanted me to fork over. After all, Kerby Hensley's Universal Life Church, Inc. of Modesto [601 Third St., Modesto, CA 95351] will ordain anyone a minister for $2. And for $5 they will ordain you an abbe, abbot, arch-priest, deacon, arch-deacon, bishop, cardinal, elder, friar, guru, dadji or lam, etc. For an additional $25 they will give you a church charter. Hensley doesn't offer all the legal advice IM does, but Hensley does have a longer record of avoiding successful prosecution by the IRS.

Hensley does not require that you have a degree in theology to be ordained, but he can provide that too. For $20 you can obtain a Doctor of Divinity degree. Or, for $100 you can obtain a Ph.D. in religion-but for this degree you must pass an exam consisting of twenty true-false questions. This degree, by the way, is fully accredited by the International Accrediting Association (another Hensley organization, of course).

A lengthy article in the March 13 Los Angeles Times (Section V) reported there are many organizations now offering quick ordinations and advice on how to start your own church. Of course, there are numerous tax advantages for those who do so. The IRS, however, warns that to be a legitimate church in their eyes the organization cannot be operated to further the private interests of its founder or of other individuals. It is because of this very point that the IRS has been investigating the WCG during the past year.

THE INSTITUTE FOR THE PRESERVATION OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Not every minister who leaves the WCG starts a church. For instance, Howard Clark (see our March 14, 1979, issue) has gone on to help found and is now president of an organization called the Institute for the Preservation of the American Family.

Clark told the Report: "We're a small, struggling organization, but we're not another WCG-spinoff scam. We're dedicated to serving real people who have real problems. We have board members with no previous Armstrong ties, and we have enlisted the aid of numerous highly educated, certified and licensed professionals. The institute is properly incorporated and contributions to us are tax deductible."

The institute's services include personal counselling, aptitude testing, vocational guidance, alcohol abuse rehabilitation, and assistance for battered wives and chronic teenage offenders. Another service involves personal help for the handicapped and catastrophically afflicted. As many of you know, Clark himself has had thirty years of personal experience in this area due to a devastating spinal cord injury received in the Korean war.

Over the years we've known Mr. Clark to be an individual of warmth and compassion who has sincerely attempted to apply Christianity, not just preach it. If any of our readers would like to know more about this institute or if any have a problem (especially one related to WCG-withdrawal), Mr. Clark can be contacted by phone at 916-534-9943 or by writing to the Institute for the Preservation of the American Family, P.O. Box 1214, Paradise, CA 95965.

GTA DEFECTIONS

The Garner Ted Armstrong Organization has had some major defections in the last few months. First there was Albert J. Portune, who decided to separate from that group after being denied a place on CGI's doctrinal committee. He was not given a position on the committee, apparently because some of his doctrinal beliefs were considered "too Dr. Ernest Martinish."

Within the last two months Jack Martin, who had been the CGI's publications director, was fired. That was followed by Allan Heath, the CGI's publications editor, and C. Wayne Cole, the CGI's director of ministerial administration, both resigning. According to a CGI spokesman, all three left over the issue of church "governance." Ronald Dart, now clearly GTA's right-hand man, has stated he now expects and hopes GTA will begin to exercise greater "leadership" in the church.

Other recent CGI defections include David Bierer, Gordon Muir, and John Tuit - who you may recall was one of the original six plaintiffs in the state of California suit against the WCG.

Mr. Tuit wrote us explaining how he was quite disillusioned with Garner Ted Armstrong and how he and a small group in New Jersey hope to establish a local "Church of God" congregation in that state. Mr. Tuit believes very strongly that local congregations should maintain their autonomy but hopes that some sort of dialogue can be established between the many "churches of God" that have left the Armstrong autocracies. He hopes that such cooperation could result in a joint evangelistic effort via the media. Any who wish to contact Mr. Tuit may do so by calling him at 201-431-5276 or by writing to: John Tuit, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold, NJ 07728.

The CGI defections of the last few months have had an important effect on the GTA organization - its income has suffered a severe drop. Many in the CGI are withholding their tithes until such times as they can have more confidence in GTA. Another CGI income factor is the strong disagreement among many CGI ministers as to whether "tithing" is a required biblical law. According to Allan Heath, the biggest problem facing the CGI is the widespread reading of Dr. Martin's literature, especially The Tithing Fallacy booklet. It will be interesting to see what the CGI's doctrinal committee, now headed by David Antion (GTA's brother-in-law), finally decides on tithing and other doctrinal matters.

The CGI's problems have caused many of its top men to wonder how long it will be before Teddy cries his way back to Papa. Herbert has written that he has dreamed of Ted repenting and coming back to the fold. Ted, also, has had the subject of reconciliation with the WCG on his mind. In his February 12 member letter GTA wrote:

"Reconciliation would be unthinkable under the present [WCG] regime, in any case - and, further, if any talk of 'reconciliation' should ever be joined, one of the first requirements would have to be the blanket understanding that each member of the Church of God, International, would automatically be welcomed back as a member in good standing of any such merger, or reconciliation! Thousands of brethren have speculated about 'Ted returning to his father, and leaving us high and dry.' That simply will never happen!"

Another fear among CGI members is that GTA will tire of the restraints put on him by the CGI's board of trustees and will then leave the CGI, taking its top contributors to form a more autocratic organization. It very likely would be called "The Garner Ted Armstrong Evangelistic Association." The idea has apparently already been considered.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

David Ord, whose name still appears in the staff box of World Insight (P.O. Box 35, Pasadena, CA 91102; see our last issue), has moved to Illinois where he is now assistant editor of a religious publication called Union Life (656 Taft Ave., Glen Ellyn, IL 60137). Although Mr. Ord's association with World Insight continues, Richard Plache seems to be taking on a greater share of the writing for that publication.

We found a recent World Insight letter by Mr. Plache rather remarkable. In it, on the subject of self-righteousness, Plache writes:

"One might ask, 'What's so bad about doing good - even if it is humanly motivated and accomplished solely by human effort?' It is only by understanding the answer to this question that we can really come to see why human goodness is, in reality, the worst possible expression of sin or lawlessness."

We find this concept a little difficult to comprehend, but in the same letter Mr. Plache does admit:

"One might say that I have become a God-Watcher' - just hanging around to see what God is going to do next. He always seems to have some new and unexpected trick 'up His sleeve.' Never try to second guess Him. If your experience is anything like mine, you are probably batting .000."

The WCG's February 25 Worldwide News contained a list of ministers officially disfellowshipped by the WCG in recent months. We have reported a number of these already, but we thought you'd like to see the entire list anyway. Here it is: Charles Barrett, David Bierer, Bobby Boyce, Henry Buck, Rod Carnes, Lor Chamberlain, Fred Coulter, Hollis Crotts, Brent Curtis, Richard Gipe, John Hammer, Robert Hoops, Joe Horchak, Bronson James, Charles Oehlman, John Ouvrier, George Panteleeff, Ted Phillips, Bill Porter, Jack Pyle, Ray Pyle, David Robinson, and Doug Taylor.

Authur Mokarow, formerly a popular minister and executive in the WCG, is now only a nominal WCG member. He was terminated by the church after it became clear he was not a Rader loyalist. Mr. Mokarow is now in the process of moving to Palm Springs where he has his own local television talk show. The program is called "Tapping Your Potential."

Dr. Charles V. Dorothy, considered one of the WCG's top minds, has been dropped from the WCG payroll and is now seeking employment outside the Armstrong sphere of influence. He has not been disfellowshipped, however, nor have his ministerial credentials been revoked. His wife, Dr. Jo Anne Dorothy, received her chiropractic credentials some months ago and is now practicing in the Pasadena area.

Roderick C. Meredith, in exile in Hawaii (see our last newsletter), says he hopes he will be allowed to return to Pasadena soon. ("There are strong forces at work in the church," he commented to one member.) Those who would like to contact him may write to him at 927 Hahaione St., Honolulu, HI 96825 or call 808-395-5095. He says he has been ordered not to speak to fellow ministers. But nothing was ever mentioned about not talking to WCG members and others, so that's okay.

A CLARIFICATION

In our last issue we reported how "all WCG evangelists were stripped of their rank. " This is true, but we should clarify what was meant.

The evangelists were not stripped of their titles. All are still called "evangelists." But in a series of directives, Herbert Armstrong ordered that all ministers are now directly responsible to him and to him only. For instance, the preaching elders are not to take orders from the pastors who are not to take orders from the evangelists. In other words there is no church hierarchy, but only one boss, supposedly.

Does this mean then that ministerial titles will henceforth refer to ministerial function? Apostle Herbert says no. His interpretation of Ephesians 4:11 still does not include anything so obvious. What then does "evangelist" mean? And how do ministers report directly to HWA? Don't they still have to go through Stanley Rader to get to him? Perhaps HWA or evangelist Rader will clarify these points in the future.

TOM LAMPITT

Just as we went to press with our last issue we were very saddened to learn of the death of Mr. Tom Lampitt of Hertfordshire, England. Mr. Lampitt, a well-known figure in British civil aviation, was killed last September 26 when a Super King Air he was flying crashed in Nantes, France.

When Ambassador's Bricket Wood campus was sold, Mr. Lampitt, an ex-WCG member, worked hard to get the money refunded to the many poor people in Britain who had contributed to the college. (We understand a few did eventually receive something back.) Mr. Lampitt also helped Ambassador Report on a number of occasions and was the one most responsible for our first Ambassador Report being distributed in Britain. Our sincere, though belated, condolences to his widow Barbara, his two children, and his many close friends in Britain.

LETTERS

...We have information from the State of Minnesota that contributions and tithes sent to Tucson, to Herbert Armstrong personally, are not tax deductible. We wonder how Herbie or Stanley are getting around this. It was announced in church that they were tax deductible.

-Minnesota

Editor: Obviously, gifts given to private individuals are not tax deductible. It will be interesting to see how the WCG handles this matter. We understand the IRS is keeping a close eye on the situation.

Is Herbert Armstrong in great fear of Stanley Rader? The word is "blackmail." From what GTA said in Portland on 3/24/79, from what CWC [C. Wayne Cole] said on 6/23/79

in Portland, and from what CWC and GTA said on the tapes of 5/19/79 "My Side of the Story," the message is food and clear that HWA is being blackmailed by S. Rader. Hence his strange behavior. Can you confirm this?...

C. Wayne Cole's message of 5/19/79 "My Side of the Story" is obtainable through The Church of God, International, Box 2525, Tyler, Texas 75710. The message is on cassette tapes (2). GTA's remarks at the end are quite interesting. He speaks of his father's great fear of S. Rader.

-Oregon

Editor: We have no proof whatsoever of any blackmail activities by Mr. Rader. Mr. Rader himself has characterized such Garner Ted Armstrong statements as "complete nonsense."

[I recently saw] Garner Ted's financial statements published in the Nov.-Dec. 1979 Internews. Last year at the beginning of the Church of God, International, he published his salary. This year he has all of the salaries in one lump sum so no one knows how much he makes, plus he has executive entertainment, ministerial expense, and personal allowances. Plus the members loaned him money, interest free, for an engine for his airplane, or rather he took the liberty to borrow the money.

As a former member, no answer was given when asked why Mr. Al Portune left International. Neither did anyone know why Garner Ted's secretary quit.

-Illinois

In a previous Report one reader's letter mentioned "I.D.E.A.L." of Houston, Texas (P.O. Box 38191) with a reference to Rader and HWA being tied to the CIA. I wrote to the address but the letter was returned -- "not here." Do you know where "I.D.E.A.L." can be contacted and what they represent?

-England

Editor: We were once shown a tract put out by this organization but have no information as to what has become of it.

For your information I enclose a copy of a letter I received from the publisher of the book, Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright, written in 1902 by J. H. Allen. This is the book that survived 18 editions, is still in print, and was apparently plagiarized by Herbert Armstrong in order to write his U.S. and British Commonwealth in Prophecy.

-New York

Editor: We are not promulgators of or believers in the British-Israel theory. However, for those who may be interested in this subject, Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright may be obtained for $5 from: Destiny Publishers, 43 Grove St., Merrimac, Mass. 01860.

What really got me started to wise up was your Ambassador Report. I'd sure love to thank the person who paid for my issue and who had my name put on your mailing list.

I stopped attending services in April 1979, and it wasn't three weeks till they'd removed my name from their [mailing list for] letters, magazines, etc.... After 16 years of running here and there and sending Herbert and Garner Stud over $25,000, it's all over but the memories - lots of good ones - but also lots of scars and mental battering from those warped jerks they call ministers.

-Pennsylvania

Listen up,

I don't know how I got on your mailing list, but I want off. I cannot think of anyone any lower than you people. Anyone who devotes his life to hate and trying to destroy another person is so small that he can hardly be noticed. I don't appreciate what you are doing. Take my name off your list.

-WCG minister

Editor: This letter is typical of many we have received from WCG ministers whom we have sent literature to at the behest of some of our concerned readers. When a reader requests that we send a WCG minister our publication, and always when a check is enclosed to cover the expenses, we feel obligated to send the requested literature. However, the above letter is very typical of the attitude of those ministers still in the church.

Our advice? Forget them! This may sound cold, even heartless, but these men are there because they want to be. The ministers in the WCG know about the Report, and they know how to get it. So, to those readers who may be concerned for the spiritual welfare of some former minister, all we can say is you are wasting your time. Forget them.

Let's face it. If most of these men were to stand up and preach what they know to be true, they'd be fired. And then what would they do? Very few have occupational skills outside of the religious field. And, of course, most of them really enjoy the adoration they receive from their sheep.

We'll continue to help any WCG minister who asks our assistance. But we suspect that the really conscientious ones, the ones with guts, have already left. So as for the "ministers" that remain, we'd prefer not to waste our time.

Thanks for putting me on the mailing list for Ambassador Report. It is incredible the events transpiring in the WCG and all the off-shoots of the parent organization.

I sincerely believe one must remove from the spirit of these organizations before clarity and sanity returns. The spiritual, financial, and moral corruption at every level of these organizations has reinforced my conviction that my wife and I did the right thing in withdrawing from all of them.

As long as money talks (and I'm sure it always will) and as long as people are so willing to continue to pour money into the coffers, there will always be those ministers who are witting to take the bucks .

-Former WCG minister

I enjoy your Report very much. However, I am wondering why in all the material I have read, I never have heard it mentioned how much alcohol was consumed and how many wild parties were given, and how people were urged to drink in the WCG. I knew many people who were alcoholics when I left the church. Any comment?

-Florida

Editor: You're right. Alcoholism is a major problem in the WCG and even among many who have left. Obviously the WCG does not preach that excessive drinking is okay. But that problem is still very prevalent in that organization.

One Pasadena-area doctor who treats many WCG people has commented that hypoglycemia - an illness often associated with alcohol abuse - is a malady so common among his WCG patients as to be of almost epidemic proportions. Perhaps the reason for this is because the WCG's overall world view is so pessimistic and its doctrines are so stifling that, for relief, members turn to the one vice most tolerated by the church's ministry. In the WCG you can get disfellowshipped very quickly for asking certain Bible questions, but rarely for having "one too many."

There are many excellent books available on the subject of alcoholism. One we have found interesting is Find Your Natural High by John A. Marshall and published by Happy Eye Enterprises, 1460 Grandview, Glendale, CA 91201. The cost is $5.95 plus 59¢ postage.

An excellent book on the subject of hypoglycemia (low blood sugar or hyperinsulinism) and on health in general is Body, Mind and Sugar by E. M. Abrahamson, published by Avon. Copies can be obtained from Publishers Central Bureau, Dept. 017, One Champion Avenue, Avenel, New Jersey 07131. The price is $2.95 plus $1.95 for shipping.

Gerald Waterhouse spoke here a couple weeks ago. He sounded to me like a maniac ranting and raving long and loud. Has he been saying the same thing for 25 years? About Petra? His mind is Petra-fied!

-Missouri

Our minister... has told some [married] couples in our... church to stop sleeping together. One member hasn't slept with his unconverted wife for three years on this advice. The Bible says this is fraud one to another. The Bible says no man shall put asunder a married couple. No wonder there is so much divorce, adultery, and wife swapping in -----'s area. He can't possibly be a minister of Jesus Christ.

The marriage in question is on the verge of divorce, an attempt has been made to kidnap the child, and the wife has had her life threatened by WCG friends of her husband. Her only fault is not being interested in the WCG.

-New York State

Editor: We have been receiving many letters lately from WCG members attesting to the incredible stresses put on their lives by the troubles in the church and in particular by WCG ministerial involvement in their lives. Divorce in the WCG is rampant. we have read numerous letters from separated parents who have had their children kidnapped by estranged mates who are members of the church. There have even been a number of homicides in church families, apparently resulting from quarrels over church-related matters. One individual recently wrote that when she and her husband left the WCG, they received threatening phone calls and both narrowly escaped separate attempts on their lives.

One cannot help but ask: What are the fruits of this church?

When I asked the minister to "memberize" me to the WCG, he asked me if I planned to continue with my nursing program. I said yes and he asked me if I would work on the Sabbath. I said yes and he told me as a member of the WCG I wouldn't be allowed to do so. I told him that the Bible says it's lawful to do good on the Sabbath and Jesus healed on the Sabbath and that what I did on the Sabbath was between me and God. Then he told me that to listen to GTA on the radio was no different than having the devil over for dinner and I'd have to stop. I told him it was none of his business. He told me with my attitude he couldn't let me join the WCG. I told him with his attitude I wouldn't want to. I don't like being hustled and bullied.

-California

I was so glad to receive the Ambassador Report.... I am one of Armstrong's first converts. Armstrong stayed with Elmer Fisher and with my husband and me at the time he started to preach at the Firbutte school and at the Jeans school.

I caught on to what he was doing after he moved to Pasadena. I quit sending him money so one of his ministers took me off the mailing list.... I can't see why so many stick with him.

-Oregon

I sent in over $40,000 [to the WCG] and now I find myself cut off from the church (I guess because I quit tithing to them).

-Kentucky

I think you're foolish for trying to destroy God's church, but I'd like to find all the answers for myself. Please send me your publication Ambassador Report.

-Illinois

We were totally in the dark prior to January [1979]. Then we began to see that something was wrong. I had refused in the past to even look at your publication. The leaders in the WCG had me thinking that I was opening myself up for demon possession if I looked at your work. Whew! Have I come out of the dark ages!

-Iowa

This past week a friend of ours showed us a 1977 issue of Ambassador Report. It was like having a giant puzzle falling into place all at once! After reading through the articles, we were both heart-sick to learn of the pain and suffering so many well-meaning brethren have experienced by being a part of the "true church of God!" Sadly, we lost a child in our family by not taking him to the hospital as we should have done.

-Australia

I received your long and interesting newsletter last week. It was a revealing, accurate account of the latest. We know since we have been receiving the Pasadena Star-News for seven months. We have a pile of clippings!...

My wife came close to dying several times while in the WCG because of their healing practices which meant no drugs, not even aspirin. Since she's a diabetic, insulin (a hormone, not a drug) is required. Some ministers told her that she should not take insulin. Also some members. It was a matter of faith, they said. On the annual day of atonement, she didn't eat or drink and consequently ended up in the hospital. Finally one compassionate minister told her that she should drink juices on that day. He didn't know what to think, mentioning that some people were exempt from fasts. This minister told my wife, after he recovered from his surprise of her going without food and insulin on Atonement day, that God is love. Truly, that sums up many good things. (By the way, this fine minister was later forced to resign after many months of harassment by members and perhaps higher-ups in the WCG.)

Again thanks for your help. We hope to recover some of the money lost to this cult organization. Perhaps indirectly we may have because my wife was notified that she won $1,000 in a sweepstakes.... We feel free to do things. We are happier these days since leaving Armstrongism. We hope some of our former friends (they won't have anything to do with us) will soon see the light, for Christ is the only way.

You are welcome to print this letter in your newsletter and have permission to publish our names.

-Mr. & Mrs. Phil Strandvold, Sheffield, Alabama

Sometime ago I sent you a note requesting my name be removed from your mailing list. I realize now this was a mistake. Even though I do not care for some of the news, I know I must be informed. We cannot live with our heads in the sand!

-California

As you know, I have been photocopying the AR and distributing it through newspaper advertisements, etc. The response has been most encouraging. We have formed an association called: Association for Religious Research, P.O. Box 23, Cleveland, 4163, Queensland, Australia.

The purpose of our organization is to make information on the WCG controversy available to the interested public.

Editor: If any of our readers wish to make photocopies of our Ambassador Report newsletter for distribution, we hope you will feel free to do so. Our limited resources do not make it possible for us to print and distribute as many as we would like. Those who make copies and distribute them (to WCG members especially) are performing a real service. We've received many letters from thankful individuals who've written how much their lives have been helped as a result of receiving an Ambassador Report copy from some unknown sender.

LATE NEWS

On March 8, the Pasadena Star-News carried a news item "Worldwide Church Gets New Support" by Dan Meyers in Washington, D.C. Here are a few important excerpts:

"The National Council of the Churches of Christ, representing 32 religious groups followed by 40 million Americans, has joined a Supreme Court battle on the side of the Pasadena-based Worldwide Church of God. At issue, according to a 'friend of the court' brief filed Friday, are 'not just the rights of the Worldwide Church of God and its members... but those of every religious body and every American...."

"The Worldwide Church of God has lost attempts in lower courts to block the state from obtaining its records. Its Supreme Court appeal was filed Monday.... Attorney Laurence Tribe, who represents the Worldwide Church of God, said that the appeal for a Supreme Court review of the state's demand for the church's papers is the last legal recourse the church has to keep its records private .....

Then on March 20 this Associated Press article appeared:

"A group of religious leaders, representing major Protestant and Jewish organizations, backed legislation Wednesday to repeal a new law giving the state attorney general power to inspect church records. The churchmen were backed by Brent Barnhart, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union.

"At a Capitol news conference, the group announced support for SB1493 introduced by Sen. Nicholas Petris, D-Oakland, which would repeal a law effective since Jan. 1 giving the state attorney general power to examine church records when he determines there are 'reasonable grounds.' The new law was part of a massive rewrite of the statute concerning non-profit corporations, which was passed by the Legislature last year with the backing of the State Bar. Bernhart said the provision about church inspections attracted little notice.

"It was under the former law that records of the Pasadena-based Worldwide Church of God were placed in receivership by the Los Angeles Superior Court in January 1979 in a state investigation of alleged misuse of church funds by church leaders. The church has the case before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals claiming an unconstitutional violation of freedom of religion.

"The attorney general brought suit against the church and church leaders, claiming church funds are a charitable trust governed by state law and which the attorney general must protect. It is not certain whether the new state law or its repeal would have an effect on the state's case against the Worldwide Church of God since the attorney general's action was based on the former law."

We will monitor this development and Report on it in future issues.

Our thanks to all of you who are helping to make possible our continued publishing.

Sincerely yours,

The Publishers

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR12 June 30, 1980

Dear Friends:

During the last three months there have been a number of important developments in the State of California versus Worldwide Church of God (WCG) legal battle. But the most important WCG-related events have been transpiring in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

COURT ORDER DELAYS ROBINSON BOOK

In our last newsletter we reported that former WCG minister David Robinson had written and would soon publish a book about Herbert W. Armstrong. After numerous delays, the book finally went to press with the title Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web.

Robinson hoped all advance orders would be mailed out by the end of the first week in June. But just after the copies were bound and boxed, Robinson was served with a temporary restraining order, issued by Tulsa District Judge William W. Means, prohibiting distribution of the book. The order came after two members of the WCG - minister Sherwin McMichael and Rader associate Henry Cornwall (just recently baptized) - filed a $2 million suit against Robinson, John Hadden Publishers, and printer Interstate Book Manufacturing Company of Missouri.

Their suit, filed June 2, contends that the book, Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, contains "certain allegations concerning intimate details of the personal lives of plaintiffs and, in particular, plaintiffs' religious practices within the church and vis-a-vis the church's founder, Herbert W. Armstrong. Both the allegations which are true and those which are totally false were intended to, and did, intrude - in a manner highly offensive to a reasonable person - on the private affairs and religious beliefs of plaintiffs.... Said allegations were intended to, and did, seriously jeopardize the free exercise of religion by plaintiffs, by Herbert W. Armstrong, and by other church ministers and members. Said allegations are not of legitimate concern to the public."

Robinson told the Report, "I'm absolutely convinced Stanley Rader is behind the suit. This is one book the current WCG leadership would do almost anything to stop. I also know, for a fact, that Ralph Helge has been in close contact with Keith Ellison, the Tulsa lawyer representing Cornwall and McMichael."

Stan Rader told the Pasadena Star-News (June 10, 1980, p. 3) that he had "nothing to do with it at all." Yet, lawyer Ellison would not deny that he had been in contact with Ralph Helge, the WCG lawyer and Rader associate. Rader, when asked if the church was financing the suit against Robinson, said "not to my knowledge." But when Helge was asked the same question, he refused to deny the charge, saying, "I don't want to comment on that."

It is ironic that while Rader has, for over a year, attacked the California attorney general and Judge Jerry Pacht for initiating the state's lawsuit through an ex parte motion without notice, the temporary restraining order against Robinson was obtained in exactly the same way. Robinson told us, "They obtained this order through an ex parte hearing without notice. There was no good reason in this case for such an action. It is clearly unconstitutional prior restraint and tramples my rights to freedom of religion and freedom of speech. Furthermore, the order hurts others besides me. Many in Worldwide would not be giving their money to Herbert Armstrong and following him down the broad path to destruction if they had access to the information in my book."

Author David R. Robinson.

The evidence the plaintiffs provided in obtaining the temporary restraining order consisted of an advertisement letter Robinson had sent out (see p. 3) and a copy of rough drafts for two chapters of the book (originally numbered chapters 16 and 21), which Robinson had distributed to friends. Based on this limited material, the plaintiffs were able to obtain the order prohibiting the defendants "from publishing or causing to be published any of the previously published material in chapters 16 and 21 of *Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web* or any heretofore unpublished material from said book" (emphasis ours).

Robinson, more than a little upset over the order, told us that "Judge Means has put the courts in an incredible position. The order, in effect, says I cannot write or publish anything about a wide variety of subjects - many theological - because my book, which neither he nor the plaintiffs have yet seen, may somehow possibly interfere with Cornwall, McMichael, or Herbert Armstrong practicing their religion! I can hardly believe something like this can even occur in the United States."

Many legal experts agree.

William Hinkle, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union told the Tulsa Tribune (June 14) that the ACLU was coming to Robinson's assistance "because we have a special interest in the First Amendment and because this is a totally unprecedented case of a suppression of a book. All this complaint alleges is that it talks about their religion."

Another attorney who has joined in Robinson's defense is former University of Tulsa law school dean Bruce Peterson who called the restraining order "tragic." He told the Tulsa Tribune (June 14, p. 1): "What happened was this. Jim Kincaid, who is from a law firm with a prestigious name in town, goes over there to District Court and gets Means to sign it. It's too bad that in state courts - I say this of Means and all the others over there at District Court - that they issue temporary restraining orders all the time that are overly broad and too general. I can cite you numerous cases like this. They [church leaders] are pouring money into this thing like you wouldn't believe. That law firm over there has five people working full-time generating motions .... I don't care if what is in this book is true or not true or libelous or not libelous - that is another issue. I don't believe in prior restraint. Damn it, he [Robinson] has a right to write his book!"

The legal actions against Robinson have especially infuriated many who have ordered the Robinson book and are waiting patiently to receive their copies. Some have told us that they have written letters or are intending to write letters of protest to the WCG's lawyers in Tulsa and the judge presiding over the case. Some have stated they plan to phone and protest personally. The judge who will preside over the case is The Honorable Richard Comfort, District Court of Tulsa County, 500 South Denver, Tulsa, OK 74103. The law firm representing the WCG's side is Conner, Winters, Ballaine, Barry and McGowen; 2400 First National Tower, Tulsa, OK 74103 (tel. 918-586-5683). Copies of such letters can also be submitted to the "letters to the editor" section of an appropriate newspaper such as the Tulsa Tribune, P.O. Box 1770, Tulsa, OK 74102.

Some who have ordered Robinson's book have also written letters of protest to Interstate Book Manufacturing Co., 3416 E. 23rd St., Kansas City, MO 64127 (tel. 816-483-5524 and 913-764-5600). Although this firm is located outside the jurisdiction of the Tulsa court, since the initiation of the suit they have cooperated with the plaintiffs and are refusing to release Robinson's shipment of books. Five thousand completed copies are sitting boxed in their warehouse while hundreds of people who have ordered the books are kept waiting.

Robinson told the Report, "I've been very moved by the many individuals who have encouraged me in the battle. I'm especially appreciative of the patience of those who've ordered the book. I don't intend to let them down. And I'm still taking orders for the book. Once it is out, the church will probably find some new way of blocking it again. They have the resources to keep this in the courts for years. But as for those who have ordered the book and are ordering it now, I know God will see to it that they get their copies somehow."

Robinson refused to elaborate, saying only "the court of God will prevail over the courts of man. The truth cannot be stopped." Robinson's battle with the WCG has inspired one newspaper to liken the situation to David versus Goliath. Indeed, one (not totally unexpected) benefit of the suit is a great deal of free publicity. Many news organizations have taken an active interest in this unusual case and in Robinson's book.

Dear Friend,

I have been heavily involved with the Worldwide Church of God since 1949. My first fifteen years were spent as a layman and the next fifteen as a minister, administrator, counselor, lecturer, security chief and co-ordinator. Those duties brought me into close contact with the men who held the organization together, most of whom are either excommunicated or relegated to positions of dishonor within that church.

The realization that something was seriously wrong within the church came to me gradually, over a period of some years. Until rather recently I thought Mr. Armstrong would correct matters when he became fully aware of the seriousness of the problems. I suppose, in retrospect, that was a very naive position to take. But unfortunately it is the position still taken by thousands to this very day. I finally had to face the fact that things began to go wrong about the time Loma Armstrong died. Her influence was in alignment with the Law of God. With her passing another influence moved into the ascendancy which pandered to Mr. Armstrong's innate worldliness.

My approach, when I began to understand what was happening, was to do what I could within the organization in the hope that the organization itself could be saved. I believed that God would use it in a special way after cleaning it up. The result was excommunication by the one who calls himself an apostle!

When that happened I began to write of those experiences. Those papers were read by friends who encouraged me to continue until I had a whole book. While I have no professional writing experience I do find that straightforward presentation of truth (the plain truth) has a power all its own! This is so even when truth is stranger than fiction! So I began what has proven a rather difficult task.

First, I had not wanted to write such a book as I considered there were several others better qualified than I and that one of them should proceed with the necessary task. But while most recognized the need, not one of them would do it now. Several spoke of a later book. But it seemed imperative that it be done soon. Time was of the essence.

Secondly, I was in that difficult transition period between jobs. I found myself at nearly sixty years of age without employment, and without medical insurance for either myself or my wife as we had relied on the church. There was no paycheck, and no help from the institution which I had served for three decades. There was none of the termination pay most Americans have come to expect even from the corporations of "this world." There was the added realization that the church's refusal to pay social security for its employees was now a major drawback at my age. So, there wasn't much time to write. I had to sandwich this work in between other duties.

I firmly believe, based on long experience, that Herbert Armstrong is interested only in sex, money, and power, has nothing but contempt for his followers, and is leading astray those who put their trust in him.

My book, Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, explains why. It shows the real Herbert Armstrong - the one few WCG members have been allowed to see. It shows why the WCG is in its present crisis, why doctrines are being changed. It shows the incredible influence Stanley Rader has over Herbert Armstrong and why no man has been able to stop his rise to power. It also reveals incredible secrets known by virtually all the WCG's ministry which, until now, have been kept hidden from the church's membership.

If you or members of your family belong to the WCG, this book will prove invaluable in helping you make important decisions about the church. Those who have read advance copies of the book have commented how they found it not only interesting, but at times, absolutely shocking. Others have stated that the book has given them a completely new and profound insight into the WCG and the turmoil now surrounding it. I am sure you will find it to be worth many times its price.

To order your copy, send $10.00 (check or money order) for each book to:

JOHN HADDEN PUBLISHERS
P.O. Box 35981
Tulsa, OK 74135

Orders will be mailed out in a few weeks. Only a limited number are now being printed. So to be sure of getting your copy, order now.

Sincerely,
[signed] David Robinson

P.S. All orders will be handled confidentially.

When it is released, the Robinson book will undoubtedly cause more controversy about the WCG than ever before. The book contains 268 pages plus appendixes and has these chapter titles: (1) Idealism Versus Reality, (2) Until the Return of Christ, (3) The Cover-up, (4) Religious Hypocrisy - a Special Vice, (5) Control - the Name of the Game, (6) Sex and the Single Apostle, (7) HWA's Marriage and Illness, (8) Garner Ted's Ouster, (9) HWA Adopts the Primacy of Peter Heresy, (10) The Little Big Man, (11) HWA's Embarrassment With Christ, (12) The Jewish Connection and the Rise of Stanley Rader, (13) Conversations and Confrontations With Stanley Rader, (14) Conspiracy and Chaos, (15) Stabbed in the Back, (16) Roderick Meredith - the Broken Reed, (17) Raymond McNair - Loyal Buffie, (18) Gerald Waterhouse - the Longwinded Prophet of Petra, (19) Face to Face With HWA, and (20) Incest!

According to the Pasadena Star-News (June 10, 1980), lawyer Ellison, referring to the possible effect the book could have on Armstrong and plaintiffs, said, "The book quite well could destroy their reputations as contributing members of society...." Considering the WCG's vast powers of communication via the print and electronic media, we wonder how a few hundred, or even a few thousand, copies of a book could accomplish this if the contents were not true. Lawyer Ellison claims the Robinson book contains both true and false allegations. We at the Report certainly hope that during the course of the trial he will clarify which statements are false and which statements are true. Because contrary to one assertion in his suit, the public does want to know.

As for the accuracy of the claims in his book, Robinson told the Report, "I knew, when I decided to write the book, that by doing so I would be in some danger. Many told me that if I tried to get the book out even my life would be in danger. I didn't expect the Rader organization's influence to extend to the Oklahoma courts. But they are pouring a lot of money into this case. Before it's all over they may even try to shut me up by putting me in jail. That may be the price I'll have to pay for speaking the truth. But that's the point. This book is 100% true.

"Herbert Armstrong is claiming it is not. But there's an easy way to find out who is telling the truth and who is lying. I challenge both Herbert Armstrong and Stanley Rader to come forth and submit to a polygraph test as to the veracity of my statements in the book. I'll agree to do the same and to have the results published. It would be an easy way to find out who's telling the truth and who is lying!"

U. S. SUPREME COURT AGAIN DENIES WCG'S PLEAS

As you may have heard, on June 2 the U. S. Supreme Court decided to let California state officials proceed with their investigations of the WCG. Without comment, the court refused the WCG's pleas that it study whether the state attorney general violated the church's First Amendment rights. Not one member of the court voted in favor of the church. It was the third time the church had asked the court to intervene in the case and the third time the court had refused.

George Deukmejian, attorney general of California.

Representing the WCG before the Supreme Court was Harvard University law professor Laurence H. Tribe. In papers filed with the court he contended that the state action would "seriously erode the constitutional protection of all citizens." A number of organizations sided with the WCG and filed friend-of-the-court briefs with the court. These groups included: the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S., the Synagogue Council of America, the Board of Church and Society of the United Methodist Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and others. Lawyers for the attorney general, however, contended that the lawsuit against the WCG was merely intended to correct "alleged fraudulent diversion of assets" by church leaders.

The court's action removed the last hope the WCG had of legally blocking a broad series of legal discovery orders requiring the church's leaders to turn over a wealth of information about the church organization and its finances, as well as submit to depositions.

California Deputy Attorney General James Cordi said that the order the court had permitted to be enforced would provide "most of the information we need to try the case."

In a brief to the court, state attorney general George Deukmejian argued that normally, directors or trustees of a charitable trust can go to court to seek remedies for a suspected fraud. But in this case the directors and trustees are "the very persons accused of wrongdoing." He wrote that to allow church officials to use freedom of religion arguments to stop the state's investigation would, in effect, "legitimize fraud in the name of religion."

After the Supreme Court decision, Deukmejian said the court's decision underscored the propriety of the state's case. He pointed out that the church has been denied relief in 16 different petitions to the California Court of Appeals and 11 separate petitions to the California Supreme Court. He said, "It is obvious that these courts, which represent virtually the entire court system in the United States, believe that the issues raised by this litigation are issues in which the public, through the attorney general, has a legitimate public interest." He went on to attack Rader for what he termed refusal to deal with the real issues and for "raising the spectre of government interference in religion. The issues in this litigation are not religious.... Self-dealing and fraud are the issues," he said. (Star-News, June 3, 1980.)

DEPOSITION TIMETABLES SET BY JUDGE

On June 4, two days after the Supreme Court decision, Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Robert Weil announced a timetable within which WCG leaders would be required to appear for depositions. Herbert W. Armstrong must appear for questioning in Tucson on November 6. Attorney Laurence Tribe claimed that Armstrong health, age, and schedule prohibited him from appearing before December 3. But Judge Weil, referring to Armstrong's planned trip to England, Egypt, and Poland this summer declared, "If his age permits him to make these long and arduous journeys, he should be able to sit for a deposition. Mr. Armstrong's deposition has been pending for the last year and a half; it is not a shot from out of the blue!"

Judge Weil also set the dates for the following depositions: Wayne Cole, Oct. 6; David Antion, Oct. 14; Robert Kuhn, Oct.

21; Henry Cornwall, Nov. 5; and Ralph Helge, Nov. 12.

Earlier this year, Helge had attempted to have his name removed as a defendant in the case by producing a series of affidavits from numerous church members and ministers attesting that he had no knowledge of or part in any alleged wrongdoing. But on April 25 Judge Weil refused the request. In arguing against the Helge request, Lauren Brainard disputed Helge's claim that he was not a bonafide officer of the church, college, and foundation.

Brainard said, "An accounting is needed from the charitable corporations and individual defendants because they have been, and are, siphoning off and diverting to their own use and benefit assets of the church, college and foundation on a massive scale. All acts were done with the knowledge and complicity of all individual defendants, and each individual defendant is liable for the breaches of his co-trustees" (Star-News, April 29, 1980).

Judge Weil's June 4 order also included deadlines for the handing over to the attorney general of documents presently held by some of the defendants.

Apparently, based on the April 18 Pastor General's Report (p. 4), those documents include the minutes of church board meetings going back 20 to 30 years. Those minutes should prove very interesting. One former board member told us that over the years there were numerous minutes written up for board meetings that never occurred. Once the board members have given their depositions, it will be revealing for their testimony to be compared with the written record of the official minutes.

POLITICIANS MAY SAVE WCG

While the WCG has lost fight after fight in the courts, it may succeed in stopping the California attorney general's investigation through the state legislature. On May 15, the California State Senate passed the Petris Bill (SP 1493) by a vote of 21 to 1. The bill states: "Except as the attorney general is empowered to act in the enforcement of the criminal laws of this state... [he]... shall have no powers with respect to religious corporations." Had this proposed law been in force 18 months ago, it would have been impossible for the California attorney general to have taken action against the WCG as it did in January 1979.

Although the bill still has to pass the State Assembly and be signed by Governor Jerry Brown before it becomes law, its chances for passage are very good. The bill, authored by state Senator Nicholas Petris (Democrat, Oakland), would not go into effect until June 1981 even if passed. However, some observers believe passage of the bill could deal a serious blow to the state attorney general's suit against the WCG.

A June 17 Los Angeles Times article by Russell Chandler and Lois Timnick stated, "If it becomes law, the bill could have a negative impact on pending cases [such as the State of California versus Worldwide] even before it goes into effect. That would happen if the courts interpret it to mean that the Legislature's intent is to bar the attorney general from authority in religious areas. None of the major investigations of church groups by the state attorney general, however, was launched under the law the Petris bill seeks to alter." (The three groups being investigated are Gene Scott's Faith Center Church, the Synanon Foundation, and the WCG.)

As one would suspect, the WCG is lobbying for passage of the bill. Ralph Helge has been in Sacramento talking to politicians. WCG minister Joe Kotora has led a demonstration of WCG members at the State Capitol. (Other religious groups also participated, and the WCG members passed out copies of the church's "State vs. Church" reprint.) Harvard lawyer Laurence Tribe, who represents the WCG, has addressed the California Assembly's Judiciary Committee. Others backing the bill include Catholic, Protestant, and cult groups.

Opposition to the bill is coming mainly from Jewish groups, cult fighters, and deputy attorneys general. Legal experts opposed to the bill say the bill, if passed, will severely limit the powers of the state attorney general in investigations of any organizations claiming to be religious. And it will prohibit the attorney general from seeking corrective actions - such as the return of monies misappropriated - in civil fraud cases involving religious organizations.

Those opposed to the Petris bill should voice their opinion by writing to Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr., State Capitol, Sacramento, CA 95814, or by calling his office at 916-445-2841.

THE CORPORATION SOLE

On April 25 employees of the WCG received an important memorandum from "The Executive Office." It informed them: "Your employment with the Worldwide Church of God, a California corporation, is hereby terminated effective today. The paycheck you will receive on May 1, 1980, represents payment in full through today of all wages and salary due you from Worldwide Church of God, a California corporation .... We wish to thank you for your past service and wish you every success in the future."

But along with the above memorandum came a letter signed by Herbert W. Armstrong. The letter was, in effect, an offer of employment by a new organization called "Herbert W. Armstrong, The Apostle of the Worldwide Church of God and his successors, a corporation sole." In order to obtain employment with this new organization, the offeree was required to sign a statement agreeing to a list of employment requirements. Some of these include:

*A provision giving the corporation sole "the right in its discretion to assign you at any time to different duties."

*A provision allowing for termination without notice with two weeks' pay.

*A termination clause which says, "If your employment with the corporation sole is terminated, with or without cause, whether voluntary or involuntary, for any reason, you will not be entitled to severance pay, pension, annuity, or other termination benefits of any kind."

*"Your ongoing employment is strictly conditioned on your loyalty and continuing adherence to all rules and regulations of the corporation sole and conduct consistent with and in accordance with the doctrines, teachings, and beliefs of the church."

*"Your employment is full-time, so you shall devote your entire productive time, ability, and attention to the business of the corporation sole and shall not directly or indirectly render your services to any other person or organization, for compensation or otherwise, without written consent."

*"You shall hold in the strictest confidence any trade secret or other information relating to the affairs of the corporation sole or the church, especially (but not limited to) membership lists and corporation books and records. Upon termination you shall return all such information to the corporation sole, along with any copies or duplicates thereof, as well as all other property of the corporation sole in your possession or control."

*"To dispel any uncertainty arising because of the difficulty in determining at this time what rights if any accrue to you as a result of your termination by Worldwide Church of God, a California corporation, and your employment by the corporation sole, the corporation sole requires as a condition to your employment that you look solely to the corporation sole and its written policies as described herein and as defined in its employee handbook for your rights upon your illness, disability, death, termination (whether voluntary or involuntary), or upon the occurrence of other conditions or events specified in the handbook. Therefore, in consideration for the offer of employment to you by the corporation sole, you agree, by your signed acceptance below, that you release and discharge Worldwide Church of God, a California corporation, from any claims or causes of action you now have or may have in the future, or that any person claiming through you may have, created by or arising out of your employment or termination of employment with Worldwide ...."

The agreement requires the signature, not only of the employee, but of the employee's spouse.

The given address of the new organization is P.O. Box 431, Tucson, Arizona 85702. But according to a Los Angeles Times article by Russell Chandler (May 7, 1980), the new organization is a Colorado corporation. That article stated:

"The new entity, qualified to do business in California, is a corporation sole. That means, according to a lawyer familiar with the Worldwide Church lawsuits pending in state and federal courts, that church patriarch-founder Herbert W. Armstrong, 87, 'is the total authority.'

"He embodies all the assets of the corporation,' the lawyer said. According to corporation law, a corporation sole (often used as the incorporating means for Roman Catholic dioceses) need not have directors or trustees nor take votes before acting....

"Jack Kessler, an attorney spokesman for the Worldwide Church, said Armstrong had been considering moving the church corporation out of California since state prosecutors began investigating church finances in early 1979.

"Other states, Kessler said, have 'more favorable trust laws.'"

Not all WCG employees are going along with the new agreement. Five members of the WCG television studio have refused to sign the new contract saying it was "too restrictive."

Some recently fired WCG employees are saying they're now glad they were let go when they were. They were able to get more in severance pay, annuity pay, etc., than those who've stayed on.

A NEW DOCTRINE

Herbert Armstrong's name is the central part of his new organization's title. Yet many long-time WCG members will recall how HWA once strongly condemned numerous church groups for including in their legal names the names of their founders.

Herbert Armstrong insisted that the name of the true church is "Church of God" and that this name is one of the proofs or signs associated with the true church of Jesus Christ. He often pointed out that the designation "Worldwide," like "Radio" in earlier years, was only added to the church's proper biblical name as a legal requirement, the name "Church of God" already having been legally claimed by another corporation. (See reprint letter #953, Good News Sept. 1963, p. 5, etc.)

But now it appears that this doctrine, like others before, is being changed. On the George Putnam KIEV radio talkshow of June 12, 1980, Stan Rader made these comments:

"...at all times since 31 A.D. there have been members of the Worldwide Church of God some place on the surface of this earth.

"Worldwide Church of God is a spiritual body. It's a spiritual organism, whereas the Worldwide Church of God, Incorporated, is a California corporation carrying on some of the temporal affairs of the church."

ANOTHER NEW DOCTRINE

Many Ambassador graduates can recall a time when Herbert Armstrong taught that the churches of this world are "of Satan" and that God's church should have nothing to do with them. Yet now we see the WCG cooperating with other church groups in fighting the attorney general of California, even demonstrating with other groups against that HWA formerly referred to as "constituted authority."

In the April 18, 1980, Pastor's Report there appeared this statement: "This morning, Mr. Rader accompanied Mayor Kollek [of Jerusalem] on a courtesy call to the Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox church" (emphasis ours).

On June 25, Stanley Rader appeared on Dr. Gene Scott's "Festival of Faith" television program. It wasn't the first time Rader has appeared on that preacher's program (see our June 1, 1979 issue). But this time, some WCG listeners were shocked to hear that WCG funds would be used to help promote the Scott program in return for a WCG documentary being aired on Scott's stations.

Obviously, Herbert Armstrong's admonition to avoid the churches of "this world" either no longer applies or has been greatly modified.

AND ANOTHER...

For almost fifty years Herbert Armstrong taught that it was wrong for a Christian to vote and take part in politics. In his article "How Would Jesus Vote for President?" - published every four years in The Plain Truth from Oct. 1948 through Oct. 1964 and distributed as reprint #232 - Herbert wrote that the great Mother Church (he called the Catholic church the Great Whore of Revelation 17) and her daughter churches (the Protestant churches, he claimed) "formed an illicit union with the governments of this world - entered into this world's politics - took an active part in its affairs! Thus she [the Catholic church] committed spiritual 'fornication' - illicit union prior to marriage.... The popular churches of Christendom nearly all take part in this world's affairs and its politics.... They are deceived: They do not even know they are doing wrong!"

And what does Herbert claim Jesus would do? "He would be too busy proclaiming the good news of His own coming world-ruling kingdom, and the way of salvation, to take part whatsoever in the politics of this present evil world...." But now Herbert, evangelist Rader, and WCG ministers and members are actively lobbying the California legislature and demonstrating in Sacramento. They have even enlisted the aid of the Catholic church - Herbert called it the "great counterfeit church" - and its Protestant "harlot daughters" in their fight. Does Herbert now believe God is so weak that he (Herbert) must solicit help from organizations he has long branded as Satan's churches? Or has he completely lost faith in God? Whatever his reasoning, Herbert has obviously altered one of his church's oldest doctrines.

WHERE WILL IT ALL LEAD?

At this juncture it is difficult to predict what will transpire in the WCG in the next few months. The following quote from page 11 of the April 18 Pastor's Report is, however, very enlightening:

"Mr. Helge cautioned that we've also got to have something else in mind.... Hebrews 11... also tells us that when we're persecuted in one city to go to another. Is that time here now?"

"Mr. Helge then admonished us to not lose faith in our leaders, or the Church because of this lawsuit. Nor should we lose faith in God if arrests and indictments should come forth. He stressed that he was not saying that this was going to happen, but if it does, we should not be too good to experience the same treatment the apostle Paul endured.

"...I'm telling you it's going to take a miracle from God to have it end peaceable. We're going to be peaceable but... [ellipses theirs] this really is the first opponent...."

".there's a bill now in the state legislature that hopefully is going to take away his [the attorney general of California] civil power to persecute [sic] churches (our lawsuit is a civil one),' Mr. Helge reminded the audience. But he may simply take his charges and categorize them as 'criminal' as he has already done in other cases."

The above seems to indicate that the WCG, or at least its leaders, plan to flee California or even the U.S. if the state should file criminal charges or if the civil suit progresses beyond a certain point.

In his book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web David Robinson devotes a chapter to WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse and the WCG's latest pronouncements on Petra. Robinson says Waterhouse has resurrected the old Petra theory and has been on tour preaching it to WCG audiences. Robinson points out that many WCG members believe the "time to flee" is near and they will be encouraged to sell all they own to support the church's "great escape." He sees such a possible exodus as inevitably leading to tragic consequences.

Stanley Rader has denied that the church's Petra doctrine can be compared to the Jim Jones Guyana tragedy. But on George Putnam's June 12 radio broadcast Rader said:

"We do believe that when you're persecuted in one place you flee to another - because the Bible tells you that. And we also know that if the Constitution of the United States should be declared a nullity as a result of this action by the state of California, then in order to continue our work of fulfilling the great commission we're going to have to do so from a place where we are free to do so.... So naturally if we are unable to operate here freely in order to spread the gospel, we'll go elsewhere. But also we have a belief which comes right from the Bible - it's all laid out for anyone that wants to read it, in the Book of Revelation which is a much disregarded book of the Bible unfortunately - that in the end time those chosen few will be saved from what otherwise would be worldwide destruction. So we have contemplated over a long period of time, and speculated.... We just believe that when that end time comes we will be saved. And rather than going someplace for a James Jones Guyana ending it will be to be saved while everyone else, unfortunately, will be destroyed."

Herbert Armstrong, too, is preaching the "place of safety" doctrine. The lead article in the June 16 Worldwide News had an HWA article with this headline, "Completion of Work Near???" That article contained this statement:

"...our great commission will be virtually completed. Quickly the Laodicean church will rise up. It will go through the GREAT TRIBULATION. We shall be taken (by flight) to a place of protection for 3½ years, till the coming of Christ.

"I have rechecked Revelation 3:10 again and from the original Greek it definitely refers to our being taken to a place of safety from the Great Tribulation."

David Robinson points out that within the last year, Gerald Waterhouse has preached that the WCG would purchase a fleet of DC-10s to fly the WCG to the Middle East. (Apparently, God will provide "11-inch angels to cover the 10-inch cracks.") Now, however, one top WCG minister is privately saying the "place of safety" may not be in Jordan, after all, but a place in Argentina.

Herbert Armstrong's article is all the more interesting considering its immediate proximity to another article with his by-line. Immediately beneath the June 16 Worldwide News lead article was one entitled "Satan Intensifies Persecution." While not mentioning Robinson by name, the article craftily attempts to head off charges brought by Robinson's book:

"Actually Satan tried this in the attempt to have the state political government take over running of the church. Both Mr. Stanley Rader and I were falsely accused (but not in the lawsuit) of siphoning off (stealing) millions of dollars every year. We did not need to dignify those monstrous lies with even a denial. [huh?]

"But now Satan is coming at us in a more subtle and even more outrageous and scurrilous accusation, implying personal immorality and sins.

"Neither shall we dignify these infamous accusations and rumors with a denial.

"Adolph Hitler is reported to have said that if you tell a little lie it may not be believed, but if you tell an outrageously enormous and impossible lie it will be believed."

HWA's reference to Adolph Hitler and his "big lie" concept is most remarkable. In Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, author Robinson, quoting Armstrong family members, claims that Herbert Armstrong has been an avid student of Hitler's Mein Kampf.

HWA has claimed that men are always guilty of that which they accuse others of. Obviously, that theory is not universally true. However, perhaps that supposition was developed by HWA out of personal introspection.

ARCH-CRIMINALS OF THE CENTURY?

On the George Putman radio program referred to above, Stan Rader made light of some of the accusations levied against him. We found one Rader statement particularly amusing:

"ABC, on national television, accused me and Mr. Armstrong of stealing $70 million and maybe more. We've been accused in court of having siphoned and pilfered up to $45 million and maybe more.... And that would make Mr. Armstrong and me two of the arch-criminals of this century. There have not been any financial scandals [before] where anyone has been accused of stealing $70 million or $45 million."

"SIXTY MINUTES" DOES IT TO RADER AGAIN

On June 8, "Sixty Minutes," the nation's number one television program, reran the "God and Mammon" segment it did on the WCG. We hope those of you who missed it when it aired on April 15, 1979, were able to see it this time.

The rerun did not prove very popular with the WCG's leadership. Just a few days after it aired, the WCG took out fullpage ads in leading U.S. newspapers to present an open letter to Mike Wallace, denegrating his journalistic ethics. (A full-page ad in the New York Times, one of the newspapers the church ran ads in, costs over $16,000.) The ad was signed Herbert W. Armstrong, but its somewhat amateurish style has prompted some to wonder if the former ad man was really its author.

For instance, its headline read "Why, Mike Wallace, on 60 Minutes did you not tell the plain truth?" The ad continued addressing Wallace in the second person until the end where, oddly, the author(s?) ask Mike Wallace, "If you want more information, write to us: The Worldwide Church of God...."

Another oddity was the blunt use of religious phraseology. For instance, "...our primary motivation, which is SPIRITUAL, proclaiming the TRUE Gospel message of Jesus Christ to the world and to our baptized members... this present nearly half-century-old succession of the true church of God was raised up and has grown on living faith in God and in Jesus Christ our Savior...." Very religious language for a man who avoids the name Jesus Christ when dealing with the world's leaders and who has often boasted of his skill in appearing "worldly" when dealing with "the world." But then again, maybe it is not so strange considering Herbert Armstrong's multi-personalited nature.

Many WCG watchers are convinced this anti-like Wallace ad was inspired by Stan Rader, toward whom the "God and Mammon" documentary was most unflattering (did the camera lie?). Many believe the real reason for Rader's running battle with Wallace stems from the fact that Wallace's annual salary is more than two-and-a-half times that of Rader's. Of course, such jealousy is not possible, because Mr. Rader is now "converted."

Incidentally, we at the Report couldn't help but chuckle when we read: "You made us look wealthy by saying our financial income is greater than that of Billy Graham or Oral Roberts combined. Whether true or false, I respectfully point out that we are a CHURCH. They are merely evangelistic and broadcasting crusades - though the latter also operates a minor university. [Editor - this "minor" university in Tulsa has a respected law school, dental school, medical school, huge hospital, championship basketball team, and is accredited.]

"Why did you not tell the No. 1 TV-watching audience in America that we are a CHURCH of long [sic] standing? That the No. 1 allocation on our annual budget is the ministerial payroll ...."

Longtime observers of the WCG will probably notice that this important clarification of the WCG's size and status was first presented in Ambassador Report's March 24, 1980, issue (see pp. 3 & 4, especially p. 4, para. 4). After thirty years, Herbert Armstrong, who used to boast about the sun never setting on his work, about being bigger than Billy and Oral, etc.- finally realizes his truly small size and status, as we pointed out a few weeks earlier in the Report.

The coincidence gave us a chuckle.

THE ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

The full-page ads attacking Mike Wallace have not been the WCGs only recent newspaper foray. During the last few months the WCG has had a major ad campaign going which has utilized numerous full-page ads in many of the nation's largest and most prestigious newspapers. The headlines have included:

"Churches outlawed in U.S.S.R. Don't say it can't happen here!! 80 million Americans fight back:"

In this ad Herbert Armstrong tries to imply that the WCG is a group of dedicated patriots fighting off the encroachment of fanatical communists in our midst.

"8.3 million Americans versus California's Attorney General-Who do you think is right?"

Of course, there are no 83 million Americans versus the California attorney general. Other than $150-an-hour attorneys hired to defend the WCG, the Rader organization would have difficulty finding even one million knuckleheads who are convinced the Attorney General has acted improperly.

Representatives of church organizations labeled "Satan's churches" by Herbert Armstrong have come to the WCG's defense. And these organizations do together, perhaps, have a total of 83 million people on their church rolls. But to assume all of these 83 million people are backing the WCG's position is to reduce the aggregate intelligence quotients of these groups to that of the WCG's membership - a very unreasonable assumption. A more rational analysis would conclude that many upstanding, religious Americans contribute to organizations headed by pseudo-politicians out of step with the good sense and Christian ideals of their constituents.

"Corruption in government did not end with Watergate."

The headline of this ad, signed by Stanley Rader (a signature sure to intrigue graphologists everywhere), has a particularly odd ring to it considering (1) Rader's close ties with the Nixon Administration and (2) the fact that since 1975 A1 Carozzo has likened the WCG's coverups to Watergate, and, (3) more recently, David Robinson has drawn attention to significant parallels between the WCG's scandals and the Watergate tragedy.

"The First Amendment ...Fair Prey for Ambitious Politicians???"

This ad contained the following:

"What about you? What matters to you? Your religion? Your politics? Your sex? Your sexual preference?..."

We won't comment any further on this one.

All of these ads are remarkable. They constitute an odd blend of fallacy and hyperbole. But for sheer outlandishness none tops the one we saw in the June 23 Los Angeles Times. The headline read:

"The Worldwide Church of God offers $100,000 REWARD!"

Space does not permit us to quote all of this wacky ad. Those who wish to obtain a full copy can probably do so by writing to "God's headquarters" in Pasadena. But the thrust of this ad's offer is that the WCG will pay $100,000 to persons providing the WCG with "evidence" that, in essence, shows that the California Attorney General initiated his lawsuit based on "false or misleading information."

But the ad says, "All these allegations [against the WCG] have been either disproved or refuted by positive evidence. The attorney general has furnished no evidence to the contrary, leading to the conclusion that he therefore acted either on the basis of no information whatever or on the basis of false information." But if that is the case, then what need is there for more "evidence"?

That is only one self-contradiction found in the ad.

The self-contradictory hodgepodge ad has been interpreted by many as an attempt by the WCG leadership to bribe takers into "creating" evidence to be used against the attorney general. (Of course, this is not the case as Herbert Armstrong, Stanley Rader, and associates are all converted men, and Mr. Rader is also an upstanding attorney.)

Some who read the ad asked: If a conscientious citizen really had such information, would he not already have come forward without the incentive of monetary gain? And if a man only came forward for the $100,000, would he not be a dishonorable man? And therefore would his testimony not be worthless? These people seem to believe that the reward offer is only another attempt at delaying the trial. Of course, HWA and Stanley would not stoop to such tactics. After all, they are converted men. But then, what is the real purpose behind their $100,000 offer?

DOCUMENTARY PUTS EGG ON TV STATION'S FACE

As if the WCG's newspaper ads were not bad enough, the WCG has also produced a one-hour documentary (if that is the correct word) about its running battle with the California attorney general. The program aired in southern California over KCOP-TV on January 16 of this year. But then after receiving letters from Judge Jerry Pacht, Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Tapper, Hillel and Raphael Chodos, and ex-judge Stephen Weisman, that station found itself in the embarrassing position of having to air a five-minute retraction a minimum of 12 times in as many days. The retraction stated:

"In January 1979 the Worldwide Church of God was named in a suit brought by the state of California charging its leaders with siphoning off millions of dollars for their benefit. The action demanded an accounting and brought the appointment of a receiver for the temporary protection of the church property and records.

"On Wednesday, January 16, 1980, channel 13 broadcast a program produced by and presenting the views of the Worldwide Church of God titled 'The First Amendment: Church v. State.' In that program certain statements were made regarding actions and motives of Attorney General George Deukmejian, Deputy Attorney General Lawrence R. Tapper, and Los Angeles attorneys Hillel Chodos and Raphael Chodos in connection with their prosecution of the lawsuit.

"The broadcast also questioned the propriety of the appointment of a receiver by Los Angeles Superior Judge Jerry Pacht in a proceeding conducted without prior notice to the church.

"Because of the serious nature of some of the statements and characterizations made in that broadcast, KCOP has undertaken an investigation of the events discussed in the program. We have reviewed numerous documents, met with the attorneys and a representative of the church and the advertising agency for the church in order to obtain documentary support for those charges. Although we're not equipped to determine the merits of the case, this investigation has lead us to the following conclusions:

"This station is convinced that the lawsuit against the Worldwide Church of God is not a sham and that it has not been conducted for improper purposes. We similarly conclude that the January 2, 1979, hearing in Judge Pacht's chambers which resulted in the Judge's appointing a temporary receiver to administer the church's financial affairs was proper. Although prior notice of a hearing is usually required, California law permits a judge to hear a motion for temporary relief without notice to the defendants in emergency situations.

"It was also suggested in the church's broadcast that Judge Pacht appointed the receiver at the hearing without having paid sufficient attention to the crucial documents submitted at the hearing. The court transcript of the hearing shows that Judge Pacht indicated that he had read the complaint, the written legal arguments, the sworn declarations of the individuals who initiated the suit, and some of the supporting financial data before appointing former Judge Weisman to take possession of church assets.

"It is noteworthy that the California Commission on Judicial Performance, a body charged with overseeing the conduct of judges, determined unequivocally that Judge Pacht conducted the hearing properly. The proceedings in the judge's chambers were recorded by a certified court reporter and a transcript of these proceedings has been available to the public since very shortly after the hearing concluded. We know of no evidence that supports the church's assertion that the judge or any other person suppressed the transcript.

"Channel 13 is further convinced that attorneys Hillel Chodos and Raphael Chodos, Deputy Attorney General Lawrence Tapper, and the court-appointed receiver, former Judge Stephen Weisman, were not motivated to and had no intention to take over the property of the church for their own gain as was suggested in the church program.

"None of these gentlemen performed any action that was illegal or unethical or inconsistent with the apparently lawful order of Judge Pacht appointing a receiver.

"The statements in the church's program to the effect that the state had no evidence on which to base a lawsuit and that it never expected to uncover any are not well founded. We have not attempted to determine which party is correct about the ultimate merits of the case. As happens in most lawsuits each side disputes the credibility and the motives of the other; however, the correctness of the appointment of the receiver has been the subject of several appeals to higher courts, including the United States Supreme Court, and none of these courts has reversed any of the orders imposing or confirming the receivership. The courts have, apparently, decided that there is indeed evidence to support the actions taken on behalf of the state.

"We have also found no reason to believe that the attorney general of California or the state's attorneys acted with questionable motives or bad faith, lied to the public or to the church, or improperly came into possession of church documents as was suggested in the church program.

"We have found no evidence, and none has been presented us, that impunes the integrity of these individuals. In conclusion we want to acknowledge that the issues in the lawsuit are quite involved and important. Understandably emotions are high. However, we are satisfied that there is no reason to question or suspect the motives, integrity or good faith of the attorneys who have brought the case, or of the court officers who have participated in the proceedings.

"Channel 13 played no part in the production of the program and the views expressed in it were exclusively those of the Worldwide Church of God. We extend our sincere apology to George Deukmejian, Hillel Chodos, Raphael Chodos, Lawrence Tapper, Judge Jerry Pacht, and Stephen Weisman and regret any harm that the broadcast may have caused them. Thank you."

Anyone who watched the WCC-produced documentary should have immediately realized they were being subjected to pure propaganda. The background music alone indicated that. Almost every time church officials appeared, they were accompanied by orchestral strains transporting the viewer to Shangri-la. But when state officials were shown, the viewer was musically dragged off to the emperor's dungeons of ancient Rome or to Dr. Frankenstein's lab. One wondered what horror flick some of the latter music was lifted from. The informational content of the one-hour "documentary" was likewise no less one-sided and inaccurate. Nevertheless, the inflammatory "documentary" was produced very professionally, and one can only speculate as to how many people were influenced by its content.

NEW CHURCHES

In our last issue we mentioned a number of new churches, including The Church of God, Kelowna. Soon after that issue was published, we received a very cordial phone call from the head of that group, Mr. Hans Norel, a successful Canadian businessman and former WCG member. Mr. Norel told us, "Many people who become aware of the problems in Worldwide wind up very discouraged and confused. We try to encourage people not to throw out the baby with the bath water. We try to help people spiritually through Christian fellowship and in some cases, even physically. If any of your readers are in need of encouragement or assistance we'd like to help. They can write to us at P.O. Box 2362, Station R, Kelowna, BC, Canada, V1X 6A5 or call us at 604-765-6638."

Since our last issue, we've been made aware of a number of other church groups that have ministers or significant numbers of members from the WCG. For those who are interested, here they are:

Church of God, Sonoma
(Paul Royer)
2163 Meadowbrook St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95401

The above groups are listed for your information. Please recall that we do not give endorsements to any groups.

LETTERS

Your recent comments about Liberty Ministries International were appreciated, even though some people thought you were being sarcastic and cutting toward us. I have learned one very important lesson in life, and that is to respect the right of others to disagree with me. I feel no personal need to have others agree with my viewpoints, neither do I feel any pressure to agree with their beliefs.

The very core of Liberty Ministries is "individualism" and the "dignity of difference." It is our sincere goal in life to help each individual to realize more of his or her own abilities and talents. Far too many people and their organizations use peer pressure or emotional black-mail in an attempt to force conformity. We have made and are making a dedicated effort to help each individual feel proud about his different, unique philosophies in life.

Another point I would like to make about your article is that we did not build Liberty Ministries art a "spinoff" from the Worldwide Church of God. In fact, less than two percent of our members were ever associated with Worldwide. We have not built on someone else's foundation. We have not established doctrines or a church government which even remotely resemble the WCG.

Furthermore, I harbor no animosity or hard feelings about any aspect of my association with Worldwide. I feel it was a fabulous opportunity - it just wasn't the total answer. I appreciate the Bible knowledge I received, the speech training, the privilege to make good and fasting friends, the opportunity to learn to live at ease with all people everywhere, and on and on. Sure, the organization had shortcomings, but don't they all? Frankly, if most of the members of Worldwide hadn't been there, they would have been in some worse cult, and there are plenty of them around!

In closing, again, I thank you for mentioning LMI and your offer to publish out response. We are a team of dedicated individuals, seeking Godly solutions to the problems of the world. We are trying to help people identify that itch they have been unable to scratch. The first year of LMI saw fabulous success, and a change in many lives. I wish you and your whole staff God's richest blessings. May you use your tremendous talents to build, not just tear down. Remember, it's growth and positive results that count.

I took forward to reading the Report whenever it comes into my home. After reading the latest issue, I feel compelled to write and comment on some of the things brought out in it.

It is unfortunate that so many feel they must go out and begin churches of their own. You repoted on several who had done this. It seems to me that they may be making the same mistake that HWA made many years ago. He had a disagreement with those around him so his answer was to form his own group. Now we are witnesses to the tragedy which has unfolded as a result of that decision. Of course, others may have different motives for starting up their own organization, and I sincerely hope they do indeed have good motives in so doing.

Many of us, myself included, have run around trying to find "truth" - trying to seek out those who preached the most "truth." We had to be certain that Scripture was being taught correctly. I recall that the Pharisees took this point of view also. They knew Scripture so well that they missed what it was trying to tell them. John 5:39-40, "You diligently study the Scriptures because you think that by them you possess eternal life. These are the Scriptures that testify about me, yet you refuse to come to me to have life." (NIV)

We can be so concerned with "working out our own salvation" that we miss what it's really all about - building a personal relationship with Jesus Christ - becoming a disciple of his rather than a follower of some theological idea or interpretation.

I would be the first to admit that the churches dotting our country are not perfect. There is not a church that I have visited that I couldn't "disagree" with about something. But that's not the point. Could that church strengthen my relationship with Jesus Christ? Could it show me how I could be move dike Him? That is what counts, the way I see it. There are many churches around to which the answers to the above would be "yes."

Let us be honest and ask ourselves: Who are we really following?

*-Richard Forkun
Ontario, Canada*

I received your AR today. It is like turning on a light after being in the dark with The Worldwide News. Thanks so much to the person who sent in my name. Things fit together now. I had heard of you but was afraid to request it for myself as I had been told it was all lies and Satan's last effort to destroy the church. But I've been told the truth by you. Thank you for your efforts. I've found much help from the Church of God, 7th Day. Their address is: Bible Advocate Press, P.O. Box 33677, Denver, CO 80233.

For a church ,that, according to HWA, was near death, they have so many teachings that we thought only HWA knew. They are wonderfully helpful, Christian people with a sincere love and desire to serve instead of get. They will send a series of documents on request showing how HWA was a members of their church. It is very enlightening.

-Kansas

Keep yours garbage to yourselves. I'm tired of carrying your trash to the dump (which isn't a low enough place for the filth you axe spreading).

Why don't you do yourselves a favor and close your mouths and still yours fingers. You'll have less to repent of that way!

As to your comment that if the ministers left in God's work were to preach what they know to be true, they'd be fired - it's preposterous. We know what is going on and are 100% behind Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong. What he is doing is right and positive and what you are doing is wrong and totally negative.

-Glen Doig
WCG Minister
Anchorage, Alaska

To date I have had you mail the Report to 32 people in our local church. One sabbath out minister announced that many people were receiving it, and that someone was trying to "break up the church!" He does not know that Mr. Armstrong has already done that.

Keep up yours good work to warn people.

-WCG member

"...I feel certain the whole thing will fall apart sooner or later, and I am tithing quite a bit to Mr. Raymond Cole as he still believes in Monday Pentecost as I do too. I did not worship with the brethren on Sunday last year nor do I plan to this year. But don't tell HWA or Rader. My minister excused me and I appreciate it.

-WCG member

Editor: Mr. Raymond Cole is the pastor of The Church of God, The Eternal, P.O. Box 775, Eugene, OR 97401.

Since leaving the WCG a year ago, I have been affiliated with GTA. However, when I head in your last Report that Al Portune (my main reason for supporting GTA) had been denied a place on the Board and had left, I felt this was too much. And when I head Jack Martin was fired and Wayne Cole had resigned - that was definitely too much.

Apparently GTA isn't too willing to let his members know that these men are out, because in their literature or communiques, which I still receive, not a word has been mentioned. Thanks for reporting on this.

-Canada

I can believe what yours reports say - I've been a coworker with HWA for 15 years, and I've come to realize he is no longer the man I thought he was. I want to keep informed.

-Ohio

A short time ago I lost my darling husband. But thank God for people like you who are striving to get the truth to so many. Because of you and others like you I have gotten through the past months so much better. Thank you.

-Tennessee

For years I thought you were our enemies, but the light finally shown through and we discovered who our real enemies are. We thank God for this revelation.

-California

We regularly receive letters from individuals who criticize the Report as being very negative. These individuals have a point. (Of course, some complain that the Bible too is negative, exposing too many of the sins of its central figures.) Much, if not most, of what we report on is very negative. Frankly, we wish that were not so. We really do wish that we could report some really good news, for once, about Herbert Armstrong, the WCG, and Ambassador College. But unfortunately, today there just isn't much positive to report regarding the Armstrong organization.

We certainly hope none of our readers make the Report the central part of their life. There are so many positive, beautiful, and uplifting things to be enjoyed in life. We certainly hope all of you are living, or at least approaching, the kind of good life all of us really want.

On the other hand, there is an appropriate time, reason for, and balanced way to study the negative or less inspiring side of life. And there is an appropriate place for expose journalism and advocacy. We receive many letters from individuals who've been greatly helped by our efforts. We appreciate their kind words and want all who've supported our efforts to know our united efforts have really helped thousands of people.

Sincerely yours,

The Publishers

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR13 September 21, 1980

Dear Friends:

Since our last issue, the California attorney general has actively continued building his case against the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) leadership. On August 1, after 18 months of non-cooperation, Evangelist Stanley Rader finally acceded to questioning.

RADER'S DEPOSITION

The 143 questions asked by deputies of Attorney General George Deukmejian centered around Rader's personal finances in relation to the church. During questioning Rader admitted that he did receive income from Mid-Atlantic Leasing, which leased aircraft to the church. He also admitted receiving income from Worldwide Advertising, Inc., a company that purchases air time for the Armstrong broadcasts and in which Rader is part owner. But when asked if the church paid for redecorating his Beverly Hills home, Rader's answer was "no." (Compare this to p. 63 of "Fleecing the Flock" in our large 1977 Ambassador Report.)

While many WCG documents requested by the attorney general have been turned over, many have not. The WCG had been given until September 3 to turn over all documents requested by the state investigators, but numerous documents have been withheld. Among those documents unreleased are minutes of church and college board meetings. Church attorney Allan Browne has openly stated that those papers will not be turned over.

PETRIS BILL PASSED

On Aug. 26, the California State Senate gave final approval to the Petris bill, SB1493 (see our last newsletter). The new law will greatly restrict future investigations by the state attorney general of groups claiming to be religious. The bill's passage is a major defeat for many anti-cult groups who opposed the bill. Attorney General Deukmejian also strongly opposed the bill and says that although his office still retains the power to prosecute criminal fraud, the new law may effectively strip his office of the power to recover money improperly received or misapplied by church officials. However, four amendments were added to the bill that were not supported by the WCG: (1) the bill's implementation is delayed until June 1, 1981, (2) a provision was added saying that courts should consider financial restitution upon criminal conviction of any individual, (3) the attorney general is allowed to "make inquiry" concerning funds solicited from the general public for specific purposes, and (4) destruction or unauthorized changing of financial records was made punishable under the California penal code.

In addition to the Petris bill, the California state legislature has also passed SB1632, a bill sponsored by State Senator H. L. Richardson of Arcadia. This new law will prohibit the state Franchise Tax Board from removing nonprofit status from church organizations involved in politics or that spend substantial amounts of time "carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation." Some have speculated that the WCG's recent lobbying efforts in Sacramento would cost them their nonprofit status. Obviously this will not now be the case.

Governor Brown's office has indicated that the governor has no intention of vetoing either the Richardson or the Petris bills, and so both will have passed officially by the end of September. However, the Petris bill does not take effect until June, 1981. Some legal experts had speculated that passage of the Petris bill could possibly have an adverse effect on the current investigation of the WCG. But one deputy attorney general has stated privately that his office is now confident the new law will not be a factor in the state's case against the WCG's leadership.

It is interesting that while both the Richardson and Petris bills passed the legislature, the politicians in Sacramento were again unable this year (they've had since 1976) to pass an antismog auto inspection law. And this is in spite of the fact that California is the state with the worst air pollution problems in the nation. That failure will cost California an estimated $850 million in federal funds for highways and sewage system construction, not to mention possible respiratory-health problems for thousands of Californians. Earlier in the year this same legislature was even unable to come up with a state budget, and so for weeks state employees wondered if their paychecks would bounce. Yet, somehow, this legislature found the time to pass both the Petris and Richardson bills.

Perhaps that is because in this election year, the politicians do not want to offend large church denominations with their large blocs of voters. But it should also be remembered that the WCG has carried on a massive lobbying campaign both in Sacramento and via the media.

TWO BOOKS

Part of that media campaign has been Stanley Rader's new book, Against the Gates of Hell ($12.00, published by Everest House), which supposedly tells the story of "persecution" of the WCG by the state of California and Stanley's battles to protect the flock. The book, which seems multi-author ghost written because of its fluctuating styles, comes complete with background biographical information and photos of Stanley, Herbert, etc. The reviews that we've seen have correctly labeled this book a biased, obviously propagandistic effort. Not surprisingly, bookstores report it is selling very poorly.

It will be interesting to compare the Rader book with another book soon to be published - The Truth Shall Make You Free by John Tuit ($8.00, including postage, available from John Tuit, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold, NJ 07728). Mr. Tuit, one of the original plaintiffs in the state's suit against the WCG, tells us his book covers, in detail, the history of the state's lawsuit up to the present time. It will be available by early November.

ROBINSON BOOK RELEASED

Those of you who have ordered David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web should have received your copies by now.

We reported in our last issue how two WCG members, Sherwin McMichael and Henry Cornwall, were attempting to stop distribution of the Robinson book and how through a temporary restraining order they were, for a time, successful. Robinson tried to get the matter into federal court. But he suffered a devastating defeat when U.S. District Judge James O. Ellison ruled that Robinson's arguments were "frivolous" and that Robinson's lawyer had tried to move the suit from state to federal court in "bad faith." Robinson was ordered to pay $352 in court costs and $6,000 in legal fees to the lawyers of McMichael and Cornwall. Said Robinson at the time, "I don't know what I'm going to do now. This is just unbelievable! I can't believe this is happening in this country." But even though he lacked funds, Robinson didn't lack faith. He fought on.

Back in the state court system, the case was put under the jurisdiction of Judge Richard Comfort. On July 18 he granted a request by Robinson's new attorneys that the plaintiffs post a $25,000 bond to cover legal expenses in the event the order barring the book was dissolved.

It was at this point that the plaintiffs' attorney, James Kincaid claimed that the plaintiffs were not really attempting to stop the Robinson book but only wanted a "prepublication review." He said, "We ask that there be a review of the publication by the judge to the extent that if confidential information is divulged, that information be deleted." But James Sturdivant, one of Robinson's attorneys, angrily responded that pre-publication review "is the Harvard word for censorship" (The Tulsa Tribune, July 18, 1980). (Kincaid is a graduate of Harvard, as is Laurence Tribe, who represents the WCG against the state of California.)

On Monday, July 21, the first day of the hearing, Comfort's Tulsa County courtroom remained open to the press although Comfort had earlier indicated he might close it to protect the plaintiffs' privacy. But on Monday, despite repeated objections from Kincaid - and a 10-minute recess during which Comfort considered a motion to close the hearing - the judge ruled he saw no compelling reason to oust the public and the press which jammed the hearing.

During the hearing, which lasted from 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., plaintiffs McMichael and Cornwall claimed, under oath, that an unwritten code of confidentiality between ministers existed and that it would be breached if Robinson were allowed to distribute his book. But under cross examination, McMichael, whom Sturdivant referred to as the "church gossip," admitted he never had any conversation with Robinson about their discussions remaining private. "It never occurred to me," said McMichael. McMichael also admitted that he was asked by the church "executive officers" to become a party to the lawsuit. Both Cornwall and McMichael admitted, under questioning by Sturdivant, that the WCG was paying their expenses to and from Tulsa (The Tulsa Tribune, July 22, 1980).

Cornwall, speaking with a noticeable French accent (perhaps this is why Herbert Armstrong often refers to his constant companion as "Frenchy"), stated, "My church has taught me that the only one who could judge me is Jesus Christ. If you do not retain the confidentiality of these discussions, it would be disastrous because you would be depriving the flock of its shepherds."

But four ex-WCG members - C. Wayne Cole, Ron Dart, Guy Carnes, and Benny Sharp - testified that they knew of no formal bond of confidence or implied confidentiality contract while they were members of the WCG.

The next day, at 9:30 a.m., Judge Comfort announced his decision. The temporary, restraining order blocking distribution of the Robinson book was to be lifted. But, Comfort stayed the order to allow an appeal to the Oklahoma Supreme Court. Full implementation of the stay required the plaintiffs to post a $400,000 bond by noon the next day to cover any legal expenses incurred by Robinson should their appeal fail. By noon of the next day the plaintiffs had still not posted the required amount, and the temporary restraining order was finally lifted.

Judge Comfort was apparently very pleased that the matter was finally out of his court. He told reporters that the case may have been the toughest in his seven-year judgeship. Said Comfort, "The reading material in this case was equivalent to a full semester of reading in law school. The portions of the book plaintiffs wanted stricken alone required four hours of reading Monday night." The case itself may prove historic. As one Robinson attorney pointed out ten days before the book was released, "This case is already making legal history, because this is the longest a book not involved in national security has ever been restrained."

A jubilant David Robinson took possession of his book shipment and immediately began filling orders. Robinson, who pastors the Tulsa Church of God, International (in contact with, but separately incorporated from the Garner Ted Armstrong group), told the Report, "We've gone through some rough times lately, but I had faith in the rightness of our position. I feel we've done the honorable thing in every way. And because of it, we have enjoyed remarkable favor within the community of Tulsa. They never were able to show during the hearings that there was a single untruth in the book. Overall, I guess the church's attack on us was a blessing in disguise. We've certainly gotten a lot of free publicity due to their harassment. Really when you think about it, they did a very stupid thing in starting their lawsuit."

Although Robinson's book has finally been released, Robinson's legal fight with the WCG is not over. The temporary restraining order against him has been lifted, but the lawsuit is still pending. And while McMichael and Cornwall would apparently prefer not to continue their battle, Robinson has taken the offensive and countersued both of them, Herbert Armstrong, Stan Rader, and Ralph Helge for $50 million, alleging they have "maliciously abused and harassed him" and deprived him of his rights to freedom of speech and religion.

Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web ($10.00, John Hadden Publishers, P.O. Box 35982, Tulsa, OK 74135) is the most revealing expose to come out on the WCG since our large 1977 Ambassador Report. We find it significant that Herbert Armstrong has yet to deny the many shocking allegations made against him in this book. Our limited space in this issue prohibits us from doing a lengthy review or running quotes as we had planned. But we do recommend the book highly to all who've had an association with the Worldwide Church of God.

TRAGEDIES IN THE NEWS

We were very sorry to hear of the drug overdose suicide of Mrs. Penny Walker on July 10. Mrs. Walker, wife of Larry Walker, the WCG's minister in Eugene, Oregon, was reportedly distraught over current events and church prophecies. She left behind two children and was pregnant at the time of her death.

Another recent tragedy was the suicide death of former baseball player Danny Thomas. Readers may remember that Thomas became a national figure with the Milwaukee Brewers in 1977 when his religion and career came into conflict and the story made the nation's sports pages. As a member of the WCG, Thomas refused to play ball from Friday sunset to Saturday sunset. The media called him "The Sunset Kid."

Rader seems to extend peace bid to Deukmejian

By DICK LLOYD

Staff Writer

Stanley R. Rader, under investigation for alleged misuse of assets of the Worldwide Church of God, seemed to extend an olive branch to the attorney general Tuesday in what appears an invitation to end the lawsuit without a trial.

The beleaguered church treasurer announced he will not succeed radio and television evangelist Herbert W. Armstrong as head of the church, and he will resign all church offices and enter private law practice as soon as the lawsuit is ended.

At the same time, Rader revealed he no longer has a contract with the church and does not have a contract that will pay him salary or benefits beyond the lifespan of Armstrong as he previously held. He does retain a contract for personal service to Armstrong, however, Rader said.

Rader did not indicate what his present salary is under the new arrangement. Under the previous contract, which is part of the attorney general's investigation, Rader was paid $200,000 per year and was guaranteed that in the event of Armstrong's death, disability or retirement Rader would continue to receive $100,000 per year until the year 2003 as a consultant.

Rader discounted sentiment that his action is an effort to appease the attorney general, but he challenged the state to drop the lawsuit nevertheless.

"All he (Attorney General George Deukmejian) has to do is say, 'I drop the suit against everyone, and see what happens...'" end, then I am more than willing to return to private practice," Rader said.

"If (the attorney general) questions my good faith concerning this issue, he can put it to the test by simply dropping all his lawsuits against everybody with prejudice, then see what happens."

But as long as the lawsuit remains in effect, Rader said, he will continue to fight the attorney general until he is "on bended knee." Rader acknowledged that the lawsuit could continue for as long as six or eight years and in that event he will continue to remain in his present capacity for that length of time.

Rather than extending an olive branch, Rader said he made the announcement to dispel rumors and innuendos that he plans to take over as head of the church and that his defense against the state lawsuit is a personal effort to protect his income.

His determination to defend against the lawsuit has made his motives suspect in the eyes of some, he said.

"There are those who believe I am self-serving or personally ambitious. But they are wrong. The only thing I want for myself is a return to private life. I welcome the light because I believe it is a good fight. With all my heart and soul I believe in the rightness of our cause."

"Under no circumstances will I succeed Mr. Armstrong as head of the Worldwide Church of God under Jesus Christ," Rader told a press conference.

He acknowledged that some members of the church also expect him to succeed Armstrong, but that "is not remotely possible."

"Under no circumstances will I succeed Mr. Armstrong as head of the Worldwide Church of God under Jesus Christ," Rader told a press conference.

He acknowledged that some members of the church also expect him to succeed Armstrong, but that "is not remotely possible."

"I am not even worthy," he said. "I am not qualified to serve Christ in that way. It is not my calling to serve Christ in that way. It is not my desire to succeed Mr. Armstrong, and most important, I do not believe it is God's will that I do so." Rader said.

Asked if anyone is being groomed to succeed Armstrong, Rader said no, although he said there are many ministers in the church who are able. The fact is, he said, he expects Armstrong to continue in his work until Christ returns to the earth.

"I do not expect anyone will succeed Mr. Armstrong," Rader said. "The living God has charged him with a great commission to fulfill and I believe he will complete that work. God has never taken a man before his work was done."

Rader said he will never leave the church, but he will resign his paid positions and his ministry. Several months ago he was ordained a minister and evangelist in the church.

Upon returning to private life, he said, he hopes to devote the remainder of his working life to public service, "perhaps in a governmental capacity."

Rader said he does not anticipate the return of Armstrong's son, Garner Ted Armstrong, to lead the church.

It is believed that Armstrong's removal of his son from the church precipitated the lawsuit that charges Rader, the elder Armstrong and others with siphoning millions of dollars of church funds into personal use.

The above article appeared in the Pasadena Star News, Wednesday, September 10. As you read it, keep in mind:

- (1) If the attorney general drops his lawsuit "with prejudice," the suit could not be reopened.
- (2) If Rader fulfilled his end of the above "deal," it would still not result in the return of monies allegedly siphoned off from the church.
- (3) Rader's "promises" are only as good as a politician's pre-election promises. He could legally change his mind or perhaps "God" will reveal a different course later on.
- (4) Rader's claim that he will not succeed HWA as head of the WCG is pointless because, as we pointed out in our last issue, the Worldwide Church of God Inc. is no longer HWA's legal power base. The new "corporation sole" is. Even Rader admits that he does now have a contract with HWA. So the lack of a contract with Worldwide is of no significance -although, undoubtedly, many church members will be duped into thinking it is.
- (5) Note that Rader speculates on his entering "governmental" public service after resigning from the ministry.

According to a friend, it was around that time that his emotional problems began. Soon afterward, he quit baseball. Troubles seemed to increase for Danny until this year when he was having serious psychiatric, career, and legal troubles.

A close friend told a reporter: "He was a super guy, but he just snapped. He just couldn't handle the pressure.... Danny was sick. You wouldn't believe how sick he was... His mind just wasn't functioning right. And he used to be so sharp, his mind just clicked all the time.... When he died he had no respect for himself whatsoever. It looked like Danny had just given up."

Thomas, 28, left behind his wife Judy - his college sweetheart - and three children, Renee 7, Seth 3, and Annie 5 months.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Evangelist Roderick C. Meredith has been allowed to return from his exile in Hawaii and is now permitted to teach classes at Ambassador College again. His name has been returned to the staff box of The Plain Truth but only as a "senior writer," along with Jeff Calkins, Keith Stump, etc. Insiders say it is unlikely he will ever again be allowed a position of real responsibility in the church hierarchy. Said one long-time friend, "They've emasculated him."

One name you do not see in The Plain Truth staff box any longer is that of evangelist David Jon Hill. He refused to sign the new mandatory employment agreement and is no longer an employee of the Armstrong organization. Another minister who refused to sign the new contract was Bruce Vance, who has now left the Armstrong church.

Walter H. Scull, of New Jersey, a WCG local elder for 10 years, recently wrote to us: "Please add my name to the list of ex-elders of the WCG. I left. When I came into the church in 1965, I thought that HWA was either an authentic man of God or the biggest con man there ever was. I then believed the former, but now am convinced of the latter. Please keep up the good work of exposing this fraud."

Former WCG minister Richard Plache is now pastor of the First Christian Church of National City, California. Interestingly, this church is denominationally related to the one in which he was a minister before his sojourn in Armstrongism. For those who are interested, Plache's church publishes a small weekly newsletter called the National City Harbor Light (1800 E. 17th St., Box 296, National City, CA 92050). It contains synopses of Mr. Plache's Sunday sermons.

We were saddened to learn of the recent death of Mrs. Ledru (Shirley) Woodbury. Mr. Woodbury, pastor of the Church of God of Fruita, Colorado (1241 Twenty Rd., Fruita, CO 81521, see our Nov. 1979 newsletter) wrote to us, telling us the sad news. He also mentioned that his group would be keeping the Feast of Tabernacles in Denver this fall and that: "many local autonomy groups are springing up all across the country like popcorn. The shepherd is smitten, and the sheep are being scattered. You may have to add another page to your publication if you list them all."

DR. MARTIN NOT A SCHOLAR

At a WCG board meeting in December 1971, Dr. Ernest L. Martin explained to those assembled why that church's 19-year-time-cycle prophecy was erroneous and would fail. For the most part, the group listened attentively. The 19-year-time-cycle idea was based on astronomical data, so he quoted Jeremiah 10:2: "...be not dismayed at the signs of heaven; for the heathen are dismayed at them." Herbert Armstrong became furious and angrily denounced him. On that and other occasions HWA has pooh poohed Dr. Martin's studies by saying Martin is simply "not a scholar."

So it should be of no surprise to any of us that Ernest Martin's work is now gaining recognition from internationally renowned scientists and historians. His work on dating the birth of Jesus Christ has been the subject of very favorable reviews by leading scholars and was recently the topic of three important gatherings of leaders in the scientific community.

Isn't it ironic that Herbert Armstrong, who has claimed to be bringing the true gospel to the world, has actually brought not only confusion to his church but given religion in general a notorious reputation. Yet Martin, who does not even wish to evangelize, has, in fact, brought the Bible - with increased credibility - to many influential scholars who would otherwise not have given it much serious attention. We think the contrast is noteworthy.

Space does not permit us to go into detail hereon Dr. Martin's work. But the Foundation for Biblical Research (P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102) has literature explaining Dr. Martin's research on this subject and its recent reception by scholars. Incidentally, the Foundation also publishes numerous free booklets of interest to those studying the Bible. We have received hundreds of letters over the years from people who have commented on how they've benefited from the Foundation's literature.

OUR SHORT ISSUE

We regret that this issue of Ambassador Report must be so brief. We have quite a bit of important information we'd like to disseminate, but our financial situation has made it impossible to publish our usual lengthy newsletter.

During the last few months, contributions to our publication efforts have fallen off dramatically. Undoubtedly, our nation's economy is partly the reason. But perhaps we have not done enough to make known our needs. We hate to ask for your assistance each issue or to always include return envelopes with every newsletter. But by not doing so, many apparently suspect we are "rich and increased with goods." We are not. We have again had to go in the red to get out even this small issue.

We do think there is both a real need for and an interest in Ambassador Report. During the last three months we have had more requests for the Report than ever before: so many, in fact, that we have had to have second printings of both of our last two newsletters and still we have not been financially able to fill all requests.

Perhaps the answer is to put a price on the Report, but we'd prefer not to. By operating the way we have, the Report has gone to many more WCG members, relatives of members, news people, churches, colleges, and former members than would have been the case had we only sent issues to contributors.

But still, it does take money to publish. We do hope those of you who appreciate our work will continue to support our efforts.

Sincerely,
The Publishers

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR14 Dec. 1, 1980

Dear Friends:

Most of you will have already heard that with just a few days to go before Herbert Armstrong's scheduled deposition, the attorney general of California dropped his lawsuit against the Worldwide Church of God. Some readers have written us that their local newspapers covered this story only briefly, so here is a recap of what happened:

RADER OUTMANEUVERS CALIFORNIA

In our last newsletter we wrote how the so-called Petris bill (SB1493) - intended to limit the state attorney general's power in investigations of religious corporations had been passed by the California legislature and had gone to Governor Brown's desk for signing. Based on comments from sources in the attorney general's office, we were confident the bill would not have any effect on the state's lawsuit against Rader and company.

We were wrong. And so were many legal experts in California - including many of the legislators who helped pass the bill and who had stated it would not effect pending cases. Even after the Petris bill passed, a number of prominent attorneys expressed the opinion that the Petris law was probably unconstitutional anyway because (1) it takes away certain powers granted the state attorney general by the state's constitution, and (2) it grants religious nonprofit corporations special privileges not granted nonprofit organizations in general, thereby violating the principle of church-state separation. The majority of the attorney general's deputies were themselves confident the suit would continue on to a successful conclusion, especially considering the large amount of work that had already been done on the case.

Nevertheless, on Oct. 14, California Attorney General George Deukmejian announced that he was dropping his case against the Worldwide Church of God's leadership. Ironically, Deukmejian's announcement came just hours after the U.S. Supreme Court once again refused to hear arguments by the WCG's lawyers that state prosecutors acted unconstitutionally in their seizure of church records.

That afternoon, a jubilant Stanley Rader, returning to the Los Angeles area after a trip to northern California, was met at the airport by a throng of wildly cheering followers who were ecstatic over the news. The next day, at a press conference, Rader stated, "Mr. Armstrong and I and the church as a whole feel that in the state legislature and in the governor's office we have been vindicated legally and morally." Rader actually heaped praise on Deukmejian for "moral courage" and for being "a man of his word." He also praised the state legislature, which he described as the guardian of the public against excesses of the judiciary.

It is interesting that just a few days before, Rader had stated to the Pasadena Star-News:

"If the attorney general were an honorable man, it [the lawsuit] would come to an end. But the attorney general is not an honorable man. He is not bound by the constitution. So I don't think he will drop the case. He hasn't proved to me that he can deal with the truth" (Oct. 2, 1980).

But Deukmejian did drop the case and with that Rader's tune has changed. Since then, the WCG has run full-page ads in California newspapers praising Deukmejian as "a man of his word."

WHY THE CASE WAS DROPPED

When Deukmejian announced on Oct. 14 that the state's suit against Worldwide was being dropped, the reason given was that the Petris law has curtailed his power to the point that the suit could never be brought to a successful end. Under the law, he said, the attorney general will be able to prosecute for fraud only. He cannot recover money improperly received or misapplied by church officials. He felt that the case against the WCG's leadership could not be completed before June 1 when the Petris law officially goes into effect. Thus continuing the suit would only mean wasting money on a suit that would have to be discontinued on that date.

Deukmejian's explanation seems logical enough, but many have not taken it at face value. One theory is that state officials feared another Jonestown tragedy if the suit continued. With so much talk in the WCG about fleeing to Petra, such a theory makes at least a little sense.

Some have seen international conspiracy overtones to Deukmejian's decision. Of course, anything is possible, but we have not seen any real evidence to support this theory.

Another theory - one widely held by numerous individuals knowledgeable of California politics - is that because Deukmejian hopes to run for governor of California in 1982, he could not politically afford a continuance of the constant media bombardment he has received from Rader in the last two years. That onslaught of negative publicity has included almost weekly full-page ads in the state's biggest newspapers attacking Deukmejian personally as a persecutor of religion. Had the state's lawsuit continued, very likely the ads would have continued also - and probably with increased regularity and harshness as 1982 approached. Keep in mind that Deukmejian not only dropped the suit against the WCG but investigations of eleven other groups including Eugene Scott's Faith Center and the Synanon Foundation. Remember, too, that the Petris bill had been supported by many of the largest religious organizations in the state. Deukmejian was perhaps passing the buck a little, but he still showed some awareness of public opinion when he said on Oct. 14: "7b pursue these cases would be contrary to the most recent expression of public policy by the legislature and the governor."

Then there are those who believe the Petris bill gave Deukmejian a convenient excuse to bow out of some cases he never relished in the first place. After all, he really inherited the WCG case from his predecessor, state attorney general Evelle Younger. And being a conservative Republican, one would suspect his political philosophy might include minimal involvement of government in the affairs of all organizations, especially religious ones.

Considering the many crime problems in California today and the state's current budget limitations, one could put forth numerous arguments why the state should not waste its limited time and resources trying to straighten out an organization such as the WCG. Nevertheless, there are many who have been very disappointed by the Deukmejian decision. Many newspaper and electronic media editorials have lambasted both the Petris law and Deukmejian's decision. And already there are a significant number of prominent citizens calling for a revision of the Petris law and the resumption of the lawsuits and investigations dropped by Deukmejian.

Mr. John Tuit, one of the originators of the WCG lawsuit, is very disappointed, but not surprised, that the suit was dropped. In an interview with the Pasadena Star-News (Oct. 16, 1980), Mr. Tuit said of the investigation:

"A lot of good has come from this. It brought the entire operation of the church into the open. The conduct of the leadership was so contrary to the teachings of the church. They have now put out their most detailed financial statement ever. Salaries are now open.... It lets members decide if they want their leaders to make $300,000 a year, which was not the case before.... Spiritually, the church remains a colossal fraud. And that is an area the attorney general never had any authority to deal with and wouldn't anyway...."

"I share the same concerns of others that the ultimate effect of the Petris bill will make California a haven for all kinds of charlatans to use religion as a cover for financial rip-off schemes. And if there is a backlash to that, I would feel that a backlash could be truly repressive to religions."

Tuit is not the only one who feels the Petris bill will have disastrous consequences. Tony Cimarusti, an assistant to Deukmejian, said: "Our feeling is that it (the Petris bill) will leave people unprotected from any religious organization which may wish to rip off the people. We have opposed it on those grounds in the public interest."

Hillel Chodos, who served as a member of the State Commission on Judicial Performance, said: "The bill-would permit anyone to just call himself a religious corporation, and in effect, whatever financial transactions he had with that corporation and donations would be exempt from investigation or supervision by anyone. I think that is bad for religion and bad for the public.... For mainline churches to think they can take billions from the public and not account for it is really offensive" (Pasadena StarNews, Sept. 28, 1980).

The Petris law sharply limits the California attorney general's authority to investigate religious organizations. The new law takes away the attorney general's right to investigate tax-exempt religious organizations for misuse of funds or internal civil fraud. His office will now only be able to prosecute tax-exempt religious organizations charged with criminal violations. Under the Petris law the attorney general could investigate a church that solicits money from the public for one purpose and uses it for something else. But no suits would be allowed for investigating improper uses of internal church funds, either for personal benefit or for activities not related to church functions. (One immediately senses the gargantuan semantical problems inherent in this ill-conceived law.) Only members of the governing body of a church can now bring legal action for internal civil fraud. In hierarchical churches, such as the Catholic church, the Mormon church, Synanon, and the Worldwide Church of God, members would not have standing to sue for misuse of money by church directors. Such suits, however, could be filed by congregational churches whose members have voting rights within their church. Deukmejian's chief legislative lobbyist, Rod Blonien, says that as a result "suits against hierarchical churches for wrongfully diverting church funds would be virtually impossible, since directors are unlikely to sue themselves" (Pasadena Star-News, Sept. 20, 1980).

WHAT NOW?

So is this the end of the WCG's legal battles? Stanley Rader says no. He says he plans to continue his nationwide advertising campaign and to settle a few scores. Using biblical text to justify retribution and claiming he wanted vindication, not vengeance, Rader said lawsuits will be launched against some. They will include Judge Jerry Pacht, who Rader says accused him "of having found Jesus Christ, money, and salvation at the same time." Hillel Chodos still faces a continuing lawsuit by Rader, who charges him with personal slander. And although the WCG plans to drop its $1 billion lawsuit against the State of California, it is still refusing to comply with a court decision to pay the fees charged by the court appointed receiver.

In our last newsletter we mentioned the likelihood of the so-called Richardson bill (SB1632) becoming law. That law would have prohibited state tax officials from stripping a church of its tax-exempt status for being involved in political activities. Surprisingly, that bill was vetoed by Governor Brown. Does that mean that the WCG might find itself losing its nonprofit corporate status? Not likely. Legal experts say the state has no desire to tangle with the WCG in the near future if it can help it.

What about criminal charges? For two years, the air has been thick with rumors of supposedly soon-to-come indictments against WCG leaders. Here again, nothing is likely to occur. The amount of material collected by the attorney general's office is massive. Yet, the deputies of the Attorney General have stated privately they have no confidence whatsoever that they would get a conviction against Rader, HWA, or anyone else in the WCG for anything because to do so they must prove criminal intent, and that is difficult to do.

What all this means is this: With the exception of a few lawsuits, the WCG's leadership is now free and clear of any major legal problems. You might remember how just a few weeks ago Rader publicly promised Deukmejian that if the state's suit was dropped, he would resign from his executive position with the WCG and from the ministry and go into private (legal) practice. So will Rader now resign his position as promised? That question was put to him at a news conference. Rader's reply: "As soon as all the dust has settled, I would like to return to a more private life.... And when my reputation is returned to me. [But] that could take years" (Star-News, Oct. 16, 1980).

$1,000,000 OFFERING TO EGYPT

Within days of the attorney general's Oct. 14 announcement, Herbert Armstrong and Stanley Rader were in the Middle East for meetings with Prime Minister Begin of Israel and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt. During the discussions with Sadat, Herbert Armstrong pledged to contribute $1 million of church funds to the nation of Egypt. The Pasadena Star-News wrote on Nov. 14:

"Herbert W. Armstrong, pastor general of the Worldwide Church of God in Pasadena, and his chief deputy Stanley R. Rader Tuesday pledged $1 million to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and presented the president with an initial $100,000 contribution.

"The million-dollar pledge was made during a televised conference between Armstrong, Rader and Sadat at the Giza Residential [sic] Palace this week. Their talk concerned Middle East problems and will be aired around the United States in a special televised program at a later date.

"During the discussion, Armstrong was invited by Sadat to join with him in the Mt. Sinai World Peace Project. Armstrong and Rader held an audience with Prime Minister Begin of Israel the preceding day."

The Los Angeles Times reported (Nov. 22, 1980) that the $1 million would go toward the construction of a $60 million "tri-faith religious complex" consisting of a church, mosque, and synagogue.

One WCG member commented, "I thought the Bible tells us to come out of Egypt, not to go back to Egypt with offerings!" Nevertheless, the vast majority of WCG members are apparently genuinely pleased with this church announcement, even though using church funds to build a religious complex seems contrary to long-standing church policy and practice of not supporting or dealing with other religious groups, which have been branded as "false churches" and "of the devil."

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENTS-ONE CHEER FOR RADER

The annual financial report for the WCG, AC, and the AICF is now public record, and the 8-page report (done by the reputable accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co.) is top quality and very professionally presented. We must admit we were pleasantly surprised that Treasurer Stan Rader printed the whole report with all the footnotes - just as large U.S. corporations are required to do by law. We want to commend and congratulate him for doing so. For years we have urged the WCG to reveal its financial reports in a professional format without editing, combining, and/or deleting huge portions, and we finally got our wish. We are happy to see the WCG and Stan Rader in the forefront of U.S. churches in revealing their financial inner workings publicly. (We have long advocated that all churches claiming to represent God should be more than happy to publish their audited financial statements because (1) they claim to be godly and hence should have nothing to hide, and (2) they solicit contributions from the public and hence should be publicly accountable.)

We have long felt the WCG should regularly produce an accurate report of its current finances. Once this is done, it becomes each member's responsibility to decide whether or not he or she wishes to continue supporting it. But if no financial reports are available, the member is severely hampered in making this key decision.

Now for a few comments on the 1978-79 financial statements. In 1979 total current assets rose 27.3%, while current liabilities increased by only 15.2%. The current portion of long-term debt fell by 13.4%. The chief reason for these favorable percentages was that 1979 revenue (receipts) exceeded expenses by $674,000, or by 1%. (In 1978 expenses outpaced revenues by a whopping $4.9 million, or 7.8%.)

Quest magazine and Everest House Publishers, however, continue to be a drain on church revenues. Though Quest/Everest House took in 32% more revenue ($5.1 million in 1979 vs. $3.9 million in 1978), they spent 21% more money ($9.4 million in 1979 vs. $7.8 million in 1978) for a deficit of $4.3 million. ("Management and general" expenses aren't included in this category, or the deficit would be even larger.) Furthermore, revenue from performing arts rose 44% ($607,000 to $875,000), but expenses for performing arts also rose from $1.6 million to $1.72 million (up 8%), which means the church is now spending almost twice as much money for the performing arts as the arts are producing in revenue. But management costs for the AICF declined 42% ($1.24 million to $0.72 million), showing that a genuine attempt is being made to cut soaring AICF costs.

The AICF's costs, however, have been out of control since its inception in 1975. What is significant is that the AICF gave a total of $1,093,000 in "grants and charitable support" for the years of 1978-79. In view of the fact that the New Testament church was commanded to help the poor and needy, it seems noble of the AICF to give over $1 million to charity. But when you examine the financial data behind this $1 million charitable "gift," a far different picture emerges and you realize the WCG is playing tricks with figures. Here's what's actually happening:

In 1978-79, according to the "Annual Financial Report," the AICF, the church's charity arm, spent $23.6 million for Quest, Everest House, the performing arts, "grants and charitable support," and "management and general," but these activities produced only $10.7 million in revenues. To cover this massive cost overrun, the church had to give the AICF a cash infusion of $12.2 million from money already donated as charity to the church in the first place. So when all was said and done, it cost the church almost $12 million in charity funds to enable the AICF to donate $1 million to charity. That would be like spending $12 million at the race track betting on horses and coming home with $1 million left out of the $12 million and exclaiming, "Hey, everybody, look: I won $1 million at the track:" (By contrast, the Los Angeles March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation spent just $16.3% of its revenue in fiscal 1979-80 for expenses, with 83.7% of the honey raised going to the people in need.)

Some wonder why the church doesn't just shut down the AICF and give the $12 million directly to charity. But, of course, we realize that the church puts a higher value on the prestige and publicity generated by the AICF and Quest than it puts on charitable donations.

There are some interesting tidbits buried in the extensive footnotes that should be noticed: Note 4b states that "85 percent of all contributions to the Church were received by the Corporations Sole." Note 5a reveals that equipment, furnishings, and art items worth $329,000 are "maintained in both owned and non-owned private homes (principally Mr. Armstrong's)." Note 5a also mentions that the prospective buyer of the Big Sandy, Texas, campus was unable to come up with the funds to complete the transaction, and so the WCG kept the $500,000 security deposit posted by the buyer. If the WCG had not counted the $500,000 as revenue in 1979, its revenue would have been that much lower.

Note 8 made this comment on the State of California's lawsuit against the WCG: "In the opinion of special counsel, the likelihood of the relief sought by the State of California being granted and sustained on appeal in a final judgment and having a material adverse effect upon the operations of the Church, College, and Foundation is remote." Note 8a points out that the organization has "been named as defendants in various other lawsuits, some of which involve claims for substantial damages," but "in the opinion of management and in-house counsel, such lawsuits are either without merit or the liability for any recovery in excess of insurance coverage is remote." Note 8b declares that Herbert Armstrong's salary over the next 7 years was raised from $200,000/yr. to $258,000/yr., a 29% raise. In addition to this salary, he receives "a parsonage allowance, the use of an automobile, the payment of corporate expenses incurred, and certain lifetime survivor benefits." It is stated that in addition to his $200,000 salary in 1978 and 1979, he received $106,000 and $179,000. Rader, we discover, was given an extra $162,000 above his $200,000 1979 salary, and he obtained a $20,000 raise for the next 7 years to $220,000/yr.

Footnote 10 reveals that the church has no pension plan but is presently providing benefits "on a discretionary, case-by-case basis" to "selected former employees at a cost of $309,000 and $294,000 for the years ended December 31, 1979 and 1978." We would hope the church would change this arbitrary and discriminatory payment system into a fair and legitimate pension system that serves all its employees' needs.

CHURCH'S FINANCIAL POWER ERODING

Even though the church's finances in 1979 ended up in the black for the first time in three years, the church's yearly income is still not keeping pace with the inflation rate. This means that its real purchasing power is slowly eroding, and with a slow loss of purchasing power comes a corresponding loss of ability to influence the public and market its product (the Armstrong religion). The graph below illustrates the ruinous effect of inflation on the WCG. Notice that in 1972, the WCG took in $54.3 million.

This became $56.0 million in 1973, $67.2 million in 1977, $63.5 million in 1978, and $66.4 million in 1979 - see solid line on graph (data for 1974, 1975, and 1976 was never made public by the WCG). The dotted line shows how much revenue the WCG would have taken in if its income in 1972 had grown at the same rate as the rate of inflation. The dashed lines indicate church expenses, which in 1977 and 1978 were in excess of revenues. So the graph makes it plain that, even though the WCG had a 1% increase in revenue over 1978, it must obtain a far greater percentage increase in revenue than 1% if it is to keep up with inflation. As the graph shows, had the WCG's revenues been keeping pace with inflation since 1972, they would have been $98.6 million in 1979 instead of only $66.4 million.

One reason the WCG's revenues are not growing at a faster rate is found in Note 2 of the Annual Financial Report. It states that the number of co-workers (nonmembers who contribute at least twice during a six-month period) supporting the WCG declined from 36,000 in 1978 to 30,000 in 1979, a 16.7% drop, and that donors (other nonmember contributors) declined from 90,000 in 1978 to 60,000 in 1979, a 33.3% drop. These figures indicate that the WCG's future growth will be severely hampered unless this trend is reversed because new tithe-paying members are usually drawn from the available pool of donors and co-workers, and this pool is rapidly declining.

MEASLES OUTBREAK CAUSED BY WCG MEMBERS

In late August, newspapers around the country carried the following Associated Press report:

N.Y. County Measles Outbreak Tied to Religious Sect Members

"ATLANTA- A measles outbreak in Erie County, N.Y., last spring and summer was caused mainly by members of a religious sect who were not vaccinated, public health authorities said Friday.

"The national Center for Disease Control said 39 of 112 patients who were stricken with the disease from March through June were members of the group.

"Dr. Richard Judelsohn, communicable disease control officer for Erie County, said in a telephone interview at Buffalo that the 39 were members of the Worldwide Church of God in West Seneca, a Buffalo suburb."

Of course, as long-time AR readers know, Herbert Armstrong and his entourage have gotten vaccinated whenever foreign travel laws required them to do so, even though members were, for years, admonished to avoid vaccinations because the practice was Satanic and because the vaccines were nothing but "monkey pus" and "other filth" (The Good News, Oct. 1959, p. 6).

WCG HIRES THIEF?

The St. Petersburg Times reported on September 6:

Jones Finds A New Job

"Former Dade County School Supt. Johnny Jones, fired after his conviction on grand theft charges in the so-called gold plumbing caper, has found a new job. Jones agreed Thursday to run a Liberty City community center operated by the Congress of Racial Equality. The center, offering legal aid and other community assistance, will be started with a $100,000 grant from the conservative, predominantly white Worldwide Church of God. Jones was convicted of using school funds to outfit a vacation home with nearly $9,000 in luxury plumbing, some gold-plated. Jones said he views the new job as an opportunity to bring about social change by encouraging blacks and Haitians to help themselves."

FARMER STILL BATTLES TO KEEP FARM

You may recall how in our Nov. 19, 1979, newsletter we included a news item about Wisconsin farmer George McElroy's court fight to keep the WCG from taking his farm. A jury voted in his favor.

But Mr. McElroy, 66, wrote to us recently that, as could be expected, the WCG is appealing that decision and is still fighting hard to obtain full possession of his land.

FBI FINALLY CAPTURES ARMSTRONG FOLLOWER FRANKLIN

As many of you will have noticed from reading your local papers, on Oct. 28, after an extensive nationwide manhunt, the FBI finally captured Joseph Paul Franklin-the man sought for the attempted murder of civil riots activist Vernon Jordan and for the alleged murder of eight black men and two white women.

What many may not have realized is that Franklin is an Armstrong follower. The Los Angeles Times reported on Oct. 7 (Part I, page 5):

"The man sought in the sniper slayings of eight black men and two white women had fantasies about being a motorcycle gang member, crying spells and headaches and physically abused her during a brief marriage, his former wife told the Times Monday.

"Bobbie Louise, now 29, asked that her last name not be used. She said that Joseph Paul Franklin - then James Clayton Vaughan Jr. - sometimes stood rigidly before a mirror, giving a 'Heil, Hitler' salute and posing in boots, blue jeans and denim vest with a swastika insignie, a heavy chain fastened to his belt.

"...an aunt in Mobile had told the Times in an interview that Franklin said he had become a follower of evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong in 1969, one year after Bobbie and her husband were divorced.

"'That just goes to show you how easily led he was,' Bobbie said. 'He never talked about religion around me. A church was the last thing I would have expected him to join. But now it looks like he was anxious to belong to anything.'"

AMBASSADOR AUDITORIUM PRESENTS...

The Ambassador Auditorium is a beautiful building, and some of the performances that take place there are undoubtedly of the finest quality. But sometimes even music critics wonder at some of the goings on there. For instance here is an excerpt from a Los Angeles Times (Oct. 19, 1980) review of a Martha Graham Dancers performance at Ambassador Auditorium (otherwise known as the "House for God"):

"The novelty of the evening took the quasi-deja-vu form of 'Judith,' a recent reworking of a solo first devised by Graham in 1950 (to music of William Schuman) and revised in 1962 (score then by Mordecai Seter). The current incarnation, much expanded, utilizes the familiar erotic-symbolic-primal sculptures of Isamu Noguchi, the gently otherworldly music of Edgar Varese ('Integrales,' 'Offrandes,' 'Octandre') and some dazzling cloaks and body drapes by the ubiquitous Halston.

"It also employs Peggy Lyman in a torturous, often successful Graham imitation as the biblical heroine who first seduces, then destroys the Assyrian warrior Holofernes. There is much artful crouching and contorting and jumping here, most of it symmetrical and meticulously ordered and theatrically mechanical. Lyman broods and stalks imposingly. Wingerd provides a nice naked (well, nearly naked) heroic foil. Judith Garay is raped picturesquely by the intruding warriors. (All this in the cultural home of the Worldwide Church of God!) [The preceding sentence with exclamation point is the reviewer's, not ours.]

"Still, one watches the elaborate play and interplay, the cerebral-sexual competition, the angular athletics, and one thinks ...."

INCEST ALLEGATIONS NOT DENIED

Many AR readers who have read David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web have written to us expressing absolute shock at some of the allegations it contains. Especially disturbing to many are the allegations contained in chapter 20 entitled "Incest."

We sincerely wish that we could report uncovering evidence to negate Mr. Robinson's charges, but unfortunately that is not the case. Herbert Armstrong has not issued any statement discounting the charges, nor has Stan Rader. Dorothy Mattson, Herbert Armstrong's daughter, has not come forward to deny the allegations. And Garner Ted Armstrong has also refused to deny the charges. The Toronto Star, Sept. 20 (p. F4) wrote:

"Contacted by phone in Tyler, Texas, where he heads his own new church, the Church of God International, Garner Ted Armstrong said he had 'no comment' regarding allegations of his father's incest ...."

Since the publication of David Robinson's book, a number of WCG ministers have privately commented that under certain "special circumstances" incest should not be considered a factor in determining a man's qualifications for certain ministerial offices. We find this difficult to fathom but, of course, we are not theologians. Nevertheless, since the publication of Robinson's book, one AR reader thoroughly researched the subject of father-daughter incest and discovered - not surprisingly - that the vast majority of psychiatrists and psychologists today still believe that incest is a sexual aberration with serious psychological consequences for all concerned.

One journal article on the subject was particularly enlightening. Titled "Sexual Abuse of Children: A Clinical Spectrum," the paper appeared in the April 1978 American Journal of Orthopsychiatry. The authors, Roland Summit, M.D., and JoAnn Kryso, M.S.W., begin by writing:

"This paper suggests that incest has been underestimated as a significant determinant of emotional disturbance, and that misuse of sexuality between parents and children can have detrimental consequences that parallel those resulting from other forms of child abuse. The spectrum of parent-child sexuality is classified into ten categories as a guide to the diagnosis, management, and prognosis of sexually abusive behavior."

The paper goes on to medically categorize ten types of incest. Two types are of particular significance:

"7. Imperious Incest

"This category represents a fusion of elements from the ideological, rustic, and misogynous categories. These men set themselves up as emperors in their household domain. They plan out an incredible caricature of the male chauvinist role, requiring wife and daughters to perform acts of sexual fealty. One man, who initiated three daughters into his service, even constructed a throne for himself. The domestic grandiosity seems to compensate for an otherwise mediocre achievement level; such men tend to be displaced from rustic backgrounds, with poor education and few job skills. They may be highly religious, expressing rigid, fundamentalist Christian doctrines and quoting Scriptures to justify their domestic role.

"One such man entered into a sexual relationship with his nine-year-old daughter while functioning as a fundamentalist minister. The mother, an extremely passive woman who made no decisions for herself, refused to intervene, despite repeated entreaties from the girl and an older sister..." (pp. 245-46).

"10. Perverse Incest

"This last category is called 'perverse' or 'pornographic' in the absence of any better superlatives to describe kinky, unfettered lechery. These cases become more bizarre, more frankly erotic, more flagrantly manipulative and destructive than those in earlier categories....

"This group is called pornographic because of an apparent need to go beyond limits of socially acceptable sexual practice to explore whatever is most forbidden, with incest representing the ultimate taboo. Furthermore, the participants may want to record their achievements and to see themselves putting the fantasies into action; diaries, secret confessions, and Polaroid photographs seem to heighten their excitement. We are not suggesting that outside pornography creates the abuses, but rather that the abusers seem caught up in creating their own pornography" (p. 247).

Our AR reader summed up the findings of her research on incest (done as part of a university degree program) with the following statement:

"Each father-daughter incestuous relationship appears to be caused by its own unique mixture of variables determined by the father role and/or mother role and/or daughter role. In general this incest is a symptom of family dysfunction. Yet no matter what the role of the mother or daughter, the father is the one who finally chooses the erotic daughter relationship. He sets the sexual limits and chooses whether to cross over the barrier and commit incest."

HERBERT ARMSTRONG DEMONS?

One of our readers recently showed us a copy of a book entitled Demolishing the Hosts of Hell. Its author is Win Worley, pastor of the Hegewisch Baptist Church of Highland, Indiana. Pastor Worley is a fundamentalist Baptist preacher who takes very literally the Bible's statements on demons. Further, he is looked to by many fundamentalist Christians as a leading exorcist, who claims to have exorcised demons from hundreds of tormented individuals.

We at the Report are not theologians nor have any of us had any experience in the area of demonology. So we do not wish to pass any kind of judgment on Pastor Worley's ministry. However, we did find one section of his book particularly interesting. On page 51 the author writes:

"I will list below some of the demons who have named themselves in the deliverance ministry. It is a frustrating job to attempt to classify the spirits and I was forced to make rather arbitrary placements.

"The names listed were actually given by the demons at the time of deliverances. As strange as they may sound, they are the culprits and describe their work. Perhaps the list will help the reader appreciate more fully the thoroughness with which Satan has infiltrated every area of our personalities, our lives and even our thought life."

The author then goes on to list hundreds of names he claims were given by demons in identifying themselves as he cast them out. Among the names listed - "Herbert Armstrong" (p. 54) .

We're frankly not sure of what significance (if any) this is, but we did find it amusing. For those who might wish to follow up on this, Pastor Worley's books are published by Hegewisch Baptist Church, P.O. Box 626, Lansing, Illinois 60438.

IS HERBERT ARMSTRONG IN PROPHECY?

Is Herbert Armstrong actually mentioned in biblical prophecy? We don't think so. In fact, none of the Report's publishers have in recent years believed Herbert Armstrong to be anything but a crafty religious huckster.

Our readers, however, do not all hold that opinion. For instance one reader writes:

"In a lot of ways I think you guys at Ambassador Report are doing a good job, but in one way you're missing the boat on a really big stony. That is, Herbert Armstrong as prophet. No I don't think he is of God, but I'm convinced he is a prophet - an important one.

"You'll probably think I'm nuts, but a careful study of prophecy has convinced me that HWA or his successor may very well be the False Prophet of Revelation. Here's why:

"The idea - preached by numerous Protestant denominations for years - that a United States of Europe is the Beast of Revelation is ridiculous. The Beast of Revelation is clearly a world-ruling empire, ruled from Jerusalem by a false Messiah. That's why the Bible talks of an Antichrist. 'Anti' doesn't just mean 'against.' It also means 'in front of' or 'in place of.' Check your concordances and Bible dictionaries.

"Now ask yourself, how will the Antichrist pull off his deception? Sure, he may do miracles and be a great leader. But don't forget there are millions of Christians in the world who know about prophecy (at least a little). And there are probably hundreds of millions of copies of the Bible in existence. The Antichrist will have to be far more clever than Herbert Armstrong claims he will be in at least two major areas.

"First of all, he could not possibly be as openly pagan as HWA paints him. After all, who would he fool? Half the world knows that the Messiah will enforce the weekly Sabbath and annual Holy Days. Indeed, even scholars who are not Christians or Jews know this is what the Bible teaches. The Antichrist would logically go along with much of this in order to carry out his deception. Any leader who would try to set up the kind of pagan-Gentile kingdom HWA claims he will set up will not be believed. Even with supernatural powers he would not be believed. For evidence of this consider the movies Omen, Damien: Omen II, and The Final Conflict (to be released next year). Obviously, even the 'worldly' individuals who make such movies would not be deceived by HWA's Antichrist. These movie makers are convinced that supernatural power do not of themselves prove a man is of God.

"Secondly, it's important to remember that the world right now is looking on prophecy to be fulfilled. It's no longer the uncouth subject it once was. Even among 'jet-setters,' Hollywood types, and politicians prophecy is discussed. Now ask yourself - how could the Antichrist fool the entire world into thinking he was the returned Messiah unless there was first a phony Beast? Everyone knows the Beast will reign before the Messiah returns. Obviously for the Antichrist to pull off his charade he (on his spokesman-the False Prophet) will have to be able to point to something and say that was the Beast.

"Now that brings us to HWA. Yes, there very possibly will be a ten-nation United States of Europe. Maybe the Pope will have a part in it. So what? That still won't be the Beast of Revelation! Some will teach it is, however, and that will be significant. Now who has done more to popularize the false notion that the Beast is going to be a Holy Roman Empire or a United States of Europe? Sure, there's Hal Lindsey whose Late Great Planet Earth also has pushed this notion, but not the way HWA has. Nor has Lindsey had the contacts with world leaders that Herbert Armstrong has....

"If you want to understand this subject better, you should read Ernest Martin's October 1980 Commentator. In it he wrote an excellent article called 'The Antichrist in Prophecy.' I don't agree with Martin on a lot of things, but when I read this article on prophecy, I had to agree with him on this subject."

Editor: We called Dr. Martin and asked him if he believed that Herbert Armstrong is the False Prophet of Revelation. He told us he did not and for a number of reasons. First, he feels HWA is too old. He will not likely still be around to see that prophecy fulfilled. Second, Martin does not believe that the Jews could be led to believe that HWA is the endtime Elijah. (Martin feels that the Israelis will be deceived into mistaking the False Prophet of Revelation for the endtime Elijah.) Nevertheless, Martin does feel that several important parallels do exist between Armstrongism and the work of the False Prophet.

Will a successor to Herbert Armstrong have a part to play in the coming great apostasy? Martin refuses to make any predictions on this. But there are those who strongly suspect this will be the case. Of course, while we do not have a crystal ball that would reveal what future role Herbert may play as a prophet, we have documented the fact that almost 100% of his prophecies, dating back to 1934, have failed. But he keeps trying to make something come to pass, in spite of his miserable record. The Aug. 25, 1980, Worldwide News (p. 1) quoted Herbert telling children at the church's Summer Educational Program: "Perhaps it [the Kingdom of God] will begin in about three to five years from now or less. Because we're very, very close to it right now." (The phrase in brackets "the Kingdom of God" was part of the Worldwide News quote and is not our comment.)

HERBERT ARMSTRONG AND SIMON MAGUS

Not many believe that Herbert Armstrong is the False Prophet mentioned by John in Revelation. But more and more former WCG members, and even some current members, seem to have reached the conclusion that Herbert Armstrong is, and has been for some time, the central problem of the WCG. For instance, one paper (anonymous) being circulated in church circles equates Herbert Armstrong with Simon Magus. While this paper does not necessarily represent the views of all the publishers of the Report, and although it is somewhat theological, it does contain some points of interest. It is reproduced on pp. 11-12 of this newsletter.

WHERE THEY NOW

Evangelist Les McCullough, who at one time held the position of vice-chancellor of Ambassador College in Big Sandy, head of the church's International Division, and head of the Canadian churches, has now been sent to pastor the Cincinnati, Ohio East church. (The WCG has four churches in Cincinnati, and he is over only one of them.) One minister remarked, "Giving up his expense accounts and going to pastor the Cincinnati church after being one of the most powerful men in the church is like being exiled to Siberia. Come to think about it, I don't believe he has ever had to pastor a church before either."

Evangelist Dean Wilson, formerly head of the Canadian and Australian churches, recently met a similar fate. While he was visiting Pasadena from Australia, evidently an elder or elders from Australia called Evangelist Tkach at WCG headquarters and informed Tkach that Wilson was allegedly not supporting Stan Rader and was not cracking down on "liberals" in Australia. Wilson was informed in writing that he had 24 hours to leave Pasadena. He was also told he had been transferred to the Portland, Oregon, church and to leave the keys to his Australian house at headquarters. He was informed that his belongings would be packed and sent to him but that he was not to set foot into Australia. Wilson obeyed!

Herbert W. Armstrong - 20th-Century Apostle or 20th-Century Simon Magus?

Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong, the "apostle" of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), has often criticized the Christian churches of today (all churches other than his own) as being "pagan." Over the years he has given numerous sermons and authored many articles pointing out parallels between various Christian traditions and ancient pagan practices.

Ironically, however, a careful scrutiny of the WCG reveals amazing parallels between the Armstrong church and paganism — some far more damning than those pointed out by Mr. Herbert Armstrong of other churches.

The most serious of these parallels concerns the WCG's system of organization — the pyramid or hierarchical form of government. For although this system of government was used by ancient Israel (remember God, himself, was manifestly at the top of that hierarchy initiated to bring order to an unconverted and rebellious nation), this type of government was clearly condemned

God's Word commands us to COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM, and be separate. God's last warning is, "COME OUT OF BABYLON!!"

But now Mr. Armstrong is holding back and suppressing this plain truth (Rom. 1:18). This amazing 1939 article has even been removed from the Ambassador College library lest students or members learn these shocking facts!

II Cor. 4:4 tells us that this world's god is the devil. How does the devil rule his domain? Is it not through this very Babylonish system? Is it not through causing people to give over their minds to rulers who are, in turn, inspired and led by Satan?

The despots of the ancient world demanded total obedience and loyalty from their subjects, and in time demanded total worship. History suggests that Nimrod,

20th-Century Apostle or 20th-Century Simon Magus?

Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong, the "apostle" of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), has often criticized the Christian churches of today (all churches other than his own) as being "pagan." Over the years he has given numerous sermons and authored many articles pointing out parallels between various Christian traditions and ancient pagan practices.

Ironically, however, a careful scrutiny of the WCG reveals amazing parallels between the Armstrong church and paganism - some far more damning than those pointed out by Mr. Herbert Armstrong of other churches.

The most serious of these parallels concerns the WCG's system of organization - the pyramid or hierarchical form of government. For although this system of government was used by ancient Israel (remember God, himself, was manifestly at the top of that hierarchy initiated to bring order to an unconverted and rebellious nation), this type of government was clearly condemned by Jesus as an unacceptable method of organizing his church (Luke 22:25-26). And no wonder. One has only to study the histories of ancient civilizations to see that this Babylonish form of government was the governmental system of the ancient pagan world.

What obviously makes this system so anathema to true Christianity is that it is by its very nature a type of idolatry. For it puts a man in place of God. Men begin to look to the human head instead of to God. Recall that Peter insisted a Christian "ought to obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29). But carnal men tend to grant loyalty to the human leader and follow his teachings, even when those teachings contradict God's Word. This is the very essence of what the Bible refers to as "Babylon." Yet not only has Mr. Armstrong adopted this pagan concept, he has taken it about as far as did the rulers of the ancient pagan world.

In the Worldwide Church of God's ministerial bulletin of 12/3/74, p. 631, Mr. Herbert Armstrong stated, concerning the church's false doctrines of divorce and remarriage, makeup, and Pentecost, that Christ (through Mr. Armstrong) "has bound in heaven what His Church, even in unrealized error, has bound in earth." It is difficult to believe that the God who wants to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children (Malachi 4:6) supported Mr.

Armstrong as he needlessly destroyed thousands of families for 40 years through an admittedly erroneous (according to Mr. Armstrong) divorce doctrine. The apostle Paul says Christians should be followers of him only as he followed Christ (I Cor. 11 :1). Yet the pagan rulers of Satan's Babylonish system have always proclaimed in so many words: "Follow me even as God follows me and legally binds what I say!"

Even Mr. Armstrong at one time acknowledged that the Babylonish form of church government is wrong Notice what he wrote about church organization in the April 1939 Good News (pp. 6-7 ):

How, then, did ORGANIZATION, and the idea of CHURCH GOVERNMENT get into the Church? It came out of BABYLON! Spiritual BABYLON - that is, ROME!... Those who are IN, and MEMBERS of such an organized church government . . . are IN BABYLON, and actually worshippers of THE IMAGE OF THE BEAST! And God is calling us, HIS people OUT of BABYLON today, before it is too late before the PLAGUES fall!...

Jesus never set up an organization, nor did He establish any church GOVERNMENT. He did not RE-ORGANIZE the Church!... The object of the Church is not to build up an organization, or a movement....

Our heavenly Father never planted any super-organization, or established any church GOVERNMENT, or set men IN AUTHORITY over either spiritual or financial affairs, in the New Testament Church....

What has split and divided up the saints in the Church of God? Nothing but ORGANIZATION - which has led to politics, ministers lusting for rule and for power....

God's Word commands us to COME OUT FROM AMONG THEM, and be separate. God's last warning is, "COME OUT OF BABYLON!!!"

But now Mr. Armstrong is holding back and suppressing this plain truth ( Rom. 1:18 ). This amazing 1939 article has even been removed from the Ambassador College library lest students or members learn these shocking facts!

II Cor. 4:4 tells us that this world's god is the devil. How does the devil rule his domain? Is it not through this very Babylonish system? Is it not through causing people to give over their minds to rulers who are, in turn, inspired and led by Satan?

The despots of the ancient world demanded total obedience and loyalty from their subjects, and in time demanded total worship. History suggests that Nimrod, the founder of Babylon (Gen. 10:8-10), was deified on his death thus establishing the foundation of the Babylonish religions of the whole of the ancient pagan world. King Nebuchadnezzar of Babylon, putting himself in place of God, was guilty of this. Alexander the Great was declared a god. Many of the emperors of ancient Rome declared themselves gods.

Now what do we see happening in the WCG? Mr. Herbert Armstrong has gone from being one of the ministers of the "true church" to being an apostle to being the only apostle of the twentieth century. In The Plain Truth he proclaimed that his writings on the purpose of life were the most important writings since the holy Bible. Recently, some Worldwide ministers, ignoring the third commandment and New Testament teaching (Heb. 3:1), have begun referring to Mr. Armstrong as the Holy Apostle, thus giving to him a title that now properly belongs only to Jesus Christ. These ministers have apparently forgotten that to call any mortal man "holy" is actually blasphemy!

How long will it be before Mr. Herbert Armstrong is openly declared a god or something similar? Will he be deified on his death? Will his writings be all but made holy scripture by his successor? Only time will tell. But now Mr. Herbert Armstrong is telling friends that he has already been resurrected! (See Chapter 19 of David Robinson's book, Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web.) The followers of Nimrod claimed this very thing of their dead hero. Thus was born the myth that became the foundation of the leading religions of the ancient world.

But even without the outright deification of Mr. Herbert Armstrong, actual idolatry has already taken hold in the WCG. Already WCG members "worship" Mr. Herbert Armstrong by putting his commands above those of God and his Word. Although they seem blinded to their own sycophantic behavior, it is, nevertheless, worship of a man and therefore idolatry!

Mr. Herbert Armstrong has always been quick to condemn other churches as being pagan. But they have not been alone in his condemnation. The Masons and their ceremonies have also been the target of his theological attacks. Until the late sixties, when it was mysteriously withdrawn from circulation, the Armstrong church published a booklet entitled The Truth About Masonry, which condemned Masonry's ceremonies as being clearly of pagan origin and Satanic. And over the years many WCG ministers have pointed out the mystic pagan foundations of modern Masonry. Yet here again, a careful study of Armstrongism today reveals amazing parallels with the symbology of Masonry and paganism. For instance, some have pointed out these similarities between the $24 million "House for God" ( Ambassador Auditorium) and Masonry/paganism:

- The auditorium seats are arranged so WCG members, like the wicked men of Ezek. 8:16, face due east when they worship, not west as did the righteous worshippers at God's Temple and its predecessor the Tabernacle.
- Architecturally the auditorium is really similar to a large black box (God's Temple wasn't black) with a white top, as is the Islamic Kaaba. (For an explanation of the significance of this, see Freemasonry - An Interpretation by Martin L. Wagner.)
- The auditorium's 7 steps leading up to the stage and the wording of the auditorium's dedication plaque are two auditorium features that have Masonic counterparts.

It is significant that the ancient pagan religions all had lavishly adorned houses of worship, while 40 years of New Testament history shows that Christians never built houses of worship. Indeed Stephen at his martyrdom was quoted as saying: "The Most High dwells not in temples made with hands" (Acts 7:48 ). And every beginning theology student should know why - because God dwells in each Christian, who is likened to a holy temple (I Cor. 3:16). Those who pour millions of dollars into luxuriously furnished, gold-gilded houses of worship (like the pagans) instead of using the money to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ are following pure paganism - not the Christianity of the New Testament.

The worshippers of Mr. Herbert Armstrong may reason that these similarities - if they are even aware of them - have no relevance to the modern world. Or they may argue that these parallels are just coincidences. But the question that should be asked is: "Who inspired these pagan parallels?" God? No, obviously not, for Malachi 3:6 quotes God saying, "I change not!" Perhaps the answer is in Ephesians 6:12, where the Bible warns us that we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers of the darkness of this world - against wicked spirits in high places.

There are signs associated with God's church (Mk. 16:17-18; John 13:35), and there are signs associated with the god of this world. We must be able to discern the difference. We are told by scripture to test the spirits to determine which are which (I John 4:1), because "many false prophets are gone out into the world." This is not always an easy matter. Matthew 24:24 tells us that in the end time only the very elect will be able to withstand the strong deceptions of false prophets. Many sincere and dedicated people will be deceived - even many who call Jesus "Lord" (Matt. 7:21-23).

This should not surprise us. What is happening to the Worldwide Church of God is not very different from something that occurred in the early New Testament church. In Acts 8 we read of a religious leader known as Simon Magus. From what the Bible tells us and from what we can discover from historical records, an absolutely remarkable portrait emerges of this individual. Notice these main points:

- (1) His followers were absolutely convinced he was doing the work of God (Acts 8:10). And thus Simon's followers were undoubtedly convinced they too were doing "God's Work."
- (2) He did great works (Acts 8:10).
- (3) He claimed great authority (Acts 8:9). Some historians say he claimed to be an apostle.
- (4) His apostasy lasted a long time (Acts 8:11).
- (5) He "bewitched" the people. Today we might use the word "hypnotized" or say "he was able to sway them easily" (Acts 8:9). He evidently was a dynamic leader, and very likely a thoroughly convincing speaker who gave no inkling of insincerity.
- (6) He had been baptized properly by a leading evangelist of the true church (Acts 8:13).
- (7) He was a Samaritan (Acts 8:5,9). Samaritans were Gentiles who lived in the area of Palestine. They claimed to be "God's people"; they used the Old Testament scriptures and kept many of its laws.
- (8) He was preoccupied with money, and this preoccupation even extended to the spiritual area (Acts 8:20).
- (9) He was "in the bond of iniquity" ("bound with his own sin" - Phillips) (Acts 8:23).
- (10) He was well-acquainted with scripture and in contact with God's true church. In fact, according to Clementine Homilies, he had been a disciple of John the Baptist. (See Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1973, article "Simon Magus.")
- (11) He traveled extensively and went to world capitals. "At a later time Simon seems to have journeyed to Rome in the company of a Tyrian (of Tyre, a Gentile city, recall Ezek. 28) ex-prostitute named Helen, who he claimed was his First Thought through whom he himself created the universe . . ." (Ibid). Obviously, he began to experience delusions of grandeur.
- (12) ". . . later Christian writers such as Justin, Irenaeus, Hippolytus, and Epiphaneus treat him as the originator of Gnosticism" (Ibid). Gnosticism is considered by many scholars as the first major heresy of the early New Testament church.
- (13) Some scholars believe that it was the activities of Simon that precipitated the terrible persecution of Christians by Nero.
- (14) According to one legend, Simon died while trying to fake a crucifixion and resurrection of himself. He seems to have begun to believe he was a god.

In past years Simon Magus was often the subject of sermons and articles by leading WCG ministers. Mr. Herbert Armstrong claimed Simon's Samaritan religion had its origins in Babylon and that Simon was possessed of the devil, who used him to found a major worldwide apostasy. Today, however, Mr. Herbert Armstrong no longer seems very interested in preaching on that subject in much detail. Perhaps it is because so many strong parallels exist between Simon Magus and Mr. Herbert Armstrong. For instance, ex-WCG minister Richard Forkun has written, "The WCG is a modern version of the Gnosticism of the first and second centuries A.D. The Gnostics put knowledge above faith. Their concepts of God, man, salvation, etc. were incredibly contrived similarly the WCG." In studying the Bible's account of Simon Magus, let us recall that it has relevance for us today. What is recorded about this man is in the Bible for a purpose (I Cor. 10-11).

Like many pagan potentates, Mr. Armstrong has long been waited on by servants and lives in expensive homes studded with expensive artwork and finery - all while many of his loyal subjects barely make ends meet after paying all their tithes and offerings to him. When his church was provided millions of dollars in the late sixties and early seventies that could have been used to persuade the Western world to turn back to its God, Mr. Armstrong wasted the money on concerts, jet planes, paintings, jewelry, banquets, lavish gifts to pagan despots, and expensive homes staffed with servants. Paul worked with his own hands as a tentmaker (Acts 18:3) to avoid the claim that he was living off Christ's money, lest he offend someone weak in the faith (I Cor. 9:11-12,18). The apostles, instead of flattering the Roman leaders and giving banquets in their honor (I Thes. 2:4-6), told them of Jesus' crucifixion, death, and resurrection (Acts 5:27-32; Acts 24-28, etc.).

Mr. Herbert Armstrong, far from being a holy apostle, is following the way of Simon Magus, who preached a different gospel than the "gospel of Christ" (Gal. 1:7). Mr. Armstrong, like Simon Magus, is ashamed of bluntly telling world leaders that they ought to discard their pagan religious superstitions, repent of their sins, and accept Jesus as their Lord and Master. According to his son Garner Ted Armstrong, Mr. Herbert Armstrong's "gospel-preaching" tours are nothing more than expensive autograph-hunting binges and picture-taking ceremonies with the rulers of this world's Babylonish system.

And while Mr. Herbert Armstrong's life has become one giant ego trip, what has become of the church? Doctrines come and go like the wind. Scandal after scandal is revealed. Former ministers level accusations of the most serious sort, charging bizarre sex acts, incest, adultery, and other unspeakable perversions. Church funds are used to publish occult literature under the Everest House name, homosexuals perform in "God's House," etc. Why? Is it because we are seeing Romans 1:21-28 being fulfilled before our very eyes?

And what of the many dedicated, Bible-believing individuals who have been thrust out of the church in the last few years? Is this a reenactment of what happened in the early New Testament Church (III John 9-10) where false apostles loved to have preeminence among the brethren and cast out of the church those who were loyal to God?

It should be obvious to all true Christians that the Worldwide Church of God has become a part of "Babylon." To his children still in "Babylon" God declares (Rev. 18:4): "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

Will you obey God's clear command? The choice is up to you!

Sherwin McMichael, the church's star witness at the recent hearings over Dave Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, was pastoring the Washington, D.C. church. Recently he reported 70 to 80 "demon cases" in his church area and called headquarters for help. Reportedly, several headquarters ministers scurried back to Washington, D.C., to try to determine why McMichael's area was being overrun with demons. Now as we go to press we hear that Sherwin (who has long alleged that Stan Rader has a demon) has been dismissed and accused of being demon possessed. We have no way of knowing whether any of these allegations are true and have always felt that Mr. McMichael was simply a typical WCG minister.

Dr. Robert Kuhn has moved to New York City where he works in his dad's garment business. Ben Chapman is working for the Kuhn business setting up computer services and systems organization at a high salary. Lois Chapman, a daughter-in-law of Herbert Armstrong, has a computer services business. Word has it she's doing very well and is driving a Cadillac El Dorado.

Dave Antion is still in Pasadena pursuing his doctorate in educational psychology at USC and doing some marriage counseling. Word has it that Antion preaches at the Church of God, International at Arcadia where he volunteers his preaching services, as he is not on Garner Ted Armstrong's payroll. Les Stocker is employed as director of development for the Braille Institute in Los Angeles. Bob Oberlander also works at the Braille Institute as director of educational services for the blind. Evidently neither Stocker nor Oberlander attend the WCG at present. Ed Smith is out of the ministry in Cincinnati but still attends services. Paul Flatt works for a Denver corporation in Orlando, Florida. Dennis and Jack Pyle have received awards as outstanding insurance salesmen and are not part of the WCG anymore. Dale Hampton is vice-president of Hamma Oil in Oklahoma City. Ray Kosanke, formerly a Plain Truth correspondent in Brussels, Belgium, has landed a top job with Atlantic Richfield.

In a surprise move, Stan Watts left the ministry and moved up to Canada to work with his father-in-law. Art Mokarow is now in business for himself, attempting to market a TV program on various issues, mainly marriage and family services. Elbert Atlas has left the ministry and is working for Occidental Life Insurance Co. in Los Angeles. John Reedy, a son-in-law of Dave Robinson, left the ministry and has established a growing landscaping business in Tyler, Texas. Bobby Boyce, a former minister, is in the contracting business in Longview, Texas, with his brothers. Wayne Cole works as a publisher's representative, lives in Tyler, Texas, and is not affiliated with any church at present.

Jim Lacour is doing well in real estate in the Pasadena area. Dorothy Lacour is working at USC in the administration for continuing education. Dr. Mike Germano just obtained his J.D. degree and is now an attorney at law. He is also in the administration of West Coast University in Orange County. Jo Ann Dorothy is now Dr. Dorothy as she received her degree in chiropractic. Jan Freibergs is working in holistic health care in Pasadena, while Gunar Freibergs works for the Los Angeles City College system as a professor of history.

Former editor and minister Brian Knowles worked for the GTA church for a couple of weeks but now is doing freelance writing and editing for several corporations in the LA area. Carole Ritter now works as a writer for ARCO (Atlantic Richfield). Lawson Briggs, former WCG writer-editor, is working for an engineering firm in Alhambra and doing cost engineering. Jim Lea, former Plain Truth editor, received his master's in Business Administration and is presently working for Business Week magazine. Bob Ginskey, former WCG writer-editor, is selling real estate in northern California and is quite successful we hear. Ron Beideck, former assistant managing editor of The Plain Truth, is working for a computer typesetting firm in LA. George Warner is a manager in the Personnel Dept. at Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) in Pasadena.

A reader recently wrote:

"Some years ago, when minister Al Carrozzo 'blew the whistle' on Garner Ted Armstrong and left the WCG, some WCG ministers said that God had put Carrozzo under a curse. They intimated he would soon wind up in poverty and his family would desert him. They said he already had cancer.

"Some curse! I recently heard that Carrozzo's family is together, healthy and happy, his business is thriving, he is a prominent and influential member of his community, he is completely healed of cancer, and to top it off, he is now a bona fide millionaire. Is this all true?"

Editor: We understand it is.

We at Ambassador Report are pleased to hear of the above success stories and wish all of these people well, regardless of whether or not they are associated with the WCG. We would hope that the Worldwide Church would also one day acknowledge the success stories of all its former employees who helped build the church and Ambassador College, rather than trying to downplay their successes and pretending as though they have ceased to exist.

NEW GROUPS (& GROUPS NEW TO US)

Since our last issue, we have received a number of complaints from readers who feel we should not mention certain groups or individuals in our newsletters. For instance we received a few letters condemning us for mentioning Sabbath-keeping churches. We received a few condemning us for mentioning Dr. Martin's Foundation for Biblical Research. One writer was displeased because in mentioning Mr. Plache's ministry he was convinced we were advocating Sunday keeping.

Frankly, we are not really followers of any of the groups we have ever mentioned. If we were, we'd be members or working for them. But that does not mean that we can't learn from these various organizations. Obviously there are certain groups we feel closer to. But we've tried hard to at least mention every group that's appeared on the scene with ties to Worldwide. We do this for a number of reasons: (1) It helps readers to renew old friendships or make new ones. (2) It gives readers the opportunity to "compare notes." Virtually every group publishes literature of some type. People with philosophical or theological interests can compare various points of view. (3) It helps us all to see more clearly where the WCG and the Church of God movement (if that's the right word) are headed. But, again, mentioning anyone does not mean we endorse everything they do or teach. In fact, sometimes just the opposite is the case.

So with that in mind, here are some organizations we've recently been made aware of. We're sorry we can't devote more space to each one.

The United Church of God
4500 Warwick Blvd.
Kansas City, MO 64111

This group sent us a press release, dated Sept. 8, 1980. We found this statement interesting:

"After years of membership with Herbert W. Armstrong and the troubled Worldwide Church of God (Pasadena, California), and then recently after disappointment with Garner Ted Armstrong and the Church of God, International (Tyler, TX), former members of both organizations officially independently incorporated in Kansas City as the United Church of God..."

"Pastor Richard Prince (816-233-8628, Rt. 2, Box 43A, Wathena, KS 66090) serves not only United, but also an identical group in St. Joseph, Missouri, which has incorporated as the St. Joseph Church of God.

"Becoming independently incorporated appears to [be] becoming a national trend among former Worldwide Church of God members. Cities in which independent congregations have also surfaced include Portland, OR; Monterey, CA; Tulsa, OK; Longview, TX; and, St. Louis, MO."

Our readers should not confuse the Kansas City-based United Church of God with the United Church of God in Lake Winola, Pennsylvania, pastored by Richard Wiedenheft. Wiedenheft's church (P.O. Box 45, Lake Winola, PA 18625) publishes Focus on Truth and has an extensive sermon cassette library available.

"We do not belong to or attend any of the split-off groups and don't intend to. We agree partially with Dr. Martin, mostly with regard to personal salvation and freedom in Christ. But there are still many of us who feel God's laws are good. But we feel WCG is dead wrong in its interpretation of those laws. We have found the Identity ministry to be the link in putting God's laws in their proper perspective with regard to the individual and with regard to their application to civil government. The result is the freedom Dr. Martin teaches for the individual, but not to be left out is the perfect harmony of God's laws for the nation. [Emphasis theirs.]

*"For those out there who are caught in the middle of Dr. Martin's teachings and yet still believe God's laws are righteous, and yet feel WCG is wrong, please write to some of our Identity friends for some real comforting and informative answers. "Most ex-cultists go through a deprogramming very much like a junkie on a de-tox program. Many WCG people need this, and you've been the closest thing to that.. So please don't be so quick to disband your work - it may be needed long after the collapse of Petra or whatever.

"I was associated with the WCG since 1959, baptized in 1971, enlightened in 1974, and disfellowshipped recently for conducting home Bible studies without pontiffic approval. We've since incorporated our own church, the Abunda Life Church of God. We conduct home Bible studies the first and third Saturday of each month and will be putting out a newsletter soon called "The Abunda Life." Most of those who attend are patients of my naturopathy practice and other ex-church members, but some ex-WCG members do attend and it is growing in a spirit and numbers.

"This is the route I suggested to the Associated Church some years ago, that it not base the church on a group of malcontents, but rather start over. Then if those who were turned off want to attend, great! At least they'll have people to fellowship [with] besides other malcontents."

GARNER TED'S WOES

Garner Ted Armstrong is finding out that running his own church is not as simple as it might have appeared. His Church of God, International (CGI) took off like a rocket when it was founded in mid 1978, but of late the rapid growth in Ted's church has fizzled out. One indicator of CGI's stagnation has been the attendance at his Feast of Tabernacles. In 1978, 500 attended. Attendance shot up to 2,300 in 1979, but fell back sharply to 1,400 in 1980. Ted is having growing pains for several reasons: (1) Many of his members, having left the WCG, are exercising their mental muscles more frequently than they did in Worldwide. (2) Many of Ted's members have read and agreed with Dr. Ernest Martin's tithing booklet and have stopped sending Ted their tithes. (3) A number of churches in the Church of God, International decided Ted wasn't giving them enough local autonomy, so they incorporated separately, keeping most of their members' donations in the local area. It is obvious that unless Ted can attract less independently minded members or come up with a more effective way to market his brand of Armstrongism, he will find achieving any real long-term growth very difficult.

Another reason for GTA's problems is David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web. Though mainly about Herbert Armstrong, Robinson's book does reveal much about Garner Ted that many of his followers have, until recently, failed to acknowledge. The Robinson book was a big factor in the defection of several of Ted's members, including Dave Sandland, GTA's representative in Australia. Mr. Sandland wrote to CGI members in Australia:

"Due to a number of reasons, most of which are private, I will no longer - at least not at the moment - be handling any CGI mail through here in Sydney. I therefore suggest you write direct to Tyler, Texas (Box 2525) with literature requests, questions or comments.

"I certainly continue to support the CGI in any Christian endeavour they undertake - just as I support any Church in similar endeavours. But I feel the need for separation from all the problems of the past - problems sickeningly outlined in David Robinson's shattering book The Tangled Web....

"I personally intend on giving whatever service I can to the Church of God, 7th Day - especially the group operating out of Adelaide."

Incidentally, former GTA sidekick Jim Thornhill has been terminated from the WCG but has not been hired by the GTA organization. Instead, he has teamed up with Dr. Lochner and Lochner's son-in-law, Dave Harris, who are involved in a business scheme dealing with the retrieval and sale of precious metals.

JOHN TUIT BOOK

John Tuit was one of the former members of the WCG who was instrumental in bringing about the State of California's lawsuit against the WCG's leadership. Readers who would like to know more about what led up to that legal battle will find his new book very informative. It's titled The Truth Shall Make You Free. It is published by The Truth Foundation, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold Township, New Jersey 07728. Copies are $8 each, including postage ($10 for overseas orders). The book is in the press now and is due for release by the end of December.

We have glanced through an advance copy of the book and found sections quite interesting. The chapters dealing with the actual lawsuit are the most informative, giving an insight into how the suit actually began and much of the intrigue of those days. Tuit relates a number of incidents that show the psychological makeup of men such as Robert Kuhn, Ray Wright, Jack Martin, and others. The chapter on Dr. Lochner and his tapes will prove interesting to all who've wondered why Lochner hasn't made "the Lochner tapes" public. Not surprisingly, there are new allegations of sexual misconduct and perversion. We also found most interesting the fact, as related by Robert Kuhn, that one of Stan Rader's daughters was a White House staff member during the Nixon administration.

The book progresses to a chapter on "Satan's Master Conspiracy," in which the author implies that the current leadership of the WCG is part of an important international conspiracy. Although we find this idea very widespread today, we wish more evidence was presented to adequately prove this theory.

Mr. Tuit does not hide the fact that he does agree on many doctrinal issues with Herbert Armstrong (sabbath, holy days, etc.). And not all of the book is new material. About one-third or more contains material well covered in previous issues of Ambassador Report and other publications. Nevertheless, readers who want to know more about the California versus WCG lawsuit and the intrigue that surrounded it will find this an informative book.

RELIGION MAY BE HAZARDOUS TO YOUR HEALTH

Some time back we mentioned a book we believe could be of help to many of our readers - Religion May Be Hazardous to Your Health by Eli S. Chesen, M.D. This book is a psychiatric guide to the uses and abuses of religion. We've strongly recommended it in the past because, from the letters we receive, it's obvious many people are suffering psychological problems due to their involvement with various religious groups.

Unfortunately, in mentioning the book we incorrectly stated it was out of print: One reader wrote to us that it is not out of print but can be obtained by writing to the publisher - Macmillan Publishing Co., Riverside, New Jersey 08075. The paperback (#08443) sells for $1.50, but we assume there is a postage fee (75¢?) added to that.

SNAPPING

Another book many readers may find useful is Snapping by Flo Conway and Jim Siegelman. John Clark, associate clinical professor of Psychiatry, Harvard Medical School, wrote: "Snapping is by far the best and most scientific treatment of the cult problem yet published. For the scientist, politician, clergy or parent, it is valuable and wonderfully readable."

We've heard this book mentioned quite a bit during the last two years, but it was only after quite a few of our readers recommended it to us that we went out and got a copy. We found it very informative and recommend it strongly to anyone with friends or relatives in any cult. The book deals with cult-induced personality change and the methods used by cult leaders to control the minds of their followers. In the U.S. the paperback sells for $4.95 and is available at most large bookstores. It is published by Dell Publishing Co., 1 Dag Hanmarskjold Plaza, New York, NY 10017.

DOING RESEARCH ON THE WCG?

As many longtime Herbert Armstrong followers are aware, as recently as eight years ago it was quite difficult to obtain accurate and unbiased information about Herbert Armstrong and the Worldwide Church of God. Except for official church publications, there just wasn't much information available on Armstrongism. But beginning in the midseventies that started to change. With more and more media attention on the WCG, both the quantity and quality of information available have improved.

Now virtually anyone who wants the facts on the WCG can get them - if he or she puts out the effort. Representatives of numerous public, university, and seminary libraries have written us, telling of the collections of Armstrong-related literature they have assembled. (For instance Iowa Linda University in Riverside, California, has an extensive collection.)

A number of religious reference works also now include information on Armstrongism. One excellent source is The Encyclopedia of American Religions by J. Gordon Melton (McGrath Publishing Co., Wilmington, North Carolina). It contains excellent material on "Churches Which Began With William Miller Sabbath-Keeping Churches," "The Church of God Movement," and "The Sacred Name Movement." Although it contains some slight inaccuracies, we have found this a fascinating work and recommend it to anyone doing research on Armstrongism, its historical roots, and related church movements. Many Armstrong followers will find that the information it contains will give them a new perspective as to their church's place among American religions.

AN IMPORTANT BIBLIOGRAPHY

In the last few years so much has been written about Herbert Armstrong, Garner Ted Armstrong, Stanley Rader, their churches, etc., that it is no small task to locate pertinent information when doing a research paper, article, or whatever on these subjects. That is why we are pleased to announce an extensive bibliography soon to be published by Mr. John Nugent of Laguna Beach, CA (no relation to the Tim Nugent of our 1975 Ambassador Review). Mr. Nugent has never been a Worldwide member, but has followed the church's activities for some time. Two years ago he began compiling a list of reference sources about the WCG as part of a research project for a comparative religion class at California State University, Fullerton. But from that point the project has mushroomed into becoming a major publication.

His bibliography is titled: A Comprehensive Bibliography and Guide to Information on Herbert W. Armstrong's Worldwide Church of God. It will be published by February 1981 and will cover well over 250 pages of indexed (but not annotated) articles, books, reports, newsletters, legal documents, advertisements, book reviews, resignation letters, correspondences, and research papers on Armstrongism. It will also contain a list of names, addresses, and phone numbers of groups that have broken from the WCG. The cost per copy is $20 including postage. The author has asked us to point out that he is not publishing this as a way to make a living. The $20 will just cover publishing and postage costs.

The average reader of Ambassador Report will probably not have any need of such a reference work, as during our publication's existence we have been pretty thorough in mentioning all the major articles and books that have appeared on Armstrongism as well as the names and addresses of all the breakaway groups that have emerged. However, we have seen portions of the bibliography, and we strongly recommend it to all those doing any kind of serious research on the WCG or related organizations.

Incidentally, Mr. Nugent did mention to us that he is trying to be as thorough as possible in compiling this bibliography. If anyone has a church group or publication they would like to see included in the bibliography, he would appreciate a letter giving details so he can include that information in his publication. But please do so immediately as he is getting close to his press deadline.

The address to write to for ordering copies or for giving information is: John Nugent, 2855 Rounsevel Terrace, Laguna Beach, CA 92651, phone: 714-494-9396.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR15 March 31, 1981

Dear Friends:

With the State of California versus Worldwide Church of God (WCG) lawsuit now completely over, many are asking where does the WCG go from here? That is no easy question to answer. For now that the state attorney general is no longer pursuing WCG leaders, there is more in fighting and confusion in the WCG hierarchy than ever before.

GTA Returns - Almost

While many thought that Stanley Rader's "victory" over the State of California guaranteed his total control over the WCG's future, a three-month chain of events indicates that his influence on Herbert Armstrong is waning and that Garner Ted Armstrong's return to the WCG may be imminent. Here briefly is an outline of recent WCG events:

January 4 - Rader announced he would step down as church treasurer, effective July 1. While still remaining as head of AICF and personal advisor to Herbert Armstrong, Rader said: "Under no circumstances would I ever be the pastor general of our church" (Pasadena Star-News, Jan. 5, 1981).

January 8 - The Los Angeles Times carried a full-page ad bearing Stanley Rader's photo and signature. The ad, which reiterated Stanley's January 4 announcement, carried the headline: "The Attorney General Kept His Word. Now I Will Keep Mine." Ironically, that same edition of the Times also carried an article which began: "Attorney Gen. George Deukmejian took a major step Wednesday toward running for governor in 1982 by disclosing he will appoint an exploratory campaign committee and hold a $500-a-plate fund raiser in march...."

January 20 - Herbert Armstrong, in a letter to co-workers, wrote (p.3):

"Satan knows how short time is. He is now striking at destroying THE CHURCH AS A WHOLE. I cannot reveal to you at the moment what Satan is up to now, BUT IT IS BIG, and we all need to be FASTING AND PRAYING as never before that God will restrain Satan."

It would be interesting to know how Herbert obtained the inside scoop on Satan's plans. Nevertheless, this statement, plus certain others made in letters to WCG ministers, has led to a flurry of speculation. While some discounted the whole matter as just another fund raising scheme, others thought, (1) HWA's corporation sole is in deep trouble with the IRS, (2) HWA is in failing health - possibly even has cancer - and knows his time is short, (3) the percent of new converts is down due to the totally insipid telecasts HWA has produced of late, or (4) there are serious troubles in the HWA household. While none of these theories are beyond possibility, we frankly have not been able to substantiate any of them.

Incidentally, long-time WCG members may find one statement in the January co-worker letter (p.1) of particular interest:

"During the late sixties, certain indications led me to envision the possibility - never the certainty - that the Work of the Philadelphia era of the Church might be completed by the first week in January, 1972. Never did I remotely believe that could be the time of Christ's return; the Great Tribulation, the Day of the Lord and other prophesied events had to occur after completion of our Work proclaiming Gospel Message, Law of God, repentance and fact of coming Kingdom of God. Nor did I set 1972 as definite date but only a possible date for completion of our commission."

The letter ends with: "We are launched on the greatest PUSH FORWARD ever, PRAY! PRAY! PRAY!"

January 31 - The Pastor General's Report to the ministry of the WCG opened with a "long overdue acknowledgment" by Herbert Armstrong. This short, one-third-page tribute was to Virginia Kineston, Stanley Rader's secretary, whom Garner Ted Armstrong claims is the true top administrator of the WCG. Insiders claim the tribute was done in response to ministerial criticism of Mrs. Kineston, especially in regard to her close relationship with Rader aide Jack Bicket. Wrote Armstrong, in her defense, "I know her to be a woman of highest moral and ethical integrity and professional in her abilities." The odd article was interpreted by many knowledgeable Armstrong followers as in indication of new stresses in the power structure.

The short HWA article was followed by a Stanley Rader article entitled "Christ's Apostle in the Philippines." It began with "Christ's Apostle will be leaving Manila today..." and after numerous references to "Christ's Apostle," ended with, "Yes, Christ's Apostle has certainly begun 1981 with a running start -1981 should be the biggest year yet in the history of the Work."

February 24 - The Pasadena Star-News, in an article entitled "Banished Garner Ted Armstrong May Return," quoted Stanley Rader (who "leaked" the story to the Star-News) as saying Ted could be back within a month "if there is proper repentance."

Dick Lloyd, the reporter covering the story, revealed deep insight into the inner workings of the WCG when he wrote:

"If Rader's acknowledgement of a possible return is a strange twist after months of vilifying the son, it is a routine experience in the church, which has played yo-yo for years with programs and personalities...."

Later on in the article, Lloyd stated:

"There is widespread speculation in the church that Garner Ted Armstrong, 48, is coming back, Rader said, taking pains not to discourage it and seemingly opening the door for an inquiry."

But when Lloyd contacted GTA about the matter, GTA said, "I don't know a thing about it." Nevertheless Ted told the reporter he didn't rule out the possibility of returning to the WCG. GTA said it all depended on how the offer was made and by whom. (We have learned that Stan Rader has tried repeatedly to contact GTA by phone, but Ted has rudely refused both to speak to him or to return the calls.) GTA told Lloyd he would not be the one making the overtures toward reconciliation and that he would not talk to go-betweens.

Two days later, Garner Ted was in the Pasadena area - to tape a segment for a CBS news broadcast, he claimed. And Herbert Armstrong, who had not made a public appearance in California in two years, was also in Pasadena. Ironically, however, their paths evidently did not cross. Each hoped the other would initiate a reconciliation call but neither could muster the required degree of humility.

HWA, who had secretly summoned 250 WCG ministers to Pasadena from around the world, was not able to make the announcement he had wished to make that GTA had repented and would return. Instead, he announced to the assembled clergymen that Stanley Rader's resignation as church treasurer would take effect Sunday, March 1, and not on July 1 as previously announced. Armstrong praised Rader for being a "mastermind" and for being of great service to the church. Said HWA, "I feel that Mr. Rader's salary is grossly inadequate for these extraordinary services" (Pasadena Star-News, Feb. 26). To rectify the situation, HWA announced he was presenting Mr. Rader with a bonus - $250,000 net.

The next day Garner Ted Armstrong, back in Tyler, was furious. The Tyler-Telegraph (February 27) carried these GTA comments:

"'He [Rader] resigned from a nonexistent post in a non-existent corporation,' Ted Armstrong said. 'They fired every individual on the payroll list of Worldwide Church of God and rehired them all through Herbert W. Armstrong Corp. Sole, based in Tucson, Ariz.'"

"In what the younger Armstrong called a 'snow job,' all the Worldwide Church assets were transferred to the new corporation sole.

"'He steps down from nothing, he loses no power, because all the power is concentrated in my father and in corp. sole,' Armstrong charged.

"Ted Armstrong added that as long as Rader remains legal adviser to the church, head of the auditing agency, owner of the advertising agency that handles all church accounts, and right-hand man of Herbert Armstrong, he is a church power.

"The ousted Armstrong said he was dumbfounded to read in the newspaper Thursday morning that Rader had been granted a $250,000 bonus on his 'retirement,' what Armstrong called an 'astronomical bonus on top of his breathtaking salary.'

"I have a letter here from my father to the church constituency urging them to 'sacrifice as never before' because the church was in dire need of money,' Armstrong said. 'In fact, he said if the constituency experiences any tax break this year, to send that in to the church.'

"Armstrong said he found it odd that such a large bonus was handed to Rader when the church was 'screaming for money.'"

Big Sandy To Reopen

The same day Herbert Armstrong spoke to the assembled ministers in Pasadena, Virginia Kineston, Rader's secretary, confirmed to the news media that rumors of Big Sandy reopening were true. The Texas campus of Ambassador College, closed since 1977, will reopen in September as a junior college with an enrollment of 100 new freshmen and 75 transfer students from Pasadena.

The decision, announced a few days earlier to church leaders by Herbert Armstrong, contradicted earlier statements made by Stanley Rader. As recently as August, Rader has stated that the Big Sandy Ambassador College campus would never reopen. The new dean of faculty of the Big Sandy campus will be Pastor Don Ward. Ironically, it was Garner Ted's appointment of Dr. Ward to that same position three years ago that was cited by HWA then as one of the central mistakes requiring his son's demotion. In addition to Ward, the Mar. 16, 1981, Worldwide News mentioned that Evangelist Leon Walker will be deputy chancellor, while Ron Kelly will again be dean of students. One source feels that the opening of Big Sandy may be one of the inducements to lure Garner Ted back, as the Big Sandy campus was Ted's favorite.

Rader's Power Waning?

While Stanley Rader remains an advisor to HWA, in recent weeks his influence on HWA has diminished considerably. For instance, Henry Cornwall, Rader's long-time associate, is no longer making HWA his full-time concern. For two years he has personally monitored HWA's activities in Tucson, but now he has been replaced as Armstrong's day-to-day aide by long-time WCG minister Bob Fahey. One Tucson source points out that HWA has also become suspicious of his wife Ramona's loyalties, believing she may be overly biased toward Stanley Rader's points of view. A separation would not surprise anyone. In fact, as we go to press, Herbert Armstrong has apparently been spotted residing in his old Pasadena residence. Ramona Armstrong, however, was not seen in Pasadena.

Editors Quit Quest Magazine

Since its inception four years ago, Quest magazine has been both a major drain on WCG finances and a cause of disgruntlement among many WCG members who often found its editorial content offensive. During that four years, however, church leaders often distanced themselves from Quest's editorial content by claiming they had no control over what went into that publication. Now, however, that tune has changed.

The January 12 issue of both Time and Newsweek reported the resignation of Quest's editor Robert Shnayerson and his five top staff members. Newsweek reported:

"The first open sign of the upheaval came when the 88-year-old Armstrong took out a crusading full-page newspaper ad, of the kind he publishes from time to time. This one, in the Wall Street Journal, addressed the Arab-Israeli crisis under a typically high-voltage headline (A Voice Cries Out ... Peace Out of Conflict??). But at the end of the ad, he struck a different note. 'I suggest,' he wrote, 'you read my cover story in Quest/81... on the Middle East controversy, its origin and President Sadat's planned World Peace Center.'

"For the Quest editors, the Journal ad signaled defeat in a battle that had begun early last month, when the magazine received an unsolicited 3,000-word article in the mail. According to Shnayerson, the article was an idiosyncratic account of the origins of strife in the Middle East, which also lavished praise on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's proposed peace center at the base of Mount Sinai. Riddled with exclamation points and written in a hortatory style, it was the kind of piece, Shnayerson says, that he would have rejected routinely - except that its author happened to be Armstrong.

"To head off a showdown, Shnayerson wrote to Armstrong's chief aide, Stanley R. Rader, arguing that such articles would cast Quest as 'a house organ for a church' rather than as a general-interest magazine. 'Traditional national advertisers won't touch church magazines,' said Shnayerson, whose letter to Rader emphasized how assiduously he and the advertising staff had worked to convince Madison Avenue that Quest is a sophisticated, strictly secular publication. Such an 'abrupt jettisoning of editorial standards,' cautioned Shnayerson, would result in 'a critical loss of revenue.' For a time, Shnayerson says, there seemed to be a chance of compromise, with Armstrong's article to be replaced by a straight journalistic account of the peace-center project. But that hope was dashed by the Armstrong ad."

Contacted by Newsweek, poolside at a Manila hotel, Rader contradicted earlier official statements, saying: "There is no such thing as the editor's autonomy... Mr. Shnayerson is not under any contract other than as a paid editor working under control." In other words, Rader has been responsible for Quest's editorial content all along.

At the time-the Newsweek article appeared, few realized it, but it was an indication that HWA was reasserting his authority and that Stan Rader's influence on the Armstrong empire was in decline. As we go to press, we have just heard that plans are in the works for a discontinuance of financial support for Quest. Without the church's subsidies, Quest magazine - a Rader pet project - will be doomed.

HWA Establishes Council of Elders

With HWA approaching 89 (July 31) and Rader's star fading fast, the question again surfaces: Who will succeed Herbert Armstrong? While Herbert has for years bragged that he was appointed by Jesus Christ and not some committee, and while numerous WCG preachers have been teaching that HWA would live until Christ returns, Herbert Armstrong has now designated a committee to choose his successor at his death.

The panel's existence was made public shortly after it became clear that Garner Ted Armstrong would not reinstate himself in the WCG through proper repentance. According to Stan Rader (Pasadena Star-News, Feb. 28), the membership of the committee will not remain constant but currently includes Raymond McNair, Dean Blackwell, Joe Tkach, Ellis LaRavia, and Dibar Apartian. Many in the WCG regard the committee formation as a final blow to any possibility Stan Rader may have had of becoming the official head of the WCG upon Herbert Armstrong's death.

One might suspect that the newly formed council of elders would appoint one of their own upon HWA's demise. But as one looks down the list of its members, one finds not one individual with the intelligence, administrative ability, or charisma demanded by such a position.

However, there are a number of individuals who aspire to the position who are not members of the council. For instance, there is Roderick Meredith. Highly ambitious, he was for years considered the number three man in the WCG. In fact, he himself considered himself number five "in the universe" (humbly, after God the Father, Jesus Christ, HWA, and GTA). While not on the new council of elders, he is still quite popular with many so-called "right-wingers," a group well-represented on the council. He has recently been boning up on his broadcasting skills for what he speculates is his inevitable takeover of the "World Tomorrow" microphone.

Another name that should not be overlooked is that of Gerald Waterhouse. While viewed as an outright kook by some fellow ministers, Waterhouse is perceived by many church members as currently the WCG's most powerful preacher. Loud, long-winded, and almost hypnotic to some, Waterhouse has gained a devoted following in the WCG with his calls for blind devotion to HWA. Yet questions persist about his mental balance. Here are quotes from some of his more memorable sermons of the past two years:

"No one can disagree with HWA and be right in God's eyes: No one:"

"HWA's office is the most vital office on the face of the earth by far..."

"This is the Work of God...and he will always work through HWA without exception...God will work through no other. God will keep HWA alive up to 3½ days of Jesus Christ's return. You can rest assured of that. If HWA needs another 900 years, God has proven he can give it ....God could keep HWA alive a million, a billion years in the flesh, did you know that?... God has given absolute promises in regard to HWA ....We are called to be on HWA's team ....Everyone called in this age is called to be on HWA's team."

"We will be so locked-in to Christ through his apostle that we will go and do...whatever Christ leads the apostle to lead us in.... The prophecy of HWA as far as being a messenger is absolute. It shows he will live to Christ's coming.... He will die 3½ days before, and that's for a purpose too...."

"You don't die for something unless you believe it. So when they finally are convinced of Christ's authority through HWA and realize their future is at stake, then they have something to die for ....They've got to or else.... Everyone that has ever rebelled against HWA can make it [salvation] on the condition that he come back to acknowledge the power and authority through HWA...and dies testifying he will support...."

GTA Still at It

After all is said and done, we won't be surprised if Garner Ted returns to head the WCG. As this is being written, we have heard that he is planning a call to his father to discuss a possible reconciliation.

The March 8 Tyler Courier-Time-Telegraph carried an article on GTA. The GTA quotes it contained show a GTA that hasn't really changed all that much. Here are a few excerpts:

"My father may have made some wrong decisions along the way ...but I believe he is utterly dedicated and sincere in his religious convictions.'

"God gave me a gift, an ability ....' They can turn that camera and light on and, with any subject out of the Bible, I can do a bang-up, ad-lib job for 30 minutes without a note.'

"After they got rid of me, I became the whipping boy for everything that happened to that institution...' his son said. 'Then they began to get a little dirty about it - unpleasant and scurrilous innuendos. It was very sad. I would not get down in the gutter with them and I won't do it now.'

"Here I'm preaching the same thing. It's the same person, the same personality, the same voice, the same Bible, the same marks in my Bible, the same old notes sometimes."

In our March 24, 1980, newsletter we predicted (p.8) GTA would start an evangelistic association. That has now come to pass. It's called, "The Garner Ted Armstrong Evangelistic Association." It's not difficult to see why this was started. In his Jan. 30 co-worker letter GTA warns his followers:

"As a caution, in my letter explaining the need for separate television funds, I mentioned I certainly hoped people would not take money from the normal income for the church and simply earmark the same tithes and offerings they were sending anyhow, but for a different purpose.

"However, the reports I have been given for the past several weeks have strongly indicated that many may have done just that: The income in these last few weeks has begun to slide dramatically for the work of the church!

"I'm sure all of you know we are running a very tight ship indeed, that there simply is no such thing as 'fat' in our lean, tough, small and hardworking organization!

"When we are forced with making cuts we are cutting into the lean; right into the flesh and bone of the operation, not into any excess 'fat.'"

Of course, the "excess fat" does not include his own salary. He recently gave himself a raise - he's making over $60,000 a year now. And, of course, there's an expense account. And let's not forget his three sons are on the payroll too.

But while GTA is getting by financially, he's not without some difficulties. In the CGI church newspaper for December 1980 GTA wrote an article entitled "Members Avert Tragedy." It concerned the arrest of a young man shortly after a GTA personal appearance in Chicago. According to the article, the recent church schism had caused the young man personal problems and he was contemplating the murder of an ex-girlfriend and suicide, but not before assassinating Garner Ted Armstrong to help the WCG and the CGI "get back together."

The WCG in the News

We should point out that during December, January, February, and March the WCG has been in the news media almost constantly. Limited space does not permit more than a passing reference to some of these "splashes."

But for the record, the Dec. 29, 1980, issue of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette had an interesting article on the WCG by Bohdan Hodiak entitled "Church Executive Savors Victory Over California." This article gave an overview of the WCG's recent history. It ended with: "'We know this is the end time,' Rader said, giving the world about a dozen more years. His financial contract with the WCG, however, runs until 2003."

The January 6 and January 10 Pasadena Star-News carried articles about an Anne Truelove (a.k.a. Margaret Wilson) who, for days, waited in front of Ambassador College with a "message from God." On Jan. 3, she apparently strode up to the Ambassador auditorium podium after sabbath services to ask if she could see Mr. Armstrong. She was immediately disfellowshipped by minister Robin Webber. She then began her vigil.

The Feb. 23 issue of Time magazine carried an article on the WCG, nothing new, just a short summary of the WCG's recent problems.

During this time the WCG has also been running full-page ads in The Wall Street Journal (in an attempt too convert the stock brokers of the world?). One bizarre ad we found particularly amusing appeared in the Feb. 23 issue. Signed by HWA, the long, three-sentence headline read: "A Voice Cries Out: The Executive with Rose-Colored Glasses. He was a bit ahead of his time. Still, things will be far more rosy than he sees them now:" Some Garner Ted followers wondered if HWA had Stan Rader in mind when he wrote this ad.

On March 2 the WCG officially dropped its $800 million lawsuit against the State of California. The action officially brought to a close the more than two years of litigation that commenced Jan. 2, 1979, when the attorney general brought his lawsuit against the WCG's leadership. Rader, in making the announcement, said the WCG did not want to be perceived by the public as an aggressor, nor did the church want to spend vast sums on further litigation.

McElroy Wins

In past issues we mentioned Wisconsin farmer George McElroy's legal battle with the WCG. We are happy to report that that battle is finally over and that Mr. McElroy will be keeping his farm. We think you may find the following AP news item of interest.

"A Barron County farmer, 'blinded by programming' of a California church, won appellate court approval Tuesday of his attempt to recover a farm he gave to the organization. The church insisted its First Amendment rights were being violated, but the 3rd District Court of Appeals said a church, like 'every other person and corporation, is obliged to obey the law relating to undue influence.'

"George D. McElroy, 67, said he gave his $14,000 farm in 1969 to Ambassador College of the Worldwide Church of God and the World Tomorrow....McElroy...won a Circuit Court case for return of the farm, plus more than $7,000 in other contributions. The church appealed.

"McElroy's testimony was sufficient to allow a reasonable jury to find by clear, satisfactory and convincing evidence that the deed was the product of undue influence by the church,' the three-man appellate court said. The court was told that McElroy, troubled by a divorce, 'was looking for meaning in life' when he heard the church's broadcasts and began reading its literature.

"He said he was persuaded to reduce his herd of dairy cows by more than 50 percent, was convinced the world would end in 1972, and donated his farm through a deed prepared by the church. The case's documents include a letter from a church attorney which begins: 'Greetings once again from the legal office of God's work.'"

The WCG in History

Unknown to most people in the Western world is the fact that there are significant stirrings among the world's 800 million Muslims. While many today are aware of Arab-Israeli tensions, OPEC, and the problems in Iran, most Westerners are not aware of the growing unity of the Islamic peoples and the significance this has for the future of the entire world.

In the February 1 issue of the Los Angeles Times there appeared in the Opinion section a remarkable article by Don A. Schanche entitled "Islam Reborn." Mr. Schanche explains in detail how Islam is on the move in dramatic ways and how the Islamic world is growing increasingly more united. In explaining the history of this vast international religious-political movement, Mr. Schanche wrote:

"The Islamic conference, for example, was born in a worldwide surge of Muslim outrage over the August, 1969, burning of Jerusalem's Al Aksa mosque, third holiest shrine in Islam after Mecca and Medina, by a deranged Australian Jew, who many Muslims believed was a pawn in a Zionist plot.

"The call to gather in Rabat, Morocco, to unify and do something to redress the outrage drew only 25 of the more than 40 nations in the world with Muslim majorities. With only one cause to unite them, the kings and presidents talked for only a day and issued a call for the restoration of Arab sovereignty over Jerusalem and other territories occupied by Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Then they adjourned. The meeting and the newly founded organization were all but ignored by the rest of the world....

"Last week, with its membership now grown to 42, but attendance weakened by the suspension of Egypt and Soviet-occupied Afghanistan and the pointed absence of Iran and Libya, the Islamic conference went a long way toward achieving its long-sought goal of power in unity."

It is worth remembering that the individual responsible for the 1969 Al Aksa mosque burning was Dennis Rohen, a Plain Truth reader and Armstrong co-worker, who had at that time and later on sought to become a baptized member of the WCG. Herbert Armstrong acknowledged (The Plain Truth, Oct. 1969, pp.1,47) that Rohm was a Plain Truth subscriber and was taking the WCG's Bible Correspondence Course, but he failed to mention that Rohen admitted he was attempting to hasten the fulfillment of HWA's prophecy that another great Temple would soon adorn the sight of the old Temple - which was where Al Aksa mosque was situated. Interestingly, thereafter, HWA insisted neither he nor the WCG had ever said a new Temple would be rebuilt. But that doesn't nullify the fact that the church did indeed teach that doctrine (see The Plain Truth, June 1967, p.1; March 1968, p.8).

Suffer Not Little Children to Be Brainwashed

With so many children of WCG families leaving the WCG as soon as they obtain majority, it's no wonder that the Armstrong church's leadership has decided to make an extra effort to get a hold on the minds and tithes of these potential converts. Leading the way is a new WCG periodical called Youth 81. The first edition appeared in January and featured a portrait of Herbert Armstrong on the cover.

The editorial direction of the new magazine is perhaps best exemplified in a crossword puzzle found on page 13 of the first issue. Here are the clues to some of the blanks the little kiddies were asked to fill in: (1) "Complete name of 'Mr. HWA,'" (2) "Year in which Mr. Armstrong was born - spell out, " (3) "Day of month on which Mr. Armstrong was born - spell out," (4) "State in which Mr. Armstrong was born," (5) "At age 18 Mr. Armstrong learned he had aptitude in this field," (6) "At age 18, Mr. Armstrong earned this reputation," (7) "First name of Mr. Armstrong's maternal great grandfather," (8) "Mr. Armstrong's parents' religion," (9) "Mr. Armstrong learned he also had aptitude in this field," (10) "Month in which Mr. Armstrong was born," (11) "City of Mr. Armstrong's birth," (12) "Mr. Armstrong was told he would become a Philadelphia____," (13) "On Mr. Armstrong's first advertising job, this is what he was assigned to write - two words," (14) "First name of Mr. Armstrong's uncle, who guided Mr. Armstrong's career the first 11 years," (15) "Another word for rules," (16) "Name of king of England to whom Mr.

Armstrong can trace lineage," etc. We found it significant how much Armstrong-centered (as opposed to God-centered) the new publication was.

Lennon's Music-A Loud Squawk

Since our last newsletter came out, we have all been saddened to hear of the murder of singer-songwriter John Lennon. But not surprisingly Herbert Armstrong had a different view. In his front-page article, "How the Beatles Changed the Culture of the Western World" (The Worldwide News, Dec. 22, 1980), Herbert had this to say about Lennon's music: "I had never thought of it as music, but a loud raucous SQUAWK and SCREAM with a fast beat - just an irritating noise.... I have heard roosters make a loud raucous squawk when being captured for a Sunday dinner when I was a boy," Herbert craned, "but I just never had been 'educated' to call that 'music.'" One paragraph later Herbert begs his readers to "please bear with me in my ignorance."

We can't remember a single squawk or scream in "Michelle" or "Yesterday" - two of Lennon's most famous songs. But Herbert writes as though Lennon's music was all noise.

Further on Herbert writes of Lennon:

"Of the Beatles, Lennon seemed to be the 'brains.' ...he was influenced by Eastern psychedelic and demon influences. His voice was the most gritty, raucous and hard, angry, driving and determined of the group. Yet he became like mild putty in the hands of his Japanese wife. In later years he became the househusband, tending the child and house duties while the dominating wife supervised investments and business matters. In his search for something that would satisfy his troubled mind, he went into things mystic and psychedelic - not realizing they were Satan influenced."

Toward the end of his article, Herbert declares that Lennon was "leading a misguided humanity further into Satan's way of life" and that Lennon's killer himself was possibly demon possessed.

While such views are considered decidedly wacky by most people, those who know Herbert have come to realize that all his adversaries are called "Satan-inspired" or "demon possessed." Even those who simply disagree are accused of having "demon influence." Amusingly, though, Herbert's critics (as well as WCG ministers, surprisingly) are claiming Herbert often behaves much like those in the Bible who were said to be possessed.

Certainly, HWA's attack on the assassinated composer has done little to bolster church confidence in Herbert's mental balance. Even Garner Ted Armstrong found his father's diatribe too much to bear. While not mentioning his father by name, in an article entitled "What Is God's Kind of Music?" (The International News, Jan.-Feb. 1981), GTA assailed his father's dogmatic view on music and then went on to express sympathy for the family of the fallen composer. Aiming an obvious barb at his dad's worship of classical music, Ted wrote:

"When I hear some of the songs John Lennon and others of the Beatles wrote in various arrangements, especially some of their best works played by symphony orchestras, I have to admit that such music is... far more enjoyable than almost anything ever written by Debussy or Bach."

Armstrong's Doctrines Unique?

Lately there has been a spate of articles in such publications as Time and the Los Angeles Times accusing Seventh-day Adventist prophetess Ellen G. White of plagiarism in compiling 53 volumes of religious writings. We find that amusing because we have reported in past ARs how Herbert Armstrong is guilty of this very vice himself. One of his oldest and most heavily advertised booklets, The Proof of the Bible, was taken, in part, from a much earlier Adventist publication, Prophecy Speaks!, which, by the way, contained certain biblical and archaeological inaccuracies that Herbert gullibly accepted without challenge. To this day he has never acknowledged his booklet's errors concerning prophecies about Tyre and Babylon. Evangelist Herman Hoeh, realizing the stupidity of some of the booklet's historical claims, took it upon himself in the Dec. 1980 Good News to point out some of the fallacies in Herbert's arguments.

Hoeh declared that the prophecy about Tyre, a modern-day Lebanese city, "is not the challenge to the skeptic we assumed. It is a prophecy yet to be fulfilled by Jesus Christ..." (p.39). Hoeh, in an uncharacteristic display of humility, admitted: "I was wrong" (p.5). But very wisely, he never once says Herbert was wrong. Nevertheless, we heard that an enraged Herbert had the magazine recalled two weeks after it had been mailed to subscribers.

After listening to Herbert and skimming through his rambling writings, one cannot help but notice that he claims many of his doctrines are revelations from God - "unique truths" revealed to God's "true church." But what unsuspecting members haven't realized is that most of Herbert's "new" truths were taught in essentially the same form by other church groups decades before Herbert decided to become a man of the cloth.

Recently another book on the Armstrong movement came to our attention: Ambassadors of Armstrongism by Paul N. Benware. One of the most scholarly books on Armstrongism we've seen - it has 15 pages of footnotes and a 7-page bibliography - this book spends almost a whole chapter illustrating how several of Herbert's "unique concepts" were being taught by other religious groups long before Herbert became a minister.

Author Benware explains that "Herbert Armstrong was affiliated for several years with the Church of God (Seventh-day), which is an offshoot of Seventh-day Adventism. The influence of Adventism is readily apparent by comparing quotations from Armstrong's writings and those of Adventist writers, and Mr. Armstrong himself admits studying much of their literature" (see The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, 1967, p.338).

In chapter 2 Benware documents the similarity of the teachings of Herbert Armstrong to those of the Seventh-day Adventists, the Jehovah's Witnesses, Mormons, and the Church of God movement. Here are some of the major areas of similarity he discusses:

Seventh-day Adventists: sabbath keeping, Sunday observance is the mark of the beast, keeping the Ten Commandments is necessary for salvation, the moral and ceremonial laws are different, man is mortal and has no soul, immortality is conditional, the new birth is connected with the resurrection, et al.

Jehovah's Witnesses: the trinity is pagan, the holy spirit is a force, Jesus rose in a spiritual body, the wicked will be annihilated, et al.

Mormons: the deity is the ultimate goal for men and men will eventually join the Godhead, the Fall was planned by God, the true church has been lost since the apostles' day, the name "Elohim" shows a plurality of Gods, et al.

The Church of God movement: the idea of "church of God" being the true name of the church, the insistence that Jesus was crucified on a Wednesday and rose on a Saturday, sabbath keeping, the declaration that certain holidays (Christmas, Easter, etc.) are pagan and should not be observed by Christians, both organizations had a pamphlet entitled "Has Time Been Lost?", et al.

Benware points out, as the AR has on several occasions, that Herbert's teachings on the U.S. and British Commonwealth in prophecy are not unique to him but were copied wholesale from J. H. Allen's book, Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright (first published in 1902), and British-Israelism theory, which flourished in the 1800s.

It is Benware's conclusion that the WCG's system of teachings is "eclectic" because the church "has evidently borrowed, incorporated and revised doctrines from others and brought them into its system. It cannot legitimately say that it holds the key to the truth of the Scriptures, while at the same time holding too the identical teachings of other groups.... This is especially true when the other systems were on the religious scene years before the founding of the Worldwide Church of God" (p.26).

Tuit Book Finally Out

John Tuit has informed us that, after numerous delays, his book The Truth Shall Make You Free ($8.00, The Truth Foundation, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold Township, NJ 07728) has finally rolled off the press and will be mailed out this week. Mr. Tuit was one of the initiators of the State of California versus Worldwide lawsuit, and his book covers that lawsuit in some detail.

The Tuit book also reviews a bit of Garner Ted Armstrong's past - a fact that has not delighted the GTA organization. Benny Sharp, a GTA aide, angrily told Tuit: "Just because Ted went out and _____ed a few girls, you don't have to bring all that up again:"

But Tuit believes Ted's past history is relevant today. When GTA was thrown out of the WCG in 1978, Tuit was one of those who thought that GTA had really changed, and he hoped the CGI would be set up differently than the HWA church, but it didn't turn out that way. Tuit spent some time visiting the Tyler organization and came away very disillusioned. Says Tuit, "I just didn't like the moral climate. The constant dirty jokes and smutty attitudes really bothered me. Also it's become increasingly obvious that the CGI is GTA-centered. I had hoped it would be Christ-centered."

Tuit isn't the only one who's been disappointed by the GTA organization. One former ministerial assistant told us recently how he paid a visit to GTA's Tyler headquarters on Dec. 31. He was surprised to discover a New Year's Eve party in progress. GTA aide Ron Dart, however, explained to him that it wasn't really a New Year's Eve celebration (which the church calls "pagan") but a "year-end party" which was necessary to avoid offending the CGI's numerous unconverted employees.

Robinson Fights On

David Robinson, author of Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web and former WCG minister, is still locked in a costly lawsuit over his book. According to Robinson, "HWA continues to use the court system - and appeals - to seek a reversal of the order which permitted us [he and his wife] to distribute the book. What can he prove if he wins? Nothing. All he can do is inflict oppressive financial strain in order to reap vengeance," especially since "thousands of copies of the book are now in the hands of the public." To continue the legal battle, Robinson wrote a letter to those who had purchased his book, asking for contributions to help him pay a $22,000 bill for legal fees.

Where Are They Now?

We are always receiving letters asking us where former well-known headquarters employees of the Armstrong organization have gone and how they are faring. As we have reported, most are doing extremely well - showing a creativity and hidden talent that the Armstrong organization refused to tap. Herbert believed in a strict authoritarian style of management, refusing to delegate any real authority to the yes men with whom he surrounded himself. Rather than developing incisive thinkers and challenging his subordinates to surpass his accomplishments, he encouraged just the opposite by his frequent temper tantrums, layoffs, and firings. Little did he know what a wealth of talent lay waiting to be tapped in his organization if he would only have changed his medieval managerial style.

Take former Ambassador biblical archaeological instructor Chris Patton and his wife Denise. Their success story was written up in none other than The Wall Street Journal (March 5, 1981, p.15). The article describes how they bought and sold their first home for a tidy profit and had the foresight to realize there was still lots of money to be made in real estate. So in 1979 they entered the market in earnest. Since then they have parlayed their real estate transactions and Denise's design business "into a cluster of enterprises from renovation to property management. Real estate has made them wealthy (though they decline to specify their assets)." They do admit that they bought $3 million in residential income property, all of which was financed in a series of no-money-down deals.

Chris and Denise own everything from slums to luxury areas, and they expect their holdings to appreciate at 10% to 15% this year. Their specialty has become buying "problem property" and restoring it. In one of their most speculative deals, the Journal reports, "the Pattons ventured into the ghetto of south-central Los Angeles and bought the site of the fiery 1974 shootout between Los Angeles police and the so-called Symbionese Liberation Army, which had kidnapped heiress Patricia Hearst." This site included seven adjacent houses and one burned-out foundation. "The houses were indescribably filthy," Denise was quoted as saying, "with roaches and rats." But their persistence and hard work in renovating them paid off handsomely, and they realized a net appreciation of about $75,000 and are now earning 12% interest on a mortgage in that amount provided for the new owner.

Chris and Denise Patton aren't the only former Armstrong employees who have achieved success since leaving the employment of the Worldwide Church of God/Ambassador College. We are happy to report that former evangelist Charles Hunting was recently married to an English lady and is working in real-estate development in Florida. Jerry Horton, a former supervisor in the Pasadena radio studio, is managing a Denny's restaurant in Orange County (California). George Johnson, who used to write for the editorial department, is pastoring a Church of God (Seventh-day) congregation in Michigan. Kathy Zimmermann, who worked in the registrar's office and continuing education, is about to receive her master's degree in computer science and is now a project manager at Security Pacific bank.

The following individuals are employed as cost engineers in Alhambra: Jerry Baker, former section head of co-worker and subscriber development in the personal correspondence department; Wayne Antion, former member of the theology department and PT staff; Stan Suchocki, one-time elder and member of the personal correspondence department; Paul Knedel, former PT writer and news bureau staff member; John Heskett, one-time mail processing center supervisor.

Tom Rogers, once an auditor for Rader, Cornwall, Kessler, and Palazzo and an employee of the French department and CAD, is a CPA in San Jose, California. Barbara Saye, onetime secretary to Richard Rice, is working for Parsons Constructors Inc. as secretary to a project manager. Joe Bohannon, who was the Weekly Comments editor in the mail-processing center, is employed as a production coordinator with a manufacturing company in Burbank. Glenn Parker, once budget director for the Armstrong organization and business manager for Quest magazine, is a management trainee for 7-Eleven Food Stores in Texas. Cheryl Graunke, former executive secretary for Robert Kuhn and Garner Ted Armstrong, is an administrative assistant for a wealthy investor who is chairman of the board of five companies, including Standard Wire & Cable; Stainless Steel Products; and Bell, Riddell, Inc. (makers of pro football and motorcycle helmets).

Gary Reid, former manager of systems development in the data-processing department, is the systems manager at a Toronto, Canada, bank. Howard Clark, former WCG pastor and AC faculty member, is president of an organization called Institute for the Preservation of the American Family. His group helps the handicapped and offers counseling, aptitude testing, vocational rehabilitation, and alcohol abuse rehabilitation. He says his non-profit organization presently has many more requests for services than funds available to pay for them. He can be reached at P.O. Box 1214, Paradise, CA 95969. Mike Kneebone, former WCG minister, is working as a supervisor for Maritime Life Assurance (the Canadian subsidiary of John Hancock) at the head office in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Keith Crouch, who was a minister and faculty member, is the manager of Don Ricardo's restaurant in the Santa Anita Fashion Park in Arcadia, California.

Peter Grieder, who did accounting work for the French department, is now the director of the International Division of Denny's restaurants. Presently, he is traveling virtually all over the world setting up Denny's branches. Former minister Milo Wilcox now has received his doctor of chiropractic.

One former Ambassador College instructor-administrator we are often asked about is Joe Bauer. Readers will remember Joe as the MC of many GTA personal appearances, the director of many "World Tomorrow" telecasts, the founder of the Ambassador College big band, and one of the early administrators of the AICF concert series.

Since leaving the employment of the Armstrong organization Joe has continued working in the entertainment-communications field and with considerable success. In the last few years, he has produced television programs, produced and directed a critically acclaimed revival of "South Pacific," managed singer Debbie Roberts (of the Liberace show), and was a top executive with Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas. He is currently senior vice president of a Las Vegas entertainment network.

Dr. Ernest Martin, director of the Foundation for Biblical Research in Pasadena, has recently received worldwide acclaim for his research on the date of Jesus' birth and the star of Bethlehem. According to the Pasadena Star-News, he "has melded astronomy, secular history, and biblical research to provide what he believes is astounding new credibility to the New Testament narratives of the Nativity by writers of the synoptic gospels Luke and Matthew" (Dec. 11, 1980). Martin's theories explain what the star of Bethlehem was and when it appeared, that the Magi bearing gifts was not a fable, and that Jesus was born sometime in the 3-2 B.C. period, not in 7-5 B.C. as believed by scholars for centuries. Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles, the California Academy of Sciences in San Francisco, the University of Arizona, and the University of Nebraska changed their Christmas programs to reflect Martin's new findings, as did about 25 other planetariums in the U.S., Germany, and Greece. Scores of others are considering a shift. Martin's research is available in a revised book titled The Birth of Christ Recalculated, which sells for $9.95 (this includes postage).

I was very disappointed to learn Gov. Brown had signed the Petris bill into law. If he is that misinformed, all I can say is I'm thankful he didn't get a chance to be President of the United States.

-Ohio

In light of the recent "victory," when the attorney general dropped the suit against the WCG, it may be asked whether the church is better off with Rader at its helm or forced from his post. Naturally, most church members, who do not enjoy a reputation of perceptive foresight or love for facing problems squarely, "think" with their emotions and greatly rejoice that "God" has once again delivered them. But delivered them from what or into what? That's the question. For the moment, the church has a few days of calm. But its leadership is one that feeds on crises. This church would soon collapse if there was not some real or fictitious problem to be battled. The next crisis will surely come, so stay tuned.

-California

I haven't been to services since last February, and the only interest shown in my behalf was one phone call (long distance) from the minister - all that bunch in interested in is money! I haven't received The Plain Truth, Worldwide News, or Good News since early summer, and when I write to inquire I do not receive a reply.

-Idaho

We were disfellowshipped from the WCG about two years ago, due mostly to speaking against Stan Rader. We resigned from the WCG about three months ago because we weren't getting answers to questions on doctrine - mostly on Galatians. Thank you for all the informative material. Many former questions have been answered.

-Florida

My wife and I are ex-members. We left the WCG two years ago because we made people angry by asking too many questions they wouldn't and couldn't answer. The people treated us coldly because we couldn't agree with many church teachings, and when we used scripture from the Bible in our questions, this made them very angry.

-Ohio

When will their ministers stop and ask themselves this one question: If there is only one mediator between God and man (that mediator is Jesus Christ) and if every minister who has a following is in reality a mediator, who are they a mediator for? They can't be for God because God has only one mediator.

-Minnesota

I've read all of your literature and I thank you for sharing your thoughts and beliefs with me and others. But no I don't need on want your AR anymore. I made a decision 16 years ago to follow what I believe is God's way, being taught through those whom I believe are teaching basic God-ordained truths.

The men, some of them (handsome, smooth-as-butter speakers) have come and gone, and we are still alive, growing, and going strong. So until someone else comes along that can, will, and does preach God's world as effectively as the Worldwide Church of God ministry, then I'm going to stay right where I'm at. Because I think this is it! And if I'm wrong, then God help those who are more wrong. And may God the Lord reward you according to your works.

-Ohio

Your people had better not even send me anything in the U.S. mail again. How dare you put my name on your mailing list without my permission. I want to know how you had access to my name and address. I am mailing the report dated June 20, 1980, and the envelope which is post marked August 22, 1980, to Mr. Ralph Helge, and I hope he can find out how you have access to my name. I want my name removed immediately. I promise you I will take action if you ever again send me so much as a greeting card.

-Montana

Please remove my name from your list of receivers of your slanderous reports against the Church of which I am part of the body and against Jesus Christ, who is the Head. For surely you know when you attack those anointed to lead the flock, you personally attack Jesus who anointed them. And why, oh why, do you think that I would be interested in hearing all the slime you have accused me of as a member of the WCG? It does make me even more aware and assured this is the True Church of God, for Jesus said if they persecute Him, they would most certainly persecute us. When you accusers were called into God's Church at one time, did you conjure up a report on the church you left to become a part of God's church? You are a living example of how "hate" can pervert one's mind when we do not "forgive" what we take personal offense to. If you came into the church believing Mr. Herbert Armstrong was a perfect man and not entitled to any human errors, you planted your seed erroneously in the first place, for surely you have learned through Scriptures we are and there are no perfect ones, only Creator God is perfection.

You evidently did not see the "goal" we attain for and placed the vanities of men's achievements above God's. The very fact that you have our address suggests you would bend to false ways and roads to vent your hate and lies against God's chosen. God said through His apostles the enemies of His Church would come from within and His warnings concentrate against those within us who would falsely accuse us and your report concurs this.

-Washington

Yes. I want your report but want to criticize you for giving a former minister of 30 years association with "the organization" so much space for advertising his book. He ought to hang his head in shame for having known "all these things" and kept his mouth shut "all these years - as have most ministers. Yes. I want to see this outfit exposed, stripped, and go begging as do most former ministers who "knew all the answers."

-Oregon

Editor: If your letter refers to Dave Robinson, then I believe you are somewhat in error. Robinson, according to his book, did not know of the extreme excesses in the life of HWA until quite late in his ministry. It was not long afterward that he left the WCG and pursued a course of action that has opened the eyes of perhaps thousands at great cost to himself and his family. We are not members of Robinson's Tulsa church, nor are we advocating that our readers adopt his personal philosophy or religion. But let's give credit where credit is due. Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web is an eye-opening book that will undoubtedly help many people.

Basically, I just wanted to let your readers who might be interested know what happened to yet another WCG minister who "disappeared" without a trace. After presenting several controversial research papers, one that I felt pretty well demolished the church's OT basis for three tithes, I was summarily visited twice by _____ and told that all my findings were wrong and that if I didn't adapt the things that I'd been taught in AC, they might have to dismiss me from the ministry. This happened just before the Feast of Tabernacles in 1979. After taking _____ to the airport after his first visit, I decided it was time to get out of this group. They weren't interested in seriously examining anything different from what HWA had erroneously taught for decades. I didn't tell _____ that I was going to quit until January 1980. In the meantime, I began doing more research into other fundamental church teachings and trying as subtly as possible to try to help the members in _____ to begin to use their heads. As can be expected, most didn't, though a few did. I wasn't supporting HWA or Stan Rader. I was teaching there wasn't a place of safety - fact I pointed out that the Bible doesn't even mention Petra once by name, let alone that it is some place to escape tribulation.

It was my intention to stay with the WCG until they could send out a replacement in the spring. I had long ago decided that there was little point in "dropping the bomb" on a church congregation. WCG people are simply not capable of handling that kind of information all of a sudden. I decided to simply concentrate on helping them to learn how to do fundamental Bible research for themselves, how to look things up, how to ask questions. In short, how to think! I don't know if my program will ever bear any fruit or not. Perhaps I should have simply "dropped the bomb" on them, but I'd seen that approach tried before with not a lot of success. And then, too, I felt if people are going to leave the WCG, they should do it for the right reasons. They should do it because they have proven that HWA's theology is wrong, not necessarily because of the personalities involved. After all, anywhere you go in human society you're going to find similar excesses, and pretty soon we'll all become so cynical life won't be worth living anymore.

Anyway, by the spring of 1980, the arch-conservative members and elders in _____ had had enough. I had told _____ that I was going to resign and had at the same time informed my local elders, giving them a copy of my resignation statement, which really said very little as to the real nature of why I was quitting (remember this was in early January 1980). I sent _____ a copy, besides having read it to him over the phone. I told him later that winter that I would probably read my statement on the last holy day of Unleavened Bread, which would be only a little over a month before they had planned to send my replacement. But in the fear that riddles the organization internally, _____ and the others weren't going to take any chances with me. Sunday afternoon, the day before the last holy day of Unleavened Bread, _____ called and said he was in town and that as of that minute I was relieved of my duties. They would continue to pay my salary until the end of May (they actually ended up paying me a lump sum). _____ offered me the chance to read my statement the following day, but not have any other part of the service. The next day I showed up by myself, handed my statement to one of the elders, and gave them "all my church supplies and ordination papers. I told _____ who showed up a few minutes later that I had no intention of being around to read my statement, that he could do with it what he wanted, but my family and I were taking a few days vacation. He warned me that should I try to influence the people against HWA, I wouldn't receive the severance pay they had promised. He need not have worried, I had done all I could to lay the foundation for those people to use their minds if they wanted to. And besides, I felt that as long as I maintained a good relationship with the members, I could be of help perhaps later if they needed me, rather than burning "all my bridges and embittering a tot of fine, but sadly naive people.

So, here we are back in my hometown trying to start a couple of different businesses. We aren't millionaires yet, nor do we have any desire to be. It isn't easy for us financially but we really aren't too worried. Few if any businesses are easy to start and keep growing. We are happy and do not in any way regret our decision to leave the WCG. We appreciate Ernest Martin's literature. He helped us make the transition back to normal society. We aren't affiliated with any church nor do we have any desire to be. White still in _____, after being axed, a former WCGer now with Garner Ted offered me the chance to speak to their group, but I refused. Like you, I feel Ted isn't anything but a warmed over version of his dad. I was never really comfortable as a paid minister anyway and had no desire to continue to live off the efforts of others.

In conclusion, my only wish is that my fellow colleagues will also have the courage to look into what they've been fostering off onto people and stand up for the truth . And you can add my name to your list as expunged WCG ministers. Thankfully, my wife and I woke up when we did.

-Former WCG minister

I attended the WCG from 1969 to 1976 and went to Ambassador College and got one semester's worth of their "experience," which I might add was quite enough. I decided that I had better start questioning a bit what I had so gullibly swallowed as the "truth." It has taken me four yeas to free my mind from all that ridiculous dogma. I feel that I truly see the light as I'm just beginning to understand what the New Testament is all about. I hope your organization truly flourishes and if it ever saves just one person from becoming ensnared in the WCG trap, then it has truly been a success.

-Maine

Keep up the good work! The AR is our only contact with what is going on down there in California. If it wasn't for the AR, we would still be believing HWA. You are very much in demand!!

Perhaps yours is the lone voice in the wilderness of the WCG, striving to wake up the sincere, innocent, and self-sacrificing people who believe they are doing God's work. But, we have all been so saturated in the doctrines of this falsely so-called "true church of God," that only God himself can extricate us and show us our peril. What can we do, besides praying, to help them? Member simply do not want to listen to anything against Mr. HWA, nor do they want to read Ambassador Report. It frightens them....

You see, I've known about your paper for two-and-a-half years. At first, I regarded it as "poison." Now, I know you've realized the facts and have only wanted to help members of the WCG to escape the false teachings and other subtle traps. I want you to know that the wit and humor in young articles really, but really, helps us to keep our balance, as the sad facts are laid open! Thank you so very much for all your help and your honest information. It takes men with courage to do what you are doing!

In January I relinquished my membership in the WCG and since then have been totally ostracized by my supposed "friends" of many years. Since I have multiple sclerosis and, as you may or may not know, deep emotional traumas can worsen the condition, that is exactly what has happened. Never, never will I ever again put myself in a position where any man (other than possibly my husband) can tell me whom I can befriend, or when and how I must drop them! It's amazing what irreparable damage this has done to my health.

I now stand denounced, disfellowshipped, and marked. This was done Sept. 6, 1980, but I stopped going June 28, 1980, and sent Mr. McMichael a letter withdrawing on August 1, 1980. Strange how they can put you out of the WCG after you have left and formally resigned.

-Virginia

Editor: Mr. McMichael has himself recently been disfellowshipped and accused by HWA of being "demon influenced."

I have in fear of repercussions failed to bring up a point of interest concerning the situation at WCG. I still wish to remain anonymous. Several years ago I attempted to leave my real estate and personal belongings to WCG, but in reading the fine print I found that after 20 years from the date of signing my property became the property of the WCG. Being a young man I felt that I would still need the property after that date.

I was advised by the legal department that it was a technicality required by the State of California. Needless to say I rejected the whole thing, and I am sorry to say I destroyed the copy of the will. I find it hard to believe that California would require this and could not under normal circumstances wait until death to obtain title of the property.

-Colorado

Are you people checking The Worldwide News? The incredible baloney printed about HWA being so poor, one would out of pity almost send him money for food. I believe that was in the July 14, 1980, Worldwide News. Now the August 25 issue's financial report shows that he rewards himself with about $450,000 per year. Absolutely mind boggling! Yet they are able to keep going and going!

-Minnesota

I wish to thank you sincerely for all the help you have given me through these past years. You may never know how many you have helped up here as I had many others read your reports. After so many years of hearing about the Armstrong cult, I have grown weary of hearing his name and feel liberated to be out of his clutches. I think it would help me to forget that traumatic experience by not getting your reports any more. Therefore with a grateful heart again I say thank you to you all and hope you can save others with your work. So far you have done wonders. May God bless you all and your work also.

-Canada

The more we see of this vicious cult, the more heartsick we are and grateful for the "60 Minutes" exposure! Out oldest daughter's little boy was hit by a truck, and she way harassed night and day by their minister who said it was her bad attitude that caused their terrible tragedy!

-Florida

My husband has been in Herbert Armstrong's group for nine yeas now, and we have recently separated because of the difficulties it has caused in raising our children.

-Colorado

Congratulations to the Ambassador Report for your valuable service to those of us who want to know the facts. It is quite obvious now that the "official" WCG version of recent events bears little or no resemblance to the truth.... Speaking of church government, since this term is the rationale for imposing the Government of God upon the church membership, I thought it might be instructive to point out some of HWA's own previous teachings in this regard. For any of those dedicated members who view Mr. Armstrong's writings as approaching infallibility, they shoudt be willing to scrutinize these doctrines more closely before they are willing to sacrifice their possessions, families, and possibly even lives to the cause.

Perhaps many of the WCG members do not realize that when HWA was doing the "work" in Oregon, his concept of government was 180 degrees away from the authoritarian regime that is in control today. Now many people might say, "So what? Herbert has come across new truth in the meantime." If he comes across new truth, then where did the "old truth" come from? Which truth is the real truth? I ask these questions especially since he has made statements like the following from the February 1972 Tomorrow's World, p.3: "I was not taught by man. But I way taught as was Paul, by the revelation of Jesus Christ."

Now we would not want to accuse Mr. Armstrong as he did the big established churches and denominations in that article when he said: "They do teach certain errors which they are afraid to confess, for fear they would lose members." But we should hold him to his word when he went on to say: "If we knew of any error still remaining, now, we would change it! If and when we find one in the future, we shall correct it."

There is no doubt that church government is the regimen used to keep people in line in the Worldwide Church of God. The concept has become so ingrained that I have actually listened to a minister tell his congregation that the major theme of the Bible is government. My only question is, if this is so, why do we find in an exhaustive concordance the word "government" mentioned only about five times while the word "love" is mentioned literally hundreds of times. Well, so much for the facts. The WCG doesn't seem to allow things such as these to interfere with their grandiose plans.

Recently a February 1939 issue of the Good News came into my hands. This was one written by HWA when he was operating in Eugene, Oregon. The entire issue was devoted to the subject of church government. When I began to read it, I could hardly believe my eyes. When you make an explicit comparison between the statements of Armstrong in this 1939 Good News and what he has promulgated in the years since, there are some truly astounding conclusions you can draw about the credibility of the man as a religious leader of any type of integrity....

To better illustrate the issue, I will intersperse quotations from an article by HWA entitled "Just What Is the Church," which appeared the July-August 1970 issue of Tomorrow's World with corresponding quotations from the February 1939 Good News for comparison.... In order to delineate what comes from what, HWA-39 means that the quotation comes from the Good News article and HWA-70 means the quotation comes from the Tomorrow's World article. The comparison goes as follows:

HWA-70: "But did Christ, the Head of the Church, ORGANIZE that Church? Does it have a definite form of organization? Indeed He did - and indeed it has!" [Emphasis HWA's throughout.]

HWA-39: "Jesus never set up an organization, nor did He establish any Church GOVERNMENT. "

HWA-70: "Putting all New Testament passages together, the Administrative offices, in order of rank and authority under Christ, were: 1st, apostles: 2nd, evangelists...."

HWA-39: "An Apostle does not mean one IN authority, but one under authority... nowhere in the Scripture do we find the slightest hint that the twelve constituted a higher-up church board, and nowhere were they ever given any power to rule, or govern, or decide what doctrines the other disciples must believe."

HWA-70: "God's government is government from the top down."

HWA-39: "Our Heavenly Father never planted any super-organization, or established any Church GOVERNMENT, or set man IN AUTHORITY over either spiritual or financial affairs, in the NEW Testament Church. Any such 'plan' was never planted of God... and therefore IT SHALL BE ROOTED UP."

HWA-70: "Now I have shown that the true Church of God is... composed of all who have and are being led by the Holy Spirit of God abiding in them. Yet the Church is organized."

HWA-39: "Those who are IN, and MEMBERS of an organized church government, submitting to doctrines declared... are in BABYLON. "

HWA-70: "The resurrected, eternally living Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church. The very fact the Church has a Head implies organization."

HWA-39: "It is IMPOSSIBLE to have ORGANIZATION, or GOVERNMENT, without having a MAN as the actual and real head, even though we say Christ in heaven is the Head, and continue to try to believe it that way."

HWA-70: "But it is a BIG, WORLDWIDE WORK. If every individual in it goes out alone, independently, trying to carry out the entire divine commission in whatever way he sees fit, we shall have confusion."

HWA-39: "What has split and divided up the saints in the Church of God? Nothing but ORGANIZATION... which has led to politics, ministers lusting for rule and for power... striving against each other, lining up the brethren on their side, against the other."

HWA-70: "I have... been called... to follow Christ as He leads and directs, and witness to the true light. Hundreds of millions have now HEARD, SEEN, or READ."

HWA-39: "Leaders desiring power to RULE send out misleading, exaggerated, deceiving statements designed to convince the tithe-payers that 'The Work is progressing.' What a tragedy. What a pity."

Now I can only ask, after an examination of the above statements by HWA, can anyone be a better prophet of what Herbert Armstrong has become than Armstrong himself? It must be quite obvious why very few if any of his original converts in Oregon are still around.

-State withheld

Keep up the good work. Your letters are very encouraging. It is telling it like it is! It is not a pretty picture, but it is true. I know! My husband has been a member of Armstrong's so-called church for 12 years. He is deeply hooked. Other than a miracle of God, I cannot see him coming out of this. His whole personality has completely changed. He is no longer the "happy-go-lucky" guy I married 28 years ago.

His mail from "Big Daddy in Tucson" becomes more demanding for more money and it is being giving without any thought for family. Crazy phone calls with "one word" conversations. They try to keep them so busy that there is no time for a family life especially if it is with a non-member. I pray that God will intervene soon and expose them (to my husband) for what they are.

-Signed: "Fearful"

Would it be at all possible to obtain another copy of the last issue of Ambassador Report? I made the foolish mistake of showing my wife (who is a devout follower of the Rader-Armstrong group) an article in same. Needless to say, the results were catastrophic.

Unfortunately, all or most of the people remaining in the Rader-Armstrong "church" are too ignorant, narrow-minded, or brainwashed to accept and/or acknowledge the plain truth.

You have my permission to print all or part of this letter in the Report if you so wish, provided that my name and address are deleted. I suspect that the pastor of the local church may have access to your publication, and I wouldn't care to have what's left of my marriage and family life jeopardized any further.

-State Withheld

One attorney has said that often when federal judges are appointed, they become "God." Certainly it seems that some of the WCG leaders become "God" or attempt to play "God," which seems to be in violation of one of the ten commandments, which they advocate keeping. This is past history or is it present history?

The church ministers have been quick to give financial and business advice that has been disastrous to many, including myself. Often they have no financial or business experiences or training.

-Colorado

The local church is really cracking down on its members to fill out their cards giving the church all information as to what property they own, if it's clear, if mortgaged how much is still owed, and how much money they have in banks or savings. Looks like they are preparing their trip to Petra.

-Colorado

Since I wrote you some time ago and told you of the decline of this family because my husband is in the WCG, things have become even worse because of the heavy tithing. We have a son who has cerebral palsy and has been in a private school for the handicapped for 17 years. My husband has stopped paying the tuition and our son will be sent home May 1. We live in an old pre-Civil war house because my husband doesn't want to indebt himself definitely to anything that will take money from tithes. This means I must leave my job and not have money for any health care I need or dental care. I am 59 years old and will have to take care of our son at home since he is totally handicapped.

My husband seems bent on totally subjugating me. He hates the freedom I have by earning my own money and not being tied up by the rules of WCG. You may wonder why I don't leave him - if I did our son would suffer.

Reading the AR, [I saw] the letter about the husband not having sexual relations with his unconverted wife A few years ago my husband told me we could have a good marriage without sex. Not to brag, but I am a very good looking women, and we had a very deep loving life before he joined the WCG. I've met with his minister a number of times, but he plays a cool game. As long as my husband gives over $2,000 a year to HWA, I'm the loser. He pretends to counsel, but nothing comes of it. Also remember that over $2,000 goes into the bank for second tithe, and part of that goes to HWA also.

Of course, I know my husband is trapped. If he ever leaves the church at my insistence, is forced out or gets out on his own, he'll be destroyed. He'll have nothing to live for. He has given over $35,000 to HWA in twelve years . He lost his job as a top salesman with an industrial company. He now does carpentry work with a group in his church so he can take off all his holy days, etc. We had owned a good deal of stock with Leggett and Myers. He was induced to sell it, at a loss, because it was considered gambling and it was also a whiskey and cigarette stock. However, he sent HWA a huge tithe on the proceeds. Also, all our other stock was sold in the same manner. Referring to "drinking," he and his friends drink constantly - are always getting together at any excuse to eat and drink.

My husband is a descendant of... We may ask ourselves what weakness caused my husband to throw out the fine traditions in the family and choose a debasing life.

-Wife of WCG member

Editor: Although permission was given to publish the name of this letter's author, we have not because we do not wish to do anything to enflame an already difficult marriage. We are especially saddened, however, at the utter callousness and ineptitude shown by the WCG clergy in handling situations such as this. Unfortunately, many letters that we have received show that the above situation is far from unique.

I think your readers would be interested in an article I saw some time ago. It appeared in Full Gospel Business Men's VOICE (November 1979). The cover article was titled "Turmoil - the Farrell Moughan Story." I think your readers would find Mr. Moughan's story (he is from Oxford, England) of interest because it is about how he left the WCG and found Jesus Christ. It's a very moving story. Copies can be obtained from: FGBMFI, Box 5050, Costa Mesa, CA 92626.

-California

I hope you will pass along to your reading audience [the name of a]... book entitled Armstrongism, The Worldwide Church of God Examined in the Light of Scripture by Dr. Robert L. Sumner. This may be obtained from The Biblical Evangelism Press, Brownsbury, IN 46112, hardbound edition for $7.95 plus 81¢ postage. It is advertised as fully documented, with 424 pages.

-California

May I suggest you get a hold of a paperback entitled Pawns in the Game by William G. Carr, Angriss Press, Box 2726, Hollywood, CA 90028. It really gives a very fine perspective regarding Stan Rader and the WCG as a microcosm of a world strategy.

-Australia

I would really like to contribute more for the purpose of advertising if you would establish such a fund. If your readership numbers 1,000, $6 to $7 apiece would buy a full-page ad in the Los Angeles Times, as uncle Herbert is doing. I really believe your readers would contribute toward it if they could see the result.... You people must be a secret to most Worldwide members.

-California

Editor: Thank you for your suggestion. But (1) a full-page ad in the Los Angeles Times, New York Times, or Washington Post would cost about $15,000 and (2) based on the difficulty we presently have of just keeping the AR going financially, we do not remotely believe we could raise even $7,000 for an ad. Thanks again, however, for the suggestion.

I regret I am unable to contribute more to expenses of the distribution of the AR. Unfortunately, we are at present facing bankruptcy, and every dollar is vital to us right now. Much of our present circumstances can be attributed to our years in the WCG, their archaic laws, and heavy financial demands and ill advice by one of their ministers who was totally inexperienced in the field of business, but who had "God's" authority to advise, even on a legal disagreement between two parties.

In the past we were able to make copies of the AR for distribution, but we have had to sell all our printing equipment.

Members of the WCG in Australia have been told by Gerald Waterhouse, by way of tape, that even if HWA took all their tithes, put them in a wheelbarrow, wheeled it to the center of the Sydney Harbour Bridge and set a match to it that that would not matter, they must still be loyal to him and other leaders. What was that about being a good steward? Obviously, it is all now evident that money is easy come, easy go in the WCG. If members go along with the above instructions, it is adequate proof that they are indeed effectively brainwashed.

-Australia

Sorry I have not been able to send money right along, but I am now finally on Social Security at $147 a month. My husband has hardly opened up his little shop anymore as he has had very little to do. He cannot get his Social Security as yet, as he is a little younger than I am. I would be happy to help more if I could... for the newsletters... mean so much to us. I hope that before long I will find one in out mailbox. Your report said you would be mailing them quarterly if you had the money. I sure do hope that those that can afford to help you financially have made this possible. I am so anxious to know what is now happening concerning the Armstrongs. They had an awful scare a while back. My daughter-in-law's mother, who does not belong to the church, as her husband and daughter does, told me that they were planning on all leaving because of the trouble the church was in, going into hiding. She was so upset and said she didn't want to go but would be left all alone without her family. She didn't know where they were going but said it might turn out like the Jim Jones cult. Well I called my kids. My son said they might have to go into hiding but would say no more.... I sometimes wonder if out heartache will ever end because of that cult.

-Georgia

You have graciously been tending me the AR even though I have been unable to support your work with any large sums of money. I earn a small salary and because of my financial contributions to the WCG for almost 15 years I find myself with virtually no bank account (actually about $40) and prospects of retiring early due to ill health on a small pension. I have just spent 15 days in the hospital undergoing surgery and looking forward to 4 to 6 weeks recovery at home. There is further surgery yet to come.

-A blind subscriber from Canada

Just a quick letter to let you know about a situation faced by at least a certain percentage of ex-WCG members . I'm speaking of that faced by single, unmarried (including divorced and widowed) ex-members who may not be all that happy about their marital (or at least dating) status. Since leaving the church, they are now fairly widely scattered and contact between them for the purpose of dating, parties, etc. is quite limited. Many may find it quite difficult dating or trying to build any sort of meaningful relationship with "ordinary" persons in their general area unacquainted and generally unsympathetic with their religious and philosophical views (i.e., sabbaths, holy days, diet restrictions, Christmas, Easter, etc.) which they may still hold.

The situation for singles (except perhaps in larger churches) was never really that good in the WCG. The church constantly accents marriage and the family and also marrying someone especially compatible. Yet within most church areas there were very few singles to date and the chances of finding someone especially compatible thus usually slim.

I approached the church about a dating referral system to help compatible members find each others, but of course, they weren't interested. Remember, it's government from the top down - the "dumb sheep" don't know anything, even those with college degrees or who are professionals! The old "Pen Pal" section of The Worldwide News (now propaganda) was at least a step in the right direction, but of course they discontinued it.

I would therefore like to offer the following service to those AR readers who may fall in this category. They may write to me giving their names and addressees and perhaps telling something about themselves if they wish. I will then try to set up some sort of referral system, perhaps even a small newsletter if response is great enough to at least let singles know about the whereabouts of each other. Any comments or suggestions they may have are welcome also. I would appreciate any small donation they may wish to include to help offset any postage or printing costs I may run into, at least if they can send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

In an effort to call attention to further research material, I should like to point out the book How to Organize and Manage Your Own Religious Cult, by Duke McCoy, published by Loompanics Limited, P.O. Box 264, Mason, Michigan 48854, copyright 1980. Despite the publishing date, it would seem that the Armstrongs have followed the instructions to a letter.

In addition, the Sabbath Handbook Directory published by the Sabbath Association, Fairview, OK, over the years has given historical data and doctrinal beliefs of a number of organizations with similar or almost identical beliefs of the WCG. The above church has more space in the latest directory than other groups. However, it, as far as I know, has never called attention to the existence of the directory.

-Colorado

Editor: Directory of Sabbath-observing Groups, publisher: The Bible Sabbath Association, Rt. 1 Box 197, Fairview, OK 73737, tel: 405-227-4496.

How involved are Rader and HWA with Teddy Kollek, mayor of Jerusalem? I note in the Freeman Digest, Jan. 1979, p. 95, that Teddy Kollek is a special adviser to the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies. Pasadena's Judge Shirley Hufstедler also is connected with the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies. She is a trustee, and she befriended Rader in his recent battle with the California courts.

Aspen is where the world's elite go for advanced seminars in global planning for the future of humanity, you know.

-Illinois

Editor: Teddy Kollek has for years been a close friend of HWA and Rader.

Like so many others, I became hooked on the Armstrong line years ago when I read the old booklets on prophecy that contained drawings by the late Basil Wolverton. I understood Mr. Wolverton was one of the first ministers ordained by Herbert Armstrong, and his name appears on the church's earliest incorporation papers. That is why I was so surprised to learn that Mr. Wolverton was also once involved with another religious group, one of the most bizarre ever to come out of California, the racist Holy City cult led by "Father" William Riker and "Mother" Lucille Riker. I discovered this in the book New World Utopias by Paul Kagan (Penguin Books 3903).

The Riker cult is one of the weirdest and most scandalous I have ever read about. You can imagine my shock when I read on p. 114 of Kagan's book that Basil G. Wolverton illustrated Riker's literature. In fact, on p.109 there is a photo of one page from a booklet put out by Riker. And right there is a Wolverton illustration that later appeared in Herbert Armstrong's booklets. I also noted there are many similarities between Herbert Armstrong and William Riker and between their teachings.

-California

Editor: The late Basil Wolverton also did illustrations for science fiction comic books during the '30s and for Mad magazine during the '50s. He was a very talented and original artist and, you are right, his artwork did influence many into getting involved with the Armstrong organization.

Has anyone noticed the big drop in radio stations airing Herbert Armstrong? From 217 U.S. stations in May 1971 to 99 in Jan. 1979 to 51 in Oct. 1979. The Dec. 1980 Plain Truth listed only 58 stations. WCG TV stations dropped from 92 U.S. outlets in May 1977 to 59 in Jan. 1979 to 52 in Dec. 1980.

-Georgia

Editor: You're right "The World Tomorrow" is in deep trouble. Unless the WCG can lure GTA back as its spokesman, that trend will probably continue.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR16 July 15, 1981

Dear Friends:

Our apologies to all of you for the lateness of this newsletter. But we have simply been unable to get this second-quarter issue out on time. We have received quite a few letters asking about the many incredible rumors now circulating in church circles about the Armstrongs, Stan Rader, and their internecine squabbles. Here is a brief rundown on what has been happening:

GTA REBUFFED

Unknown at the time to many of his followers, Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA), in late spring of this year, wrote to his father in an attempt at reconciliation. The letter was delivered to Herbert Armstrong (HWA) by Ted's sister, Dorothy Mattson, who has hoped for a reconciliation of the divided Armstrong clan. (One can only speculate as to her true motivations in this. It is interesting that although GTA avails himself of his sister's assistance, he has privately referred to both his sisters - Dorothy and Beverly - as "totally unconverted.")

It was GTA's hope that a reconciliation with his father could be worked out. To his dismay, however, no such result was forthcoming. Herbert, on a number of occasions, revealed the contents of GTA's private letter to church congregations. Then, to add insult, HWA wrote GTA a personal letter vilifying him and pointing out how he had to put him out of the church three times in past years for his "physical sins." (In the past these sins were described to the public as "spiritual.") Devastated by his father's cold response, Ted contacted the NBC-TV network's Tom Snyder talk show. He was scheduled to be interviewed, July 8, and many GTA followers hoped Ted had finally learned his lesson and would stop trying to get back into the WCG. Many hoped he would finally publicly make the accusations he has for months been making privately about his father, namely, that HWA is guilty of incest and would be "certified insane" by almost any psychiatrist in the country.

But true to form, GTA cancelled out of his appearance on the Tom Snyder show. Some have accused him of again going back to his soft pedaling in an attempt to get back into the WCG. Others feel he just doesn't have the guts to speak out on his father's sins.

What many do not realize, however, is just how close GTA came to being asked back into the WCG. Some insiders have stated that HWA was, in fact, quite pleased to receive Ted's letter. But being the sly politician that he is, HWA did not just simply state his desire to see Ted readmitted to the WCG. Instead, he took the matter to the WCG's council of elders to test the waters. It was there that Herbert discovered that anti-GTA feelings now run very deep in the WCG and that bringing Ted back at this juncture could again not only divide the WCG, but cause a widespread revolt by the church's ministry. While privately hoping for and planning on Ted's eventual return (Herbert has recently contacted Ted's wife through relative Buck Hammer and has had a lengthy phone conversation with her), HWA has had no choice but to swim with the tide and adopt a publicly anti-Ted stance.

It is a humiliation GTA will not easily forget. To some of his closest friends, Ted has been quite open about his desire to return to the WCG to "get vindicated," get on "more TV stations," and "get a plane again." But the council of elders knows that if Ted does return, it could well mean curtains for them. Some of those almost sure to be demoted, if not let go altogether, include Roderick Meredith, Raymond McNair, Bob Fahey, Dibar Apartian, and Herman Hoeh. Virtually every area of the church and college would see a major shakeup. Naturally, those in charge have a lot to lose and little to gain if Ted returns.

STANLEY'S WOES

Garner Ted Armstrong isn't the only one having trouble with Herbert Armstrong and the council of elders. Plain Truth (PT) readers will notice that Evangelist Stanley Rader's name has been removed from the staff box of the PT, and he no longer has a regular column in that publication. His presence is now also lacking in the Worldwide News.

Quest magazine, for years a pet project of Stan's, has finally been put up for sale. An ad appeared recently in the Wall Street Journal announcing the availability for sale of that magazine, and Herbert has been actively seeking buyers. There are real doubts, however, whether that magazine can be sold. It has been a money loser from the start. And what is really being put up for sale is a lot of liabilities (for instance, unearned subscriptions) and precious few assets (Quest does not have its own building or press). What then can a prospective buyer expect to buy? The name Quest? Herbert may find that the only way to sell Quest is to literally pay someone to take it off his hands.

The Quest situation is just one of Stan Rader's recent disappointments. As we go to press, we have learned that Herbert Armstrong is searching for a way to remove Stan Rader as head of AICF. Not only that, there have been discussions among council of elders members as to whether Stan Rader should be disfellowshipped. While HWA insists that "Stan has been contained," some close to Herbert believe that only with Stan disfellowshipped will the church be safe from what many view as his evil influence on HWA. What seems to be lacking is a way to perform the disfellowshippment without causing embarrassment to HWA. Some are suggesting that possible reasons for the action could be Stan's irregular attendance at Sabbath services, his alleged nonconventional tithing practices, and his reluctance to depend on divine healing during illness. But whatever excuse is chosen, it should be obvious to all that the real motivation behind such an action is the incredible jealousy and fear many have of Stan's prodigious talents.

Whatever their true motivations, it appears that Herbert is being swayed by the anti-Rader sentiments of those now surrounding him. HWA has increasingly been making caustic comments about Stanley. When daughter Dorothy recently asked HWA for a loan, HWA (according to Dorothy) responded that he is now broke, owing the IRS $100,000 in back taxes. HWA unfairly put the blame for his back taxes on Stan, his accountant and counselor.

But what has apparently infuriated Herbert the most is his belief that Stan has been in some sort of scheme with his wife Ramona to have him committed to a nursing home. Herbert has told a number of his associates that he has heard a tape recording (surreptitiously taped) of a conversation between his wife Ramona and Stanley, in which the idea of committing Herbert was discussed. Of course, in all fairness to Mr. Rader, it should be pointed out that HWA is almost 89 and ailing, and such an idea may very well have been contemplated for HWA's own welfare. It should also be remembered that even though HWA is apparently convinced of this "collusion" against him, it would not be impossible for someone his age and in his condition to be imagining things. For instance, some insiders have commented that HWA increasingly seem to be suffering from some type of hallucinatory problem. He is known to suffer from bizzare night visions such as of the devil being in his house, and he has been known to wake up from his sleep screaming wildly.

One news reporter mentioned to us how, when questioned, Stanley would not clearly refute the story of the nursing home discussion. But with all of the above problems in mind, we thought it best to write to Kevin Dean - once a trusted Rader aide and now the reputed bearer of the Rader-Ramona tape - and ask for a copy of it along with a statement on the circumstances in which it was obtained. Unfortunately, after two months, Mr. Dean has still not responded in any way to our request.

RAMONA RETURNS

It was the tape-recorded conversation that was apparently the cause of the temporary separation between HWA and Ramona mentioned in our last newsletter. (The possibility of being committed to an Arizona nursing home is also one reason HWA, on Ralph Helge's legal advice, has thought it best not to return to Arizona.) For a time, the rumors surrounding the Armstrongs' separation were flying so thick and fast in Pasadena that we thought it best to write directly to Ramona Armstrong to request an interview. Unfortunately, she has not responded at all to our letter and has passed up one more opportunity to discount the accusations being made by both GTA and numerous ministers still in the WCG. It is interesting that not only have numerous ministers been commenting on her in private but a number of WCG ministers have announced from the pulpit that HWA was about to divorce Ramona. (Some used the words marriage "annulment.") At least one (without giving specifics) referred to "unfaithfulness" as the cause.

But while WCG ministers were making their announcements, the Armstrongs made other plans. Ramona has since rejoined Herbert, has accompanied him on trips, and now all talk of a divorce must be viewed as nothing more than wishful thinking on the part of the anti-Rader forces in the church's hierarchy.

RADER HOSPITALIZED

Not surprisingly, while much of the above chaos at headquarters was at its peak, Stan Rader was not present to guide the church's apostle through the troubled times. Instead, he was in communist China for a lengthy visit, talking to some of that country's leaders as a representative of HWA. In June, Stan returned to Southern California to attend his son's graduation from USC Law School. (His son Stephen graduated first in his class and will be working as a law clerk for 9th Circuit Federal Judge J. Clifford Wallace.)

The reception Stan received upon his return to California was not what he expected. In the short time that he was gone, he went from being a hero lauded for his "extraordinary service to the church" to being talked of as almost an outcast. Much of the blame for this must go to Herbert Armstrong. Herbert has been telling his lieutenants that Stan is no longer "his" lawyer. Instead says Herbert, "Ralph Helge is my lawyer." Stan was ordered earlier to vacate his campus office, which he promptly did. But, claims Herbert to friends, when the office was vacated, a $600,000 painting became missing - insinuating, without proof, that somehow Mr. Rader was responsible. The few Rader loyalists still on campus insist that HWA should follow the biblical admonition of Matt. 18:15 and talk over his differences privately with Mr. Rader and not make wild accusations. The HWA-Rader rift is not a unique situation.

Many who have served HWA faithfully over the years have found themselves rewarded in a similar fashion.

Considering all that HWA has been putting him through, it is not surprising that Rader's health is suffering. On June 29 Stanley was admitted to Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena for treatment of two ulcers. According to Rader's publicist, Jim Mahoney of the Mahoney-Wasserman and Associates public relations firm, Rader did not undergo surgery but was suffering from "massive hemorrhaging" due to two stomach ulcers.

Rader was released from the hospital June 30. Unfortunately, Stan's hospital stay was not all it could have been. Stanley mentioned to one friend how disappointed he was when Herbert Armstrong neither paid him a visit nor phoned, but merely sent a bouquet of flowers with a card. The card contained no word of sympathy, no phrase of encouragement - simply the name Herbert Armstrong. Of all the bouquets he received, said Stanley sadly, Herbert's was "the first to die."

While Rader's rapid recovery could easily have been due to a miracle, many of his critics charged that his illness was not all that serious. Further, his use of a PR firm made some suspect the whole incident was merely a publicity stunt done to upstage Herbert Armstrong. We believe this accusation is unfounded. Stan has been suffering from an ulcer condition for some time, and individuals close to him have stated that he has looked very ill for weeks. We at the Report, of course, are very glad to hear of his speedy recovery and wish him continued good health.

RADER'S RAIDERS?

Just one week after Stan Rader was released from Huntington Memorial Hospital, he was again making headlines nationwide, this time because of a movie.

"Raiders of the lost Ark" is one of this summer's most financially successful movies, grossing over $46 million in its first 24 days of release. Its executive producers are George Lucas (who did "Star Wars") and Howard Kazanjian. It was produced by Frank Marshall, directed by Steven Spielberg (who did "Jaws"), with screenplay credits going to Lawrence Kasdan. The original idea for "The Raiders" was said to have come from a collaboration between Philip Kaufman and George Lucas. But now Stanley Rader has come forward and claimed that the idea was originally his and Robert Kuhn's and that Lucas and company stole their idea to make "The Raiders of the lost Ark."

Rader is now suing (naturally). He describes his suit as "the biggest lawsuit of its kind in motion-picture history" (naturally). The suit alleges willful and malicious breach of contract, misappropriation of a literary title, deprivation of screen credit, and emotional distress. Named as plaintiffs are Stan Rader, Robert Kuhn, Henry Cornwall, and Farland I. Myers, senior vice-president of the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency in Hollywood.

Ironically, not too long ago Kuhn and Rader were at each other's throats. During the California attorney general's investigation of the WCG, Kuhn cooperated extensively with the so-called dissidents who were attempting to remove both Herbert Armstrong and Stanley Rader from church leadership (see chapt. 11 of John Tuit's book). Kuhn was disfellowshipped in 1979 and has not been reinstated in the church since. Yet now Stan Rader and Kuhn are united together in their lawsuit. This, in spite of the church doctrine prohibiting the "yoking together" of the converted and the unconverted in a business proposition and the doctrine prohibiting even social contact with the disfellowshipped. Apparently, these doctrines do not apply when millions of dollars are at stake.

At a July 8 news conference called by Rader, the CPA-lawyer-evangelist did not attempt to dispel the rumor that he was the principal author of the story in question, but merely admitted that he did have some assistance from "a young archaeologist by the name of Dr. Robert Kuhn." On the other hand, the Rader-Kuhn suit does give Kuhn the primary creative credit for their version of the "Ark" tale. The Pasadena Star-News (July 8) wrote:

"According to the scenario alleged by the plaintiffs, Kuhn began work more than 10 years ago on 'a fictionalized account of the 20th Century discovery of the lost Ark of the Covenant.' By early 1977, his efforts had yielded a screenplay, in which Rader reputedly was given partial interest in exchange for his promise that he would work to find an outlet for its distribution.

"In turn, the suit asserts, Rader assigned interests in his share to Cornwall and Myers for their help in marketing the work. Myers allegedly then began discussions of the screenplay with Ben Benjamin, an artists' agent for International Creative Management whose clients include Sir Laurence Olivier, Jacqueline Bisset and Burt Lancaster.

"After confirming the 'enormous commercial potential' of the work, according to the suit, Benjamin purportedly urged Kuhn to turn the screenplay into a novel because it would give the unknown Kuhn 'greater negotiating strength.' Shortly after receipt of Kuhn's novelization two years later, it is alleged, Benjamin said there was no interest in its development.

"The suit claims that at that time, Lucas, Spielberg or LucasFilm, Ltd., had access to all literary properties submitted to Benjamin and ICM. Those defendants, it asserts, and others later involved with the 'Raiders' film, misappropriated Kuhn's 'ideas, sequences, characterizations, plot elements and subject matter' and are being unjustly enriched at his and the other defendants' expense."

The defendants have all denied the allegations. Paramount and ICM told the Los Angeles Times the charges are false. Lucas' Los Angeles lawyer, Thomas Pollock, called the allegations "ridiculous." A spokesman for LucasFilm, Ltd., told the Los Angeles Times

(July 9, 1981, part 2, p. 1), "We know very well that 'Raiders' is an original story idea by Lucas and Kaufman. There is no doubt in our minds about that. If someone came up with an idea independently, that is pure coincidence, but we don't even think they came up with the idea."

Ben Benjamin - who, incidentally, being an agent would have gotten a substantial percentage of Kuhn's fees had he sold Kuhn's screenplay for him - told the Star-News that he did recall seeing a story "outline" once from Kuhn, but never a novel. In denying the lawsuit's allegations, Benjamin further stated that he did not personally know Spielberg or Lucas and that he did not even know what Lucas looked like.

There is, apparently, some similarity between the movie "Raiders" and Kuhn's screenplay. According to the July 9 Los Angeles Herald Examiner:

"Allegedly, Kuhn's hero is an American archaeologist, a 40-year-old university professor, who is 'something of a rogue,' and the primary female character is his 'lost love,' whom he hasn't seen for a decade. In 'Raiders,' Harrison Ford plays Indiana Jones, a dashing professor of archaeology, who seeks out a former girlfriend, played by Karen Allen, to assist him in his search for the Ark."

But if newspaper reports are to be believed, it is not this similarity that has Kuhn and Rader upset. It is the admitted differences between the movie and their screenplay. (Plagiarism is not one of the charges in their suit.) According to the Los Angeles Herald Examiner (July 9, p. B3):

"Charging that the blockbuster adventure movie is spiritually bankrupt, Rader said that if his suit is successful, he will establish a non-profit organization to refurbish the tarnished image of the Ark of the Covenant, the missing chest that according to biblical lore contains the broken tablets of the Ten Commandments...."

"Charging that the hit movie is 'a parody of our material designed primarily to exploit the public at this time,' Rader said that if his suit is successful, 'we feel that a very substantial portion of the profits from the film must be contributed by us to a non-profit organization which will make every effort to undo the damage that this film has done and continues to do to minds of young people everywhere.'

"In their 29-page complaint, the plaintiffs further argued: 'Because (the) defendants have distributed their entertaining but shallow version to a broad segment of the public, plaintiff Kuhn's efforts have been frivolously pre-empted. Because the Ark had indeed been lost in the public's mind as well as in history, the first exposure of the Ark, including the place and manner in which it was found and opened, the use to which it was put and its spiritual overtones, stamps an indelible imprint on indiscriminating minds, a mental image almost impossible to alter.'

"Any subsequent efforts to present to the public at large a biblically accurate version, such as had been created by plaintiff Kuhn, will be severely impaired,' the complaint continues. 'It is as if plaintiff Kuhn had composed a biblically based choral work (such as a Psalm set to newly composed popular music) and before its premiere, its leitmotiv had been appropriated for a catchy jingle and used to promote the leading candy or soda pop in a national, saturation media blitz.'"

It is interesting that Rader's suit attempts to link Kuhn's admittedly fictional screenplay to biblical truth. Yet note what the Examiner wrote about Kuhn's plot:

"As described in the complaint, Kuhn's 'Ark' differs from 'Raiders of the Lost Ark' in several respects: Kuhn's tale was intended as a religiously inspiring story that told of the discovery of the Ark of the Covenant in Jerusalem in the '80s, during the midst of the apocalyptic battles pitting Russians and neo-Nazis against a combined army of Israelis, Arabs and Americans. In 'Raiders,' the Ark is unearthed in Egypt in 1936 by an American racing against the Nazis."

But wait a minute! This is not what Herbert Armstrong teaches! HWA teaches that a united Europe - not Germany and Russia - will war against the Egyptians, Ethiopians, and Libyans, while also conquering the U.S. and Britain. (See "Middle East in Prophecy," reprint #550, 1972, and "Bible Correspondence Course" #36, 1965 for the details.) Russia will be supposedly watching on the sidelines. HWA (and virtually all Christianity) says Christ - not the Old Testament Ark - intervenes to save humanity. The Rader-Kuhn screenplay is supposed to express biblical truth; yet their interpretation of prophecy is very, very different from that of their religious mentor, apostle Herbert Armstrong. It is also very different from that of the vast majority of Christian churches.

In addition, reasonable men cannot help but ask: "If the Rader-Kuhn screenplay is indeed noticeably different than the Lucas movie, as Rader claims it is, what exactly is the legal basis for their claim? Do Lucas and Spielberg not have the right to fictionalize, just a Kuhn and Rader say they have done?"

Rader's lawsuit and statements clearly imply that the Lucas film sullied his and Kuhn's interpretation of prophecy. Yet, does not the Rader-Kuhn screenplay sully Herbert Armstrong's interpretation of prophecy?

What is the real reason behind this lawsuit? Significantly, the Examiner wrote:

"W. Jack Kessler, an attorney for Rader, raised the possibility that Rader might consider a pretrial settlement. (Traditionally movie companies insure themselves against suits claiming copyright infringement, and often, the merits of the case notwithstanding, an insurance company will propose a pretrial settlement rather than defend the suit in court.)"

"Explaining that a pretrial settlement 'would be just as much vindication in some respects' as winning the suit, Kessler added, 'obviously there will be sequels and an important part of any pretrial settlement might be participation in the sequels.'"

In other words, while Rader claims Lucas' movie has "tarnished the image of the Ark of the Covenant" and has caused great harm to many people, his legal associate, Kessler, says they would be quite happy to share in the profits from the movie and its sequels.

Perhaps the most succinct statement on the lawsuit came from Thomas Pollock, an attorney for Lucas. He said, "Every time you have a successful movie, there'll be people who come forward who claim it's theirs. As far as I'm concerned, they're insects coming out of the woodwork."

WATERHOUSE TN THE NEWS

A couple of months ago, one of our readers sent us a copy of an opinion piece that appeared in the Toronto Star on April 4. Written by religion editor Tom Harper, it was titled, "Mindless faith-a golden calf for lazy multitudes." Aside from the fact that it is one of the best thought-out articles on religion that we've seen in a long time, we found it particularly interesting because it was inspired by WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse.

Apparently, someone sent Harper tape recordings of a number of Gerald Waterhouse sermons. Waterhouse - now, generally regarded as the WCG's number one preacher - has been quoted in our pages before, so we will not dwell on the contents of his aberrant sermons. However, we think you'll find these excerpts from Harper's piece of interest:

Blaise Pascal once wrote: "The heart has its reasons which reason knows not of."

Pascal, a French theologian and mathematician (1623 to 1662), knew beyond a shadow of a doubt that there are aspects of reality, dimensions of this fantastic cosmos, which are apprehended in other ways than by pure reason alone.

But, in his religious insight and convictions he never for one moment committed the error (nor even contemplated it) which is the hallmark of much of the popular religion of our day.

I refer to what can only be called "the flight from reason" - the denigration of the proper use of one's mind and the erection in its place of a false god, a blind, unquestioning "faith."

The Bible (both Old and New Testaments) insists that true love of God or, to use a more modern term, "the Ground of all Being," must be "with all one's mind and heart and strength." St. Paul speaks of having a "reason for the hope that is in you."

All-out attack. Yet, you only have to spend one Sunday morning in front of your television set to realize that much of what passes for religious truth today is not only an insult to intelligence, it bases its claims on an all-out attack on intellect and the educated mind.

What is most alarming about this is the extent to which people, confused or lonely, or lacking either a sense of meaning or of belonging, eagerly assent. Too weary - or too lazy - to wrestle with doubts or obvious complexities, they throw themselves willy-nilly into the sect, cult or "ism" which seems most likely (according to its claims) to give the quickest answer to their needs.

What is wanted, it seems, is sheer magic, not the demand for the total involvement of every human faculty....

But, this week's mail brought an even clearer example of the anti-rationalism now at work under the guise of faith. A source in the United States provided The Star with more than half a dozen tapes of sermons by Gerald Waterhouse, the leading preacher in Herbert W. Armstrong's Worldwide Church of God.

Direct quotes. Here are some direct quotes from Waterhouse sermons preached to vast gatherings of the faithful in Abilene:

"I hope none of you are intellectuals. I hope you are dumb, dumb enough to believe in God's church... intellectuality always reasons around God's plan of government.

"Using your reason to question Herbert W. Armstrong is disobedience. To reason is to fall into Satan's trap. Don't follow your feelings either; be obedient"...

The Waterhouse tapes supply an answer to the question of how it is a man who has been as thoroughly discredited as HWA has been can still take out full page advertisements in Toronto newspapers, be heard on approximately 100 radio stations in Canada - not to mention his TV appearances - and keep at least a committed core of his shrinking flock.

Waterhouse alludes time and time again to his leader's current difficulties, but his tone is bullying and his message one of unqualified threat. To question HWA is to rebel against God: and, rebellion against God means "burning forever in the lake of fire."

Thus he thunders: "God still backs Herbert Armstrong. I don't care if he's 99 percent wrong on a point, God always backs His government: He backs it right or wrong."

Murmur of agreement. Instead of shouts of protest from the audience at such an arrant flight from reason, you can actually hear murmurs of agreement.

Waterhouse goes further: "Criticism of HWA and of Stanley Rader is 'criticism of Jesus Christ and the Plan for the end times. It's the closest thing to the unpardonable sin' ..."

Surely if tapes such as these, not to mention videotapes of a dozen other current cult leaders and TV pop-religion superstars, are kept in a time capsule and opened by our descendants a century from now they will wonder what kind of Middle Ages mentality was rampant.

The 1980s may go down in history books of the future as the totally inexplicable Age of Unreason.

During the last decade, no area of the WCG has experienced more personnel changes than the editorial of The Plain Truth (PT). While for a number of years drawing some of the best minds in the WCG, the PT has never been able to hold onto its most talented people. The church's constantly changing doctrines and policies, political infighting, firings, resignations, and reorganizations have resulted in a PT many journalists routinely describe privately as "a rag." No wonder one major library journal now classifies the PT under the indexing designation of "mysticism. Considering the PT's sinking standards, that designation is probably an overly kind one.

Recently, Ambassador Report was given an opinion paper dealing with the PT's editorial policies and research methods. The paper is the result of a joint effort by a number of former PT editors, some with 10 to 25 years of membership in the WCG. All have first-hand knowledge of the facts presented.

We found the paper fascinating. Rather than redo it as an AR article, we've decided to run it as is. We think readers will find it gives an in-depth look at the real, behind-the-scenes Plain Truth. We welcome any comments our readers might have concerning this paper presented on pages 7-10.

The Prophets of the Partial Truth

For over 30 years Plain Truth readers have marveled at how the PT speaks authoritatively on every subject from prophecy, science, education, child rearing, nutrition, and agriculture to history, politics, psychology, and economics. Many believe that the PT writers not only understand the Bible but also are highly qualified experts in their respective fields.

Printed on glossy paper and filled with dazzling color photos and artwork, the PT is one of the Worldwide Church of God's (WCG) main instruments for preaching to the world. Yet members and the general public know virtually nothing about the qualifications and backgrounds of its writers and researchers.

Before an intelligent reader agrees with the dogmatic pronouncements of any publication—such as the PT—purporting to give the reader the truth on a subject, he should ask certain basic questions:

the arguments for and against the church's tithing doctrine. And recently, documented evidence that he falsified a portion of his own academic record appeared. (See Ambassador Report, 6-1-79, p. 12.)

The latest reports suggest that old Herman is now moving very carefully and keeping a low profile, hoping he will not repeat his political blunder of 1978 when he began to move in the direction of Garner Ted Armstrong's theological views. It nearly cost him position and membership in the WCG when Herbert Armstrong learned that Hoeh had criticized his teachings on the Passover and had dared to imply that HWA would probably best function as a "father figure."

The Prophets of the Partial Truth

For over 30 years Plain Truth readers have marveled at how the PT speaks authoritatively on every subject from prophecy, science, education, child rearing, nutrition, and agriculture to history, politics, psychology, and economics. Many believe that the PT writers not only understand the Bible but also are highly qualified experts in their respective fields.

Printed on glossy paper and filled with dazzling color photos and artwork, the PT is one of the Worldwide Church of God's (WCG) main instruments for preaching to the world. Yet members and the general public know virtually nothing about the qualifications and backgrounds of its writers and researchers. Before an intelligent reader agrees with the dogmatic pronouncements of any publication - such as the PT - purporting to give the reader the truth on a subject, he should ask certain basic questions:

- Who is writing?
- Does he (or she) know what he is writing about?
- What are his credentials?

- Are his opinions based on careful study along with observation and experience, or have they been hastily and carelessly formed?
- Is the author a specialist in his field, or is he a generalist or self-appointed expert who loves to give advice in every field?
- What are his or her motives for writing what he writes-to sincerely record personal beliefs and observations or to parrot the party line in the party journal?

We feel it is necessary to answer these basic questions regarding the PT prophets - the men who authoritatively purport to have answers to almost every problem in the present and who claim to be able to predict the future. There are three reasons why we feel this is important to do: First, numerous specialists in their fields have stated that PT writers are often careless and uncritical in their use of materials and overhasty in jumping to unwarranted conclusions. Second, many PT readers have told us that the PT's solutions - when put into practice - have proved disastrous and ruined lives. And lastly, it can be documented that almost none of the PT's prophecies and predictions have ever materialized.

The Personalities

To understand what the PT really is, let us first look at some of the personalities behind the bylines. The quasi- editor-in-chief (called "senior editor for copy") is once again the nearly forgotten Evangelist Herman Hoeh, a product of unaccredited Ambassador College (AC). He used to be (and the past tense is intended) the key oracle in the WCG. Nobody could rival him in effectively neutralizing political and intellectual opponents, in working round the clock for days on end, in masterfully manipulating Herbert Armstrong (HWA), and, above all, in finding or fabricating sources to "prove" HWA's doctrines

Hoeh's infallible reputation, however, began to evaporate some years ago when it was learned that he had purchased a large number of books - ostensibly for the AC Library - with his personal tithe money in the late 1960s. At the end of the year Hoeh asked for an annual tithe and offering receipt for book purchases made that year. For members to decide how to use their own tithes was contrary to Hoeh's own articles on tithing, in which he preached that one must give his tithes to God's church to avoid being under a curse.

Then it came to light that obvious plagiarisms and historical fabrications in his obscure two-volume work, the Compendium of World History, had caused him to quietly drop it from circulation. (He had received his two doctorate degrees for writing the two volumes.) Next it was discovered that he had radically altered several church doctrinal committee research papers included in the Study Paper on Tithing, which was sent out to the whole WCG ministry as an objective look at the arguments for and against the church's tithing doctrine. And recently, documented evidence that he falsified a portion of his own academic record appeared (See Ambassador Report, 6-1-79, p. 12.)

The latest reports suggest that old Herman is now moving very carefully and keeping a low profile, hoping he will not repeat his political blunder of 1978 when he began to move in the direction of Garner Ted Armstrong's theological views. It nearly cost him position and membership in the WCG when Herbert Armstrong learned that Hoeh had criticized his teachings on the Passover and had dared to imply that HWA would probably best function as a "father figure."

Dexter Faulkner, an Ambassador graduate, one-time News Bureau employee, and former PT correspondent in Washington, D.C., is the PT's titular managing editor. Until 1975 he was essentially a PT nonentity. Even though he was given the title of correspondent, he had difficulty getting anything published during the years he served as a correspondent. But Dexter is perhaps the most politically astute person in the whole editorial department, and he has captured both Herbert Armstrong's and Stan Rader's attention by being unquestionably loyal and saying the right thing at the right time - no mean feat, considering the politically charged environment at WCG headquarters.

Dexter is popular with the church leadership because he knows when to salute and snap out a firm "Yes, sir!" and because he's not an intellectual. His nonintellectuality was once aptly demonstrated in former Managing Editor Brian Knowles' office. Brian was explaining a point that Dexter was having trouble grasping. When the point finally registered, Dexter lept to his feet, plopped himself enthusiastically on the edge of Brian's desk, slapped his hand down hard on the desk top, and exclaimed: "You've just raped my mind! You MADE me think!!"

Hoeh and Faulkner regularly receive articles on a vast array of subjects from three Ambassador-educated writers who have only unaccredited degrees: Evangelist Raymond McNair, Evangelist Rod Meredith, and Clayton Steep, former editorial assistant and proofreader for the French-language PT. However, the key responsibility for article research rests with the News Bureau, which has a vast number of filing cabinets filled with news items cut out of various news sources. But here we face a disturbing and depressing picture.

News Editor Gene Hogberg, possessing only Ambassador College's unaccredited theology degree, is neither professionally trained nor educated to run a news office. Nevertheless, with his revelations from WCG theology and his obsession that the U.S. and Britain are modern Israel (in Bible prophecy), he has pronounced himself an instant expert on history, political science, and international relations. He particularly enjoys vacationing in European countries for a few days around the time of the WCG's Feast of Tabernacles, sampling the local cuisine, and then coming home triumphantly to tell his readers the "plain truth" about those nations and their problems. But his main fixation is Germany where, for years, he has been trying to show Herbert's prophecies being fulfilled- especially those about the Beast of Revelation 13.

Herbert Armstrong believed since the late 1960s that Franz Joseph Strauss would very likely one day ascend to the German Chancellorship or beyond and that in this capacity would become the future "Beast" of Revelation, whom Herbert says will make war on the U.S. and, with the help of his Western European allies, will destroy the U.S. in a nuclear war. Understandably, every four years when the West Germans elect a Chancellor, emotions run high in the News Bureau. Last year was no exception when Hogberg again devoted special coverage to the candidacy of Strauss, subtly hinting he might win this time. But alas, God again proved the PT prophets wrong; Strauss lost. But then there's always the next election.

Gene Hogberg commands a quartet of unqualified and ill-prepared, but highly paid, news "analysts." Mostly Ambassador College educated, they work and think in a cozy environment of dogmatism, bias, and distortion, beset from year to year by perpetual power struggles between the various ideological factions within the church.

Two longtime News Bureau writers are Keith Stump and Don Schroeder, both noncontroversial, likable, Ambassador College-educated researcher-writers who churn out article after article on such diverse topics as venereal disease, children's toys, the causes of the fall of the Roman Empire, the rock of Gibraltar, pollution, the U.S. navy's strength, and evolution. Their articles all parrot the conservative right-wing fundamentalist Armstrong ideology so expertly that it's difficult to tell whether they or the senior Armstrong wrote the articles.

Perhaps the most talented and qualified writer in editorial is an aspiring young law student at the Roman Catholic Church's Loyola University, Jeff Calkins, who holds an accredited master's degree in political science from California State University, Los Angeles. (All this in spite of Herbert Armstrong's orders that AC graduates should not seek advanced degrees at the "world's" institutions - see The Worldwide News, 5/18/81, 1, p. 3.) His contributions cover matters of great prophetic importance such as weather conditions and movie reviews, but he feels qualified to write in almost every field of human knowledge: finance, education, science, history, city planning, and others. An independent intellectual, a rarity in the church after it purged itself of almost all of its intellectuals, he has let it be known that he admires church attorney Stan Rader's manipulative skills. His admiration was rewarded when he was picked to co-author articles with Stan during the church's legal fight with the State of California.

Despite his advanced academic training and abstruse use of the English language, he still adheres to the church's arbitrary and primitive scissor-and-clipping mentality of news reporting. Ever since he had more articles published in one issue of the PT than did Herbert Armstrong, rumors have persisted that certain Rader supporters considered having Jeff replace Hogberg as head news editor, since Hogberg is viewed as a closet Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA) loyalist. However, if GTA returns to the fold, Jeff could be out for so openly cozying up to Rader. But by then he may have his law degree.

A longtime contributor to PT research is deacon Werner Jebens, former member of the defunct German department. His main responsibility is clipping anything from classified ads in the local newspapers to European news articles in kinky soft-porn publications shipped in from West Germany. Many wonder why News Bureau funds are expended for such low-class German soft-porn magazines such as Quick and Neue Revue. When German news quotes are used in the PT, they are usually lifted from more reputable publications, such as Der Spiegel. Hence a good deal of money is wasted on journalistic material that never comes to bear except in personal fantasies. For years PT writers and certain executive personnel regularly dropped by to sneak a look at the News Bureau's collection of sex magazines and clippings of nude couples posing in various erotic positions, but this material has now been hidden.

The Prophecies

Considering the broad range of subjects covered in the PT, it is no exaggeration to say it would take a very large book to properly cover all of the inadequacies found in that publication. So for now, let us look at just one problem area - the PT's articles on Bible prophecy, and specifically those centering on modern Germany. It is a well-documented fact that HWA has been an embarrassing failure as a prophet for almost 50 years. When he began preaching in the early 1930s, he uncritically adopted the popular apocalyptic notions widespread among the country folk with whom he associated in the Pacific Northwest. It was from the development and embellishment of such sentiments that he began to attribute to various nations - such as Germany - a role in imminent prophesied end-time events. Between 1934 and 1941, he began preaching a basic end-time prophetic framework that he still adheres to today with minor modifications. It includes the following aspects:

- (1) Pestilence, drought, famine, weather upsets, and war will afflict the earth with increasing intensity.
- (2) There will be a revival of the Holy Roman Empire, consisting of 10 powerful European dictators who give their armed power to the "Beast," who is a devil-controlled super strongman-emperor.
- (3) The pope will be the catalyst behind the formation of a modern Catholic Roman Empire.
- (4) Britain and the U.S. - who constitute the main part of modern-day Israel - will be invaded and conquered by the Beast power unless they repent and turn to God. (It is HWA's main duty to warn these two nations of their fate.)

To illustrate how each of the aspects of his prophetic framework were occurring day by day, HWA hunted through the news sources of his day, selecting all the apocalyptic - sounding quotes that tended to support his "inspired" prophetic framework. These quotes were coupled with scriptures to give his readers the "true" prophetic understanding of world events. Here are some of the results of his inspired research, excerpted from The Plain Truth:

*The flu epidemic at the time of World War I was "the worst pestilence in history"; 10 million died in Russia recently in "the most colossal famine the world ever saw" - "All these (Mat. 24:8) are the beginning of sorrows" (June-July 1934, p. 4).

*"We have been in the Tribulation since 1929 in the United States and since 1928 in Europe" (June-July 1934, p. 4).

*The present time of trouble will continue "until the year 1936." "And at, or quickly after that time, we may expect to see the heavenly signs of the sun and moon becoming dark, the stars falling - and... the sign of the coming of the Son of man in heaven" (June-July 1934, p. 5).

Here we have "God's apostle" claiming to be giving the world God's last warning message just before Christ's coming, and yet "God's apostle" evidently didn't even know what the Great Tribulation was and that it was not occurring between 1928 and 1936. If he can't discern the difference between hard times and the Great Tribulation - a time prophesied to be so bad that all mankind would perish if Jesus didn't intervene - how can he claim to be God's "Watchman" who warns the world of coming end-time events? Here are a few more of HWA's predictions:

*This year, 1935, is destined to witness an event foretold in the Bible 2,400 years ago: "the great drought." The year 1935 is destined to see the final fulfillment of "God's great army of a nation of bugs" prophesied in Joel 1:4,6-7. The "time of God's wrath-the last plagues-is at hand" (March 1935, pp. 1-2).

*"The present time of trouble and distress will continue until the Resurrection" (March 1935, p. 7).

*Mussolini is the "beast" (Feb. 1938, p. 3).

*Zechariah 8:10 foretold a time when there would be "no hire for man or beast." This description of the great Depression was prophesied to occur just before Jesus' second coming. "Never before has there been unemployment to match that since 1929" (Mar. 1938, p. 3). [HWA was basing these conclusions on the premise that 1929 marked the beginning of the Great Tribulation.]

*"More millionaires committed suicide between 1929 and 1934 than in all previous years combined!" This was prophesied in James 5:1-8 (Mar. 1938, p. 6).

*Soon "France will be induced to bury the hatchet with Germany and join a new kind of alliance purporting to guarantee permanent peace in Europe" (Mar. 1938, p. 6). [In this March 1938 PT article HWA prophesied that Germany and France were on the verge of forming a new alliance; yet by June 1940 France had been buried by a German blitzkrieg, much to HWA's consternation-Editor.]

*Bible prophecy shows that the Catholic Church, through its pope, "must officially rule over this coming Empire," but Mussolini and the 10 dictators shall eventually destroy the church (Mar. 1938, p. 8).

*"Mussolini's soon-appearing reborn Roman Empire is the 'beast' power, and Mussolini undoubtedly is the 'beast'!" Revelation 17 shows the Beast will be associated with a great fallen church called a "whore" - the Catholic church (Jan. 1939, p. 3).

*"Many have thought Hitler is proving to be the number one man in Europe," but Mussolini will finally emerge "as number one man over all!" (Jan. 1939, p. 4.)

*Mussolini will capture Egypt, conquer one half of Jerusalem, and fight Christ at his second coming (Jan. 1939, p. 4).

*"It appears certain, from these prophecies, that Benito Mussolini is the...'BEAST' of Rev. 19:19-20..." (Feb. 1939, P. 1).

*"Britain shall be invaded and conquered." "Turkey will cause British defeat. But God will rescue and restore the British and cause Turkey utterly to be wiped out" (Nov. - Dec. 1940, pp. 2, 7).

*"Bible prophecy does indicate that Hitler must be a victor in his present Russian invasion!" Then Hitler will be "free to turn the entire might of his forces against Britain - and America!" (Sept.- Oct. 1941, p. 7.)

*"Unless America quickly wakes up, repents, turns to God... the punishment we are already suffering... shall continue until there is invasion, defeat - and utter slavery!" (Mar.- Apr. 1942, p. 11.)

Of course, you know the rest of the story: America did NOT "wake up" or "repent," as HWA defined waking up and repenting, but instead America emerged from World War II as the richest, most powerful nation the world has ever known. But that fact didn't stop HWA from implying God had postponed all his prophecies so HWA's "Work of God" could warn the whole world. (Since God must have known that HWA's "Work" only covered part of the U.S. at this time, one wonders how God could have been so "forgetful" as to have almost allowed Armageddon to occur before having HWA's church warn the whole world. As it was, HWA would have us believe, God had to stop the whole sequence of end-time events and postpone them for a half century because he forgot that HWA hadn't warned the world with his radio broadcasts.)

In 1947 HWA founded Ambassador College and got young impressionable students to help him clip news stories that lent credence to his mangled prophetic framework. He, at that time, decided that Germany, not Italy, would be the leader of the ten-nation Beast/Roman Empire and that the Germans were the modern-day Assyrians, who were supposedly prophesied to invade and conquer Israel - which, to HWA, means the U.S. & Britain, not the Israelis. (HWA originally said the people of "Gomer" were the modern - day Germans-PT June-July 1934, p. 6 - but Herman Hoeh assured HWA that Germany was Assyria.) HWA even offered the public a booklet, Germany in Prophecy, but the booklet was never published. Why? Because, as Hoeh privately admitted, its main contention was not supported by the historical evidence. Publicly, however, Hoeh claimed all the evidence was in German documents that hadn't been translated into English. (German minister Frank Schnee, meanwhile, was telling his congregations that all the evidence was in English documents.)

By the 1960s, however, proof that Germany was Assyria seemed almost irrelevant anyway, because the News Bureau was churning out a stream of "News Reports" and articles about hidden Nazis clandestinely plotting a third world war. Now taking for granted that a German leader would be the "Beast," the PT and News Bureau wrote dozens of articles and reports on German industrial might, Hitler being alive and hiding in South America (this idea was taken from Police Gazette), Nazis working underground, the right-wing German political party (the NPD), how Germans yearned for a strong-man leader, and how Franz Joseph Strauss, head of one of Germany's four main political parties, could be the coming man of the hour, etc. Between 1963 and 1969 alone, the WCG published 9 major articles on Strauss, HWA confided that he thought it likely that Strauss would be the "Beast," and he persuaded Strauss to visit Ambassador College in 1969.

Now, twelve years later, the News Bureau and PT staff writers are still trying to bend reality to prove HWA's German fantasies right. Still, Hogberg, Hoeh, and the others have yet to furnish a clear reason - backed up by documentation - why they insist on picking on Germany and on Strauss in particular.

Aside from numerous theological problems, there are many other gaping holes in HWA's theories about a German strongman "Beast" uniting ten European nations and suddenly destroying the U.S. and Britain through a surprise nuclear attack. First, any such German leader would have to contend with a mountain of constitutional restrictions and legal and bureaucratic red tape if he wanted to unite Europe's armies under his control. This could not happen overnight by any means. Second, he would have to obtain control of nuclear weapons - which the Germans do not have. He could attempt to steal nuclear weapons from the American forces in Germany, but even that wouldn't help because each U.S. nuclear warhead has been provided with half a dozen security locks to prevent unauthorized field commanders from activating the weapons. These security locks respond only to commands beamed in by satellite, and the mother keys are in the hands of the Pentagon (Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, SIPRI, Tactical Nuclear Weapons: European Perspectives, 1978, p. 129). A fair representation of the reality involving the seizure of nuclear weapons in Europe should include this kind of "news behind the news."

But, to continue the fantasy, suppose the German "Beast" does do the impossible and activates the warheads. He would still have to figure out a way to deliver them - no easy task since the Germans and Europeans have no intercontinental ballistic missiles or long-range bombers capable of reaching the U.S. And even with an all-out effort to develop such capabilities, which the U.S. and Britain would never allow, it would take many years for this to become operational. Of course, while all of this complex maneuvering is occurring, the News Bureau must assume Britain, the Soviet Union, and the U.S. - with its spy satellites - are sitting by in idle amusement, taking bets on whether the Germans will try to knock out Washington, D.C. or New York first and perhaps Moscow or London second. Perhaps the Germans could convince France to fire its nuclear-tipped missiles at the U.S. from its nuclear submarines, but since France's nuclear subs are outnumbered 5 to 1 by the U.S. fleet, France would itself risk getting blown off the map by the greatly superior U.S. fleet or by U.S. bombers and missiles, not to mention the Soviet missiles. So we see that HWA's and the News Bureau's scenario cannot occur.

Of course, if God suddenly unleashes 50 massive earthquakes and 50 volcanoes against the U.S. and Britain and strikes half their people with the black plague, you would have a different set of circumstances. But if the News Bureau really expects that such supernatural events will allow a German-led United States of Europe to conquer the U.S. and Britain without tempting the Russians to respond, why bother covering each German election in detail, the Pope's every move, the Europeans' belated attempts to unite their governments, economies, and currencies, etc.? If God or some all-powerful Devil is going to interfere supernaturally, there is no reason (other than keeping the tithe-payers perpetually perturbed) to monitor each of these news occurrences to try to show prophecy somehow inching forward year by year to ultimate fulfillment.

To simply say a German strongman will somehow obtain nuclear warheads overnight or by a miracle is to really prove nothing. The opposite - that it could not happen - is an equally valid view that ought to be given the same consideration in PT articles. At the very least, intellectual honesty would require a juxtaposition of the real circumstances with WCG prophetic expectations. Then the reader could decide how credible or vague the implications of the PT articles really were.

In the last few years, the News Bureau has toyed with the idea that the European Beast might be Otto von Habsburg, a member of the Habsburg dynasty. But this would mean that the "Beast" would be an Israelite, not an Assyrian, because the Habsburgs are Swiss in origin (H. G. Wells, The Outline of History, 1971, p. 661). They originally came from the German-speaking two-thirds of Switzerland that Hoeh has said was not descended from the Assyrians but from the Israelite tribe of Gad.

The Underlying Problems

The PT prophets have made a living by bending and/or ignoring the plain facts that threaten to dissolve their prophetic scheme. But it's inexcusable for anyone writing on European affairs to omit the type of facts and details pointed out in preceding paragraphs.

It is the News Bureau's very method of "research" that prompts the PT's one-sided reporting. The News Bureau personnel comb through U.S. News & World Report, Time, Newsweek, several newspapers, a number of highly regarded U.S. and foreign magazines, AP, UPI, and Reuters news-wire releases, and a few obscure sources, randomly selecting and clipping stories that tend to buttress church teachings and HWA's prophetic framework. From these carefully chosen clippings, they pen articles supposedly showing that world events are progressing as HWA's prophetic scheme predicted they would. Yet there is really no clear empirical step-by-step chain of news events that can be causally linked to HWA's prophetic pronouncements. Even as HWA misunderstood when the Great Tribulation was, so the PT prophets are grasping at straws by trying to tack random U.S. and European news events onto HWA's prophetic skeleton.

Throughout the pages of the PT, the old adage that "a little learning is a dangerous thing" is aptly demonstrated. The world order is vastly more complex than a group of intellectually dishonest fanatics make it out to be. But they are only following the style of their leader HWA, who dropped out of Des Moines high school in 1910 and learned how to write clever advertisements for a living. Unfortunately, Hoeh, Hogberg, Calkins, and Co. have adopted HWA's sensationalized style and simplistic methods of research, and like HWA, they almost never acknowledge any of the sources for the ideas they routinely plagiarize. Nevertheless, they are less dogmatic than HWA, and they now refrain from writing feature stories on rabid squirrels or collecting reams of material on U.S. fire ants taking over the nation - as some PT writers did in the 1950s and 1960s.

We would not object, per se, to the PT prophets telling readers to watch Germany, Strauss, Otto von Habsburg, or anyone else for that matter. However, if the PT writers were honest, they would take an objective and intellectually open approach. In order to do this, they and the WCG leadership would have to begin to do basic critical research in several areas:

(1) They must show by some valid method of research which of the prophecies in Daniel and Revelation have both a historical and modern fulfillment This has never really been done.

(2) If certain prophecies are shown to have a modern fulfillment, they then must present convincing documentation to construct a new prophetic framework to replace HWA's discredited one.

(3) They must do honest and credible research to irrevocably establish the identity of Assyria, Israel, and Babylon when mentioned in prophecies of the Bible.

If the PT prophets and WCG ministry solved these issues, then they could honestly state that they were writing about Germany, for example, because they had documented proof that Germany was Assyria and that the Bible prophecies of Daniel and Revelation were referring specifically to 20th-century Germany.

Today, however, the WCG's prophetic understanding is in chaos. HWA's old basic prophetic framework - the basis of all the PT articles coming out today - has not been printed and distributed by the church for many years, so even longtime members only vaguely understand why the PT constantly picks on Germany, Strauss, and the Common Market, etc., instead of, say, Iraq, Greece, or Syria and their leaders. (The church's prophetic beliefs were set forth in detail in Who Is the Beast? - discontinued just before Strauss visited AC in 1969 - and in the older version of the Bible Correspondence Course, numbers 31 and 32.)

How Can the PT Change?

The prophecy errors outlined above are merely one area of PT inadequacy. The PT's editors must begin to realize that when they palm themselves off as instant experts on marriage problems, agriculture, education, child psychology, finance, politics, health, nutrition, science, moral issues, etc., they have an obligation to the public to have their facts straight. They are not just discussing idle abstract theories that harm no one. They are instructing human beings in vital areas that can and do change many aspects of their lives. In the past, hastily conceived articles on these subjects have cost people their health, wealth, marriages, businesses, financial stability, occupations, and in some cases their lives. Those who don the mantle of "PT prophet" must, therefore, begin to take their responsibility seriously by:

- presenting all sides of the issues raised
- doing unbiased research
- consulting, quoting, and acknowledging more credible sources
- stating who they are and what their qualifications are for writing on a specific subject
- becoming more knowledgeable in the area in which they choose to write
- avoiding the temptation to write as "experts" on every subject under the sun
- refraining from speaking for or in the name of God when presenting their own ideas, biases, conclusions, or the party line.

If the PT prophets would follow these reasonable guidelines, then, and only then, would they begin to give their readers something resembling the plain truth.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Tony Hammer, former WCG pastor and brother-in-law of Garner Ted, is a personnel manager for a Dallas-based corporation. We hear former WCG pastor Art Mocarow has a TV program in Palm Springs, Calif., and does sales training and consulting work. Elbert Atlas, another one-time WCG pastor, is in management with Occidental Life Insurance Co. He was recently nominated by the insurance industry for a minority achievement award.

After 16 years in the WCG, including three as a deacon and eleven as a full-time minister, Ken R. Kneebone of New Brunswick, Canada, is now with the international firm of Robert McAlpine Ltd. in the Maritimes. He works as a senior estimator involved with cost-control management at an $80 million potash mining operation.

Al Knauf, formerly the chairman of the Department of Natural Sciences and math at Ambassador College in Big Sandy, is now the Dallas Schools' Program Specialist in Field Ecology at the Dallas Museum of Natural History. He also teaches a special advanced course in ecology for talented high school seniors. Mr. Knauf recently wrote of his work: "We use the entire state as our laboratory - studying the oceans, mountains, forests, and deserts as part of the instructional program. It's great to be free of all that oppression and turmoil and doing a job that's so enjoyable. The 'world' still has some fine, intelligent, moral, and responsible young people. I can testify to that."

Dan Truhitte, a featured singer with Garner Ted Armstrong's personal appearance tours in the early '70s, has had nothing to do with the Armstrongs for over seven years now. An extremely talented singer-dancer-actor, Truhitte has performed in numerous films, off-Broadway shows, and nightclub acts, and some years ago was a principal in MGM's "Hallelujah Hollywood" show in Las Vegas. The Los Angeles Times reported on April 26 that Mr. Truhitte "today produces dinner theater programs and runs a voice academy in Sacramento, where he grew up."

This organization publishes a free bimonthly Christian magazine called Union Life. Their July-August issue contains an article by Richard Plache, former WCG pastor.

*****

In our last newsletter we mentioned the Church of God of Augusta, P.O. Box 184, Augusta, Kansas 67010. Evangelist Patrick Laham of that church has since written to us asking that we mention that his church publishes a booklet entitled "Is Herbert W. Armstrong God's Prophet?" The booklet points up many of the prophetic failures of HWA and company. Evangelist Laham said that copies will be sent free to all who request them. Also, that church's new phone numbers are: 316-775-6054 and 316-775-7911.

*****

In May of this year we received a very cordial letter from Mr. James McBride of the Church of God International organization in Britain (P.O. Box 2525, Lincoln, England) . Here is an excerpt from that letter we believe you will find as enlightening as we did:

So far our operation is minuscule, but we are slowly getting things moving. Our relationship with Tyler is very loose - in fact the Board of Trustees is entirely English, our main attachment being the Tyler literature.

WCG has an iron grip on the 1,800 or so membership in U.K., though it's very much contained in a velvet glove. Yet there's a constant drain of members - e.g., Chris Carpenter, Peter Butler (U.K. PT editor), Gordon Graham (press manager), Dan Medlicott, various deacons, etc. Their [the WCG] income, I gather, is well maintained, but little of it seems to go into evangelistic effort. I know, too, of several rather shaky top people. However, the majority who quit just don't want anything that has the remotest Armstrong connections!

Our main thrust is towards new people, and we're preparing an ad campaign following the launch of a newsletter. We are standing firm on salvation by grace - untrammelled by legalism, yet taking a stand on festivals, Sabbath, and our main traditional teachings (on soul, eschatology, creationism, etc.) as part of a general way of life and teaching - something that a Christian grows toward with time. We also stand on local autonomy and see ourselves (at Lincoln) as co-ordinators and perhaps, initially, as guides and as exercising leadership in a Christian way.

But we have a long way to go - as they say, "nowhere to go but up"! But with 55 million in a sardine can there's a lot of scope. I'm convinced most "active Christians" are simply in need of education in Bible teaching and are not hand-in-hand with Satan! This we will try to supply by our ads, newsletter, and talks to church groups.

*****

There are a group of about 15 of us who meet each 2-4 Sabbaths for study and help and supper afterwards. We share your mailings. They keep us current. We would not go back to WCG as it is now. We have grown so. The teachings of Heb. 5 and Heb. 6:1 etc. tell us they teach milk and basic things, and we need to leave these 6 or 7 doctrines after the foundation is laid to go on to maturity (meat).

*****

We left the church at Colorado Springs in 1978 with about 20 other disillusioned members . We now have a church pastored by Jack Hines, the Church of God of Colorado Springs. We still believe in the truths once preached by Mr. Armstrong and are going on from there.

Colorado Springs, Co

*****

Whatever became of Larry Gilbert Johnson's Laodicean Era "Congregation of Yah" after his move to Beebe, Arkansas?

Houston, Texas

The last we heard, this group was close to bankruptcy. But we have not heard anything else for almost a year now. Frankly, we have not made a real effort to follow the antics of the so-called Laodicean Era church. Reports occasionally reach us as to the bizarre rituals practiced by this cult. We have also heard reports of violence associated with their headquarters group, and we have been contacted by representatives of police organizations in two states asking for information on them. Mr. Johnson and his wives have put out newsletters he describes as "war bulletins," but we really do not want to encourage anyone to get on their mailing list.

*****

In our March 24, 1980, newsletter we mentioned a church organization called Liberty Ministries International, founded by Tom Williams, a former WCG minister. One of our readers sent us a newsclipping from The Richmond News Leader of May 20, 1981. Here is an excerpt from that article:

A federal grand jury is investigating a company here that allegedly is selling materials that the firm contends will enable taxpayers to get tax breaks by becoming ministers of their own religions.

The company, Liberty Ministries International Inc. with offices at 8629 Mayland Drive. was incorporated in October 1979 by Thomas K. Williams, Linda S. Williams and William M. Morris, according to State Corporation Commission records.

Williams, the president of the company, refused last month to discuss the investigation. He said he believed the company is being harassed by Internal Revenue Service agents but cut off further questioning by saying his attorneys had advised him not to talk to reporters.

Sources with some knowledge of the investigation said authorities have information that the company might have sold as many as 2,000 of its tax "packages."

A Richmond woman said she joined the organization briefly after she learned of it when "somebody said something to somebody else."

She dropped out of the organization last year and was reluctant to discuss details of her involvement. However, the woman, who asked that her name not be used, gave a general description of how two of the tax plans worked.

After making a $3,000 "donation" to Liberty Ministries, the company provided basic tax advice, financial counseling and books that can be purchased in many bookstores, she said.

In one of the plans, she was told she could get the tax breaks by organizing a church. She would take a "vow of poverty" and turn over all her assets to her "church."

Although she would control the assets as a director of the church and live much as she had before she formed it, she could deduct all her personal expenses from her taxable income because the expenses would go for a religious or charitable purpose.

Another plan was based on a tax law provision that permits taxpayers to contribute up to 50 percent of their income for religious or charitable purposes and deduct that amount from their taxable income.

In this case, the charitable purpose would be operation of the home as a church.

One person who with his wife set up such a church encountered additional problems when IRS agents went to this home in the 7800 block Hermitage Road to question the couple about it.

LETTERS

As a former member of the Worldwide Church of God, I am always eager to get your report of some more of the strange antics of Herbert and Stan. I have been giving half-hearted support to Garner Ted and his CGI for the past year. In your latest Report, you stated that GTA had increased his salary up to $60,000.00. I have just received a membership letter from Ron Dart saying that your story was not even "fragmented" from a partial truth but was "made from whole cloth." Money and the misuse of it was a major reason for me leaving the WCG, so this is a rather important point with me. May I ask you to comment on:

(1) Where did you get your information?

(2) Do you still stand by your story that it is in fact true?

I've found your information to be pretty accurate in the past, yet it's hard for me to believe Ron Dart to be a liar.

-Illinois

Editor: We too would not want to think Ron Dart is lying, nor do we believe he is. Ironically, however, our source of information on GTA's increased income was a CGI representative who insisted the information came directly from Ron Dart!

While no one from CGI has contacted us about a retraction (we have always been willing to run retractions on any statement in the AR shown to be in error), we have been informed that Ron Dart claims GTA's salary is still only $42,000 per year.

Since we would not want to believe either Mr. Dart or our CGI source is lying, could it be our source did not hear Mr. Dart correctly, or that Mr. Dart did not clearly explain what he meant? Or could it be that GTA now gets a separate income in addition to the regular $42,000 (plus perquisites) he receives from CGI? Perhaps he gets a second salary from the Garner Ted Armstrong Evangelistic Association?

We frankly don't know. But it is interesting that the GTA Evangelistic Association is separately incorporated from, and legally independent of, CGI. And the GTA Evangelistic Association has only three trustees: Garner Ted Armstrong, Benny L. Sharp, and Ron Dart. At least that is the information given us by the Texas Secretary of State's office. If any of our readers would like to obtain a copy of the Articles of Incorporation, they should write to the Secretary of State of Texas, P.O. Box 13701, Austin, TX, 78711. Or call directly: (512) 475-3551.

I was shocked to hear from a friend that he read in a book how Roderick Meredith, the Armstrong minister, believes it's okay to regularly take a teenage daughter's panties off and beat her. This sounds very abnormal. Is this true?

-California

Editor: That allegation is made on p. 208 of The Truth Shall Make You Free by John Tuit ($8 postpaid from The Truth Foundation, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold Township, NJ 07728). We don't know what Mr. Meredith's position is these days, but for many years he strongly advocated corporal punishment as a child-rearing method.

I think you should tell your readers about Emissary Publications, run by Des and Karen Griffin [Anderson; she graduated from A.C. in 1965]. They have a mail-order book business, offering some 150 books and tapes on subjects ranging from history and economics to politics and secret societies. Some of the titles offered are reprints of rare historical books.

Des Griffin has written two marvelous books outlining world history, explaining who's running the "show" from behind the scenes: Fourth Reich of the Rich is $6 and Descent into Slavery? is $7. Both have received Worldwide acclaim. They also offer a free catalog.

Here is what Mr. Griffin said in a 1979 letter about his business: "Emissary Publications was formed to meet a need - the need to make people aware of what is really happening on the world scene, and WHY! We don't have an 'axe to grind.' Our sole aim is to give readers the opportunity to see an over-all view of world affairs.... We are uncompromisingly opposed to all those forces of evil - whether they be government agencies, private corporations or foundations, secret societies, Church organizations or deluded individuals - who seek the overthrow of our nation and its absorption into a hybrid socialist blob euphemistically called THE NEW WORLD ORDER. We are dedicated to a diligent, unswerving search for new truth and understanding about the world in which we live."

I think Emissary Publications has a lot to offer. The address is P.O. Box 642, South Pasadena, CA 91030. Phone (213) 794-3400.

-Texas

Have you noted that HWA, white voting himself (in a "ja" type vote approval situation) and Rader another salary raise, plus a $250,000 bonus for Rader also asked his "dumb sheep" to sacrifice, tighten their belts, and send more money. Apparently, these two gents couldn't make ends meet on their previous salaries and expense accounts.

Quest/81's March and April issues, as seen on newsstands, have ads for Easter eggs from Czechoslovakia and for Easter hams, while one may also learn Tendai Buddhism and read about "Yoga and Prayer," as advertised respectively by Tendai Buddhist Information Center and "Christian Classics."

-Arizona

The members here in the Washington, D.C., church have no idea at all as to what's going on out west in Pasadena and Tucson. Surely the distance involved must have a dampening effect on any "shock waves" caused by the upheavals which keep occurring month after month. Oh, by the way, Sherwin McMichael's wife Beverly still attends services here as of two weeks ago, that I know of so he's still around here in the area doing what I can't tell you.

I'd like for all AR readers to know there is a ministry that I am involved with personally that ministers to those who are involved in the cults and the occult. They have tracts and tapes on most of the major cults and occult groups. The WCG has been added to their list recently. One tape available that should be very helpful is entitled "Can a Christian Have a Demon?" Price $3. To obtain tracts and tapes, or for any other questions you may have, write: Don and Phyl Tobias, Greater Love Ministries, Box 2008, Falls church VA 22042.

Because of Armstrongism and religious terrorism that is extant in this day and age, a fellow co-worker recently spent a few months in a mental institution. Please continue your efforts. It promotes mental health.

-AR reader

My wife and I returned to England after being in Australia for three and one-half years. My wife was still attending the WCG meetings in Australia, though I had left some six years ago, but I'd attend occasionally with my wife. However, since returning to England there's been a great "purge" out there. That is, those not 100 percent behind HWA are to be disfellowshipped. As we're planning to return to Australia soon, it means I certainly won't be able to attend or my wife as she's not a baptized member (though she's happy to attend because of her friends in the WCG) and believes much as I do. Quite a few have been disfellowshipped as a consequence, but I don't know who they are as yet.

Editor: The following is a copy of a letter one Plain Truth reader recently sent to Garner Ted Armstrong. We frankly get a kick out of the way the Armstrong's have, for years, made musical tastes a litmus test for measuring righteousness and mental balance. Nevertheless, the subject is one which apparently raises the blood pressure of just about everyone.

Incidentally readers might find it interesting to know that Dwight Armstrong, the WCG's hymn composer and HWA's brother, is an ardent admirer of the compositions of both J. S. Bach and Debussy.

Dear Mr. Garner Ted Armstrong,

We read your comment in The International News, Jan.-Feb. 1981 as reported by Ambassador Report) on HWA's diatribe against John Lennon. Your father's remarks are indeed tasteless and perhaps nothing more than an expression of his boundless jealousy of Lennon's worldwide recognition. To HWA's intellectual rubbish, John Lennon answers in these Lyrics:

"He's just a nowhere-man, sitting in a nowhere-land, making lots of nowhere-plans - for nobody." What could be more descriptive of HWA's alienation, frustration, and desperation?

That the Beatles' music in orchestral form is enjoyable is well-perceived. However, when you say that the works of Debussy or Bach could not stand a comparison, we trust that such a statement was not inspired by knowledge. We challenge you to specifically name any one of their works unfit for comparison, and explain why.

Such a general, untested, or unchallenged remark may be suitable for a sermon in church where no questions are asked. In the real world, in contrast, such a remark only serves to perpetuate a tradition of loose and thoughtless statements that have come to haunt both you and your father in the last several years.

-California

Keep up the good work. My husband and I are an ex-deacon and deaconess of 20 years in the church who left two years ago. Our two married daughters are still devoted followers, and we worry about their safety, our grand-children's safety, as well as their husbands'. We feel sad when we read your closing letters because we know from experience it's only too true. Normally I don't write "letters to the editor" but just wanted you to know you are appreciated. Keep printing - more often if possible.

-Illinois

I am still a member of the WCG, but I'm not a "blind sheep." I work at the college (AC), and although I love my job, I see the rank corruption which surrounds this place at all times. I believe it was Ralph Waldo Emerson who said, "Every organization a simply a shadow of its leader." How true. How true. As long as HWA continues his life of hypocrisy, this place will reflect that lack of character which he maintains. And it's so sad because with such unbelievable facilities, all the wonderful people I've worked with over the years and all the untapped talent I've seen pass this way, we could have a thriving organization if there was a little more sanity reflected in the leadership. But of course, we must remember that it's "worldly" to learn how to run an organization properly.

-AC employee

I have been intending for years to write to you and thank you for the great service you have done in exposing the "great work" of fleeing the flock centered in Pasadena. I was a dedicated member of the WCG for eighteen years and a Local Local Church Elder (not in "our" employ) for the last fourteen of those years. Actually I was a Loco Local Elder (not in "our" good graces) the last five of those years.

In the Santa Barbara church both local elders and three of the four deacons quit the church. Of course these voids were filled quickly with new souls willing to sell their own mothers for a little "authority."

In the past I have always read my friend's copy of the AR, but when this issue came I just realized how valuable and enjoyable it is. And now I wish to support your efforts hoping you can continue the AR so that the "Plain Truth" may be available to those who care to know it.

Also after investing eighteen years of my youth and the usual amount of tithes and offerings in the outfit, I would like to, shall we say, check up on my investment once in a while. I don't feel that a few good laughs is too much to ask in return for that size investment.

-California

It is amazing how fast one can be deprogrammed with a bit of the right information. For over a decade my life was almost totally controlled by ideas that came from the mind of a psychotic old man who claimed to be God's only apostle for this era. Preposterous! I still blush to think how ignorant and naive we all were and many still are. Eric Hoffer's book, The True Believer, should be required reading.

It is strange to ponder that last year's only apostle and the elect's hope for the future - the one going to save them from the horrors to come - has this year turned out to be public enemy #1. I can now see us as being very scared, docile children being led through a haze of one of the grimmest of fairy tales. (The old troll waiting at the end of the road in the cave with his ruling clothes on.) The whole thing is a nightmare.

I received my copy of David Robinson's book. I thought he gave a most complete profile of the intellectual con man.

-West Virginia

Thanks for telling me about Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web. I have the book. It is unreal to think one man can do so much harm in the name of Jesus. Because of Armstrong God has never had his hand on this cult and never will.

-Tennessee

Thanks again for your report. There is comfort in knowing I'm not alone in this experience. I find the reports and letters helpful after 12 years in the WCG. I decided to read all the "dissident reports," books, etc., to prove to myself and try to understand why so many ministers, educated at Ambassador, and all the others had left what I really believed was the only true church of God.

I feel so sick at heart that I was helping to support that system now. As soon as "word got out" that I had the Robinson book and the Ambassador Report (which my sister had sent me), well anyway I might as well have been in Siberia with the plague - my so-called friends of the past years just vanished over night.

The only good from this experience has been to be exposed to some of Dr. Martin's teachings and hopefully to direct my thoughts to Christ and not Headquarters and HWA. It's a shame the Tuit book couldn't have had more attention and been published earlier. Anyway thanks and keep up the reporting.

-Oklahoma

So glad you are still publishing your newsletter in spite of your financial difficulties. Thanks to your hard work we are now living life as God meant it to be lived in fellowship with all mankind.

-California

[News] of former members is always interesting. I, too, have been greatly blessed. From being almost broke when I left I now own and operate a 20-unit apartment complex and have bought my own home. Blessings upon blessings flow to us when we are free from bondage and have God for our partner - free to worship Him in the true spirit to serve mankind with love.

-Texas

Since leaving the WCG, we haven't been financially stable. It has taken us all this time (approximately one year) to gather our senses. I don't know about anyone else that has left the WCG, but speaking for myself, I have had to go through quite a lot emotionally, mentally, and physically. But I am not sorry because I have a lot more love, a lot more understanding, and a lot more faith. I am sorry for those who are struggling in and out of the WCG and will do anything I can to help.

LATE NEWS

July 19: Just as we were about to finish typing this newsletter, we learned that HWA and GTA, through a new exchange of letters, have evidently ironed out most of their personal differences. A number of public statements in sermons and articles will now be made alternately by the two to prepare their followers for the planned reunion of their two church organizations.

Herbert Armstrong is already saying that some of the accusations leveled against Ted in the last three years were false. Of course, as in past years, HWA is not admitting he lied but is claiming he was led astray by lieutenants who gave him false information about Ted. One guess as to who HWA's new fall guy will turn out to be.

*****

One final note. Recent increases in printing costs, postage, etc., combined with an increased number of subscription requests and a drop in contributions, have put the AR in a bit of a squeeze. We had been planning to skip our third quarter issue and simply put out one in December. However, if events continue to develop in the above story, we will try to put out at least a short newsletter in September.

Our thanks to those of you who have assisted us financially and to those who have sent us news clippings and other information for use in the Report. Your assistance does make this publication possible.

Sincerely,
The Publishers

AMBASSADOR REPORT

October 22, 1981

Dear Friends:

This third quarter Ambassador Report was to have come out in late September. But as in the past, we have simply been unable to get our newsletter out on time. Nevertheless, at Ambassador College a great deal has been happening which, we believe, you'll want to know about. Here's the latest.

GTA STRIKES OUT

In our last newsletter we mentioned how Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) was attempting to have Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA) brought back into the WCG fold. Just as we were going to press with that issue of the Report, the Worldwide News (July 13, 1981) was being distributed to WCG members. It contained a remarkably uncharacteristic article by Herbert Armstrong entitled "I Confess Wrong - Can You?"

In that article HWA actually admitted making numerous errors regarding the disfellowshipping of his son Garner Ted in 1978. Wrote HWA:

"When I find I have sinned, I confess that to God, not to people. But when there comes to my attention an unintended error - a mistake - which has involved people, then I must admit that error and correct it before the people involved.

"That has happened in the case of my disfellowshipment letter to my son, Garner Ted Armstrong."

That article, plus numerous pro-Ted comments by HWA in sermons, left GTA confident of a triumphant return to the WCG in the near future. Ted actually began telling friends that he would be back in the WCG within a few weeks. And Stan Rader - to the shock of many WCG members - even commented on one radio talk show that HWA and GTA were already in contact with each other. Other sources have also confirmed this.

Their contact even involved a top-secret letter sent this summer by GTA to his father who was temporarily staying at Orr, Minnesota. The letter contained statements which were to have been used by HWA to convince the WCG membership that Ted had indeed repented (again). One of those quotable quotes said in effect, "If I had it all to do over again, Dad, I wouldn't have left."

But the reconciliation was still not to be. For although HWA was making it quite clear that he wanted Ted back, those around HWA made it quite clear they did not.

While in times past HWA could simply express his will and have total agreement from his subordinates, this is apparently no longer the case - at least in regard to the GTA matter. HWA has been surprised to discover that, his desires notwithstanding, no one else in the church's hierarchy wants to see Ted return. No one!

Of the men now on the "Advisory Council of Elders" as of the Aug. 10 Worldwide News (twelve: Dibar Apartian, Dean Blackwell, Robert Fahey, Ellis LaRavia, Raymond McNair, Leroy Neff, Joe Tkach, Herman Hoeh, Roderick Meredith, Norman Smith, Harold Jackson, and Leon Walker, plus Ralph Helge, legal advisor), there is not one really in favor of seeing Ted return. In fact, with the exception of HWA, we have not been able to find even one minister in the entire WCG who is all that interested in having Ted return. A number, have even indicated that they would resign from the ministry should Ted be reinstated.

Perhaps had Ted been more discreet in his approach to the situation, his return could have been implemented. But he seems to have played into the hands of his opponents. For one thing, before a reconciliation to HWA was even made official, Ted was telling some how he was going to fire and retire a number of "enemies" upon his return. The "hit list" included numerous GTA critics such as Roderick Meredith and Gerald Waterhouse and even some old friends such as Leslie McCullough. Then, Ted also commented to a few that on his return he - and not his father- would be in charge of things.

Those statements found their way back to the Council of Elders who were only too happy to relay them to HWA. HWA, in turn, has again changed his mind about Ted and is saying it is obvious now that his son has not yet really repented.

A recent meeting in Big Sandy between HWA and Ted's son Mark yielded no positive results, and now both HWA and GTA are saying a reconciliation is not possible. As HWA gets older, the Council of Elders will continue to grow in influence. Should HWA die or become incapacitated, it is legally empowered to choose his successor. In all likelihood that will be Roderick C. Meredith.

GTA STARTS NEW BUSINESS

With hope for a reconciliation with his father fading, Garner Ted Armstrong is faced with the challenge of trying to develop his organization during a time when inflation and recession fears are causing many nonprofit organizations real financial headaches. It is therefore not surprising that GTA is putting greater emphasis on mandatory tithing - especially since many of his members have done Bible research and concluded that Christians are not required by God to tithe. For instance, the July issue of The International News contained a huge article by Ted Armstrong on the subject of tithing. Here's one quote (p. 11, emphasis theirs):

"The... Church of God reconfirms and reemphasizes its adherence to the basic principle of tithing as established and exemplified in God's Word. The Church teaches the giving of tithes because it is the law of God. Consequently, the withholding of one's tithes, which violates that law, IS A SIN."

But tithe payments are not GTA's only revenue source. We noticed, for instance, that the same issue of The International News had an advertisement offering video cassette tapes of GTA programs for $25 each and an eight-part audio cassette album for "the low price of $29.95." The ad was placed by The Garner Ted Armstrong Evangelistic Association, which readers will recall is separately incorporated from the Church of God, International.

Then on page 5 of the same publication there appeared an almost full-page ad announcing "Peter's Story," a novel by Garner Ted Armstrong. You can order that one for $12.95 plus $1.50 postage.

The ad said: "Peter's Story is a novelization of the big fisherman's tempestuous years with Jesus, faithful to the original text, yet with sufficient additional material that it should be viewed more as a novel than a history. "

The ad for the book was placed by Emerald Enterprises, Tyler, Texas. According to the fictitious names records of the Smith County courthouse in Texas, Emerald Enterprises is owned by Garner Ted Armstrong.

HWA STILL GOING STRONG

While GTA struggles to keep his organization afloat by selling novels and video tapes of himself, his father continues to amaze both his followers and his critics by being incredibly active at age 89. Recent issues of The Worldwide News show Herbert jetting with his entourage (usually includes his nurse Ruth Nestor and his executive assistant Bob Fahey) to speak before large congregations in Canada, Australia, Britain, Germany, and all across the U.S.

Some have wondered if HWA does not perhaps view the current string of speaking engagements as a kind of farewell tour. During his commencement address to the graduating seniors in Pasadena this year, he actually commented that it might be his last commencement address. Others feel the effort is being made in order to hold together a church that has been badly hurt by the infighting of the last decade.

While HWA does continue to amaze just about everyone, we have noticed that he is not changing his "winning game" marketing methods. Recent co-worker letters sound almost like reruns of those from 20 years ago. (Sometimes they are.) Notice, for instance, this excerpt from his July 14 co-worker letter (emphasis his):

"As of the first of this month the income financially for the Work in the U.S. was up some 22 percent - growing once again, after a 12-year drop, toward a 30 percent increase. But in the last 30 days - since we entered the summer months - there has been a significant DROP. Now the month to date shows an increase of only 13.5 percent, and the past five or six weeks has brought the year-to-date increase down to 18.7 percent. THAT IS ALARMING!

"We have been adding very powerful and leading TV stations, and plan to add more. BUT UNLESS OUR BRETHREN WILL SACRIFICE FURTHER, THAT MAY NOT BE POSSIBLE. We were, 30 days ago, in the best financial condition ever in the Work. Right now as I write, the situation is ALARMING! I have to ask you to PRAY earnestly, and to sacrifice for the most important operation and activity on earth!"

STANLEY RADER UPDATE

The July 20 Los Angeles Herald Examiner contained this item in Jeff Silverman's page 2 column:

"RADER OF THE LOST INFLUENCE. Things are moving along quite cozily between state Attorney General George Deukmejian and Stanley Rader. (You know Stan. He's the Worldwide Church of God's Herbert Armstrong's right hand. He's also suing all the folks behind "Raiders of the Lost Ark" for zillions.) Well. Though Stanley's officially stepped down from his church honchoship, he just told KMPC's Mr. Tough Guy Chuck Ashman he still carries home $300,000 a year as 1) exec veep of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation and 2) personal adviser to The House of Herb. And that's not even The Fun Part. This is: Two years ago, Deukemjian and Rader were hooked in the throes of legal woes over the alleged misappropriation of $70 million of church funds for personal use. The suit disappeared when a new state law prohibiting the attorney general from suing church leaders was passed. Now brace. Rader told Ashman he'll back The Duke's Republican bid for the governorship with Major Funds. Says Rader, 'Deukmejian's a man of integrity and common sense. He dropped the lawsuit against us.' Oh."

Stanley Rader has riot just "stepped dam from his church honchoship." He's been pushed off. Herbert Armstrong has been privately bragging to associates that Stanley has been "effectively contained." On Sept. 15, the Pasadena Star-News reported:

"Stanley R. Rader ... has been removed from ministerial functions in the Pasadena-based Worldwide Church of God, and no longer represents the church in any official function.... If he is no longer a minister, Rader said he has not been informed. In any case, the position was one of rank only, he said, and did not entail his performing ministerial functions. 'Not to my knowledge am I no longer a minister,' Rader said. 'I have been advised that I am not an evangelist, which is a matter of rank rather than function.'"

Whatever way Rader wants to describe it, he is no longer ordained. Rader does continue to receive a salary of about $200,000 per year (plus perqs) from the church. Supposedly this is for his "consulting" services. However, Ellis LaRavia, who has taken over many of Rader's AICF duties, told the Star-News that Rader does very little consulting. "It is very insignificant at this point," said LaRavia. Also, the termination point of Rader's contract has been cut back to 1987. It originally extended to the year 2003.

Rader has not been officially disfellowshipped, but some insiders are saying there has been a "de facto" disfellowshipping. Herbert Armstrong has been telling ministers that Rader is not really converted and that they should not have dealings with him. Not only that, virtually all of Stan's closest associates in the church have been disfellowshipped. That includes Henry Cornwall, Jack Bicket, Joe Kitora, John Kineston, and Jack Kessler.

None of those disfellowshipped seem very pleased by the action. And in fact, like thousands of others improperly and unfairly put out of the church in the last decade, they too may have good reason to believe they are being railroaded. Lawyer/CPA Jack Kessler and accountant Henry Cornwall have been particularly upset by their banishment and have indicated they don't intend to take the abuse lying down. We would not be surprised to see Stanley Rader come to their legal assistance.

The Sept. 15 Star-News article had this interesting conclusion:

"Rader said there is no truth to claims that he was removed because he had proposed that Armstrong, now 89-years-old, be placed in an institution. Rader said, however, that he had advised Armstrong to change his operations to prevent anyone from placing the church under a conservatorship because of his condition.

"A new state law, Rader said, strengthened the ability of members of the board of directors, or even relatives, to put Armstrong's operations under conservatorship. 'They all might have standing over his person,' Rader said.

"Armstrong refused his advice, Rader said. Armstrong has moved from his Tucson home to one in Pasadena. His wife Ramona remains in Tucson."

RADER TO CLEAN UP HOLLYWOOD?

While Stanley Rader does have his critics and there are perhaps a number of somewhat negative observations that can be made about him, there is one positive comment about Stanley that can be made without fear of contradiction - he never ceases to entertain.

Take, for instance, the Aug. 25 issue of The Hollywood Reporter. For those readers who are not familiar with it, The Hollywood Reporter is a slick daily trade publication, serving the needs of the Hollywood movie industry. Like Daily Variety, its readers are mostly film distributors, movie producers, directors and actors.

A typical issue has articles dealing with ticket sales figures on new hit movies, costs of movies now in production, and Hollywood gossip columns. A large percentage of its advertising is placed by talent agencies trying to get parts for new talent. For instance, a typical ad will feature a picture of a sexy starlet with her name and the name of her agent. But in the Aug. 25 issue of The Hollywood Reporter something new was seen. That issue had a full-page ad containing a photo of Stanley Rader at a microphone. The accompanying text simply read "Stanley R. Rader of The Ark of the Covenant."

No wonder some readers were shocked. What did it mean? Was Stanley trying to get a movie role? Was he trying to convert Hollywood? Was he claiming to be Yahveh? We still don't know, but we'll be the first to admit it - Stanley is entertaining.

Another example: On Aug. 13 Stan appeared on NBC's "Tommorw" show with Tom Snyder (the show that GTA cancelled out on). It was another remarkable performance for Stan Rader. Here are a few excerpts from the interview which followed a puppet show act:

RADER: [talking about Robert Kuhn and himself] In 1968 we began to dig in Jerusalem and from that time forward, Kuhn and I knew that eventually there would be a very good chance that we would discover the Ark of the Covenant. And by 1976, he decided that it might be a good idea to anticipate that by writing a screenplay or a screen treatment. I encouraged him to do so. We were very, very close....

SNYDER: Who is Stanley Rader? Is he a man who is concerned about ecumenism and the preachings of the Lord? At one time you were described as the heir apparent to Herbert Armstrong of the Worldwide Church of God. Now Stanley Rader is involved in a lawsuit involving a major motion picture which has grossed over $100 million so far. Who is Stanley Rader? Is he jumping from one thing to another, trying to attach his name to get great controversy and possibly achieve a profit for himself? Is he a man who is avenging the word of God? Who is Stanley Rader?

RADER: Very, very good question.

SNYDER: It's an excellent question, believe me.

RADER: And I was afraid you were going to ask me that.

SNYDER: Yeah.

RADER: Uh, basically, I'm the same person I was when we met three years ago.

SNYDER: Well that could go either way you know.

RADER: I'm a member of the church. I'm a minister.... [Snyder, appearing somewhat suspicious, then questioned Rader on his "motivation in life." Rader talked of starting a nonprofit organization to restore the image of the Ark, supposedly cheapened by movie producer Lucas and company. But when pressed further by Snyder, Rader admitted he did want to make money from the lawsuit.)

SNYDER: Are you more interested in seeing legal and moral justice done or making some money on this? I have problems finding your motivations Stanley - only because of the past.

RADER: Well, one's motivations can always be mixed. I naturally want to recover what's ours. I also would like to see that the industry in Hollywood is cleaned up. There's a lot going on in Hollywood that you know and I know goes on, that I am now in a position - because of the lawsuit - to focus on. And if I can protect other writers who have been in essence ripped-off by the system, I will have accomplished something. I won't change the whole system any more than Ralph Nader, when he took on General Motors, was able to change everything in the automobile industry, but we all know that it's different today than it was then...."

The discussion continued on in a similar fashion until Snyder had to break for a commerial. He tried to make a few transitional comments but became tougue-tied as the words just wouldn't come out right. Chuckling, he turned to Rader and said: "You nuke me crazy Stanley."

ROBINSON SUIT SETTLED

Since the appearance of David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web ($10, from John Haddem Publishers, P.O. Box 35982, Tulsa, OK 74135), many of you have written to us about how shocking it was to discover what Herbert Armstrong's private life is really like. As many of you are aware, Herbert Armstrong never sued David Robinson over the book, nor did any other Armstrong family members sue. However, as we reported in past newsletters, Robinson was burdened by a noisome suit brought, with Armstrong's approval, by two Armstrong employees, Henry Cornwall and Sherwin McMichael (both now disfellowshipped).

Now we are very pleased to announce that that legal battle has finally cone to a close. Here is Mr. Robinson's letter to us explaining what happened:

"For those interested in our problem with Herbert Armstrong here in Tulsa I am pleased to report that Worldwide got out its checkbook about a month ago and settled. And yes, in court the plaintiffs finally had to admit the church was behind the suit! Their check was for $25,000. One would have to conclude that God was not with them here in Tulsa. He did not want them trampling all over the truth and the basic rights of others in order to cover their sins, which are as scarlet! What Herbert Armstrong did in secret was shouted from the housetops. Also, I am sure, based on what is now happening, that there will be much, much more. The stench is so great that there simply has to be another, and much bigger, explosion.

"I would also like to say that those who helped us with our legal expenses really saved the day and enabled us to continue until Herbert Armstrong had enough. Almost $8,000 came in from several hundred very helpful people, for which we are very thankful. When these two sums were combined, the total just barely paid our legal expenses. Good lawyers come high, but poor lawyers come even higher. I had both.

"Approximately 6,000 copies of Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web have gone out to interested people, and when the income and expenses are tallied too they just about balance out. (Many copies were sold wholesale to stores, and several hundred were sent free in special cases.) So, while the operation didn't end up costing us anything except much time and effort, it didn't make us anything either. Not that we expected it to. But copies were sent to governments, ambassadors, and influential people all over the world. Hundreds of libraries now stock this vital book. We took the time and money to fully inform the media powers that be, both by letter and by phone. They now know. Of course, the Ambassador Report has done so much for so many years to furnish the necessary, the very necessary, information to those who should know. I myself am really a late comer onto the field, but because of this effort, the world now knows the real Herbert Armstrong, and he can no longer hide behind his false image.

"The truth is that this man is so profligate, so practiced a liar, so evil that he can only be a direct servant of Satan the devil. He operates in the name of God to serve his own wicked self, just as he took his own teenage daughter and abused her for 10 years, in the name of God! Many of his ministers know this and privately say so. He has brought great shame on the name of God and on true religion."

JOHN TUIT CONTINUES CRUSADE

With WCG members soon to converge on the Cape Cod area of Massachusetts for the Feast of Tabernacles, WOCB radio personality Dave Damkoehler invited WCG minister Jim Franks to appear on his radio talk show. Franks accepted, but when he was told that author John Tuit would also appear, he cancelled out saying, "I won't even be in the same room with Tuit!"

Damkoehler then called WCG headquarters in Pasadena asking if they could provide a replacement for Franks or even an on-the-air telephone caller to respond to Tuit's radio comments. The WCG declined the offer.

On Oct. 12, Tuit showed up at the station only to discover that Damkoehler had fielded five hours worth of phone calls from local businessmen trying to get the station to cancel the Tuit interview. It seem that minister Franks had gone to certain leaders of the local business community and threatened to keep the WCG out of the Cape Cod area the following year if WOCB gave Tuit any air time.

Damkoehler politely ignored the advice given by the callers and went ahead with the Tuit interview. Afterward, Tuit went over to the auditorium where the WCG was making ready for the upcoming Feast services and left a copy of his book for Franks. It was inscribed, "To Jim Franks - who should not have feared to meet me face to face."

It is no secret that Tuit has been critical of many of the organizational and business practices of the WCG. But ironically, Tuit does believe in many of the fundamental doctrines of the WCG. A glowing review in the Sept. 1981 issue of The Bible Advocate made mention of this very fact. Yet while Tuit feels a strong affinity for both the WCG's doctrines and its people, its ministry will simply not give him the time of day. Nor will they tolerate members who read his book. Yet some are reading it.

John Tuit called us recently and said he is continuing to actively promote his Armstrong expose The Truth shall Make You Free ($8 per copy from The Truth Foundation, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold, NJ 07728). His promotional efforts include mailing out flyers to thousands of WCG members describing his book's contents in detail.

Mr. Tuit told us that he is getting a fairly good response from flyers mailed to church members. If you have friends in the WCG that you would like to help, here is an excellent opportunity. Simply type or print clearly their names and addresses on a piece of paper and mail your list to John Tuit at the above address. He said he will mail every individual a flyer as soon as possible.

BREAKING CONTINUES

Over the years we have heard of hundreds of families broken up due to the erroneous teachings of Herbert W. Armstrong. Then some years ago when the WCG finally changed its so-called "divorce and remarriage" doctrine, we assumed the WCG ministry would stop meddling in marriages and discontinue the practice of encouraging some individuals to leave their spouses. Unfortunately, we were mistaken.

During the last few months we have discovered that some WCG ministers are indeed at it again. Now, however, a previous marriage is not the excuse used for breaking up homes. Lack of faith in Herbert Armstrong seem to be the grounds some ministers are using to justify the encouragement of divorce. The following letter is typical:

"My story is as sad as any you might have heard of. My wife of 20 years has divorced me because I am not a WCG member and do not think the world will end in 1982 or 1989. A member since 1965, she had said she would give it [the WCG] up if the world did not end by 1973, as was so widely indicated back in those days. But of course when 1974 rolled around HWA said: 'I never said that.' You know the story better than I.

"My problem is I have daughters (18, 16 and 11) and a 13-year-old son who believe in the WCG and HWA simply because I allowed their mother to take them with her to church. As you also know, they simply will not read Robinson's or Tuit's books or your AR because they are forbidden to do so. I am searching for some soft-sell information that will plant the seed of desire to search for the truth. So if you know of anything and have the time to do so, please inform me of it.

"I have hopes of someday getting my wife back and pray that she might one day see the truth too. HWA can't live forever, and maybe if GTA does come back, he'll get things back on his liberal track and off HWA's new tightening-up policy. May the true God in heaven watch over us and guide us. I need some help so please do help if you can. Keep the Report coming, even if you must shorten the pages."

AR Reader

While all WCG ministers are not guilty in this regard, there are clearly a number of them around the U.S. who, in their zeal to serve Herbert Armstrong, have adopted policies that even Herbert himself might not condone. This has happened because Herbert - distrusting those around him - is attempting to administer the field ministry without the aid of the kind of administrative hierarchy the church has had in times past.

HWA's current church management theory is that all ministers should be responsible directly to him, without the benefit of intermediaries (not unlike the New Testament doctrine of no intermediaries between the spirit-led Christian and Christ - I Tim. 2:5). But while this new concept of human government espoused by HWA (and contrary to the general idea found in Ex. 18:13-26) sounds good to some, from a human organizational point of view it has been a dismal failure.

Some WCG ministers are now saying that, while the past administrations of Rod Meredith, Wayne Cole, and David Antion may have had their shortcomings, there was at least a national church policy on most administrative problems and a proper chain of administrative authority to turn to to resolve questions of policy.

Now, however, there is not even that. At age 89, HWA is obviously not capable of handling even a handful of the many problems besetting the field ministry. With no adequate organizational structure or written policy to turn to for guidance, many ministers are simply "doing their own thing."

In some cases the results of that independence have not been all that bad, but in a number of situations, especially where the local yokel is willing even to break up homes in an effort to assert his own will, the results have been disastrous.

We regularly receive letters from individuals asking for advice on how to save a marriage being interferred with by the WCG. Unfortunately, while we want to help and while we do want to do all we can to assist, we are not experts in solving this kind of problem. We are not professional marriage counselors. Who then should such individuals turn to?

First of all, of course, there are professional marriage counselors that may be of assistance. Your phone book probably lists a few. Then, if a minister is indeed guilty of breaking up the home, there may be grounds for an alienation of affection lawsuit, and the services of a good lawyer may prove necessary. Again, check your phone book.

But while both of these may prove of some use, there may still be a major problem in getting proper advice. Unless they have had extensive dealings with the WCG in the past, many professionals will not be able to give the kind of advice that will bring satisfactory results in reasonable time.

With that in mind, it might be wise for those in this predicament to contact some of the WCG ministers that have resigned in the last few years. Their knowledge of church doctrine, church policies, and personalities may prove invaluable. We've heard of a number of individuals who were able to save their marriages through the help given by such men as Al Carrozzo, (P.O. Box 129, Vacaville, CA 95688), Howard Clark (Rt. 1, Box 230B, Oroville, CA 95965), and David Robinson (see p. 5).

Another former WCG minister who may be able to help is David Antion. Mr. Antion is related by marriage to the Armstrong family and was formerly a top WCG official, so he knows both the church's doctrines and its personalities. He also has an (accredited) master's degree in marriage counseling, is close to obtaining his doctorate in educational psychology from USC, and is licensed by the state of California as a marriage counselor. He can be contacted by writing to: David Antion, 311 Waverly Dr., Pasadena, CA 91105.

CALL THAT A SURVEY?

The form letter from Ambassador College's David Albert began nicely enough:

"We would like to know more about you and your fellow Ambassador College graduates! For sometime now the faculty and administration have wanted more information about Ambassador College graduates, such as how they fare in world vocations and careers after graduation. What are they doing for a living? What are they earning? And what are they doing in their local congregations by way of service to the Church?

"The enclosed, strictly anonymous, one-page questionnaire has been carefully designed to give us the answers to those questions - and to be as simple and easy for you to fill out as possible. And, the answers to those questions will help us to build an even better Ambassador College for the future."

The accompanying small questionnaire asked the usual demographic-type questions regarding age, sex, marital status, education level, occupation, yearly income, etc. The survey then went on to ask a number of questions designed to rate various Ambassador College factors - academic experience, vocational training, etc. - with regard to their value to the individual after graduation.

While the survey questions could have been improved a bit, overall we thought the idea of doing such a survey was very commendable. After all, what better way to improve Ambassador College than to ask its graduates to give their reflections and suggestions? A very meritorious idea indeed, we thought. Until, that is, we discovered the survey was not sent to all Ambassador College graduates, but only to those still in the good graces of Herbert W. Armstrong!

For instance, not one of the publishers of Ambassador Report received the survey questionnaire. Not that that matters, because our opinions are made quite available in our newsletters, which we know, for a fact, are read by virtually every Ambassador College administrator, WCG evangelist, and Plain Truth editor. But scores of other alumni say they too did not receive the survey questionnaire.

Now we ask: Is this any way to conduct an objective poll? What if president Ronald Reagan were to conduct a survey of Americans to ascertain his degree of support in the United States, but in doing so excluded all Democrats from the survey? Would that be fair? Would that be intelligent? Or would his results be highly biased?

Dave Albert's own letter says:

"To be most effective and accurate, we need a very high percentage of responses to this survey, so please do give us your responses as soon as possible."

We'd like to ask Dave Albert: Did you really want to see an "effective and accurate" survey? Or, come June are Plain Truth readers going to be treated again to the annual Ambassador College recruitment article, this time complete with the results from the latest "scientific survey" of satisfied Ambassador College graduates?

If that will be the case, we hope you'll pardon our skepticism when we read that 97 percent of all AC graduates praise their AC degrees, 98 percent are thrilled with their career opportunities, 99 percent are experiencing "real abundant living," and only one alumni married couple ever got divorced ("because they didn't follow Mr. Armstrong's advice - but soon they way be reconciled anyway").

HWA ON EDUCATION

Every so often we come across a statement in WCG literature that clearly reflects that organization's nature. On page one of the Aug. 10, 1981, issue of The Worldwide News, we came across an article by Robert E. Fahey concerning Herbert Armstrong's recent trip to Britain. In describing HWA's address to a group of high-school-aged youngsters at the church's SEP summer camp, Fahey wrote:

"He said he could not recommend the universities of this world. The main thing wrong in the world today is education. The institutions of higher learning are teaching people the wrong way.

"He said man needs three kinds of knowledge; how to deal with things, how to deal with people and how to relate to God. The schools can teach how to deal with things - that is fine. But universities attempt to teach how to deal with people - psychology is an example. But they know nothing of the spirit in man and how attitudes are formed. Therefore their knowledge is wrong.

"He added that we had men who have finished Ambassador, understood God's Word, and then went to these outside universities. And they have gone off - possibly for all eternity. He said he could not recommend law, medicine, and the social sciences."

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Robert Shnayerson, never a WCG member, but formerly the editor of Quest magazine, is now the editor and publisher of a new magazine called Technology, "The Magazine of Applied Science." Subscription information can be had by writing to: Technology, 2200 Central Avenue, Boulder, CO 80301.

Jim Doak, former WCG minister, recently wrote that he and his wife are now living in Tulsa and doing well. One business venture he is involved in is marketing Pro-Vita Corp. nutritional products. He mentioned that, for a $5 processing fee, he will send an application form and a packet of information to anyone interested in starting a nutrition products distribution business. His address is: J & B Christian Enterprises, P.O.Box 9737, Tulsa, OK 74107.

Jack Martin, formerly an Ambassador College and AICF executive, is now the president and publisher of Texas Business magazine, a leading business journal based in Dallas. Jack was recently surprised by a phone call from WCG evangelist Frank Brown, the minister who had disfellowshipped him from the WCG. Ironically, though Jack had not heard from him for some time, Evangelist Brown wanted to know if Jack might have a job opening in the near future.

Harry Eisenberg - one-time PT and GN writer, author of several TV scripts for the Garner Ted Armstrong program, and the person who did the shocking biblical research in 1973 that disproved the WCG's tithing doctrine, causing repercussions throughout the church - spent two weeks in the Pasadena area in August. Now residing near Bethlehem, Israel, he flew out to Los Angeles to discuss with Twentieth-Century Fox executives a film script he had recently written and submitted to them. In Israel now Harry is testing his entrepreneurial abilities by setting up his own business while doing free-lance writing. While engaged in these activities, he was one of a number of Israelis who founded Atzma'ut, a new political movement for an economically independent Israel. The movement feels Israel should institute a "free enterprise system with government restrictions reduced to a minimum. " Atzma'ut also calls for Israel to adopt a "bill of rights... to guarantee and protect the rights and freedom of the individual from arbitrary government action."

NEW GROUPS AND GROUPS NEW TO US

It's too bad religious organizations in general aren't completely open with their financial expenditures. Wycliffe Translators (translate the Bible into small, tribal languages) recently published their expenditures, showing a full 80 percent went to the targeted work of translation and publishing. Interestingly, the founder insists on a democratic organization at meetings and in administration. He mostly sits and listens. (By the way, "governments" is the seventh-listed gift of the Holy Spirit noted by Paul; if he listed the gifts in order of importance, government is not the most important thing on God's mind, as Mr. Armstrong has claimed; at least within the church.)

Letters

All friends in Britain are welcome to read current and past issues of Ambassador Report and other literature relating to recent incredible events in the Worldwide Church and at Ambassador College. Please contact: R.M. Kachere, 50 Rosemary Ave., London, England N.3.

-England

I can always count on your report to bring moments of hilarity into my otherwise dull and monotonous life. Where else could I read about the formation of yet another church of God? What next? The Apocalyptic Last-Chance-Ever Universal Free Life Unified Church of God in Mission, Kansas, perhaps? Believing, of course, in all tenets of the WCG, but without guidance from the Great Helmsman, HWA, now in discredit.

And then there is the question of GTA's income. Is it the $42,000 of record (with perqs) or the whispered $60,000? And would the extra $18,000 grant him a greater, or lesser, amount of "the spirit?" The extra $78,000 would of course flow from GTA's humble flock.

To top it off, there's a further discussion of musical taste in the WCG, past and present. Come on folks, it's only logical that GTA would disdain Bach and Debussy. What else can he expected from someone the highlight of whose musical life was to croon (if that is the proper word) on the "Hee Haw" television show?

And finally, Gerald Waterhouse. Can he still be sputtering forth on the significance of the name "Armstrong, " the great city of Petra, and the numbers 7, 21, 19 and 666? I'll bet the members still bring air cushions to his sermons, or if they forget, will make sure they do for the next sermon.

-New Jersey

Editor: Concerning Waterhouse, yes, he's still at it. And your cushion suggestion is a very good one. Some of Gerald's most recent sermons have clocked in at 4½-hours duration. A popular theme espoused by him these days is that GTA is still Joshua in prophecy but that he can't return to the WCG yet for "he is still wearing filthy garments."

Thanks so much for the last Report. Our minister at Worldwide is now making Rader the fall guy for all church ills. He says it takes years to prove one's conversion and HWA knew all along Stan was never converted, but HWA did it [baptized him] for the church's sake.

After reading the Report we asked him questions he couldn't answer. He just got mad and said we were in a bad attitude. There are still people in Worldwide who think Rader is a "good" guy. We went along with GTA for a while but found him up to old tricks. After 20 years in WCG, we're sticking around to see what happens next, so please don't use my name in your publication. If it wasn't for the AR we wouldn't know anything. Thanks for taking a stand for the truth. By the way, HWA at an Ozark ministerial meeting said he never knew a converted Jew.

-Kansas

Editor. Does that also include Jesus Christ?

Your latest issue mentioned Larry Johnson and the congregation of Yah. Since I have been in contact with them since late 1977, I thought you would be interested in knowing that they are still intact in Phoenix, AZ. They are just barely hanging on but are continuing their research in various doctrinal and biblical areas. I have tried to assist them in their research by sending various newspapers, books, special reports and publications, etc. There are only the four adults and the children.

I have enclosed the last newsletter (#25) for your information. You haven't heard from them for two reasons; lack of money and the poor health of Mr. Johnson. I personally am not aware of any bizarre rituals practiced by them, though I am a fair distance from their location. I would be interested in any information you have about them. The reports of violence were explained in newsletter #23 as being caused by the KKK and witchcraft groups being near their location.

As far as I know, the police in Arkansas have realized who was really behind it. I can find only one newsletter (# 23) described as a "War Bulletin, " That was based on the lot or plummet which has since proved to be not 100 percent accurate yet. That newsletter did say "if" the lot is true then Mr. Johnson, as a witness, would have started his mission Sept. 23, 1979. The enclosed newsletter #25 should give you a good idea of what he has been doing and his plans for the future. I think you will find several areas where you will agree with him. Take special note of the addresses at the end. Your comments about Mr. Johnson were all very negative, which is not surprising since I don't believe you have ever tried to get Mr. Johnson's viewpoints. In the interest of fairness, would you take this into consideration.

-Canada

Editor: Thank you for telling us about Mr. Johnson's latest activities. It is appreciated. However, based on what we've read in some of his mailouts, what we have been told by some who've left his group and especially what we have observed in face-to-face encounters with "Witness" Johnson, we stand by what we've written.

You seem to feel that our use of the word "bizarre" is inappropriate. Yet look carefully at the contents of the newsletter you sent us (published 8/11/80) by Johnson's Congregation of Yah - now apparently named L.I.B.R.A. or the Laodicean Biblical Research Association. On page two we found the following:

"We raise guinea pigs, and several of them represent people or groups that we and Yahveh have dealt with over the last several years. What happens to these guinea pigs individually we feel indicates prophetically the fate of the individual or group they represent. Go ahead and laugh; you would no doubt have laughed at Isaiah lying naked on his side building toy dirt forts and calling them the siege of Jerusalem. At any rate, we took three adult males representing Tom Drake-Kuhn, Nagele-Rader and Andy Korsun-the WCG ministry to try and sell them when we went down to Beebe or Little Rock recently. The temperature was about 109 degrees and even though the Blazer was air- conditioned (rather poorly), the Drake guinea pig dropped dead of heat prostration before an hour was up. As I held the dead guinea pig I was shocked to see the other two were also in bad shape. We watched in helpless horror as the Rader pig went through convulsion after convulsion before dying. We finally arrived at my mother's house and managed to keep the third animal alive. However, this animal, representing the WCG ministry, had weakened its heart and died the next day from the shock of the ordeal. Like I said, if I'm not a real prophet...."

Maybe we should not refer to this type of practice as "bizarre," because it is really not all that unique. In fact, according to many anthropologists this type of divination has been practiced by thousands of witch doctors and medicine men in primitive tribes around the globe for thousands of years. Sir James Frazer labeled this type of sorcery Homoeopathic Magic. A very thorough explanation of it (and the falacious reasoning upon which it is based) can be found in chapter three of his classic work, The Golden Bough.

We had been members of this cult for 10 years and are out about three years now. We were warned about the consequences of leaving - that everything goes downhill when you leave the WCG- but since then my husband has received a promotion at work, we have a nice checking account, our home is paid off, we have a brand new car paid off and numerous other items of furniture that we needed or wanted ("material things").

We are more content now that we are not ruled by man, but God himself. Religion truly is slavery. We also had a reunion, much needed, with his brother - a much needed trip which we could not afford while in the WCG.

-Wisconsin

One matter saddens me deeply. I often read success stories of individuals who have broken free from the WCG and then found themselves able to employ their creative abilities in rebuilding their lives. You continue to cite cases where this is true. However I wonder if it occurs to you that there may be numerous ex-WCG converts whose experience in the church was such that they are scarred for life, and this in ways which prevent them from finding the success that others have found. I would not like you to think that I regret reading success stories, out of an envious heart or other such negative attitude. It is simply that when an experience such as WCG succeeds in scarring a person, particularly one with various abilities, life becomes very trying and frustrating.

I am one such individual I cannot pursue my career... owing to a continued deep depression, now 11 years since I broke free from the WCG. And on the domestic level, I have, for the same reason, failed in two marriages and find it hard to relate to anyone.

I'm sure I'm not unique in this respect. As for the success stories, I am happy to learn that God is blessing such people so abundantly, but please remember the people who have suffered gross mental and emotional damage as a result of being in "God's only true church."

-A Reader

Editor. Yes, we really do enjoy running comments from readers who are doing well and are happy. But we are not trying to leave the impression that simply leaving the WCG solves all problems. Just as joining the Armstrong church is no panacea, neither is leaving it a panacea.

We have observed over the years that most people who leave Worldwide do go through a period of adjustment. While for some that adjustment is brief and relatively painless, for others it can be long and extremely difficult. We've noticed that most people, after being out for a few years, finally settle down psychologically. Many report that once they "got their head together" they felt at peace with God, with society and with themselves. Most have then been able to concentrate on career, family and other worthwhile pursuits with satisfying results.

Nevertheless, as your letter indicates, some never seem to fully recover from their contact with Armstrongism. Our files are filled with hundreds of letters from individuals who've paid very dearly for the "Ambassador experience." Yet, without belittling the extent of those tragedies, let us recognize the fact that we do live in a world of incredible fear, ignorance, superstition and suffering - especially suffering. And when we compare our experience with those of the rest of mankind, we should realize that for all the craziness of Armstrongism and seeming futility of the "Ambassador experience," our experience in many ways is not all that unique. Is not this world filled with tragedy, disappointment, misdirection and deception?

Yet there are those who survive - not just in the flesh, but in spirit. The whys and hows of this subject are very complex. Indeed, does this theme not make up a great portion of the world's greatest literature? And are not these matters the subject of great debates in theology, philosophy and psychology?

A quick browse through most any bookstore will reveal an absolutely incredible number of books coming out constantly that deal with achieving sound mental health, success and happiness. From time to time we have recommended a few that we have found helpful. Of course, we do not presume (as some organizations do) to have all the answers to everyone's problems. But let us mention one article we came across that we suspect may be particularly helpful. It is entitled "The Search for Happiness" and can be obtained free (as are all their very worthwhile newsletters) by writing: The Royal Bank of Canada, Monthly Letter, P.O. Box 6001, Station A, Montreal, P.Q. H3C 3A9 Canada.

I would definitely like to continue receiving your Report which is very informative and well written. It's nice to know what's really going on in that church. The tithes are really making it rough.

-Minnesota

Editor. If tithing is really beginning to hurt, may we suggest that you read "The Tithing Fallacy" by Ernest Martin. Thousands have benefited from getting this booklet, and for anyone who has been a part of the WCG it should be "must reading." A free copy can be ordered from the Foundation for Biblical Research, P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Our personal heartbreak right now is our 24-year-old son who is still in WCG and will not call or come over since that last front page article by HWA on not fellowshiping. It wasn't so bad until that article and now we can't see and enjoy our grandchildren (one is a new baby girl). I have to really work at it to keep from becoming very bitter against that bitter, egotistical old man (HWA). How blind we were for 20 years!

-Oregon

Editor: HWA constantly emphasizes the importance of keeping the Ten Commandments, especially the sabbath command. But the one right after that says, "Honor your father and your mother." This seems to be a forgotten commandment in the WCG. Your son should read Mark 7:6-13 (that is, if the WCG will let him).

Dear Friends:

And I mean that very sincerely, you are friends to a lot of people. My life has been so much happier since I've been released from slavery. I do wish I had more to donate to the good cause. My children are still in the WCG and won't listen to anything. I must remember I was also as blind. My son has completely disowned me and my daughter is not as warm as she used to be.

They claim to obey the 10 commandments, but my son has turned against me because I tried to tell him what I had learned. I was about 66 or 67 when I left the WCG and he doesn't know or care if I have enough to live on. But is this Christianity? Not in my book, nor God's. Fortunately, I can still work and have a job with a senior citizen center which I love.

-Nebraska

The activities and self-promotion of Herbert W. Armstrong seems to parallel those of Oral Roberts as reported by Jerry Sholes in Give Me That Prime Time Religion. In reading that book, one would think, in most instances, that only the names have been changed. The motives, the ego drives, the ego trips, personal vanity, drive for individual wealth, unreliability in accounting for tithes and offerings, lack of love or concern for church members and most employees of the church or its subsidiaries, remains the same.

It is an insult to the founder of Christianity that these activities are called Christian.

*-Mel J. Bradley
Colorado*

Thanks be to God for allowing your efforts to continue during these past years. You are performing a yeoman-like service in keeping your readers informed.

I was disfellowshipped from the WCG on 7/14/81. This was after being thoroughly "brainwashed" as far as biblical matters are concerned. I never have surrendered the portion of my mind that deals with Godly logic, reasoning and common sense. I was "brainwashed" because I was a biblical illiterate and fell under the sway of Armstrongism. But now, God has allowed me to read and understand the Bible for myself as I continue to grow.

Being able to read and understand that "book of books" is the basic reason for my disfellowshipment. The WCG, however, will say I was disfellowshipped because of my failure to recognize "church government."

I attended my first WCG service on 7/19/69 and was baptized by that church on 9/14/69. Through the years I have contributed about $25,000 in tithes and offerings to them. I also have contributed a plethora of questions addressed to the WCG. I have received very few if any answers to the more important of those questions.

I am so sorry I didn't know the "plain truth" about tithing before I contributed so much money to Mr. Armstrong's organization. However I feel as though I have had a 12 year education concerning the religion of men. That education is invaluable to me now. Tithing was one of the latest points I learned the truth about. I stopped tithing almost a year-and-a-half before being disfellowshipped.

I hope what I am about to write will be of some interest to you. I have rock solid proof that the WCG is still observing Pentecost on the wrong day. Part of that proof is in the form of a hand-written letter mailed to me from Mr. Herman L. Hoeh. Mr. Hoeh made the "mistake" of answering some of my questions truthfully and in writing. I don't believe N. T. Gentile Christians have to observe those Holy Days. I am not dealing with the question of whether they should or should not at this time. Only with the question of which is the correct day to observe Pentecost on, if one observes it.

From some time before being disfellowshipped, I sent Ministerial Services a variety of documentation proving a point about the subject of Pentecost. Neither Sunday nor Monday is the correct day. I proved that point to those ministers at Ministerial Services. Mr. Hoeh was finally goaded into answering me in writing. His letter admitted those findings on Pentecost were correct. However, he advised me to observe it on the same day as the WCG does, even though he knew they were wrong. He also wrote that I could observe Pentecost on the correct day privately at home if I chose to do so.

With a minimal of research anyone with some degree of common sense can prove the truth about Pentecost. I believe if the WCG members were told the truth about Pentecost some of them would accept that truth.

Pentecost is only the tip of the iceberg. The WCG is wrong on dozens of issues. Before being disfellowshipped, I asked my local minister, Mr. Abner Washington, to give me the opportunity to prove some of those issues to the WCG ministry. Mr. Washington stated to me that "we can't have that." He then disfellowshipped me.

Mr. Washington, exemplifying the fear and paranoia the church has exhibited over the issue of Pentecost then made a strange move. What was that strange move? Why, he also disfellowshipped my 18-year-old daughter Angela. I say he "disfellowshipped her" advisedly, because while she did attend services, she has never been a baptized member of the WCG. It's hard to fathom how Mr Washington could "disfellowship" someone who is not a member of the church. Her crime? She is "guilty" of also knowing the truth about Pentecost. Her "disfellowshipment" was clearly an attempt to keep a lid on any mentioning of Pentecost by her to WCG members.

To the more adventurous WCG members who are not afraid of being disfellowshipped, I suggest this: Ask Ministerial Services what relationship does Pentecost have to Sivan 6 or Shavuot or Shabuoth? To the more timid and docile WCG members I write this: Please don't let your ministers know you have so much as even heard the words Sivan 6. Why? Because you might be disfellowshipped as I was. On second thought being disfellowshipped from the WCG is a blessing in disguise.

The hierarchy of AC and the WCG enjoys a vast representation both through their own publications and also through the media. AR offers a vehicle to us whereby an alternate point of view may be expressed. Please put me on your mailing list. I think AR richly deserves our support, in whatever form, in its spartan efforts to bring about necessary changes. Please continue to expose both AC and also the WCG's own "Apostle," the "Apostle" Herpe. Whoops!!! Please pardon my faux pas. That is, please expose the WCG's own "Apostle," the "Apostle" Herbie.

I'm sick and tired of you people constantly harping on Stanley Rader. I think he has not only been a great help to Mr. Armstrong, but has done all of us a world of good. We need him! And I think he would make a tremendous head of the Church if God chooses to take Mr. Armstrong before the end of the age. Who else would be as qualified?

I'm glad you mentioned his illness, because for some reason not too many people knew about it. I'd like to send Mr. Rader a get-well card but I don't want any of his enemies in the Church to get it. Do you have his address?

-California

Editor: It's 360 Waverly, Pasadena, CA 91105.

I left the WCG in Sept 1979. went to the CGI Feast in San Antonio, Texas, got really excited about the "new beginning" and sadly watched it all deteriorate into another Armstrong re-run with a new name. I want nothing to do with the Armstrongs now, but I want to keep abreast of current events because I still have some family members in the cult. I am thinking of conducting public meetings in various churches in my local area to educate people about cults and how to avoid them. If you have any advice on this activity, I would appreciate it very much.

Editor: Contact The Citizens Freedom Foundation, P.O. Box 7000-89, Redondo Beach, CA 90277 (213-540-2642). They might be able to offer a suggestion or two.

Actually I could not see how it could be possible for HWA and GTA to ever get together again as your report stated would happen. They and their separate groups have done so much to destroy each other I thought it would be the height of folly and foolishness due to the further division it would cause, but now I suspect it may be just what will happen. It appears obvious that God Almighty is quite displeased with this church and may allow or cause just those things that will bring further division and disintegration. Whereas, the WCG has always discouraged people from reasoning (though God stated in Isaiah 7:78, "Come let us reason together), it would appear God is taking their reason from them. I'm more and more sure now that they will continue to make all the wrong decisions.

-California

I like to hear of what minister has been fired, resigned and where they are as I know a lot of them.

However, when I read that you said Garner Ted was making $60,000 a year I didn't believe that one bit. I feel you are misinformed on this matter as I know they don't have too much money to carry the work and Ted has had to do without an awful lot. Anyone with any sense at all should know that if he had that much money he would have a nice big beautiful car instead of owning a stupid little Toyota. I don't make much money a year and I have a much better car than that. I happen to own a Dodge Aspen which I would like to see Ted have. Whoever gave you that information is lying that is for sure.

The rumours go around also that he is going back with his Dad which is not one bit true. It must be very embarrassing to him that his Dad has become so corrupt (thanks to Rader). They taught us and taught us well, however that sort of thing happened way back in Bible days when men got corrupt and God rejected them.

Please try and get the true facts from the right source before printing it as it does cause a lot of trouble and some people are stupid enough to swallow all they hear.

Editor: During the Carter Administration, a number of the President's top advisors drove Pintos. California Governor Jerry Brown's official car is a light blue Plymouth Satellite. And, according to the Los Angeles Times ("View," July 28, 1981), Queen Elizabeth, when not being chauffeured to official functions, often drives a "little green Vauxhall station wagon."

As for Garner Ted's alleged poverty, this writer recalls seeing a beautifully maintained classic Model A Ford (ever price one?) on a Pasadena street a couple of years ago with the license plate prominently displaying the letters "GTA." We pulled along side and asked the driver if he had purchased the car from Garner Ted Armstrong. "Oh no," he said, "it's still his. I'm just taking care of it till he moves back to Pasadena." This occurred the same week that Ted was sending out letters telling of his sacrifices on behalf of his new church. At the time, you may recall, he even claimed some of his checks were bouncing.

After nearly 20 years in the WCG and being out now for about 2½ years, I simply can't understand how I ever got involved with the Armstrong characters. We need to pray for them both. They need all the help they can get.

-Kentucky

Thank you has to be the first thing I say to you. I was a WCG dupe and had given 16 years of my life, plus some $26,000 to cult leader Armstrong.

It was because of your efforts, plus those of Dr. Martin, Marion McNair, Dave Robinson, John Tuit and a few others that now I am beginning to get my mind straightened out. I really don't believe I will ever be the same, nor will any of those who have been smitten by that dreaded mind-bending organization.

But now I feel that your efforts provide a desperately needed service to help its in the deprogramming process.

-Florida

Thank you so much for the latest report. I am still right in the middle of this WCG and GTA situation. Being in my ripe old age with children and grandchildren and many friends so deeply involved, all I can do is thank God that he gives me spirit and a sound and inquisitive mind to help me keep my sanity and control my tongue, so they won't have me committed to keep me from upsetting the apple cart.

I have a host of friends that are of the same mind, so we manage to have fellowship and help one another. Also tapes and literature from ministers we can learn from and grow in grace and knowledge to full maturity as real Christians help.

You have been a real help to a great number of us here in this area. Keep it up if possible. Maybe soon something will happen to free all those caught up in this web.

-Texas

Mere words cannot express my gratitude for your courageous publications. Just why I waited until recent months to write for your reports cannot be explained, except that we were always encouraged in WCG services to stay away from anyone else's publications and/or broadcasts and taped messages.

Your magazine Ambassador Report (1977) deserves some kind of journalistic and/or editorial reward for form and content. "If I were a rich man," to quote a Broadway tune, this magazine would be placed in the hands of every member or prospective member of the WCG.

I stopped attending the... congregation on Jan. 12, when the local pastor resigned to (get ready for this) further his education. He was replaced by a dingaling of his equal... My financial support to the WCG was discontinued approximately two years prior to the time I discontinued attending meetings, but I kept going and knowing all the time that something deeply disturbing inside was wrong and that the flock was being fleeced. The local yokel kept speaking on every subject except the problems in Pasadena.

Many of the lay-members would become irate if anyone was ever critical of the great HiaWathA. A close friend of mine has reached such deep lows of mental anguish over the diabolical mess that he is surely alienating his family and facing financial disaster and a possible jail sentence for some of his actions as a result of being unable to accept the status quo as rotten, and continually attending WCG services.

May I, here and now, propose an "Armstrong Anonymous" organization and at the same time be the first of its possible thousands of members. The only criteria for membership into my AA will be to simply stand in front of another human being, in whom you have been self-righteous before, and say: "I was wrong about the Armstrongs." If no one is handily available, a good hand mirror will do. No fees or meetings ever.

Many good people are continuing to follow the Armstrongs because their stubborn pride will not allow them to withdraw, and like me, they have been so dogmatic toward friends and relatives about their religious beliefs, now it seems impossible to drop out. My uncle told me as much as 20 years ago that anyone who followed an organizational dictator was courting disaster.

I followed the WCG broadcast and studied AC material for 10 years before I ever counseled with a minister. After baptism and entrance into the WCG, I was constantly suspicious of church affairs in Pasadena and elsewhere. There was something about the Armstrongs that just never seemed to be right, and it always irritated me when the minister talked more about the Armstrongs than God in almost any given sermon.

-Arkansas

I too have suffered much despair, personal loss, financial strains, and alienation from my husband as a result of his becoming an ardent WCG co-worker and member. After a year of struggling with trying to expose this devious cult by all the means that I knew how (counseling at Christian Research Institute, psychiatric evaluations, several talks and discussions with my family aware of the nature of this group, and emotional appeals of trying to keep family together), I have almost given up on our young marriage of only four years now. I was forced to file for divorce a year ago as my husband was more intent on tithing 20 percent of his salary than making the house payments and everyday bills. Being the mother of a young two-year-old and pregnant with the second child to whom no savings were being planned, I left to the protection and support of my loving family who felt appalled at my husband's new-found beliefs which condemn our entire family's long-held Christian ideals... so after seeing the WCG's beliefs and practices, a united, solid, and secure family life was no longer possible.

Anyhow, I still have not signed final papers on the divorce as I wish a final attempt at rescuing this poor, misguided, and confused husband of mine. I have read much on deprogrammings, voluntary and forced, and I feel a confrontation with the real truth given by former Armstrong followers can retrieve ----'s heart back to family where it belongs, not to a cult leader who merely is taking advantage of his misunderstandings and weaknesses. If you know of anyone brave and loving enough to aid me in helping my husband see his grave error, please tell me.

-California

I wish to express my thanks and appreciation for the service you perform. I only wish you could publish the AR more often. Physically, I am handicapped and financially I am poor, but thanks to God and people like you that truly care, I have been spiritually blessed!

-Ohio

Thanks for your efforts. After more than three years, my wife (a WCG member) finally read a copy for herself. Persistence has paid off! One can easily predict a massive fragmentation of WCG that will far exceed anything in the past. Your efforts and many others will help thousands cope with the trauma.

ON THE TRACK AND OFF HIS NOODLE

We were absolutely appalled by what we have just read in the latest (Oct.-Nov. 1981) issue of The Good News. In an article by Herbert Armstrong, titled "Are We Back on the Track?- When We Lack Faith?", HWA laments the fact that youngsters at the church's summer educational camp "habitually demand [sic] a doctor for every little thing. It seems they have been taught at home to rely on doctors rather than God.... I was shocked."

HWA insists emphatically that "drugs can't heal and always have side effects, which are often harmful." He asks if some of the church brethren aren't "going to Baal-zebul, the god of Ekron," for healing, piously pointing out that King Ahaziah of Israel was allowed by God to die because Ahaziah showed a lack of faith by consulting with Baal-zebul instead of God. In conclusion he asks if "some of you brethren rear your children relying on Baal-zebul in the form of the doctors of our day?"

This article would be hilariously comical if it were not for its very serious implications. Here we have "God's Apostle," considered by the church as spiritually closer to God than any mortal, telling parents that they lack faith if they allow their children to seek medical assistance when injured or ill. Yet HWA himself relies almost exclusively on doctors, drugs, and medicines to cure his infirmities and has done so habitually for, at least, the last several years. He has allowed himself to be literally pumped full of drugs to prolong his life. On Jan. 11, 1979, a newspaper cameraman photographed HWA leaving a Tucson medical clinic where he was receiving medical assistance. At his Tucson home he had a licensed medic living day and night with him.

In November of 1978, Garner Ted Armstrong personally told AR publishers Bob Geringer and Len Zola that after his father's heart attack, HWA's Tucson home had been turned into a "virtual intensive care unit." Ted also described how he had witnessed his father taking numerous drugs. According to GTA, the number was absolutely astonishing. They were not health-food-type supplements either but "hard-core pharmaceuticals," the type "produced from petrochemicals." And even today, HWA relies on medication and travels with a professional nurse (Worldwide News, Aug. 10, 1981).

It is absolutely the height of hypocrisy for HWA to tell people they lack faith in God if they consult a doctor while he himself is availing himself of their services. (HWA even allowed Evangelist Rod Meredith, HWA's probably successor, to have what was termed "repair surgery" on his eye in the late '60s.) It is indeed lamentable that HWA is "shocked" at children seeking a doctor's advice but thinks nothing of doing the very thing he condemns. No wonder members are consulting doctors: HWA's actions speak louder than words!

LATE NEWS

With the Feast of Tabernacles about to begin, we purposely held up this already overdue issue in case the feast brought any major announcements. Although it had been rumored for weeks that there were major announcements to be made, there were none made worth mentioning. Feast-goers report that HWA remained in Pasadena, and sermons, as a whole, were very lackluster. One individual commented to us, "It was the most boring feast ever."

Nevertheless, one item of interest: "The place of safety" doctrinal theory (the WCG's answer to the rapture, but with the emphasis on saving the physical, of course) is again making the rounds in church circles. In fact, some WCG ministers are teaching that the end is just about here. While hedging their bet somewhat by saying it might be in 1989, they are claiming it will very likely be in 1982. HWA, however, is apparently having second thoughts about Petra being the place of safety. We'll try to have more on this next time. Our limited funds won't allow this newsletter to get any longer.

Our warmest thanks to all of you who are helping to make Ambassador Report possible.

Sincerely,

AMBASSADOR REPORT

December 31, 1981

"DO YOU WANT TO LOOK LIKE A WHORE?"

Well, he's at it again. Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the apostle of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and president of Ambassador College, has announced that he is again changing his church's doctrine on makeup. Yes, the WCG's doctrine on makeup has been reversed back to what it was a decade ago. (Then HWA taught that a woman who wore makeup looked "like a painted artificial prostitute" to God - Truth About Makeup, p. 43.) The wearing of makeup is once again a sin. Not surprisingly, after changing the doctrine, HWA confided to one associate that, while he couldn't prove everything in black and white, he had the mind of God and the makeup change was in the best interests of the church.

Page one of the Nov. 16, 1981, issue of The Worldwide News carried this headline: "How subtly Satan used MAKEUP to start the Church off the track." In that article HWA claims that the church has been led astray by Satan influencing the women of his church. Writes HWA:

"...But how did the people of the living God get off the track? How did the whole world first get off the track?

"Was mother Eve, the very first woman - a direct creation of God - insincerely evil? Did she have evil motives and intentions?

"No, Eve was DECEIVED!" (Emphasis his.)

But, according to HWA, the women in the WCG were not the only ones deceived. Certain "intellectuals" had also been led astray. Among those castigated by HWA for being "intellectual" were Wayne Cole and, unfathomably, Garner Ted Armstrong (don't laugh!) Writes HWA:

"In my absence [late 1974] my brief statement appeared with my signature under it.

What I never knew until now was that, after my signature, Wayne Cole, then director of Pastoral Administration, added a few pages giving the new liberal watered-down reasoning, changing the truth of God.

"Satan masterminded this in such a manner that it all appeared under my signature, as if I fully approved all that followed my signature - when in fact I never saw it until the day before yesterday. It was subtly handled and kept from me.

"I did not, and never would have approved of what Mr. Cole, without my knowledge, published under my signature."

Not surprisingly, Wayne Cole has adamantly denied these allegations. We think Cole is telling the truth. It is pretty difficult to believe that HWA was ignorant of the church's doctrinal change on makeup back in the '70s. After all, his own wife, Ramona, has regularly worn makeup since her marriage to HWA in 1977. Didn't he ever notice? Dick Lloyd, a reporter for the Pasadena Star-News, noticed. In an early 1979 article he even commented about her painted toes when reporting how, on a visit to Tucson, she had greeted him, none to cordially at HWA's door. It has even been reported by a ministerial source that one former HWA aide - a male-also occasionally enjoyed wearing red nail polish. It stretches our imagination to the limit to believe that in 1974 HWA was incapable of comprehending what he was reading when he approved the new makeup doctrine - especially since he claims God's constant guidance. Of course, if God deserts him off and on and allows Satan to set church doctrine on occasion - as HWA seems to be asking us to believe - then how do we know whether God or Satan is behind this latest doctrinal change?

The conclusion of HWA's lengthy Worldwide News article contains the following statements:

"My mother and grandmothers did not wear makeup - nor did your greatgrandmothers of the same era. How did it get into our mid-and-latter-20th century society? FROM PROSTITUTES!

"They argue it was done anciently in the world. But that was not God's world. Our women have COPIED THE PROSTITUTES!...

"Satan used human reason and makeup and WOMEN to start the ball of liberalism away from God and toward sin to rolling in the Church beginning October, 1974.... Christ is [now] getting us back on the track!"

While Herbert's decision on makeup is being obeyed by many WCG members, it is not a universally popular one. Some top ministers, including Roderick Meredith, have commented that it is a big mistake. Meredith was so perturbed over the change that he went to see Evangelist Tkach, urging that he and the Council of Elders confront HWA over the matter. Realizing the folly of questioning HWA, Tkach replied that he would not be party to such a suicidal maneuver. Rebuking Meredith he said bluntly, "Haven't you learned anything from your exile to Hawaii, Rod?" (Rod was given a six-month "leave of absence" in Hawaii in late 1979 for thinking independently.)

Evangelist Raymond McNair was also unhappy over the ruling, as was his wife, who reportedly wears rather heavy makeup. In fact, we hear that none of the present evangelists are thrilled with the new makeup doctrine. One high-ranking evangelist's wife refused to attend the Rose Parade Queen's breakfast rather than be seen at a public function without her makeup on.

One pastor's wife defiantly wore makeup to Sabbath services the week after HWA's new edict became "God's law" once again. She was immediately reported, and her husband was called on the carpet. The following week she appeared in church without a trace of makeup, but she was seen wearing it downtown during the week. And her's is not an isolated case. We hear a number of ministers' wives and many members view the makeup doctrine as a ruling made by a senile old fuddy-duddy, and they still wear it everywhere but to church and church functions. In fact, ministers are already beginning to interpret away HWA's makeup ruling by saying, "HWA meant to wear it a little lighter," or "he means don't wear it to church."

Some have speculated that HWA knows Ramona will not obey his makeup, edict and that the makeup change was only instituted to create a reason to divorce Ramona, who is still living in Tucson, we hear.

While there are undoubtedly a few other WCG clergy who enthusiastically support the new ruling, its chief supporter has been Bob Fahey, until recently HWA's executive assistant. His unwavering loyalty to HWA did not go unnoticed by the apostle. On Oct. 24, he was ordained a evangelist, and HWA reportedly said that upon his death no one could possibly be as qualified to properly lead the church as Bob Fahey . The statement did not thrill Rod Meredith's supporters. Since then, however, Fahey has fallen from grace. In a power struggle, he was removed from the executive assistant position and will now be merely assisting minister Frank McCrady in the New York area. He has also been demoted to "preaching elder" rank. (Oh how the mighty art fallen!)

While the question of makeup may be considered inconsequential to most normal people, it is no small matter to HWA. In his Nov. 16, 1981, article he stated:

"But by this maneuver of Satan, the people of God's church started off the track....
For watering down of God's truth on healing, the Sabbath, many more vital doctrines followed in its wake."

Ironically, this is exactly the kind of thing that was claimed by men such as Raymond Cole and Paul Royer when they left Armstrong's church in the mid-'70s to form their own churches. Now that HWA has echoed their views - namely, that the WCG's (so-called) God-given truths have been watered down by the "liberals" - will he invite them back into the fold? Not likely.

Said one long-time Armstrong observer, "For the last few months the matter of Herbert's incest sins were becoming a major topic of discussion in church circles. By changing the makeup doctrine, Herbert has made the church feel very guilty, thus getting their minds off his own very sinful past. Politically speaking, the doctrinal change was a brilliant move."

To many observers the makeup change suggests that the WCG will be in for more doctrinal changes in the near future. Perhaps HWA will change his Pentecost and divorce doctrines back to his pre-1974 teachings too, making the liberals the scapegoat again. It will be interesting to see just how far back in time HWA will lead his followers.

GETTING THE BEST IN MEDICAL HELP

In our last newsletter we pointed out how HWA has lately been warning his followers against relying on physicians in times of illness. You'll recall we quoted the Oct.-Nov. issue of the Good News in which HWA wrote how going to doctors was analogous to "going to Baal-zebub, the god of Ekron." Shortly after our newsletter was mailed, one of our readers sent us a clipping from the September 1981 issue of The Saturday Evening Post. In that magazine's "Medical Mailbox" column (p. 123) there appeared a photograph of HWA wearing a hospital robe and talking to actor Hugh O'Brien and Dr. Kenneth Cooper. The photo was taken at Dr. Cooper's Aerobics Center medical clinic, in Dallas where HWA and O'Brien were undergoing testing. (Dr. Cooper is the physician who developed the aerobics system of physical fitness. He is also the medical consultant to, and frequent guest on, the "700 Club" religious TV program.)

Armstrong officials report that HWA is continuing to take drugs regularly. He depends on drugs to put him to sleep and drugs to wake him up. He has confided to several that he feels a little guilty consuming all these drugs in view of his teachings on divine healing, but he justifies it by saying some unnamed "they" make him take the drugs. Interestingly, one of his nurses (a church member) was replaced for trying to keep certain drugs from him. Insiders claim she was substituting sugar pills or placebos for aspirin and other pills he was constantly gulping. But HWA insisted on getting the "real thing."

Besides consulting with Dr. Cooper, other medical experts HWA has been seeing recently include a leading Pasadena podiatrist. When it comes to his personal medical problems, HWA gets the very best advice possible. It's good to see that at least one individual in the WCG has the good sense not to take too seriously HWA's proscription against seeking medical advice. But it is sad to see him reject the sound advice of those professionals, especially when their advice is in line with Biblical injunctions for moderation.

HIDE THOSE BOOKS!

The real direction the WCG is now taking is appallingly evident in a memo recently sent to "All Ambassador College Faculty Members" by Raymond F. McNair. Evangelist McNair, now apparently the college's official book censor and grand inquisitor wrote:

"Recently, Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong directed that certain books which had previously been stocked by the Paper Egret [the Ambassador College bookstore] be removed and no longer sold at the college bookstore.

"Pursuant to Mr. Armstrong's directive, Messrs. LaRavia, Tkach and I checked over the books at the Paper Egret to remove any books which we felt should no longer be sold in accordance with Mr. Armstrong's instructions. Accordingly, we are having those books related to psychology, including all self-help books, removed. And we are also removing all books which are heavily tainted with this world's theology. Also, those books which have to do with marriage and the family, husband-and-wife-relations books, childrearing books, etc. will no longer be on the book shelves at the Paper Egret.

"The college bookstore will, however, continue to sell several different translations of the Bible, concordances, dictionaries, history books, etc. And the Paper Egret will, of course, continue to sell various supplies - notebooks, pens, pencils, paper, etc.

"If any faculty member feels he or she needs to recommend a particular book for reading by the students (a book not carried by the Paper Egret) then he or she should first request that such a book be made available at the college bookstore. But how should you go about requesting that the Paper Egret stock such a book?

"Just type up and send to my office a written request, stating 1) the name of the books, 2) describe what the book is all about - i.e. what it contains that makes it desirable, 3) and mention how many such books you would like the Paper Egret to make available to the students. Such requests should be checked through my office before being passed on to the Paper Egret for procurement. They will not be displayed on the shelves in the college bookstore, but will only be made available to students upon request.

"If you have questions regarding this matter, please contact me and I shall be happy to further clarify."

THE CULT OF ARMSTRONG?

Is the 'Worldwide Church of God a cult? That is a question we hear quite often. And frankly, it's one we don't have too much trouble answering. First of all, what is a "cult"? For many years, most dictionaries generally defined "cult" as "an organized system of religion." In actual use, however, this term had a somewhat negative connotation. For instance, in history books we would often read of the "cult of Apollo" or the "cult of Diana." Rarely would the word "cult" ever be used when referring to Christianity in general or its denominations.

During the last ten years, and especially since the Jonestown tragedy, the use of the word "cult" has become more frequent. At the same time, the term has become both more pejorative and more clearly defined in its modern usage.

As we pointed out in our very first publication, Ambassador Review (June 1976, p. 36), a "cult" - as the word is now often used - has at least four major characteristics:

1. It encourages isolation - both intellectual and social.
2. It encourages non-thinking.
3. It encourages absolute obedience to a leader who either claims to be God or a representative of God.

4. it encourages excessive giving of, not only money and possessions, but also time, energy and other human resources.

With the above four-point definition, readers will perhaps see why we view the WCG as a "cult." But the WCG is not alone in possessing these characteristics. In fact, the number of religious organizations having these characteristics is clearly on the increase. And the havoc being wrecked in the lives of millions is being documented increasingly by psychologists, psychiatrists, sociologists and other professionals now very concerned about the problem.

Two such professionals are Flo Conway and Jim Siegelman, researchers specializing in the study of mind control and the cults. You may recall that they are the authors of the cult expose book Snapping. Since the publication of that book, their research has continued. Some of the results of that research have now appeared in a remarkable article in the January 1982 issue of Science Digest magazine.

Their article is entitled "Information. Disease: Have Cults Created a New Mental Illness?" This article is highly recommended for anyone who has left the WCG and suffers from any type of emotional problem. (Check your library for a copy. If it doesn't have that publication, you may try writing to Science Digest, 224 W. 57th St., New York, NY 10019.)

Conway and Siegelman surveyed 400 former cult members from 48 different cults. They "found that nearly one in five experienced some lasting health problem and two-thirds experienced long-term emotional difficulties." Those mental and emotional effects include "floating" in and out of altered states, nightmares, amnesia, hallucinations, delusions, violent outbursts and suicidal tendencies. In some cases, former cult members even feared they had lost the ability to think!

The authors make a number of remarkable observations. For instance:

"...our research showed what appeared to be a direct relationship between the number of hours spent per week in cult ritual and indoctrination and the number of long-term effects. In addition, we found a similar correlation between hours per week spent in ritual and indoctrination and the reported length of rehabilitation time. Put simply: our findings appear to confirm that the psychological trauma cults inflict upon their members is directly related to the amount of time spent in indoctrination and mind-control rituals" (p. 90).

"For most people, the term cult conjures up images of arcane, secretive societies whose members hold bizarre beliefs and swear allegiance to a living guru or self-proclaimed messiah. We found something like this to be the case in most of the major cults. But we were surprised to find that the majority of cult groups, including many we had never heard of before, were fundamentalist Christian sects apparently employing sophisticated mind-control techniques. Thirty of the 48 cults we surveyed emerged out of this traditional branch of Christianity.... They also rated higher than all cults except Scientology in combined long-term effects and average rehabilitation time (19 months)" (p. 92).

While their article does not mention the WCG by name, Conway and Siegelman, in a recent visit with Report publishers Len and Margaret Zola, agreed that the WCG does indeed have most, if not all, the earmarks of being a "cult."

A RECOMMENDED SERIES OF ARTICLES

During the last few years, Ambassador Report has recommended a number of books and articles on the subject of Armstrongism and cults in general. We have done so because we believe they can be of real help to not only those in the WCG, but those who have left and desire a better understanding of cult phenomena and perhaps themselves. One reader recently sent us photocopies of a seven-part series of articles entitled "Cults and Cultism," which appeared earlier this year in an Oregon newspaper. The series was written by Dan'l C. Markham, a former pastor and newspaper editor who is currently a counselor for Spiritual Counterfeits Project in Berkeley, California, a Christian ministry dedicated to aiding those affected by cults.

We wish to bring this series of articles to your attention because, quite frankly, it is one of the very finest that we have ever seen on the subject. There are a number of reasons for this assessment. Markham is, first of all, not simply a well-read and experienced expert on the subject, but one who has the courage to speak out bluntly on the truly sinister nature of cults. Yet he shows a great deal of compassion for those victimized by cults. He writes:

"We must never forget that while a cult may appear to be an evil, elitist, separatist, intolerant and abusive entity, that very entity is made of real people such as ourselves who have genuine needs and sincere reasons for belonging. They often have high ideals and admirable goals. Such people must be approached and treated with wisdom and truth, but also with sensitivity, compassion and understanding.

"Our goal as Christians, parents, ministers, educators, professional people, friends and relatives, should not only be to expose cults, but to help eliminate the root causes.

"You see, we can repeat one of man's greatest failures by just pointing the finger and saying 'that's bad,' never thinking we (each of us) might personally be responsible in some way. You may be surprised to find in the following dissertations that our own philosophies, religious beliefs and attitudes or lack of them may contribute to the environment that creates cults."

In part four, Markham writes about the telltale signs of a cult:

"...a cult is any group with an elitist and unique cause and view of itself and others, who to promote their sole cause consciously and unconsciously abuse God-given personal rights and freedoms. Abuse is the key determining factor, which can mean theological, spiritual, physiological and social abuses....

"There are numerous sociological indicators and patterns, which identify a group as being potentially cultic. A knowledge of a few of these indicators will assist in uncovering such a group:

"1. Leaders who claim a special, exclusive ministry, revelation or position of authority from God.

"2. A belief that the group is the only true church, or maintains a critical stance regarding established Christianity while consistently praising and exalting its own leaders and ministry.

"3. Use of intimidation by warning that members who leave the group will go to hell or suffer some other calamity.

"4. The requirement that members give substantial portions of their income to the group or leaders.

"5. Emphasis on loyalty to the church resulting in almost total absorption of one's life into its activities.

"6. The ministries of the group and individual members are inseparable from the ministry of the leaders.

"7. Control by the leadership of the private lives of group members.

"8. The discouraging of dissent and any questioning of the leader's teachings or directives. Criticism, even if constructive, is redefined as rebellion. Emphasis on authority, obedience and submission is vigilantly maintained.

"9. Demonstrations of loyalty to the leader and to the group are expected.

"10. Attempts to leave the group or reveal embarrassing facts about the group are met with threats. Refugees of the group are faced with confrontations by cult adherents who encourage or coerce them back into the group's control."

Does any of this sound familiar? If you've been in the WCG, it will. But remarkably, Markham did not write this with the WCG specifically in mind. The fact is, most cults are very similar in the psychologically manipulative techniques their leaders employ.

In Part V the author discusses the abuses inflicted on the cult member:

"The effects of cults on the individual can be devastating - psychologically, socially, and even physically. In briefly reviewing some of the commonly agreed upon cultic indicators (abuses), perhaps we can begin to grasp at least in a basic way the wounds inflicted on the individual by a cult:

"1. Loss of individuality - a groupiness mentality.

"2. Abuse of intimacy: relationships with friends, relatives, between parents and children, and even spouses, are broken or seriously hindered.

"3. Abuse of money: heavy and even threatening demands with peer group pressure drain off large portions of one's income, causing financial neglect of self and family.

"4. Isolating people with a 'we versus them' mentality. Often relatives, the world, established Christianity, governments, secular education and the press become evil enemies.

"5. Abuse of time and energy: the cult soon controls and uses a majority or nearly all of one's time and energy, resulting in a constant state of exhaustion.

"6. Breaking of the will so adherents unquestionably submit to the demands and control of the group's leadership.

"This repugnant list of destructive abuses could go on and on. The results, i.e., personality changes, loss of identity, paranoia, and social disorientation, are too numerous for a complete list."

While many WCG members would undoubtedly assert that the above does not pertain to their church, literally thousands of letters received by Ambassador Report in the last five years indicate that these are exactly the kinds of fruit the WCG has produced in the lives of many thousands of members. But these effects are not always perceived immediately. In fact, some ex-members report that it was only four, five, or more years after leaving Worldwide that they came to fully appreciate how devastating the church had been to their lives.

We regret that we are not able to reprint the entirety of Dan'l Markham's "Cults and Cultisms" series because it is absolutely filled with remarkable insights into the cult phenomenon. The seven-part series is a bit lengthy for our small newsletter, and our finances don't allow us to extend this issue to that degree. We have, however contacted author Markham, and he has agreed to send photocopies of the series to those requesting it. His purpose is not to make a profit in this (nor do we get a "cut" on this or any other literature we recommend), but to cover his copying, postage, and handling expenses, he asks that requests be accompanied by $2.50 for each copy desired. His address is: Dan'l C. Markham, P.O. Box 339, Ocean Park, Washington 98640. If you are looking for greater understanding about the nature of cults, why people join them, or their effects, then you will find this series of articles invaluable. We cannot recommend it too highly.

HOW TO HELP WCG FRIENDS AND RELATIVES

We regularly receive letters from concerned readers asking for advice on how to get a friend or loved one out of the WCG. Unfortunately, we are rarely able to provide fool-proof answers for this type of situation.

First of all, we have learned from experience that simply exposing a member to the facts will not necessarily help. For instance, with each Ambassador Report mailing we try to send out as many issues as financially possible to current WCG ministers and members whose addresses are given to us by friends. In response, we always receive a few letters of thanks for the free issues and a few letters asking for more information. Over the years, quite a few have been greatly helped this way. But sadly, the majority in this category never respond. Or if they do, it is often by mailing back ripped up issues along with angry letters denouncing our "Satanic" lies. (They "know" these are lies because their minister has told them so.) Many readers have experienced similar responses when confronting WCG member-friends, or relatives with a Report, a copy of the Tuit book, or other literature.

Another reason why we are usually unable to help "get someone out" is that we really do believe people have a right to believe what they want. You can show a WCG member a copy of the Report or a copy of the Robinson book or some other Armstrong expose, but if they choose not to consider the information, that is their privilege. The situation will not be improved by being condemning, unfriendly, or obnoxious. (And let's face it, most of the people in the WCG are very fine, sincere people.)

We recently received a letter from former WCG member Christine Lieber of Geneva, Switzerland. It contains some excellent advice for anyone with friends or relatives in the Armstrong church. Here are her suggestions on the subject:

"My husband Martin came out of the WCG months before I did, so I've been on both sides of the issue. From my experience IN when he was OUT, I can say:

"1. You cannot force anyone to see something they don't want to see. If they don't respond after your first burst of information on the sins, the wrong doctrines, and swill, then the more you pound the tighter they cling to the church. For four months Martin pounded me with information about Pentecost, tithing, and GTA's sins (he didn't know of Herbert's at the time). I told him he could blow my brains out before I would be disloyal to the church. So don't try to force them. In one sense it is cruel. For the poor brainwashed zombie that you are trying to help is not in control of his mind, and he thinks he is doing God a service by worshipping Herbert and obeying the church. Leave them alone until they are ready.

"2. Relax and be nice to them. They will come around when the time is right. You cannot force a mind. My attitude changed completely once Martin began to be kind and speak to me again. As long as he was angry, however justified, I had my 'proof' he was in a bad spirit and that he had a bad attitude. He certainly could not be telling me the truth. Don't give Armstrong's words fuel by your actions.

"3. It is difficult if not impossible to get WCG members to read material from those the church labels as 'Satanic.' Challenge the person to take a subject, go through the Bible, and write out every verse. Taking them in context and taking all of them, they can easily see the truth on almost any subject for themselves, which is an exciting experience. For some reason I had a tiny question on whether the church could be wrong on the [meaning of the] gospel. I took the word and wrote out all the scriptures in the Bible. When I finished this task, I was out of the concentration camp. I never went back to a service. But it is essential that it is done alone with the Bible, not the PT, 40 booklets, or 20 sermon notes. It is so easy to understand the Bible, if you go to it alone. In fact, when you do this you realize what an idiot you had to make yourself to even believe what Herbert said about the Bible."

STANLEY WHO?

As we all know, in the communist world history is rewritten every few years. As regimes pass from the scene, statues of displaced leaders (Stalin is a good example) are removed from public view, squares and buildings bearing their names are renamed, and references to their accomplishments are deleted from textbooks. In the free world - where even disgraced leaders such as Richard Nixon still command frequent media attention - such make-believe interpretations of historical fact are viewed with more than a little ridicule. That is why we find it so amusing that the WCG has adopted an approach identical to that of the communist world - at least as regards recent church history and Stanley Rader.

The WCG won a minor legal victory in mid-December when the Second District Court of Appeals of California denied attorney Hillel Chodos (remember him?) the $100,000 he was demanding from the WCG corporation as legal fees for suing its leaders. The decision was not surprising considering Chodos never really won his case against the WCG.

What was surprising, however (but then again, maybe not), was the way the WCG reported this victory. On page 4 of the Dec. 14 Worldwide News, there appeared a short article by evangelist Ellis LaRavia, the WCG's press secretary, reporting the church's legal victory. On the same page there also appeared another article reporting the victory. That article was by Ralph Helge. He wrote: "As counsel for the Worldwide Church Of God, we are extremely pleased to advise you of a recent decision that pertains to the case. . . ." Then Helge, in commenting on the church's more than two-year legal battle with the state, went on to thank and praise (in this order) 1. Herbert W. Armstrong, 2. God, and 3. "the principal associate counsel" Allan Browne of Ervin, Cohen & Jessup; Ellis Horvitz of Horvitz & Greines; and Laurence Tribe, professor of law, Harvard University. Helge made no mention whatever of his former law partner and mentor Stanley Rader. Neither did LaRavia in his article. Neither did any church spokesman in comments to the press. Yet a mere 10 months ago Herbert Armstrong praised Stanley as the "mastermind" behind the WCG's victory over the California attorney general. Apparently, in the minds of Helge, LaRavia and certain other top WCG leaders, Stanley Rader has simply ceased to exist.

THE MENGE MYSTERY

Penthouse magazine is not the kind of magazine to which we would normally refer readers, but an Ambassador Report subscriber recently brought to our attention a Penthouse article which we found extremely revealing. The thoroughly researched, lengthy article appeared in the November 1981 issue of that publication (p. 63) and was written by L. J. Davis and Ernest Volkman. While the article was ostensibly about religion superstar Jerry Falwell, it really dealt more thoroughly with the affairs of F. William Menge.

Menge was described by Penthouse as a "confidence man and convicted tax evader, sometime associate of known drug smugglers. A former Falwell ministry board member and adviser." But Falwell was not Menge's only preacher contact. Among his other religious contacts were evangelist James Robison, Pat Robertson of the "700 Club," and TV evangelist Kenneth Copeland. Other contacts included Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and top officials in Israel. But what we find most intriguing about Menge is his near acquisition of Ambassador College, Big Sandy, Texas. Here is what Penthouse wrote (p. 186) about that episode:

"Menge and [Menge associate, TV stuntman Jerry] Spicer - who had formed his own

Lynchburg company, Exodus Tours - traveled to Israel. Just what happened there is a little confusing. According to an account provided for Penthouse by Spicer, Menge made contact with two Israeli gangsters who had connections with the Miami mob, but Spicer does not say what the nature of the contact was, only that he 'exposed' it.

"As usual, Menge was thinking big. He opened negotiations with El Al Airlines to move thousands of Christian tourists. He negotiated with others to purchase planes, perhaps even a small airline. It had the earmarks of turning into Menge's biggest scam yet, but there are indications that it was much worse and much stranger than that. 'It all comes around now to what all these airplanes were really going to be used for,' Spicer told Penthouse. Spicer is very cautious when speaking on the subject, but he will add one thing more. 'With the airstrip,' he says, 'Christian City would be a multibillion-dollar deal.'

"Spicer is talking about Ambassador College in Big Sandy, Tex., a campus and 5,200-foot airstrip that Menge was negotiating to purchase from the Worldwide Church of God for $10.6 million. It was Menge's plan to build a Christian city there - first, it was rumored, for Jerry Falwell, then for James Robison, and finally for the fundamentalist Brother Lester Roloff, who gave Menge $500,000 that he never saw again. (On the other hand, Roloff is reported to have raised $6 million during his unsuccessful campaign to buy the campus. If so, he is hardly in a position to kick.)

"In the end, with his empire collapsing, Menge couldn't swing the deal, and it fell through, but it is not without its features of interest. Menge first stirred serious law enforcement interest when vans were used to transport marijuana and his known associates turned out to be more than a little crooked. Menge made contact with criminals in Israel, and he allegedly had other contacts in Colombia, prime source of much of the world's cannabis. He was trying to buy some airplanes, and Spicer hints that they were not for the tour business. (Recently published reports have indicated that the mob is moving a portion of its marijuana and brown Mexican heroin operations from Florida to Texas. Big Sandy is midway between Dallas, a lucrative market, and Baton Rouge, a big mob town in a big mob state. In the back of Menge's mind was undoubtedly some use of the 5,200-foot airstrip at Ambassador College. A Christian City would be a splendid, perhaps impenetrable, cover for a major smuggling venture. Although nothing can be stated with any certainty, Spicer is entirely correct when he says that it could be a multi-billion-dollar deal.)"

As bizarre as it may at first sound, Penthouse's speculation on Menge's plans for the Big Sandy campus are well-founded. Recent newspaper articles have also alleged that Tyler, Texas (right near Big Sandy), has within the last few years become a major drug smuggling center. Some experts say that because of Tyler's proximity to the bayous of Louisiana, Tyler could soon become almost as important in drug smuggling operations as Miami and Tucson are at the present time.

The Penthouse story raises a number of interesting questions that could be put to Menge. Unfortunately, Menge can no longer answer those questions, for on Sept. 6, 1980, he was killed in a macabre accident. According to the Penthouse article:

"At about 1:30 p.m. that day, Menge decided to mow a field of grass adjacent to his bankrupt estate in Forest, Va., a suburb of Lynchburg. The reason, it is said, was that he planned to take his children to a picnic there, although people in Lynchburg remember that his children did not appear to have been home. Further, it was snake-and-chigger season in Virginia, and Menge possessed a perfectly adequate swimming pool and picnic area much closer to his house.

"His blood was later found to contain an alcoholic content of .02 percent, not unusual in itself except that Menge was not a drinking man and was not in the habit of keeping alcohol around the house.

"The instrument he chose for the task was a rotary mower called a bush hog. A wicked piece of machinery, it is towed along behind the tractor and is powered by its drive shaft. As Menge drove around the field, according to the official report, one or more of the wheels of the tractor and a blade of the bush hog are supposed to have struck some old utility poles concealed in the grass, causing Menge to bounce into the air. As he did so, the spring that supported the tractor seat is supposed to have fallen out. Menge is then supposed to have fallen back onto the springless seat and tumbled over backward without getting his feet tangled in the pedals or steering wheel, which he is also supposed to have stopped holding. Menge is then supposed to have fallen to the earth, where the bush hog ran over him, severing his left hand and right forearm, shattering and virtually severing his right leg, and fracturing his skull.

"People fall under bush hogs with depressing frequency - like many farm implements, they are not things to fool around with - but Menge's death is an unquiet one. When the tractor was found, stalled in the field, it was in high gear. A tractor in high gear will not cut a field very well, and there are many fields a tractor in high gear cannot cut at all.

"This is not to say that Menge was murdered, but there are enough unanswered questions and curious circumstances to render the official version of his death very nearly inoperable. For reasons that have never been explained, two FBI agents briefly investigated the Menge death, although there was no discernible federal jurisdiction. The FBI refuses to discuss why the agents were there."

The unwitnessed accident occurred just days after Menge was quoted as saying that he was going to "tell all" and that people were "going to go to jail." It has not been proven what he meant by those statements.

Nor has it been determined whatever became of all the money he swindled. At his death Menge was supposedly broke, but Penthouse asserts that during the last few years of his life he swindled over $9 million. Included among the many individuals, banks, ministers, and churches he conned is at least one Armstrong follower. According to the June 23, 1981, issue of The Record (of Hackensack, New Jersey): "Buck Hammer, Herbert Armstrong's son-in-law, says he's out $20,000 after investing in an invention Menge was promoting that would recycle garbage into mulch."

One person who Menge was not able to con, however, was Stan Rader. You will recall (Ambassador Report, March 1979, p. 13) that when Menge tried to purchase the Big Sandy campus in 1978-79, he lost his $500,000 deposit when he was unable to come up with the balance on the deal. As the $500,000 was contractually nonrefundable, the WCG (or persons associated with it) made an easy half-million while Menge's associate, Brother Lester Roloff, took the loss.

The Penthouse article ended with this interesting observation:

"Among others, his funeral was attended by Jerry Falwell and Mrs. Falwell. However, Falwell did not deliver a eulogy. That task was reserved for the Reverend James Robison, the same Texas evangelist whom Menge had called before his death. He did not mention what, if anything, Menge had told him."

IS HERBERT ARMSTRONG BEING USED?

Is Herbert Armstrong being used? Is he a tool in the hands of some group of internationally influential kingmakers? Is he unknowingly fulfilling a major role in some grand international conspiracy? Is he in effect being manipulated by some group of communists, Zionists, international bankers, the Trilateral Commission, the Mafia, the Catholic church, the Masons, and/or the Illuminati?

To the sophisticated reader, such questions may seem a bit over dramatic, perhaps lending an air of cosmic importance to the Armstrong church that it does not deserve. Yet, those are exactly the kinds of questions being asked increasingly by both WCG members and long-time WCG observers. Many of those asking such questions have been particularly suspicious of Stanley Rader, considering him to be some sort of an agent that infiltrated the WCG.

Some have even drawn a comparison between Stanley and Dr. Alberto Rivera of "The Crusaders." For those unfamiliar with them, "The Crusaders" are a comicbook series published by Christian fundamentalist J. T. Chick (P. O. Box 662, Chino, CA 91710). The most controversial of the series are "Alberto" and "Double Cross," two issues which claim to be "based on a true story." The hero of these two issues is Alberto Rivera, a Spaniard now in the U.S., who claim to have been a member of the Jesuit order of the Catholic church before he "surrendered his life to Jesus Christ." He claims that the Jesuits trained and sent him to Latin America where he infiltrated numerous Christian groups known for their anti-Catholic teachings. He claims he was but one of many such infiltrators the Jesuits have used and still use to bring about the moral decay and theological disintegration of numerous Christian churches around the world.

The Chick comics make colorful reading and many of the facts presented are accurate. However, much of the most controversial elements of the stories are not easily verifiable, and recent articles in the Los Angeles Times (Jan. 26, 1981; Oct. 27, 1981) have raised some serious questions about the reliability of the information found in the Chick series. Numerous Christian bookstores have refused to carry them, and the Canadian government has attempted to stifle their distribution in Canada. Nevertheless, some WCG and former WCG members continue to see amazing parallels between Stan Rader and the Alberto of preconversion days. Some insist that Stan Rader has been used to lead an unsuspecting HWA into spiritual Egypt.

In all honesty, we at the Report - although respecting many of those putting forth these ideas - are not convinced of their theory for two reasons: (1) We don't believe HWA has been an innocent duped into anything and (2) We have seen absolutely no hard evidence of Stanley being a part of any international conspiracy activities whatsoever. We don't think Rader has been anything other than a very sharp CPA/lawyer earning a good salary for performing exactly the services his client asked for.

But that does not mean that we are convinced HWA is not being used by others. He very well may be. And he may not even realize it. No matter. There is an unconscious side to all of us. Very few, if any of us, are fully aware of all of our own motivations at any one time. HWA is no exception.

We were recently sent a cassette tape of a sermon by Bryce Clark of The Church Of God, The Eternal (P.O. Box 775, Eugene, OR 97401). Entitled "Babylon," this sermon, more than any other source - printed or taped - seems to sum up the suspicions and fears of those who believe HWA has been led into fulfilling a very sinister function in world affairs.

While we are not members of Clark's denomination and do not necessarily agree with all his conclusions, we do feel he has made a number of very cogent observations. For instance, he very correctly points out that while HWA does canvass the earth talking about a coming world government, by failing to mention Jesus Christ and omitting to specify what he means in any detail, he really does become guilty of preaching "another gospel." For when he merely uses such ambiguous phrases as "a strong hand from someplace," he really conveys different things to different people. To a communist such a phrase could easily mean a world revolt by the proletariat. To an international financier it may mean the world's top bankers working together toward the goal of a one-world currency system. To certain Zionists, it may imply the domination of Palestine by the armies of the state of Israel - believed by some to be the fulfillment of the prophesied Messiah (viewed merely as metaphor). To a religious Iranian, such a phrase would probably be interpreted as the advancement of the reign of the Ayatollah Khomeini. One can also see how such a phrase as "the principle of give and get" could just as easily have any number of interpretations. For instance, to a Communist it could possibly mean the obliteration of all property rights.

Whatever it is world leaders believe HWA is saying, it should be apparent to all that most - whether communist, Zionist, Moslem, Protestant, or Catholic - like what he is saying.

The Dec. 14 issue of the Worldwide News reported:

"During a 16-day trip to Europe and the Middle East, Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong met with such dignitaries as Israeli President Yitzhak Navon, Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, Jihan Sadat (widow of slain Egyptian President Anwar Sadat), Abdel Kader Hatem, director of the National Councils in Egypt, King Leopold III, former king of Belgium, and Franz Josef Strauss, head of West Germany's Christian Democratic Union."

In the photos accompanying the article there was no sight of former traveling companion Stan Rader. He was not on the trip. (One source told us that Osamu Gotoh is once again HWA's advance man for these junkets.) During HWA's talk with Franz Josef Strauss, the German politician mentioned a recent meeting with Soviet Premier Brezhnev. HWA asked Strauss what he thought of a meeting between Brezhnev and himself. Strauss did not feel such a meeting would be advisable.

Finally, in his Nov. 27 letter to Plain Truth subscribers we found this little tidbit:

"A week ago yesterday, Thursday, Nov. 19, I had a personal meeting with President Yitzhak Navon of Israel in Jerusalem, and the night before I was guest of honor at a banquet hosted by Mayor Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem. Present also were former Mayor John Lindsay of New York City, and Jacob Rothschild of London."

One can only ask: What is it that HWA is giving in return for such honors?

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Even though his lawsuit with Worldwide is now over, we haven't heard the last from author David Robinson. The Tulsa World (Oct. 23, 1981) reported that he is now writing a novel based on his experiences in the Worldwide Church of God. Robinson told us that the novel form will allow him to indulge in a bit of speculation on HWA and his associates - something which would have been inappropriate in his nonfiction Tangled Web book.

John Portune, former WCG pastor, college instructor, and writer, is now part owner of an electronics manufacturing business in Pasadena. His firm manufactures microcomputer-based industrial controls.

Enrique Ruiz, former head of the Mexican office of the WCG, has remarried and is residing in Pasadena. His new wife was known as Draga during her previous career as a nightclub entertainer in Mexico. We hear Enrique is now working in the jewelry business.

NEW GROUPS AND GROUPS NEW TO US

Spiritual Counterfeits Project
P.O. Box 2418
Berkeley, CA 94702

This is an evangelical Christian organization specializing in helping those involved with cults. They offer a free introductory packet of information and a catalog listing studies they have published on various cult groups.

*****

Truth Fellowship, Inc.
P.O. Box 138
Clifton Park, NY 12065

Through this organization, ex-WCG and ex-CGI minister David Bierer offers a monthly newsletter and cassette tapes on biblical subjects.

*****

America's Promise Radio
Lord's Covenant Church, Inc.
P.O. Box 5334
Phoenix, AZ 85010

This organization distributes books, pamphlets, and a 40-minute movie propounding the Anglo-Israel theory.

*****

Truth Line, TSL Publishing House
P.O. Box 18122, Cleveland Hts., OH 44118

This organization wrote us:

"Because of the arrogant and racist atmosphere present in the WCG, a few members decided to find out the source of these terrible attitudes increasing in 'God's Church.' They were led to do research on Anglo or British-Israelism and their findings were shocking.

"After discovering the real origins and many errors of British-Israelism they published their findings in an 18-page newsletter entitled Truth Line. "Because of the distribution of the Truth Line, these people were 'marked' and ridiculed for publicly disagreeing with Herbert W. Armstrong regardless of the truth of the articles.

"You can learn for yourself the startling origins and errors of British-Israelism (the belief that only the white peoples of the United States, Britain, and certain parts of Europe are the 'ten lost tribes of Israel') by ordering your free copy of the Truth Line."

This group is considering the idea of putting out a newsletter as a means of communication between the many small Sabbatarian groups now in existence. They are also considering the possibility of organizing a Feast of Tabernacles in the Pennsylvania area in 1982.

Editor: The Churchman article "Humanism - Antidote for the Cults," referred to above, was written by Brian Knowles, formerly the managing editor of The Plain Truth. We, frankly, found the article very simulating reading and would have liked to have reproduced it in the Report. When contacted, however, Knowles told us that in the two years since he wrote the piece, his views have changed somewhat and today he would write a little differently on the subject. We have therefore agreed not to republish the article even though we did find it most interesting.

IMPORTANT!

While we are enthusiastic about some publications and organizations mentioned in the Report, we do list numerous groups with which we have very little, if any, philosophical agreement. We do so because we believe our readers want to know about more than just our personal views. We're convinced this is a healthy approach. After all, we can all learn from others - even from those with whom we disagree. So if some group is listed in our newsletter which you feel isn't all it should be, please remember: Simply being listed or quoted does not constitute any type of blanket endorsement.

Letters

Please extend my thanks to the many people who sent me names and addresses [of WCG members]. I can't thank some of them directly, as several lists were sent anonymously. It will be a few more weeks before I will complete all mailing of flyers to the several hundred names which I received.

-John Tuit

11 Laurel Court, Freehold, NJ 07728

Thanks again for another report. I think there is a similarity in what we feel when we get the Report as to what alcoholics feel when they go to AA. A bond exists between those who have all gone through the same thing. It would be interesting to see a list of all ministers and elders who have left or were put out. Here in the Kelowna church in the last year or so two ministers are out: Dan Banham and Vern Erickson. In the neighboring church in Penticton a few years ago Des Burke left and is now a minister in Ted's church, and of course we have heard of others in Canada that we know have left. It might be interesting news for people who are still in the church and have no idea that these ministers are out. One member in this area said, "Why are the members not even told what's going on?" Thanks again.

I would like to point out an error in your latest Ambassador Report in an item referring to Frank Brown. Although I was not the source of your information (I wonder who was), I feel sure the blame for this error will be laid at my door. You have apparently written that Frank Brown called up Jack Martin (whose disfellowshipment and marking he had formerly announced) to see about a job. This is not true. He called Jack on the phone - much to Jack's amazement - but made no reference to a job. He did say they might get together the next time he was in that area. None of us know precisely why this call was made. I have suggested to Jack and several others that maybe it was an attempt to lay the groundwork for a future job possibility. That's all that can be said.

My purpose in bringing the call to the attention of some people was to use it as an example of the hypocrisy of a typical evangelist. Somehow the story has gotten to you in an embellished fashion. I hope you will correct it.

Of further interest regarding this incident are two fanciful explanations for this call given me by [WCG minister] Paul Suckling: 1. that Jack requested the call to be made (not true), 2. that it was an attempt to see about some sort of reconciliation to the WCG (not even discussed). In any event, an error has been made and I am sure you would wish to correct it.

Editor: Thank you for setting us straight on this matter.

Regarding a letter in the March 1981 copy of Ambassador Report, there was a statement that Basil Wolverton was once involved with the Riker cult. Not true. I recently spoke to Honor, and she said she checked all of Basil's early correspondence (he kept everything) and there was nothing in his files. Pictures are sometimes used without the artist's approval.

-California

Editor: We have looked into this matter and have verified that Paul Kagan's book New World Utopias does indeed state that Basil Wolverton illustrated some of Riker's literature. The Kagan book also does show one piece of Riker literature containing an illustration undoubtedly done by Basil Wolverton.

Nevertheless, your point is well taken. Considering "Father" Riker's notorious reputation, it is quite possible the illustrations were used without the artist's permission. Thank you for taking the time to point this out.. And please pass on our best regards to Mrs. Wolverton and her family.

One thing I'd like to ask you about is if you have any names and addresses of women whose husbands are members of the WCG (and the wife is not) that you would be allowed to give out. My husband is involved with the group, and I would love to talk with someone else in my position and find out how they cope with all there strange beliefs in their home. There's no one here in Birmingham (or at least I don't know of an one). Some of your printed letters indicated other women in my situation. As they say, "Misery loves company."

-Alabama

Editor: Unless a subscriber gives us permission to pass on his or her name and address, it is our policy not to give out that information. However, if a reader would like to have their name and address passed on to someone, such as the above individual, we would be happy to forward that information.

While having a look at the most recent issue of Ambassador Report I've received so far I was very pleased to see that a reader has written in, mentioning something about Dr. Robert Sumner's exhaustive book on the Worldwide Church of God entitled, Armstrongism: The Worldwide Church of God Examined in the Searching Light of Scripture. I, for one, would like to go on record as highly recommending that aforementioned book to anyone who is still a WCG member, their friends and relatives, and anyone interested in reading what may very well come to be viewed as the definitive book on Armstrongism, its weird tenets, and the baneful influence it exerts on its members.

Dr. Sumner's book deals with pre-1973 WCG doctrines and practices, and it first appeared in 1974. While there have been quite a few minor (and a few major) changes within the WCG since 1973, the book itself is, basically speaking, amazingly accurate in its description of the history, tenets, and practices of the WCG, and I wouldn't hesitate one moment in recommending it. However, the address your reader gave you is no longer valid. Copies of Sumner's book ($7.95 plus 15 percent for postage and handling) may be gotten through: Sword of the Lord Publishers P.O. Box 1099, Murfreesboro, TN 37130.

Would you believe yet another book exposing Herbert's error? Probably no book will excel Paul's book to the Galatians. But I have just completed Martin Luther's "Commentary on Galatians " and find it well worthwhile for you to list it for your readership. It probably can be purchased in most religious bookstores. Also, I have just received my copy of Armstrong's Church of God by Salem Kirban. Out of print till just recently, it has been updated to Oct. 1981. This 55-page book may be obtained for $4.95 plus postage and shipping ($1.50) by writing to Salem Kirban, Kent Road, Huntingdon Valley, PA 19006. He has also written other books on other cults of interest.

I have a friend who has been mailing me copies of Ambassador Report since I came out of the WCG about three years ago. It has been of much assistance in helping me overcome the trauma which most go through. I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

I left because there were so many holes in their doctrines, which did not match biblical scripture. When I approached a minister with a question, I never got an answer. They always fell back on the "old saw" that HWA is the Apostle, and like the Pope, infallible. Having come out of the Catholic Church back in the '50s, I wasn't buying infallibility.

The frightening part is that I probably would have still been a member if they had not made me a deacon. As a deacon, I started giving sermonettes, and shortly thereafter split sermons. (I think I was being groomed to be a local elder.) The awesome responsibility of giving sermons led me to intense Bible study. It was then that I stopped studying to the foregone conclusions that their Bible lessons and sermons led one to. I began having doubts about tithing, church eras, 19-year time cycles, setting dates, etc. I could not get Nelson Haas minister in Flint, Michigan) to sit down with me and review scripture that seemed to go counter to the organization. He kept feeding me principles such as HWA being God's Apostle. After working myself into stomach ulcers, I finally decided that it was time to get out.

For a long time I prayed about being "in a bad attitude" and all the other garbage that puts one on a guilt trip. Dr. Martin's literature helped, and others who had left shortly after I did were of much assistance. I keep telling myself that I no longer have any ties to the organization, but like many others, for 14 years the church was the most important thing in my life. I made, what I thought, were friends. I miss some of them very much, even though they think they serve God by cutting me off.

I'm finally completely deprogrammed, and am enjoying physical and mental health, and studying with an open mind. It's wonderful! I really don't know why I'm still interested in what's going on in that "snake-pit," but put me on your mailing list.

-Michigan

Oh, how good it is to be able to sit back and laugh at the comic opera of Armstrong and company. Thanks for bringing us such amusing entertainment. I am, of course, being a little tongue-in-cheek about the contents of the latest AR. Amidst all the politics, two-facedness, intrigues, hypocrisy, self-righteousness, unscholarliness, distortions, and narrow-mindedness that are characteristic of the WCG mentality are a whole lot of sincere, but sadly naive, people, many of whom I count as friends, though they must surely feel my wife, my family and I are doomed "possibly for all eternity." The tragedy of the WCG is that so many fine people have permitted themselves to believe that an organization like the WCG reflects "true Christianity." I am constantly struck by the astounding parallels between the attitude of the New Testament Pharisees and the more militant members of the WCG. Isn't it amazing we could read about those people, of ages long ago and never (unless we make that fateful step of questioning "Headquarters") see ourselves?

Anyway, now that Judy and I have gone through our "year of adjustment" I feel ready to let people know what's become of us. if you think your readership would be interested here's where we are now.

Judy and I graduated from AC (England) in 1970, 1969 respectively. (Judy a the sister of WCG minister Roger Foster.) I was a ministerial assistant in Harrisburg, PA, then a minister in Bluefield, W. Va. from 1972-1977. A minister in Champaign, IL from 1978-1980. I finally resigned for theological and professional reasons and moved to Omaha, NE (my hometown). I currently run my own commercial window cleaning and maintenance business. Since leaving the WCG, I've lost 15 pounds and feel great. I also have a hobby that I've turned into a business called Aviation Oils, whereby I do oil paintings of private airplanes. I'm also involved in several solar energy projects and am a member of Nebraska Solar Energy Society. We are not presently affiliated with any church - for obvious reasons.

I'd like to see a list and, if possible, brief resumes similar to the above for any of the rest of the fellows who have quit. In the meantime, keep up the good work. We all really appreciate it.

Editor: During the last three months we have received quite a few letters from subscribers telling us of their experiences in the WCG. Most, if not all, were very interesting accounts that we would have liked to have published in the Letters section. Our apologies to those whose letters we have had to omit for lack of space. We, nevertheless, did enjoy reading them and hope readers will continue to share experiences with us and keep us informed of WCG-related events in their local areas.

LATE NEWS

Just as we are about to take this issue to press, we have learned of a number of interesting developments. Ambassador College is rife with rumors that Ramona Armstrong is about to sue, or has already sued, Herbert Armstrong for divorce. (We would like to get a statement from Ramona on this, but as yet we have been unable to reach her.)

HWA is again experiencing attacks of angina pectoris and is taking nitroglycerin pills, a commonly prescribed medication for that condition. Garner Ted, apparently concerned about his father's health, has once more written to him. But HWA, refusing to correspond directly with his son, has merely responded by a communication to Ted's wife. What was conveyed is not known.

In the meantime, the WCG's council of elders has become more riddled with internal bickering than ever before, as a number of former church employees are threatening to make public new allegations of serious misconduct by members of that board. In fact, we have learned that at least two former HWA associates are now writing books about the church's hierarchy. Those authors are claiming their revelations will shock even the publishers of Ambassador Report. (Not likely.)

We will try to find out what we can and report on these stories in our next issue. Until then, our thanks to all of you who are helping to make Ambassador Report possible.

Sincerely,
The Publishers

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR19 March 31, 1982

NEW ALLEGATIONS HIT ARMSTRONG

More than one year after the California state attorney general discontinued his investigation of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), new evidence has come forth indicating that not only were law enforcement officials then on the right track, but that corruption within the church hierarchy is now greater than ever before.

The allegations are contained in a 14-page letter, dated Dec. 30, 1981, written to the church's board of directors and council of elders by W. Jack Kessler, an ex-auditor for the church. Kessler, who is an Ambassador College graduate, CPA, and lawyer, had his contract to do accounting for the church terminated last summer during a purge of suspected Rader loyalists. He was disfellowshipped on Sept. 9, 1981, for ostensibly - according to Ellis LaRavia - refusing to turn over certain information.

Many of you may have read of the "Kessler letter" in news reports. The Los Angeles Times (March 11, 1982), the Pasadena Star-News (March 12 and 14), and many other news organizations have run articles on the subject because of copies distributed to the press by Ambassador Report and its friends. Even though it means getting "scooped," we have, since our publication's inception in the mid-70s, tried to cooperate extensively with the news media by making all our information and documentation readily available to the press. We think this is one more way we can serve both our readers and those still in the church.

While the coverage by the news media has been excellent, we think you might find it valuable if we excerpt the Kessler letter more extensively. We are not presenting the letter in its entirety, however, because frankly about one-half of it is just plain boring. Almost all of what we are omitting is nothing more than convoluted reasoning and scripturally based justifications for the threat of some unspecified legal action. Nevertheless, much of the letter is of interest. After a four-paragraph introduction Kessler writes:

The human condition is such that it would shock probably only just a few to learn of the moral depravity that is reported commonly among you. Although others, such as Dave Robinson and Floyd Lochner, apparently thought that it might work to their advantage to report Mr. Armstrong's admission (which he's made to several) that he had engaged repeatedly in incestuous intercourse with his daughter during the first 10 years of his ministry, as well as more recent, self-confessed sexual perversity, such attacks have been weathered, and I know that both you and the membership have steered yourselves against potential adverse publicity, if any, that such revelations could bring. After all, Christ did say that they that are whole don't need a physician, and he came to call not the righteous but the sinners to repentance (Matt. 9:12-13). I mention this to you for a couple of reasons. First, because some have tried to use such information in an illegitimate way in the past, and because some of you assume that anyone in possession of such knowledge may try to do so in the future (perhaps because some of you would like to think that you could use it as some kind of leverage even now), I want to draw at the outset a clear distinction between that and the approach of this letter. Second, even though by mentioning the more notorious of the scandals, some could accuse me of using it nonetheless, I feel that its mention and dismissal as an issue precludes anyone from using it in the future or from construing my actions as being overshadowed by some implied threat of its later disclosure. The particular facts are a matter of fairly wide public dissemination in any event, so their mention here should defuse any remaining power some feel that their disclosure could bring.

The issue of morality takes on its true significance when it is not a mere weakness of the flesh, but when, coupled with blatant hypocrisy, it is used for political advantage. At the beginning of this year two people responded to a vicious smear campaign that had been launched by Mr. Kevin Dean. Mr. Dean apparently had forsaken Christ to become a disciple of Segretti and Krogh. Showing tremendous energy, if not ingenuity, he (with the assistance of his brother and fellow minister Aaron) purchased an extensive cache of electronic surveillance equipment in Hong Kong and Tokyo, organized a burglary squad, which included the campus locksmith, and set out to discredit any who stood in the way of his rise to power. If he couldn't dig up any dirt he could always invent it. (Aaron admitted to his being especially anxious to go to work on Mr. Rod Meredith's phone lines.) I suppose that such antics are par for the course in large, centrally managed organizations, but it shocked some of their early targets. For those of you who are not as familiar with the mundane details of these covert operations, you might check with fellow board members Tkach, LaRavia, McNair, or Walker. It would not be a good idea to reread the coverup under Mr. Armstrong's signature in the Pastor General's report (ironically referring to Watergate as if that scandal concerned the actual burglaries rather than the web of falsehoods), unless you wish to be disillusioned by fairly clumsy fabrication.

Mr. Dean's activities are instructive not for their intrinsic evil, but for the reaction their disclosure received. This brings us closer to the heart of why I am writing to you. When Mr. John Kineston and Mr. Joseph Kotora approached Mr. Herbert Armstrong and told him of Mr. Dean's activities, and defended themselves against false accusations that Mr. Dean had made against them to Mr. Armstrong, he reacted in a way that is by now probably all too familiar to most of you. First, he told them he knew that everything that they had said in their defense was entirely true and he knew them to be men of truth. Second, he told them that they would be given the chance to face their accusers and that he would "clean up this stinkpot" as soon as he returned to Pasadena. Third, he saw to it that Messrs. Kineston and Kotora were fired and disfellowshipped before such a confrontation could ever take place. (This result, you see, promotes unity and harmony among the evildoers within the Church and only sacrifices a few innocent lives in the process.) And fourth, Mr. Armstrong made sure that you all saw and heard, once again, how futile it is to be a whistle-blower in this church ....

Mr. Armstrong is somewhat of a tragic figure. He is a man to whom a great calling has been given and through whom marvelous insight has been revealed. He is also a man motivated by strong passions, and is perhaps one of the most naturally selfish men to have walked this earth, ever. That he has been able to control his desires and egocentrism to an appreciable degree shows some measure of his tremendous will, and only God can judge to what extent he has overcome more than the rest of us, as well he may have. He is also an uneducated man, though he has proved more than any that this does not have to be a handicap; indeed, in his case it may be to his advantage to stick close to the source of his inspiration without trying to refine his understanding in the light of disparate thoughts. But there is a liability implicit in this background, and that is ignorance of the workings of the world, coupled with a disdain for the regulatory milieu in which the Church must survive. Christ didn't urge his disciples to needlessly insult Caesar, indeed, it is a distinct disadvantage to be neither wise nor harmless (Cf. Matt. 10:16). It will be easy enough to attract persecution simply by being righteous. It makes no sense to invite it for all the wrong reasons.

As long as Mr. Armstrong and the Church receive competent advice on legal matters, however, the potential exposure can be minimized. But Mr. Armstrong's advisors not only have to be knowledgeable, they must also be candid, forthright, and vigorous in curbing any of his untoward desires that run afoul of the laws of the land. Because of the tremendous power that his office has within the hierarchy, and because of the attitude of unquestioning obedience that is preached to all subordinates, and also because of the imbedded notion discussed above that he is accountable only to God, Mr. Armstrong is capable of causing considerable problems both for himself and for the Church. And he will do this damage without the benefit of competent counsel if everyone apprehends that he may be feeling a little too much like the queen of hearts on the day that they venture forth to advise.

There have been only two individuals of any consequence whom God has called to fulfill the role that has now devolved upon you. Loma Armstrong and Stan Rader were the only persistent, loving, voices of restraint. Sadly, both are now silenced. With no effective governor, it is only a matter of time before grave damage is done.

I feel a particularly acute sense of need to see some discipline reimposed. For the past 10 years, in one way or another, I had been used by the Church to help it develop a system of internal controls so that abuses could not overrun the system. Unfortunately, no system of controls, whether they be financial, administrative, or otherwise, can be any more sound than the people who maintain the system. And every control is capable of being overridden by top management, even more so in the Worldwide Church of God. Having seen each of the key financial personnel wrongly fired or banished in the past 12 months, and replaced by people, who have neither the competence, the wisdom, nor the guts to keep the system intact, there appears little hope for the Church to reform its ways.

Mr. Willis J. Bicket, the former assistant secretary-treasurer, was asked by Mr. Armstrong to violate the system "as a test" on the day after Mr. Rader's replacement had been announced. From an outsider's viewpoint he passed the test; that is, he refused to break the established controls without a direct command from Mr. Armstrong after a chance to confront him in a face-to-face meeting wherein he could explain his actions. But Mr. Armstrong was clearly of the opinion that he had failed. Mr. Bicket was immediately removed from his position and sent to be on the faculty of the Church's junior college in Big Sandy, Texas. He was later threatened (in writing) with immediate termination if he did not sign a false representation letter to Arthur Andersen & Co. to show that he was thereby on Mr. Armstrong's "team." In fairness to Mr. Neff, who signed the threat, I hasten to point out that Mr. Neff later claims not to have known that Mr. Bicket considered the representations to be false, and blames his alleged confusion on the resignation of the auditing firm's manager who was to have responded to Mr. Bicket's reservations some months earlier. Mr. Bicket was terminated shortly thereafter.

The specific financial abuses that have plagued the Church in the past were bred in just such a climate of intimidation. What is to prevent the same scheme that Mr. Ray Wright used to embezzle over a quarter of a million dollars from being used again? Who is left in the organization, other than Mr. Wright (who is now back in the financial affairs office, without having repaid the funds), who knows how he pulled it off and who would recognize it again? Who will prevent the Church from getting involved in another $50,000.00 kickback scheme to a Mexican bank when it sells another jet aircraft, other than the same legal office who so poorly monitored the first sale? Who will tell Mr. Dennis Stauffer this time that a scheme is more than just ill-advised whereby corporate officers are able to purchase monetized silver and gold bullion from the Church at its cost through the use of fraudulent book entries to show that the investments were purchased on behalf of the officer (through the extension of free credit) when prices have risen and on behalf of the Church's own account, or that of its employee benefit fund trust, when prices fall?

Each of you should remember the letter I wrote to the entire board exactly four years ago today. (If you were not a board member at the time of the January 1978 meeting when Mr. Rader read it into the record, and when he handed each member a personal copy, you must have reviewed by now the minutes from that meeting. At least I have to assume that none would ever undertake to accept a nomination to board membership without reviewing what had gone before.) On that occasion I found it my duty to forewarn the Church of material weaknesses in its internal controls. (See Statement on Auditing Standards No. 20, Required Communication of Material Weaknesses in Internal Accounting Control, AICPA.) I had approached Mr. Rader with the problems, the roots of which he had been trying valiantly to dig out for years, and he said that there were two things to be done. He reminded me of my professional duty to inform the board in writing, and he felt that because sufficient corrective action was unlikely to be forthcoming, he must resign from the board. It's all in the minutes of that meeting, including a sort of valedictory address by Mr. Rader warning of the consequences of continued misallocation of economic resources.

When Mr. Rader resigned for the last time, in part because he felt ineffective in (or just plain tired of) urging Mr. Armstrong to behave rationally, he received assurances from Mr. Armstrong that the job of cleaning up the Church would proceed apace. Mr. Armstrong told Mr. Rader that I would be asked to become the new treasurer and that "Jack and Jack" (referring to Mr. Bicket and myself, as well as to a famous carriage horse racing team from Mr. Armstrong's childhood) would be given a free hand to continue the job at hand. Mr. Rader even persuaded me to forego other opportunities so that my services would be available in an amount adequate to the task on a "first-call" basis. My offer to Messrs. Neff, Fahey, and Armstrong to inform them of the bases I was covering, after my services were terminated abruptly, has gone unanswered. The abuses that were in the process of being corrected in the aftermath of the attorney general's lawsuit, therefore, remain unreformed. All of them to my knowledge relate to the inurement of the earnings of the Church to Mr. Armstrong, members of his family, and close personal aides. Before its discovery, the use of Church coffers as a sort of personal piggy bank for instant credit (always interest-free) or outright appropriation had grown to outrageous proportions through constant circumvention of the system by Mr. Armstrong and his family. We hoped to reconcile the problem within the Church, and out of the cold light of the U.S. attorney's office, and then to recover the funds and thereby prevent a scandal. I feel particularly motivated in at least one respect to see this corrected because I prepared Mr. Armstrong's tax returns for years without knowing that he was consistently falsifying his expense account, abusing the trust funds of the Church, and misusing Church assets for his own benefit on a relatively large scale. I also represented the Church in its successful defense in 1980-81 of its exempt status before the National Office of the Internal Revenue Service, a status that later facts may prove to have been improvidently granted.

It is ironic that the attorney general, having only part of the story, focused upon a series of highly visible transactions between the Church and Mr. Rader, all of which were in fact proper, and missed the real problem which was Mr. Armstrong. I have never known Mr. Rader to have ever abused his trust. To his and my chagrin, however, neither of us had ever pieced together the entire picture of Mr. Armstrong's abuse, and were on the verge of solving the puzzle with Mr. Bicket's assistance when we were all drummed out of the corps. It is only in my belated abandonment of any hope in realizing a discreet dialogue with the proper Church officials, or in seeing some evidence that the errors would be corrected, that I take the more direct steps implicit in the writing of this letter. Recent activities, discussed four paragraphs hence, also prompt this action.

So that there is no misunderstanding, let me be rather more specific about these particular allegations. I can only skim the surface, but you are sitting on all of the documentation and can research the facts for yourselves if you have the collective competence to know where to look. (Some of you need look no further than the end of your nose.) The ultimate facts are as I stated in the paragraph before last. Some of the specific instances are discussed here and, by way of illustration, in the two attachments to this letter. (I apologize for adding to the length of this letter by including attachments, and I realize that there are many, many other attachments that you may find of even greater interest, but then again, you already have custody of all of the source documents. These particular attachments are not notable, merely illustrative.) Some of you know that Mr. Armstrong takes with him on each trip in his aircraft $10,000 in cash for which he does not account, which is not treated as compensation, and which is used for his personal pleasure or given to his private nurses as "fun money" or else given to his wife. When such funds are insufficient to satisfy each of his desires, he has had additional funds wired under false pretexts from the Church to pay for such things as a $30,000 rental payment for a yacht in Monte Carlo. (Some of you may recall how that he later complained that Mr. Rader - who was not there - either "forced" Mr. Armstrong and his wife to do it or else that Mr. Rader had made the arrangements himself. Competent testimony will prove otherwise. Members of his family use corporate credit cards for personal use on a persistent basis, without any present ability or apparent intention to repay, and he uses actual handwritten checks drawn on the corporate accounts. His household staff includes a full-time cook, who is probably an appropriate requisite, but she is paid rather handsomely by most standards in that he takes out a corporate check to give her a little bonus every so often. Last year her total cash remuneration from the Church, excluding the value of interest-free loans, a company car, meals, and other perks, was in excess of $50,000.00. Since he requires no approval for the issuance of bonus compensation to himself, he does not hesitate to increase his own pay when the need appears to present itself. Often, he is quite vocal about it: He recently shocked Frank Mariani (President Reagan's tailor) by loudly complaining for all to hear that with taxes so high he was going to have to give himself a bonus of $100,000.00 just to pay for his clothes. Last year Mr. Armstrong's compensation, at least that which went through the payroll system, was in excess of $500,000.00. (I believe it was around $563,000.00, but that figure may include Mrs. Armstrong's salary.) I am informed that he keeps on his person cashier's checks or certificates of deposit in his name in amounts ranging into six figures so that he can, as he once expressed, get out of the country if the attorney general ever comes after him. He had wanted to place $1,000,000.00 in noninterest-bearing cashier's checks payable to him so that he and the Church would be "protected" in such an eventuality. Of course you know that his daughter Beverly has a lifetime contract for "personal services" with the written proviso that she take orders only from her father and is relieved of providing any services at all upon his death. In point of fact, she renders no services whatsoever. Her compensation is more generous than that which Cardinal Cody is alleged to have given his friend, and it includes the use of an exquisitely furnished home in La Canada at a guaranteed monthly rental of $250.00 for life. The use of the Grumman Gulfstream II jet aircraft for personal pleasure, whether it be a trip to London for the sole purpose of purchasing a specially made prosthetic dildo (which he carries in a Hermes pouch), or just a trip from Tucson to Jurgensen's in Pasadena for groceries, is another area of concern. Speaking in Mr. Armstrong's defense, his actions may have been unthinking, uninformed, or just plain stupid. But I do not understand why you don't seem to think of them as problems.

Even if Mr. Armstrong is not culpable in the criminal sense, his example is all too readily followed by others who must be said to know better. I am told that the illustrious Mr. Dean aforementioned felt that he too could stock his private larder from Jurgensen's to the tune of between $700.00 to $ 1,000.00 per month until someone questioned why Mr. Armstrong's Pasadena household expenses were so large when only his Pasadena housekeeper was in residence. When your taste regularly runs to wine that costs $80.00 per bottle, it can be expensive. Mr. Dean may learn that it is even more expensive to brag to others about getting it for "free." According to Mr. Robin Webber, Mr. Joseph Tkach apparently felt justified in giving himself from a trust fund he controlled a little advance of $5,000.00 as a "needy Church member" to take advantage of a special investment in unregistered securities then illegally being pedaled (against the advice of counsel) by the Dean brothers. In some cases, Mr. Armstrong encouraged others to join in the fun of having treasure troves from Harrod's of London maintained in their homes so that his own conscience could more easily be assuaged.
