Perhaps I should also say a few words in defense of my colleagues at Arthur Andersen & Co., who will be as embarrassed as I am that these things happened under our collective nose. They relied, as they were entitled, on numerous representations both from management and from myself, which now appear to have been based on incomplete information. I did tell them everything I knew at the time, but our collective knowledge proved insufficient in the face of Mr. Armstrong's unreliability. Even the work we did together, cleaning up the festival department, for example, may now be undone. I understand that once again it is becoming routine for people such as Mr. Dwight Viehe to take a two-week trip to a tropical isle (with his wife) to make sure that the hall that the local minister recommends that the Church rent for the Feast of Tabernacles is the right size. One would think that the policy of turning such aspects of festival administration over to local Church pastors has been totally abandoned for a more "workable" policy as was extant in the "good old days." I am somewhat surprised, however, that even in light of the admonitions of SAS No. 16 (particularly the section on integrity of management) the firm would not be more careful in getting appropriate representations. Their last examination was concluded without Mr. Rader's representation letter, even though he had served as the chief financial officer during the year in question and remained an executive vice-president of one of the entities (whose chief financial officer was not even approached for a representation letter). Moreover, Mr. Rader had indicated to the engagement manager that he could not sign a version of the representation letter that was initially forwarded to him because it was inaccurate. In that context, it is all the more curious why they never got back to him. It is also unfortunate that they have allowed the client to backslide on Mr. Rader's promise to the brethren that full financial disclosure would be made annually in the Church newspaper by reprinting the audited financials. Even though in the recent appellate court hearing leading to the notable vindication of our battle with the attorney general Mr. Helge "missed himself" by assuring the justices that the Church did so publish its financial affairs, the candor befitting an officer of the court should have led him to divulge that such assurances were no longer true and that the Church no longer intends to disclose any of its financial affairs to its members. (Since this paragraph is supposed to be in defense of the auditors, I should say that I haven't seen their opinion letter for 1980, and I'm sure that it must contain a scope limitation qualification for not being permitted by Mr. Neff to interview or obtain representations from departed management. They are under no obligation to insist on the lifting of such restrictions, although they undoubtedly notified each of you that management had so encumbered their engagement.)

How far the Church leaders have backslid during 1981 can only be guessed. I understand that Mr. Armstrong currently is taking increased advantage of his position without any effective restraint, and, sadly, in a way that discloses more, rather than less, personal culpability. Earlier this month he is said to have forced the Church to purchase a residence from his daughter Dorothy for a price that appears to be particularly generous. When the housing market is slow, it is nice to have a rich father, or failing that, a father who controls a rich corporation whose trustees are paid to look the other way. Showing some pang of conscience (or evidence of mens rea), he is also said to have grudgingly exclaimed at the time the orders were given that this transaction may well "wreck the Church" if it is ever uncovered, but he wanted to do it anyway. And as a matter of trifling significance in the larger scheme of things, but one that may not universally be so regarded, the G-II was sent to Tucson earlier this month to deliver a personal letter. Much better service than the post office, and much cheaper than federal express, if you discount the rental value of the G-II and its crew and supplies and fuel. (For a point of reference, you might ask J.B. Nethercutt how much Merle Norman Cosmetics gets for their G-II when it is idle. (Hint: For the price of each hour of usage you could buy a nice car.) You might also consider how the government treated Mr. Nixon's personal use of Air Force One when his personal tax return was audited in the aftermath of Watergate.)

I trust I have given some indication of what I'm complaining about. I cite the few specific instances that I do, not to single them out as being particularly noteworthy, but to help you to comprehend that I am not passing on idle gossip and hearsay. I have been careful to ensure that my factual bases are sound, and you should realize that if God wanted to choose someone to serve as an instrument of reform, few have received better training within the Church than I have. Whether I am adequate to the task may be another question, but I have been prepared as no other could have been ....

I would also like to return, for just a moment, to that which a court cannot easily correct: the evils I alluded to at the outset of this letter. Truly the real problems in the Church are not just financial. They are just symptomatic of the disease.

That is why your collective dereliction of duty as directors and elders is so abominable. The unfortunate state of affairs with Mr. Armstrong and his family could have been prevented. It did not need to rub off on impressionable young men like the Dean boys. When a scatterbrained issue like whether women should be allowed to groom themselves modestly in a way not inconsistent with Biblical teaching is mistakenly presented, you who are strong should not be so cowardly as to not speak up. I have difficulty believing that a man of the supposed stature of a Rod Meredith could allow a Joe Tkach to dissuade him from standing firmly for truth on the issue (not that the issue is that important, and at this point it might as well be left alone). I'm saddened that I cannot take the time to discuss these matters further; just to introduce the subject properly would easily treble the length of this letter. I do not think, however, that it should take much searching of your consciences (I speak to those who have them) to see that if you have never counselled Mr. Armstrong adequately on the mundane affairs of the work because you thought it presumptuous, you have probably done an even worse job of speaking up forcefully on matters of doctrine (especially as applied). For one small morsel of food for thought, why is it that people can be disfellowshipped for no reason that is explained to them, and no effort whatsoever is made to reconcile the lost brother? Does 2 Cor. 2:7 mean anything to you? How about Luke 15? Also, how is it that you allow Mr. Armstrong to approve abortions for "special circumstances" without reconciling this with the Church's public position (not to mention the sacred Word of Truth)? How many more murders shall we encourage before those of you who are supposed to be shepherds realize that there is some duty to protect a flock from wolves, from the type described in the second chapter of 2 Peter, or in Jude?....

I cannot take the time to outline for you the specific steps that I will be taking as soon as I am able. Suffice it to say that short of a miraculous coming to your senses there remains little that you can now do to rectify the situation other than prepare to cooperate fully. You have sat on my letter dated October 26, 1981, to Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher for altogether too long for me even to feel that an additional five business days would be of any use. (For those of you who haven't been given a copy of even that communication, you may consider such treatment when you make your future plans for retention of the legal services you all require. I cannot believe that such a firm as Gibson would not have made sure that each of you received a copy, unless they were given deceitful assurances by Helge that he would take it upon himself to look out after your welfare. For any of you who have placed your trust in that man, may God have mercy on your souls. Such a son of perdition will soon be exposed.)

If you don't feel as I do that you are under some duty to help put the Church on the right course, then you have no business accepting the accolade of board membership. There have been only three board members who have resigned in the past for concerns such as I express here: Albert Portune, David Antion, and Stan Rader. Whatever other faults each of those men may have had or yet has, they did have some inkling of what decency requires. If you are willing neither to act nor to resign, then someone else will see to it that the proper steps are taken. You have personal liability in this matter gentlemen. I suggest that you govern yourselves accordingly.

Very truly yours,
W. Jack Kessler

Exactly what type of action Kessler plans to take remains unclear. The attorney general's office has again stated that, because of the Petris law, it will not reopen its civil case against the WCG's leaders. It has also refused to comment on whether or not any kind of criminal charges will ever be filed. The IRS has shown an interest in the Kessler charges, but the church has successfully warded off that agency's probes before.

While the council of elders has, for months, talked about Kessler's threats, none seem to take them seriously enough to take appropriate action. Herbert, himself, has taken the matter quite seriously, however. He has been privately lambasting Kessler while claiming the letter was masterminded by someone else. Privately on at least one occasion he has stated that GTA is behind it, but most of the time (even from the pulpit) he accuses Stan Rader of being the "mastermind" behind the threat. To accuse Ted is, of course, ridiculous, and while Stan Rader is a long-time associate and friend of Kessler's, we've seen no evidence whatsoever that Stan is the real author or instigator behind Kessler's letter. It is interesting that in commenting to the press about the Kessler charges, Rader has actually been quite defensive of HWA's conduct.

As for official public statements, the WCG has refused to issue any type of point-by-point rebuttal of Kessler's allegations. According to Leroy Neff, the church's lawyers have warned the elders to say as little as possible on the matter. But what is perhaps most interesting is not the advice given but who is giving it. As noted by Kessler in his letter, the law firm now representing the WCG is the powerful firm of Gibson, Dunn, and Crutcher. Author David Robinson pointed out to us:

"In my many years of association with Herbert Armstrong and the church, I noticed that a certain modus operandi would always be established by Herbert and then be adhered to in solving all similar problems. When the church was hit with the big lawsuit in 1979, the modus operandi was very clear. It was to hire big law firms and to press for a political solution to their dilemma. The church did not cooperate with the attorney general, nor did it open its books. Instead, through its political contacts, it sought and won a change in the law. [Editor: The Los Angeles Herald Examiner has reported that the church is now a contributor to the campaign fund of state attorney general Deukmejian, who wants to be governor of California.]

"Now what do we see with the Kessler situation? The church has a problem which involves the IRS. It hires a big law firm, but not just any big law firm. It hires Gibson, Dunn and Crutcher - a law firm with strong ties to the White House. They even have an office two blocks away. It is the same firm in which the present U.S. Attorney General William French Smith was a partner. I'm not accusing anyone of any kind of illegal activity. I have no evidence of that. But I wouldn't be surprised if HWA tried to get his new lawyers to use their influence and contacts to bring an end to the new IRS investigation. That kind of thing has happened many, many times in U.S. history."

Concerning Kessler personally, it is, of course, nice that he has come forth with the facts as he sees them. But as the Los Angeles Times intimated, why didn't he come forward with what he knew during the state attorney general's investigation? Why wait so long? Did getting kicked off the gravy train have something to do with his suddenly putting on a white hat?

But more important, how accurate are Kessler's charges? He has told reporters that he stands 100 percent behind what he has written. Our own sources tell us he is pretty much telling the truth. The WCG has refused to refute the allegations point by point. It is interesting, however, that Leroy Neff (in Big Sandy, Texas) did state that while Kessler's letter did contain some errors (two misplaced commas would make this statement accurate), it also contained some truth. We ask Mr. Neff how much of it is true? Ninety-nine percent? Hopefully, in the near future, the church will make public the financial documents that could once and for all clear away the black cloud of distrust that hangs over its worldly dealings. But even more significant than the accusations of financial wrongdoing, Kessler's letter paints a picture of an organization continuing on a moral toboggan slide.

As pointed out in previous issues of Ambassador Report, there has never been a real denial of the now well-known incest allegations. We were aware that before Garner Ted Armstrong was booted out of the WCG, he did, on at least one occasion, personally confront his father about the matter. A third party who overheard the highly charged conversation has reported how Garner Ted, in no uncertain terms, directly charged his father, yelling: "You f----- my sister!!!" Herbert, suddenly aware that his son at last saw him for what he really is, could only softly admit: "Well - there have been times in my life when I've gotten far away from God."

In the almost four years since then, Herbert has made less and less of an attempt to hide this facet of his early ministry. Now, we understand, he has actually confessed this part of his past to many of the church's council of elders. But sadly, he is still unwilling to take any responsibility for his past behavior. He has simply placed the blame on his late wife, Loma.

Ministers such as Leroy Neff are now making a point in sermons to cover up HWA's vile past by alluding to alleged inadequacies in the character of HWA's deceased wife. One part of Neff's approach is to ask the congregation: "Which one of you is willing to cast the first stone?" While a typical WCG audience may find such a misuse of scripture overpowering, we would advise Apostle Armstrong not to adopt that as his only defense. Before some audiences we know of, such a challenge would quickly empty every rock pile in sight.

TIME AGAIN TO FLEE?

With Herbert's sins more and more being accepted by both the WCG's ministry and membership, it should come as no surprise that morality problems are increasing at headquarters. One leading figure in the church is so open about his own affairs that he has been dubbed "the new Garner Ted." Another top minister was recently found to be committing adultery. He was secretly disfellowshipped - for one day. One young Armstrong aide has seduced two different women in the fourth-floor board room, yet remains on staff. And on and on it goes.

But while the moral slide is depressing, what is perhaps most disturbing about the current climate is an increasing church paranoia and growing fixation on the "flee to Petra" idea. Numerous ministers are now teaching that the WCG will flee the country by 1984. (Recall, however, that similar predictions did not work out too well for 1972, 1975, 1979, 1981, etc.) Gerald Waterhouse, long the Petra heresy's chief proponent, has become increasingly possessed by Petra in recent years, so much so that he recently told a fellow WCG minister that God has already chosen "the Petra teaching team." It will, according to Waterhouse, consist of evangelists Herman Hoeh, Dean Blackwell, Raymond McNair, and of course Gerald Waterhouse, who naturally will be in charge. This type of idiocy would perhaps have been quite amusing some years ago. But in this post-Jonestown era, all talk of the church fleeing to a foreign refuge should not just be taken as a joke.

While both the Bible and tradition mention the torture murders of, not only Jesus, but most of the apostles and many other followers of Christ, and while history tells of millions of Christians murdered throughout the centuries, HWA seems, to know that nothing gets his followers into a giving mood better than talk of saving the flesh. The idea of fleeing to a "place of safety" appeals very strongly to the insecure and fearful.

We don't see HWA's lifestyle fitting in too well atop the waterless crags of Jordan's Petra region, so we prefer to think he tolerates such talk because it brings in the dollars from his hysterical sheep. With the threat of nuclear war increasingly on the minds of people and in the news, it was no surprise for us to see in the December 1981 Plain Truth an HWA editorial entitled "There Is a Way of Escape."

But while we would prefer to think HWA is simply using the Petra fixation as a money-making tool (and church income is indeed way up) , we have very little confidence in the mental stability of HWA or those around him. In his Feb. 25, 1982, letter to members and co-workers, HWA writes:

"I hope to arrange for the use of Petra as a possible refuge or place of safety during the Great Tribulation, when I see King Hussein. Pray about this, please."

We can only hope that Herbert does not really take such statements too seriously. The Middle East, being what it is, should be the last place on earth where one would want to be in time of war.

NEW MAKEUP INFO

In our last issue we reported how the Worldwide Church of God has adopted a new anti-makeup doctrine. Since then, Garner Ted Armstrong has published an exceptional rebuttal to Herbert Armstrong's new doctrinal stance. The article, found on pages 6 and 7 of the March 1982 issue of The International News (Box 2525, Tyler, TX 75710) shows conclusively that HWA's recent accusations against Garner Ted Armstrong and Wayne Cole are totally without foundation and that HWA personally did indeed knowingly authorize the WCG's 1974 makeup liberalization. Ted is enraged at his dad's hypocrisy in the whole affair, saying that HWA's wife Loma (Ted's mother) wore makeup on special occasions and that she was not a whore by any means!

It is interesting that not only did the WCG allow makeup for eight years but through its Everest House publishing firm actually promoted makeup use. Listed in the 1981 Everest House catalog are such books as Peter Shen's Make-up for Success and Plastic Surgery for Men. Incidentally, along with numerous books by Herbert Armstrong, that same catalog listed these titles by other authors: Mario Badescu's Skin Care Program for Men, To Elvis With Love, Zen Running, Living Jewish, The Surrogate Mother, My Savage Muse, Alien Intelligence, How to Make Your Own Knives, Guns and How They Work, They Call Me Assassin, Inside Russian Medicine, In Search Of, Dark Dimensions, How Many Things Can You Do in the Nude?, and of course Stan Rader's Against the Gates of Hell. (Everest House's catalog-address is: P.O. Box 978, Edison, NJ 08817.)

Returning to the subject of makeup, we understand that HWA's wife Ramona has, for now, decided not to sue for divorce. In fact, she is being an obedient wife and has, to Herbert's surprise, discontinued the use of makeup. But Herbert, still unhappy with her, has been loudly complaining to friends that he is "unequally yoked" to Ramona.

MYSTERY RELIGION CONNECTIONS?

We keep getting letters from students of comparative religion who see parallels between aspects of Armstrongism and the pagan mysteries. For instance, former Armstrong church member Robert Erickson (452 E. Harris Ave., Raymondville, TX 78580) put out a newsletter recently containing this observation (p. 22):

"The next time you're in the WCG auditorium, go down to the bottom lobby floor where the public restrooms are. You'll find the rug is a rich kingly royal purple color; and in the exact center of the lobby is a very huge PAGAN SUNBURST woven right into the rug and having large pointed spears of light, representing TRUTH, radiating out in every direction. Now look close and you'll very clearly see that circling around each and every shaft of light (TRUTH) is a large spiraling serpent.... There are many more symbolic mystery things built into the campus, like the large reflecting sunburst pool of water with an OBELISK directly centered out front and cleverly disguised as a support for four... egrets. Egrets, say some Bible dictionaries, denote presence. Don't forget the large cement walkway pagan 'CROSS' made by the sidewalks and the lake. It is interesting to note that years ago we first learned about Babylon symbology from the WCG's copied work of Hislop's Two Babylons!! There is a new work out now called Babylon Mystery Religion, Ancient and Modern, by Ralph Woodrow. If you have one handy, open it to page 41 and compare the striking similarities. Be sure to read the whole chapter. It is time to ask yourself now just who's house and for which god is it anyway? It's a fair question, especially since scripture says that now the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands, as said the prophet (Acts 7:48). And the second witness of scripture says, 'God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands' (Acts 17:24)."

CHURCH INCOME SKYROCKETS

Between 1972 and Dec. 31, 1979, the Armstrong organization lost about 30 percent of its purchasing power (adjusted for inflation), and its income was stagnating. But now things are different. The Feb. 15, 1982, issue of The Worldwide News revealed that the WCG, Ambassador College in Pasadena and Big Sandy, and the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation took in a record-breaking $108,358,000 in 1981, up 19.98 percent over the $90,312,000 figure quoted for 1980. These figures, however, were listed in a disappointingly brief and incomplete income statement, which was unaudited. According to church treasurer Leroy Neff, the figures were unaudited (1) because "the 1981 audit, which is in process, will not be completed for several months" and (2) because these figures represent worldwide totals that make it "necessary for one auditing firm to audit all offices" - which, of course, hasn't been done.

The Armstrong organization reported income receipts of $66,397,000 for 1979 and $63,467,000 for 1978, according to the audit by Arthur Andersen & Co., but these figures did not include any revenue from the church's foreign offices as do the 1980-81 figures, making a comparison between the 1978-79 and 1980-81 figures impossible. Nevertheless, it appears that HWA's decision to drop Quest magazine and the secular approach of The Plain Truth and the "World Tomorrow" broadcast and to return to a hard-sell, preachy, doomsday emphasis with a generous sprinkling of misused biblical quotes is paying rich dividends. We hear the church's mailing offices are swamped with requests for Who Is the Beast? and The United States & British Commonwealth in Prophecy - two booklets that really grab a new reader's attention but that are chocked full of biblical and historical inaccuracies.

FROM THE GRAPEVINE

*Some employees at Ambassador College are getting uptight about the increased fanaticism at the church's headquarters. An emotional prayer for "God's Apostle" was even offered before a recent Ambassador College basketball game.

*Since the removal of Bob Fahey as executive assistant to Herbert Armstrong, most of the executive assistant responsibilities have been taken over by Aaron Dean, although he did not inherit Fahey's title. However, insiders report that the main influence over Aaron is not Herbert but his brother Kevin Dean. (That influence even extends somewhat to evangelists Joe Tkach and Ellis LaRavia.) Some have now begun referring to the Dean brothers as "The Two Witnesses."

*Herbert Armstrong's writings are finally getting the attention they deserve. In the March 1982 issue of Playboy ("The Family Jewels," p. 188), Herbert was quoted as an authority on testicles.

*Don't be surprised if Garner Ted Armstrong winds up suing his father in the near future. GTA is still miffed that the WCG refused to honor the contract he had with that church. GTA claim they owe him back pay.

*Jeff Calkins, former PT writer, and Lester Grabbe, former member of the theology department and Greek instructor at Ambassador College, are no longer employed by the Armstrong organization. They were two of the last "intellectuals" left in the organization, which has been taken over by the right wing of the church.

A COINCIDENCE?

Over the years, many Bible scholars and religious experts have asserted that Armstrongism is essentially an eclectic religion whose doctrines came from a combination of sources including British-Israel organizations, the Seventh-day Adventists, and the Jehovah's Witnesses. Some individuals, for instance, believe that HWA got his own "disfellowship" (the term is not found in the Bible) doctrine, not from scripture, but from the Jehovah's Witnesses. Because of the many JW-WCG similarities revealed, we believe you will find the following article quite remarkable. It is by religion writer John Dart and appeared in the Jan. 30, 1982, Los Angeles Times, Part II, page 4:

Enough defectors have criticized the Witnesses' Watchtower Society publicly in the last year to prompt the Brooklyn-based leaders to try, in effect, to clasp hands over the ears of its active 2.2 million members.

Silent Treatment Urged

The Sept. 15 Watchtower magazine told members that anyone who has written a letter of resignation should be shunned as if he had been "disfellowshipped," or expelled.

Previously, only those who entered military service or politics (both forbidden by Witness teachings) were put in the same clan as those formally disfellowshipped by local Kingdom Hall committees and given the silent treatment.

Watchtower officials say most disfellowship actions have been prompted by immoral behavior and are in keeping with the Apostle Paul's admonitions in I Corinthians 5:11-13.

"This Is a hardening, a tightening, of our policy," confirmed William Van De Wall, a headquarters spokesman for the Watchtower Society. Denying any great membership losses, Van De Wall said the new directive was to counteract "disgruntled" ex- members.

The new policy was given as cause for the disciplining late last year of one of the best-known Witnesses to leave the Watchtower Society in recent years - Raymond Franz, co-author of a standard Witness reference book, "Aid to Bible Understanding."

Resigned Under Pressure

Franz, nephew of the Watchtower Society's 88-year-old president, Frederick Franz, was asked to end his nine years on the organization's Governing Body in May, 1980. Several sources said his resignation under pressure followed tensions over Raymond Franz's questioning of the Witnesses' alleged "legalistic" attention to numerous personal and personal behavior rules and over his private, but less-than-orthodox, discussions of Witness theology.

Raymond Franz declined news media interviews in the interim and shared his changing biblical views with but a few close friends, sources close to Franz said.

After 40 year's service as a Witness, Franz, now 59, was given part-time work and a place to park his trailer home by another Witness, Peter Gregerson of Gadsden, Ala., board chairman of Warehouse Groceries.

Gregerson resigned, reportedly under pressure, from the organization early last year, however. Disfellowshipping proceedings were started last fall against Franz, because he was seen eating with his employer-landlord in a restaurant.

Copies of correspondence between Franz and the Gadsden elders, obtained by The Times, show that Franz protested to no avail that he was seen associating with a resigned ex-member before the new rule was announced in mid-September. Franz's first "accuser" was Dan Gregerson, brother of Peter.

"Unless one believes in ex-post-facto laws," Franz wrote in December, "his testimony would hardly seem relevant.

Bible Reference Asked

"I assure you that if you will help me to see from the Scriptures that the act of eating with Peter Gregerson is a sin, I will humbly repent of such sin before God," he wrote.

Both Franz and Gregerson were said to have re-evaluated certain Witness teachings after they had chances to research or study the Bible on their own.

The failure of a predicted Armageddon to usher in a 1,000-year new era in 1975 took its toll on many members, as indicated by the meticulously kept figures in the Watchtower Society's yearbooks.

Witnesses baptized a record 297,872 new members worldwide in the year ending Aug. 31, 1974. Nearly the same number were baptized in the next 12 months. But by the winter of 1974-75, Witness officials were already backing down on their calculations that 6,000 years of human history would be reached in the fall of 1975 and presumably usher in Christ's kingdom.

Baptisms hit a low mark in 1978 with 95,062 worldwide and 20,491 in the United States. That was also the low mark for active members. 2,086,697 worldwide and 513,673 in the United States.

Charges by disaffected members of immorality gone unpunished and cover-ups by some congregational elders arise occasionally from the rather insular world of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Effect of '75 Studied

But, as Peter Gregerson observed, most Witnesses are less likely to become disturbed over such charges as they are about the possibility that Watchtower leaders could justifiably be called "false prophets."

Gregerson was one of nearly 50 selected elders brought to the Brooklyn headquarters, called Bethel ("House of God"), in 1976 to discuss the fallout from the erroneous 1975 prediction. He indicated that the leadership was more prone to blame members jumping to conclusions rather than any mistake or miscalculation on its part.

Ex-member critics point to another prophecy problem. The year 1914, once thought to be the end of the ordinary world, was later designated as the beginning of the end. Applying Jesus' words as reported in Matthew's 24th chapter, the Witnesses are saying that the generation living in 1914 would not pass away before the last day's tribulations would beset the Earth.

Increasing numbers of people who were old enough to be aware of world events in 1914 (the start of World War 1) are dying off - though the last of them may live into the 21st Century.

"This (prediction) does not panic us," Van De Wall said in defending the Watchtower Society position. "This talk attracts people more than it repels them."

Of the many Sabbath-keeping church groups that have been mentioned in the Report over the years (and there have been scores), we have noticed that very few have maintained any kind of a significant growth rate. This observation is not intended to slight anyone. We are not disparaging the sincerity of these churches or the accuracy of what these groups teach. We are simply pointing out that of the church groups that have formed from WCG ex-members, very few have had real membership growth over the years.

Even GTA's Church of God, International seems to be only holding even in size. While we noticed in a recent CGI publication that Garner Ted's organization is building a fine new headquarters building, our sources in Tyler say that actual church growth has been somewhat disappointing.

There is, however, one church that has had almost spectacular growth in the last few years. That is the Biblical Church of God, coordinated by former WCG minister Fred R. Coulter. We suspect that much of that growth is a direct result of the enthusiasm of its director and the openness the organization has as a whole.

Mr. Coulter called us a number of times recently to tell us about his organization. He also sent us a large package of doctrinal booklets that very clearly explain their position on all major doctrines and on church organization. Essentially, this church seems to maintain most of the doctrinal positions of the WCG with a few modifications. It does, however, have a significantly different church administration and organizational structure, having dropped the hierarchical despotism of the Armstrongs.

As you know, the Report is not a Sabbatarian religious group. We do, however, receive many letters from individuals who, while fed up with Herbert Armstrong, still believe many or all of his church's doctrines to be correct. Those individuals may find Mr. Coulter's magazine and other literature of interest. Also, of interest is his radio broadcast, "Bible Answers," aired daily on a number of stations around the nation. The address to write to for information is:

The Biblical Church of God
Box 744, Monterey, CA 93940

*****

Speaking of radio broadcasts, we were very happy to learn that Dr. Ernest L. Martin is now on radio with a program called "Biblical Commentary." On a recent visit to the Foundation for Biblical Research, we listened to a tape of one of his new broadcasts and were very impressed by what we heard. A number of individuals with training in the broadcasting field have commented that, even content aside, Martin's tapes are already not only as professional as Garner Ted Armstrong's but even rival the very best done by Herbert Armstrong in his prime. The Foundation has placed the program on only one station (WNDA in Huntsville, Alabama, at 7 a.m. Sundays) as an experiment, but we suspect the program will be a success and will later expand to other stations. In anticipation of that growth and because the FBR is expanding into book publishing, Gary Arvidson is back on the Foundation's staff. We hope he'll be doing some writing in the future as some of the research he has done in the last few years is quite remarkable.

Another project that the Foundation is engaged in will, we believe, be of great value to thousands, regardless of their denominational affiliations. Dr. Martin is currently writing a book on a subject he has researched for many years. The book, titled The Original Bible-Its Design and Development, will be available in about three months. Those of us who had the privilege of studying under Dr. Martin at Ambassador College can attest to what an incredibly interesting subject this is. For those who do not already have the Foundation's address, it is: Foundation for Biblical Research, P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Letters

I thoroughly enjoyed the rundown on makeup. (I'd been about to ask if you could fill me in on why so many church women suddenly looked pale and splotchy, but you'd anticipated me.) I don't, however, agree with you that the question of makeup "may be considered inconsequential to most normal people." That's certainly not true for women, especially younger ones. Even applied lightly, makeup can make a profound difference in the way a woman looks and feels about herself. The WCG females I've seen lately look awful, especially on dress occasions when all those drab, blemished faces look so horribly out of sync with attractive outfits and hairstyles. It seems to me this latest edict of Herbie Strongarm is of tremendous significance; it's such a frightening example of Jonestownism" - unquestioning obedience, especially since it involves such an intensely sensitive issue as personal appearance. I can't even fathom the mentality of someone who'd cave in to a crazy old man's whim to the extent that she'd be willing to go about looking like death warmed over. Let's hope this latest piece of crackpotism interferes with recruitment!

In your last issue you commented on HWA's continued meetings with world leaders and in particular a banquet hosted by Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek. You went on to say, "One can only ask: What is it that HWA is giving in return for such honors?" I would guess what he is giving is oodles of WCG money. HWA is a businessman from way back and I believe he knows the meaning of a good investment. What he is investing in is his own credibility.

The "Power of Positive Thinking" is hardly the WCG religious angle. Bible prophecy is. In a world of future shock with coups, counter-coups, revolutions and assorted upheavals on nightly TV, HWA claims to have the answers as well as a "place of safety" for those concerned with saving their hides, physically (and perhaps spiritually too, but especially physically). "Watch world events" to see how right he is, HWA tells his followers. And what greater way to boost his credibility in the eyes of his followers than for the latter to see him "right in there" with major political leaders? Why it would be like seeing Howard Cosell in uniform and playing right tackle on the LA Rams' line.

Generally, HWA meets with dictators, who are not as accountable to their people and less subject to media scrutiny. (Birds of a feather, no doubt) Considering the Israel-orientation of so much of Bible prophecy, a special effort is obviously made as regards this country. Wittingly or unwittingly, Israeli leaders who consent to meet with him are bolstering his image at the expense of the poor dupes (Jew and non-Jew alike) who will take the whole thing seriously enough to bow before the image.

As for Teddy Kollek, who seems to figure so prominently in these affairs, I can only conclude the character of some people doesn't change very much over the years. In the 1940s, when the Jewish people emerged from the horrors of the holocaust determined to create a state of their own, Teddy Kollek served as a paid informant for the British, whose job it was to rat on the underground fighters struggling for the freedom of their own people. In the end one can indeed tell people by the company they keep.

One interesting thing about Herbert is that he always compares himself to the original apostles. However, he is just the diametrical opposite. Take for instance the early apostles who approached the temple at the gate called Beautiful where they met a man begging for alms. The Apostles said, "Silver and gold have we none, but we have something better." Herbert, however, would have said "Silver and gold have I plenty, but you're under a curse for not tithing to me. That's why you're here begging. I get, you give - thats my principle."

The other day I spied The Plain Truth in an Omaha library branch and was told by a naive librarian that it was "donated " She didn't seem to care about my many objections. Another librarian finally told me there was a committee that had the job of overseeing materials that the library displayed. As it turned out one brief call is all it took to do the job. A gentleman was surprised and a bit angry that the PT was even in the library. He said many people had tried different approaches at getting the magazine in the library, but they were always told an emphatic no! It seems that that branch and every other one in the area, have been subjected to a well-organized campaign at getting the PT before the unwary public. He told me he is going to look into the matter citywide.

If your readers are the least "fired up" about this, all they have to do is visit their local libraries and check the periodical index. If they find the PT they should talk to the people in charge of selecting material. There is usually a committee for that purpose. If words aren't enough, parade a copy of Tuit's and/or Robinson's book before the librarians. Also if someone could afford it donating a copy of the above books to their local library would be a good idea and might supply the public with information they didn't have a chance to see.

I would like to obtain the names and addresses of as many AR readers as possible here in Michigan, especially those who are former WCG members. The purpose is to compile a list which I will make available to all whose names are on it so that all AR readers and former WCG members that are interested can contact each other here in Michigan for the purposes of discussions, fellowship, renewing old acquaintances, etc. There are probably a lot of readers who were former friends or acquaintances in WCG that would now enjoy contacting each other. Therefore, I invite all AR readers here in Michigan who are interested to send me their name and address and a starped, self-addressed envelope so I can send them a copy of the list as soon as it's ready. Please write in right away so the list can be compiled and mailed out as quickly as possible. Perhaps other AR readers in other states could do something similar.

Thank you for the last two reports. Sorry to be so long with my thanks and small contribution. This Report helps me to keep up with what's going on and helps me to maintain a sense of balance and to keep a 40-year marriage going. Your writings and information on cults is helpful. When one is married to a person in WCG you can see the sapping of the individual, you can see them fading in their personality and awareness of what is going on around them and one can only try to do right by them as with any sickness. The strain is great and I have to keep my wits about me all the time and it's knowing folks like yourselves, who really care, that makes it just a little easier.

-Maine

Reading some of your letters the other day I found I have similar problems to many others in the states. I am divorced. I have three children and I am not yet remarried as I want to wait for God to provide the right one in due time, or open my ex-husband's eyes and get him out of the WCG. Which, given this, I think we have a chance to make a go of it. I will not describe all the problems their (WCG) teachings cause to someone of a rather unstable mind. I'm sure you can imagine.

My ex-husband is a great believer in authority, especially when it comes to HWA. When HWA gives the word to go to big P [Petra], he will up and go. Now in order for a quiet, peaceful life to ensue, I let him take our kids to the Feast of Tabernacles every year. If I did not do that, I think he would run off with them (to save diem from the tribulation).

I heard yesterday that a minister, David Stirk, had told people recently from the pulpit that they will probably be told to go to big P from the Feast of Tabernacles and should accordingly take enough money to Tabernacles to cover the transportation costs to big P. Of course, my ex-husband would have an ideal chance here to take the kids to big P to save them from the big T [tribulation]! He could be out of Great Britain before I knew it! So you can help me by keeping tabs on what goes on within the WCG. Could you possibly let me know as soon as the slightest hint of HWA giving the word for big P comes?....

The WCG press over here is changing hands soon. The WCG leadership will be moving into offices in Boreham Wood (from Bricket [bright light] Wood to Bore 'em, Wood). A friend of mine in the Luton WCG committed suicide about a year ago while still attending. I know the WCG was putting pressure on her over a domestic situation at the time. But I left before then so I don't know exact details. It's so tragic. They are so heartless.

-England

Editor. Thank you for the information on the church in Britain. As for the big Petra exodus, if such a tragedy was clearly imminent, you can be sure we would not only alert our readers immediately, but we would make the situation known to all our contacts in the news media. We really do not believe, however, that such an exodus will take place in the near future, no matter what David Stirk, Gerald Waterhouse, or any other clown says. If there is any fleeing to be done, it will probably be by Herbert Armstrong and his closest aides because of a subpoena or arrest warrant. The "place of safety" would probably be a hacienda in Costa Rica or Argentina or a yacht in Monte Carlo bay. As for the rest of the church joining him, that's very unlikely as HWA's lifestyle requires the members to be hard at work, sending in their tithes, not huddled in desert caves.

I thank you for sending me your Report. Please continue to do so. I have been in the WCG for almost five years and it almost cost me my life! Last year I confessed to the minister that I smoked and couldn't overcome this "sin," "and he told me I would be put out of the church. I took it for granted that he meant right away so I tried suicide. Thank God I didn't succeed, and still I didn't stop going. I was so sure that if I wasn't in the church I would lose salvation. I still haven't stopped going, but I'm willing to examine the other side. I have come to believe my eternal life depends on God and not the WCG. If there are any other women who have come out of the church that you could give my address to, you have my permission. I know I will need all the support I can get! Thank you again.

-AR Reader

I thank God daily I'm out of that cult. I left in 1978. I went from an attempted suicide to an unbelievable peace I had never known before. I was in WCG for 20 years, but "I'm free at last."

-California

Editor: During the last three months, we have received numerous reports of suicides and attempted suicides by WCG members. Unfortunately, WCG ministers seem generally unqualified to properly counsel individuals suffering from severe depression and other disorders. We strongly urge all suffering from such problems to seek competent professional help.

Until recently I was a member of the WCG. I inadvertently stumbled onto a copy of David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web and read it. It answered a lot of questions my wife and I have had for several years. When I questioned the local minister about it, he really got mad, and before I knew what was happening, he told my wife and I that unless we both had absolute trust, faith, and loyalty to HWA and accepted everything he said without question and not listen or repeat anything bad about HWA that we could not come back to church. I told him, I would follow HWA as I could see he was following Christ; but I just couldn't have blind faith in anyone who was human because humans can make mistakes. That wasn't good enough so we are out.

We had just recently moved here to Kentucky and didn't know anyone hardly at all. All we had heard in sermons for the last year was "obedience to the government of God in the church." The ministers even came out and said everyone should try to find out what other church members were doing and what they thought about things and then come tell the ministers! All this really sounds like something from Nazi Germany or Communist Russia, and I am worried for the people that are still "inside the church." I know a few other people who are also scared that something bad is about to happen.

-Kentucky

Regarding the cultish aspects of the WCG, one ex-minister said that the people who are affected least in an adverse way are those who never bought the entire package, having had some reservations. I guess I was in that category because I haven't been affected except in category number four, the "we vs. they" mentality. And I grew out of that gradually. I used to think there was something wrong with me because I wasn't like the other WCG members in many ways. Actually, for many reasons, I still hold membership in the organization, one reason being that I can reach people on the inside where outsiders cannot. I am attempting to turn people on to Jesus Christ and not to try to get them to change organizations. When one starts looking to the right source, the rest takes care of itself. Peripheral doctrines and organizational boundaries pale into insignificance when one has put on the new man created in the likeness of Jesus.

The most likely prospects for accepting help are those who are having real crises in their lives, who have not been provided by the WCG with the tools to deal with them. You might find the enclosed letters... interesting in this regard. It shows that the concept of living joined to Jesus is the real key to contact with God and everything else, including overcoming trials. You probably can guess who the evangelist mentioned is. The top minister mentioned in the letter to... is Mr. Armstrong. The ministers and writers mean well, but because they do not understand this basic key, their approach to problem solving is 90 percent carnal, or worldly. It is no wonder so many are unable to overcome sin.

-Pasadena, California

Editor: While we are convinced the WCG is a true "cult" built around Herbert Armstrong, there are, nevertheless, quite a few WCG members who still maintain their individuality, being unwilling to simply accept "the party line" on everything. We are very pleased that many such individuals not only read Ambassador Report, but readily share their observations and viewpoints with us.

I have been unable to locate a copy of Mr. Marion McNair's book entitled Armstrongism-Religion or Ripoff. If you can help me locate a copy of this book I will be most appreciative and grateful.

-Oregon

Editor: Marion McNair's book, which came out about five or six years ago, is still a valuable work for those researching the history of Armstrongism. Unfortunately, it is almost out of print. We are told that Mr. McNair has only a few copies available at $6.00 each, including postage. His mailing address is: Marion McNair, P.O. Box 398, Mt. Dora, FL 32757.

I am writing to you to say I enjoy very much receiving your newsletters and definitely your publications are not only helpful in removing the veil from the eyes of members of the WCG, but is also a continuing source of information to them once they leave the organization. Also, in some cases, a psychological tranquilizer for those mentally upset by the experience.

It is extremely difficult for me to understand why more members have not left the WCG when one considers all that has been revealed about the corruption of its leadership over the past several years. But in spite of that I deeply feel that those of us that have left the psychological prison of HWA should take every opportunity to continue to expose the "master of deceit" not only to his members but also to the general public.

My family and I were members of the WCG for 12 years. Eight of those years I served (labored on the Sabbath) as a deacon. The veil over our eyes was removed in lightning-like fashion. In a two week period after an intense study of the "Law" in the Bible, we attended our last sabbath service on April 1st (April Fools' Day), 1978. Since leaving I, along with a former minister and a deacon of the Pittsburgh church, have taken advantage of opportunities to reveal the truth about HWA to the public. In early 1979, we were interviewed by a local newspaper which has a significant coverage of five counties in the Pittsburgh area. It was a front page story which included pictures of us and the ministers of the Pittsburgh church who were also interviewed (separate from us). Many of us have written "Letters to the Editor" on many occasions to local Pittsburgh newspapers.

About a year ago Stanley Rader was interviewed on a local radio talkshow. Three weeks later two of us were interviewed on the same station in rebuttal to Rader. The interview included phone calls by listeners, lasted two hours, and was very successful.

I urge former members of the WCG to take every opportunity to reveal the real plain truth about HWA and the WCG as we have done in our area.

-George Kuhns, Pennsylvania

Thank you for the material I've already received. We have sent in a lot of money to HWA since 1932, but no more.

-Arkansas

AMBASSADOR REPORT

A

R 20 June 30, 1982

NO FOOL LIKE AN OLD FOOL

It's been over two months since newspapers around the country reported that Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) has filed for divorce. Many of you have seen those reports, but for the benefit of those who haven't, here is a brief outline of those happenings.

On April 17 in the "Public Records" section of The Arizona Daily Star (Tucson), there appeared, in very small print, this brief announcement under "Petitions for marriage dissolution: ARMSTRONG, Herbert W. and Ramona."

The WCG's members at first were not told a thing about it. But a news reporter in Tucson saw the announcement and before long the story was making headlines. It wasn't until after the newspapers carried the story that the WCG admitted anything to the church membership. Nevertheless, the May issue of The Plain Truth should have tipped them off as to what was coming. That issue contained an article by HWA entitled "GOD HATES DIVORCE Yet He Divorced His Own Wife! WHY?" It contained this interesting statement (p. 4):

"But even where only one partner is at fault, it can put both through this tragic wringer of human anguish. I quote a specific case history in point.

"It's a case of an aged personage who loved a beautiful young woman and proposed marriage. He offered her a considerably increased life-style and many advantages - even to make her the FIRST LADY of all the earth - for this personage was GOD. And all the earth was his!"

The article goes on to quote numerous Old Testament scriptures on how the nation of Israel disobeyed God, committed adultery, and how God divorced her. It is interesting that in this article HWA used many of the arguments that had been used by the critics of his divorce/remarriage doctrine in the sixties and early seventies - arguments that HWA rejected at that time.

Many reporters and WCG observers have been quick to see the irony in his filing for divorce. HWA had, for decades, showed no mercy to those living in unhappy marriages. Divorce was strictly forbidden by the WCG - even to the extent that many members previously divorced and remarried were required by the WCG to dissolve their present marriages. But by the mid-seventies, HWA, a widower, was lonely. He began dating Ramona Martin, who became a frequent member of the Armstrong entourage. Eyewitness members of Armstrong's jet-set evangelistic team have reported that the Herbert-Ramona relationship then was anything but platonic. Herbert wanted to get married, but Ramona was a divorcee with a son by her previous marriage, her "ex" was still alive and evangelist Rod Meredith had once ruled that she could not remarry because of those circumstances.

What to do? What to do?

In 1976, a year or more after the Ramona-Herbert trysts began, Herbert Armstrong decreed that God had shown him "new doctrinal truth." From henceforth the WCG would accept "new converts in whatever marital state they enter the Church.... A previously divorced person who has entered fellowship is free to remarry within the church" (Los Angeles Times, 4/22/82, p. 12, part II). Then about a year after this change, HWA married Ramona. Although he had (for over two years) advised his father against the marriage, Garner Ted Armstrong himself performed the marriage ceremony. But GTA has never been able to fully accept his father's new wife. In fact, some of those sympathetic to Ramona feel he played a part in sabotaging the marriage. Ever since he became convinced that his father wanted to marry Ramona, Garner Ted had been relentless in behind-her-back attacks on her reputation. Many ministers were more than a little embarrassed at Ted's snide remarks - many of which dealt with extremely intimate details of a sexual nature. Many openly wondered how Ted could possibly have come into such information and what his true motivations were in divulging what he did.

Those close to Ted, however, feel his distrust of Ramona was quite justified. Many observers are convinced she was more loyal to Stan Rader than to HWA. And as we reported in a previous issue, it was a secret tape recording of a Stan Rader-Ramona conversation taped by the Dean brothers that was responsible for the sacking of Stan Rader. Insiders claim that it was also that tape recording that was responsible for the Herbert-Ramona marriage going sour.

Whatever the full story (which we'll probably never hear), with the newspapers beating HWA to the punch, he was finally forced to admit the divorce petition in a letter to his co-workers. Buried in a co-worker letter (dated April 21, 1982) dealing mainly with nuclear war, Herbert informed his followers:

"It has been determined by events, facts and fruits that I am not spiritually bound by God and only by man's law of this world.

"Circumstances now render it ill-advised that I condone the continuation of the legal marriage, both from the Church point of view and of my own....

"God HATES divorce. So do I. I have gone to every effort to prevent this...

"This determination SHOULD NOT BE USED AS A PRECEDENT TO ENCOURAGE OR JUSTIFY OTHER DIVORCES IN THE CHURCH." [Emphasis his.]

The press (Los Angeles Times, April 22; the Pasadena Star-News, April 22 and April 28; the Globe, June 1, etc.) has been quick to point out the dichotomies in HWA's statements. When one considers the statements HWA has made over the years, it's difficult not to be a bit cynical. In a letter to the "brethren of God's Church," April 18, 1977, HWA wrote about Ramona:

"And God now has graciously provided the wife to be constantly at my side - a woman truly led by God's Holy Spirit. We have given the matter much time, to be sure it has grown into true love and like-minded rapport, as well as definitely sure it is God's will."

In the July 1977 Plain Truth HWA wrote about Ramona:

"And I shall never be able to thank God enough for selecting her and sending her to me and causing the very real and deep love that has grown in each of us for the other. God knew the help I needed by my side to accomplish His Work for the remainder of my life - for both of our lives...."

No wonder that when the press first found out about the divorce, church spokesmen had very little to say to them except that HWA's reasons for the divorce were "very biblical." But while the church's ministers were stymied for a logical comment and while HWA danced through the Old Testament prophets trying to justify his divorce, it was humorous to read Dick Lloyd's April 28 article in the Pasadena Star-News. In it he quoted I Cor. 7:10-16, which states that "the husband should not divorce his wife." One would think most WCG members would begin to question who is "witnessing" to whom. Not so. While a few wondered at HWA's divorce action, the vast majority of WCG members seem to see no problem with it at all. As long-time member Wayne Pyle told the Star-News: "There is no question in our mind that Mr. Armstrong is the apostle of Jesus Christ . He is our leader." (Editor: For more HWA divorce information see "Late New" at the end of this issue.)

HERBERT ARMSTRONG HONORED

We found this paragraph in the April 12, 1982, issue of The Worldwide News in an article entitled "HWA meets officials in Europe, Middle East- (p. 1):

"Sabbath morning, April 3, Mr. Armstrong was visited by His Beatitude Deodoros, the Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church in Jerusalem. The patriarch conferred one of the oldest orders in the world on the pastor general, who was the 131st recipient in the 1,546 years [sic] of the order. It was founded by the Roman emperor Constantine I in A.D. 336."

No further details were given.

The June 7, 1982, Worldwide News reported (p. 1) that HWA attended the May 22 Vladimir Horowitz piano recital in London. While there, HWA was introduced to Prince Charles. They spoke for only one minute, but afterward HWA was reintroduced to the Prince of Wales, and they chatted for a bit longer. The Worldwide News says that the second introduction was initiated by two men: Klaus Moser, chairman of the Royal Opera House, and "Jacob Rothschild, a prominent member of the Rothschild family in England. The same article (paragraph one) stated that HWA will be meeting with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. That meeting is tentatively scheduled for mid-summer.

While HWA was able to meet with many highly influential leaders on his recent trip to Europe and the Middle East, he was disappointed that Jordan's King Hussein cancelled out on a previously hoped-for meeting. We understand the king cancelled the meeting shortly after receiving in the mail a copy of David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web.

RALPH HELGE REBUKES JACK KESSLER

In our last issue we ran a substantial portion of a letter written by Jack Kessler to the WCG's council of elders. Since the publication of Kessler's letter, the WCG has responded, in a limited way, to some of Kessler's accusations. We have been disappointed that the WCG has not been able to offer denials to the more serious accusations made by Kessler. But we are not surprised to discover there were evidently some facts omitted by Kessler in his letter. The WCG's side of the story has been put forth by Mr. Ralph Helge in the April 1-2 issue of The Worldwide News (page 3). Mr. Helge, for many years one of HWA's most devoted followers, has finally had that loyalty recognized and has, since Stan Rader's removal, taken over as chief legal counsel for HWA. We have no reason to believe he fabricated these statements he has made on behalf of the church. In all fairness to the WCG, we think it's important to also present their side in the Kessler dispute. Here is a key excerpt from Mr. Helge's article:

The very day that another person's resignation was demanded, [we assume Rader is meant here] that other person unilaterally signed a contract with the accounting firm of Kessler & Kessler, one Kessler of which was the author of the "leaked" letter. The other Kessler is his wife.

The contract provided that Mr. Kessler was to serve as a consultant in the furnishing of advice in the area of accounting with the Church, for a period of five years, at the tune of $12,500 per month. An additional sum was to be paid should the demands of the Church upon his unique expertise become too taxing.

Apparently it was felt that the auditing and accounting services of Arthur Andersen, one of the world's largest accounting firms, was either not capable of handling the task, or it was necessary to have Mr. Kessler's continued involvement for other reasons.

The contract was immediately delivered to the Accounting Department with instructions to commence issuing checks to the Kessler firm. Two such checks were issued. Once the Church investigation uncovered the Kessler contract, the checks were ordered stopped. Mr. Kessler was advised that the Church did not consider the contract binding upon it and refused to honor the same.

The newspaper reports that Mr. Kessler does not know why he was excommunicated and suggested it might be because of his "friendship with Mr. [Stanley R.] Rader" or because of his "unwillingness to lie about Stanley Rader." Mr. Kessler omits his accusing the Church of "treachery" because it refused to honor the five-year contract.

It appears now that the decision not to honor his contract was not only legally and financially sound but providential. For now we must ask the question, if the Church had honored it, would some other person be accusing the Church today of "bribery" to prevent the leaking of accusations in the "leaked" letter?

Further, it seems appropriate to comment here that the Church did not and does not have to request lies from anyone. The Church does not need to deal in lies. The Church is only interested in attempting to document the actual facts so as to defend itself from the false accusations of its accusers.

One of the first areas of inquiry with Arthur Andersen was to seek their advice as to the appropriateness of financial expenditures between the Church and the Ambassador Foundation. The commencement of the inquiry must have touched a nerve because promptly a fiery telex was received from Mr. Kessler.

As of March 1, 1982, he certainly felt there was no basis for the "leaked" letter accusations because he stated:

"The question was asked whether they thought there was any impropriety in the Church's giving funding to the foundation in order for the foundation to carry on its activities... to me it's embarrassing for Church officials to wonder aloud whether we're committing some major fraud of this nature. There was no need to ask Arthur Andersen what they thought since they have just given us completely unqualified opinions two years in a row."

It is surprising he now chooses to ignore the exonerating effect of Arthur Andersen's two years of "unqualified opinions."

The Church's investigation also uncovered a matter that caused it grave concern. It uncovered the existence of two corporations in Nevada that had ostensible legal authority to appoint a successor to Mr. Armstrong in the event of his inability to govern the Church.

Neither Mr. Armstrong, nor the ministers whom he looked to for aid in spiritually guiding the Church, nor I, who served as house counsel for the Church for years, had any knowledge of these two corporations. There has been absolutely no satisfactory documented legal evidence that any of such persons would have had any legal control whatsoever of these corporations.

Mr. Kessler was one of the attorneys who created these corporations and who was named as a director of one of them. The other directors were people in his office who were not members of the Church. Only after the many demand letters by the Church upon Mr. Kessler or his associates, attempting to effectuate the immediate dissolution of these corporations, and only after many dilatory responses, and only after the preparation of the pleadings by the Church of a lawsuit to force their dissolution, were documents received from Mr. Kessler's office that permitted the dissolution of the two corporations without the need of filing a lawsuit.

Recovering property

Demands were then made to commence recovering of all corporate moneys, records and property from Mr. Kessler and some of the former officials and employees. An accounting was requested from Mr. Kessler for Church moneys that were in his possession.

In due time a statement was received from one of Mr. Kessler's firms, which sought to account for $150,000 of the funds that had come into his possession on behalf of the Church. After deducting expenditures on behalf of the Church, including a claim for attorney's fees in the sum of $28,562.50, he conceded there was $13.82 due the Church.

It was necessary that another demand go out to him asking for a breakdown of the services justifying said fee.

A demand was also made that the thousands of dollars of law books the Church had purchased and that were in the library in the Century City office should be returned to the Church.

Mr. Kessler responded, castigating Mr. Armstrong for even suggesting that they should be returned. He contended that a former official of the Church had a right to have the books remain there, under his contract, so he could furnish advice if and when he was called upon to do so.

The Church considers this as a totally untenable excuse. As of this date the books have still not been returned.

A demand for an accounting was also made against the assistant of one of the persons whose resignation was demanded. The demand was for an accounting for expense money during a trip overseas. It was in the approximate sum of $43,000.

Response then came from the assistant that if he was not reinstated to the Church, reinstated to the position previously held by him, given full back salary, an apology made by Church officials, etc., etc., that he would disclose a rumor of a confidential nature.

Upon refusal to be intimidated, a second demand for an accounting was sent. A letter was then received from Mr. Kessler saying that he was representing the assistant. He then demanded after serving as auditor of the Church's books for eight years, the right to look at the Church's books. He claimed the assistant could easily account for the money, but as of this date no accounting has been seen, much less return of any of the moneys....

Is it possible that some of the motives behind the "leaked" letter are to engender such harassment that former dismissed personnel would be, along with Mr. Kessler, drafted back into the ranks of the Church with its financial blessings?

Could it be possible that a motive would be to create an ostensible furor of problems? A furor so great it would prove beyond a doubt that the Church could only have achieved its present position of power and prestige due to the acumen of some of the formerly discharged persons?...

Still the Same Ol' GTA

Tune in to one of Garner Ted Armstrong's telecasts and you'll agree he's changed very little in the last few years. Perhaps that is one reason why so many of those who followed Ted out of the WCG no longer are willing to be his "dumb sheep." GTA's Church of God, International, is having significant defections to the Church of God (7th Day), the Biblical Church of God, and other Sabbatarian churches.

In a recent letter to his followers Ted dropped the price of his book Peter's Story from $14.45 to $9.95. He claimed this was being done because of a lack of storage space at the CGI's large new corporate headquarters building in Tyler. The fact is Ted is stuck with too many unsold and unsellable copies of his book. Peter's Story is admittedly a novel. Ted's fans, it seems, are more interested in learning about the Bible than in reading fiction - even if authored by the former religion superstar.

Ever since we've known GTA, we've been amazed at his knack for alienating people. Here are two letters we received from readers who've left the GTA church, along with correspondence they received from GTA himself. We think you'll find them enlightening:

"Dear Ambassador Report:

"I recently left Garner Ted's CGI organization. Around that time I sent Ted a letter explaining why I was leaving - Ted's public drunkenness and enjoying a huge salary while people were sacrificing time and money for his support. After writing that letter I left and shortly after joined the 7th-Day Church of God.

"Well, imagine my surprise when I got a letter from Ted threatening me with legal action. I don't know why he feels so endangered by what I said. I guess he wanted to scare me into submission. But everything I told him can be found in the Tuit and Robinson hooks and in the personal testimonies of former WCG and CGI members. I don't know why he threatened me unless he's just blowing off hot air.

"I read in Hinson's Broadway to Armageddon Armstrong expose that Ted and his dad would send out threatening letters to intimidate people who were fighting them over health care for children of church members (when one mate wasn't a member and another was, etc.). This letter proves that Ted is following in his father's footsteps. Like father, like son.

...People should know how vicious this man can be. We should know the truth about our so-called religious leaders so we may support men who are truthful and sincere. "

-Illinois

(Reply from GTA.)

"Mr. -----:

"Your letter sickened me and, humanly, I must admit it also made me quite angry.

"However, upon reflection, I feel I should be sad, rather than angered, for you are only hurting yourself and your wife by avidly devouring, and then swallowing wholesale, false rumors.

"I honestly do not remember exactly what the question was on the talk show to which you referred in St Louis - but I do specifically remember the exact nature of all of the 'difficulties' back in 1971-72. I also still have in my possession the original articles that appeared in Time magazine, the letters from my father, and between my father and myself. Never did one word pass between us, nor were any such 'confessions' made either privately, before the church, or before the public media back about 11 or 12 years ago.

"You seem to feel that it is incumbent upon a man of God to go about through his life continually telling people how 'guilty' he is for alleged 'sins' in the past. If this is your criterion - I hope you find some human being, somewhere, whom you can follow in good conscience.

"Your information on my salary is absolutely wrong! I take no salary from the Evangelistic Association. Your salary figures are more than $10,000 higher than my annual salary! I make no apology for my present salary, which is still less than I was promised by Stanley Rader to 'keep my mouth shut' if I would merely receive their $50,000 salary per year, say nothing to the press, or the church. My father's current salary is $563,000 per year, by the way.

"Whoever said I was seen 'staggering out of a bar' in Tyler is an unregenerate, unmitigated, deliberate liar! I would be exceedingly happy to call such a person so to his face, or, if you would care to identify the individual, and I can determine that such a statement was made in the presence of at least two persons, I will instruct my attorneys both in California and here in Tyler to institute proceedings against such an individual, or individuals, immediately.

"The allegation that 'drugs were sold' in the place is utterly ridiculous. If you, as a so-called Christian (and your letter your conclusions, your willingness to listen to rumor, swallow them wholesale and then attack someone as a result are anything but Christian), were to avoid all places where 'drugs are sold' you would never again be able to frequent any restaurants that had bars or lounges in connection, hotels, bus stations, department stores, cafeterias, or public street corners!

"I presume you buy your groceries in a modern grocery store or supermarket. What horrible connections I could make about your character by starting rumors about the fact that you and your wife trade for your groceries where 'pornography is sold'! (How scandalous!)

'Frankly, Mr. - - - - - I do not want your support.

"You do not judge me - but Almighty God IS JUDGING YOU! He is judging you every day, and He certainly judges your spirit and your attitude for willingly swallowing malicious and slanderous gossip, assuming it is true, and then deliberately attacking someone without even identifying your source!

"The only 'support' I wish is from those individuals who voluntarily have submitted their lives to Almighty God, who know that in Jesus Christ is complete and total forgiveness for all sins, past and present who are concerned about doing the work of God and utterly abhor the malicious milieu of gossip, slander false accusation posturings, vicious rumor, character assassination and evil surmisings that is the stock in trade of those individuals who give their minds over to demonic influences and satanic attitudes.

"If you intend spreading these malicious rumors any further, and I hear that you have said so orally or in writing, please regard this letter as putting you on notice that you are responsible for every word you say about the character of another individual Please do not feel you am somehow immune, for you are not."

-Garner Ted Armrstrong

Another reader wrote us:

"After receiving back copies of the Report I thought that a letter I wrote to GTA back in May 1981, and his answer to me might be of interest to your readers.... I think you will quickly see the techniques he uses to put the guilt on the other person instead of himself. I wrote that letter at the urging of our local CGI minister. Obviously he had heard that GTA was trying to get back into the WCG, too. Ironically, I had been praying fervently for God to show me the real GTA, what he was really like. I got my answer! It didn't seem to matter to him that I was trying to support the gospel on a bring-home pay of $543.00 a month [needed] to support my ill husband and myself. He just felt sorry for himself because he couldn't get along on $42,500 [a year] Incidentally, the $47,000 that I mentioned in my letter came from my minister. He had told me that because of others asking him about the $60,000 that you had written in the Report. He had asked GTA himself how much his salary was, and that is what GTA told him. I think GTA got a lot of flack about the raise and backed down on it. In no way do I think he will tell the truth about it. His attitude toward the peons that support him comes out plainly in his letter. Consequently, we no longer support him or his work."

-Texas

(Following is a letter to GTA from the above.)

"Dear Ted,

"Recently a lot has been in the papers and other publications concerning your return to

Worldwide. I have also met some WCG members at the grocery store, and they seem to think you are secretly negotiating with your father to return to their group. I realize you have denied that such is true, but you have denied things before which later turned out to be true.

"In view of that, I would like to say if you do return it will be proof that you were never sincere in saying that you established CGI because you wanted to get the gospel out to the world but in fact you did it for the glory and the power of being before the public again. What will they offer you that will cause you to swallow your pride and crawl back? Your own TV broadcasts, a huge salary again or your own plane? How long are you going to be a yo-yo on HWA's string? You ought to let them join us/you instead. Personally, I think it would be a very dumb thing to return.

"My feelings, and the feelings of the brethren that I have heard, are that you will have to go back alone. We did not follow you out and we will not follow you back. We don't have to have an Armstrong lead us! As I remember none of the apostles were called Armstrong.

"I also heard that you had given yourself another raise (the Board may have voted for it but you accepted it didn't you?). $47,000 is a very good salary for two people, since your sons are also on the payroll and you can't count them as dependents. If this were a profit-making business, I would say you deserved that much, but since it comes from monies donated for the preaching of the gospel, I think there ought to be a limit set for salaries of the ministry. Salaries ought not to be tied to increase in income to the Church. It isn't fair to raise your salaries when the income goes up while writing letters to the members telling them that the income is low. Why should I sacrifice and do without to bring up the income of the church when you turn around and take it out again by increasing your salaries? I might as well keep it for myself! We are not sending in our tithes and offerings so you can increase your salaries. One of the most effective ministers you have is not even on salary and yet his area is increasing greatly. We want the increase in income to go toward preaching the Gospel, not for higher salaries.

"I am afraid for you, Garner Ted that you are truly your father's son. You accuse us of not being removed far enough from the WCG, when it is you who has not gotten away from that type of thinking. We are not trying to build another Worldwide, or an empire for the ministry. We just want to fulfill our commission of getting the Gospel out to the world. We will do that whether you stay or leave. God is not dependent on you for that.

"On the broadcasts you spend too much time on mundane subjects that have nothing to do with the Gospel. There's too much politics. Look how much time you devoted to 'gun control,' and how little of the time on the Bible, Those comments are for news commentators, not for a minister on paid-for broadcasts. I agree with what you said, but it should not have been on the broadcasts. We've got too many politicians and news commentators already. The people who like to hear your comments on controversial subjects are not the type to become a member of the church.

"I know you hate to get this type of letter, but as long as you are a minister and in the public eye, you are going to have to get used to it. You are in the same position as any other public figure. You can't have the privacy a regular citizen has. As long as you are getting donations from the public, what you do is their business, especially as a minister. You can't have your cake and eat it too, as the saying goes. As long as I am a member of God's Church, I'm going to be a 'thorn in your side' so you might as well learn to love me. Remember, 'the wounds of a friend are better than the kisses of an enemy.'"

(Reply from GTA.)

"Dear Ms. - - - ,

"Your quotation about 'the wounds of a friend' I take very seriously. I hope you are ready to be severely wounded.

"Your first paragraph largely began by calling me a liar. I find the entire tone of your letter to be completely unchristian, and a clear violation of the principles of Jesus Christ in the sermon on the mount - smashing to bits the principles found in I Corinthians 13 where love 'believes the best.'

"Your comments concerning crawling back and having 'my own plane' are almost beneath contempt and not worthy of comment. Your comment concerning none of the apostles called 'Armstrong' is completely uncalled for, and unnecessary. I have never called myself an apostle, am utterly unable to do a thing about my name, and hereby tell you that I will not commit suicide in order to give you a moment of satisfaction.

"I don't care whether you have heard about my giving myself 'another raise' or not - what you heard is clearly wrong. All of the rest of the statements concerning your sacrificing and the redundant comments about tithes and offerings are utterly ludicrous in the light of the fact that I have not had a raise in more than two years. If and when I receive one, it will be without apology to you or others like you. Your comments on the broadcasts are rejected. For you to take issue with my comments concerning gun control in the wake of an attempted assassination of the President of the United States are trite, small-minded and utterly beside the point. Jesus Christ of Nazareth would have been criticized very severely by yourself for daring to speak about such mundane things as the weather, quaint stories, parables and analogies, accidents, or simple human affairs.

"I disagree with you entirely that I am a 'public figure.' I am not elected by the public, nor am I paid by the public. I can and will have the same privacy you have, and I insist upon it. Your comment that 'as long as you are getting donations from the public, what you do is their business' is utterly superfluous. Very few 'in the public' send money to this work. Largely, we are supported by the tithes and offerings of those who believe in the gospel of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, and believe that we are preaching the gospel as effectively as possible. If you do not believe that, I would strongly suggest you do whatever you intend doing about it, but do not delude yourself for one moment that you have cast yourself in the role of some perpetual 'thorn in my side' who may freely attack malign, condemn, persecute and criticize.

"You simply do not know what you are talking about. Your letter shows not one iota of true humility, brought about by constant closeness to God and continual prayer. Rather it shows carnal-minded leapings to conclusions, quickness to condemn eagerness to criticize, and a sardonic attitude of contemptuousness toward me personally, [that] one would expect to find among feminists, or emanating from the likes of Madeline Murray O'Hare. May the Eternal God clean up and straighten out your mind. It is people like you who make me wrestle and agonize within myself and in prayer with God over why I am doing what I am doing - why I didn't take the offer made to me of a salary which today would have been $300,000, instead of earning a salary of $42,500 (that's right!) which is still several thousand dollars less than Stanley Rader promised me merely to keep my mouth shut. Believe me, if the majority of the members and supporters of the Church of God, International felt as you do, it would be taken by myself as the clearest indication that I should have done just that.

"Inflation robs my wife and me just as it robs you. I have had only one 'cost of living increase' in the nearly three years of doing this new beginning in God's work. As a practical matter of fact, I have never had a 'raise,' since the increase did not even keep me even with inflation for that one year. Presumably, you would demand that I have a small or moderate salary, and that that salary is not increased for the next ten, fifteen or twenty years, meaning that my personal living standard that of my wife would go in an ever downward spiral until we were living at the poverty level.

"I know you would violently disagree with the sacred word of the Eternal God who says very clearly that those who labor in the word are worthy of double remuneration! But that is your problem between yourself and God, not my problem."

Garner Ted Armstrong

One can't really quibble with GTA's argument about inflation. But with regard to his remark about deserving "double remuneration," one must ask, "Double what remuneration?" Two times the minimum wage? Two times a corporation president's salary? Paul didn't say, but in his day it probably meant an extra pair of sandals and an extra basket of food a week. Actually the term "double remuneration" is GTA's own pet translation of I Tim. 5:17. The Englishman's Greek New Testament, the translators of the KJV, the RSV, the NASB, and Beck's version say an elder should be considered worthy of "double honor." Moffatt's version says "worthy of ample remuneration," while Williams' version says "elders who do their duties well should be considered as deserving twice the salary they get." However, to avoid the charge of profiting from the church, the apostle Paul labored as a tentmaker (Acts 18:3) so he would not be "chargeable" to his congregation (I Thes. 2:9; 1 Cor. 9:11-12). But be that as it may, we frankly have no gripes about GTA's salary. What we do find remarkable, however, is GTA's contemptuous attitude toward his followers.

When dealing with any statement made by Garner Ted Armstrong, we have found from experience that one has to be not only aware of his proclivities for exaggeration and intimidation but also aware of his frequent distortion of facts. For instance, take the $300,000-offer story. We've heard it before, and we don't believe a word of it. Anyone with even a rudimentary knowledge of the broadcasting industry knows that you couldn't find one broadcasting executive anywhere who, in his right mind, would offer GTA that kind of money for any extended period of time. GTA likes to fantasize he's another Dan Rather, Johnny Carson, or Paul Harvey, but deep down he also knows that any job in the secular media would deprive him of his fans - his badly needed vanity fix. Take away the Armstrong junkies from GTA and he becomes an empty shell, as pathetic as any burned-out, aging rock star or over-the-hill nightclub comic. Recall GTA's embarrassing 1976 performance on "Hee Haw" (hee haw, hee haw)?

Another example of his dishonesty: While it is evident that GTA is not a "public official" (and let us be thankful for that), he is very clearly a "public figure." What other conclusion could one come to about an individual who buys time on radio and television nationally to talk, as though an authority, on every conceivable area of human life?

Paul P. Ashley in Say It Safely, a law book dealing with libel and privacy laws, wrote (p. 83):

"A well-known college football coach accused of bribery and a retired army general who had taken prominent controversial positions regarding segregation were each found by the Supreme Court to be public figures. Other persons held to come within the rule included nonincumbent candidates for public office, a captain in a sheriff's office, the chairman of a political party, a judicial candidate, a labor leader, and a Nobel prize winner. By engaging in public discussion of controversial matters, these individuals all became 'public figures' and their ability to recover damages in a defamation action was limited by the Times rule...."

It is not difficult to understand why the courts have ruled as they have on defining what a "public figure" is. After all, those with access to the media (politicians, talk show hosts, news commentators, sports stars, TV preachers, etc.) exercise great power to influence people and have much opportunity to defend themselves against their critics (just one reason why so many privacy rulings do not apply to them). Many also have great power to raise money from the public. The law recognizes their position is different from that of the average private citizen. If Ted wanted all the privacy privileges that go with being a private citizen, he should have taken himself off radio and television.

As for GTA's claim that his contributions are not part of "the public," where does he think his contributors come from? The moon? Perhaps his nonsensical assertion is nothing more than a Freudian slip revealing an attitude. After all, "dumb sheep" aren't really fully human, are they?

As for GTA's suicide comment, neither the lady in question nor anyone else we know of has suggested he take any such action. Yet the idea of suicide has crept into GTA's correspondence and sermons more and more for at least 12 years now, and once, more than 10 years ago, he wrote a "suicide note," of which we have a copy. GTA's followers would do well to ask themselves, "What kind of man is this that we follow?"

And incidentally, Ted is still quietly trying to reestablish himself with the WCG. Just a few weeks ago, in an attempt at ingratiating himself with his father, he sent HWA a package. Tyler insiders say it contained documents that put Stan Rader in a negative light. The peace offering, however, seems to have had little effect on HWA, who still wants Ted's will broken completely before he is allowed back into the WCG's hierarchy.

Something You Can Do

We frequently receive letters from readers asking what they can do to help make the real story known about Herbert Armstrong and his organization. Frankly, we don't try to encourage people to spend excessive time or money fighting Armstrongism. Nevertheless, a little concern for others and a little effort - when intelligently directed - often goes a long way toward waking up those mesmerized by the mirage on the Armstrong desert. In our letters section this month, as in the past there are some excellent suggestions along this line. But here is a suggestion we think is particularly worthwhile.

Dave Robinson, the author of Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, recently called us with an offer concerning his book. The Robinson book is one of the most shocking, eye-opening exposes ever done on Herbert Armstrong. It is well documented with first person, eyewitness accounts. The book currently sells for $10 each when ordered directly from John Hadden publishers. But Robinson says he would like to get copies into the hands of many more people. He, therefore, is making this offer:

If readers will send him $1.50 per copy ordered (i.e., $3 for two copies), to cover postage and handling, he will send up to two copies of his book to each public or institutional library of your choice. Of course, when ordering be sure to include the correct name(s) and address(es) of the libraries you wish to receive the books.

We think this is an excellent way to help others get the whole story on HWA - and at very little cost. The address to write to is: John Hadden Publishers, P.O. Box 35982, Tulsa, OK 74135.

"Plain Truth" - or Just "Plain Trash"?

For almost five decades The Plain Truth (PT) magazine has been under Herbert Armstrong's direction. During that time, the magazine has switched from a preachy, flee-from-the-wrath-soon-to-come format to a quasi-secular, right-wing fundamentalist news commentary format with articles having heavy moralizing overtones.

But throughout all the decades one PT subject has gone essentially unaltered: Herbert's prophesied chain of events to occur before Christ's second coming. All his prophecies hinge on a new Roman Empire arising, consisting of ten nations, headed by an Italian or German nazi-fascist leader, and dominated by the Catholic church.

For 50 years his readers have waited expectantly for his awesome prophecies to come to pass, and for 50 years they have waited in vain. President Reagan is begging the American public to allow at least 2 years for his economic policies to begin working, while in contrast, Herbert has had half a century and is still telling his followers to wait longer. You can therefore imagine our surprise when we read the following in the Feb. 1982 PT:

"Since 1934... The Plain Truth, under the editorship of Herbert W. Armstrong, has announced in advance many of the major developments of our time - years in advance of their actual fulfillment. Our guide has been the pages of Bible prophecy" (p. 26).

Keith Stump, the author of that preposterous statement, apparently has overlooked these incredible prophecies made by Herbert in the PT:

- Soon after 1936 will come the heavenly signs and the day of the Lord (June-July '34, p. 5).
- The Great Tribulation started in 1929 (June-July '34, p. 4).
- Mussolini is the beast (Feb. '38, p. 3).
- France and Germany will soon form a new alliance to guarantee peace in Europe (Mar. '38, p. 6).
- Mussolini's armies will enter into Palestine and capture half of Jerusalem (Mar. '38, p. 8).
- Mussolini will emerge as the # 1 leader over Hilter (Jan. '39, p. 4).
- War leading to Christ's return may start in six weeks (Aug. '39, p. 6).
- The U.S. and Britain will soon be invaded and conquered (Nov.-Dec. '40, p. 7).
- Hitler will be the victor in the Russian invasion (Sept.-Oct. '41, p. 7).
- Plagues are coming in about 2 years. "Rabid foxes, squirrels, muskrats will attack our children" (Apr. '56, p. 22).

Imagine our amusement when we discovered that old-timer Rod Meredith had also recently insisted that Herbert's prophecies were accurate and that "throughout the war [World War II], one voice made sense out of it all.... Herbert W. Armstrong" (PT, Dec. 1980, p. 28). From the above excerpts of Herbert's prophecies, could any rational person claim Herbert's predictions "made sense"? But Meredith continues:

"Mr. Armstrong's message is unique. No one else has been used of God to unveil and preach these prophecies to the world in the way Herbert Armstrong has.... But he and he alone - backed up by this worldwide Work that God has used him to establish - has made plain the specific big events involving Britain, the United States, Western Europe, the Middle East... ."

As shown above, Herbert's predictions and great insight have been plain all right - plain garbage! But Meredith keeps right on writing without even flinching, referring to Herbert as an "obviously dedicated and balanced man of God." But if Herbert was indeed a man of God, why did God pull the plug on him, so to speak, and allow all of his major prophecies to fail? In other words, can a good tree - symbolizing a true prophet in Christ's analogy - bear "evil" fruit (Matt 7:15-23)?

Meredith proceeds to point out several examples where Herbert supposedly made accurate predictions over the last 50 years. Let's look at a few of Meredith's examples. First he says Herbert correctly foretold that Russia and China would not conquer the U.S., nor would "the Arab nations either." The Arab nations? What? They can't even defeat little Israel. But let's be honest and give credit where credit is due. Herbert is right so far. Of course Meredith conveniently forgot to remind his readers that Herbert had said in the PT that a 10-nation European power bloc under Hitler-Mussolini would conquer and destroy Britain and America in the early 1940s (Nov.-Dec. '40, pp. 2, 7; Sept.- Oct. '41, p. 7; Mar-Apr. '42, p. 11; etc.). Having already said it would be a European power bloc, obviously he couldn't turn around and say Russia and China would attack Britain and the U.S. So though (at least so far) Russia and China haven't attacked the U.S., his major prophecy about the destruction of the Anglo-Saxon people has simply failed to occur.

According to Meredith and Stump, Herbert has more successful prophecies to crow about. They say Herbert foretold that "the German nation would emerge, phoenix-like, from the ashes of defeat to become a major economic - and ultimately military - power in the Western world.... Post-war history has shown who was right!"

It wasn't Herbert!

Of course there are now two German nations, and only West Germany is a major world economic power. But neither one of them could be considered a major military power in the same league with the US., U.S.S.R., Britain, China, or France because neither Germany possesses any nuclear capability. (WCG writers always seem to overlook these "minor" points.) Even though the West German economic miracle is well-known, it was easily foreseen due to the traditional German characteristics of diligent work and a strong will to survive and due to the generous help the Germans received under the Marshall Plan. Stump and Meredith never bother to tell their readers this, nor do they mention the rest of Herbert's prophecy about the Germans. Not only did everything he said about Germany from 1934 through 1944 fail miserably, but his post-war predictions about a revived nazi-fascist Germany leading a 10-nation European power bloc that would attack and destroy Britain and the U.S. "as early as the spring of 1972" also utterly failed to materialize (PT, Oct.'58, p. 4; Feb.'62, pp. 5,7; Sept.'64, p. 20; May' 65, p. 45; June' 67, p. 2; etc.). So we see that the central core of his prediction failed even though West Germany did rise to economic prominence.

But when you get right down to it, it should have been obvious that this would happen. Why? All the major world powers except for the U.S. had been ravaged by World War II. Beginning in 1945, they all began rebuilding at the same time. Which nations would you have logically picked to become economic giants? Chile? El Salvador? Cuba? Greece? Turkey? Burma? Egypt? Poland? Liberia? Of course not. If you had much of a background in history and economics, you'd have picked France, Britain, Germany, the U.S.S.R., Japan, perhaps China, Canada, or Switzerland. So it didn't necessitate any great surprising revelation from God to cause Herbert to make a general statement that Germany would be a future major economic power. After all, Germany had a highly sophisticated intelligentsia, advanced technological and economic know-how, and a skilled labor force imbued with the Protestant work ethic - not to mention a favorable climate, access to the sea, a strategic location, and adequate natural resources.

Let's look at another HWA prophecy. Stump reports that Herbert wrote that the U.N. "never will be able to give the world any permanent world peace." How much of a "divine revelation" would it have taken to come to that conclusion? Since history shows that war is one of the commonest human experiences, even without Herbert's divine crystal ball it would have been only logical that the U.N. would fail to bring permanent world peace. In fact, that was what many U.N. critics predicted. By the Korean war, it should have been obvious to all.

The PT has, "virtually from its inception, alerted its readers to the growing importance of the Middle East, the focal point of Bible prophecy," writes Stump. The PT has been correct about this broad trend - and so have most other Christian religions that bothered to talk about prophecy. But when Herbert got into specifics about the Mideast, he prognosticated that Mussolini would capture Egypt, conquer one half of Jerusalem and fight Christ at his second coming (Jan. '39, p. 4). He said Turkey would help cause Britain's defeat in World War II but that God would cause Turkey to be wiped out (Nov.-Dec. '40, p. 2,7). In the June '67 PT (P. 2) he claimed "there will very soon be a Temple in Jerusalem...." Not one of these events occurred!

Further, Herbert didn't foresee the infighting between the Shiite and Sunni Moslems. He never predicted the present-day role of Syria, the Palestine Liberation Organization, or Libya's Qadhafi. He didn't forecast Saudi Arabia's oil wealth and worldwide influence, the role of OPEC, or Sadat's unprecedented trip to Jerusalem. So we see Herbert actually missed all the significant Mideast events and was wrong on all the major trends he claimed to foresee. So what if he "alerted" his readers to watch the Mideast?

Next Stump declares that the PT has long warned there would "eventually come a time of increasing upset weather patterns, drought of unprecedented magnitude, floods, earthquakes, and famines." What he neglects to remind his readers is that for decades the PT has spotlighted major worldwide weather calamities to prove God was unleashing his wrath against a sinful world. But the fact that the PT can point to a major weather calamity ever so often proves nothing of the kind. We challenge Stump to show us a single year since Adam and Eve when there were not several major hurricanes, droughts, famines, floods, or earthquakes somewhere in the world. The PT's shocking "Prophetic revelations" are akin to predicting that the sun will rise and set once a day and then claiming great insight for having said so.

Every year the U.S. has dozens of hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, and areas affected by drought. But for years the PT writers have appeared to be ignorant of this and have tried to prove the end of the world was near by focusing on several major weather upsets that hit the U.S. The PT gave full-color coverage to - get this now - a tornado in Jonesboro, Arkansas (July '68), hurricane Beulah (Nov. '67), floods in the northern U.S. (June '69), hurricane Camille (Oct. '69), etc. The PT would have its audience believe that these were specific weather upsets sent by God to punish Americans for their sins, but in reality major weather upsets have been occurring regularly in the U.S. and the rest of the whole world throughout recorded history.

But again Stump neglected to mention (poor research or deliberate distortion?) that Herbert's weather predictions always said that major upsets would lead to "a revolution in the weather - leading to unprecedented famine by around 1970-72" (Feb. '62, pp. 5, 7). So when Stump implies Herbert's weather predictions have been fulfilled simply by the occurrence of bad hurricanes, droughts, earthquakes, or floods, he is quoting Herbert's errant prophecies out of context. All one has to do is look at what those prophecies actually stated, and you will see they clearly have failed.

We could add several more examples of these distortions of fact that attempt to prove Herbert right, but we have shown beyond any reasonable doubt that when it comes to understanding the big events and main trends in world events, Herbert has missed the boat every time. Even major news analysts - without any alleged guidance from God - have hit the mark more often than Herbert. Yet the further off Herbert's predictions are, the more loudly the PT writers boast about his alleged successes.

Dishonesty and half-truths have no place in journalism, much less in a Christian-professing magazine purporting to be published by God's true church. Yet these characteristics have been trademarks of The Plain Truth for almost 50 years.

Another problem with the PT that we feel impelled to speak out against is the way the PT writers select certain events that seem to support their doomsday predictions and then play them up big. But when it becomes obvious that a selected event is not leading to a fulfillment of their prophecy, they omit any further mention of it so as not to shake the confidence of their tithepayers. For instance, the PT writers kept hinting that Hitler was still alive, in hiding, and might come back to lead a re-nazified German nation once again (Apr. '65, p. 7; May '65, p. 5). They kept pointing out how the Nazis went underground after World War II and were poised for a comeback soon (Mar. '62, p. 22; June '66, p. 17, etc.). Starting with the June 1966 issue and continuing through the Sept 1969 issue, the PT ran at least 7 articles about the NPD (a small German political party), hinting strongly that its success was evidence of soon-to-be-revived naziism in Germany that would once again take over Germany and destroy the U.S. and Britain. Today these issues are dead issues in the PT. Even Ambassador College news bureau researcher Werner Jebens, a German himself and an expert on naziism, thinks the church's Germany prophecies are total bunk, and he has said so to a number of people. But do you see any apologies in the PT for defaming the German people? No. In fact, HWA still teaches that Germany will destroy the U.S. and Britain in the near future. But where is the evidence?

Ambassador Report publishers Len and Margaret Zola recently returned from a business trip to Europe during which they spent considerable time in West Germany. They report: "During our stay in Germany we saw really no evidence of any kind of militaristic anti-American trends. Of course there are those who would like to see Germany become a nuclear-free zone. And many are concerned about the threat of nuclear war in Europe. But many more are staunchly pro-American. The reason is simple. U.S. presence in Germany saves that nation a great deal of money in defense expenditures and protects it from attack by the U.S.S.R. We were in Bonn, Düsseldorf, Cologne, at the University of Heidelberg, and in Bavaria. Whether talking to businessmen, professional people, students, blue-collar workers, or soldiers there was no doubt in our minds that the American presence in Germany is not only tolerated but welcomed. As for any neo-Nazi movement or massive arms buildup for an attack on the US., as HWA teaches-the idea is preposterous."

But Stump's defense of Herbert's amazing prophetic insight continues. For years the PT proclaimed that a "United Europe," consisting of a 10-nation alliance, "would yet coalesce into a single unified power." Since 1957, when the Common Market was formed, the PT proclaimed this would be the likely start of the alliance of the 10 kings of Revelation that would destroy the British and American nations by 1972 (Oct '58, p. 4; Feb. '67, p. 47, etc.). Now there are 10 Economic Community (EC) nations, but they are far from politically united, they have not destroyed the U.S., the pope is not guiding these 10 nations, and - note this - the EC ediface of unity is showing major cracks, something we bet you won't read big headlines about in the PT.

Don Cook, writing from Brussels, Belgium, for the L.A. Times, in an article titled "On 25th Birthday, EEC Finds Little to Celebrate," reports that "the European Economic Community has reached the 25th anniversary of its founding treaty beset by deadlocks, difficulties and a growing sense of political and economic atrophy - a time of hand-wringing, not bell-ringing." His gloomy assessment of the situation speaks of the EEC "being mired in the quicksands of national positions and problems that seem to make decisions impossible." He reminds his readers that Gaston Thorn, president of the EEC commission, has warned that the leaders cannot go on much longer failing to match deeds with words without sliding into "irreversible decline" toward economic protectionism and independent national policies.

If anyone doubts that The Plain Truth did indeed publish the nonsensical predictions we have quoted throughout this article, please do not write to us for copies of the originals. (We are not in the business of distributing Herbert Armstrong's literature.) Instead, write to The Plain Truth or to the Ambassador College library, asking for copies of the issues or photocopies of the articles referred to. After all, if The Plain Truth has really been as accurate as Keith Stump and Roderick Meredith claim, they should welcome your request.

Of course many who were around the WCG for the last two or three decades need no such proof. Even Garner Ted Armstrong - who, incidentally, still clings expectantly to some of his father's ill-conceived prophecies - has been forced to admit many of his father's predictions have not panned out. Here is what GTA wrote in The International News, April 1982:

"For more than 27 years, I have been shouting a warning to the nations of the world that a coming United States of Europe, led by a powerful, rearmed GERMANY is going to shock the people of the United States and the rest of the world!

"In hundreds of radio broadcasts, dozens of telecasts, many, many articles and booklets, I have continued to hammer away on the same theme.

"Two decades ago I thought the reunification of Germany, the dissolution of NATO, a rapid return to despotism and militarism in the European nations and a deep economic sickness striking the United States were much nearer than they really were.

"By 1966 I was trying to warn the peoples of God's church NOT to believe in '19-year time cycles,' and loudly proclaimed, during a Holy Day service in Bricket Wood, England, that God was perfectly able to protect His church wherever they were, rather than spiriting them away to some desert wilderness.

"From 1966 onward, I kept warning the church repeatedly NOT to 'depend on 1972.'

"The fateful month of January, 1972, came and went with absolutely nothing happening!"

But prophetic debacles are not something merely in The Plain Truth's past. In the June-July 1982 PT, there appeared this analysis of the Argentine invasion of the Falkland Islands (p. 43):

"With the forcible takeover of the Falklands [by Argentina] we may be witnessing a key turning point in the fortunes of the descendants of Joseph [Britain, to HWA] in relation to the opposing powers! We are heading into the 'time of Jacob's trouble' (Jer. 30:7)."

In a P.S. to his April 21, 1982, letter to his followers, HWA wrote (and emphasis is his):

"DON'T BE SURPRISED IF THE BRITISH FLEET IS DESTROYED IN THE NEXT FEW DAYS! Gibraltar will come next, and already is in danger."

How do HWA and the PT get away, year after year, with such inane predictions, shoddy reporting, and total distortion of the facts? One reason is that many people are too lazy to check up on Herbert's 50-year record. Another answer is found in a Hitlerian principle Herbert has obviously adopted: If you tell a big enough lie often enough, some people will believe it. And so we expect that the PT will continue touting Herbert's prophetic nonsense, and its gullible readers will continue to feel superbly educated and informed for having drunk deeply of his amazing revelations.

Herbert claim to seek for enlightenment and wisdom - plain truth. But he made up his mind 50 years ago on what the Bible prophecies meant, and he refuses to reconsider his original premises, no matter how ridiculous they are shown to be. Indeed philosopher/writer Elbert Hubbard, whom Herbert used to read regularly (see Herbert's autobiography, pp. 86-89, 1973 edition), tells both Herbert and the PT what their problem really is: "The recipe for perpetual ignorance is: Be satisfied with your opinions and content with your knowledge."

As for those who read the so-called Plain Truth, the Bible gives this advice (Deut. 18:22 RSV): "When a prophet speaks in the name of the Lord, if the word does not come to pass or come true, that is a word which the Lord has not spoken; the prophet has spoken it presumptuously, you need not be afraid of him."

Basil Wolverton's Creativity Honored

Fans of Plain Truth illustrator Basil Wolverton will be pleased to know that the June 1982 issue of Epic Illustrated ("The Marvel Magazine of Fantasy & Science-Fiction") contained an excellent article on the late artist's life and work. Accompanying the biographical article by Ron Goulart were numerous Wolverton illustrations from "Spacehawk," "Planet of Terror," "Gateway to Horror," "They Crawl by Night," "The Eye of Doom," "The End of the World," "The Brain-Bats of Venus," and other comics Mr. Wolverton created. We even noticed one end-of-the-world illustration copyrighted "Ambassador Press." The issue can be ordered from Marvel Comics, 387 Park Avenue

South, New York, NY 10016. The price is $2.50.

You Need More Money?

Ambassador College employees in Pasadena were recently astonished by the latest crackdown on their privacy. College official Ellis LaRavia sent a memo to all Pasadena faculty members and employees demanding complete information on any "outside employment" they may have. The first question stated: "Please indicate if you ever do any work (for which you are compensated in any way) other than for the Church, College, or Foundation." The memo then required the recipients to give full details as to number of hours per month, regularity of work, name of employer, etc. Another question was: "Briefly state the reasons why you must do outside work (e.g., Do you need more money, and if so, why?)."

New Groups and Groups New to Us

"In Fairview Oklahoma, four Sabbath-keeping groups met together each Sabbath during April 1982. These four groups - Church of God, International; Church of God -7th Day (Denver); Biblical Church of God; and Believer's Faith Fellowship - have ignored differences and are promoting unity, harmony, and love between the brethren. A minister from one of the groups speaks each week so all can take turns. Meetings have been so successful that these combined meetings will continue indefinitely. Members are enthusiastic and are learning more of God's way of life from each other. Brethren say it is more of an incentive to attend each week on a regular basis and enjoy the new closeness we are all experiencing with one another...."

Co-Publisher Gerringer Runs for Congress

Bob Gerringer, a co-publisher of Ambassador Report, is a candidate for the United States House of Representatives from California's 22nd Congressional District. Bob - who is a data processing manager for a large retailing chain and is married with two children - will be on the November ballot in the Pasadena-area district as a Libertarian.

The Libertarian Party (L.P.) is America's third largest, and its presidential candidate Ed Clark was on the ballot in every state and the District of Columbia in 1980. This had never before been achieved by a third party candidate. Although 2 or 3 percent of the vote is the most Bob can realistically hope for, his reasons for running are three-fold: (1) to help get voters used to seeing Libertarians on the ballot alongside the two major parties; (2) to create a greater awareness of, and hopefully acceptance for, Libertarian principles in his district through speaking engagements and media coverage; and (3) to provide a real alternative for voters since he believes the two major U.S. political parties are virtually the same. The L.P. advocates that government get out of peoples' private, personal, and economic lives. Bob proposes extensive cutbacks in government spending and a $600 billion federal budget, which is almost $300 billion less than that just passed by Congress. Interestingly, Bob's brother Steve is the L.P. Congressional candidate from central California.

Of course, Ambassador Report is no more inclined to endorse a political persuasion than a religious one. However, for those who might like to have more information about the Libertarian Party, send $1.00 to: Gerringer for Congress, 1468 Coolidge Ave., Pasadena, CA 91104. Tax deductible contributions to Bob's campaign are, of course, also accepted. (But please do not send L.P. mail to the Ambassador Report address.)

Finally, Bob says repealment of the 16th Amendment (income tax) will be a major issue in his campaign. "My feelings regarding income tax and the United States government are similar to my feelings regarding tithing and the Worldwide Church of God."

John Tuit Starts Newsletter

John Tuit, author of the Armstrong expose The Truth Shall Make You Free, is still actively distributing his book, but is concerned now with much more than just the Armstrong church. He reports that the Catholic church is currently involved in a project he believes has the potential for great evil and may have prophetic significance. Whether or not one agrees with Mr. Tuit's prophetic outlook or speculations, it is difficult not to find the subject of his research very interesting. Here is an excerpt from an article which appeared in the Asbury Park Press (New Jersey) March 12, 1982. The article was titled "Computer used to promote peace," and was written by Rose Ananthanayagam.

"SPRING LAKE - A clergyman has a plan to harness the information-gathering powers of the computer to promote world peace. Brother Austin David Carroll, a member of the Christian Brothers, plans to program a computer with 'simulation models' of how political leaders and groups think. The model will be based on information provided by international authorities in politics and the professions.

"Carroll hopes to refine the computer to the point where it will be used as a tool in mediating international or internal disputes, before they turn into wars. Like King Solomon, who asked God for wisdom over all other gifts, Carroll has faith in the power of 'good information' to lead enemies to peace. And the Roman Catholic Church has faith in Carroll's ideas.

"CARDINAL TERENCE Cooke of New York has appointed Carroll as head of the Pope John Paul II Center for Prayer and Study for Peace, St Clair and Ocean avenues.

"The computer at the center would eliminate the need for shuttle diplomacy by nimble-tongued negotiators by revealing, at the push of a button, the outcome of positions taken by opposing parties.

"It would do so by three-way satellite and television hookups with the Spring Lake center, replacing the bargaining table and touchy confrontations. Carroll believes that disputing parties of whatever ideology would negotiate better with the help of this impartial information.

"The center itself was formed only recently. Cardinal Cooke finally gave Carroll the go-ahead for the program last September after a continuing correspondence between the two that began in 1972.

"CARDINAL COOKE announced the formation of the center at a Feb. 10 United Nations concert at St Patrick's Cathedral in New York. Carroll is currently trying to decide which brand of microcomputer to order. The machines will have stand-alone capabilities, but will also be adaptable to hookups with the New York archdiocese's computer in Yonkers, as well as with leading publications and the Library of Congress, he said.

"Carroll hopes to employ what the business world calls 'the Delphi technique, with his consultants....

"And visiting consultants will be able to take terminal hookups back with them, so they can continuously update and fine-tune Carroll's 'simulation models' in light of political developments abroad, Carroll said.

"ALL INFORMATION would be quantified for processing and storage in the computer. The master computer would be housed in the basement of the white stucco mansion, once considered for use by President Nixon as the summer White House. The house is now owned by the Military Vicarate, of which Cardinal Cooke is head.

"As the centers title indicates, prayer is also part of the strategy for world peace. The Rev. Joseph Ariano, a formerly U.S. Air Force chaplain who served in Vietnam, wants to establish an international, non-denominational prayer network. The goal would be to have a prayer service for peace celebrated somewhere in the world every hour....

"First of all Carroll plans to involve the 'one percent of people who determine peace' in the world. He notes how other approaches, such as the peace centers, have had no access to real power. The center's board of advisers will include politically influential people from many countries and ideologies. Nearly all those people he has approached are enthusiastic about the idea, he said.

"CARROLL DECLINED to name any names, saying that it would put pressure on those still undecided. However, Cardinal Cooke will release a list of the 19 to 25 advisers in a few months, he said.

"Another strength of the center would be both its Catholicity and its catholicity (universality). The Roman Catholic Church, as an internationally prevalent faith, would be especially suited to administer the computer as an impartial third-party...."

Tuit believes that this project is not getting adequate media attention. (And we have not seen the story covered by any major news organization.) He is therefore putting out a newsletter on the subject called the Truth Alert. It will be published on an irregular basis, with the first issue to be mailed out very shortly. The free newsletter will be sent automatically to all those who have ordered a copy of his book. Anyone else who wishes a free copy can simply write to: The Truth Foundation, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold Township, NJ 07728.

Mindlessness

Did you ever get the feeling that many of those hooked on the WCG (and on some of the other cults) are where they are simply because they don't think. If you have, then you have become aware of a phenomenon many psychologists refer to, quite appropriately, as "mindlessness."

Psychologist and researcher Ellen J. Langer in Psychology Today (April 1982, "Automated Lives," p. 60) wrote:

"In an extensive series of continuing experiments, my colleagues and I have found that mindlessness occurs in many more situations and is much more pervasive in our lives than people realize. Indeed, it may be a fundamental aspect of human behavior. We have found that mindlessness can be self-damaging, especially in new situations to which people apply information they unknowingly had accepted in an unthinking way."

A recent ad for Fortune magazine showed a well-dressed business executive behind his desk. All was very proper, except his head was replaced by that of a woolly sheep. The caption read, "If you stick with the herd, you could end up as a lamb chop." Something to think about.

Letters

In the newsletter you mentioned HWA's impending divorce, perhaps because his wife took to wearing lipstick! In his latest Plain Truth or Good News (I am not sure which, as I quickly read and disposed of them), HWA headlined an article to the effect that "God Hates Divorce Yet He Divorced His Own Wife"! Well, this was a shockeroo to me. As I contemplated the psychological "brainwashing" behind it, I proceeded to read the article. HWA started out by comparing an "aged personage" with a "beautiful woman," and in the early paragraphs one wonders, "Oh, is HWA going to come out with a reason for a personal divorce?" Instead, the paragraphs rambled on and on with ample references to every nook and cranny of the Bible showing how God Himself (the "aged personage) had to divorce a recalcitrant Israel!

Initially I thought to myself, "How insane to even print such a ridiculous article. It is an obviously self-serving article, implying that if God could get divorced - well, there is a great apostle we know about who also must get divorced. Nothing wrong about that then. What trickery, what sham!! It sickens me to think about the docile deceived, blindly believing minds that will accept this article as a bona fide reason for HWA's divorce. (After all they can blow the dust off their Bibles and open their eyes and grasp the truth from the biblical quotations that are alluded to and know that HWA's action is the correct one.)

I would appreciate it if one of the Ambassador Report editors could critique some of the material in HWA's article and point out the fallacious, twisted references which HWA presents. I have ascertained that when HWA refers to God as an "aged personage" the notion is false! From my knowledge of God, He is timeless - He is not bound by time, so how can He be called an "aged personage"? Am I right or wrong?

-New Jersey

Editor: An even cursory study of HWA's writings and public statements reveals that he often confuses personal opinions with divine edict (i.e., "I have the mind of God!"). In his book Ego and Archetype, psychologist Edward Edinger explains that this is a common symptom of mental illness. It is also a characteristic that has been found in many of the world's most notorious pathological criminals, sex offenders, cult leaders, and political dictators.

Of course, don't so many of us wish we could be refunded the tithes and offerings given in sincerity to the Church of Armstrong that could now be used to rebuild shattered lives and help support such worthwhile functions as your newsletter and some groups listed in it.

My "brainwashing" in the "true church" began over 20 years ago while I was still in my early teens. My most formative years were dedicated and wasted to "God's Self-Appointed Apostle," as we were programmed to expect to go to Petra in 1972. Back then, we were admonished to ignore such mundane things as higher education (I was an honor graduate from school but was advised not to bother going to a university, except to apply for Ambassador College), [to ignore] establishing long-term credit or obtaining insurance, and urged to forget about marriage if the girl wasn't in the church, even if she did really love me, etc.

Such things as strict obedience to God's ministers and the giving of tithes (always before taxes) and offerings were always expounded. Sometimes the ministers would reveal "new sins" on such weighty matters as chewing bubble gum, drinking coffee, listening to Beatle records, wearing fleur-de-lis and hearts, kissing one's fiancée for longer than four seconds once a day, growing beards, as well as the old stand-bys of telling us that segregation was "God's way" and going to other churches or listening to other religious points of view were tantamount to abominations that could cost us salvation.

And "God's Church" was always facing a financial crisis.

In some ways, after years, I am still recovering from the almost total mind control the WCG tried to indoctrinate me with. I can only look back at a lost youth and young adulthood wasted financially and emotionally on a false prophet and hypocrite as well.

I can recall a special person I could have shared a lifetime with, and all was destroyed mostly through WCG influence. I remember people who died because they refused medical help out of fear. (It seems to me that would make the Armstrongs at least indirectly responsible for the deaths of some people who could have been saved - isn't that called "manslaughter" in some places?)

It's still taken me years to try to fully recover from the brainwashing techniques, the fear and paranoia, the isolation and confusion that was instilled in me at such an impressionable age. A friend of mine that went in to the WCG in the '60s has been in mental institutions because of her experience. Sometimes I wonder if my mother's untimely death at age 47 may not have been partly caused by the aggravations the WCG helped to produce in my family (my mother wasn't in the church). At the time I wouldn't listen to anyone's logic that wasn't church sanctioned.

I could go on and on, but I know you see similar stories in the hundreds of letters you must receive. And I'm still sure there is a loving Creator who knows all this and will lead us to his real truth in his own way and time.

-Virginia

We recently had a minister from Michigan visit our church area. He spoke on the matter of sins unrepented of - specifically smoking. He said he began to realize that he had been lax in not "helping" people overcome that sin, or else in telling them that if they couldn't overcome it, they could leave the church. When I read the letter from the woman who tried to take her life because the minister said he would kick her out of the church if she didn't quit smoking, I wonder if she was one of the ones he was "helping"? I thank God that my sins do not smell or have such obvious outward signs, or I would have been out long ago for sins I have trouble overcoming! More to the point, I thank God that he is not like that minister!...

We feel like the man whose letter closely followed this woman's. We can reach more people if we attend WCG services than if we don't, that is, if and when people ever seem to need reaching. We like to believe, and indeed do believe, that we are becoming more adept at handling this two-edged sword called the Word of God. Due to its sharpness, one must be careful how one waves it around people like those in the WCG. The objective is to help people open up to the world of thinking - not to cut their heads off.

The WCG recently "screwed" three sets of friends of ours - all loyal members of the church. One couple was told that the reason they weren't prospering was because they weren't tithing on the money they borrowed from the bank to live on (they are farmers). The husband of another couple - a young couple with two small boys - got polio and is now a quadriplegic. People in the church told them it happened because they didn't have faith in God, but vaccinated their children. Almost no one in the church helped them either with morale or financially, but the "worldly" people he had worked with raised $6,000 for them and did babysitting, gardening, and canning for them while they were in the hospital for over 5 months. Not only that but when the funds started running out and they applied for third tithe assistance from the WCG, they were told they couldn't have any because he had not worked for "the Work." The third couple was a D&R [divorce & remarriage] case, where his ex-wife had custody of their girl. She remarried and now wants him to relinquish parental rights to the child, so her new husband can adopt her. The mother's minister threatened to kick the old husband out of the church if he didn't do as the minister told him, which was to give up his rights. The other minister in the area backed up the first joker with these sage words, "Moses made a lot of unpopular decisions in his day, too." I guess we can be thankful that we have not yet run afoul of the system, but I doubt it would hurt us as much as it has these other people, because we know what the system really is like, and they didn't.

Oh, a thought on the whole issue of whether the church will ever get the word to flee to Petra. You say that you think not, because then Herbert's financial base will be desolate. You are thereby counting on Herbert's main and lifelong concern being financial. It may be that Herbert will at some point believe it necessary to flee to Petra, simply because he views himself as some sort of semi-divine personage. It would be a matter of credibility - perhaps akin to megalomania. In short it comes down to a question of whether his self-concept is financial or prophetic. If he sees himself as a great prophet of God, then he may feel he has to try to pull off the great escape. Is he first greedy and second paranoid? Or is he first and foremost paranoid and second greedy?

Gee, if my minister could see this now! Ah, well. We take our chances with the truth, don't we?

-Kansas

I've lost so many friends through religion - not only due to the WCG, but other religions down through the years. My husband is 82. I'm 78. The years we wasted and the money we have poured down the drain! Now we are not able to do much of anything. We are not able to help others as we wish.

-Missouri

We are just finding our way out of the Armstrong church. After serving it for 18 years, we are ready to retire with no money. ----- has given us all the old Reports from you, and I must say we never got the truth told to us in church.

-Canada

Did any of you happen (by chance) to see Herbert on his TV program when he "interviewed" Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak? I accidentally did! I was appalled at how very embarrassed Mubarak appeared to be. All Herbert did was say in a rambling way: We want peace, you want peace, the world wants peace, ad nauseam. All Mubarak did was to shake his head in agreement as this treacherous a old Armstrong handed him the check! Well rehearsed! Herbert told Mubarak that this $100,000 check was to be followed by another $100,000 each year for a total of 10 years! That this would add up to $1,000,000! This figure was repeated several times and old HWA even had the audacity to say "from me to you for peace." What a witness. A personal gift from one leader to another, or so it was made to appear. No mention of the many people who are actually going hungry to give their money to God. What a pitiful travesty. Isn't this the perfect picture of a religious cult in action? Then, Herbert asked Mubarak for a good picture to feature on "our" umpteen worldwide magazines dedicated to peace. Then some more ramblings about the way the world uses "get" when old Armstrong believes so strongly that the right way is "give"! And this very procedure goes on, no doubt for every interview he gets! Oh, oh, I shouldn't use that word - that's the way of the evil world!

I support the Church of God, International, and I know you have nothing good to say about GTA. I think he is doing the best he can with all the flak he's getting, being unfortunate enough to inherit many of his father's bad traits. I am sure he repented fully for whatever he did previous to 1975. God called me through his and his father's writings and broadcasts, and since his father fumed against him for no reason, rejecting a true minister of God, I left the WCG. Since there is no other that is proclaiming the true gospel in an effective way, I stick with GTA. His radio and TV voice is unique. (I had in former years rejected all other denominations.)

I want to keep getting your Report because I want to find out immediately if and when they (the WCG) are leaving the country. We have a life estate which they get upon our death. In the meantime, we get the interest. So in order to prevent them from drawing the principal from the bank to take with them, I want to get a court order to prevent it You probably don't have time, but if you hear they are leaving, a collect call to me would be appreciated.

-Arizona

Editor: Don't let them take away what's yours. You should consider seeing a lawyer. Other people have used the courts to turn around life estate assignments so that the WCG can't inherit what they gained through religious coercion.

ministers on the top has definitely filtered down to the lay members, as he plays around at the Feast of Tabernacles. In fact I'm not invited to his yearly vacations, as it cramps his style. He even invited our teenage daughter on one of his dates with a married California woman whose husband isn't in the church.

With the "love of God" flowing from him, he tried to run over me twice with his one-ton truck a few weeks ago and has described in detail his desire to push me off a 200-foot cliff nearby and how he would enjoy it We won't be married much longer.

Since David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web appeared, there has been much discussion in the church about the allegation that Mr. Herbert Armstrong committed incest with his daughter Dorothy. According to Garner Ted Armstrong, when he discovered in 1980 that David Robinson's book was to include the chapter on incest he called his younger sister Dorothy and told her about it. According to Garner Ted, the very first thing she said was, "Does Robinson's book mention Carole Ann?" That was the name of the child she had that died many years ago. I have been told by those in the church at the time that that poor infant had made medical history by being born with internal organs outside of her body. Though she survived infancy due to much assistance from modern medical science, she suffered from a heart condition and died at the age of 17. Mr. Herbert Armstrong at the time expressed great sorrow and referred to her as "his favorite" from the pulpit. Just the other day I ran across a picture of Carole Ann in the Nov. 1966 Plain Truth (p. 42). She bore a striking resemblance to Mr. Herbert Armstrong.

When I look closely at the Armstrong family history - Ted's incredible philandering, his wife's attempted suicide in the early 70s, Ted's two deaf-and-dumb sons, at least one of Ted's children being stillborn, Mr. Herbert Armstrong's incest the needless death of his first wife Loma from fasting, the untimely death of his eldest son Richard in an auto accident, his pending divorce from Ramona, his separation from his daughters in the sixties and seventies, his alienation from his brother Dwight his present hostility toward his son Garner Ted, and abandonment by many of his long-time friends - I can't help but suspect that this family is a family under a gigantic curse from God. I couldn't help but recall that in Exodus 20:5 God says He will visit the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation. I was intrigued by this often overlooked statement and did some further research. This statement was mentioned once again in Numbers 14:18, but God says He will remove the curse from the son in Ezekiel 18:19- 24, providing the son begin to do that which is lawful and right and keep all My statutes and turn from his sins. What is so sad is that so often innocent children suffer from the sins and perversions of their parents. But the beautiful thing is that Jesus will forgive those who turn from their wicked ways.

King David had to learn this the hard way. He committed adultery with Bathsheba and arranged to have her husband slain (II Samuel 11 & 12). David repented bitterly, but God said that the sword would never depart from his house because of this greivous sin, and the child born of his adultery died. God took his wives and gave them to David's neighbors because, as God says, "Thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun" (II Sam. 12.12).

I would like to ask you two questions: Was Dorothy's child (Carole Ann) actually Mr. Armstrong's (as a father)? The reason I ask this is that in the Nov. '66 PT Mr. Armstrong wrote. "A chain of providential circumstances climaxed in her birth." Later he called her "my little princess." Some of Garner Ted's recent private comments have made me wonder. And have you ever tried to get Dorothy's side of the incest story?

-Texas

Editor. The answer to question one is: We don't know. But we are told the tragic birth occurred some time after her marriage to Vern Mattson, to whom she is still married. The answer to the second question is: We have tried more than once, but our letters have gone unanswered. Our offer to her, nevertheless, remains the same: We will publish any statement she wishes to make.

Sometime in the future (in a few months) we ("we" includes wife) hope to publish a tithing paper that will disagree with everybody about tithing! Who's "everybody"? Armstrong, Dart, Martin, Southern Baptists, Adventists, Methodists, etc., etc. - everybody who tithes and everybody who doesn't tithe! No that's weird (Or is it spelled wierd?) Isn't it? Well, strange anyway. Would you settle for unusual?

Really, we believe our book will be the most comprehensive book ever written on tithing "since the Bible" (as HWA might write), and it will be entitled Tithing: God's Command or Man's Demand -Which?

You want people out of the cults? You talk as though the only cult was the billion-dollar rebellion from the Church of God, 7th Day by the petty pope of Pasadena. During the second century in Rome all religions were cults except the one supported by the government. The Church of Christ is a cult to me. The Methodists too started as a cult. Constantine forced the Druid religion on the Romans with another name, so Europe is enslaved with it to this day. To be free of cults people must learn the reliability of the geological timetable that man has been on earth one or two million years, and that the Bible shows itself unreliable. Then the dependent mind may go for Pyramidology as an ex-WCG, ex-Yahwehist has.

There is something beyond understanding about the human mind. This writer threw out copies of 144 Self- Contradictions of the Bible in 1963 and now wishes to have a copy. During 12 years with it I never studied it enough not to be hooked by Herbie. Four years ago Ted's behavior caused a study of Yahwehism. Then Health Research Books started a more basic search for knowledge.

Editor: Health Research Books (Box 70, Mokelumne Hill, CA 95245) has a huge catalog of rare, strange, and out-of-print books on not only health subjects but on religion and philosophy. Some of the titles are: The Bible Is an Irish Book, The Unknown Life of Christ, Was Jesus Influenced by Buddhism?, The World's Sixteen Crucified Saviors (Christianity Before Christ), etc. Many of the titles are fascinating, and probably many of the books contain valuable information. However, even though we are not theologians or historians, a quick perusal of a few of the books offered convinces us that at least some of them should be considered highly suspect as to accuracy.

My wife and I came out of the WCG about 1978 and are concerned about the many past acquaintances left behind. So we would be glad to correspond or fellowship with any who should feel the need. We do occasionally fellowship with the Church of God at Kingsport (about 25 people), most of them ex-WCG members. It's so good to be around sympathetic people who suffered with us.

For all of you out there who have been lying awake nights asking yourself the question, "What ever happened to Clyde Walters, and is there life after Ambassador College?" and for all the rest who are asking, "Who is this guy?" Here's the answer.

As we all remember, Clyde graduated from Ambassador at Pasadena in 1971. He then worked in AC data processing for two years. Then came the Big Layoff. Clyde remained unemployed for over a year, and then worked at Fedco in Pasadena for two years. Then he became a mailman, and is presently working on the Great American Screenplay in his spare time.

"Wow, what a lucky guy! But wait, that doesn't answer all our questions, such as: (1) Is he still as crazy as ever, (2) Did the jerk ever get married, (3) What about the Church, (4) Does he eat pork chops, (5) Does he have sideburns, (6) Does he watch TV on Saturdays, (7) Is he a Libertarian or a Communist, (8) And what about Amway?"

OK, OK! There's more. The answers to your questions are: (1) self-evident (2) almost-once, (3) separated, (4) to date, 3 pork chops, (5) none, (6) too busy working, (7) Middle of the Road-Easy Listening, (8) been a member since 1976, but nonpredatory.

Seriously, though, I'll get to the real reason why I'm writing. For me the Ambassador experience was overall very pleasant. The people that I met there, went to school with, and lived with in the dorms made it so. I still hold fond memories of the friendships formed there. The people were great but as time was to tell, the leadership was wrong. Contrary to what we had always been told, when the leaders were shown that they were in error, they refused to admit their mistakes and change. All those wasted years being blind and following the blind!

In the life after Ambassador it was extremely hard for me to face up to the fact that I had been so sure of something and someone and had been so wrong. I guess I tried to punish myself for being so gullible, for I became very sarcastic and more and more dependent on alcohol. Maybe I thought it was an impossible task to wade through all the tradition that surrounds Christianity, while staying out of the clutches of the religious conmen, to finally get to the answers of the basic questions of life. I was sick to death of being conned!

I can still remember sitting and drinking a six-pack by myself and thinking if I could only meet one real Christian before I die. I was so turned off! I was tired of the regular channels and all the lies. I was looking for life's answers at the bottom of a bottle- but I always came up empty. It still seems a miracle to me that I could ever quit drinking.

Fortunately in my sober moments I was reading voraciously. I think I've read some of every philosophy, discipline, religion, and sect that's been published, and oh yes, that includes every offshoot that came out of Worldwide It was all so empty and so depressing.

Only one of my many investigations panned out and that's the one I want to tell you about. The Concordant Publishing Concern of Saugus, California, was the only source claiming to be seeking the truth from the Bible that didn't get off into organization-worship, or man-following, or tithing, or law-keeping, or tradition, or positive thinking philosophy, or humanism, or fairy tales. Most of the Christian religions claim to be based on the Bible, as we all too well know, but the publications of Concordant are the only ones I've found that meet the test. By the way, in the '30s Concordant published an article titled "Refuse the Refuse" which is the best proof of the errors in British-Israelism that I've ever seen.

I found out about Concordant through Ambassador Report. Thanks! I'm glad I took the time to investigate.

*I've read most of the publications listed in the Concordant catalog, and I've found them all exceptional. The book The Problem of Evil and the booklet "The Place of Humanity in God's Purpose" are good places to start.*

But whether you contact Concordant or not keep searching in some positive way. It's worth the effort (Matt. 7:7). Shalom, Editor. The folks at Concordant told us that they have quite a few former WCG members on their mailing list. And they do offer a free introductory packet of information, which is quite interesting. Their address is: Concordant Publishing Concern, 15570 W. Knochaven Dr., Canyon Country, CA 91351.

I am a recovering alcoholic The attitudes of the WCG ministers forced me to be dishonest with myself and others about my hidden problem. After all, weren't we supposed to be perfect? WCG thinking was an enormous hindrance to seeking help, especially since it would have to come from outside the church - unthinkable. People with emotional problems can, and do, easily get caught up with alcohol. I can give this advise to those who feel trapped by a drinking problem:

1) Recognize the problem exists and be honest with yourself.

2) Chuck the moral intimidation and condemnation felt in the WCG.

3) Seek help through Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) and, if necessary, a treatment facility.

If you don't know where to get started, look in the phone book under AA's listing. Too frightened? We all were, but sobriety is worth it.

-Minnesota

Editor. Alcohol abuse is not a problem unique to the WCG, nor does the WCG really condone it (for instance, the May 1982, issue of The Plain Truth devoted considerable space to the subject, and some of the articles were really excellent). Nevertheless, a number of WCG doctrines, the conduct of some top ministers, and the general cult environment of the WCG pushes many into alcohol addiction of one type or another. The problem is common to many current and former WCG members.

If you are one of those with an alcohol problem, you may wish to contact one of the many alcohol abuse organizations listed in your phone book. Not only are there private organizations such as AA offering help, but many city and county governments have free, medically sound, assistance programs. If you yourself do not have a problem, but have friends or relatives who have an alcohol problem, you may wish to contact Al-Anon Family Groups (P.O. Box 182, Madison Square Station, New York, NY 10159). They have a number of excellent pamphlets on the subject and a national advisory program for friends and relatives of alcoholics.

I presented a large supermarket with a copy of Ambassador Report and they immediately removed their free display rack for The Plain Truth. Hopefully, other ex-church members will come forward with ideas to get the attention of the Armstrong cult and bring them to their senses.

-Arkansas

Received your March 31 Report which was very informative. The letter from an AR reader in Nebraska confirmed my suspicions on the WCG's modus operandi for Plain Truth distribution and placing HWA's books in local libraries around the world. WCG members are supplying the addresses of all public waiting-room-type establishments in their local areas for free PT subscriptions to those establishments and are placing HWA's books in local libraries.

As I read this letter, the puzzle came together. Over a period of the last several months I have noticed the PT in the barber shop, dentist's office, hospital lobby, courthouse lobby, doctor's office, and library. This struck me as odd since my ex-wife was the only WCG member in our small town. Now I understand why my wife was copying addresses from the local Chamber of Commerce directory. Inquiries at the barbershop, dentist office and library indicate that the PT "just started coming in the mail."

AR readers can really do service to the world by pointing out to establishments getting the PT exactly what it represents and encourage them to request the subscription be stopped.

-Mississippi

One of the letters you printed last issue mentioned how Plain Truth magazines were being foisted off on the public in Nebraska via the Omaha library. Here in Texas, it's much worse! You see PT magazines everywhere. In dentist waiting rooms, barber shops, and in self-serve news racks on the street and at airports. It's very depressing. At first I tried talking to those allowing the displays, racks, or free issues. But then I got a better idea.

Now if I see a PT rack, I simply "borrow" a bunch (after all, they are offered free to the public). But I don't discard them. I take them home and in very small but legible print I write within the issue something like: "For the plain truth about The Plain Truth and Herbert Armstrong write to Ambassador Report P.O. Box 4068, Pasadena, CA 91106. Send $5.00 and ask for a couple of sample copies. It will open your eyes!" I write something like that in each issue, but on a different page in each. I don't want the WCG to be able to find my special issues too easily. I then take the magazines and put them back in the street racks or whatever. Sometimes I forget to mention the $5.00. I hope you don't mind.

-Texas

Editor No we don't mind at all. In fact we send out hundreds of free copies of the AR with each printing. Thanks for telling us of your hobby. It explains some of the strange mail we've been getting.

A friend recently gave us a copy of the December 31 Ambassador Report. Naturally, while a minister of the WCG, I always considered AR a scandalous rag. Since resigning from employment with WCG in June 1979, however, my perspective has changed considerably. I would like to have you send "the rag" on a regular basis. I fully understand why you fellows and gals began this endeavor and feel a good deal like you seem to in wanting to make amends for having encouraged and perhaps entrenched a few souls in the HWA cult. It is gratifying to see that so many have been able to find their way out of the religious maze that HWA has erected. Our hope is that many more will be able to escape as well.

LATE NEWS

Attorneys for Ramona Armstrong have filed a response to HWA's April 16 petition for dissolution of marriage. The papers filed in Pima County Superior Court (Arizona) contain a number of points of interest. We quote:

"As to the allegations contained in Paragraph 6 of the Petition [by HWA], Respondent [Ramona] specifically alleges that the Respondent believes that the marriage is not irretrievably broken and that there is a reasonable probability of reconciliation.

"As and for her separate and affirmative defense, Respondent [Ramona] alleges that she is morally and personally opposed to divorce or dissolution in any form; that these moral beliefs were commonly held by both parties prior to the marriage with the Petitioner [HWA]. Further that Petitioner and Respondent discussed and agreed between themselves that they would not thereafter petition for dissolution.

"As and for her further allegation, Respondent alleges that she is without sufficient funds to support herself and to employ counsel in the prosecution of this litigation, and that the Petitioner is physically and economically capable and earns more than sufficient income with which to pay for Respondent's temporary spousal maintenance, attorney's fees and costs and expenses of this litigation."

In her counterpetition, Ramona alleges that Herbert "has refused to cohabit with" her and "has refused to converse on a personal or direct basis." She alleges that she was employed by the WCG from 1962 onward, but that HWA was responsible for her termination in December 1981. She claims HWA:

"...has effectively terminated her employability and restrained and prohibited future earning capacity with her employer Worldwide Church of God and others by virtue of his acts.

"That Petitioner has denied and prohibited Respondent from claiming or collecting any unemployment benefits under the laws of any State, and from claiming or collection of any termination benefits, pension or retirement benefits, as a result of her termination.

"That as a result of the acts and instructions of Petitioner from corporations, organizations and businesses that he has absolute control over and the resultant termination of employment of the Petitioner in December 1981, Respondent has no income since that time and is unable to support herself; that as a result thereof, it is necessary that Petitioner pay temporary spousal maintenance for purposes of preservation of assets, payment of living expenses and bills, etc. in a sum of not less than $8,000.00 per month."

In a "Stipulation and Order" by the court, filed June 24, Ramona was granted $1,800 per month "for partial temporary spousal maintenance," in addition to (maximum) payments of:

$785.00 per month for house payments
$200.00 per month for residence upkeep

$250.00 per month for yard work
$166.67 per month for house insurance and taxes
$450.00 per month for water, electricity, and gas
$75.00 per month for telephone
$20.00 per month for garbage pickup
$589.00 per month for leasing a Mercedes SL 450 automobile
$200.00 per month for auto insurance on the Mercedes
$25.00 per month for license plates for the Mercedes
$90.00 per month for the boarding of three horses
$125.00 per month for insurance on selected items of jewelry (she had requested $889.25 per month or $10,671 per year "Insurance on Jewelry and Furs.")
$8.00 per month for storage of jewelry and furs
$300.00 per month for travel and entertainment expenses
$10,000.00 for attorney's fees

No wonder HWA has told friends he fears his divorce may cost him everything he owns.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR 21 September 30, 1982

Herbert and Ramona Battle It Out

In our last newsletter, we reported that Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), president of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), had filed for dissolution of his marriage. That divorce action against his wife Ramona is rapidly becoming one of Tucson, Arizona's biggest lawsuits as both sides engage in a mammoth paper war. Allegations continue to pour out from both sides, with Ramona refusing to answer many questions and Herbert's lawyers claiming he is too senile and sick to appear in Arizona to answer questions. But by brandishing copies of WCG publications showing HWA's recent worldwide travels and lengthy speeches, Ramona's attorneys (she is represented by the firm of Ettinger and Deckter, not by Stanley Rader, as some are alleging) were able to convince Judge Lillian Fisher that HWA is indeed well enough to appear. He has been ordered to give a deposition even if a physician's presence is needed, and a hearing to set a trial date is scheduled for Nov. 8.

In the meantime, in a separate action, WCG attorneys have filed a suit against Ramona in the U.S. district court in Tucson (Pasadena Star-News, Sept. 3, 1982). They allege she has over $400,000 worth of church property in her possession that she refuses to return. The property, they claim, is owned by the church and was intended solely to furnish HWA's Tucson residence. (Another one of those little special benefits HWA gives himself above salary.) Church attorneys freely admit the furnishings in question are not those of HWA's Pasadena residence (it is separately furnished, also by the church), nor does the property include the Tucson home itself or personal items such as over $490,000 worth of jewelry HWA has admitted he's given her.

Now, just as we go to press, we have learned that Ramona has retaliated by filing a countersuit in Los Angeles Superior Court against HWA, plus church lawyer Ralph Helge and Armstrong aides Ellis LaRavia, Joe Tkach, Aaron Dean, Kevin Dean, Leroy Neff, Larry Neff, Robert Seelig, and several Armstrong religious corporations. Ramona has charged the defendants with breach of a marriage-employment contract, fraud, and loss of a guaranteed $50,000 annual income and survivor's benefits. Besides restitution, she is asking $6 million in punitive damages. HWA was served the papers on the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur). That day, before his Pasadena congregation, he declared that "God's church" is now facing one of its greatest crises ever.

Ramona's countersuit makes interesting reading. For instance, she alleges that HWA and other defendants asked her to become HWA's secretary and traveling companion in 1974. (Some readers may recall that on page 96 of William Hinson's 1977 book, Broadway to Armageddon, ex-WCG official Al Carrozzo was quoted as saying: "Yes, it is true that Herbert Armstrong got a girl pregnant. She was sent to Arizona in a type of exile. This is the same woman Herbert Armstrong was going to marry.") Shortly after becoming his traveling companion, Ramona claims, HWA and other defendants asked her to marry HWA as part of a plan to bolster HWA's image. She refused on the grounds of their great age difference - he was about 83 and she about 35. But, she says, the defendants "persisted in their efforts which they fortified with inducements of purported lifetime financial and other benefits if she would relent."

In her countersuit Ramona alleges that HWA has created the numerous religious organizations he heads as shields for his personal assets. She alleges that those corporations are "alter egos of Armstrong" and that he has full personal control of them and uses them to hide his assets from the public and from her. She further alleges that the eight individual co-defendants listed have conspired in a power struggle to gain control of those assets when Armstrong dies, and in doing so have deprived her of her contractual benefits. She says they were able to do this by "deceitfully persuading" HWA that others - including herself, HWA's son Ted, and lawyer Stan Rader - were planning to "seize power" from him. But the sweeping allegations found in her suit and the claim that HWA had once agreed to leave her his "entire estate" upon his death have led some church members to fear that perhaps Ramona and certain associates are indeed trying to seize control of major portions of the WCG's assets.

And then there are those church members who naively wonder why Herbert and Ramona do not simply get together and apply the marriage-saving advice found in "When the Kissing Begins to Stop...", an article in the Sept.-Oct. issue of Armstrong's own Plain Truth magazine. Oh well.

"Apostle Kinky" Meets Maggie

In our last issue we reported that Herbert Armstrong was to meet this summer with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher ("Maggie" to some in the British press). A number of our readers attempted to inform the British government of the possible embarrassing

Armstrong, who controls his church's income of over £50 million a year, has been accused of taking millions for himself.

He has a private let nicknamed The Flying Whorehouse and is said to take part in various perversions.

His meeting with Mrs. Thatcher went ahead despite warnings to British Government officials from U.S.-based former members of the church.

As he flew home to his headquarters in Pasadena, California, former sect members lashed the decision to let him into No. 10.

"We were numb with disbelief" said David Robinson, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, who once held a post in the church.

"Armstrong virtually bought himself audiences with the British Prime Minister and the heir to the throne.

Another ex-member, John Tuit, who has written a book about Armstrong, said: "He's a fraud. I contacted the British embassy in Washington to warn them.

"He has stolen funds meant for the propagation of the Gospel.

CONMAN

He buys air time on radio stations throughout the U.S and brings in a fortune from donations. This meeting with Margaret Thatcher is going to send his donations through the roof."

And Professor Joseph Hopkins, of Westminster College, Pennsylvania, who has studied the church's affairs said: "I'm surprised Mrs Thatcher fell for him. He's nothing more than a conman."

A Downing Street spokesman insisted: "The audience with the Prime Minister lasted only a few minutes. It wouldn't have been granted if he hadn't been a benefactor."

And a Buckingham Palace spokesman added: "Prince Charles met a number of people at the Royal Opera benefit concert at the Festival Hall. He probably wouldn't have known who Mr. Armstrong was."

The money Armstrong gave to help the Opera House came from his followers, who have to pay a tenth of their salaries into the church.

In Britain alone, the organisation pulled in more than £1½ million last year from donations and legacies.

Of that £1,150,000 went out again in operating costs, according to figures lodged with the Charities Commission.

American lawyer Jack Kessler, who audited the church's books, claimed he knew of "a catalogue of abuses" of funds.

These included Armstrong flying to Rumania for sex therapy lessons and taking his jet to London to buy a sex toy.

News of the World, August 8, 1982

Anguish of brother in kinky man's sect

A FORMER member of a bizarre religious cult has told how his brother committed suicide after joining the Worldwide Church of God.

Michael Keane blew his brains out with a shotgun just months after being baptised by the American-based sect.

"He was under tremendous pressure from the church," said 32-year-old Brian Keane, of Watford, Herts.

"He was having problems trying to follow the strict rules."

Mr Keane claimed another cult disciple killed herself and three others made tragic suicide bids.

"One tried to do it by cutting off his manhood," he said.

" Luckily he was saved - but he has since left the sect."

Dictator

Last week we disclosed that sect chief Herbert Armstrong, 89, had "bought" introductions to Prince Charles and Premier Margaret Thatcher by making a £106,000 gift to the Royal Opera House.

Mr Keane, a member of the church for 13 years, claimed Armstrong was a dictator to the followers.

"He told members they would die in the Biblical Lake of Fire if they divorced, married anyone with an age difference of more than four years, received medication or gave their children birthday presents," he added.

A doctor has revealed that another woman member of the sect died of heart failure because she obeyed the cult's ban on medical care.

Yet Armstrong was receiving expensive treatment for the same condition.

Dr Gordon Muir now practising in the U.S., said: "Eventually I tried a last minute effort to save her. But it was too late.

"I was incensed to discover later Mr Armstrong was being treated with the same drugs."

Plain Truth Expands, Church Grows

Many of the world's largest-circulation newspapers and magazines have done devastating exposes on HWA and his corporations, but that doesn't seem to faze his followers. The WCG's own newspaper, The Worldwide News, announced in its Sept 13 issue that the church's evangelistic magazine The Plain Truth now has a circulation of 5,130,000 (of that total 2,117,172 were newsstand copies).

With The Plain Truth's circulation growing so rapidly, it comes as no surprise that the WCG's membership is also growing. Writing in the August 6, 1982 issue of Christianity Today, Joseph Hopkins reports that WCG membership is growing at the rate of 1,000 new members a year. In the last two-and-a-half years, ninety-five new congregations have been added, with total WCG membership now at 70,680. Non-member contributors number 144,000, with a claimed 100,000 "new people" writing in per month.

The same article reports that the rival Church of God, International (founded by HWA's son Garner Ted Armstrong) is shrinking in both membership and income. HWA has been telling associates he wants GTA to return to the WCG, and that with so many defectors from Ted's organization, he is confident it is only a matter of time before Ted "comes to his senses" and returns.

Petra Update

HWA's July 16 letter to WCG members and co-workers contained this comment (emphasis his):

"Incidentally, I know many of you seem to have your hearts set on going very soon to Petra as 'the place of safety' during the soon-coming Great Tribulation. Well, GET YOUR MINDS OFF PETRA. Brethren, I HAVE NEVER said that Petra definitely is the place of protection where God will take us. I HOPE IT IS NOT! One reason it could be the place is that it is a place NOBODY ELSE WOULD WANT TO GO. It would be the most UNpleasant, UNcomfortable, miserable place you could go! There is nothing to be desired there. But, just in case, God HAS miraculously given me very gracious favor in the eyes of King Hussein and also his brother, the Crown Prince. They are very friendly to me personally. And through the Ambassador Foundation, I am keeping up a very close assistance and cooperation with a Jordan school for retarded children, a project carried on by Princess Sarvath, wife of the Crown Prince - even to the extent of planning to send some trained Ambassador College personnel to be stationed there to help train teachers for this school, and otherwise help expand its operations. It is a very worthy cause, and the King and the people of Jordan do appreciate what we are doing to cooperate with them in this."

Still Pro-Israel

In the last few years HWA has gotten the WCG involved in projects in Egypt, Iraq, and now Jordan. Yet it is quite clear that, in terms of the Jew-Arab conflict, the Armstrong organization remains decidedly pro-Israeli in outlook.

In the August 30 issue of The Worldwide News (p. 3), Ambassador College news bureau chief Gene Hogberg lamented the U.S. press's supposedly anti-Israeli coverage of Israel's recent invasion of Lebanon and the latest breakdown in U.S.-Israeli relations. Perhaps his lament results from reality again having a way of going contrary to Herbert Armstrong's prophecies. In the end time (this is the end time, Herbert declares), HWA's prophecies call for the U.S. and Britain (Manasseh and Ephraim to HWA) to be allied with Israel (Judah), not allied with the rest of the world against the Jewish state.

In that article/commentary, after a quote from the Economist (which quoted Deuteronomy "Thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor show mercy unto them"), Hogberg writes:

"Finish the job

"Yes, the 'Christian' Western world, largely ignoring the history, examples and admonitions of the Old Testament, influenced by the teachings of the great false church and infected with worldly humanistic concepts, cannot fathom the depth of the no-compromise struggle that the state of Israel is engaged in with a foe that vows to fight on despite its setback in Lebanon."

The mid-September massacre of hundreds of unarmed men, women and children in Israeli-occupied Beirut by right-wing militiamen (like Hogberg, also professing "Christians") should give encouragement to Hogberg. After all, there are still plenty of people in the world who think just like he does, and if given half a chance would like nothing better than to "finish the job."

One final comment on Hogberg. Remember Herbert Armstrong's ill-fated prophecies about the Falkland Islands (see our June 30, 1982, issue, p. 9) and Hogberg's recent Plain Truth statement that Britain was "heading into the time of Jacob's trouble"? Well, in another flip flop, Hogberg writes (WN, July 5, p. 2): "One day the British will discover that God quite possibly gave them this victory [in the Falkland war], because he has a work to do in modern day Ephraim [Britain]...."

What Happened to Stan Rader?

We continue to receive requests for information about Stan Rader, whose reputation among many WCG members seems to remain untarnished. Very briefly, from knowledgeable sources we have learned that Rader is living in semiretirement in Pasadena. He has no executive or administrative responsibilities for the WCG, Ambassador College, or the AICF. He is now classified as a "nonactive" member ("he doesn't attend"). In our March 31, 1981, issue we reported how Herbert Armstrong had given Rader a net $250,000 bonus for special services to the church. The Aug. 6, 1982 issue of Christianity Today reported that that bonus was actually $750,000 before taxes, and that Rader continues to receive a salary of over $200,000 per year. While Herbert Armstrong currently avails himself of Rader's services little (if at all), Rader receives his salary in return for his remaining a "consultant" to HWA. Said one friend, "These days Mr. Rader is playing a lot of tennis."

AICF Rolls On

While Stan Rader relaxes in the California sun, enjoying the good life, the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation (AICF), which he started, continues under the direction of Ellis LaRavia, formerly head of the gardeners at Ambassador College. The AICF has announced its talent lineup for the 1982-83 concert season. The new schedule includes appearances by some of the world's greatest orchestras, ballet troupes, and opera companies. Roger Wagner, James Galway, Andres Segovia, Janet Baker, Leontyne Price, and Andre Watts are just a few of the famous artists scheduled. Among the "pop" artists who will appear in "God's House" are Victor Borge, Marcel Marceau, Peter Nero, Henry Mancini, Benny Goodman, the Vienna Choir Boys, and the Newport Jazz Festival All-Stars.

Steve Allen on Cults

In past issues we have recommended a number of books on the subject of cults, mind control, and deprogramming. We have now come across another book that we believe could be of real help to many. It is by writer-entertainer Steve Allen and is entitled Beloved Son ($12.95 hardback, published by Bobbs-Merrill).

Mr. Allen's son Brian is a leading member of a religious communal group called Love Israel. In Beloved Son Mr. Allen details Brian's involvement with that cult and the ongoing father-son relationship he has maintained. It is a well-written, often entertaining, thought-provoking account of a very personal part of the entertainer's life.

There are excellent analyses of a number of major theological-philosophical problems, as well as chapters devoted to some of the more colorful of today's religious movements. Most significant, however, the author clearly shows the importance of keeping lines of communication open when a loved one joins a cult. We highly recommend this book to anyone who has had a friend or relative join the WCG or any other difficult-to-understand religious movement.

Cults in the News and in the Movies

Religious cults are more and more coming under the scrutiny of the government and the press. Reverend Sun Myung Moon, head of the Unification Church, was recently convicted in New York of tax fraud. And cults in general are getting so much attention that, according to Stanley Cath, professor of psychiatry at Tufts University, cults are more and more "going underground" - trying to get out of the limelight and establish a formal organization" (U.S. News & World Report, July 5, 1982).

There is now even a feature film devoted to the cult phenomenon. It is entitled "Split Image." Directed by Ted Kotcheff, with an excellent cast, starring Michael O'Keefe, Karen Allen, Brian Dennehy, and Peter Fonda, the script by Scott Spencer deals with a young man's cult programming and eventual deprogramming. Some Ambassador College alumni who have seen it say it has some significant parallels to their own experiences with Armstrongism.

Musical Chairs Anyone?

Herbert Armstrong continues his practice of keeping subordinates off balance by playing executive musical chairs. The deputy chancellor of Ambassador's Big Sandy campus, Leon Walker, has been replaced by Leslie McCullough, one-time Big Sandy deputy chancellor and, of late, pastor of the WCG's Cincinnati congregations. Walker, who will now devote more time to the church's Spanish-language work, ostensibly asked for the demotion for health reasons (The Worldwide News, August 16).

Other recent Armstrong reassignments include Big Sandy dean of faculty Donald Ward and evangelist Ron Kelly, both shuffled to teaching jobs in Pasadena. Dr. Ward's position will now be filled by San Francisco minister Larry Salyer. Evangelist Burk McNair has been transferred out of Houston to pastor the Big Sandy and Tyler congregations. Long-time Big Sandy campus employee Buck Hammer has been retired, apparently for being a Hammer. (He is the brother-in-law of Garner Ted Armstrong and David Antion, both of whom left the WCG.) And Ambassador journalism instructor John Robinson has been terminated for being the son of anti-WCG author David Robinson. John is now teaching journalism at a state college in Tyler, Texas.

Tidbits

The July 5 issue of The Worldwide News announced that the liquidation of Quest/81 magazine has finally been completed. The publication of that magazine was finally terminated and its subscription liabilities met by subscription transfers to other magazines.

* * *

According to Joseph Hopkins, writing in the August 6 issue of Christianity Today, the men on HWA's council of elders each receive yearly salaries of between $60,000 and $100,000 per year. That figure is exclusive of numerous special financial benefits they also receive.

* * *

The mid-October issue (#62) of Cornerstone magazine will contain an article on the WCG written by Eric Pement. Mr. Pement told us that Ambassador Report readers, who would like a free copy of that issue, may obtain one by writing to: Cornerstone, 4707 N. Malden, Chicago, IL 60640.

* * *

As we predicted in our March 30 newsletter, Jack Kessler's threats against the WCG's leadership have come to nothing. No legal action has yet been initiated by Kessler, nor have his allegations resulted in any new governmental investigations of his former employers.

* * *

Herbert Armstrong is learning that it is one thing to declare a new doctrine and quite another for it to be accepted by the women in the WCG. Some Pasadena members complain that there is wholesale disobedience to HWA's no makeup decree, with "painted-up wives of many top ministers leading the pack."

* * *

Evangelist Roderick Meredith, often named as a likely successor to Herbert Armstrong, appears to have again fallen out of favor with the head of his church. Friends say Armstrong has become aware of Meredith's recent disenchantment with his worldly life-style and personal morals. Not surprisingly, HWA has not granted Meredith the position of authority some church members feel he deserves.

Instead, HWA has delegated more and more responsibility to evangelist Ellis LaRavia, who is now being referred to as a possible successor to HWA. LaRavia has expanded his influence by controlling the physical plant at Pasadena, by controlling all of AICF, by becoming the church's spokesman (official press secretary), and by having certain employees loyal to him installed in key positions at Big Sandy. LaRavia travels regularly with HWA, thus increasing his visibility. Said one insider, "Ellis seems to think he can run the organization better than Mr. Armstrong. He should definitely be watched."

Garner Ted Armstrong's Church of God, International (P.O. Box 2525, Tyler, TX 75710) recently published a new booklet by Ronald Dart entitled The Christian Woman. It contains an excellent rebuttal to Herbert Armstrong's latest anti-makeup doctrine. The booklet's cover photo is of the late Loma D. Armstrong.

* * *

Hillel Chodos, one of the key lawyers for the California attorney general in the state's 1979 lawsuit against the WCG, was again in the headlines recently. He has been representing the wealthy Bloomingdale family in the lawsuit filed against it by Vicki Morgan, mistress (at $18,000 per month) to the late Alfred Bloomingdale, one of Ronald Reagan's advisors and, according to Morgan, a sex pervert who enjoyed beating women.

Laurence H. Tribe, the famous lawyer who represented the WCG before the U.S. Supreme Court during the California vs. WCG suit, has also been in the news. He has been representing Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the Korean cult leader whose followers believe he is the Messiah.

* * *

While teaching at Ambassador College and writing for WCG publications, Lester Grabbe was not only able to earn an accredited doctorate in theology, but had many articles published in respected (non-WCG) theological journals. In spite of this, he was terminated from his Ambassador College positions, apparently for being viewed as "too intellectual," and a potential "liberal." Since then he has been added to the faculty of the University of Hull in England, where he will lecture on the Old Testament. Tragically, Ambassador College students have again been denied a qualified and respected professor because of internal politics.

Former WCG ministers Ben Chapman and David Antion have resigned from the doctrinal committee of the Church of God, International because of busy schedules. Antion, besides doing marriage counseling, pastoring a congregation, and working on a Ph.D. in educational psychology, is continuing with a lawsuit against the WCG. His wife, Molly, has a successful beauty consulting business, while their son, Steven, has returned to UCLA after a year of study in England. Steven is a pre-law history major.

Antion's Arcadia, California, congregation recently sponsored a successful series of lectures for the general public on the subject of "coping with single life." Antion has also authored two successful cassette tape programs entitled "Communication: Key to Sexual Fulfillment in Marriage," and "I'm an OK Person." Those who would like information on these excellent programs may write to: Dave Antion, 311 Waverly Drive, Pasadena, CA 91105.

Former WCG minister Bill Moore (see the letter section of our Dec. 31, 1981 issue), through his company "Windward Productions" and in association with United Cable Television in the Omaha, Nebraska area, is producing a weekly television program called "Innovative Living." Bill wrote us saying he'd like to hear from AR readers who have an interest in "alternate energy, which includes everything from aquaculture to zonolite, and especially electric cars, earth homes, homesteading, solar greenhouses, alcohol fuels, solar collectors, etc." He says he would appreciate news clippings, articles, publications, as well as names, addresses, and phone numbers of people involved in such projects. Bill's address is: "Innovative Living," P.O. Box 14414, Omaha, NE 68124.

Letters

I am compiling a catalogue of ex-WCG members' names, phone numbers, and addresses for the purpose of providing a pen-friends/fellowship bureau. We, all of us, at times think: "I wonder what ever happened to old so-and-so." Now is your opportunity to find out! Would readers of the AR, here in Great Britain, please send a stamped self-addressed envelope, together with any personal information they care to send me and the dates they were interred in the WCG, etc.? The catalogue will be sent out in approximately one to two months (depending upon the response). So write soon. (Replies from those now in U. S.A., Australia, New Zealand, etc. are welcome, too.) Write to: Peter Griffiths, 6 Congmore Road, Shirley, Solihull, B90 3DY England. Telephone. 021-779-2723 or 021-745-6613.

I sometimes wish Ambassador Report would be a bit more discriminating as to which religious groups it mentions. I was disappointed to see your uncritical review of one particular publication which, quite frankly, contains much theological error right out of Herbert Armstrong's teachings. If you had read it carefully, you would have discovered that, like Armstrong, its author is convinced Europe will be the "Beast" of Revelation and that the symbolic "woman" of Revelation is the Catholic church. That author is not alone in this error, as most fundamentalist Protestant denominations seem to believe this too. Many groups point to the seven mountains mentioned in Rev. 17:9 as proof that Revelation is talking about Rome because that city was founded on, or among, seven hills. What is often overlooked, however, is that many other cities are associated with seven hills. Among those are Athens, Istanbul, Jerusalem, and even Cincinnati, Ohio! In the days of Martin Luther, Catholic theologian Peter Bungus wrote a 700-page hook "proving" that the 666 of Revelation was equal to the name Martin Luther. Luther, in turn, interpreted 666 as a forecast of the duration of the Papal regime and rejoiced in his erroneous assumption that it was soon to end. Erroneous theories, such as these, have multiplied ever since.

But what does the Bible really say? Rev. 17:18 identifies the symbolic woman as "a great city." Which one? Not Rome, but Jerusalem! Compare Rev. 14:8 with Rev. 11:8, and see Daniel 11:45. It makes it very clear.

Let me also draw your attention to the August 23 issue of U.S. News & World Report. That respected magazine reported that the Italian government is investigating the Vatican's financial dealings (there is no Petris law in Italy), the Italian government is considering major changes in the 1929 treaty on Italian-Vatican relations, and the Vatican has a $29 million deficit (one publication said it is near bankruptcy). Then there is the growing chasm between Catholic conservatives and liberals, which many experts believe will destroy what's left of that church. U.S. News even mentioned that 1,800 Vatican employees are seeking larger pay hikes and are threatening to strike.

I think you owe it to your readers to bring out these facts. Instead of mentioning so many groups which are following in Herbie's footsteps, I wish you'd mention the Foundation for Biblical Research (P. O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102). Their newsletter for September had an excellent article entitled "The Counterfeit Ten Nations." Those who are keeping their eyes on Europe, Rome, and the Pope might be surprised at how much they could learn from it.

-Washington

Editor. We have mentioned the FBR in the past, and we have found many of their articles absolutely first-rate. For instance, Ken Fischer's article "My Quest for the Truth," and Ernest Martin's article "Which is the Best Christian Denomination?" in the August Commentator were two of the most thought-provoking we've read in a long time.

Nevertheless, we do think our policy of mentioning many groups is a wise one. While many of our readers are interested in theological matters, Ambassador Report is not a theological journal. Nor do we consider ourselves theologians. That being the case, we feel it best that readers should have access to many points of view, and not just those of one religious group or those of just the publishers of the Report. After all, "he who states his case first seems right; until the other comes and examines him (Prov. 18:17, RSV).

Herbert Armstrong continues to preach that if you send him your tithes God will bless you. Yet until you come out of his organization, you may not realize that these blessings have not materialized as he promised. On the other hand, I know many who have left the WCG that have been financially blessed. In my own case, my income has nearly doubled since leaving. I am currently involved in the distribution of health and physical fitness products, and I am looking for people that can help me expand my business nationally (no monetary investment required). If any of your readers are interested they can write to me for information. My address is: Health & Wealth Associates, P. O. Box 3789, Greensburg, PA 75607.

-Robert Kuhns

After reading the last issue of Ambassador Report, I thought you might be interested in this example of Mr. Armstrong not always telling "the plain truth." I am referring to Herbert's claim in his booklet United States & Britain in Prophecy that there is a notice beside the Coronation Stone in Westminster Abbey which labels it "Jacob's Pillar Stone." I was suspicious about this claim as one would think such important evidence would not be illegible.

About 10 years ago now I wrote to Westminster Abbey to inquire if such a notice existed. I am enclosing a copy of the reply from the Keeper of Muniments. I sent a copy of this letter to Ambassador College and asked them to please explain. Ten years later I am still waiting for a reply. I have noticed that the lie is still being perpetuated in the new edition.

-Australia

Editor. The following is the letter referred to above.

Dear Madam,

Thank you for your letter of 24th July about the Coronation Stone.

There certainly is not at present any notice describing the Stone as "Jacob's Pillar-Stone," nor can I find anyone here who can recall that there ever was such a notice. I have had several letters recently asking just the same question, and I am rather curious to know what has prompted it.

The Stone has been examined by a succession of geologists and all agree that it is a sandstone. Professor A. C. Ramsay writing in 1865 (Stanley's Memorials of Westminster Abbey, 2nd edn., p. 566) states that "the rocks round Bethel... according to all credible reports... are formed of strata of limestone."

Professor C. F. Davidson, of H. M. Geological Survey, at the time of George VI's Coronation, contributed an article on the Stone to Crown and Empire (Times Publishing Company, 1937). pp. 126-7. In it he stated that from the chemical composition of samples of the Stone, as compared with other rocks, "the Coronation Stone is seen to agree most closely in lithology with sandstones of Lower Old Red Sandstone age from Scotland. These rocks are well developed in the neighbourhood of Perth and Dundee, and there are several natural exposures close to Scone itself. Specimens obtained from these areas frequently carry pebbles of porphyrite or andesite, some of which are petrographically identical with the one from the Coronation Stone. One or two similar pebbles, about the size of a pea, may be seen in the stone at Westminster... The whole balance of evidence, therefore, is in favour of the stone having been quarried somewhere in the east of Perthshire or in southern Angus, probably not far from the ancient seat of the Pictish monarchy at Scone.

*-N. H. MacMichael
Keeper of the Muniments
Westminster Abbey*

In answer to the letter sent in on GTA and his continual drunkenness, I do not agree with that writer, as in the first place, when does Ted have time to drink with all he has to do? I don't know how he has time to drink even a little, as he has so much reading to do, and writing booklets plus getting sermons ready.

If he was getting drunk so much, his brain certainly would not function as well as it does. He is so brilliant and needs a sharp mind in order to be able to do all the things he does. He is constantly on the go. His sermons are priceless. I get them all the time. He has a lot of vital knowledge stored up in his head that amazes me. I only wish I had the memory he has.

Secondly, I am sure Ron Dart and others would not stay with him if he was always getting drunk. I don't blame Ted one bit for being angry about this. I have a friend that drinks quite a bit when we go out with him, and he has been accused of getting drunk also, but never has (even though he can drink a lot more than Ted, I am sure). However, one has only to have a couple of drinks and others accuse him of drinking too much, which is none of their business. I know if anyone lied about me I also would be very angry and tempted to put my fist down their throat, but I wouldn't of course.

It would be nice if people would put their noses into their Bible instead of continually finding fault with others and trying to stir up trouble. Some day God will do all the judging, not us. Even though there is a lot of corruption in the WCG, there are a lot of good Christians there and I visit a few of them from time to time. Some people really have an ax to grind. If one can repent we should forgive him as Christ does.

-Ontario, Canada

Please tell me how I can receive copies of the Ambassador Report at my home. I am coming out of the WCG, because I don't feel there is very much love in an organization that has so much "get" in it. I was a baptized member for 10 years, and during that time I have gradually seen one thing after another that just doesn't seem to be the way Christ would have His church conducted. So much confusion!

-Pennsylvania

Please continue sending me the Report. I'm a 30-year member of the WCG clan, but thank God and Jesus Christ I finally have found my way out by much study, prayers, and your help. So please don't let me down. I still want to keep up with Satan's tricks.

-Big Sandy, Texas

Keep your presses going. We "poor, dumb sheep" are gaining much knowledge and find it most comforting to read we aren't alone in getting our brains unscrambled. I've been out of the WCG since '78, but I am finding it a very slow process in undoing the WCG's brainwashing. But God is so real, so close, so patient, and so loving, and I am so free! May God continue to open the eyes of others still in slavery. Thanks for your help.

-Ontario, California

Editor: Many are finding that HWA was correct in one important teaching. It often does take as much time and effort to undo miseducation as it takes to gain true education.

Dear Readers:

Our apologies for the shortness of this newsletter. Frankly, our last three issues were not only longer than our finances allowed, but in our zeal to help current WCG members, we printed and distributed more free copies than we should have. At the same time, contributions to the Report have fallen off. (Many have written to us telling how they would like to help, but cannot because of unemployment and other problems.)

We will try to bring our next newsletter back up to size. In the meantime, our special thanks to those who did remember us this quarter. Without your help, even this short issue would not have been possible.

With warmest regards,
John Trechak, Editor

---

AR22 December 15, 1982

Dear Friend:

As we approach the end of another calendar year, we wish to thank you for your continued support of Ambassador Report. It is because of the encouragement and help we receive from people such as yourself that we are able to continue publishing our newsletter and the facts about Herbert Armstrong and his corporations.

Over the years, many have taken the time to write us expressing how much the Report has meant in their lives. But occasionally we are asked, "How much is Ambassador Report really accomplishing?" That's not an unfair question, and perhaps it's one you'd enjoy seeing answered.

As you may know, Ambassador Report (originally called Ambassador Review) was started in early 1976 when a group of Pasadena-area Ambassador College alumni decided it was time someone revealed to the supporters of Ambassador College and to the general public exactly what was going on at that institution. We put out annual publications in 1976 and 1977, and since 1978, four newsletters per year. (We are now working on our fourth quarter issue, and you should have it in a few weeks.)

While we have not kept precise statistics on circulation, we do know that since 1976 we have filled literature requests for well over 10,000 different WCG-affiliated individuals. In addition, we have sent our publications to thousands of other WCG members at the request of readers. While ours may not sound like a very large circulation, we know that the average Report copy is read, not just by the individual subscriber, but by friends and relatives as well. And we have heard that many readers make photocopies of the Report for distribution in their local areas. For instance, we have been told that one AR subscriber in Australia, for a time, made 1,000 photocopies of each newsletter we sent, for distribution in that country. So we know Ambassador Report is getting around.

We also know that the Report has had a real impact on the size of the WCG's membership and income. Our experience has been that 95% of those WCG members requesting literature from us leave that church within one or two years. That doesn't mean that we are the only cause for their leaving, for many are forced to leave because of strong doctrinal convictions or because they can't shake the "nasty" habit of asking questions. Nevertheless, our mail clearly indicates that the Report has played a major role in the large exodus of Christians from the WCG in the last six years.

That exodus has cost Herbert Armstrong dearly. Had those individuals not been extricated their sojourn in the wasteland of Armstrongism may have continued anywhere from one to twenty, or more, years. (We recently received a letter from an individual who left after forty years with Herbert.) It is therefore not illogical to assume that the average AR reader, who as left that organization, has been spared perhaps ten years of misdirection. According to the WCG's own statistics, the average WCG member contributes over $1,000 per year to the Armstrong "work." Many give much more. Therefore, one reasonable estimate is that Ambassador Report has already cost Herbert Armstrong over $100,000,000 (10,000 Report readers x 10 years average membership x $1,000 per year).

Actually, that is a very conservative estimate for a number of reasons: (1) As mentioned above, our publications are read by many more than just our actual subscribers. (2) The information published goes beyond just the readers (as through personal letters and by word of mouth). And (3) the Report is used extensively as a reference source by authors and journalists who have, in turn, disseminated our information in their own writings. Occasionally some of our readers complain that the news media does not give adequate coverage to the WCG. That maybe so, but what many may not realize is that if it were not for our efforts in keeping the press constantly informed, there would be much less information available in the media.

That is why we feel it is so important to distribute the Report to a maximum number of individuals with control of, or access to, the media. Let's take our last issue as an example. Aside from our regular subscribers and hundreds of current WCG members and Ambassador students sent complimentary copies, here are just a few of those to whom we sent our last issue: the editors of over 100 of the nation's top magazines; over 175 of the country's leading news commentators and columnists, including Paul Harvey, Jack Anderson, Ann Landers, and Abigail Van Buren; the mayors, city directors, city managers, police chiefs, and leading citizens of both Tyler, Texas, and Pasadena, California; Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley; California Governor Jerry Brown; California Governor-elect George Deukmejian (remember him?); Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek; and top officials in the government of Jordan. We even sent copies to entertainer-celebrities Buck Owens, Merle Haggard, Chet Atkins, Lucille Ball, and Jimmy Stewart (all of whom have had some contact or association with the Armstrong organizations in the past), and to Johnny Carson, to whom we suggested Herbert Armstrong as a most appropriate subject for his famous comedy routines. We also sent copies of our last issue - along with back issues, supporting documents, and personal letters - to princess Lillian of Brussels (wife of King Leopold), Madame Imelda Marcos (First lady of the Philippines) and Franz Jose Strauss (the Bavarian politician). We thought all of them would appreciate knowing a little more about Herbert Armstrong and a little more about how they personally are being used.

While it is not our first priority, the distribution of the AR to the media is, we believe, an important service, and in the new year we hope to expand that part of our circulation. Perhaps with a bit of luck we will also be able to again campaign to have the Armstrong broadcasts and telecasts removed from some stations, as we have done in the past. Unfortunately, that type of campaign takes a great deal of time and money. That is why we have not, so far, been able to do more in that area.

You may have noticed that our last issue of the Report was the shortest in some time. We had been hoping to bring our newsletter back up to about twelve pages. But after much analysis and with publishing experts, we have decided to opt for the shorter six-page size - at least for awhile. That is due, not just to the recessionary economy and our reluctance to pressure readers into bigger contributions, but because we believe it will really make for a bigger impact in the long run. A careful look at our last issue will reveal that its six pages really contained the equivalent copy of about nine pages of many of our previous issues. That is because we are now typesetting (in smaller type) rather than simply typing our newsletters, as in the past. We are also making a greater effort to prune down our writing style. Thus the new issues will not be as lightweight in content as they might first appear.

While two or three readers wrote that they missed the bigger size, a few thought the shorter issue was not only easier to read, but more important, was easier to photocopy for friends. Of course, by cutting down the overall size of our newsletter we hope to save considerably on printing and postage costs. If the savings turns out as significant as we hope, we will not only put out more copies of each issue for wider distribution, but perhaps we will also be able to put out a few special mid-quarter issues of the Report as important stories develop.

Another area into which we may be able to expand is advertising. We have already begun to run classified ads in some areas of the country where our newsletter is still relatively unknown. Here is the ad we have been putting in some newspapers:

HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG followers: Find out the plain truth about the inner workings of the Worldwide Church of God. Read Ambassador Report. Sample copies $2. Write: Ambassador Report, P.O. Box 4068, Pasadena, CA 91106.

To those who respond, we send the current issue of the Report plus one or two back issues and a note explaining that they may subscribe simply by asking. The $2, by the way, is not a get-rich device. It is mainly intended to discourage those with no real interest in the Armstrong church from flooding our mailbox with requests for something for nothing. However, the $2 is still low enough that anyone with a real interest in getting the facts on HWA can still do so and the money received does help to partially offset advertising costs.

We do feel that running such ads will help us reach people in those church areas where we have very few subscribers. In case some of you would like to see this ad run in your local newspaper, feel free to place it yourself (under "Notices," "Religious," "Publications," etc.). Or for those who wish to become even more personally involved, the above ad can be run minus the end part, beginning "Sample copy..." That part can be replaced with "For information call (your phone number)." You might be surprised at how many friends you can gain by passing on information about Ambassador Report and about your own experiences in the WCG.

We know that most readers would probably prefer not to get personally involved to this extent. But if you'd like to help us, there are a few simple things you can do: (1) If you have information on the WCG in your local area, drop us a short note and tell us. (2) We don't make a practice of giving out names from our mailing list, but sometimes we get requests for such information from people leaving the WCG. Many are simply looking for people with whom they can share experiences. If you'd like to help such people or correspond with them, write us. We'll make a note of it, and if the opportunity arises, we'll pass on your name (or pass on theirs to you). (3) If you know of people who can benefit from the Report, show them a copy. If you're always showing them your copies, suggest they subscribe. Or send us their names and addresses, and we'll mail them a copy along with a note explaining that they can receive the Report regularly just by asking. A little effort can go a long way in helping others make a real improvement in their lives.

Once again, thank you for helping us this past year. It is much appreciated, not just by us here in Pasadena, but by thousands around the world who are benefiting personally from the information published in Ambassador Report.

I know that most of our readers do not keep Christmas or New Year's, at least not in a religious sense. But like us, most of you will (hopefully) be getting time off for the holidays to be with your families. From all of us at the Report, a happy and We holiday season and the very best of everything in the coming new year.

With warmest regards,
John Trechak

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR23 January, 1983

Court Documents Reveal: Herbert Armstrong Decrepit!

In the September 30, 1982 issue of Ambassador Report we gave a brief update on the Tucson, Arizona divorce action filed against Ramona Armstrong by lawyers for Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the president of Ambassador College and founder of the Worldwide Church of God. Seven weeks after that issue appeared, we found in our mailbox a rather curious oddity that we must share with you:

November 17, 1982

Gentlemen:

Our office represents Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong and the Worldwide Church of God in various litigation, including the marital dissolution action between Ramona Armstrong and Herbert W. Armstrong. The September 30, 1982 issue of the Ambassador Report has recently come to my attention, and said publication has misquoted and distorted my legal position regarding the deposition of Mr Armstrong in the marital dissolution proceeding. Your mischaracterization is obviously defamatory to me and my law firm.

At no time have Mr Armstrong's "lawyers claim[ed] he is too senile and sick to appear in Arizona to answer questions," as inaccurately reported in your Report. Never has there been any representation or intonation by me that Mr. Armstrong is senile, or in any way mentally impaired. Your inaccurate report impunes my integrity, is disruptive of my professional relationship with the Church, and is clearly defamatory.

In order to mitigate damages, we hereby request, and this will constitute a formal demand, that you immediately publish in your Report an apology and an admission that your previously published statements were false and incorrect. Additionally, demand is hereby made that you provide to me the name and address of each individual who constitutes the "source of information" upon which you predicated such statement, as well as a description of any documentation upon which you purportedly relied.

Very truly yours,
Allan Browne

Here is Editor John Trechak's reply:

Dear Allan:

Notwithstanding the fact that Ambassador Report's staff box clearly indicates myself as editor, and notwithstanding the fact that the same staff box gives honorary mention to the names of three women, your letter of November 17 begins with "Gentlemen." Whatever the reason for your inappropriate salutation, I have taken it upon myself to personally answer your letter, as not only did I write the fifteen words you have objected to, but as the editor of Ambassador Report I take full responsibility for the entirety of this publication's editorial content. Frankly, I would have preferred to answer your objections in a private correspondence. In fact, had you returned my call of November 22, I would have done so over the phone. But considering your written request - excuse me, your "formal demand" - that I respond in a public manner, I will hereby comply.

First off, let me just say I really do believe that not only you, but the readers of the Report are entitled to an apology. The matter of your legal position - and more importantly Mr. Armstrong's present condition - were really not given the coverage they deserved. Thank you for bringing this to my attention. I hope this response will make up for that oversight. But as to whether or not I have "misquoted" you or "distorted" your legal position - well, that is an entirely different matter. Let's look at the facts.

On April 16, 1982, Herbert W. Armstrong - or perhaps I should say lawyers claiming to represent Herbert W. Armstrong (because I have yet to see real evidence that Mr. Armstrong is fully aware of what is occurring in Tucson) filed for dissolution of his marriage in Superior Court of Pima County, Arizona. Although valid subpoenas were served, by mid-September Mr. Armstrong had not yet appeared for even one hearing or deposition. (And as of this writing, he still has not.)

On September 20, 1982, with the parties not present, a hearing took place before Judge Lillian Fisher. Here is how the court's minute entry describes that proceeding: "Hearing re petitioner's motion for protective order prohibiting the taking of depositions of Herbert W. Armstrong." The minute entry of the court clearly shows that the principal lawyer representing Herbert W. Armstrong "asks the Court to take judicial notice of the frailties of a person who has achieved the age of ninety (90)."

Now this may come as a surprise, Allan, but the Tucson court records say that that lawyer was you! Those records also show that September 20 was not the first or the last time you went to court to argue that your client is both very old and in very frail condition. Don't you remember all the evidence you submitted to buttress your arguments? Well, as your letter demands that I present my sources and documentation, let's review a little more of the court record.

One piece of evidence you submitted was an affidavit from Melvin R. Olinger, Mr. Armstrong's chauffeur. Here is an excerpt from that affidavit:

"I have firsthand personal knowledge of the facts herein stated and could... testify... if called as a witness.

"I am employed by the Worldwide Church of God as Chauffeur to the Pastor General of the Church, Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong. I have held this position since April, 1970. As a result, I spend many hours with Mr. Armstrong.

"Mr. Armstrong suffered heart failure in August, 1977. Since that time, I have been present on many occasions when he has suffered chest pains and other discomfort. He presently receives certain medications at three regular times a day. When he is away from his home, at the office or when I am accompanying him, I personally am responsible for reminding and assisting him in taking said medications. Sometimes, it has been necessary to even interrupt board or other important meetings for this purpose.

"In addition to his regular medication, Mr. Armstrong also carries with him nitroglycerine capsules which he uses in case he comes under stress or feels pain in his chest or arm. He knows that if he feels such pain, he must take some nitroglycerine and rest until the pain subsides.

"On September 18, 1982, during a sermon to the church, Mr. Armstrong raised his voice, gestured actively and spoke with a great deal of energy in regard to certain things he was saying. Afterward, he indicated that he was suffering some discomfort. He had to rest and receive some additional nitroglycerine before I was able to drive

"The foregoing happens virtually any time Mr. Armstrong gets into a stressful or emotional situation, or even if he has more than a certain amount of physical exercise. For example, he is normally able to walk around the reflecting pool by his house (about 50 yards) one time, and then must sit down and rest, or his legs will buckle.

"In recent times, Mr. Armstrong has often had difficulty sleeping and, as a result, seldom feels physically strong and mentally alert enough to accomplish many of his normal tasks until the afternoon. I am personally amazed that Mr. Armstrong is able to accomplish everything he does in view of the physical problems he has.... From my observation, Mr. Armstrong has learned to pace himself as long as he is in his own environment, so that he stays within his strength. If he did not, he could well have another heart attack."

Then, there was the letter from John H. Wineinger, M.D. of the Thomas-Davis Clinic, P.C. Here is an excerpt from his statement to the court:

"I have been treating Mr. Armstrong, who will be 90 on 31 July, 1982. I have been his physician since April of 1977. On August 15, 1977, the patient came into my office after having completed a trip, which I understand was related to his work with his church, the Worldwide Church of God, and he had had what apparently, retrospectively, was an acute myocardial infarction and congestive heart failure, and was treated in Tokyo, Japan, and had been having a shortness of breath for about six days prior to that visit in August. On examination that day, he had distended neck veins, basilar rales in his chest, an irregular heartbeat, and some peripheral edema. It was my diagnostic impression that he had congestive heart failure incident to myocardial infarction, and I have been treating him since that time both by visiting him in his home and by having him visit in the office.

"Over the ensuing years, by following a dietary program and taking medication to control blood pressure and improve the contractile ability of his heart, he has been able to return to his work as a minister and head of the Worldwide Church of God. In this regard, he has been able to travel in an aircraft and go about his church duties without any evident stress that I am aware of, or that he has given me any history of...

"Knowing that there is a total difference between the physical activity involved in flying and in preaching, as compared to the emotional stress involved in court action, it would be my feeling that being subjected to the cross-examination and interrogation involved in this procedure could very well have a detrimental and adverse effect upon Mr. Armstrong's health and could result in cardiac arrhythmias which could potentially be fatal. It would, therefore, be my recommendation that Mr. Armstrong not be compelled to appear in any of these planned legal proceedings and, if at all possible, that any questions directed to him be put in writing so that he could answer them at his leisure rather than under a high-pressure situation."

And then there was (and this one's my favorite, Allan) the affidavit by Lawrence M. Omasta. Here is an excerpt (and remember you introduced all of this):

"I am employed by the Worldwide Church of God as the Department Manager of Media Services Radio and Television. In this capacity, I have supervision and control over the production, televising and editing of the World Tomorrow television program on which Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong is the main speaker.

"Because the World Tomorrow television program is regularly aired weekly, we attempt to make at least one new telecast each week. The schedule for producing such telecasts, however, is largely dependent upon Mr. Armstrong's personal well-being. Because Mr. Armstrong is 90 years old and has certain infirmities connected with age and the fact that he had major heart failure five years ago, our production schedule must necessarily be extremely flexible.

"As a result of the foregoing, we have no set time for making programs. It depends upon Mr. Armstrong, how he feels at any particular time, and, to a large extent, his drive, energy and determination. Mr. Armstrong comes to the studio depending on just when he feels up to it.

"On many occasions, we have started to video tape a program only to have Mr. Armstrong stop and state that he is unable to finish, that he just doesn't have the energy or sharpness of mind to do so, or that he otherwise doesn't feel up to it.

"One factor which I believe is very helpful to Mr. Armstrong in making telecasts is that this is in our own studios, the environment is familiar and one in which he has total cooperation, he is very comfortable, there are no outsiders there, and only church-member employees and people he has worked with over the years are present. This creates the best possible environment for us to be able to start when he wants, to quit whenever he feels the need not to go on, or to make the different segments at his pace in accordance with how he personally feels.

"The programs as they appear on television are not made straight through. Mr. Armstrong will sometimes stop right in the middle to do a retake of a particular section because of certain physical problems on his part. Those parts are edited accordingly. On one occasion several months ago, Mr. Armstrong began to have shortness of breath during a taping and we have [sic] to call for oxygen to be brought for him. Most programs involve 30 to 40 minutes of actual video tape and most sessions run from 45 to 50 minutes total time from the beginning of the taping until everything that will be used in that program is completed. The actual video tape time used on any program is about 28 minutes with about 2 to 12 minutes being edited out as a result of the foregoing mentioned problems.

"Many times I have been notified by Mr. Armstrong's personal assistant that Mr. Armstrong is working on his notes for a television program, and that I should expect him to come to the television studio at a particular time for the taping of the program, only to have Mr. Armstrong not show up. I have then subsequently been advised that he simply did not feel up to making a program. I often keep a full crew on standby during lunch hour, and sometimes even into the evening on the possibility that Mr. Armstrong will be able to come in and make a program. Recently, Mr. Armstrong came in at 5:20 p.m. on a Friday afternoon for a program taping.

"Some people have observed certain programs of Mr. Armstrong overseas where he spoke to various important groups and leaders and appeared to speak very powerfully. These programs, of course, have been edited to take the best portions. In addition, some of the appearances of Mr. Armstrong where he spoke to various groups have not been shown, even though they were video taped. The reason is because Mr. Armstrong's tiredness and infirmities were apparent in the video tape. On one recent case in Cebu City, Phillipines [sic], his appearance had been advertised, the hall had been rented and advance preparations had been made. However, Mr. Armstrong simply had to cancel out because he did not feel well."

According to an Aaron Dean affidavit you submitted on another occasion, HWA is blind in one eye, has impaired vision in the other, and wears a hearing aid in each ear. And according to the three affidavits quoted above, Allan, your client can't walk more than fifty yards without his knees buckling, has to take drugs at least three times a day, sometimes requires oxygen, "seldom feels... mentally alert enough to accomplish many of his normal tasks until the afternoon," "on many occasions" can't continue speaking into a microphone because "he doesn't have the... sharpness of mind to do so," and if he's simply asked a few direct questions there's a good chance he will fall over dead. Whew! You know you've convinced me. Mr. Armstrong is sick!

And Judge Fisher thought so too, because, even though she somehow felt it necessary for the patient, I mean Petitioner, to show up at some point in the litigation, she ruled that he would be allowed to have not only his lifesaving oxygen readily available, but a physician to assist him through the life-threatening ordeal of answering questions. I think you did a pretty fair job of proving your point, Allan. You didn't get into the matter of his memory lapses (as far back as the late sixties Mr. Armstrong complained of this problem, in the pulpit, before thousands), nor did you mention his not infrequent irrational and highly emotional temper outbursts (even I had the misfortune of witnessing one of these at his home in 1970, and it was pathetic), nor the prosthetic dildo (written about by his accountant Jack Kessler), nor the recently rumored cancer of the left breast, nor the long-rumored colostomy (oh Allan, please tell us it isn't so). Nevertheless, I still think that, while you may not have used those exact words, you still did a pretty fair job via the affidavits of proving HWA is "senile and sick."

And yet in your letter to me it appears you now claim that such was not your legal position. What then was your legal position? Was it that Herbert is not ninety years old? Was it that he does not indeed have serious health problems? If that is the case, then why the continual emphasis in the courtroom on his frailty, infirmities, and old age? And why those affidavits? Let's face it Allan, your Nov. 17 letter to Ambassador Report isn't just vague. Those portions having any specificity whatsoever are anomalous, while the rest might well be described as acutely incoherent. You write that you have been "misquoted" somehow (para. 1). Yet in the fifteen words of mine that you've objected to, neither you nor anyone else is quoted (" ") at all. You write that your integrity has been impugned (para. 2). Yet in those fifteen words no one's integrity was so much as even hinted at. You write that you and your firm have been defamed (para. 1 & 2). Yet, not only were you and your firm never named, in those fifteen words not so much as a negative innuendo was even cast on anyone. Nor did I in any manner whatsoever even address the problem of HWA's psyche, let alone say you argued that Herbert is mentally impaired.

I do believe most reasonable people would deduce from the Omasta and Olinger affidavits you filed that your legal position might indeed have been that Mr. Armstrong is mentally impaired in some way. And when you consider Herbert's background of deviant behavior (the publicly long-alleged incest, London sex toy jaunt, "flog log," etc.), his belief that he is an apostle, and his reoccurring hysterical pronouncements that within a few months certain Western European countries will destroy the United States in a nuclear attack, I doubt we would have much difficulty finding respected psychiatrists who would diagnose your client as being "mentally impaired." (Such a diagnosis would appropriately be considered well-founded and indicative of professional competence.)

But I did not represent your legal position as such.

That brings us to the semantics of the phrase "senile and sick," which as best as I can make out from your letter, seems to be your pivotal point of contention. But why that should be so is an enigma to me. Could it be that you are not sure what those words actually mean? "Sick" is a pretty common word, and I just can't believe that's where your problem lies. But, I'll admit, the word "senile" is a little longer, and perhaps that was where you stumbled. So just in case you haven't already researched this yourself, here is the definition of "senile" as given in a number of leading dictionaries:

The American Heritage Dictionary:

senile: adj. 1. Pertaining to, characteristic of, or proceeding from old age. 2. Exhibiting senility. 3. Geol. worn away nearly to the base level, as at the end of an erosion cycle.

Funk & Wagnalls Standard College Dictionary:

senile: adj. 1. Pertaining to, proceeding from, or characteristic of old age. 2. Infirm; weak; doting.

Webster's Concise Family Dictionary:

senile: adj. 1. OLD, AGED.

Dorland's Illustrated Medical Dictionary:

senile: Pertaining to or characteristic of old age.

But, maybe to your legal mind, these dictionaries aren't sufficiently erudite or authoritative. If that's the case, consult the most respected, scholarly, authoritative, unabridged-in-any-way, tomes of:

senile: adj. 1. Belonging to, suited for or incident to old age. Now only of diseases, etc.: Peculiar to the aged. 2. Exhibiting the weakness of old age. 3. Phys. Geo. Approaching the end of a cycle of erosion.

I don't see anything inherently pejorative there. Do you? With various publishers there are subtle variations to the basic definition. But the central idea remains that the word "senile" has to do essentially with the aging process and secondarily with the normal weakening associated with old age. Undoubtedly, one can find some dictionaries that will give, as a concomitant or derivative of that secondary factor of weakened physical condition, a tertiary concomitant of weakened mental faculties. That is not surprising because the mental faculties are dependent upon the brain, a physical organ as subject to the aging process as the rest of the body.

But it would be untenable to conclude from this that the word "senile" is the equivalent of "mentally impaired." It is not. Nor is it the equivalent of "senile dementia" (also called "senile psychosis" and "dementia senilus"). That is a psychiatric term that often crops up in legal proceedings dealing with conservatorship (and it's a term you might find useful in the future). While it includes the word "senile" as an adjective, "senile psychosis" has a very specific meaning, and one different from "senile."

If any further proof is required, check Maloy's Medical Dictionary for Lawyers. In the edition I have, "senile" is defined simply as "of, or pertaining to, old age." That's all it says. And even if you look up "senility" (a different, but related word), the only meaning given is (and the emphasis is mine): "Old age or its infirmities. Feebleness of body and mind that sometimes accompanies old age." How could anything be plainer?

Frankly, when you consider (1) your persistent emphasis on Mr. Armstrong's ninety years, (2) your continuous emphasis on his infirmities and frail condition, and (3) the affidavits that you submitted, what one word could more accurately describe the way you have characterized Mr. Armstrong than the word "senile"? I personally don't know of any.

All in all, Allan, your Nov. 17 letter to Ambassador Report raises quite a number of questions, foremost of which is: Why in the world would you ever write a letter like that?

I'm sure you are a very bright, competent and highly ethical attorney. But I wouldn't be surprised that there might be some individuals, who, if they received such a letter, would conclude that they were being confronted by one of those habitual-intimidator smart-ass types so prevalent in your profession. (Have you ever seen where lawyers rank in opinion polls rating public confidence in the professions?) Some might perhaps conclude - from your letter's lack of legitimate grievance or substantiation and its general tone - that such a letter was intended solely to annoy, intimidate, harass, inflict anxiety, or intimate a forthcoming nuisance lawsuit of a frivolous nature that would use the court system to harass and to inflict a chilling effect on the First Amendment rights of the recipient.

I prefer, however, not to draw such hasty conclusions. I know how Mr. Stanley Rader, an honored lawyer and evangelist, personally chose you to assist him in his "brilliant" (to quote your client) defense of the WCG in 1979-80. And I have great respect for your law firm.

Pardon me if I digress a little, but I also recall hearing your distinguished late senior partner John Ervin some years ago at the Philosophical Research Society (PRS) in Los Angeles. Dr. Ervin lectured on the Great Mother goddess. And I was amazed at his vast knowledge of religions, psychology, and the occult. (Described by a close friend as "something of a mystic," Dr. Ervin was for many years the vice-president of the PRS and a disciple of astrologer-occultist Manly P. Hall, who remains the society's president.) Dr. Ervin was also ordained to the ministry of the Church of People and was a local pastor of the United Methodist Church. Regarding his love for Jesus, in 1981 he wrote:

"Although Jesus Christ is and has been all my life the central figure and reason for my being, I am devoting all the time I presently can muster to supporting and improving the United Nations, which I regard as the logical extension of what Jesus was teaching."

Even though Dr. Ervin was a graduate of Harvard, an acclaimed expert in international law, a federal tax expert, and, I am told, a counsellor to U.S. presidents, the strengthening of the United Nations remained his great personal goal. In 1978 he was awarded the United Nations Peace Medal. A comment from a letter eulogizing Dr. Ervin written by Robert Muller, Assistant Secretary General of the United Nations, perhaps best summarizes the life of this great man: "He was an endless fount of ideas, inspiration, and true illuminations."

So you see, Allan, I not only prefer to think the very best of you personally, I have great respect for your lawfirm and am only too happy to acknowledge its influential position in the scheme of things.

But the question still remains - why the letter?

You apparently didn't intend it merely for a laugh, as I first suspected. Because when I called your office to share the joke with you (I used to think I could always spot a good one), your secretary - the one who said you'd be in court all morning, not the one who earlier in the day said you were out of state for the week - confirmed that the letter was indeed "authentic" - intended to be taken at face value. You wouldn't believe the shock!

Could it be you really weren't aware of all that was happening in court on September 20 or during some of those other proceedings? Well, I suppose that can happen. (Have you seen the Schick clinic commercial with that lawyer who admits that for some time he couldn't keep his attention on what was transpiring during trials because his mind was always on cigarettes?)

Or perhaps, you were aware of what was transpiring on Sept. 20, but since then you've forgotten. That, too, can happen to anyone. In the above, I've quoted a number of court documents of which you should have kept copies. Yet your letter's demand for identification of my sources and "documentation" implies you may not have made copies of these court documents, or that your copies were misfiled or simply lost. If that is the case, drop me a note and I'll send you duplicates of my set.

But back to some of those questions raised by your letter. For instance you write: "Our office represents Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong and the Worldwide Church of God in various litigation." It's an interesting statement in light of Mrs. Ramona Armstrong's claim, in her California suit, that the Worldwide Church of God corporation is nothing more than essentially an "alter ego" of Herbert Armstrong, set up to personally benefit him financially. I'm sure there is nothing illegal about you simultaneously representing both Herbert W. Armstrong and the Worldwide Church of God corporation. And I'm sure that as a lawyer you can put forth some kind of justification for doing so. I did notice, however, that Ethical Consideration 5-18 of the Code of Professional Responsibility provides:

"A lawyer employed or retained by a corporation or similar entity owes his allegiance to the entity and not to a stockholder, director, officer, employee, representative, or other person connected with the entity. In advising the entity, a lawyer should keep paramount its interests and his professional judgment should not be influenced by the personal desires of any person or organization."

From my layman's point of view, I find it difficult to see how equal representation can be given to both entities simultaneously. (And you may recall, the State brought up a similar point during the State of California versus Worldwide Church of God lawsuit in 1979.)

Do the personal interests of Herbert W. Armstrong coincide perfectly with the interests of the Worldwide Church of God corporation?

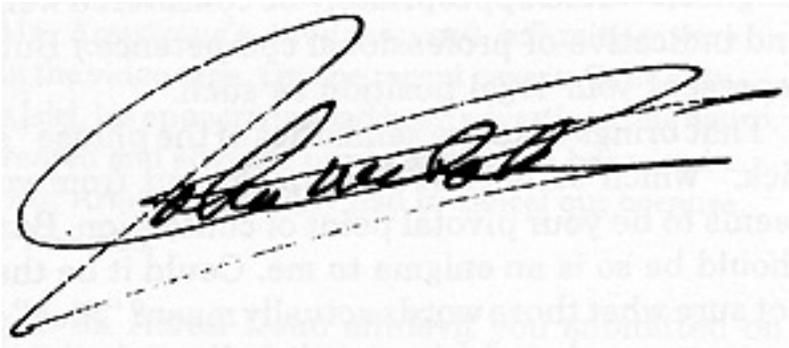

For instance, you have advocated in a number of cases that Mr. Armstrong not be required to give a deposition. For the sake of argument, let us assume that such was indeed in his own best interest. Isn't it still possible that such was not in the best interest of the Worldwide Church of God corporation? Isn't it also conceivable that at some time in the future - if any of the litigation now in progress brings results disappointing to any of the trustees - that some conscientious board member (let's say Rod Meredith or Raymond McNair, as an example) might question whether your representation was preferential to one client entity over another? Along those lines, have you ever advocated to the board that, because of the responsibility they have to those of us who have contributed to the church, they should obtain legal counsel independent of the influence exercised by house counsel? Of course, if the personal interests of Herbert W. Armstrong do indeed coincide with those of the Worldwide Church of God corporation, then there's no problem in this regard. But that would seem to imply that Mrs. Ramona Armstrong's claim is true.

I know that I've put forth a number of questions that may appear to be rhetorical. They are not. I would not only enjoy seeing your answers to them, but, assuming you could put together something concise and a bit more coherent than your letter of Nov. 17, would love to print your answers right here in Ambassador Report. Not only I, but all the readers of this publication, no doubt, look forward to your next submission.

I'm sorry that my response to your letter has had to be so brief. I will make up for it, you can be sure, when, in the next issue of this newsletter I will cover some of the other evidence you and your associates have submitted about Mr. Armstrong.

In the meantime, thank you for doing your part for Ambassador Report.

With warmest regards,

HWA's Active Schedule

Spend a few hours reading through the testimony and evidence presented by HWA's lawyers in Tucson, and a very clear picture emerges of a sick and senile individual tottering on the brink of oblivion. But glancing through some of the latest issues of The Worldwide News (WN) gives a very different impression.

The Oct. 18, 1982 issue of the WN reported how, during the Feast of Tabernacles, HWA spoke live to over 110,000 followers "all over the United States, Hawaii, Alaska, England and ... even in New Zealand." The feat was accomplished via transmissions over three satellites. The Nov. 1 issue of the WN showed a picture of HWA conversing "with Ariawongsagatayana, the 18th Supreme Patriarch of Thai Buddhism." According to the article:

"The meeting, the first between the supreme patriarch and the pastor general, took place in Mr. Armstrong's executive office on the fourth floor of the campus Hall of Administration."

The meeting was described as "warm and friendly."

The Nov. 15 WN reported that HWA was in Bermuda where he met with several of the island's leaders, and the Nov. 29 issue reported HWA in the Netherlands, the Republic of South Africa, and Kenya, where he had a meeting with President Moi. In Kenya, HWA gave President Moi a Steuben crystal depicting a king-fisher bird. In describing that meeting evangelist Frank Brown wrote:

"Since the end of British colonial rule in 1963, Kenya has flourished as one of the more progressive countries in Africa mainly because of the charismatic leadership of the late Mr. Kenyatta. Mr. Armstrong counts Mr. Kenyatta as one of the greatest statesmen in recent years.... President Moi's overall philosophy is called in Swahili nyayo, which roughly means 'following in the footsteps' of Jomo Kenyatta."

HWA's respect for Jomo Kenyatta is interesting in light of the fact that Kenyatta was a chief instigator of the Mau Mau rebellion of the early '50s - an uprising famous for its savagery and terrorism. Kenyatta went on to become the first president of Kenya in 1964. In 1969 he outlawed all opposition parties.

The Dec. 13 WN reported HWA in Greece, where he addressed the Athens Rotary Club, and in Spain, where he spoke to King Juan Carlos I. The Dec. 27 WN reported HWA in Jamaica, where he spoke to government officials.

But HWA doesn't just travel a lot. HWA has arrived - and just how much is evident from a Daniel Cariaga review which appeared in the Oct. 29 Los Angeles Times, part VI, p. 1. The review covered the return of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra (acclaimed the world's greatest) to the Los Angeles area - more specifically to Ambassador Auditorium. Wrote Cariaga:

"How the world has changed, one kept calculating Wednesday night, in the 26 years since the Berlin Philharmonic last played here.

"Forget space travel, emerging nations, est and the Cambridge diet; think how Mayor Tom Bradley, Jane Wyman, Herbert W. Armstrong, even you and I, have changed, in that small corridor of history between Nov. 18, 1956, and today....

"Still, the huge coloristic palette from which Karajan and his Berliners drew all these sounds, loud and soft, has to impress. Some in that large audience - which included, by the way, not only Bradley, Wyman, and Armstrong, but also other celebrities from various contemporary worlds - even reveled in them."

Yes, Herbert is a celebrity. And no wonder. For whatever negative side there may be to his theology or personal morals, one cannot help but respect at least two of his attributes: (1) his political astuteness, which rivals Machiavelli's, and (2) his skills as a communicator, which rival those of the greatest advertising men of all time. Because of those two attributes, it is not always easy to obtain accurate data on HWA. Herbert knows how to create an image; he knows how to erect a facade. He's done it for years, and he's good at it. For instance, if you saw the November 15 issue of The Worldwide News, you may have noticed his article (p. 5) "What Are the Secrets of My Youthful Vitality, Energy, Drive and Long Life?" Of course, to most people just the idea of an ailing ninety-year old describing himself as "youthful" brings guffaws. But not so with the typical Worldwider. To them, HWA's statements are the gospel truth.

But HWA can't take all the credit for his success. Court documents show that HWA's medical doctors deserve some of the credit. As we've pointed out frequently over the years, no matter how many times HWA tells his followers that God doesn't want them to rely on medical science (after all, why waste potential tithes on your, or your family's, health?), when HWA gets ill, he gets the very best in medical assistance.

And let's not forget HWA's lawyers. Jesus was very blunt with the lawyers of his day (Luke 11:45-46, RSV):

"One of the lawyers answered him, 'Teacher, in saying this you reproach us also.'

"And he said, 'Woe to you lawyers also! for you load men with burdens hard to bear, and you yourselves do not touch the burdens with one of your fingers.' "

Herbert, on the other hand, surrounds himself with lawyers! First of all there's Stanley Rader, who received a reported $750,000 bonus in 1981, and - by his own admission - gets well over $200,000 per year as a consultant. (Yet Herbert Armstrong hasn't the sense to ask Mr. Rader's advice. Sources in the church have told us that HWA simply refuses to talk to Mr. Rader!) Then there is Mr. Ralph Helge and his legal staff. And the Tucson law firm of Wolfe & Ostapuk. And the law firm of Miller & Pitt. And the Beverly Hills law firm of Ervin, Cohen & Jessup, with its 41 partners plus associates. And sometimes the law firm of Gibson, Dunn, & Crutcher with its well over 300 lawyers (one of the most powerful firms in the country). So HWA has not only the best in medical assistance but the very best in legal assistance.

What has all this legal help accomplished? For Herbert, personally, a great deal. But not much, if anything, for those true believers who faithfully send in their tithes and offerings to "God's Work." Many believe that, while HWA has been spared the "ordeal" of answering questions, his followers have been denied the real story of what has been happening to their contributions. And thanks to the lawyers surrounding HWA the full story may never be known.

In an affidavit dated October 20, Ramona Armstrong made this statement:

"I am making this Affidavit to explain for the Court how my husband has ALWAYS avoided the taking of his deposition in approximately 18 different litigations that I know about through the years I have known him. It is my personal observation that he has always successfully prevented his deposition from being taken through the intentional avoidance techniques that I shall describe below. He has NEVER had his deposition taken in any of the multitude of legal suits to which he and his corporations have been parties. His deposition has been sought in many, many legal actions, but he has successfully avoided his examination in every one of them. I know these things from my personal observation, except to the extent that they are qualified below.

"In a Tucson court case, in about 1978, a process server started to hand my husband a Subpoena for his deposition while he was at the Tucson Convention Center on business. His lawyer who was standing next to him grabbed the Subpoena out of the process server's hands and threw it to the floor. He immediately had a multitude of employees surround my husband so that he could not be reached, and then they rushed him and myself to our waiting limousine, and whisked us to our Tucson home. During the ride he told me again for approximately the 7th or 8th time that he had NEVER given, and WOULDN'T give, a deposition. The next day, although my husband was then and continues to be extremely active and agile both physically and mentally, they took him to a Tucson doctor to try to establish that he wasn't able 'health wise' to give his deposition. Then, he remained secluded in our house for a number of days during which he would not go to the door, take telephone calls until they were first screened by others, etc., for the stated purpose of avoiding the deposition process.

"In connection with the same case, I was present in Pasadena, California when Herbert and I had just left the stage in the Ambassador Auditorium after he had talked nonstop in an emotional and highly charged and physically active manner for an hour and a half. As we left the stage by the side door to the Auditorium and were about to step into our limousine, process service was again attempted upon him. His lawyer pushed the server aside, again, shoved us into the limousine, and we sped away to our Pasadena residence. I do not presently recall if this incident happened before or after the Tucson attempted service, but in any event Herbert said, again, that he had never given a deposition and wouldn't give one.

"The first time I became aware of my husband's custom of avoiding his deposition was in 1975 when we were overseas on one of our many trips, I believe the location being Paris, France. At that time, I was not Herbert's wife, but was his secretary. We were having dinner in a group. I was seated next to my husband while he was discussing with his advisers the prolongation of our trip in order that he might avoid having to testify in a deposition (possibly a trial, but I believe a deposition) which would occur otherwise. Our plans were to return to Pasadena within a day or two of the dinner meeting, but it was then decided, instead, that we would extend our trip an additional two weeks solely for the purpose mentioned. So, we then traveled in our Gulf Stream II jet to Rome. He killed the time with sightseeing, shopping, and some work at his typewriter. As soon as he received word that the time for the proceeding had passed, he gave the orders for us all to return to Pasadena.

"Herbert and his advisors tried to avoid my knowing of the details of these matters, but I personally overheard similar discussions and was personally present on a number of overseas trips that were intentionally prolonged solely to avoid Herbert having to testify by deposition in legal cases. I do not remember the specifics of what countries we were in, the dates, etc., but this was a rather frequent occurrence during the years that I was travelling with him and his advisors.

"When the California Attorney General placed his Church enterprise in receivership, I overheard my husband tell an associate, 'We can move the headquarters to Canada, or Mexico, or anywhere else in the world, so I won't have to appear.' I believe that the State of California was trying to Subpoena him for testimony or deposition and that this is what had prompted his statement. In point of fact, he DID move the entire financial operation to Tucson, Arizona so as to avoid the California procedures. I know this of my own personal knowledge and observation because of the things he said in my presence. It was during this same proceeding that he told our pilot and co-pilot to move our Gulf Stream II out of California 'immediately' [it was hangered at Burbank Airport], and within just a few hours they flew it to Las Vegas, Nevada where it was kept until the receivership was dismissed. My husband paid for the housing of the pilot and co-pilot in a Las Vegas hotel during the whole time. During this same time period it was discussed in my presence in our house in Tucson, many times, by my husband and his associates, how 'fortunate' it was that he and I had purchased our house in Tucson rather than in Palm Springs, California where he had wanted to live [I wanted to live in Tucson and he had promised me before our marriage that I could live in Tucson].

"In summary, I want the court to recognize that my husband's litigation life has paralleled that of Howard Hughes. He is surrounded by his associates, including employed security forces, who he retains to isolate him from litigation processes. He will take any step regardless of expense or effort to avoid giving a deposition. He has boasted to me repeatedly that he has NEVER given his deposition ANYWHERE, and that he 'NEVER will.' Although, he did have a heart attack in 1977, he still, to this very hour, is traveling nation-wide performing in exactly the same manner and with the same vigorousness as he always did before his 1977 heart attack. I saw him on his television show just last Sunday, and he looks exactly the same as he always has year in and year out, healthwise. His sermon was delivered in exactly the same emotionally charged and fervent manner as it always has been and it was obvious that he was suffering not in the least. There has been no change in his physical appearance or abilities as I have observed them to be myself most recently from what they were when I first started traveling with him in 1974. My husband is toying with this Court as he has toyed with courts from both here at home and abroad. He and his associates are trying to take from me what was promised me if I would do what they wanted me to. Now, they are trying desperately to keep him from giving the evidence that is needed for me to defend against the divorce suit he has instituted."

But what is it that Herbert Armstrong is trying to hide? Perhaps it has something to do with accounts at thirteen banks mentioned briefly in the court records. Here are the names of those thirteen banks: (1) Union de Banques Suisses, Switzerland, (2) Bank of Switzerland, New York, (3) Chemical Bank, New York, (4) City Bank, New York, (5) Republic Bank of New York, (6) First National Bank of Chicago, (7) Chase Manhattan Bank, New York, (8) Chase Manhattan Bank, London, (9) Kredit Bank Zurich, Switzerland, (10) Kredit Suisse Zurich, Switzerland, (11) National Westminster Bank, London, (12) Shanghai-Hong Kong Bank, and (13) the Arizona Bank.

It is ironic that had Herbert obeyed Jesus' simple teaching in the Beatitudes against putting away one's wife (Matt. 5:32, Mark 10:11), His admonition to seek reconciliation rather than legal remedies (Matt. 5:25-26), and His admonition to be cooperative when sued (Matt. 5:40), Herbert could have avoided his current legal entanglements. After all,

Jesus' message was "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you" (Matt. 5:44). Yet here we have "God's Apostle" putting away the wife he said God gave him and fighting the courts, while his wife Ramona claims she wants to save their marriage. Strange, isn't it?

WCG in the Grip of Paranoia

Hardly a day goes by in which we don't receive at least one or two letters from concerned relations of Worldwidiers who are worried that their Armstrong-following loved ones are about to flee the country in some lemming-like panic. Members are being told ever more frequently that the church will probably "flee in 1983" and that many members will be left behind to endure the Great Tribulation because they are not contributing enough. Some have been told to get their passports ready. At least one minister has warned his congregation they should have no pregnancies this year because of the likelihood of their "fleeing." Jan. 3 was set aside as a fast day for the WCG - with members listening to an HWA tape about the Anti-Christ - because the church is heading into the time of its greatest crisis.

Of course, the key to understanding such statements lies in an understanding of Herbert's mind. A study of HWA's writings and personal history clearly shows that his mind is egocentric (and some would no doubt be more specific and say "phallicentric"). When HWA says "the church" will flee, he's talking mostly about himself. Oh yes, he'll need a few of his servants and a few top myrmidons around to keep the facade in tact. But he's still talking mainly about himself. As we've pointed out before, no matter where he flees to, he'll still require plenty of tithes to maintain his lifestyle, and that means his followers have to stay behind, on their jobs, sending in their money to "headquarters" (wherever that might move to).

The same egocentricity applies to HWA's statements about time running out. Well, maybe it is - for Herbert (and he has "great wrath, because he knoweth his time is short"). Incidentally, here in southern California, popular sportscaster Jim Healy is apparently making good use of an HWA cliché on his afternoon KLAC program. Often when Healy's program needs to wrap up or close a segment he switches on a tape recording of Herbert screaming something like "Time is running out! Time is running out!" It's absolutely hilarious!

Stan Rader - Scapegoat

At no time is the WCG's paranoia more apparent than when the name of Stanley Rader is mentioned. We keep getting reports from around the country of WCG ministers launching into attacks on Mr. Rader. Many are apparently convinced Stanley Rader is somehow behind Ramona Armstrong's lawsuit in California (see our Sept. 30 issue). We, however, have not seen one bit of evidence to substantiate such an allegation. Nor is Mr. Rader representing Mrs. Armstrong in any lawsuit that we know of. Perhaps one reason Mr. Rader is being made a scapegoat for the WCG's problems is that in 1981 during his last few months as Herbert W. Armstrong's chief advisor, he was increasingly critical of the conduct of a number of HWA's assistants. A letter written from Japan by Stanley Rader to HWA has recently been leaked to various members of the WCG, who in turn passed on a copy to us. The letter shows the kind of problems Mr. Rader was up against in 1981:

February 1, 1981
Tokyo

"I know how terribly shocking and indeed sickening the revelations of the last month have been for you. I know how terribly disappointed you are about Kevin and Aaron Dean. I am equally disappointed, of course, about the Dean boys because I have been their champion, have urged them upon you, and have treated them as would a father his own sons.

"All this has merely been more evidence for us that Satan will not ease up. He knows only too well that the time remaining for him is short. The prophecies of Revelation 20 verse 1 are nearly at hand.

"As I have stated in earlier memoranda, I tried my very best to keep the entire sordid affair from reaching you particularly prior to or during the Manila campaign. I urged Kevin to repent of his horrible sins against the Living God, his Church, and Christ's Apostle. I told him that as far as I was concerned, it would be a closed matter if he had truly repented. I urged him to make amends to those upon whom he had inflicted so much harm - your wife, your sister-in-law, Mrs. Kineston, John Kineston, Joe Kotora, and various and sundry persons.

"Unfortunately, as you learned, he did not repent. Rather he decided to utilize the same evil techniques of lying, inventing and maligning in a desperate effort to preserve his position.

"You were, of course, too wise and too experienced for him. As usual, you let out just enough rope and gave him ample opportunity to hang himself. It was really the Wayne Cole situation all over again, and as we now know, both Ellis and Joe Tkach were very closely in league with Wayne Cole anyway. By the time others came forward with their incontrovertible evidence of the sordid and abominable activities you already knew the whole truth.

"I do know how fearful you are that the entirety of the ministry may well be besmirched if the Church or the public should learn of these transgressions. But I fear more that a cover-up at this time would be the worse of the two evils. Too many people are acutely aware of the situation at all levels in Pasadena - amongst the brethren in the area and even outside the Pasadena Church. They are watching carefully to see how you will handle this situation. They are already asking aloud: 'Will he try to cover up again?'

"Many are aware, and painfully so, of the double standard that you have permitted for the ministry in sexual matters. The members indicated that they will not tolerate such a double standard any longer. For ministers to commit adultery with married women, to seduce virgin Church members, to commit adultery and attempt adultery with unconverted but married and dedicated Church employees, to use 'anointing of the sick' as a deceit to enter their beds and bodies - these things are despicable and abominations.

The ministry must be held to a higher standard - the highest standard possible.

"Christ will forgive a minister after repentance (He has paid their penalty with his blood), but once the minister has shown himself as unfit for the ministry - once he has revealed himself as not abiding by God's laws and the standards set forth in I Timothy for a minister, from an organizational standpoint there must be a change which others will interpret as a correction.

"Newspapers in the area have probably already received word of the scandal. It is essential, as you know, to take the remedial steps that you have in mind before the story breaks over our heads. We cannot lie to the press, can we? We must maintain our credibility. I agree with your plan to discipline the Dean boys by sending them to the field under mature Pastors. This will give us the opportunity to salvage them, if possible, and to let the public know that whatever problems we may have had, they were Church matters, subject to Church jurisdiction and that we had no further comment for the press.

"Aaron Dean, of course, was primarily responsible for spreading false and salacious rumors concerning your own wife. Furthermore his lying about his university training in the field of accounting was obviously transparent to you at the time.

"Mr. Kotor's revelations, however, about Aaron's financial dealings which cost Church members in excess of $50,000 clearly revealed Aaron's motivation - to make money. Let us not forget that this whole series of financial dealings took place during the crisis when he should have been occupied as never before with Church affairs.

"Perhaps the listening in on your telephone conversations as described so dramatically by Dr. Kessler is really not so surprising after the Wayne Cole experience of 1978 when your telephone conversations were illegally taped. I am certain that it is simply a question of time before other taped conversations of yours appear. The only question is whether they will be heard this time on '60 Minutes' or some other program.

"With respect to Joe Tkach, I recommended him. Although I did know about his connection with Mr. and Mrs. Timmons (two of the relators in the lawsuit), I did not find out the full details concerning his illegal fencing activities until they surfaced recently while we were preparing our civil rights case. He is obviously not the man I recommended to you and I apologize for my error in judgment.

"Ellis, of course, admitted that he lied to you about his visit to my wife and Virginia in September. As to his other involvement, it was perhaps primarily one of trying to keep Joe, Kevin and Aaron from being discovered for what they were and what they were doing. It was important for them to try to discredit your wife because they knew she was aware of their activities for some time.

"As usual, the Living God intervened and once again we averted another master blow of Satan. We must continue, however, to be vigilant as he will give us no surcease. He knows his number is up unless he can destroy God's Church.

"I do feel a sense of regret, however, that in the process you and Henry quarrelled. Henry is reserved and a 'babe in Christ,' but he is very resolute and forthright when he does speak and act. The few intemperate comments you made to others (comments which you say you did not mean) did get back to Henry from various reliable witnesses and, simply stated, his feelings were hurt. Perhaps you will find a way to restore your prior working relationship. Certainly your apology to him did much to make that possible.

"As for me, you are again right when you say that July 1 is somewhat in the distance and even if my resignation should remain effective, nothing would really be changed. We shall of course discuss this later.

"Joe Kitora, as you have suggested, might well be a good assistant for you in place of Henry but not necessarily in Tucson. He has his family in Pasadena and may not want to move unless you insist.

"In any event, we have completed the most successful campaign yet and you are now even more able to cope with the problems that we will necessarily encounter as we strive together to complete this Great Work."

With love in Jesus' name,
Stanley R. Rader

We would have liked to have gotten Mr. Rader to comment on this letter, but he has refused. (In fact, we understand Mr. Rader refuses to make any public statements about HWA or the WCG.) However, Mr. Rader has not denied the authenticity of this letter. The Report also wrote to Joe Tkach and the Dean brothers asking them to comment on this letter. They too have refused to comment in any way. We did learn, however, that Mr. HWA did punish the Dean brothers in 1981 for the infractions mentioned in this letter. Their punishment was banishment for a few weeks to a Palm Springs hotel (all expenses paid).

Never Lost a Case?

Have you ever heard the myth that the WCG has never lost a court case? It's one that's been told repeatedly to WCG members over the years. Those who've bothered to check up on the facts, however, have discovered that, like a lot of other WCG fairy tales, it just isn't so. Here is an excerpt from an article that appeared in The Atlanta Constitution on Oct. 5, 1982.

"The [U.S. Supreme] court also let stand a decision dismissing a lawsuit seeking the transfer of a house in Fitzgerald to religiously affiliated Ambassador College.

"The owner of the home executed a deed that provided for the home in Ben Hill County to go to the college at her death. However, her daughter contested the deed saying her mother suffered from mental incapacity. The college's refusal to supply certain information about its finances caused the state courts to rule in the daughter's favor. The college, which trains ministers for the Worldwide Church of God, then sued in federal court to have the home returned to the school but lost."

Ralph Helge an Evangelist?

Don't be surprised if lawyer Ralph Helge is ordained an evangelist in 1983. One long-time WCG observer told us: "Helge is probably the church's most important employee, he's extremely loyal to Mr. Armstrong, and a good speaker. All he lacks is ordination. That may come this year. Don't forget, Stan Rader also rose to the evangelist rank all at once."

Helge's loyalty to HWA is so great that recently he even phoned Garner Ted Armstrong in Tyler in an attempt at reconciling GTA to his father. Sources in Tyler say that during the lengthy conversation Helge told GTA he needed to show greater respect for his father. Ted's reply was reportedly that he does show his father respect but there are limits. After all, he told Helge, "he s----ed my sister for ten years!" We do not know what Helge's reply was to that.

Tidbits

WCG members at this past year's Feast of Tabernacles were given a number of special printed instructions. For instance, there was to be no tape recording of sermons. There was to be no applause:

"... for special music, sermonettes or sermons. However, spontaneous applause for announcements of inspiring developments in the Work, special intervention or miracles from God, or a special appearance by Mr. Herbert Armstrong would be appropriate and fitting."

And of course:

"All checks must be made payable to Herbert W. Armstrong or Herbert W. Armstrong, a Corporation Sole."

* * *

Apostle Armstrong has recently been angry at television preacher Gene Scott. Apparently Scott has adopted HWA's British-Israelism doctrine without giving any credit to HWA.

"True Christianity is not merely a set of beliefs. It is not joining a church. It is not something to be practiced one day a week or at odd intervals."

Biblical Church of God Shakeup

In November, the Biblical Church of God (BCG) announced the resignation of its leading spokesman, Fred Coulter. It appears that the board of directors of that church felt Mr.

Coulter was centralizing too much power in himself and so the board asserted its authority and asked for his resignation. Some have pointed out that the WCG's legal authority also rests with its board, but that those men, in contrast to the BCG's board, have either never understood their legal responsibility and powers, or have simply lacked the character to stand up to Herbert Armstrong.

We do not have firsthand knowledge of the details of the BCG shakeup. Those who may require more information should write to the parties involved (The Biblical Church of God, P. O. Box 1510, Hollister, CA 95023; Fred Coutler, P.O. Box 1245, Hollister, CA 95023). Over the last few years, we have found Mr. Coulter to be a very personable individual and a good friend of the Report. And we wish him the best of luck in the future. So, too, the BCG, which we hope will be able to resolve whatever difficulties it may be having at this time.

Ambassador Alumni News

Remember when Herbert Armstrong could honestly boast that he was the biggest tithe-payer in the WCG. Well, apparently no more. Sources in Texas say that that honor now goes to Mr. & Mrs. Jerry Gentry of Big Sandy, Texas. In 1975 Mrs. Gentry decided to try her hand at needlework and created "Sue and Sam," rag dolls which she and her husband began to mass produce and sell. Since then their family business has expanded to include a restaurant, gift shop, and a newspaper. Business has boomed to such an extent that now they have 125 employees and must make extensive use of an IBM computer to process orders. Their success story was reported in the September 13 issue of Computer World

* * *

Larry Goodman, former pilot on the Falcon for HWA and later a pilot at the Big Sandy campus for six years, is now a national recruiter for Sales Consultants of Nashville, Tennessee. He recruits sales and sales management personnel for Fortune 500 companies nationwide.

* * *

The October 26, 1982 issue of Globe reported that Dr. Robert Kuhn is now a professor at New York University's Graduate School of Business. He lectures on corporate strategy.

* * *

Former WCG writer Bob Gentet is now living in Kansas. He recently got his M.S. degree in geology and is looking for work in that field or in teaching.

We are saddened to report the death on October 10 of Donald Ecker, who until the last few years, was a member of the Ambassador College music department. Mr. Ecker, previous to teaching at the Pasadena campus, was a music instructor and accompanist at the Bricket Wood campus in England. His death resulted from head injuries caused by being beaten with a baseball bat during the course of a robbery at his Pasadena home. A television set was reported stolen, and a number of suspects have been arrested and charged with the crime. Many Ambassador alumni, including the editor of this publication, will remember Mr. Ecker as not only a very fine piano instructor but as a kind man who was very devoted to his church. We extend our sympathies to his family and friends.

We were recently informed that Gordon R. Terblanche, a long-time WCG minister in South Africa has broken away from the Armstrong organization and is ministering to a group of over fifty in that country. He may be contacted by writing: Gordon R. Terblanche, P.O. Box 20321, Alkantrant 0005, Rep. of South Africa.

On pages 2-3 of the September 30 issue you wrote: 'With The Plain Truth's circulation growing so rapidly, it comes as no surprise that the WCG's membership is also growing. Writing in the August 6, 1982 issue of Christianity Today, Joseph Hopkins reports that the WCG's membership is growing at the rate of 1,000 new members a year. " My question is: Where is it growing? It is not growing in Chicago, New York New Jersey, Houston, Miami St Petersburg, Wheeling, Hampton, Norfolk, Pittshurgh, or Philadelphia! I know people in those areas and they tell me that the growth there is about zero. In fact the minister in Pittsburg said the people are leaving the church...

Well, the break has been made. On June 10, I was disfellowshipped because I had doubts about the need to keep the Sabbath as a means of salvation. We had anticipated that if our true feelings concerning law and grace (or at least our true doubts) were to become known, we'd be kicked out so we had written a general letter to our 10 or so friends in the local church, telling them goodbye. We had never talked about any of our doubts to anyone, so we knew that our departure would come as quite a surprise to them. To be honest, we sent the minister a copy of the letter. My husband's name was in the letter though I signed it myself. I sent it out just as soon as the minister had left, before he could "mark" us from the pulpit so that our friends wouldn't read our letter. Our minister called on June 11 and asked my husband if he felt the way I did since his name was in the letter. My husband said that he had some questions that he needed to work out, and the minister said he'd just disfellowship him, too. And of course, he had to mark me, since I had signed the letter.

One friend called to find out what had happened. As for the rest one has let us know that they think it best if we discontinue our close friendship, one would like to visit with me still, but is afraid of being "found out," and the others we haven't heard from, nor do we expect to. We feel better and better about it all every day, but I myself do have some days when I wake up from dreaming about friends I have left behind, and I feel depressed - a great sense of loss. We've had a number of ex-church members call and congratulate us on our return to sanity.

I've thought at various times about others' stories, in coming out of the Church, and mentioned to several people that I have had thoughts of writing a book about peoples' experiences, and have been surprised at the positive reception others have given that idea. I would appreciate the input of some of the AR readers. Would a book about the WCG/AC experience be a good idea? What is your own story (or the story of someone you were close to) in the WCG/AC? How did you come out and how was it handled? What did the experience do to you emotionally, spiritually? What have you gained? What have you lost? How would you help someone just beginning to "make the break"? What would you say to someone just beginning to read the PT, order the GN, and take the Correspondence Course? In short how can we who have come out help those who will come out after us - or those who are just going in? Thank you for your help.

Editor. Over the years we have run many letters from former WCG members telling of their experiences. Unfortunately, space limitations have forced us to omit many very interesting letters. We would therefore like to encourage readers to put their experiences on paper and send them to Mrs. Denzler. A book composed of such letters would make a real contribution to the lives of many. However, based on our own experiences with letters, let us make a few suggestions: (1) write very legibly, or better yet, type your story, (2) don't just send the first thing that comes into your mind. Once you've written your story, let it rest a while, get others to make suggestions, and then do at least one rewrite to perfect your work, and (3) if at all possible, give permission to have your name published. Mrs. Denzler said she would consider keeping author's names confidential, but some identification would perhaps give the reader more confidence that he is reading truth, not fiction. We wish Mrs. Denzler the very best in this project.

Try a little harder than the last letter. [I] would like a REPORT, not gossip and hearsay!

Please take our name off your mailing list. We don't know what misguided person gave it to you in the first place. If we had wanted "dung" in the house we would go to a farm and get the real thing. We certainly don't want it arriving in the mail!

I am preparing a thesis for a higher degree on religious cults - specifically the relationship between mass media propaganda (eg., Plain Truth, etc) and maintenance of cult membership (e.g., WCG) and find your material most helpful. It would be very helpful to my research to receive input from former WCG members in Australia. My objective is not to expose the Armstrong church as much as to understand the processes which lead up to membership and then maintain it. In addition, I may be able to assist those who are contemplating withdrawing from the WCG. This is a Christian ministry as a service of love to my Worldwide brethren. Interested persons should write to P.O. Box 170, Gordon N.S.W. Australia 2072.

My family and I are amazed at the wealth of information in your expose of the self-exalted ones at Worldwide. However, our contact here in ... is infrequent so could you add our name to your mailing list? Our copies will be read by many other families. When my brother was leaving the WCG he told them he wanted all the facts and to hear both sides of everything, not just what they at Pasadena wanted them to hear. He was told he was like Eve - she wanted to know it all too. Jeff Booth, a former minister, wanted some answers too and met with HWA. The great "Apostle" said to him: "How dare you question me? When you question me you question Jesus Christ!" (How about that?) When asked about the Pentecost fiasco he said God had bound his mistake in heaven for 40 years. Jeff said no, Mr. Armstrong, God doesn't bind errors. (It's no surprise that he was fired four times before the meeting was over.) Here's another dandy. When asked why he didn't give credit to all who had helped him, Mr. Armstrong screamed "No, no, it was all done through me, me. I was in charge! I gave you and everyone else everything on a silver platter. "He flew into a rage when J.H. Allen and G. G. Rupert were mentioned. He also told Jeff he was a nothing, a nobody, unteachable, unconverted, etc. This meeting took place in 1980 so it's really ancient history. At present Jeff and a group of former Worldwide people are meeting together in Amarillo, independent of any organization.

In the fall of 1980 you ran in Ambassador Report the news of the death of Shirley [Woodbury], my first wife. Lola Crain - a former WCG member whose maiden name was Lading - saw one of your Ambassador Reports from a friend, and she wrote me a sympathy letter. Lola's husband, James (Gene) Crain, had died at about the same time my wife Shirley had died. Since she asked me to drop by if I was ever in Kansas City and since she was still at that time in the WCG, I went by. She now is Mrs. Lola Woodbury, so thanks from us both for your help!

Kindly send me on a regular basis your publication Ambassador Report. I would be grateful if you could send me as many back copies as possible. I may not be able to pay or contribute anything to your paper because there is no foreign exchange in Guyana. We are not allowed to send out money from this country which is totally bankrupt. We don't even get basic foodstuffs to buy.

I am a longtime member of WCG. It's totally disgusting to see and hear what is going on here in Guyana in the church. Sometimes I wonder if we are heading for another Jim Jones "brew." Members are not thinking. They are not even proving all things as the Bible says.

Late News

On January 11, the Arizona Supreme Court refused to overturn a lower court order directing Herbert W. Armstrong to return to Tucson to testify in his divorce suit. HWA's lawyer, Allan Browne, claimed that requiring HWA to give testimony might prove fatal. Ramona Armstrong's attorneys, however, have given their assurance that HWA would be merely required to answer questions, "not required to sing and dance." Allan Browne told the court that HWA had planned to make a trip to China, but the court felt that if he can go to China, he can go to Tucson.

In the meantime, because of alleged harassment at her Tucson residence and the fear of violence, Ramona has left Arizona and is living somewhere in Nevada. There is now talk of having HWA extradited from California to compel his appearance in Tucson for testimony.

Again, it seems, we've put together an issue that is longer than originally planned and longer than we can afford. We suspect, however, that our readers will find the information in this issue both interesting and valuable. So we're going ahead on faith. Our thanks to all of you who are still with us in this endeavor.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR24 April, 1983

HWA - Still "No Show"

In our January 1983 issue we reported that Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the founder of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and Ambassador College, had been ordered by the Arizona Supreme Court to appear for a deposition in regard to the divorce suit he has initiated against his wife Ramona. But as of this writing, that deposition has yet to be taken.

While Armstrong's attorneys have argued that HWA's physical condition could not tolerate the stress of a deposition, during January and February HWA traveled widely in the Far East. During that period he met with King Bhumibol of Thailand, President Marcos of the Philippines, and Prime Minister Nakasone of Japan. All three leaders gave him awards and honors. After months of haggling, HWA's attorneys and Tucson attorney Louis Deckter, who represents Ramona, reached what appeared to be an agreement as to when and where HWA's deposition would be taken. It was to take place on February 25 in Allan Browne's Beverly Hills office.

On that date, as agreed, HWA made his appearance. But the planned questioning by Deckter never took place. Deckter, because Arizona law requires an Arizona-licensed court reporter, brought along an Arizona-licensed court reporter. But Browne, in a devilishly clever move, had his own California-licensed court reporter brought in and insisted that his reporter be used. With HWA sitting on the sidelines, the "lawyers engaged in scuffling and exchanged obscenities" (The Arizona Republic, March 19). Then, over strong objections by Deckter, Browne proceeded with his own questioning of HWA. Browne later said, "I asked him questions which disproves her [Ramona's] case entirely." Within a few days, Judge Robert Hooker ordered Herbert to appear in Tucson, March 21, to answer questions.

But before that could happen, lawyers representing HWA were back in court trying to get Judge Hooker disqualified. At a March 14 hearing before Judge G. Thomas Meehan, attorney David Wolfe claimed that Judge Hooker showed bias against HWA's lawyer

Ralph Helge, a key witness in the case, by referring to him with the Spanish slang word "chingadero." (On the surface, it appeared to us that this was not such an implausible argument as one of Helge's colleagues has referred to Helge as "the most confused and confusing individual I have ever known.") However, quoting from The Arizona Daily Star of March 15:

"Judge G. Thomas Meehan denied the motion, but not before several other profanities were aired in lawyers' efforts to find an appropriate English definition of the word. Hooker testified that his use of the word didn't refer to Helge, wasn't meant to offend him and was merely a nonprofane Southwestern slang term....

"Mrs. Armstrong says Helge witnessed the consummation of the prenuptial agreements. Helge joined in the action yesterday in asking Meehan to disqualify Hooker from the case. In a related matter, Helge is attempting to prevent Jack A. Ettinger and Louis L. Deckter, Mrs. Armstrong's attorneys, from subpoenaing church records. Hooker has not yet ruled on that.

"Hooker made the controversial remark when he learned that Helge had drafted a legal document related to the appeal of a previous ruling in the case. He said that Helge 'means trouble' and then used 'chingadero' in a subsequent phrase. 'I think it's obvious from the context that he's saying I'm not a very nice fellow,' Helge said to Meehan. Donna Alcantara, chief court interpreter, testified that the term can have numerous definitions, depending on how it was used. Among them are 'screwed up' and a similar more profane phrase. What Hooker meant is obscured more because his use was incorrect grammatically, she said. However, the term generally refers to things, not persons.

"Hooker, when called to testify, said his use of the term didn't refer to Helge but to the fact that a lawyer who is not an attorney of record in the divorce suit had drafted the document. Hooker said the case has been slowed and complicated by bad feelings and a lack of communication between lawyers on each side, and that Helge's intrusion into the legal matters is 'made to order for messing things up.' He translated his use of 'chingadero' as Southwestern slang for 'screw it up, foul it up, mess it up' He also said Armstrong's lawyers laughed when he used the term.

"In denying the motion, Meehan ruled that Helge had no standing to ask for Hooker's disqualification and that Wolfe had failed to prove that Hooker had shown bias toward either of the Armstrongs."

After that rebuff, church attorneys then attempted to have Judge Hooker's order blocked by going over his head to Lawrence Howard, chief judge of the Arizona State Court of Appeals (on March 17), and then to Chief Justice William A. Holohan of the Arizona Supreme Court (on March 18). Both judges backed up Hooker's order that HWA appear on March 21. But on March 21 Herbert still did not appear! David Wolfe, one of HWA's lawyers, claimed that he was in Jerusalem where he had developed "another heart-related health problem" (Pasadena StarNews, March 22). A few days later HWA flew back to Pasadena where he started to preside over the headquarters church's Passover service. Not far into the service, however, he asked one of his subordinates to take charge as he told the congregation he was too weak to continue. The next day, the suspicions of many were fueled when HWA showed up for services and gave a one-and-a-half-hour-long sermon.

As of this writing, the Armstrong divorce trial is still scheduled to begin April 25. But there may very well be a trial postponement. Church lawyers have brought theft charges against Ramona and have gotten an indictment against her, although she has not yet been arrested. And while Judge Hooker has again ordered HWA to appear in Tucson for questioning (on April 19), HWA's lawyers, for the third time, are attempting to get Judge Hooker disqualified.

One lawyer who has been following the Armstrong case said, "To the casual observer it may seem that Herbert's attorneys are putting one over on the Arizona judges. But I really suspect the judges are simply giving Herbert all the rope he needs to hang himself." That hanging may well be in the form of a huge award for Ramona. In the meantime, we are likely to witness quite a few more "chingaderos."

The Sinking Ship

A WCG member recently told me that his "local elder," subsequent to his visit to AC on "refresher," informed him that the ministers were shown films on WW II concentration camps in order to impress on them the horrors of the soon-coming Great Tribulation. The message being passed around, privately, is that WCG members should expect the "end of the Work" by mid-year, presumably because of a more precise calculation of their prophetic timetable - but, coincidentally, also due to HWA's persecution by the courts. Could you provide a comment on this situation?

-Australia

Editor. We would love to check this out directly with an official WCG spokesperson. But they are apparently too frightened to communicate with us in any way. Our mail indicates, however, that your information is correct. Note the following:

For Dec. 11 Herbert Armstrong sent a tape to each church to be played to the members. He said in the tape that the tribulation is near and most of the members would have to go through it because they were not obedient to him (sending money in). The money coming in to the WCG is low...

Here is the latest figure of how many church members there still are in the WCG and how many have left. Don Lawson, the minister of the Pittsburgh church, announced on Jan. 22 that 24,000 people have left the church while 52,000 remain as of this date. Now there are sermons on unity and zeal.

-Pennsylvania

I understand that the "Petra doctrine" was forcefully promoted by Gerald Waterhouse at the Feast of Tabernacles in Malta. Apparently it's the tribulation for those who are unfaithful to HWA - no matter what! One man, on hearing him for the first time in 15 years or so, was made almost physically ill. The jackboot is still worn by the ministry here, with big grown men and women in fear for their spiritual lives. GTA continues to be the bogeyman!

-England

We have just been told by Mr. HWA that the world is soon coming to an end. I have the feeling that this might be a diversionary tactic due to the huge [divorce] settlement Ramona wants. My husband believes every word that he says and therefore is very burdened with all of this.

Executive Exodus Updated

With thousands of members continuing the exodus out of the WCG, it is not surprising that many ministers have also been leaving the church's ministry. Many readers have asked that we update the "Executive Exodus" list found in our 92-page 1977 issue. We have found that very difficult to do, however, because the WCG has just not made that information readily available to us and appears to be somewhat secretive about who is, or is not, still a minister. Nevertheless, we have attempted to bring the "Executive Exodus," at least as far as ordained men, up to date.

The following list does not include nonordained personnel such as Robert Kuhn, Joe Bauer, Gary Prather, Bill Evans, Jim Thornhill, Herbert's brother Dwight Armstrong, etc. who have left the Armstrong organization. Nor does the list contain the name of Don Wineinger, who committed suicide after killing his wife in 1978, nor the names of a few such as Charles Dorothy, who left the WCG ministry and church, only to return later to employment by the college. Two or three names that appear on the list are men who may occasionally attend WCG services, even though they have resigned from the ministry or been removed for one reason or another. The list will undoubtedly require numerous additions and perhaps a deletion or two to be completely accurate. We will try to correct any such problems (including inaccurate spellings) in future issues.

WCG historians will note that of the 253 names listed below, about six left the WCG ministry before 1972. About forty left in 1974, and another forty or fifty left by 1977. The remainder (of the 253 names listed below) have left since HWA started putting the church "back on the track" by adopting the "Primacy of Peter" doctrine and declaring himself "The Apostle." As you know, it's often the men closest to the throne, so to speak, who know what's really going on in an organization and aren't deceived by the organization's propaganda. So the number of top men leaving in an organization is often an accurate indicator of the organization's health. Interestingly, 8 of the original 16 evangelists listed in the Nov. 26, 1973 Worldwide News have defected from the WCG, as have 7 of the 11 U.S. Area Coordinators listed in the June 1976 Worldwide News special supplement. In total, it appears about 20% of all WCG-ordained ministers are no longer working for the WCG - quite an indictment of the current WCG leadership. Here then is the updated ministerial "Executive Exodus" list:

The January 8, 1983 issue of The Houston Chronicle (p. 25) contained an excellent in-depth interview of Garner Ted Armstrong by Burke Watson. It's the most insightful piece we've seen on GTA in some time. Here are a few excerpts:

"The 52-year-old son of Herbert W. Armstrong says there is virtually no direct communication between them. He portrays his father, who is 90, as a victim of manipulation by his own underlings. He also warns of a major power struggle that he believes is brewing within the elder Armstrong's widespread organization among those who wish to succeed him. 'He would be so outraged at that suggestion, he'd go crazy' Ted Armstrong said recently from the Tyler headquarters of Church of God International, which he founded in 1978. 'And yet I definitely do feel that he is a victim of those surrounding him.'

"Armstrong said his father's empire, based in Pasadena, Calif., has become too large and complex for its founder to make all of the major decisions and keep up with daily affairs. 'He voices that privately to my sisters and brothers [in-law?] all the time,' he said. 'Obviously, there are hundreds of things going on in an organizational structure that large, of which he knows nothing.'...

"My feeling is that since my dad has not chosen to appoint a successor - but has left it up to a ministerial board of some sort to decide who his successor would be he has created a scenario for another round of political infighting and grasping for power, and that the transition is going to be perhaps quite rocky and maybe even ugly,' he said....

"To ask Armstrong about the state of his father's church is to invite second-hand tales of sinister people and activities almost like those of a cult, but he stops short of calling it that. Still, he relates stories such as that of a WCG pastor and his wife barging into the home of a married couple in their congregation, searching through bureau drawers for cosmetics and berating them on matters of cleanliness and discipline. 'We had a family call us and describe that very event,' he said. 'I don't think my dad knows that's happening. I think his policies allow that to happen, but I don't think he knows about it.'

"Armstrong said the Worldwide Church of God is still healthy, but only as long as his father is. He said he believes his father still has command of his mental faculties, although his advanced age is taking its predictable toll physically. His father suffered from congestive heart failure, he said, in the late 1970s....

"The only news of his father that Garner Ted gets is passed to him either through family members or close observers of the WCG. 'It's funny, you know,' Armstrong said. 'I don't know what's going on in his mind. Just the other day he had a family dinner, to which both my sisters went, and their children, and twice before they started dinner he looked down and said, "I wish Ted were here." He doesn't contact me. He's making those statements continually, and every few months a rumor will run rampant through the WCG that I'm about to be back with him, but never any communication from him.'

"Even if his father invited him back into the WCG, Armstrong said, there would have to be extensive talks about how the newer church would mesh with the old. 'It should not be assumed that he would make such a call,' he said. 'He won't. If he were to make such a call, the words "come back" would be at great issue. If he said, "Ted, I would like to talk to you" or "Ted, come to see me" you know, I'd be on the next plane. But the idea of abandoning something that has put down some pretty permanent roots, and is an ongoing, viable corporation, is absolutely unthinkable. I think there would have to be some serious talk about a very smooth method. I could see a scenario where the WCG would use the services of the Garner Ted Armstrong Evangelistic Association as its evangelistic arm.' But there would remain the question of compatibility between the two organizations. Armstrong said that, after he left the WCG, it took a 'screeching, 90-degree turn to the right.'...

"Power, ultimately, means getting some other human being to do what you want him to do,' Armstrong said. 'And money is power. But power for the sheer sake of power, over people's lives, is a goal in a lot of people's minds.'"

One Ambassador College alumnus wrote:

When Herbert Armstrong finally kicks the bucket, who will be the man to step into his size fourteen, or whatever, shoes? Will it be Ellis ("the Playboy") LaRavia? Or "Buffie" McNair? Or will it be Rod ("of mine anger") Meredith - the one-time Golden Gloves champ who now seems to pack as much spiritual punch as a Sunset Boulevard pimp? Or "The King of Petra" Gerald Waterhouse? Or will it be Joe ("the Mad Russian") Tkach? Or perhaps the wire-tapping, pistolpacking Dean boys? Frankly, I don't care! When I look at the charlatans and dimwits "The Apostle" has surrounded himself with, I say it's time to bring back Garner Ted!

Ted has his faults, and I don't doubt for a moment the stories the Report has done on him in the past. Nor do I believe he would be a perfect leader. But of those names thrown about as possible successors to HWA, he is the only one who I believe could save the situation.

I say this not as a CGI member - I am not. Nor am I a WCG member. I left years ago and have no desire to rejoin. But I am an Ambassador College graduate, and as silly as it may sound to some, I still have a warm spot in my heart both for that institution and for the people I knew there. Unless Ted returns, I am convinced Ambassador College will not survive, let alone improve. The clowns that will be left after HWA dies will destroy it.

Just compare the utter paranoia that now grips the WCG with the atmosphere in the CGI. I know many non-CGI Ambassador alumni who have visited Ted in Tyler and found him very cordial. But if you've left the WCG, just try visiting Ambassador! Or try getting a subscription to The Worldwide News if you're not a WCG member. (The CGI even sends their newspaper to some noncontributors.) Or try visiting a WCG service if you've been disfellowshipped. Contrast that with the fact that even Ambassador Report's publishers were welcome at the CGI's sabbath service in Arcadia, Calif. when Ted was out there a few years ago. I'm even told that CGI members are not threatened with expulsion if they read literature from Ernest Martin or the Report. Just let a WCG member try that one!

For all his problems, I think GTA has got to be given credit for leading his organization in a far more healthy manner than his father has led his own. But even more important, Ted has proven himself in one absolutely crucial test of character flunked by each and every one of his father's current subordinates - Ted has had the guts to stand up to him.

Yes, I say bring back GTA What do you think about this?

-California

Editor. You've brought up some interesting points. Within the last few years both David Antion and David Robinson (both of whom have essentially maintained their independence from CGI since leaving Worldwide) have pointed out to us that GTA has been HWA's number one victim. Considering how many have lost their families and lives by following HWA, that may be a bit of an exaggeration. But we are convinced that GTA has been one of HWA's victims.

Indeed, when one realizes the moral climate and psychological pressures to which he was subjected as a child, it is not difficult to see how some of Ted's weaknesses developed. The current situation is most ironic in that from 1972 onward, when GTA's sins were in the public spotlight continually, Ted knew of his father's horrendously immoral past but said nothing. Yet in 1978, when HWA threw Ted out of the WCG, HWA claimed Ted was insubordinate! When you consider how much Ted's been subjected to, you have to give him credit for his restraint and for being able to find the means whereby he can still show his father any respect whatsoever, which he does.

As for GTA coming back. Well, we think that like the nation of ancient Israel, the WCG and Ambassador College would be better off without a king. (Read the 8th chapter of I Samuel.) But the members of that church demand that a king rule over them. With that as a given, you may well be right. Those folks would probably be better off under GTA than under the fanatics that now surround and influence HWA. But Ted's return may never take place. GTA was in California for the week of Feb. 20 when HWA arrived back in the United States. HWA was informed that Ted was in town. Did he want to talk to his son? "No," the elder Armstrong said, "the time is not right."

Apparently, one obstacle remains for the time to be right. The whole WCG kingdom would be Ted's if he would do but one thing - "fall down and worship" HWA. Much to his credit, Ted has refused to do this - even as Jesus, in Matt. 4:8-9, refused to fall down and worship the devil. It has been five years since GTA has talked to his father face to face. Ted has told friends that ever since that last occasion - when he told his father he knew of his horrendous 10 years of incest sins - he has had the strange feeling they would never again see each other. Perhaps that's one Garner Ted Armstrong prophecy that will come true.

More Lawsuits

The WCG's continuing war with Ramona Armstrong is not its only legal worry. Leona McNair's lawsuit is progressing through discovery. (She is being represented by the Los Angeles firm of Greene, O'Reilly, Agnew & Broillet.) Recently Gary Bagley brought a suit against the WCG in regard to his 1979 extortion conviction, believing that HWA, who refused to appear at the trial, withheld relevant information. The case was thrown out on a demurrer, but his attorney, Richard Andrews of San Bernardino, says they are considering an appeal.

Then there is John Halbert, a former WCG member, who alleges the WCG is using certain government property around the U.S. for church services. He claims that this is in violation of federal law (see Brandon v. Board of Education of Guilderland, 487 F. Supp. 1219 (1980)). He has obtained the assistance of the ACLU and asks that any readers with information to help further corroborate his position contact him by writing to: John Halbert, 1003 E. Harry St., Tempe, Arizona 85281.

Of even more interest, especially to Ambassador College alumni, is a letter we received from Mr. Ed Holdren of Austin, Texas, who was a student at Ambassador College, Big Sandy, from 1966 to 1969. Like many others who have gone to Ambassador College, he has discovered that there is really no substitute for an accredited degree obtained from a legitimate educational institution. Mr. Holdren wrote us:

Last summer I decided to return to college. I contacted the University of Texas here in Austin to see if there was a chance that they would now accept my Ambassador College hours. The Registrar was quick to inform me that UT still refuses to accept AC hours. He did say, however, that if AC was accredited now, he would accept most of my hours.

I anxiously contacted the State Coordinating Board to see if AC had finally obtained accreditation. A Dr. Stanton Calvert told me that he and a team of officials had just recently (in May '82) traveled to Big Sandy to resume ongoing talks on ACs accreditation. The state officials were quite dismayed when AC suddenly and flatly admitted they no longer want, nor are seeking, accreditation. Ambassador College broke its promise, then admitted it!

Mr. Holdren's experience is no different than that of thousands of other Ambassador College alumni who were repeatedly told by college administrators that AC was on the way toward getting fully accredited. Those same alumni later were chagrined to discover that the college's administration was not willing to fulfill accreditation requirements or simply changed its mind. The college's position on seeking accreditation has flip-flopped so many times over the years it is difficult to believe the college's board was ever sincere in any of its pro-accreditation statements.

Holdren believes he and many other alumni have been wronged, and he is looking for a legal remedy to the situation. He has already obtained the services of a top attorney, but he says he could use the assistance of other Ambassador College alumni, faculty, and students in building a thorough case. If you wish to help, if you have information of relevance, or if you'd simply like to wish him good luck, he may be contacted by writing: Mr. Ed Holdren, 4412 Dovehill Drive, Austin, Texas 78744.

Emmett Hocter - Super Activist

Of the many anti-Armstrong activists we have known over the years, few have equaled the zeal of Emmett Hocter (16403 Main St., La Platte, Nebraska 68123). Hocter, a former WCG member, has an MA degree in history, has written an expose on the history of Omaha's annexation of South Omaha, and is currently working on a novel with certain WCG overtones. In years past he also wrote a number of interesting papers about the WCG. (Many of these have, unfortunately, been lost. So if any of you have copies, Mr. Hocter would appreciate hearing from you.)

But Mr. Hocter's activism does not end with his writing. For years he has pressured radio and TV stations in the Midwest to drop the Armstrong program. But, he says, "I've come to see that stations care very little about the effects their programs have on the public. They are primarily interested in making money. So unless a legal threat exists, or a massive campaign with economic portent, stations don't really mind doing business with the Armstrongs."

In recent months Hocter has shifted his emphasis away from pressuring stations and has focused on informing church groups of the dangers of Armstrongism. He has already contacted almost 200 churches in the Omaha, Nebraska area. Says Hocter, "I just get out the phone book and go down the list of churches in the Yellow Pages. I simply call the pastor of the church and ask him if he knows much about Herbert Armstrong. I then proceed to tell him of my experiences. I've found that the more 'liberal' churches tend to be less interested. But some of the more fundamentalist denominations, such as the Baptists, Church of Christ, and Assemblies of God, are fertile ground. Their pastors are usually quite concerned about the cult problem. Many not only ask for copies of Ambassador Report but promise to inform their congregations about what I've told them."

Tidbits

We are sorry to report the suicide-death of Phillip Apartian, son of Evangelist Dibar Apartian, the head of the WCG's French-language operations. Phillip killed himself on the front lawn of a Pasadena home March 31 after apparently calling the police. As the police arrived on the scene, he shot himself in the chest with a 12-gauge shotgun. Friends say the nineteen-year-old had been suffering from depression.

For many years the one characteristic separating the WCG from other major cults seemed to be that its main proselytizing thrust was not aimed at children. Now that may be changing. The March 7 Worldwide News announced that the WCG's magazine Youth 83 goes to 100,000 young subscribers, 75% of whom are not affiliated in any way with the WCG. According to its managing editor, Dexter Faulkner, "Mr. Armstrong has always visualized the magazine as a junior Plain Truth."

The March 21 Worldwide News announced that the government of Czechoslovakia has again granted the WCG permission to hold Feast of Tabernacles activities in the city of Brno. While that country's government is communist and therefore pro-atheistic, it obviously does not mind putting ideology aside when it results in bringing in badly needed Western currency. Besides, in the May 1983 Plain Truth magazine, a glowing article about life in Czechoslovakia was published. Ironically, it is the Catholic Church that is being persecuted now in that country (Los Angeles Times, April 7, p.2).

Readers who got our large 1977 issue will recall how we led the battle to prevent the WCG from appropriating, without cost, the $2.5 million Vista Del Arroyo federal building in Pasadena. Shortly thereafter the WCG dropped its request for the property and the federal government instead decided to turn over the building to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. The controversy surrounding the property continues, however. In a major article by Claire Spiegel, the Los Angeles Times (March 28, p.1) reported that with $10 million appropriated by Congress (under somewhat unusual circumstances) for the rehabilitation of the building, only one justice has agreed to make use of the facility. The other justices are refusing to move in, with some claiming the appropriation was a terrible waste of taxpayers' money. The acquisition of the building and the appropriation drive was spearheaded by Judge Richard Chambers of Tucson, Arizona, who appears to be at the center of the controversy.

Nevada State Senator Bill Hernstadt has come up with a creative solution to the cult-explosion problem. On Feb. 3 he introduced a bill in the Nevada legislature that would allow civil actions against cults which failed to make good on promises of inner peace and other psychological benefits after demanding contributions. The bill - which would force cult organizers to pay triple damages if found guilty - is not likely to pass (Los Angeles Herald Examiner, Feb. 5). Could you imagine what would happen if politicians were also held legally responsible to make good on promises?

Just days before Herbert Armstrong arrived in the Philippines for a meeting with President Marcos, the President's wife, Imelda, was embroiled in a controversy with the Catholic Church. It seems that Mrs. Marcos was the organizer of an international film festival in Manila which, according to Catholic authorities, featured uncensored torrid sex films. On January 28 Mrs. Marcos sloughed off the criticism by saying, "I am sorry that cheap pornography has affected some fragile senses, but this is just part of growing up."

With former evangelist and CPA Stan Rader no longer acting as church treasurer, the WCG has reverted back to its old bad habit of releasing unaudited, incomplete, and overly abbreviated financial statements - though treasurer Leroy Neff does promise that Arthur Andersen & Co. will provide a combined worldwide audit of the entire "Work" for 1982. In the Feb. 21, 1983 Worldwide News it was revealed that the church/college worldwide took in $117.5 million and spent $116.1 million, with receipts up 10.2% and expenditures up 14.4%. However, the percentage change figures given in the table don't match those stated in the accompanying article, and the 1981 figures include only grants to the AICF, which makes it impossible to compare these numbers with those given last year by the WCG.

All considered, it is not difficult to see why the WCG is not among those charitable and religious groups listed in the semi-annual listing of major charities put out by the Council of Better Business Bureaus (1515 Wilson Blvd., Suite 300, Arlington, VA 22209). That list is called "Give But Give Wisely" and is available for $1.00. Also of interest are that organization's free publications: "Tips for Charitable Giving" and "CBBB Standards for Charitable Solicitations."

While all divorces are, in a sense, very tragic, the Armstrong divorce suit is having one positive result. Many are beginning to see that Herbert Armstrong is not all that he claims. Many Bible students wonder, for instance, why HWA does not simply follow the admonition given by Jesus in Luke 12:11-12. After all, while the true apostles did not bribe their way in to see judges, magistrates, and kings, neither did they hire lawyers to get them out of such appearances.

Of course, neither do we read of them suing their wives for divorce. Isn't it ironic that Garner Ted Armstrong, for all his personal problems, is still married to "the wife of his youth" while HWA, the self-vaunted "conservative" has not only (according to such authorities as Dave Robinson) embraced the most libertine conduct (geisha girls, oral sex, masturbation, dildos, etc.), but is now attempting to put away the wife he once said God gave him. Not surprisingly, many are shocked by his conduct. Ron Dart, of the CGI, seemed to echo the attitude of many when he recently stated that he just can't see himself ever going back to the WCG because Herbert Armstrong "has gotten far, far too liberal."

Groups of Interest

The ministers have been pressuring members to increase their offerings to help Mr. HWA - even to sending in their small change. Are there any other churches that observe all the Holy Days and the Sabbath, other than the WCG or CGI?

-Colorado

Editor: Yes. For a listing of quite a few, see the Directory of Sabbath-observing Groups, published by The Bible Sabbath Association, Fairview, Oklahoma 73737.

* * *

Mr. Dean Hough, of the Concordant Publishing Concern, recently informed us that his organization has formed a fellowship group called the "Saviour of All Fellowship." Supporters of universal reconciliation, who would like information about the fellowship, its newsletter, or its proposed membership directory, should write to: Saviour of All Fellowship, P.O. Box 2056, Canyon County, CA 91351.

I know that in the AR you list religiously oriented groups that the readers might find to be of interest. There is one that I have found to be of value: The Society of Jewish Science, 825 Round Swamp Rd, Old Bethpage, NY 11804. I would especially recommend their book Peace of Mind ($6 postpaid).

-Harry Eisenberg, New York City

Mr. Fred Coulter, disassociated from the Biblical Church of God as of last November, has now formed another church called The Christian Biblical Church of God. The address is P.O. Box 1245, Hollister, CA 95023.

Every so often we get letters from readers asking the whereabouts of Larry Gilbert Johnson, the founder of L.I.B.R.A. and the Congregation of Yah. We have never been too enthusiastic about Mr. Johnson's ministry, so we really haven't made much of an effort to follow his career. But we have been informed by Mr. Michael Grifone, one of his associates, that L.I.B.R.A. is now headquartered in Phoenix, Arizona, where Mr. Johnson is currently researching in the area of astrology and reincarnation. He has also, apparently, produced a new solar calendar. Mr. Grifone has been critical of our anti-polygamy comments and the way we covered Johnson's use of guinea pigs in what he calls "living prophecies" (Ambassador Report, Oct. '81, p. 10). Mr. Grifone feels we distorted Johnson's position by quoting out of context, and he has offered to supply the entire newsletter quoted to anyone requesting it. His address is: Michael Grifone, P.O. Box 274, Station A, Ottawa, K1N 8V2, Canada.

One Ambassador Report reader, who was seriously disappointed by his association with one religious group mentioned in Ambassador Report, wrote us: "I feel that if you print names of groups that, in effect, cause a certain number to respond and maybe get 'taken' by them, you should also print letters that give a warning."

Another reader wrote: "I have always enjoyed reading your literature, but I've wished that you would be a little more careful about leading people to spin-offs. By publishing names of new groups starting up, former WCG members are going to turn to them instead of the Christian churches and Christian ministers who are knowledgeable of the cults."

Very briefly, (1) we are not "members" of any of the groups we have mentioned, (2) groups are mentioned because many find their mere existence of interest, and (3) some organizations, such as the FBR, have much of value to offer. Certain other groups we've mentioned could well be described as plain wacky. But even some of those have at least something of interest to offer, and (4) we do not have the resources nor the inclination to do significant research on groups other than the WCG. After all, as implied by the title of this publication (and as alumni of that institution), Ambassador College (and its supporting church) is where our editorial focus lies. If, after leaving the WCG, you have joined another group and again were disappointed by a cult-like situation, perhaps you should ask yourself what it is exactly that you are searching for. Besides, if we published only information in line with our own viewpoints, how valuable would the AR be? Wouldn't we become as propagandistic as The Plain Truth magazine?

An Important Bibliography

In our Dec. 1, 1980 issue we reported that Mr. John Nugent of Laguna Beach, California was compiling an extensive bibliography of information about the WCG. Unfortunately, that bibliography was never completed as Mr. Nugent found the task to be far more taxing than anticipated. However, we are now very happy to report that such a bibliography is soon to be completed by Mr. John Buchner, a researcher in Australia.

Mr. Buchner is compiling an extensive bibliography about the WCG as part of the requirements for a higher degree. His bibliography, which incorporates Mr. Nugent's previous work, will be completed by mid-year and will be made available to the public in book form. This bibliography should prove an invaluable tool for anyone doing serious research on Herbert Armstrong, the WCG, and related groups. The price of each copy will be $10.00 (U.S.) postpaid. Those interested should write to: Mr. John Buchner, P.O. Box 170, Gordon, N.S.W. 2072, Australia.

Please keep in mind that it will be a few months before the book comes off the press and is mailed. Readers may also find the following request by Mr. Buchner of interest:

I am collecting a research library of all materials produced by the Armstrongs. A later project is to produce a comprehensive index to the Plain Truth, Good News, etc. from 1934 to 1983. This would form the basis of a content analysis for over 50 years. My speciality in mass communication involves the analysis of audio-visual and print materials in connection with societal and ideological issues, as well as theology. My files are complete from 1964 onwards, with a small number of earlier issues. I probably will commence this project in 1984. My request is that you bear in mind this project and alert any colleagues who may be able to contribute material or partial indexes already attempted.

Literature of Interest

"An Analysis of Garner Ted Armstrong's The Real Jesus" by Robert Paul Howard: This is a thorough, scholarly, and well-documented research paper. As this work was not intended for mass commercial distribution, but to fulfill academic requirements (Mr. Howard is working toward a master's degree in religion), only a limited number of copies are being made available to the public. A copy of this 69-page work can be obtained for $5.00, including postage, by writing to: Robert Paul Howard, 171 Cleves Ave., Cleves, Ohio 45002.

The TSL Publishing House is planning to send an open letter to HWA. They ask that we "print a request in the AR, that some of the readers may send us names of friends, loved ones, or others in the WCG so that we may send them the open letter." Write to: TSL Publishing House, P.O. Box 18122, Cleveland Heights, Ohio 44118.

Teamwork - a new religious newsletter published by the Banfield Church of God, 6975 Murray Rd., Jackson, Mississippi 49201.

When Your Money Fails... The 666 System Is Here by Mary Stewart Relfe - This book, which draws connections between the Beast of Revelation and modern banking, the multinationals, and the rise of the computer, is popular among many Christian fundamentalist groups. (We've also noticed that certain WCG breakoffs have appropriated this book's teachings, without giving their source any credit.) It is $4.95 at Christian bookstores, and $6.50 when ordered from Ministries, Inc., P.O. Box 4038, Montgomery, Alabama 36104.

"Is Nisan 15th the First Day of Unleavened Bread?" by Glenn Young - this paper has been making the rounds in WCG circles and got the author booted out of that church. The paper is available for $1.00 by writing to the author at Rt. 1, Box 298B, Glenwood, Ark. 71943.

WCG followers in Australia may be interested in knowing that the WCG has filed quite a few revealing documents (financial statements, incorporation papers, etc.) with the Office of the Commissioner for Corporate Affairs, 21 Turbot St., Brisbane 4001. The documents are available for public inspection.

* * *

"Are You in a Cult?" - in this excellent little article author Albert James Dager shows 26 characteristics of a cult. The WCG has 25 of them and is pretty close to having all 26. We strongly recommend this article for anyone having any association with the WCG. It is available free by writing to: Media Spotlight, P.O. Box 1288, Costa Mesa, CA 92626.

One of our readers, Mr. Jonathan Ross (1362 Kingfisher, No. 16, Sunnyvale, CA 94087) has informed us that he is doing a good deal of research on the early history of the "Adventist Family" of churches (sabbatarian groups). He has free literature available for AR readers interested in this subject. One paper he sent us, called "The Church of God History and the Second Advent Movement," is quite interesting.

David Robinson, the author of Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, has asked that we remind readers he is still sending his book to libraries. As a result, many WCG members are finding out the truth about HWA. If you would like to help in this project, send $1.50 per book to help cover postage and handling (up to two books will be sent to each library) and the name and address of each library to which the book(s) should be sent. Write to: David Robinson, c/o John Hadden Publishers, P.O. Box 35982, Tulsa, OK 74135.

Mr. Robinson told us, "It's inevitable that when HWA dies he will be exposed for what he really is. Nothing will remain hidden; those following him now will eventually see the true Herbert Armstrong. In the meantime, let's make the facts available to all who will listen."

Focus Journal, 207 E. 85th Street, Suite 450, New York, NY 10028 - this is a new quarterly periodical by and for former cult members. It is $15 per year ($20 overseas). They are looking for articles by former cult members.

The Citizen's Freedom Foundation (National Office, P.O. Box 86, Hannacroix, New York 12087) is one of the leading anti-cult organizations in the country. They put out a monthly newsletter ($15 per year, $20 overseas). Their March 1983 issue had an excellent article about the Worldwide Church of God written by Brenda Denzler.

Denzler's Project Continues

Many thanks to you for running my letter in the last issue of the AR. I have received a number of interesting responses, some offers of financial assistance, and some rather unusual responses as well. One person, however, suggested I make an official questionnaire for people to respond to. This seems a good idea to me and will perhaps help those who are inclined to respond to know just what to say. In fact if someone isn't fond of writing, I would welcome cassette taped responses to the questions I pose on the questionnaire. This short letter is to encourage all those who are giving some thought to responding to write to me for a questionnaire. This is not necessary, but perhaps will stimulate thought or give it a form that is easier to write down or speak. I would appreciate receiving a stamped, self-addressed envelope with requests.

Brenda Denzler

Newton, KS 67114*

Editor: Some years ago two of Ambassador Report's editors were having lunch at the Salt Shaker restaurant in Pasadena when a news reporter for one of the area's major papers walked up and asked if he could join them. When he sat down, he made an unforgettable comment. He said, "You know, it's kind of funny, but some of the very nicest people I have ever known are people who were members of the Worldwide Church of God" - and left. His comment was the result of years of experience covering the WCG in the Pasadena area. His comment echoes our own feelings.

Over the years the Report has received many hundreds, if not thousands, of letters telling remarkable stories about the WCG and of personal tragedy and triumphs. A fellow writer who recently visited us read a few letters we had recently received and commented, "You get some of the world's most interesting mail." That's true. But sadly, many of these letters cannot be printed because of the space and financial limitations we are under.

That is why we hope that many of you will help Mrs. Denzler with her project (see our last issue for more details). She is an excellent writer and has the required enthusiasm to finish the project. We believe her book will help many people.

Letters

Your work is truly important For all the large churches in our nation and the billions they collect for their physical structures, work such as yours is sadly neglected. To bring to light evil and corruption is a basic scriptural assignment (Matt. 24:4).

It seems from reading the letters that a large number of those you disabuse of Armstrongism turn to a sort of wishy-washy humanism. Tell me, if you can, what happens (in a religious sense, that is) to those in the WCG who have left because of your revelations. Do they join a mainstream church, a fundamentalist church, or no church?

-Minneapolis

Editor: We have been asked this question many times, but we really cannot give a precise or documented answer. However, from our mail and what we've observed in Pasadena, it seems that most who leave the WCG do not go back into mainstream religion. About a third that leave join another Sabbatarian church such as the CGI. About a third seem to become de facto agnostics, that is, they maintain no formalized set of religious beliefs. (This does not necessarily mean they have adopted some type of "wicked" outlook, as many in this category still seem to be quite upright in lifestyle. Also, this may be only a temporary phase, as many later seem to regain an interest in theological questions.) And the remaining third seem to be best categorized as "non-denominational" Christians. This latter category would include those who support organizations such as the Foundation for Biblical Research or the Concordant Publishing Concern. Of the thousands who have left the WCG, we've heard of only three who have rejoined the Catholic Church, one or two the Jewish faith, one has become a Methodist, one a Presbyterian, two Congregationalist, and four or five have turned to Eastern religions. We have heard of only about three or four who have aligned themselves with the Humanist movement. These figures are, of course, only very approximate estimations, but they should give you some idea as to what former WCG people believe now.

Since resigning from Herbie's personal church, I have had the privilege to actually begin to comprehend scripture, at least somewhat. However, I think we must give Herbie credit for being an excellent salesman, and even creating salesmen in his own image. For such are false teachers, and no marvel, even Satan himself is transformed into a false "light" messenger. A messenger is one sent forth, just as an apostle is one sent forth, as Herbie is so fond of laying on the "brethren."

I realize that to be able to report Herbert's apparent human faults (of which I was once taught that he had none) is totally correct for you to do, in light of II Thes. 3:6. However, "cattle" cannot read and seldom ever understand what scripture plainly states. I was at one time "cattle" and lived in fear absolute, not of God's word, but Herbie and his "Levite kingdom, " who feed his flock every Saturday. They all look hollow-eyed, at times. I have often wondered about that. I met Ted once, and he looked hollow-eyed too. Jon Hill stalked around like "big daddy" at one of Herbert's "holy day" meetings and mentioned that the "holy" men had to cut their lunch break short to discuss "your marital problems," you clods. Well, some clods don't have those problems now, especially some who committed suicide.

If only Herbert and his "Levites" didn't close the minds of their believers! Those believers have so much "faith" in his trashy writings and teachings, it now seems absolutely unbelievable to me. There is only one way Herbie is able to do it. He is preaching for god, all right, but it is not the God and Father of Jesus Christ (Eph. 1.3). Paul is quite clear on the matter, as to who the god of this world really is. I am not casting stones, I am only repeating what Holy Writ can and does tell us.

I must admit: I found your address by "accident" in a magazine article on a newsstand and it was not the "blind truth." Personally, I don't care what Herbert says or even does. I do care, however, for the "sheep" and "cattle" he rides upon. How you are able to read and listen and find out what you write about without vomiting (maybe you do) is a mystery. I mean, how much can your stomach take of Herbie's lifestyle?

If someone wants to live as he evidently does, that's OK, but even Caesar gave his subjects some freedom to read things other than what he, Caesar, penned. How could we, who are free of Herbert and his kingdom, have been so stupid? (just read Eph. 6:12-13.)

I actually pity Herbert and his teachers. I really do. They crucify Christ in all their sermons and stupid writings, especially in their baptizings (I Cor. 1: 17). I did not intend to get into scripture in this letter, but Herbert uses it at every whim or "bright light" that pops into his totally deceived mind. Let us give him credit though. He truly is a fantastic "salesman."

-Oscar Murray, Ohio

Editor. You aren't the only one who has commented on Herbert's sales ability.

Advertising man George J. Abrams praised HWA's advertising abilities in his book How I Made A Million Dollars With Ideas (p. 186).

My husband who belongs to the WCG has been out of work for six weeks. He draws a $90.00 per week unemployment check, and $30.00 of that goes to HWA, the widows' fund, and the vacation fund, so my $118.00 check is all I have, which doesn't cover much.

-Indiana

I am not much into scripture quoting. This tithing business, however, deserves some attention. It is such a universally perpetrated con, and I have never come across anyone exposing it. Do you know of anyone who has dealt with this, especially the "proof texts"? I have not as yet been able to respond adequately to those who question me. Perhaps the reason was that I was responding to people who receive tithes and are inherently somewhat closed minded! I feel somewhat negative about paying such a large amount of money without knowing a little more about the product.

-Florida

Editor: We have repeatedly recommended The Tithing Fallacy put out (free of charge) by The Foundation for Biblical Research, P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102. We have seen only one paper that ever attempted to refute their booklet - an unpublished paper by Ron Dart of the pro-tithing Church of God, International. (With all due respect to Mr. Dart, we did not feel his paper substantiated his position.) We're still convinced that The Tithing Fallacy is the best, most thoroughly researched work we've ever seen on that subject, and we strongly recommend it.

Whatever happened to Mr. Sherwin McMichael? He was a minister when I first entered the church about 16 years ago. I can't believe how that man dominated our lives - even to the point of deciding who we were to live with. I was a single girl at the time and didn't want to share my apartment with a particular girl, but was told that if I didn't they'd kick me out of the church. The year spent trying to cope was a disaster and I ended up moving out - with Mr. McMichael's permission of course. Thank God those days are over.

-Minnesota

Editor. Mr. McMichael has been thrown out of the WCG (they claimed he had a problem with "demons"). We understand he is now working as a salesman. We heard that, disillusioned with HWA he recently told another exminister. "Herbert Armstrong really fooled us, didn't he?"

I was fascinated by your mention of HWA's prosthetic dildo! I'm afraid I'm rather naive and don't know what one is, but don't you think that a prophetic dildo would be more to the point?

Editor. For an in-depth explanation of prosthetics, see the "California Living" section of the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, Jan. 9, 1983, p. 11 or a detailed, medically up-to-date sex manual that discusses mechanical solutions to male erectile difficulties.

It was brought to my attention that you have publications concerning an evil organization called the "Worldwide Church of God" of Herbert W. Armstrong. I have been married to my wife for 20 years. Over the last two years she has become involved with this organization, which is turning our peaceful life into hell.

-England

My lovely wife (a most faithful Christian) was baptized into HWA's cult in 1960. Well, they just booted her out for asking too many questions! I'm so mad I can spit! Send me everything you can and put me on your mailing list please.

-California

God forgive that lying, conniving, little monster who has so grossly misrepresented God's great truth and has caused indescribable heartache and suffering to so many little people! A dear sweet friend of mine has been totally blind for four years because she believed she could not take her insulin! And she is still in the WCG. The only peace I have now about the organization and all of its leaders is to believe that God is allowing it and them to go their mile and finally He surely will deal with all the evil being perpetrated under the guise of "the truth."

-Canada

I praise and thank our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ for your newsletters and John Tuit's book for being a big part in bringing my oldest son out of the WCG. He is still struggling, but I feel sure that our Lord has everything under control. God bless each of you for your endless efforts in bringing out the truths about WCG and Herbert Armstrong.

My son has been disfellowshipped for marrying a very wonderful girl whom our Lord sent at just the right time. (In January 1982 his first wife was killed in a train-auto accident) This fine, young woman, an old love from high school and college came in and helped with the three young children. Did the WCG people come to the rescue? No! The minister had the gall to ask my son how much insurance he had on his deceased wife. He never asked him if he needed help with the children or if he needed funds - nothing.

-Wisconsin

We left many behind whom we had considered friends - some of whom know better than to believe what they are being taught. It seems they prefer to believe a lie. Others are quite sincere and believe anything they are told even if the "truth" changes from week to week.

Editor: You might be interested in reading II Thes. 2:11.

I've tried The Plain Truth. Now I want the real truth. Please do not use my name as I have relatives in top positions in the WCG.

-Texas

Although many fine people do attend the WCG and keep on supporting it, it's all sort of crazy - like people hooked on alcohol, tobacco, and tranquilizers.

- Minnesota

I received your letter some days ago and was pleased that your efforts are alerting so many to the awfulness of this predatory barbarian to whom they have given too much, too long and too often. I wonder about the future of those in this cult and the damage which will be done to their minds with the constant bombardment of archaic habits and retarding influences.

It is a curious thing the control one man can exercise over others to the extent of whether they go in or go out, whether or what they eat, or drink, or whatever they do, whether in thought or action, they do it all to the glory of, in this case, Mr. H. It is distressing to recall I was once a devout member - now it all seems terribly alien and imbecilic.

I also wonder what the end of all this will be. What is the answer to this complex experience? What you are doing at the AR has helped me and others tremendously. So stay the course!

-West Virginia

Keep up the good work. I guess if I would have had cancer and been cured I would still want to keep up the current goings on in the field of cancer research. It's the same with Herbert and his organization. I have been cured of this cancer called Herbert W. Armstrong and the Worldwide Church of God, but I still want to keep abreast of the latest goings on in the field of their tragic endeavors in modern religion, for better or worse.

-Texas

Mr. Trechak, I have been told that, besides being a writer, you have had some experience in the music field. So I wonder if you could answer the following: (1) It is rumored in church circles that Led Zepplin's "Stairway to Heaven" was originally conceived of by someone with parents in the WCG and that it is a put-down of the church. Have you heard this? (2) Elton John's "Border Song" seems to be about people leaving the WCG. Is it? (3) A friend told me that Garner Ted Armstrong has formed a band called "The Bozo Band " My friend says they sing funny. Do you have any details on this?

-California

Editor. (1) I've heard the "Stairway to Heaven" story many times, but have never seen any evidence that it is true. By the way, radio station executives claim that "Stairway to Heaven" is the country's most requested song. (2) "Border Song" does have some funny WCG parallels, but I don't think that was intentional. The words are by Bernie Taupin, who was never a WCG member. (3) What your friend probably heard was "Intro Outro" by The Bonzo Dog Band, a popular British rock group of the late '60s. That song parodies a number of famous personalities, including GTA, who was well-known in Britain at that time. Regardless of false rumors apparently spread by certain WCG ministers who claim Ted is planning to go into show business, GTA has not formed a group called "The Bozo Band" - at least as far as we know.

I always enjoy your publications. As you well know, I am in constant need of prolonged belly laughing. Your chronicle on the misadventures of Herbert and his merry men (and women) fulfills that need in every way. I guess there's no one quite like old Herbert. He, on a positive note, makes an insane world seem very sane indeed.

-Joe Nazarini, California

Editor: Mr. Nazarini, after graduating from Ambassador, going through a painful divorce, and making the break from the WCG, spent time in Africa with the Peace Corp, earned an accredited Master's degree, has remarried, and currently works as a director for a retirement home, besides teaching at California State University in Los Angeles. He has also said, "If I didn't laugh, I'd cry" - something we, too, try to remember.

Your reply to Allan Browne was a delight to read! With all your smarts, how in ---- did you ever get mixed up with the WCG in the first place?

-California

Editor: I was once very young and foolish. I am also reminded of this scene from the movie Casablanca:

RENAULT (Claude Rains): And what in Heaven's name brought you to Casablanca?

RICK (Humphrey Bogart): My health. I came to Casablanca for the waters.

RENAULT: Waters? What waters? We are in the desert.

RICK: I was misinformed.

I have never before written to an obscure publication which exposes an obscure religious cult, so I hope I get my 20 cents' (the price of the stamp) worth.

"Brilliant" is a much-too-common word - even more common than "sick" or "senile" - but brilliant is the word that to me seems apt regarding your reply to the legal firm representing Herbert W. Armstrong and/or (are they one and the same?) the Worldwide Church of God. Don't let this go to your head, because pride goes before obnoxiousness, but I felt it was almost as good as Elijah mocking the prophets of Baal. (I want you to know I am behind you 100 percent, but don't print my name because I don't want to take a chance of being awakened suddenly late at night.)

The world does seem rife (that's a snub-nosed rifle or a female mate of one) with lawyers with nothing more to do than chase ambulances or file harassment or nuisance lawsuits on behalf of self-proclaimed apostles. Perhaps they would spend more time defending the fatherless and the widow, if only it paid more.

However, I do not believe: (a) The only good lawyer is a dead lawyer. (b) If all legal briefs were thrown into the ocean, it would be so much better for people and so much worse for the fish. It just seems that way!

I'm sure there are good and bad in all professions (except maybe the world's oldest). Please forgive my cynicism. It only happens to me during a full moon. When I read about HWA meeting with Ariawongsgatayana, "the 18th Supreme Patriarch of Thai Buddhism," I thought I was reading Mad magazine!

Far be it from me to criticize such a high-quality publication as the AR but I would like to point out one very minor mistake. On page 6 (January 1983 issue), next to last paragraph, the sentence appears: "Oh yes, he'll need a few of his servants and a few top myrmidons around to keep the facade in tact." This sentence should have been followed with [sic] to indicate your error, or better yet "in tact" (two words) should have been "intact" (one word), which is correct. I know these things because I used to be Asst. Managing Editor of the Plain Truth. (But I've repented! You'll notice in this letter I've used no words in CAPS and only a few in italics! I still have a problem with exclamation marks at the end of sentences, though!)

If you have a booklet entitled, 'Just What Do You Mean ... Myrmidons?' I could use a few. Mynnidons, that is, not booklets.

I know you don't need my recommendation, but I do want to thank you and your staff for their work, effort and research in producing the AR over the years. I'm sure you have helped many people. You've done good for somebody from New Jersey! Your work probably will never be completed. Religious fanatics, too sincere and too trusting, are ever with us. It seems part of the human condition. I'm sure much more mercy will be extended to the deceived (the deceives?) than to the deceivers. Enough preaching. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, and in general a big ruckus (paraphrase of the Revised Republican version).

I will write to you again as soon as I can soak the cancellation marks out of some more stamps, and never end a preposition with a sentence.

*-Anonymous and Forgotten
(like everyone else who worked on the PT staff)*

P. S. Did you know that the digits in your box number (4068) add up to 18? 18 can be divided by three sixes. Did I say three sixes? 666!

Editor: 4068 is also evenly divisible by 1, 2,3, 4,9, and 12, but we try not to let it go to our heads.

It will be interesting to see how the Herbert versus Ramona Armstrong legal battle turns out and whether Herbert Armstrong will present himself for the deposition. It is understandable that he is so reluctant to appear, as it would be a situation where he is not the almighty authority or the magnanimous benefactor, and this would make him feel like a fish out of water. Imagine God's apostle being questioned in this manner! Herbert Armstrong has virtually required some of his followers to commit acts of civil disobedience which would result in their imprisonment, yet he won't even appear in a court of law concerning a matter which he himself has initiated.

-Australia

Editor: There are undoubtedly many questions HWA would not want to answer. But his unbounded arrogance may very well be the main reason he is being so uncooperative with the courts. One respected evangelist who has personally known HWA for well over twenty years described him to us this way: "Mr. Armstrong is the most lawless human being you will ever encounter. He has absolutely utter contempt for all constituted authority and law. He may preach humility, respect for law and obedience to authority, but that's for the other guy. He makes the rules; he doesn't obey them. He is completely self-centered, a law unto himself." What a total contrast to the example set by Jesus and his true apostles!

I am always very touched by the Letters section of your Report. It's always so sad to read the horrible things that people have had to endure because of one disgusting, old man. I also find myself growing happy at the same time because I realize that these people have escaped from that environment and built happier lives.

My mother was in the WCG for 12 years and Ambassador Report helped her find out the truth about that organization. She, like many others, took the original Report to church and started asking too many unanswerable questions of her minister. She was quickly kicked out.

Unfortunately, the experience was a very shattering one for her (as it is for many people). Although it's been eight years, sometimes I wonder if she has yet recovered from the experience of losing friends and self-esteem which comes from finding out the truth about HWA and the WCG.

Self-esteem is a very important ingredient not only in leaving the church, but also in becoming a member. It has been commented on so often that WCG members aren't stupid and in fact they're very nice, intelligent people - so how did they get trapped? I believe that many of them have so little confidence in themselves, so little self-esteem that they allow themselves to be manipulated by a "father" figure who tells them what's right and totally directs their lives for them (at the same time telling them that they're learning how to direct their lives - thus saving face).

It's very important for ex-WCGers to look at themselves and understand that they're "OK" They can run their own lives and can have a personal relationship with God. God created all of us and must love us enough to care about each one of us for our own sakes.

I see so many ex-WCGers who become cynical and bitter, instead of trying to build their lives anew and become better and happier people. It's just as easy to try to look at the good things in life and concentrate on them as it is to look at the bad all the time.

One thing that helps is to understand that you weren't the only person deceived by Herbert. And in that way the AR is very important. Many seem to say that the AR is too negative. But I don't see it that way. I see Ambassador Report as a positive force to help people understand that others have gone through what they also have gone through. Others have made mistakes, and others have rebuilt their lives and made them better than ever before. And even more than that, the AR has helped people escape suicide, illness, and even death by helping them leave the WCG. For this I know many thousands thank you as I do.

Should We Continue Publishing?

Our thanks to all of you who, taking a suggestion made in our Dec. 15 letter, placed ads in newspapers to help promote Ambassador Report. Unfortunately, many found they could place the ads with their local paper only if they omitted any request to send money to cover our costs. Thus, as we feared, we have been swamped with requests for back issues of the Report, but we have had very few send in anything to cover the expenses involved. This has really drained us of resources. So, at least for now, we would prefer that readers not continue to promote free giveaways. We simply cannot afford it.

In the more than seven years we have been publishing we have sent the Report to thousands who have never sent us a penny., Many subscribers have written us saying they've appreciated our work so much that someday they hoped they could send in a contribution. Well, this might be a good time to do it. We are really struggling to stay afloat.

This issue will not be our last, if we can help it. But we have been forced to ask ourselves, should we continue publishing? Is this kind of sacrifice on our part really worth it? We think the next few months will provide some interesting news to report. We do hope we will be able to continue on.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

July, 1983

Herbert Armstrong Trapped

Lately things have not been going too well for Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the founder of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and president of Ambassador College. As we reported in past issues, ever since the 90-year-old "Apostle of the Twentieth Century" began divorce proceedings against Ramona, his 44-year-old estranged wife, his many lawyers have not lacked for work. But all of Armstrong's lawyers have availed him very little in the last three months, as virtually every court decision has gone against him.

On April 8, Superior Court Judge J. Richard Hannah in Tucson rejected a third attempt by Armstrong's attorneys to disqualify Judge Robert J. Hooker from hearing the Armstrong divorce case. Hooker had previously ordered Armstrong, after many months of delays, to appear for a deposition on April 19. HWA finally appeared in Tucson for questioning, but in a two-hour session declined to answer most of the questions put to him. The next day, Judge Hooker ordered HWA to answer all deposition questions about his financial ties with his church and about his relationship with his estranged wife. The HWA deposition continued on into a second week before it was completed.

The transcripts of HWA's Tucson deposition have not yet been made public, but the experience apparently shook up HWA considerably. Allan Browne complained that during the questioning HWA was so upset that, while his nurse was standing by with oxygen, he had "to take nitroglycerin at least a half-dozen times."

The Armstrong deposition will undoubtedly provide information that church observers have sought for some time. But the questioning of HWA was not without limitations. Said Browne, "Her [Ramona's] lawyer tried to get into personal relations prior to marriage. But the judge said any intimate details were not to be disclosed" (Pasadena Star-News, April 23, 1983). While only fair, that ruling has disappointed some WCG members and former members who had hoped that the new disclosures would include details of the premarital relationship between HWA and Ramona. Since the mid-seventies there have been those at the church's headquarters in Pasadena who have claimed that prior to her marriage to HWA, Ramona had conceived an illegitimate child by the church leader. (Marion McNair alluded to this in his 1977 book on Armstrongism.) One church employee has claimed to have seen the child's birth certificate. And some have claimed that the child was born handicapped and put into an institution in Italy. We have yet to see any proof that this widespread rumor is true. And when we asked one of Ramona's lawyers about an AP story (April 20) that mentioned HWA's "support of a disabled daughter," we were told tersely: "There were no children of the marriage."

Nevertheless, the Armstrong divorce suit is resulting in much information being made public. So far, we personally have read through over 3,000 pages of court documents in the case (we quote the more interesting sections below), and we fully expect that before the trial is over there will be many thousands more pages of information. Clearly, this is something HWA did not want to happen. From the court record, notice this exchange during the deposition of Ramona Armstrong (she is the witness, Deckter is her lawyer, and Maltz represents HWA):

MR. DECKTER: In the category of persons, dissidents, contacting you for purposes of using information or the litigation against either the church or Mr. Armstrong?

MR. MALTZ: Right.

A [Ramona] It's always been no comment.

Q [Maltz] Okay. And would that be the same answer with respect to reporters and members of the media who have tried to contact you?

A To this point, yes.

Q When you say to this point, do I detect -

MR. DECKTER: Do not answer the question whatever it is.

Q - an intention or contemplation that you are going to go public with what transpires in this case?

MR. DECKTER: Do not answer the question.

THE WITNESS: I decline to answer that question.

MR. MALTZ: Okay.

MR. DECKTER: It's a subject of compromise and settlement.

MR. MALTZ: It's also called other things.

MR. DECKTER: No, it isn't....

Q You are saying under oath that you don't know that there are any people out there who would like to delve into these proceedings for the sole purpose of embarrassing Mr. Armstrong and/or the Worldwide Church of God?

A You would have to ask those people out there.

Q But weren't these dissidents and disaffected people a fact of life for you and Mr. Armstrong when you were living together?

MR. DECKTER: Mr. Maltz, I am going to object to the form of the question. You are asking: One, are there people who would be interested, and by the same token you are asking would it be for the sole purpose of hurting someone. We have told you that the legitimate press has made inquiry. There is probably a newsworthy aspect both to this divorce and to the information they would like. And people may just want to know the truth about this church and Mr. Armstrong....

Yes, many want to know the facts! Especially many who have, for years, been sending money to the church. After all, it's even their money that will pay for much (if not all) of the massive legal costs in this divorce. In a sworn statement about HWA's expenses, signed by Aaron Dean, we find this suspicious footnote regarding HWA's attorney fees paid to date:

Undetermined liability to Worldwide Church of God for attorney fees and costs advanced pursuant to religious corporation indemnification statute...

One can only wonder who it was that persuaded HWA to seek a divorce from Ramona. For it is obvious HWA never expected her to put up the fight that she has. Apparently, he thought she would simply acquiesce to his wishes and sort of disappear into the Arizona desert to live in solitude, never to be heard from again. Notice this excerpt from a statement by HWA's attorneys:

On April 16, 1982, Herbert W. Armstrong, as petitioner, filed a "Petition for Dissolution of Marriage" against Ramona Armstrong, respondent, seeking a judicial decree dissolving the marriage of the parties on the ground that it was irretrievably broken. Mr. Armstrong further alleged that "there are no agreements between the parties regarding a division of the community, joint tenancy, or other property held in common, nor as to spousal maintenance" and, therefore, it was requested that the court equitably distribute the parties' commonly held property. (Petition, Para. 4)

Notwithstanding the simplicity of Mr. Armstrong's Petition, on April 23, 1982, Ramona Armstrong filed a "Response, Counterpetition, and Petition for Order to Show Cause" wherein she alleged, inter alia, that she and Mr. Armstrong had entered into various oral agreements prior to their marriage regarding financial benefits to be awarded her in consideration of her agreement to enter into the marriage....

Ramona Armstrong's utilization of these alleged "promises" and "agreements" as an extortion attempt ... is demonstrated by conduct undertaken and apparently authorized by her with respect to her attempt to relitigate these issues in the Los Angeles Superior Court. Thus, Jack C. Warner, Esq., her counsel in that proceeding had, on two separate occasions subsequent to the filing and service of the complaint, sent to Mr. Armstrong unsolicited Western Union telegrams requesting a private meeting "to discuss the immediate settlement of the captioned litigation in a manner that is... economically feasible to you...." In his second telegram dated October 1, 1982, Mr. Warner apparently sought to coerce such a settlement by threatening adverse publicity....

It is thus difficult to conceive of a more improper motive for attempting to assert these promises as a basis for a financial "pay-off" than that expressed by Ramona Armstrong's own counsel. Her motive is clear - generate, or threaten to generate, as much adverse, inflammatory publicity as possible in the hope that Mr. Armstrong will settle the dissolution proceeding in a manner which is financially beneficial to her. Indeed, this intent is further confirmed by Ramona Armstrong's refusal to authorize her counsel to stipulate that all depositions and court files in the instant proceeding be sealed....

Yes, if HWA would have his way, these proceedings would be done in secret. Fortunately, that has not been allowed. The two telegrams mentioned above are most interesting. Ambassador Report has been able to obtain copies of both. Here are their contents:

Dear Mr. Armstrong:

I do not know if you have been given a copy of the complaint served on Mr. Tkach at his home Wednesday evening, and upon you and the rest of the defendants at 300 West Green on Thursday, and upon Mr. Helge at his office.

Nevertheless, it is my desire to meet with you personally, just yourself and myself on neutral territory, to discuss the immediate settlement of the captioned litigation in a manner that is both economically feasible to you and fair to Mrs. Armstrong.

Both Mrs. Armstrong as well as other litigants have told me that your advisors have sealed you off in a fashion that does not allow you to obtain a correct picture of the problems with which you were confronted. They say that the facts are "pre-massaged" before they reach you so that your decisions and responses to them are the product of a distorted picture.

To avoid any such possibility, a one-on-one meeting by the two of us would, I think, prove most fruitful. I think there would be a good chance that positive solutions could result that would relieve you from what must be very heavy burdens.

I would appreciate a telephone call from you immediately upon your receipt of this message in order that we might set up an immediate meeting and possibly resolve the existing litigation so that you can get on with more productive matters. I'm sure you will wish to tape record any telephone conversations, as will I, so that neither of us will ever be misconstrued. On the other hand, I would expect that you would not wish any of our face-to-face discussion to be recorded or used by anybody at any time for any purpose, in litigation or otherwise, since the same will be for the purposes of compromise and settlement only. If you are in agreement, we can make a telephone record of that fact, also.

I'm sending duplicate copies of this telegram to your cook and your chauffeur with a request that they be delivered to you personally so that I know that the same will have reached you and not have been mislaid or diverted by others.

I'm prepared to meet with you Sunday or Monday, and I imagine that it would be of assistance to you if it was possible that all matters could be wrapped up before you get deeply involved in the Feasts next week.

I would appreciate a phone jingle from you personally, even if you wish the litigation pursued, so that I'm confident that you've received this invitation. Thank you.

-Jack Warner

(9/30/82-10/1/82)

Dear Mr. Armstrong:

The trouble with written epistles is that they never go away. There are too many of them floating around already that are proving to your extreme disadvantage. Their eternal existence prevents a problem from being quietly put to rest and forgotten forever. What happens is that such writings are always resurrected by others in aid of their causes in the future. Rather, I would like you to view firsthand what has already been caused to happen to you and your work over your purported signature and that of Mr. Helge's, as secretary, in the different state corporation filing offices. I feel certain you are unaware that recent amendments have stripped you of your power "in the event of his inability to act," whatever that means. I'm more than willing to come to 210 [S. Orange Grove Ave.] or have lunch with you at Perino's in order that we might examine your signatures and view these things together.

A personal interview of Mrs. Armstrong has been promised Mr. Russ Chandler immediately upon his return from vacation in a few days. We are also entering into negotiations for the worldwide pocketbook rights to Mrs. Armstrong's story and a 7-part TV miniseries. The recent letter to the editor in Playboy magazine and the lengthy article in the LA Daily Journal have opened up the commercial feasibility of an in-depth Playboy interview and the sale of her film rights.

Mrs. Armstrong is being forced to these unfortunate lengths by her financial plight. She does not look forward to the public disclosure of her most intimate personal life, but her present circumstances leave her no real choice as she had no other source of future financial security. Equally regretful to her is the prospect that her first person accounts will also destroy your credibility, good name, and life's work. The details of the opulent lifestyle to which she was introduced, internal maneuverings for power, corporate and tax machinations, personal habits, lifetime contracts for associates and family members, gifts and grants to others, extravagant salary schedules, etc. are truly stranger than fiction. Yet, their real world truth is proved all too frequently by indisputable written documentation.

The work's financial erosion has certainly already begun. The evaporation of its income can only accelerate. I personally viewed the rapid demise of A. A. Allen's empire through a similar chain of events - the failure to quickly and quietly put to rest personal domestic problems, coupled with the behind-the-scenes jockeying for power by certain advisors. Unless these things are settled promptly, boldly and quietly, they will just as surely destroy your work as they did his.

This is because I cannot ethically communicate directly with you after their appearance. Certain of your advisors might wish to discourage your having the information your eye should see. Thus, time is of the essence. Please meet with me somewhere immediately.

Very truly yours,
Jack C. Warner

Of course some of these comments raise a host of questions. If Warner's assessment is based on valid evidence, it would appear that there is indeed a battle raging for control of the WCG's assets and that very shortly they may be taken out from under HWA's control by the very men with whom he has surrounded himself.

At the same time, it is clear that Ramona, herself, is making a bid for control of much (if not all) of those assets. In our Sept. 30, 1982, issue we reported that Ramona had launched a lawsuit in California against the WCG and the key men surrounding HWA. Since then, those defendants have launched their own suit against Ramona in U.S. District Court in Arizona. Ramona has responded to that suit with counterclaims. In her Answer, Counterclaim, and Third-Party Complaint filed in Arizona in that legal battle (which is separate from her divorce proceeding), there are a number of statements made that show, not only her expectations, but the incredible intrigue going on in the WCG hierarchy. Here are a few excerpts:

RAMONA ARMSTRONG alleges that Plaintiff WORLDWIDE CHURCH OF GOD and the reputed assignor corporations are not operated as genuine bona fide corporations, and she alleges that such corporate forms should be disregarded as the same are in fact the alter egos of HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG who has created, perpetuated, maintained, operated, controlled and dominated, as corporate guises to shield his own personal business endeavors, and that it would be inequitable to observe such corporate forms in this action.... Defendant alleges that the individually named Defendants, whatever their relationship to Mr. Armstrong's corporate entity might be, are but a rubber stamp for his orders and directions, and that they possess and exercise no independent decision-making power of their own as is required by the law of true bona fide corporate directors.

...Defendant admits that her husband claims numerous different titles, including those of "chancellor" and "president" of the property known as "Ambassador College," which property he uses as the headquarters for his evangelical business. Defendant is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to which of her husband's many different business or personal bank accounts he may have used to pay for her household furnishings, or whether any of his business entities may have made any assignment to any other such entity, and she therefore denies such allegations.

Defendant is without specific knowledge or information concerning the exact number of her husband's "congregations," "ordained ministers," contributors, or church goers, but she does know that they are far fewer than he habitually claims....

HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG has been engaged for many years in allegedly nonprofit religious business enterprises carried on under several different names and under the guise of many different separate corporations organized in numerous states of the union. These corporations, Third-Party Defendants Black and White Corporations 1-150, and Counterdefendant Worldwide Church of God, were created, perpetuated and maintained, and have been operated, controlled and dominated, by him for the purpose of clothing in a corporate guise his own personal business activities. He has and continues to utilize these corporate forms to shield from the public, his followers, and his wife, the wealth he has accumulated through the years and which he continues to freely use, spend and enjoy for his personal benefit in whatever manner he may desire. He is and has been utilizing such corporate forms sued herein as a means to perpetuate fraud, injustice and inequity against the Plaintiff by accumulating his wealth thereunder and having the full personal use, control, and enjoyment thereof, while at the same time ostensibly avoiding the creation of a marital estate. There is such a unity of interest between Herbert W. Armstrong and the corporate Counterdefendant and Third-Party Defendants that the fiction of the separate existence thereof should in justice and equity be disregarded....

Herbert W. Armstrong and Worldwide Church of God entered into a pre-marital agreement with her, which agreement was thereafter ratified, confirmed and executed, both in writing and by the conduct of the parties, that in consideration of the marriage of Ramona Armstrong to Herbert W. Armstrong they would make her financially secure, would purchase for her a home and furniture in Tucson, Arizona where she desired to live and raise her son, would enable her to live in such locality, would guarantee to her life-time employment at a salary of $50,000.00 per year in the same fashion as they had allegedly done for one of the daughters of Herbert W. Armstrong and for his previous wife, would cause Ramona Armstrong to receive a $25,000.00 per annum life-time benefit upon her husband's death, disability or retirement, would see to it that his entire estate would be left to her upon his death, would provide her with a standard of living equal to what Herbert W. Armstrong had always enjoyed, and, that she would never be deprived of such things by divorce or otherwise.... and they reportedly caused to be prepared and executed the Will of Herbert W. Armstrong, leaving to Ramona Armstrong all of his property upon his death....

In pursuit of their goal, the Counterdefendants and Third-Party Defendants have solicited from the public and alleged "church-members" donations of money and property amounting to many millions of dollars during the course of the marriage, and which they specifically requested the donors thereof to pay directly to Herbert W. Armstrong and not to Counterdefendant Worldwide Church of God. It is the belief of Ramona Armstrong that her husband caused such vast sums to be deposited to numerous different bank accounts in many different names located in many different parts of the United States and the world to make difficult the ascertainment of the true extent of his estate and of his marital community....

By such means they have attempted to establish legal control over the assets comprising the separate and community estates of Herbert W. Armstrong. They have done this so that they might continue to utilize and enjoy the same for themselves, both during his lifetime and upon his death, in violation of the contract rights and expectancies of Ramona Armstrong described in the First Claim for Relief contained herein. In quest of their goal they have persuaded him to amend over his signature, but probably without his real knowledge, understanding or consent, the Articles of Incorporation of his multiple corporations, which entities have identical, overlapping or confusingly similar names, and which amendments have one thing in common, to wit: they all contemplate the death of Herbert W. Armstrong, the dissolution of his corporations or the control of them by the Counterdefendants and Mr. Armstrong's co-Third-Party Defendants and the devolution of his assets and property to the designee of such persons in such a manner as will benefit the individual Counterdefendants and Third-Party Defendants personally and deprive Ramona Armstrong of her rightful share thereof.

So, in essence, we see Ramona is claiming that HWA is using all of his various corporations to deposit the millions of dollars sent directly to him - money which Ramona feels should be part hers after HWA divorces her. An important part of Ramona's case centers around the marriage and divorce teachings of HWA himself. Notice this exchange during the deposition of Ramona Armstrong:

Q (By Mr. Maltz, HWA's lawyer) Other than those three areas of writings that your attorney just mentioned, does there exist any written evidence of an alleged agreement between you and Mr. Armstrong not to divorce each other?

A Not to my knowledge.

Q Was the agreement not to divorce in full force and effect in your mind at the time of your marriage?

A Yes, it was.

Q Therefore, it's a safe conclusion that it was made prior to the marriage?

A Yes.

Q How much prior to the marriage was the agreement not to divorce made?

A From the very first that he asked me to marry him.

Q When was that?

A It was three years prior to the marriage.

Q And what did he say to you and what did you say to him by way of promises which amounts in your belief to an agreement never to divorce?

A That marriage is binding, not to be dissolved.

Q This is what he said to you?

A That's what we both said to each other. He was my spiritual leader as well as my future husband.

Q Would you have married him if he had not said to you that he believed that marriage was binding and not to be dissolved?

A No, I would not have.

Q What if anything did you promise him in return?

A That I in turn would not divorce him.

Q As best you can recollect, what were his precise words on the question of marriage being binding and not dissolved? What did he say to you as best and precisely as you can quote him?

A To be precise you would have to read through the literature that he has written to the membership and in all of his publications because that was exactly the same thing he said to me verbally.

Q Well, what is your recollection without looking through all the literature, because I can't do it now, of what he said to you, the precise words?

A That marriage is a holy thing; that it is binding in heaven as well as on earth and that when the agreement is made, then it is not to be dissolved.

Ralph Helge - The Controversial Counsel

The Armstrong divorce case, as we have shown in past issues, has been beset by delay after delay. And some of the excuses used to hold up the litigation have been nothing short of ludicrous. For instance, at one point HWA's lawyers - without giving a reason - petitioned the judge to force Ramona Armstrong to change her name. Ramona's lawyers responded:

It is respondent's belief that this request is made solely for the purpose of adding to the mountainous accumulation of pleadings and other assorted papers which have characterized this proceeding. Perhaps it is petitioner's intention to bury respondent's counsel under this mountainous pile of papers. Respondent's counsel asks this court to admonish petitioner's counsel for making such ludicrous requests and to allow the respondent to proceed in this litigation so that we can some time in the near future see an end to this litigation.

The care with which Judge Hooker has handled such matters can be seen from the following exchange, taken from the court records:

COURT: The petitioner [HWA] filed a motion under... A.R.S. 25-325(C) for an order of this Court that the respondent's former name [Ramona Martin] be restored to her. I don't recall having seen an opposition. Was there an opposition filed, and does the respondent oppose it?

MR. DECKTER: The respondent [Ramona] opposes it, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I looked at the Rule. I didn't find any authority for it at all, not under the statute. As I recall, 25-325(D) states that upon request, a wife whose marriage is dissolved or declared invalid, Court shall order her maiden name or a former name restored specifically limited to upon request by a wife. Let me check. It's been amended, and subsection (C) now states: Upon request by a party - by a party at anytime prior to the signing of the decree of dissolution or annulment by the Court, the Court shall order that party's requested former name be restored. So, again, I think it limits it to a request being made by the party who wants their former name restored, and I would imagine that that amendment was done to eliminate specifically only request by a wife, 'cause it's common now that many, uh, men also assume or take a part - take as part of their name a wife's name, and this gives them latitude to do that, but it requires under the rule that that request may be - may - that that request be made by the party whose former name is sought to be restored.

Anybody else want to be heard on that?

MR. WOLFE: Perhaps one matter, and that is that Mr. Armstrong is out of the country as of last week and will be out of the country for a month.

THE COURT: I don't care, the order stands. I expect him to be back. We're going to get this matter litigated, and we're going to do it no longer at the parties' convenience in this matter, so far as I have any control over it, which may very well be limited, but the matter's going to get done, and it's going to get litigated, and it's going to get tried as expeditiously as possible, without any further extraneous delays, which means I have to continue to assert myself in the case more vigorously than I have, and it'll be ordered that the motion filed on February 8, 1983, requesting that Ramona Armstrong's former name be restored, that motion having been filed by petitioner [HWA], is denied.

Another reason for the delays is a certain confusion that seems to have injected itself into the matter as regards who is actually in charge of representing whom on HWA's side. The Arizona law firm of Wolfe and Ostapuk are supposedly the chief lawyers representing HWA in the divorce. Yet Allan Browne, of the California firm of Ervin, Cohen, and Jessup, has been doing most of the speaking in court on behalf of HWA. But to further complicate matters, HWA's personal lawyer, Ralph Helge - who is not a party to the suit and is not a lawyer of record in this litigation, but is a witness in the case - has apparently interjected himself into every facet of the proceedings. (Recall that Helge is listed as one of the defendants in Ramona Armstrong's countersuit against the WCG corporation. She claims he has been part of a conspiracy to gain control of the WCG's assets through his influence over the aging HWA.)

Note the following exchanges taken from the court records (the first one was referred to in our last issue):

(March 7)

MR. ETTINGER: ...we stipulated to $50,000 being the bond - being the amount of the bond. When he showed me the bond, immediately, he said that Mr. Helge had prepared it and wanted certain wording in it, and one was that it must be heard -

THE COURT: That was a mistake right there. I could have told you there would have been problems the minute you mentioned his name, he's gonna do something to chingadero.

MR. OSTAPUK: Actually, Judge, I wasn't present at -

THE COURT: - you're obviously a competent counsel, and your firm is what's been commonly referred to as the lead firm, whatever that means, in the case, although I have my suspicions as to who really is lead counsel in the case, who is making the decisions....

WOLFE: ...that Mr. Armstrong and his personal counsel at this point do not choose to take advantage or accept that ruling as far as this case is concerned at this point, I don't know.

THE COURT: By whom are you referring to as his personal counsel?

MR. WOLFE: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Mr. Helge?

MR. WOLFE: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: Like I say, he's interjected himself into the case pretty extensively....

But, amazingly, while Helge has intertwined himself with every facet of this divorce case, he has made every effort to absent himself when he himself was subpoenaed. But Judge Hooker was not impressed by Helge's arguments. Notice this March 15 ruling by Hooker:

With regard to the motion to quash the subpoena duces tecum of Mr. Helge, which has heretofore been argued and taken under advisement, it's ordered denying that motion. I note, in that respect, that Mr. Helge has been present at many hearings and has participated in those hearings. The one thing that I do note is that he continually consults with counsel in hearings and passes notes to counsel. I note that he participated in the litigation of this matter and has specifically caused matters to be filed in this case specifically, but not limited to, the matter regarding the supersedeas bond; he has been present at depositions; that as it has been indicated by counsel of record in this case, on February 25, 1983, Mr. Helge was being associated as counsel of record for the purpose of deposition of Mr. Armstrong only, and that as alleged in matters filed in this Court and testimony that he is a material witness in the case, and there has been testimony in regard to this litigation that he is not only the attorney for the Worldwide Church of God, but also the attorney for Mr. Armstrong. It's my feeling that Mr. Helge has inextricably intertwined himself and his client, Worldwide Church of God, in this litigation.

True to form, a few days later Helge sent the following letter to William E. Druke, the Presiding Judge of Pima County Superior Court:

Dear Judge Druke:

This will introduce myself as the person who appeared specially in order to file a Motion to Quash a purported appearance and a pre-emptory disqualification under Rule 42(f)1. The court administrator set the Motion for hearing on April 25, 1983.

On Tuesday, March 23, 1983, I received, through my office, a phone call from the Honorable Judge Hooker's clerk or secretary to the effect that he had changed the date of hearing on the Motion to Quash to March 25, and apparently also set it for hearing before himself.

Apparently Judge Hooker overlooked my application under 42(f)1 although it was attached to my Motion to Quash. Am I correct in assuming that you will advise him that he was without jurisdiction to change the date of hearing or to hear the Motion to Quash and will advise the parties as to the recommended court? It is my understanding that under rule 42(f)1(F) the matter is to be assigned to another Judge for hearing.

Regretably Messrs. Ettinger and Deckter have stated, in the past, that they would not stipulate as to any matters. Therefore, pursuant to Rule 42(f)1(F) I hereby tender to you and the attorneys for the parties the following names of Judges to whom I feel the matter could be assigned. It is my understanding that these men have a good reputation in the community for judicial demeanor. Also I feel they would be impartial and lack any bias or prejudice in regards to any of the parties. They are:

Judge Richard N. Royston, Division 7
Judge Robert O. Royston, Division 3
Commissioner William N. Sherrill, Division B

Any one of them would be acceptable to me and the order of their names is purely alphabetical.

Thank you for any consideration you may give this matter.

- Ralph Helge

In response, Judge Druke ordered:

The court having received a letter from Mr. Ralph K. Helge regarding his Notice of Change of Judge filed pursuant to Civil Rule 42(f), and,

The court having reviewed the file and finding that Mr. Helge is not a party in the lawsuit, but is a witness subpoenaed to appear in the matter, and,

The court having reviewed Civil Rule 42(f) and finding that it is limited to parties, and is not, therefore, available to witnesses, such as Mr. Helge,

IT IS ORDERED denying Mr. Helge's Notice of Change of Judge and the matters set for hearing before Judge Hooker on 28 March 1983 shall proceed as scheduled.

But why would Helge go to such lengths to avoid being deposed in a case in which he has so obviously enmeshed himself? Recall that Helge was served with a subpoena duces tecum, a subpoena requiring him to bring certain documents. In this case, those documents include financial records. With that in mind, note the following statements made by Ramona's attorneys:

Mr. Helge has been present at nearly all of the hearings and motions in the matter of Armstrong v. Armstrong, and there is no reason to believe that he will not be present for future hearings and motions. Therefore, his contention that he is being "put out" by having to come to Tucson for his deposition is without merit. While his contentions that he is in fact a domiciliary and resident of the State of California might be true, he was served in Arizona and should be required to abide by that proper service of process. To require the respondent to apply California law in the State of Arizona would not only be improper but it would require respondent's counsel to deny the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the Arizona Courts.

As to Mr. Helge's contention that respondent's counsel might make inquiry into the ownership of the funds [funds Helge claims are the church's, not HWA's] deposited into checking account number 1303-2693 at the Valley National Bank of Arizona, this is also without merit. The Valley National Bank of Arizona custodian of records, Ms. Donna Porter, was deposed by respondent's counsel. Ms. Porter was asked specifically whether that particular account was a trust account, a business account, a corporation account, and she answered that they were not. Further, she was asked if that particular account was a personal checking account to Herbert W. Armstrong, and she stated that yes, in fact, it was.

It is Mr. Helge's assertion that the funds in that account are funds belonging to the Worldwide Church of God....

In attempting to get out of being deposed, Helge resorted, in part, to arguments revolving around First Amendment religious guarantees. Helge has resorted to similar arguments many times in the past in many different cases. One almost gets the impression that Helge feels the WCG can do anything it wants simply because it is a religious corporation. And that everyone else's rights are secondary to the WCG's rights because it is somehow specially protected by the First Amendment. Yet, in the past the courts have not upheld Helge's unique interpretation of the First Amendment. Ramona's lawyers quoted the important decision in the case of Ambassador College v. Goetzke:

In affirming the District Court, the Court of Appeals showed why Ambassador College's assertion that submitting to the discovery would violate their freedom of association guaranteed under the United States Constitution was invalid. The court distinguished cases where First Amendment freedoms were found to be in danger of violation or impinged in some way. All such cases involved the government as a party. In Ambassador College V. Goetzke, supra, as in the case before the Court, there is no governmental body that is a party to the suit.

In finding that discovery was proper as to matters upon which the interrogatories were trying to delve, the Court cited General Counsel on Finance and Administration of the United Methodist Church v. Superior Court of California, County of San Diego, 439 U.S. 1355 (1978). There it was stated that freedom of association and freedom of religion arguments were not applicable to purely secular disputes between third parties and a particular defendant. Further, the Court pointed out that in order to raise a claim of First Amendment rights, there must be some sort of a "chilling" effect which could result. The court stated that the information was relevant as it could lead to information regarding whether the Worldwide Church of God had engaged in a pattern of improper conduct. It was concluded that the information would not have the effect of "chilling" membership in the church.

In light of the ruling in Ambassador College v. Goetzke, supra, Mr. Helge's argument that respondent would be violating the First Amendment rights of himself and his client, the Worldwide Church of God, is clearly and wholly without merit. Any information which respondent seeks would not "chill" the membership of the church and, in any event, the only result in Mr. Helge's disclosing the information respondent seeks would be the possibility that there is some improper conduct on the part of the Worldwide Church of God. Mr. Helge cannot avoid the taking of his deposition merely by trying to cloak his desire in the guise of an inappropriate claim of Constitutional guarantees and rights.

The Beverly Hills Episode

In our last issue, dated April 1983, we reported briefly on the Feb. 25 fiasco that took place at Allan Browne's Beverly Hills office. Because of the many rumors extant in church circles regarding Ralph Helge, some have asked that we provide more details of that encounter. Here is a brief excerpt, from the court records, of the confrontation that took place that day. Unfortunately, due to space limitations we have had to delete most of the dialog, but the essentials of the bitter dispute can be readily seen. (Recall that Ettinger and Deckter represent Ramona, and Browne represents HWA. Mr. Erwin was the court reporter brought in from Arizona.) We begin midway into the fracas:

MR. DECKTER: Separately, it should be noted and that only in the case of Armstrong versus Armstrong has there been a stipulation filed in Superior Court in Arizona to take the deposition of Mr. Armstrong here in California.

There was no stipulation that it be taken under the California Rules of Civil Procedure, under the California Civil Code or under California law.

We have to comply with Arizona law for the use of this deposition in Arizona. We have not filed any objection to the form, manner or means of taking this deposition in Arizona. We have no right to object to the use of Mr. Erwin nor does Mr. Armstrong.

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, I think we both stated our positions and as I have said, I would like not to have the whole morning used up by colloquy. We do not stipulate to Mr. Erwin. We made our position clear on that. Without prejudice to the rights of either party, I suggest that we go forward.

MR. DECKTER: Let's call Judge Hooker.

MR. BROWNE: No, Judge Hooker does not control this proceeding in California....

MR. ETTINGER: We will take the deposition in Tucson. We will get an order of the Court.

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, let's not argue that.

MR. ETTINGER: We did this as a courtesy. We did not have to do this. The Arizona Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals has ruled that he had to appear for deposition in Tucson.

MR. HELGE: Okay -

MR. ETTINGER: Mr. Helge, you are not even attorney of record now.

MR. BROWNE: Just a minute. Don't shout It's not necessary.

MR. ETTINGER: I know. I know it's not necessary. But it appears to me that no matter what is stipulated - and by the way, lead counsel is not present at this deposition, Mr. Wolfe, who is the lead counsel, at this deposition. Make a record of that, that he was not present and at this deposition.

MR. BROWNE: Shall we go on to the point - I do want to deal with the production of documents.

MR. ETTINGER: Are we going to continue the deposition based on Arizona law?

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, I don't want to argue. Do you want to take the deposition of Mr. Armstrong or not?

MR. ETTINGER: Pursuant to Arizona rules.

MR. BROWNE: My reporter is not going to leave. Now, do you want to call off the deposition or do you want -

MR. ETTINGER: I'm not calling - we are ready to proceed. It's you that have not complied with the rules. You have not filed an objection to this reporter timely. You have never - the stipulation was an Arizona stipulation. It was to be done pursuant to Arizona rules, not California rules.

But it's typical of your delay.

MR. DECKTER: I suggest -

MR. ETTINGER: Why don't you read Rule 28?

MR. DECKTER: If you're going to make an objection to Mr. Erwin taking this deposition, make it orally before Judge Hooker, now -

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, just listen to me.

MR. DECKTER: Let's call Hooker. Call Hooker.

MR. BROWNE: My counsel - my certified, shorthand reporter will not leave the room. Now, do you want to take the deposition or not?

MR. DECKTER: I want to contact Hooker now.

MR. BROWNE: Call him.

MR. ETTINGER: Let's get Judge Hooker.

MR. DECKTER: Call him.

MR. BROWNE: Call him. Use that phone over there. If you can get him on the line.

MR. DECKTER: How do we get your front desk?

MR. BROWNE: What? Just dial nine and then just one.

MR. ETTINGER: All right.

MR. BROWNE: And call the Court.

MR. DECKTER: We don't have the number right here unless you have the -

MR. ETTINGER: Do you have an Arizona - Okay. Let's get long distance.

(Discussion off the record)

MR. ETTINGER: And, Mr. Helge, you sent me those letters saying that we were interfering with the privacy of the Church. You asshole.

MR. HELGE: Just a minute! You will not talk to me like that, and if you do I'll knock you on your ass!

MR. ETTINGER: Just try it!

(A scuffle ensued in the room)

MR. BROWNE: Jack, stop it. My God! Conduct yourself.

MR. ETTINGER: You keep writing me letters like that -

MR. BROWNE: Jack, let's - don't talk to Mr. Helge and he won't talk to you. Come on. This is ridiculous. Act like a professional person.

MR. ETTINGER: I am a professional.

MR. BROWNE: Don't talk to Ralph Helge and he won't talk to you. Okay. Let's go.

(Messrs. Browne and Helge leave the room)

The letter Ettinger was referring to was one of a number Helge wrote to Ettinger threatening him with a lawsuit. (Apparently lawyers get just as upset as the rest of us when they receive intimidating letters from other lawyers.) Here is the way Helge later tried to explain away his un-Christian conduct to Judge Hooker:

Before Mr. Armstrong entered the room, the attorneys had agreed to go off the record. Jack Ettinger was strutting up and down beside the table. He kept taunting me as to whether or not I had commenced a lawsuit against him. He began to use vile language describing the letters I had written him on the Church's behalf hoping to restrain him from invading its privacy and committing other constitutional transgressions. I advised him that I was contemplating and preparing such a lawsuit on my client's behalf.

Before long Browne was back in the room, saying he wanted to bring in HWA (who was in the next room) and get on with the deposition. But before they could go ahead, Helge again interjected his presence, causing Ramona's lawyers to again state their objections:

MR. DECKTER: At this time we would note the presence of Mr. Ralph K. Helge in the room.

Whether it has been made a matter of record or not prior to this time with our reporters being active, we've been informed by Mr. Browne that he proposes to have not only two reporters but further that he wishes the presence of Mr. Ralph K. Helge at the time and during the course of the deposition of Mr. Armstrong.

As previously noted, in several of the depositions which have taken place at the offices of Miller & Pitt in Tucson, Arizona, a record has been made that Mr. Helge has been designated both orally and by responses to interrogatories and further by subpoena duces tecum in the Arizona matter that Mr. Helge is and remains a material witness in the action of Armstrong versus. Armstrong; that on several occasions Mr. Helge has been requested that if he so desired he could enter an appearance as an attorney of record.

We have been informed that Mr. Browne wishes to create a new kind of attorney, that is, a special appearance for purposes of deposition only and that he proposes that Mr. Helge personally be so designated.

I am not familiar with any statute, rule or procedure that allows for a special appearance by an attorney or by a party, other than for jurisdictional purposes on specific kinds of civil motions.

The designated hitter or the designation as a special appearance for deposition only appears to be in violation of the previous notice both to Mr. Browne, Mr. Maltz and Mr. Wolfe, the remaining attorneys of record. That the rule, that is, the Civil Rule, noting the exclusion of witnesses from deposition has been specifically invoked as to Mr. Helge so that he would remain outside the presence of witnesses' testimony, so that his testimony and recollections would be his alone and not as refreshed or as contradicted by other witnesses in this matter.

To now especially designate him for purposes of a single deposition would appear to be a clear violation and a purposeful impediment to the taking of the deposition of Mr. Armstrong now being thrown up by Mr. Browne.

As Mr. Browne is aware, Mr. Helge not only had been noticed as a witness and has been requested [on] numerous occasions to enter a general appearance as an attorney of record if that was his desire; but further was subpoenaed while present in Pima County, oh, some month ago or better, that on his own and in proper subpoena which was heard before Judge Hooker several weeks ago, not as an attorney for Mr. Armstrong, not as an attorney of record in this matter but as an individual who was appearing simply on behalf of the Worldwide Church of God.

Specifically, and on numerous occasions, Mr. Helge has made statements on those behalf and has filed both affidavits and declarations in the case of Armstrong versus Armstrong specifically disclaiming representation of Mr. Armstrong and appearing solely as an interested person on behalf of the Worldwide Church of God.

The heated arguing then resumed with Ettinger and Deckter storming out of the building in protest. Then, with opposing counsel not present for cross examination, Browne (as reported in our last issue) brought in HWA. Here is the court record of what then transpired:

Q (BROWNE) Mr. Armstrong, I am going to ask you a few questions, just so that the record is clear as far as we are concerned, even though the other lawyers have left, and this way we will have your testimony under oath and we can present it to the judge, or some other court at a future time if it becomes necessary.

Let me ask you a few of these questions, if I may.

First of all, at any time prior to the marriage or during the marriage with Ramona Armstrong, did you ever tell her or promise her, in words or in substance, that when you died you would leave your entire estate to her? Did you ever make a promise to her like that?

A No, I did not make such a promise. No.

Q Did you ever make any promise to Ramona Armstrong, either prior to the marriage or during the marriage, that if you were to become disabled or died, you or the church would give her, for the rest of her life, $25,000 a year?

A Definitely not.

Q Did you at any time prior to the marriage or during the marriage make a promise to her that she would have a lifetime employment contract with you or the church for $50,000 a year for the rest of her life?

A Absolutely not.

Q Did you ever make a promise to Ramona Armstrong, prior to the marriage or during the marriage, that you would never divorce her?

A No. I did not.

Q Prior to the marriage or during the marriage, did you ever promise Ramona Armstrong that the house in Tucson and all the furnishings would belong to her and her alone?

A I did not, definitely.

Q Mr. Armstrong, can you tell me whether you believe that the marriage is irretrievably broken at this point?

A Legally it is, yes. It is already spiritually broken.

Q Fine. There are irreconcilable differences at this point between yourself and Ramona?

A There are.

Q Mr. Armstrong, is there any reasonable prospect of reconciliation at this point?

A Absolutely none.

MR. BROWNE: I have no further questions at this time. Let us transcribe the deposition and provide it to Mr. Armstrong.

It is noteworthy that HWA has lost all recollection of the WCG's official marriage ceremony - a marriage ceremony which not only condemned divorce, but even categorically denied God could allow a legitimate marriage to be dissolved. And, ironically, it was not only HWA who often officiated at weddings using that ceremony, it was HWA who authored it! We wonder if HWA's lawyer will attempt to excuse this lapse of memory because of some type of senility problem.

At the pseudo-deposition in Beverly Hills, HWA had it easy. But in the more than one week of questioning he was later subjected to in Tucson, Herbert found out what it was like to be really grilled. In a letter to the WCG membership, dated April 24, 1983, HWA wrote:

For the past week I have been in Tucson, Arizona, in an inquisition, legally called a deposition. It is becoming evident that the case is being turned into another legal battle aimed to destroy the Church of the living God....

Brethren, God has been with me this week. We're not really struggling against PEOPLE - whether lawyers or what - but against the spiritual POWERS of darkness and evil - Satan and his demons - the invisible actual rulers of this world....

Sacrifice for the Work as never before....

Then in the "P.S. - IMPORTANT NOTICE" he directed his followers to discontinue sending contributions to his Arizona address. Perhaps anticipating major losses in the Arizona courts, Armstrong's big money-processing operations have been moved across the state lines back to California, where HWA has instructed his followers to send their tithes. Of course, the checks are still not to be made out to the Worldwide Church of God, but to - you guessed it - Herbert W. Armstrong, personally.

As of this writing, the Armstrong divorce case is scheduled to go to trial July 18. We suspect it will not be a short trial. We have notified many of our friends in the news media of the trial date, and there should be reasonably good coverage of the event. And, of course, assuming the trial is completed by then, our next issue will cover the trial, in-depth.

USC Strokes HWA for Church Bucks

While his lawyers have been fighting in Arizona to thwart his estranged wife from dismantling his financial empire and image, HWA has been happily pursuing his usual ego-expansion trips. The April 5 Worldwide News (WN) reported that HWA had returned from a 13-day trip to the Middle East, where officials in Jordan received his special attention. The May 30 WN reported HWA in Oxford, England. According to that publication, "The Ambassador Foundation sponsors the Mainland China Fellowship, held by Zhao Renwei, an economist from the People's Republic of China." While in England, HWA met with Leopold de Rothschild, Edmond de Rothschild, and other British leaders and royalty. This is not a difficult thing to do if you spread a little money around. For instance AP reported that in June over "500 wealthy Americans attended the champagne supper and ball during a four-day visit designed to raise money for two of Prince Charles' pet projects...."

But for sheer absurdity, it would be difficult to beat the April 18 WN report of HWA receiving honors at the University of Southern California's Law Center. The WN article began:

In a ceremony to establish the Herbert W. Armstrong Professorship of Constitutional Law, James H. Zumberge, president of the University of Southern California, and Scott H. Bice, dean of the USC Law Center, honored Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong, March 31.

In the ceremony, which also included the establishment of another professorship for the Law Center, Dr. Zumberge lauded the pastor general. "Peoples throughout the nation, indeed throughout the entire world, are familiar with the ministry and accomplishments of Herbert W. Armstrong," Dr. Zumberge began. "Mr. Armstrong is well-known to many as an... ambassador of world peace," the university president continued. "He has met privately with such leaders as Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain, Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India, Presidents Anwar Sadat and Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, King Hussein of Jordan, and the king of Thailand, all in an effort to further world peace and religious liberty. Mr. Armstrong has long admired the commitment to religious liberty evidenced by the First Amendment to the United States Constitution," the president said. "And he has been an outspoken defender of constitutional liberty. Thus when the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation agreed to fund a professorship in Mr. Armstrong's honor, it was Mr. Armstrong's personal wish that the professorship be in constitutional law."

Present at the ceremony were "U.S. Federal judges, attorneys and law scholars from the USC Law Center." But while HWA was giving away more of his church's money to obtain yet another ego stroke, some were absolutely flabbergasted at USC's fling with HWA. One such critic is author David Robinson, who quickly dispatched the following open letter to the president and trustees of USC:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

The April 18th issue of The Worldwide News, official organ of Herbert Armstrong and his Worldwide Church of God, has extensive coverage of the March 31st ceremonies at USC announcing the new Herbert W. Armstrong Professorship of Constitutional Law. There is a large picture of you, President Zumberge, together with Herbert Armstrong. There are three paragraphs of quotes from your speech which lauded Armstrong in the customary manner of those who receive huge sums of money from his treasury. But I am wondering, ladies and gentlemen, if you were fully informed of Herbert Armstrong's history before concluding negotiations for the honor you have conferred upon him.

I know nothing of the others for whom professorships have been named in the past. But assuming they are honorable people, I do wonder if you have been fair to them to associate Herbert Armstrong with them in such a manner. The burden of this name and its association, I expect, will become heavier and heavier to bear.

Herbert Armstrong has been remarkably clever at erecting a beautiful facade, but behind that false front lies a very ugly reality. For instance, his well-publicized court case, which broke into the news in 1979, was never settled in the courts. Rather, Armstrong sought and obtained passage of a bill in the California legislature which emasculated the laws operating against him. He obtained a political solution to a legal matter. Is this consistent with the principles of constitutional law? And while he was advocating strict observance of the principles of the First Amendment in California, he took the exact opposite position in Tulsa, Oklahoma, in another highly publicized case. Here, Armstrong tried with his might to muzzle the press to prevent publishing of important facts about himself. He had his lawyers go all out to stop publication of the book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, even to using prior restraint! This move failed, but not for lack of money or effort on his part.

Herbert Armstrong is known to many as a man who is a law unto himself. Supporting evidence is included with this letter. It seems to many of us who know him best, and I know what I am talking about after thirty years with this "whited sepulchre," that Armstrong and constitutional law mix about as well as oil and water. He is for such law as long as that law does not get in his way. But when it does, it is the law which must give way - not Herbert Armstrong!

Further evidence of the nature of this man is the designation he assigns to universities such as your own when he speaks to his followers. To them, he explains that all schools, except his own little college in Pasadena, are instruments of Satan the devil and are of this present evil world. (One can but wonder, if he believes what he preaches, why he would want to be memorialized in your institution.) To him the Catholic Church is the prime instrument of Satan, and others, such as the Methodist Church, are daughters of Rome and slated for utter destruction when the wrath of God falls. He holds out the same fate for the United States Constitution and our whole nation. As a matter of fact, he prophesied during World War II that Hitler would win and conquer Britain and America. He preached this doctrine until the war was almost over. One can but wonder how many additional lives were lost in our war effort because of this poison injected into the minds of thousands.

It is because of fear-inducing doctrines he teaches that people send him over a hundred million dollars a year. Thousands of his faithful are people poorly positioned in life - pensioners, widows, and the underemployed. He teaches that without paying him their money they will be denied the hereafter, and as a result, money flows to him in a torrent. He calls this "God's money!"

I do not know how strong your school of medicine is at USC, but it might be worth knowing that Herbert Armstrong has taught his followers for many years that use of medicine is totally wrong and is a trick of the devil to destroy men's faith in God and his healing. Many people have suffered and died in his church in an attempt to follow his ideas in this matter. Might there not be a dichotomy here as well? I personally have seen some of those people needlessly die under the most awful conditions.

Another of the messy loose ends in the Armstrong organization is his teaching to his followers that they must be prepared to leave the country en masse at a signal from him. The destination is a desert region called Petra in the southwest corner of the kingdom of Jordan, where they are to await the return of Christ. Thousands of his followers are to this very day anxiously awaiting his signal for the exodus. He even encourages his most ardent ministers to proclaim him The Apostle, Moses, Elijah, Zerubbabel, John the Baptist, and the principal of the two witnesses of Revelation, all rolled into one. Also, his ministers have been encouraged to preach that he will never die, even though he is 90 years old (yet if appearance counts, he ages as do other men). While we are living in an era when moral turpitude seems to be a phrase from the past, nevertheless, Herbert Armstrong's conduct in this area is legendary. Included in the legend is even a ten-year incestuous relationship with his younger daughter.

Armstrong himself is wont to say, "Where there is so much smoke there has to be some fire." The truth is that a bonfire is raging. After he is gone, who is going to continue the defense of his name? Will it be those now surrounding him who have all suffered many indignities at his hand? Will they do as the successors of Stalin did when their feared and hated leader died - revile him before the world? What then of your Herbert W. Armstrong Professorship?

Sincerely,
David Robinson

We can't help but be amused every time we hear that HWA has bought himself another honor under the guise of giving to charity - especially in light of Jesus' profound teachings in the Beatitudes. Notice Jesus' immortal words:

Thus, when you give alms, sound no trumpet before you, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may be praised by men. Truly, I say to you, they have received their reward. But when you give alms, do not let your left hand know what your right hand is doing, so that your alms may be in secret; and your Father who sees in secret will reward you (Matt. 6:2-4, RSV).

As HWA schemes to amass the accolades of kings and dignitaries, he forgets the words of the apostles James and John, which he quoted frequently in the decades before the 1970s:

Do you not know that friendship with the world is enmity with God? Therefore whoever wishes to be a friend of the world makes himself an enemy of God (James 4:4, RSV).

Do not love the world or the things in the world. If any one loves the world, love for the Father is not in him (I John 2:15), RSV).

Supreme Court Rules Against WCG - Again

On April 18, the U. S. Supreme Court upheld a California appellate court ruling which said that a trial court should inquire into WCG doctrines and apply those doctrines relevant to a case involving former WCG minister Richard Gipe. In 1979, because of doctrinal differences, Gipe was fired from his position as minister of a Garden Grove, California congregation. The WCG then denied Gipe his $3,269 severance pay because he refused to turn over certain property the headquarters organization claimed as its own. Gipe filed a complaint with the California Labor Commission, which granted him the $3,269. But subsequently, a state trial judge ruled that the courts should not have become involved in the dispute. Gipe appealed that decision and won a reversal. Then the California Supreme Court and the U. S. Supreme Court both rebuffed the WCG's attempts at reversing the California appellate court's ruling. As usual, Ralph Helge saw the decision as another violation of the WCG's First Amendment rights.

The "Reunion"

Of the many groups we have reported on over the years, there have been few as interesting as the Reunion, a new organization based in Britain. Composed of former members of the WCG in that country, this organization was formed as a means for ex-WCG members to maintain contact with old friends and as a means of helping others who are troubled in the WCG.

The Reunion had its first meeting on April 2, 1983, at the International Students House in London. In attendance were 21 delegates, who decided upon a set of goals and policies for the new organization. The points agreed upon were: (1) That the Reunion will be purely social with no religious preaching whatsoever; (2) That its main purpose will be to provide a communications network - as a tool for fellowship, friendship, good works, helping friends and WCG members in crisis, etc.; (3) It was decided that, in order to help facilitate the above, the Reunion would attempt to maintain a continuously updated directory of names, addresses, and telephone numbers of ex-WCG members; (4) Reunion meetings would be organized as often as desired by the members; (5) The chairman is to be Mae Kachere, who will also edit Reunion News, the group's quarterly newsletter; (6) The Reunion's next gathering will be in September; and (7) Peter Griffiths will serve as the organization's communications secretary.

One of Mr. Griffiths' responsibilities will be the compilation of the directory of ex-WCG members. He would appreciate hearing from any who wish to be listed, and he would also like the names and addresses of any former WCG members you may know of. Mr. Griffiths would like nothing better than to be flooded with names and addresses, and he says that if he could locate an inexpensive, small computer, he would consider purchasing one to help expedite the directory project.

We believe the Reunion has the potential of accomplishing much good. And we not only wish them the best of luck, but would love to see similar groups organized in other parts of the world. If any readers would be interested in forming their own "reunion" let us know and we will mention it in the Report. In the meantime, contact this British organization as they may well have a suggestion or two.

Of their April meeting in London, Mr. Griffiths writes, "There was a wonderful atmosphere of friendliness and unity amongst the people who had all been through the same experience." The next Reunion meeting will take place in Bedford, England on September 17, 1983. Those wishing more information or a copy of the quarterly Reunion News should write (and it might be a good idea to include a dollar or so to cover return postage): Mr. Peter N. Griffiths, 190 Tythe Barn Lane, Whitlocks End, Shirley, Solihull, West Midlands, B90 1PF, England.

Exodus Additions

Since publishing the updated ministerial Executive Exodus list in our last issue, a few readers have written us that we omitted a few names. Durrell Brown, Eli Hofer, Bob Porter, and Burt Wyland should have been on the list. We expect that during the next year or so many more will be making their exit from the WCG. We would appreciate it if readers would inform us of any Executive Exodus additions as they occur.

Attention: Big Sandy Alumni

In our last issue we reported on Ed Holdren's desire to get a legal solution to the problem of Ambassador College's renegeing on promises of achieving accreditation. Since that issue Mr. Holdren has informed us that he is expanding his lawsuit to include co-plaintiffs. Mr. Holdren is trying to locate 200 Big Sandy alumni to join his suit. He writes:

It would be what's called a "class action lawsuit." It would take a bare minimum of 200 [Big Sandy] alumni to qualify as a class action, and each person would need to chip in $25. This would be the $5,000 the law firm needs just to cover travel, depositions, research and general clerical expenses. From that point, they agree to work on a percent-of-the-take basis. By the way, I will keep the money in a separate bank account and make available any and all accounting of the funds dispersed upon request of those who join. If I can't enlist enough people to qualify for a class action suit, we could try a different avenue, or I would just return to the donors the amount they donated, minus any expenses I just had to pay the lawyers.

Those interested should write to: Mr. Ed Holdren, 4412 Dovehill Drive, Austin, Texas 78744.

GTA Article Demolishes HWA

HWA's malevolent treatment of his son, Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA), has apparently taken an even nastier turn, with HWA now refusing to communicate with members of Ted's family. In April, HWA's servants even refused to accept a registered letter to HWA from Shirl, Ted's wife. While some speculate that HWA is being "shielded" by those around him, we suspect HWA knows full well of the treatment being given GTA. Perhaps The International News for March had something to do with the latest escalation in the feud. In that issue's lead article, "Did Peter Have the Primacy?", GTA absolutely blasted HWA's claim to being the church's "chief apostle." Not only that, GTA, very pointedly, went on to observe:

Never did Jesus indicate His true church was to become a powerful, influential, politically oriented organization which would become part of this world; having concourse with this world's government and governmental leaders, becoming a large, visible church, capable of influencing legislation, wielding political power through numbers and financial resources!

I am attending Rainbow Fellowship Church of God in Huntington Beach. We are currently considering a church in the San Gabriel Valley area. We occasionally hold Bible studies here in my home. If anyone would be interested in attending a Seventh Day Pentecostal Assembly, please let me know. I also have an on-going rest home and a Bible ministry here in Pasadena. I have spoken in a number of churches for my business and find a real need and desire to know and be informed about Herbert Armstrong and his danger.

For your information, the Seventh Day Church of God, P.O. Box 804, Caldwell, ID 83605, holds a Feast of Tabernacles near Tacoma, Washington. We have attended before and find it very enjoyable. The camp is operated on a free-will offering basis.

Also the Seventh Day Pentecostal Assn. Camp will be held in Turner, Ore. the first week in August. Contact Elder Billy Watts, 214 "D" St., Springfield, OR 97477. This camp is also supported by freewill offering. The grounds and quarters are kind of Spartan, but there are a lot of good fellowship meetings. Last year I met a number of people who knew Mr. Armstrong back in the 20s and 30s. Don't let anyone tell you he just went bad in recent years. According to them, he had a temper and ego problem all along. But his wife was a restraining factor.

Letters

Regarding your article on page ten of last month's report on "Should We Continue Publishing?" I say INDEED! The April issue is a very fine report about a sad situation that's allowed to continue. I had been duped by HWA and the WCG from 1966 to 1982. I increasingly became "fed up" with the half information that they gave in "announcements" and with the contradictory interpretations on scriptures. One "pastor" would say that a scripture means thus and such. I in turn made a notation in my Bible, and lo and behold a few years later another "minister" would say something entirely different about the same scripture! When I queried the "minister," afterwards he would either say he never heard the other meaning or he would say, "That is new to me."

I did not like or care for it when HWA, a cantankerous octogenarian curmudgeon, married Ramona Martin, a young spring chicken - RIDICULOUS! Even more ridiculous was the divorce! Why? Because HWA has preached against divorce for over fifty years. Then he has the audacity to write in the April 1982 Co-Worker letter.- "This determination SHOULD NOT BE USED AS A PRECEDENT TO ENCOURAGE OR JUSTIFY OTHER DIVORCES IN THE CHURCH." In other words, do as I say, NOT as I do. A wedding "spiritually bound" by God five years ago ended upon the rocks. That was when I quit the WCG.

-Manitoba, Canada

I thought you might be interested in the following item that appeared on May 12 in a Gladewater, Texas paper:

Gladewater High School's 1983 graduating class will be the last one to hold Commencement at old Bear Stadium. After that it will be put in mothballs until such time as the school board makes a decision concerning its future.

School administrative officials were deluged with telephone calls of protest Tuesday morning after it was announced that plans were being made to hold Commencement at Ambassador College. The plans were changed.

-Texas

I have a question for you concerning the Worldwide Church of God, which I have been attending for twelve years. Why, all of a sudden, were tape recordings prohibited at services?

-Pennsylvania

Editor: Our guess is that HWA does not want anyone to be able to document what is being said in services.

Because of makeup I was recently put into a "nonmember" category, which means that I have never been converted and do not have God's Holy Spirit according to the WCG minister in.... But I can attend with my husband as long as I wear absolutely "no makeup."

-Texas

The church recently cancelled its Women's Club program without giving a logical explanation. Do you know the reason?

-California

Editor: Not really. Our guess is that this is just another way for the "Apostle" to punish those "rebellious" women who might want to wear makeup.

I wish I could have come in contact with Ambassador Report years ago. My wife and I would almost surely still be together. It's too late for us, but perhaps others can still be saved. Keep up the good work.

-New York

Thanks again for all your investigative work on the WCG and Mr. Armstrong. I was "snowed" by HWA for more than 20 years, starting at age 13, but God delivered me from HWA's clutches before I went insane. That's no exaggeration. I did suffer a series of mental breakdowns which were, in part, due to the Armstrong cult.

-AR Reader

...bleak for us was the news in your latest Report about the suicide death of Phillip Apartian, who had been suffering from depression. Although we didn't personally know Phillip, we can't help thinking about our own son, age 24, who still is very much with the WCG and who likewise has been suffering from depression. His depression has driven him to two suicide attempts in the last two years! The first time was after taking "vivren" (not sure of the spelling), a caffeine-type stimulant, and some form of alcohol, we believe, wine. He ended up at Harbor General Hospital for treatment. The most recent attempt was after consuming sleeping pills and "Southern Comfort." This put him in U. C. Irvine Medical Center for detoxification and psychiatric evaluation. After the first attempt, he refused psychiatric counseling on any extended basis - we feel due to the WCG cult influence. After the last attempt, a psychiatrist from U. C. Irvine ended up calling for background information, and our son was told by his local minister that any further suicide attempts would result in disfellowship for a period of at least six months!

My wife and I definitely feel that the WCG has not helped our son to become a better person or an upstanding citizen of good character, but has instead introduced him to alcohol (the hard stuff - not beer), to wayward lifestyles, and to poor hygiene habits.

When our son left home in 1979 after completing one year at Ambassador College, he told us he was leaving "Egypt" and going to his "promised land" to live with his "fellow brethren in the Lord" where he could become a "whole person" and develop to his "full potential." He further stated that he would then be unincumbered by me, the "Pharaoh," and could become much more zealous in the furthering of "The Great Work." As my wife and I view it, our son has in reality "gone to the dogs!" His health, car, clothes and other personal effects are all in a very degenerate, rundown condition, due to, in large measure, his sacrificial tithing to Pasadena, which undoubtedly is now helping to pay for attorneys' fees and other legal expenses for both Herbert and Ramona!

-California

Though late in responding, I would like to say that your latest Report has been the most incisive yet. I can understand that you wish to set this aside and get on with your lives, but I would like to see you continue your work until at least that time when the WCG changes its leadership. If you find that you cannot continue with the burden, then I would like to say thank you for making a difference.

-Pennsylvania

Yes, we would like to get on with our lives. And we look forward to the day when we can put all of this behind us.

Nevertheless, it does look like the WCG is in for some really major upheavals in the next year or so. And many - especially those with loved ones in the WCG - have written us that the Report is their only source of accurate information as to what is happening in that organization. We are going to do our best to continue getting out the facts on Herbert Armstrong.

We thank all of you who wrote in the last three months to encourage us. And we especially thank those who, knowing of our needs, contributed a little extra to our efforts. Without your help this issue would not have been possible.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR26 October 1983

Trial Delayed as Herbert Pays

There is an old Jewish curse that goes something like this: "May your life be filled with lawyers!" Anyone who has had much contact with the legal profession will fully understand the unending conflict, semantical contortions, mental convolutions, exasperations, and almost locust-plague-like devastation evoked by that malediction. The inference of the phrase is a state of existence some would not wish on even their worst enemies. Yet, amazingly, it is a state Herbert W. Armstrong has brought upon himself.

It is now one and a half years since Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the 91-year-old founder of the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College, filed for divorce from his 44-year-old wife, Ramona. Since then, so many lawyers have been drawn into the case one almost needs a scorecard to keep track of who is representing whom. And the legal expenses are rumored to have already gone over the one million dollar mark.

Numerous trial dates have been set, only to have been later put back further because of continuing legal maneuverings. Presently, the trial is set to begin November 7, but it is quite likely the trial will not get under way before December. Judge Hooker, who currently presides over the case, will be replaced by another judge, as he plans to retire from the bench on October 15.

WCG lawyer Ralph Helge, a witness in the case, has been at the center of a number of delay-producing motions. Since January he repeatedly refused to comply with demands by Ramona's attorneys that he appear for a deposition. He finally did appear, but only after Ramona's lawyers threatened contempt of court proceedings. And even then, he refused to answer a number of important questions. Not surprisingly, Helge, himself a lawyer, has thought it wise to obtain legal advice for himself. He is now personally represented by the law firm of Molloy, Jones, Donahue, Trachta, Childers and Mallamo.

Another individual who has refused to appear is a Mr. Wetzell Wallace ("Wally")

McKinney. Court records indicate that he is an unemployed, close friend of Ramona and that she is now living with him and his two children somewhere in Nevada.

The Slippery Eel

No matter what negative impression one may have of the legal profession in general, we really must respect the lawyers who are up against HWA, because getting the truth out of HWA is about as difficult as holding on to a slippery eel. Here is just one example. As in most civil cases, interrogatories were submitted to HWA. Interrogatory No. 1.D asked the question:

Please describe your educational background, including college, trade schools, degrees, and vocational training. If you are in the process of receiving training/education, please explain and give expected date of completion.

Chancellor and President of Ambassador College, Pasadena, California and Big Sandy, Texas, campuses.

Of course HWA does hold those titles. But his response did not answer the question that was asked! An honest answer would have been: "Dropped out of high school in junior year. Received an honorary degree from a Filipino institution after giving an expensive gift to accused political assassin and dictator Ferdinand Marcos."

HWA's answers cannot be trusted. And apparently neither can his promises. In our June 1982 issue we reported on the "Stipulation and Order" of June 24 ordering HWA to provide Ramona with funds for temporary spousal maintenance and various utility payments. Court documents reveal that by October of 1982, Ramona's lawyers were back in court claiming:

That petitioner [HWA] has failed to abide by the signed Stipulation and Order by failing to either pay certain of the expenses on the dates due or failing to pay the expenses at all of such items, including, but not limited to, the water bill, expenses for landscaping, the phone bill, etc.

Surely "God's Apostle" has not forgotten Paul's admonition in I Timothy 5:8 that "if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." Could it be that HWA does not have the money to pay his bills? Not likely. In with the thousands of pages of court documents now on file in the divorce case are copies of HWA's employment contracts with the Worldwide Church and the Corporation Sole. HWA's 14-page Employment, Disability and Retirement Agreement with the WCG was signed August 1, 1976. Page one contains this modest claim:

Employee [HWA] is the founder, President and Chairman of Employer [WCG]. Since the organization of Employer and its related entities, which include Ambassador College and the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, both of which are headquartered in Pasadena, California, Employee has served as the senior executive of each of them. Employee has unselfishly devoted his lifetime to ensuring the success and good image of Employer throughout the world in its support of worthy humanitarian purposes. Employee's services and contributions to Employer and its related entities have far exceeded anything that Employer expected or had the right to expect.

In return for his services this is what HWA's contract granted him:

Salary. For all his services as Chairman of the Board and President of Employer, Employee shall receive a salary of Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($200,000) per year. Each year during the Employment Period, Employee's annual salary shall be payable in at least twelve (12) equal consecutive monthly installments.

Expenses: Employer shall pay for all expenses incurred by or on behalf of Employee in performing as the Chairman of the Board and President of Employer, including but not limited to all travel, lodging, entertainment and meal expenses. Recognizing that Employee will be traveling around the world meeting with many dignitaries, including Heads of States, in all cases Employee shall be provided with first-class accommodations at Employer's expense. All out-of-pocket expenses incurred by Employee in the performance of his duties as the Chairman of the Board and President of Employer shall be promptly reimbursed by Employer to Employee within thirty (30) days after Employee's incurrence thereof.

Fringe Benefits: Vacations, sick leaves, employee group insurance and other fringe benefits for Employee shall be in accordance with Employer's personnel policies governing its senior executives, and if no such policies have been adopted, as Employer may authorize from time to time, such authorization not to be unreasonably withheld.

Automobile: Each year during the Employment Period, Employer shall provide to Employee, by purchase, lease or otherwise, (at Employer's expense), a limousine with chauffeur to be used in the performance of the Employee's duties as the Chairman of the Board and President of Employer. Said limousine shall be a late model, not older than three (3) years.

The seven-year contract continues on, giving HWA protection against being fired, full compensation for partial disability or total disability, retirement benefits, retention of his titles, use of airplane, attorneys' fees in case of lawsuits, etc. The contract was signed by Herbert W. Armstrong (Employee), and by Garner Ted Armstrong and Stanley R. Rader for Worldwide Church of God (Employer).

Of particular interest in this divorce case is a section on page nine of the contract that provides HWA's spouse $25,000 per year in the event of his death. That is something HWA claims he never promised Ramona. Recall from our last issue (page 7) this question put to HWA under oath:

Did you ever make any promise to Ramona Armstrong either prior to the marriage or during the marriage, that if you were to become disabled or died, you or the church would give her, for the rest of her life, $25,000 a year?

Yet HWA's 1976 contract clearly states that on his death his "spouse" would receive $25,000 per year. Not only that, but in an amendment to his contract dated July 1, 1977, that provision is clarified:

In the event that Armstrong's spouse, Ramona Louise Armstrong, survives him, then upon Armstrong's death his spouse shall be entitled to an annual benefit of Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars ($25,000.00) during each year that said spouse survives Armstrong, which amount shall be payable in at least twelve (12) equal consecutive monthly installments during each such year. Said annual benefits shall commence on the date of death of Armstrong and terminate on the date of death of Armstrong's spouse.

But that's not all. The amendment then goes on to amplify the provision to include survivors' benefits for "Richard Dale Martin, Armstrong's stepson" and "Zella Crittenden, Armstrong's mother-in-law" (Ramona's mother). The amendment is signed by Herbert, W. Armstrong (Employee) and by Stanley R. Rader and Herbert Armstrong again for Worldwide Church of God (Employer). The amendment also contained one odd - in fact, for HWA, extremely odd - provision. HWA gave himself a cut in salary. It was lowered from $200,000 per year way down to $195,000 per year. No reason was given, but some have pointed out that $200,000 per year divided by 12 installments gave HWA a very "beastly" monthly paycheck of $16,666.66.

Whatever the case, by 1980 HWA was entangled in the State of California suit and decided he wanted a new contract. That Employment Agreement, well-larded with ecclesiastical verbage and filed in, of all places, Wyoming, begins thusly:

THIS AGREEMENT is made and entered into effective April 25, 1980, by and between Herbert W. Armstrong The Apostle of the Worldwide Church of God, and his successors, a corporation sole (hereinafter referred to as "Employer"), a Wyoming corporation sole, and Herbert W. Armstrong (hereinafter referred to as "Employee"). This Agreement is made with reference to the following facts:

A. Employee had previously made and entered into on July 30, 1976, an Employment, Disability and Retirement Agreement, which Agreement shall be referred to herein as the "1976 Agreement." The 1976 Agreement was made and entered into between Employee and Worldwide Church of God, a California corporation, which entity shall hereinafter be referred to as the "California corporation." The Worldwide Church of God (hereinafter referred to as the "Church") is not a corporation, although it has formed various corporations and other legal entities in many nations around the world. The Church is a worldwide spiritual organism, the Body of Christ. Although Employee has performed valuable services for each of the several entities through which the Church has conducted its temporal affairs. Employee heretofore has been compensated by the California corporation according to the terms and provisions of the 1976 Agreement.

The Church has requested, and the California corporation and Employee have agreed, that the 1976 Agreement be terminated. Such termination was effected by an Agreement of Termination dated April 25, 1980.

Employee's performance under the 1976 Agreement both to the Church as well as to the California corporation was exemplary in every respect. In addition to the recitals contained in the 1976 Agreement which are incorporated herein by this reference, the following facts are important recitals to this Agreement: Employee has kept God's Word and not denied His Name and has held fast to the teachings which he received of Jesus Christ. He has been faithful in putting God's Work back on the track and preparing the Church to be the Bride of Christ, that it may be presented to Him holy and without blemish, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing. The fruits of Employee's labours confirm that he has been called to be an Apostle, not of man, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised Him from the dead. Employee received the precious truth of the Gospel not of man, neither was he taught it after man, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing recitals and of the mutual promises, covenants, and agreements contained herein, the parties hereto agree as follows:

The seven-year contract then goes on to give HWA raise:

Employer shall pay Employee a salary of not less than Twenty-One Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-Five and Fffty- Eight Hundredths Dollars ($21,535.58) per month, payable in equal, biweekly installments each and every month during the term thereof.

That brought HWA's salary up to $258,426.96 per year. The contract also gave him the generous expense allowance, car, plane, attorney fees protection, etc. contained in the 1976 contract. There was also the same provision for survivor's benefits for HWA's spouse. The contract was signed by HWA (employee) and by Stanley Rader and HWA (employer). We wonder, though, why a man allegedly so close to God Almighty would put his faith in lawyers and contracts to provide for him, rather than in God. We don't recall Moses, Elijah, Jesus, or any of the apostles demanding an employment contract.

Is HWA in the "Real World"?

It may seem like a strange question at first, but some are beginning to wonder if HWA knows what is going on around him. The following is an excerpt from an "Opposition to Motion for Summary Judgment" filed June 8 by Ramona's lawyers:

There is other evidence which casts a serious doubt as to whether the marriage is truly irretrievably broken as the petitioner alleges. Respondent believes that since the separation of the parties Mr. Armstrong has been isolated and shielded from communications with the respondent to such a degree that he does not fully understand or comprehend what has occurred since that separation. It is respondent's belief that the attempts made by her for reconciliation prior to the filing of the petition for dissolution were intercepted and kept from the petitioner to inhibit and prevent any reconciliation.

For this fact the respondent [Ramona] asks the court to review the following testimony taken from the deposition of the petitioner Herbert W. Armstrong on April 25, 1983.

Q [Deckter] My question is following that, that is, in December or January -

A [HWA] Uh-huh.

Q December '81, January '82, were you informed of Ramona's willingness -

A No, I was not.

Q - to accompany you on other trips?

A No, I was not, definitely.

Q Would it surprise you, Sir, that there were written communications intended to be communicated to you -

A It certainly would.

Q - of her willingness to accompany you on trips?

A I saw no such communication.

See also the testimony of Herbert W. Armstrong taken on April 26, 1983.

Q Do you know if between January and March, 1982, Ramona attempted to communicate with you on a direct basis? I'm asking if he knows.

Mr. Brown: But attempted to communicate makes the question vague and ambiguous.

Mr. Deckter: He said he didn't talk to her personally or receive any personal communication.

The Witness: Not to my knowledge.

Mr. Deckter: I asked if he was aware -

The Witness: No communication whatsoever. And I know of no attempt at any communication whatsoever. I tried to contact her. I didn't know what had happened to her, after she wouldn't go on that trip, and that's now more than a year-and-a-half ago. This thing's been dragging ever since. I wish we could get it over with.

Q (By Mr. Deckter): I'm talking about the period January through April, January 1st, 1982 to the time of the filing of your petition for dissolution in this matter. Are you aware of any attempts on Ramona's part to directly communicate with you?

A Let's see, I don't remember the dates. The only thing would have been a telegram that she sent to me telling me to leave her alone, she wouldn't live with me, and she wanted to be alone and didn't want to be with me.

In view of this testimony, the court is asked to review the letter attached as Respondent's Exhibit C. Exhibit C is a letter sent from Respondent's counsel to Petitioner's counsel. The testimony by Petitioner casts doubt as to whether he received the information contained in the correspondence.

The petitioner's isolation from events concerning his possible reconciliation with Ramona Armstrong is not the only evidence that persons close to him have attempted to shield him from the "real world." During questioning at his deposition concerning payment of his attorneys' fees certain statements were made which show how real his isolation is. The court is directed to the following testimony excerpted from Mr. Armstrong's deposition, taken on April 18, 1983.

Q Who is paying your attorneys' fees?

A I haven't been billed yet. I have no idea.

Q To no one?

A I don't have the money to pay the kind of attorneys' fees that are mounting up.

Q So no one has come to you and said we will loan you "X" number of dollars to pay your attorneys' fees.

A No.

Q You haven't talked to anyone and said -

A No.

Q - would you take care of them for me?

A No.

Q So if hundreds of thousands of dollars of money have been paid for your personal attorneys' fees in this matter, you don't know anything about it?

Mr. Browne: He's asking if you know.

Mr. Deckter: Let me ask my questions. Confer in private.

Mr. Browne: I don't want to confer in private at this point.

Mr. Deckter: Then -

Mr. Browne: I just - Mr. Armstrong, if you know specifically the information about the attorneys' fees, you can testify to it. If somebody else is taking care of that for you then -

Mr. Deckter: Don't instruct the witness on what to testify.

Mr. Browne: I'm just -

Mr. Deckter: You are.

The Witness: I've not been billed attorneys' fees, and I don't know anything about it. I presume they will be billed to me. That's all. Now, I'm just informing you gentlemen who like attorneys' fees so well, I don't have the money to pay it.

Someone Is Going to Pay

HWA may claim he is too poor to pay for the divorce he initiated, but court documents show that he has made several hundred thousand dollars a year for the past several years, he has many foreign bank accounts, and he owns considerable wealth. On top of that, as we have shown, virtually all his living expenses are paid for by the church. Ironically, not only are HWA's lawyers making money on this case, HWA is paying for Ramona's lawyers as well! Ramona's lawyers recently petitioned the court for more money from Herbert.

That the respondent [Ramona] is without adequate funds with which to compensate her attorneys. That due to the time and expenses necessary to adequately prepare and litigate this action, not less than $300,000.00 will be needed for additional reasonable temporary attorneys' fees, plus an additional sum of $50,000.00 for incurred expenses and projected costs and expenses.

That an additional reasonable sum for temporary attorneys' fees in an amount of not less than $300,000.00 is necessary for the following reasons:

- a) Petitioner [HWA] is represented by four (4) separate law firms consisting of in excess of 50 attorneys in Tucson, Arizona alone, as well as the constant presence of another firm, Helge & Associates. In addition thereto, petitioner is represented by several law firms in the State of California;
- b) That to date over 361 pleadings have been filed, offered, responded to, etc. herein. In addition, approximately 20 depositions have been taken and are continuing at present;
- c) There have been 11 special actions filed and one (1) appeal to the Supreme Court.

Judge Hooker granted them a "finding of fact" of legal fees of $200,000 and an award for partial fees of $100,000. This over the $43,000 HWA was already forced to pay them.

Their total bill will undoubtedly go far higher before the case is over. And don't forget, this is just one firm. Ramona has separate firms representing her in her suit against Worldwide in California (and Arizona) and in her criminal case in Tucson.

A Nasty Business

HWA is discovering just how expensive a divorce can be. It can also be a very nasty business. For instance, notice this line of questioning at one HWA deposition:

Q Isn't it true, air, that you required of Ramona Martin that she be sterilized prior to your marriage?

A Definitely not.

Q And that -

A Definitely not.

Q And that in order to obtain her consent to get that operation performed, Ramona wanted you present at the operation?

A Definitely not. I never made any such requirement.

Q Do you remember discussing that particular matter with Mr. David Robinson?

A No, I certainly do not.

Q Do you recall, sir, when we talked about Amy Bowman before? Do you remember we talked about Amy Bowman who was a secretary to your secretary at some time before 19 -

A She was an assistant to my secretary.

Q Do you remember, sir, I asked you if you had a romantic relationship with Amy Bowman?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question...

According to Ramona, she was sterilized in 1976 at HWA's insistence. (Robinson, in his book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web, recounts how HWA admitted this very thing to him in 1976.) You will recall, however, that HWA and Ramona did not wed until April of 1977. Yes indeed, HWA's divorce trial may provide some interesting bits of information on "The Apostle."

A look at the list of witnesses Ramona's lawyers hope to have testify hints at the nature of the forthcoming trial. Along with various WCG officials, accountants, and bank officers are these probable witnesses: Jack Kessler, John Kenniston, Henry Cornwall, Rona Martin, Stanley Rader, David Dahlgran, Nikki Rader, Dr. Floyd Lochner, Melvin Olinger, Myrtle Horn, Dorothy Mattson, David Robinson, Jim Johnson, Layla Upton, Amy Bowman, Helen Styles, Ilene McManis, Virginia Kenniston, Jerry Wylie, Ken Hopke, Bill Stacey, Dorothy Moore, Wes White, Hillel Chodos, and Judge Weisman. Some of those listed have already thought it wise to obtain legal representation.

New Criminal Charges Against Ramona

On September 12 Associated Press ran this story on the wire:

A Pima County (Arizona) Superior Court judge has ordered Herbert W. Armstrong, pastor general of the Worldwide Church of God, to make himself available for an interview with the lawyer representing his estranged wife on perjury and theft charges. Judge J. Richard Hannah issued the order Monday at the request of Tucson lawyer Alex Gaynes, who represents Ramona Armstrong, and told the prosecutor to arrange the interview within the next three weeks. The interview may be held in California, where Armstrong resides near the church headquarters in Pasadena.

Gaynes wants to question Armstrong, 91, about what he knows of the handling of gold flatware, the property Mrs. Armstrong, 44, allegedly stole. Chief Deputy County Attorney Victor Wild said after Monday's hearing that he had talked to Armstrong's lawyers and they had offered two possible dates for the interview and were working on a third....

The divorce case is fiercely contested, and community property is estimated by some to be in the millions of dollars. It took months of legal wrangling before Armstrong came to Tucson to give a deposition to his wife's lawyers in the divorce case earlier this year, and Gaynes said "of course" Monday when asked if he expected further problems in setting up an interview with Armstrong.

Mrs. Armstrong was indicted March 29 on single counts of perjury and theft, stemming from her alleged mishandling of the flatware, purportedly belonging to the church's Ambassador College in Pasadena, and statements she made about it at a hearing in the divorce case. The theft charge was ordered dismissed in early summer because of interference by a prosecutor in grand jury deliberations. But the grand jury reindicted her Aug. 17 on a similar theft charge and added a charge of trafficking in stolen property.

Mrs. Armstrong's son by a previous marriage, Richard Dale Martin, who lived with the Armstrongs, also was indicted Aug. 17, according to a court record. But the file on his case remains confidential, usual practice when the person indicted has not been served. In an apparent reference to the son, Wild said in court Monday that Mrs. Armstrong had a "codefendant" who was indicted on similar charges.

Gaynes meanwhile said he will argue for dismissal of the theft and trafficking charges against Mrs. Armstrong on grounds that the prosecution waited too long to refile them. Gaynes has been critical of the prosecution of Mrs. Armstrong, saying that it resulted from information provided by Armstrong's lawyers.

What exactly these missing "gold flatware" are we don't know. But we did notice something interesting in the court record. HWA has had Pinkerton agents guarding his Tucson home around the clock at a cost of over $5,000 per month. In spite of this, Ralph Helge, in November 1982 wrote to an insurance company making a claim on allegedly stolen property. Helge described that property this way:

A pair of sterling silver George III wine coolers by Paul Storr, London, 1796. They were purchased in February 1978 for $21,200.00.

An antique English gilt sterling silver centerpiece, by Paul Storr, London, 1808/09. It is a hemispherical bowl with a banding of Greek-key designs flanked by beadmoldings and three finely detailed masks of the god Bacchus, wearing a sunburst tiara. The bowl rests on three Sphinx supports, each ending on a claw foot, and connected by a decorated stretcher. The whole is mounted on a molded tre-foil base, decorated with winged ornaments, or three shell feet.

Students of ancient history will recall that Bacchus was the Greek god of wine, drunkenness, and sexual excess. He is identified with the god Dionysus, who was worshipped with orgiastic rites. Throughout the Bible (II Kings 10 for instance) there are numerous admonitions that such graven or molten images be destroyed. One can only wonder then why "God's Apostle" would spend many thousands of dollars of church funds to surround himself with such openly pagan depictions - especially when he forbids his church members from observing Christmas and Easter because of their pagan origins.

HWA Unaware of His Church's Divorce Policy???

One of the last things most WCG members ever remotely expected Herbert to do was to file for divorce from Ramona, the woman who, according to Herbert, was specially selected and provided by God to be his wife (The Plain Truth, July 1977; Member Letter, 4/18/77). After all, as God's "apostle," Herbert (1) had said uncountable times that "marriage is a sacred, God-plane relationship," (2) had authored dozens of PT and GN articles and three booklets (Divorce and Remarriage, Why Marriage! Soon Obsolete?, and Marriage and Divorce) on divorce, the purpose of marriage, and how to achieve marital happiness, (3) had condemned divorce as a "colossal national sin" (Divorce and Remarriage, 1953, p.1), and (4) had for over 40 years cruelly refused to permit church members to remarry if they had been previously divorced.

But if some were shocked that Herbert would file for divorce, many were stunned beyond belief that, when asked by attorney Browne during a Feb. 25, 1983 deposition if he had ever made a promise to Ramona Armstrong that he would never divorce her, Herbert replied: "No. I did not."

What kind of answer is that? Has Herbert totally forgotten his wedding vows? He should remember them well because he wrote them and commanded that his wedding "ceremony should be read 'as is' for all marriages between members in the Western world." One of our supporters, when he asked a church official if he could alter the wording of the WCG's official ceremony for his marriage, was curtly informed that the wording was written by Herbert, inspired by God, and NO, it would be considered heresy to alter it. But evidently Herbert has forgotten one of its key sections:

And you are commanded, on the authority of the Eternal God, not to separate or marry another so long as you both shall live! This marriage, by authority of the Supreme Court of Heaven, is inexorably binding, until broken by death! (Emphasis HWA's throughout.)

So Herbert wrote that not only was a married person not to divorce and remarry, but he/she was not even to separate. Why? Because the marriage was inexorably bound until broken by death. The vows continue:

Since Marriage is a divine institution, and we are asking the living GOD to join you as husband and wife, it is fitting that each of you should faithfully promise before God to accept the sacred Marriage covenant according to the divinely ordained conditions imposed by Almighty God.

Do you, then [his first name] FAITHFULLY PROMISE AND COVENANT WITH God, in the presence of these witnesses, to take [her FULL name] to be your lawful wedded wife, to cleave to her unto death, to love her, cherish her, honor her, and provide for her? [His answer.]

Has Herbert forgotten his sacred marriage vows before Almighty God? If not, how can he truthfully say under oath that he never promised Ramona not to divorce her?

Church's Worldwide Audited Financial Report

The WCG published an audited worldwide financial statement for the first time in its 50-year history (Worldwide News, 6/27/83). The financial report was examined by the internationally respected firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. As Herbert Armstrong correctly pointed out, the church is "not required by law to publish this report."

The report revealed that the WCG and affiliated organizations (including AC and the AICF) took in $120,904,000 in 1982 and spent $116,097,000, leaving $4,807,000 in support and revenue over expenses - a healthy sign. Based on unaudited worldwide figures for 1981 (see WN, 2/15/82), revenue rose 11.6 percent and expenses rose 12.4 percent, which meant the church's income increased faster than inflation.

While the notes to the combined financial statements held some interesting tidbits, evidently church officials closely scrutinized the final wording this time, so there was no mention of Herbert's huge salary and other embarrassing material as there was in Arthur Andersen's 1978-79 audit of church books. It appears Herbert and his entourage spent close to $3 million in 1982, though much of the $22.6 million labeled "Management and general" could have been used for his picture-taking visits with world leaders. Strangely, no note explains this mysterious figure, which equals 19.5 percent of total expenditures.

Note 3 shows the church spent about $4 million for travel expenses and $4 million for professional fees, much of which may represent legal fees. Note 4 lists aircraft owned by the church costing $3.8 million, fine arts (probably art objects) costing $2.1 million, and library books costing only $1.1 million. This gives a rough idea of the importance the WCG attaches to academics. The church's aircraft "is scheduled to be modified in 1986 for an anticipated approximate cost of $3,400,000." Note 7 reveals that the church "is currently providing benefits to certain former employees of approximately $580,000 annually." We suspect some of these former employees are either dissident ministers who have promised not to portray the church in unfavorable light to the news media or Armstrong relatives. Note 8 confirms that the church has dumped Quest magazine and Everest House Publishers, a smart move, as these publications published material at variance with the church's beliefs.

Herbert's Tithes Come Up Short

It's been some time since HWA could lay claim to being the WCG's biggest financial contributor. But just how small a contributor he is has shocked WCG members in Pasadena who obtained copies of HWA's 1980 income tax returns. Those documents show that in 1980 HWA gave himself and his wife an income of $387,755, paid federal taxes of $147,545, and deducted only $37,427 (or just over 9.5 percent) as church contributions. That from the man who teaches that Christians must pay first tithe, second tithe, third tithe, building fund offerings, holy day offerings, and regularly exhorts his followers to "sacrifice as never before!" Also we note that Ramona listed her occupation as "secretary" and was given a salary of $38,308.08 from the WCG - quite a nice salary for secretarial services.

USC Responds to Robinson Letter

In our last issue we reported how the University of Southern California had established a professorship in constitutional law in the name of Herbert W. Armstrong. We also ran an open letter to the President and Trustees of USC written by author David Robinson protesting the honor given HWA. Scott H. Bice, the dean of USC's Law Center, answered Robinson with a letter which later became the standard reply to others who also wrote, protesting the USC-HWA collaboration. We thought you might find Dean Bice's letter of interest:

Dear Mr. Robinson:

President Zumberge has asked me to respond to your letter of June 13, 1983, concerning the Armstrong Professorship.

As you know, the professorship was established by a grant from the Ambassador Foundation to the Law Center. At the Foundation's request, the professorship was named for the Chairman and Founder of the Foundation. It is customary to name professorships for the institution or persons who provide the funds to establish the professorship's endowment.

Mr. Armstrong's career, like the careers of many other noteworthy persons, has of course not been free from controversy. We take the occasion of the establishment of a professorship to mark the undeniable contributions of the person for whom the chair is named. Mr. Armstrong is a recognized religious leader and philanthropist.

Sincerely,
Scott H. Bice
Dean

Will the Real Beast Please Stand Up?

For quite a few years HWA was placing his bets on German politician Franz Josef Strauss to become "the Beast" dictator of Herbert's prophesied United Europe. With Strauss having failed repeatedly to become even Chancellor of West Germany, HWA is apparently searching about for a new person who could be the "future European dictator" to embellish his prophetic theories. And he has apparently found him.

He is Dr. Otto von Habsburg, head of the 700-year-old House of Habsburg, which ruled the Holy Roman Empire in the dynasty prior to Napoleon, and one of the most prestigious royal families in Europe.

So writes Herbert in his July 24 letter to the brethren. He described Habsburg this way:

He very probably has a more clear grasp of international affairs than any man today. He is author of the famous book The Social Order of Tomorrow, giving a design for reunification of Europe startlingly close to the biblical description of this prophesied resurrected Europe to occur just prior to the Second Coming of Christ. I had long wanted to meet Otto von Habsburg personally.

And meet him he did. HWA invited him to speak at Ambassador College in July and then flew him to Washington, D.C., in the church's G-II jet.

GTA Hits the Petra Fallacy

Of all the beliefs held by the WCG there is probably none that worries relatives and friends of WCG members more than the "flee to Petra" idea. (Petra is in the Jordanian desert east of Israel.) We regularly receive letters from concerned individuals who know someone who has adopted this belief. Many are concerned that their WCG friend or relative may be led into another Jonestown situation or into some similar tragedy.

The "Petra escape" is still believed strongly by many in WCG circles in spite of the fact that there have been numerous articles and sermons debunking the whole idea. The latest article to appear that debunks the fallacy is by none other than Garner Ted Armstrong. Titled "Where Is Your 'Place of Safety'?", it appeared in the June-July issue of The International News (P.O. Box 2525, Tyler, TX 75710). We actually found the article quite good in many respects and in particular found the following excerpts noteworthy:

For years, many ministers have taught FALSELY that Almighty God will use physical punishment; the GREAT TRIBULATION, martyrdom and torture before death as the final means of expiating guilt, the final manner in which God will cleanse unrighteousness, and bring about brokenhearted REPENTANCE in recalcitrant, unyielding or "Laodicean" (lukewarm) people!

Ask yourself the following question: "Is that why Stephen died?"...

Should a rational, sane, humble minister of Jesus Christ be encouraging people to think about a physical, geographical location on this earth; telling them, laughingly, that, since hundreds died in a fiery crash of a DC-10, and the fleet of DC-10s was subsequently grounded, God will very likely provide that grounded fleet of DC-10s to take them to faraway PETRA? Is God amused by references to the failed "10-inch bolt" being replaced by a "10-inch angel"?

No, the Eternal God in heaven above is not amused by irresponsible blatherings or sick humor...

The point which should finally occur to anyone is that, while Petra, or any other wilderness place featuring sheer rock walls and caves is completely obsolete as a "place of safety" in the face of modern weapons and methods of warfare, God's protection will NEVER be obsolete!

Tidbits

Worldwide Church of God members are as preoccupied as ever, it seems, with the idea of fleeing into the Jordanian desert to await the end of the world. But such ideas have not deterred the church-sponsored AICF from scheduling a spectacular 1983-84 concert season at Ambassador Auditorium (formerly referred to as "The House for God"). Their lineup of stars includes: The Vienna Philharmonic with Leonard Bernstein, Mirella Freni, James Galway, the Amadeus Quartet, Horacio Gutierrez, the National Symphony Orchestra with Mstislav Rostropovich, Nathan Milstein, Kiri Te Kanawa, Ravi Shankar, Bella Davidovich, Jessye Norman, the Beaux Arts Trio, Oscar Shumsky, the Guarneri String Quartet, Lucia Popp, Hermann Prey, Jorge Bolet, the Ballet Nacional Espanol, Mel Torme, the New England Ragtim Ensemble, the Canadian Brass, Richard Stoltzman, Nathaniel Rosen, Christopher Hogwood, the Danish National Orchestra, Sixten Ehrling, the Polish Chamber Orchestra, Claude Bollig, Herbie Mann, the Lucnica Czechoslovak Folk Ballet, the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, Gerard Schwarz, Julian Bream, Benny Goodman, I Musici, the Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company, Zamfir, Kathleen Battle, I Solisti di Zagreb, the Juilliard String Quartet, Martti Talvela, Jakob Gimpel, George Shearing, Montserrat Caballe, Andres Segovia, and many more.

We wondered if the WCG was paying taxes on the money they made from the concert series, but, after investigation we found that the concerts were losing money. That means that the church is subsidizing concerts for the rich under the guise of giving to charity.

Author John Tuit (The Truth Shall Make You Free) is apparently not the only writer in his family. His wife, Paula, is now a reporter with The New Transcript, a Freehold, New Jersey newspaper. Incidentally, John tells us he still has copies of his book available for $8.00 each. His address is: The Truth Foundation, 11 Laurel Court, Freehold Township, NJ 07728.

The WCG recently disfellowshipped its number one tithe payer, Jerry Gentry of Big Sandy, Texas (see our January '83 issue). Gentry apparently became too interested in the ministry of former WCG minister Cecil Battles (P.O. Box 867, Grants Pass, OR 97526).

We have heard that Battles has developed quite a following among current WCG members, many of whom regard him as some type of special prophet or shaman. We contacted Mr. Battles to ask a few questions about his ministry, but for some strange reason he was extremely reluctant to give any information whatsoever about his activities.

Ellis LaRavia, the vice-president of the Ambassador Foundation and the man many feel will head the WCG on HWA's demise, has been making important inroads for himself in the Pasadena community. He is currently vicepresident of the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce and likely to become its next president. He has even been mentioned as a possible candidate for Mayor of Pasadena.

* * *

Herbert Armstrong may consider himself the most important religious figure-in the world today, but there are those who would not even rank him close to such an honor. The World Christian Encyclopedia, a 1,010-page comprehensive survey of contemporary Christianity published in 1982, lists 490 of the world's most important Christian leaders in its Who's Who section. The name Herbert W. Armstrong does not appear.

Armstrongism Bibliography Completed

We are very pleased to announce that after considerable time and effort, John Buchner has completed his "Armstrongism Bibliography," and it is now available to the public. Although others have attempted and completed similar bibliographies in the past, Buchner's is by far the most extensive, thorough, and useful. Even we at Ambassador Report, after thumbing through this work, were amazed at the vast amount of material that has been published about Armstrongism.

Part one of the 124-page bibliography includes a listing of all known books on Armstrongism (eleven!), related book reviews, books with sections or chapters on Armstrong (33), booklets and tracts, academic theses and papers, audio-visual materials, papers written by insiders, papers written by others, documents, letters, magazine articles, newspaper articles, reference materials, and spin-off organizations. Part two lists materials produced by the WCG, part three materials produced by 13 "related organizations" (i.e., Foundation for Biblical Research, Biblical Church of God, Church of God International, The Shofar, etc.). Part four lists a huge amount of additional materials (including all issues of Ambassador Report to April 1983).

For anyone doing serious research on the Worldwide Church of God or related organizations, the Buchner bibliography will prove absolutely invaluable. Mr. Buchner has informed us that sometime in the distant future he may update this work. So if any omissions are noted, he would appreciate being informed. However, we suspect there will be very few. This is a very thorough bibliography and a major contribution to the study of the Armstrongism phenomenon. Those interested in obtaining a copy of this bibliography should send their requests along with $10.00 (U.S.) to: J.L.F. Buchner, P.O. Box 170,

Gordon, N.S.W. 2072, Australia.

Exodus Continues

Dear John:

It gave me considerable pleasure to read several of your recent reports. It was not until about a year ago, after serving as a Local Elder for seven years, that I finally realized what a total liar HWA had become. With that revelation I walked out of Sabbath services and flushed it behind me. Hope you and your family are well, I still retain fond memories of our college experience.

-Lawson O. Price

Editor. And the best to you Lawson; I too retain some very fond memories of our Ambassador College days.

* * *

In the July issue you quoted Mr Durrel Brown as a defected minister. Mr. Brown is [a relative]. He is very much with WCG. He did not leave the ministry. He just hasn't been reassigned for personal reasons that have nothing to do with his standing in the church. I'd appreciate it if you would print this correction.

Editor: Our apologies to Mr. Brown.

Bobby Fischer - Where Are You?

Long-time readers of Ambassador Report will recall that in our large 1977 edition we ran an interview with world chess champion Bobby Fischer. While never actually a baptized member of the WCG, Fischer had been an Armstrong follower for some years. The interview centered on his involvement with the WCG and helped thousands of readers to better understand the "Ambassador Experience."

Since then many have written to us asking what has become of the chess champion. But until recently, we've had little idea. For over five years now Fischer has shunned, not only the press, but most of his old friends. Nevertheless, the Los Angeles Times has been able to uncover a good deal of information on the chess champ. In an article by Bella Stumbo, the Times on August 4 reported on Fischer in considerable detail. Here are a few excerpts:

It is the sort of yarn, complete with lurid rumors and wild clues, to rival the tale of Howard Hughes. Turning his back on fame and a multimillion-dollar fortune, former world chess champion Bobby Fischer dropped out of sight nearly 10 years ago. Reporters, attorneys, bill collectors, fans and other assorted sleuths have been on his trail ever since. In vain. Fischer left almost no trace.

But, in chess circles, the legend of Bobby Fischer, generally considered the greatest chess mind of all time, remains passionately alive. Wherever two or more serious chess players are gathered, the latest Fischer gossip will be routinely exchanged, his greatest moves reverently replayed - and, inevitably, the wistful, wishful question will arise: Will Fischer... ever play chess in public again?

Generally speaking, nobody thinks so....

According to former friends and others in a position to know, his current lifestyle is unorthodox, not to say bizarre: He uses an alias, he doesn't drive, he has no phone, almost no money and only one remaining friend, a Pasadena matron, who allegedly censors his mail, pays his rent and is the only person who always knows where he lives. He reportedly has spent the last decade living in the basement of her comfortable hillside home, in assorted cheap Pasadena apartments and, occasionally, in fleabag hotels in downtown Los Angeles.

Secretive to the point of paranoia, Fischer, a bachelor, does not date for fear of treachery, and he has angrily cut off his handful of former chess friends, one by one, because, they say, they made the mistake of discussing him, however superficially, with the press. Fischer reportedly still suspects that he may be under Soviet surveillance and possibly the object of a KGB assassination attempt. It is a concern that he has nursed ever since his triumph over Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union in 1972....

According to Cerritos Junior High School history teacher Ron Gross, 47, the last of Fischer's old friends to see him (on a fishing trip to Mexico more than a year ago this summer), Fischer's day is (or was) most recently divided among three obsessions: physical fitness, chess and a political philosophy which holds that the world is run by a secret world government controlled by Jews and centered in Moscow.

He goes to bed at dawn, sleeps until noon, then works out, either in a gym or in his apartment, according to Gross. His apartment is littered with chess books, bags of fresh oranges, vitamin jars and a wide array of Indian herbal medicines. Fischer carries a stash of these health aides (and sometimes a juice squeezer too) with him wherever he goes. He distrusts doctors and, consequently, refuses to have three large, hairy moles on his face removed....

Fischer's political theories now apparently fascinate him even more than chess. According to published reports, he has been spotted, in his trench coat disguise, skulking through a public parking lot in Pasadena at night, distributing leaflets he wrote, warning against the "Hidden Hand of a Satanic Secret World Government." "Bobby's so right-wing he's fascist," Gross said. Fischer's political Bible is an anti-semitic tome called "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," he has a prized selection of Hitler pictures, regularly refers to Jews as "kikes" and "Jew-bastards," and has an only slightly higher opinion of blacks, according to Gross.

But Fischer, whose mother is Jewish, accepts Jews on an individual basis, adds Gross, Jewish himself: "Bobby says we're all victims of the conspiracy." Seemingly torn between embarrassment and pride, Gross said he chauffeured Fischer to Nazi-oriented bookstores....

The article goes on to report that Fischer's closest friend (some would say business manager) is Claudia Mokarow, wife of former WCG minister Art Mokarow. Fischer is apparently aiming on a writing career now. He is learning to type and is planning both a novel and a book on his political theories. In fact, Fischer's writing career is already under way. He has written and published a 14-page pamphlet about his 1981 arrest by the Pasadena police. The unusual (and fairly well written) work is titled: "I was Tortured in the Pasadena Jailhouse!" It is available for $1.50 (including postage) by writing to Bobby Fischer (the World Chess Champion), P.O. Box 50307, Pasadena, CA 91105-0307.

Literature of Interest

Editor" The October 1983 issue of The Plain Truth magazine has a "Personal From Herbert W. Armstrong" entitled "Here's Your Best Assurance of Holding a Job." Long-time HWA followers and WCG employees will not be surprised to learn that the method advocated is tithing to HWA. With that in mind, we thought you'd find the following letter of interest:

I recently read a good book put out by Le Tourneau Christian College of Longview, Texas. It is the biography of its founder R. G. Le Tourneau. I highly recommend it to 4R readers.... it should enlighten some of those inside that cult who read AR. Le Tourneau was a manufacturer of heavy earth-moving equipment and oil-drilling platforms sometime around the '30s to the late '60s in Longview, Texas. He was a self-made multi-millionaire who owed all his good fortune to God. The best part is not only did he tithe his income, but made an about face.- 10 percent to himself 90 percent to the Lord (mostly to a local church and foreign missions). The theology mentioned in the book is quite different from HWA's. It mentions such "worldly" ideas as Sunday church meetings, Sunday school, Christmas, etc. Great book, very inspirational. The title is Mover of Men & Mountains and is available by mail (paperback) from Le Tourneau College Bookstore, P.O. Box 7001, Longview, Texas 75607 (postage paid: $3.75).

Also there is another good book that might still be available entitled A Bucket of Finger Lickins. It is the story of Colonel Sanders of Kentucky Fried Chicken fame and how at the age of 65 years he promised to tithe to God's work if God would give him success in his chicken business. He gave his tithe to his local church in Kentucky (named Angel Tabernacle) and again it mentions those "worldly" ideas such as Sunday church going, Sunday schools and Christmas. If still available, the address is Starburst Co., P. O. Box 4123, Lancaster, PA 17604.

These two books lead me to believe that HWA followers might be tithing to the wrong church. I haven't heard of any millionaires coming out of WCG. They may as well be giving it to the local laundromat, for all the good it has done any of them.

When I wrote to an address mentioned in your Report some time ago, I received a huge packet (postage was $2.00) of literature - most all of it from Jehovah's Witnesses. I had only wanted more information on the 7th-Day Church of God - that is what the AR had mentioned. Now wasn't this a sneaky way for the Jehovah's Witnesses to get their literature to others? There was only one small pamphlet about the 7th-Day Church and that was all critical. Then to kind of smooth things over, I guess, there was one sentence in the packet that said "keep reading the Ambassador Report" or something to that effect. Have you received any other complaints?

-Florida

Editor. Yes. We had no idea JW literature was going to be involved. For your information, the JW church is in the midst of considerable controversy. A number of JW "dissidents" have formed a group that puts out a newsletter called Notes for Bible Students (658 Highline Drive, E. Wenatchee, WA 98801). We got a kick out of their number 24 issue that told of the chaos in the JW sect. It so, closely parallels the WCG's recent history.

Thank you for your interest concerning my book on personal development. As yet the book is not published but the manuscript is complete, and of the 22 chapters I am waiting for the final three chapters to come back from the editor.

The book will be entitled Living and Winning or Making Life Work. In manuscript form it is about 270 pages with 22 chapters.

The book's purpose is to show people how to build a stable identity and realistic self-esteem with the realities of the ups and downs of life. I do not know as yet what the book will sell for but hope to have it out by fall or winter.

If anyone would like me to put them on a list to be notified when it is out, please have them write me.

Where does one get Paul Haecker's book Ten Years in the Religion of Herbert W. Armstrong. I have looked several places with no luck. Can you help on that one?

-California

Editor. Sorry, the last we heard Mr. Haecker has moved to parts unknown.

* * *

I would be interested to know if you have ever heard of an organization called "HALT"

(Suite 319, 201 Massachusetts Ave., N.E., Washington, D.C. 20002)? It's an organization of Americans for Legal Reform.

-California

Editor. Not only have we heard of them, we fully support their goals. The American legal system is very, very badly in need of reform. And by the way, HALT publishes a number of excellent legal self-help pamphlets for its members. They are worth many times over the organization's membership fee. The organization is worth looking into.

* * *

I do not consider myself a devoted "follower" of Ernest Martin (or of any other man, for that matter), but his Foundation for Biblical Research puts out some very fine research papers. The July issue of the FBR's Commentator had an article entitled "The Abuse of Fellowship." I wish every individual in the WCG, CGI, BCG, etc. would read that article. There is far too much needless division in Christianity today. Thank you for mentioning that organization in the Report.

-California

Editor. We feel just as you do. We have no desire to ever again be blind followers of any religious group or individual. However, we have learned much from Dr. Martin and his associates. We are particularly looking forward to his new book on The Original Bible Restored. So many millions look to the Bible as "the Work of God" for guidance and inspiration; yet so very few have even the slightest idea of how it came to be. We understand his new book, to be published this winter, will shed much light on that important subject. And if their new Commentator "The Place of the Crucifixion" is a foretaste of what's to come in this new book then it should be quite remarkable. For those who don't already have the Foundation's address, it is: P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102.

The Wacky World of "We"-ligion

We live in a crazy world. No matter what area of human endeavor we look at we can find some pretty ludicrous goings on. Look at politics, law, medicine, finance, the arts, or any other field and it is very easy to find numerous examples of almost unbelievable absurdities. But for sheer wackiness nothing can even come close to the world of religion.

About a year ago we had Reverend Moon marrying 4,150 of his followers in a ceremony in New York's Madison Square Garden. Of that occasion Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times (July 2, 1982) wrote:

Members of the church believe that God speaks through Moon, and when the 62-year-old evangelist arranges a marriage between two of his followers, his selection is viewed as an act of divine inspiration.

Moon also requires a couple to remain celibate for 3½ years after their engagement, whether they are married or not. A few of the 4,150 Moonies wed Thursday had been engaged for the minimum 3½ years, but most had not, church officials said; they will live apart until the church decides it is time for their marriages to be consummated.

Then there's Jerry Falwell of the Moral Majority. He was big in the news for a while but has now fallen on hard times. He has asked all those on his computer list for $100 to help him out of his current crisis. He says his church will be conducting a round-the-clock prayer vigil until the end of the fiscal year. This writer recently saw Falwell on a late-night news talkshow declaring himself unequivocally to be a "Zionist." Perhaps that has turned off some of his supporters.

Falwell isn't the only TV preacher having money problems. Oral Roberts has apparently been having financial woes too. Not long ago he wrote a letter to his followers quoting "the Lord" whom Roberts claimed had given him a lengthy message to be passed on to his followers. The key part of the message from "the Lord" was that they were to send Roberts $20 per month for 12 months. Roberts' letter began:

"It is later than you think."

"When are you and your partners going to obey Me?"

That is the statement and the question I heard the Lord speak to me late one afternoon several weeks ago. It was only the beginning of a conversation between the Lord and me that lasted for seven hours ... and is still continuing.

It was only about two years ago that Roberts claimed he had a vision of "a 900-foot-tall Jesus" standing over his university's medical complex. That story apparently generated millions of dollars in contributions. The latest one should do just as well.

It is interesting that Roberts' letter to his contributors is very similar to the co-worker letters of HWA even in such details as extensive use of words in large capital letters and underlining. In fact, some have claimed that Roberts got his idea for starting a college from following HWA's successful career and that his "seed faith" contribution system was modeled after HWA's tithing doctrine.

Whatever the case, funding is not Roberts' only problem. Recall Patti Roberts, Oral's daughter-in-law, who used to sing on his telecasts? Well, the May 1983 issue of Contemporary Christian Music contained an article about Patti with this interesting information:

Patti describes her life as a television personality for one of the most powerful and influential evangelists in modern Christianity. "We all lived together in the compound," she says. "Richard and I were the all-American couple, tied to a glamorous image that we did our best to live up to. That shining couple that millions of people knew was built at the expense of our home and marriage. The ministry was everything and came before the family, the children, our own relationship.

In the end, the dream simply fell apart, exposing the decade-long nightmare that Patti Roberts was living. "I had deep problems with Oral's teaching," she says with unflinching directness. "That made me a misfit." It was Roberts' controversial fund raising doctrine of Seed Faith that Patti questioned, eventually confronting both her husband and father-in-law with her doubts about its scriptural and moral basis. The rest was swift expulsion from the Roberts organization, divorce, and the shattering end to her sheltered and privileged life. "Richard went to his father to ask permission for the divorce," she reveals. "Then he came to me...."

"A lot of people loved Richard and Patti," she explains, "and those people never got an explanation of what happened. One day I was there, the next day I just ceased to exist. They even destroyed all the film footage with me in it. They just erased Patti Roberts. I felt I owed something to the people who had known and loved me."

She has now written a book on her experiences. It is titled From Ashes to Gold.

Patti's story of banishment reminds us of what HWA did to his own son, Garner Ted, and to his daughters and relatives - and all this in the name of "Christian love." Another religious leader recently in the news is Tony Alamo. The June 13 issue of People carried an eye-opening article on his group. Alamo, it seems, is not just the head of a religion (many would say "cult"), but he "fancies himself a country-gospel star and records on his own label." He hobnobs with many famous names in the country music world and has made a fortune, not only in religion, but through many businesses owned by his "Alamo Foundation." To quote the People article (June 13, 1983, pp. 29-34):

Tony's big secret: All these businesses are staffed by free labor - Alamo followers, who consider themselves "volunteers," doing God's work. There are several hundred hard-core Alamoites around the country, who devote their lives to enriching the foundation with their labor and to nonstop "witnessing" - that is, handing out Tony's paranoid screeds and trying to convert nonbelievers. Tony claims he saves "tens of thousands of souls a month." His message is an old one: His is the only true church and his followers the only true believers. He talks to God but not to this magazine.

His followers subsist on a diet of grim sermons and hard work, while Tony travels by Cadillac limo from his mansion (with heart-shaped pool) in the Arkansas compound to luxurious homes in Saugus, Calif. and Nashville.

But Tony Alamo is also having his problems. First of all there are those who have left his organization that claim they were "brainwashed by several well-known methods: sleep deprivation, poor nutrition, constant ranting about foundation enemies, isolation from society, and forced labor." And there are allegations that the Alamo Foundation has been involved in an unethical child adoption scheme. Here in the Pasadena area Alamoites have been distributing flyers urging unwed pregnant women not to have an abortion, but instead to turn over their children to the Alamo Foundation. Many are wondering what has become of the infants Alamo has obtained in this way.

Just as strange are the prayer shifts for Susan Alamo, Tony's deceased wife and co-founder of the Alamo organization. Her embalmed body rests inside a darkened prayer room in a "mansion atop a remote, guarded ridge in rural Arkansas.... patiently awaiting resurrection. The cult leader has been dead more than a year. Encouraged by Susan's husband, Tony, her followers kneel by the coffin in two-hour shifts, 24-hours a day, every day, to pray for Susan's return." They may have a long wait.

Well, we could go on, but you get the idea. There are a lot of strange happenings going on in the world of religion. So much so that one could well do a regular magazine devoted just to that subject. And, in fact, it appears that someone has. A group of very clever Christian writers put out a bimonthly magazine called The Wittenburg Door. This is not your typical Christian magazine, but a very witty, hardhitting, often tongue-in-cheek, thought-provoking publication that dishes out the kind of treatment a lot of religionists deserve. Copies are $2.00 each; yearly subscriptions $12.00. The address is: Wittenburg Door, 1224 Greenfield Dr., El Cajon, CA 92021. One warning thought: If you think Ambassador Report is cynical, then The Wittenburg Door is definitely not for you.

Whatever a Man Sows, That Shall He Reap

We have maintained contact with thousands of ex-Worldwidiers over the last seven years, and we can say quite a few of them would like to see Herbert Armstrong punished for his sins against his church and mankind. One person, though, has actually made Herbert pay a thousand times over for his contempt of God and mankind. One person has all but destroyed Herbert's life, image, peace of mind, and "infallibility." That person is none other than Herbert Armstrong himself. Herbert apparently thinks he is somehow above God's laws - that somehow, by being "God's Apostle," he can flout the basic laws of human decency without paying the consequences. He apparently thinks he can preach one set of morals for his congregation and practice another in private. But no matter how clever he is in cultivating the image of being a wise spiritual patriarch, he still pays the penalty for wrongdoing just like the rest of us mortals. As the Apostle Paul wrote:

Do not be deceived; God is not mocked, for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap. For he who sows to his own flesh will from the flesh reap corruption (Gal. 6:7-8, RSV quoted throughout).

And, sure enough, as we look back over the last several years, Herbert has been reaping exactly what he sowed though unseen to most. If you read the Beatitudes in Matthew, chapters 5-7, which contain the basic teachings of Christianity, you will see how cause and effect is at work in Herbert's life. Jesus says, "Blessed are the peacemakers" and "blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy" (Matt. 5:9, 7). But Herbert's pride and stubbornness led to several unnecessary splits in the WCG, and he has okayed the ruthless expulsion of thousands of members and some 260 ministers, including many loyal, longtime friends such as Raymond and Wayne Cole, Albert Portune, Dave Antion, Charles Hunting, David Robinson, Ron Dart, and even his own son Garner Ted. Now we hear report after report from insiders who say Herbert has hardly a single trusted close friend left in the church and is surrounded by parasitic sycophants on all sides plotting to divide up his empire the minute his coffin lid slams shut. Due to his own actions he is hounded by the press and surrounded by bodyguards to keep disgruntled ex-members from serving him with more lawsuits. The lawyers are eating away at his vitals. Is it any wonder why?

While Herbert spends millions of dollars on lawyers' fees, right there in his own Bible is the legal advice he really needs. That advice comes from none other than Jesus Christ:

Make friends quickly with your accuser, while you are going with him to court, lest your accuser hand you over to the judge, and the judge to the guard, and you be put in prison; truly, I say to you, you will never get out till you have paid the last penny (Matt. 5:25-26).

If anyone would sue you and take your coat, let him have your cloak as well (Matt. 5:40).

Love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you (Matt. 5:44).

Somehow, Herbert has assumed these verses wouldn't apply to him if he built up a huge church legal department and spent millions of dollars on lawyers to prevent those whom he had wronged from obtaining justice. Settle with his brother? "Absolutely not! It's a sign of weakness." Love his enemies? "No, sue the bastards!" Listen to their grievances and settle peaceably with them? "No, blackball them and cut them to pieces! I'm God's Apostle!" Result? Herbert, just like Jesus said would happen, is now trapped like a helpless little fly in a giant web of endless lawsuits. The judges and his 50 lawyers tell him when to come and go, and the lawyers on both sides are cleaning out his pockets, while certain trusted "friends" plot to have him declared insane.

Further on in Matt. 6:19, Jesus stated:

Do not lay up for yourselves treasures on earth... but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.... For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

Anybody who knows Herbert knows he lives in luxury. We remember being invited over to his mansion one evening as seniors at Ambassador College. His house resembled a showroom, with every room filled with art treasures. We remember him bragging after dinner how we were eating dessert from solid gold bowls with solid gold spoons once owned by the Czar of Russia. All this seemed a bit incongruous for one claiming to be a humble servant of Jesus Christ, but little did we know such gold plates would one day ensnare him. And sure enough, recently we noticed in the Pasadena Star-News (9/14/83) that Herbert claims Ramona has stolen "gold flatware" from him and he has turned to the courts to recover them. So instead of spending his time serving the church, his time is occupied plotting strategy with his unconverted lawyers - for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

In Matt. 7:12, Jesus advised:

So whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them.

In 1968 a lower-ranking WCG minister was discovered to have committed adultery. When Herbert discovered this, he showed no mercy. Instead, he not only fired the man, he called an assembly of all college students and employees and reiterated all the details. At many times other people who fell out of his favor were similarly blackballed and slandered in ministerial letters and publications. But later, Matt. 7:12 came back to haunt Herbert. For Time and many other respected publications worldwide revealed what his hypocritical lifestyle is really like. Some publications have revealed how he committed incest with his daughter and have dragged his name through the mud and exposed him as a crooked old fool. So instead of being respected in the world as an ambassador for world peace (an image he spent millions cultivating) he's ridiculed in the press as a bizarre old cult leader who lives high on the hog.

For decades he practically forbade church members from going to doctors for medical treatment, telling them they should trust God for healing. Drugs, he said, were of the Devil. Vaccines were "monkey pus" and should be avoided. In private, however, he put his faith in medical science, seeking out the doctors and secretly taking their drugs. Now he's totally dependent on them. He preached to others that drunkenness was a sin, but indulged himself anyway. His own son and many others have reported seeing him drunk on many occasions. Now we hear Herbert has liver problems caused by alcohol. For years Herbert has decried sabbath-breaking as a grievous sin. Yet he partied and traveled on the sabbath thousands of miles, entertaining world leaders. Today, however, none of those leaders are converted and none have offered to help him fight off his lawsuits. Now on the sabbath he's afraid to even stay and fellowship with his congregation, and he has to leave services early via the backdoor with his bodyguards, hoping to avoid being shot at or served with yet another legal summons.

Luke wrote: "For the measure you give will be the measure you get back" (Luke 6:38). If only Herbert had heeded that verse, his life and the lives of thousands of his members would have been much more joyous. But Herbert is reaping just what he sowed.

We hope our readers will take the above, not as an occasion to rejoice, but as a lesson that no matter who we are, wrongdoing, injustice, hypocrisy, and stubborn pride pay bitter dividends in the long run. It is our sincere hope Herbert will yet see the error of his ways before he dies, repent, and seek to right at least some of the wrongs and heartaches he has caused for many thousands of innocent people. Even now, if he would but humble himself, he would be exalted - perhaps not in the eyes of this world's dictators, bankers, lawyers and such - but certainly in the eyes of his own family, and in the eyes of those who have sincerely loved him and wished that he could have indeed been a true "man of God."

Letters

WCG people in this church area are being told directly in sermons that "the church will tell you only what you need to know. " That is a direct quote. The people here are propagandized to an almost unbelievable degree.

-Los Angeles, California

After being a member of the WCG for 15 years, my husband and I were told by the minister in Birmingham, Alabama, not to return to church because we wouldn't tell him how we found out about the Armstrong divorce. It seems we found out about it before he did in January 1982. He had informed us that headquarters ordered him to hush up "the rumor because it just wasn't true." A few weeks later the letter from HWA arrived telling us how he had (again) been deceived by Satan.

-Alabama

Money, money, money, it seems, is all the church is all about any more. I could not help but continually think about Paul's statement in I Tim. 6:10 while reading the Report - "for the love of money is the root of all evil...." The second part is equally interesting: "which while some coveted after they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." This statement "says it all" for the WCG these days.

-California

Thank you for your continuing work in publishing the Report. I would like to make a comment about your December 1982 letter and the fact that "most of the readers do not keep Christmas."

It is a sad thing that HWA has robbed people of one of the most joyous occasions of the year by instilling in them the false concept of Christmas being pagan. Sure, Christmas is overcommercialized; however, don't throw the baby out with the bathwater. December 25 or not, Christmas depicts the coming to earth of our Saviour - something we should be thankful for. As far as origins go, educated people know it was Martin Luther who first brought a fir tree indoors and decorated it - not Nimrod, Baal, or whoever. Santa Claus goes back to the Bishop of Smyrna in the 4th Century A. D. - not some sorcerer or devil worshipper. Seriously, folks, let's discard the Scrooge in us and break the mental bondage to HWA and his insidious teachings. Christ came to liberate us from sin, from ourselves, and from men who would lead us astray. Can we not honor and rejoice in the fact that He did so?

*-(Former WCG minister) Richard Forkun
Markham, Ontario, Canada*

I recently got a temporary job as a hospital orderly, and a lady there told me she is a member of the WCG. The strange thing is she is allowed to work on the Sabbath and Holy Days. She smokes and said her minister told her it was a sin if in her mind she thought it was a sin. Sounds like Pauline theology from an Armstrongite! She wears makeup and although she believes in divine healing she goes to doctors. I wonder if "headquarters" doesn't know what is going on, or is this a new liberal WCG?

- AR Reader

Editor: WCG doctrines in practice now vary considerably from congregation to congregation. It all seems to depend on the minister in charge. Some are quick to disfellowship members for as little as having a certain kind of haircut, while others seem to literally tolerate just about anything. However, there is one doctrine they all unite behind. Members must "bend the knee" to Ol' Herbert.

Your Report has confirmed the views some of us have formulated over the past year or two. We have no quarrel with the maintenance of spiritual discipline - in Christ. However, it was, we believe a sine qua non that those who presume to act on behalf of God and his law must themselves also be bound by ethics and governed by laws which should be commensurate in every respect to the dignity of the great cause they serve.

We did not find this concomitancy between personal behaviour and administration practices of the lofty ones in the WCG hierarchy locally or abroad We stood up for principle and found ourselves the despised ecclesiastical dispossessed fighting against the inflexible ethos of a fear-induced unity that achieved a gigantic, but dubious, if not sinister, goal.

That fear-induced unity bred a myopic obedience, an intolerance, and an absolute refusal to believe that truth can also be disseminated to and through others, and an acceptance [of the fallacy] that leaders know best and are never to be questioned. That unity, God forbid, may ultimately lead to the unquestioning lifting of the poisoned cup.

The ugly story is the same from America to Africa, from Pasadena to Perth, from New York to New Zealand. For the great spirit that moves within the WCG - the spirit of bondage promising freedom, the spirit of corruption promising purity, the spirit of oppression promising safety, is the common opiate - nay the universal message broadcasted over the airwaves from that master broadcaster of intrigue, double-dealing and misinformata, presiding over that ecclesiastical cacophony in 300 West Green Street. We shudder as we agonise over our loved ones! Keep up the informative Report. The saga may soon reach its pre-orchestrated but unexpected dissonant cadenza and final death rumble.

*-Gordon R. Terblanche, Public Speaking Institute of South Africa
P.O. Box 20321, Alkantrant, 0005, Rep. of South Africa*

I am an ex-WCG member, but often meet with and work with current WCG members. Recently I was asked this question: "Why don't you come back to the true church? All you have to do is say you're sorry!" My reaction was to ask, "Sorry for what? And to whom? God or a Chief Apostle?" And then I remembered my last phone conversation with WCG minister Larry Grider.

At the end of a long and tiring debate, he asked me whether I could accept Herbert Armstrong as God's Chief Apostle "without question now." Of course my sane answer had to be "NO!" Then when he disfellowshipped and marked both my wife and me, I asked him, "What do you think we are Larry? Christians?" To which he replied, "Yes, I personally think both you and your wife are Christians and you have God's Holy Spirit. But I have a job to do, and I must do it." No more need be said!

-Canada

A few weeks ago I met a member of the church and she greeted me with a hug even though she had been told not to associate with exmembers. She talked freely about HWA and then asked if I knew about Ambassador Report. She gets your publication but can't let anyone at church know about it. She commented, "You know everything if you read Ambassador Report." She doesn't tithe anymore, but she is still ready to flee to Petra.

-AR Reader

After three years I finally got the nerve to give all my back issues of your publication to my daughter, a WCG member for twelve years. I just got word she has resigned from the church. I guess maybe Ambassador Report did the trick. Keep up the good work.

-Texas

I always feel bad when I send off my small contribution because for this small amount I receive back so much help from your Report. I pray you can continue sending it out.

I left the WCG in 1978. and as you know, doctors were "a no no." I became very ill in the sixties and was told by the minister that I could only have a physical exam. This I did and was informed by the physician that I needed immediate surgery. I did not have the surgery, and through the years my condition became worse. My husband had to retire in 1978 because of his heart, but as a veteran he gets medical assistance plus Medicare. However, I'm left out in the cold as far as Medicare goes; I have ten years to go before I will be eligible for help.

If I had the money, I would honestly be tempted to sue the WCG for what they have done to me. My condition has become such that I have had to quit my job, and I must spend several hours per day lying on a heating pad Believe me, I'm trying very hard to overcome my resentments and turn my life completely over to Almighty God. I wonder how many more "dumb sheep" have permanent body ailments because of the Armstrong church.

*-Mrs. Mary White
Ontario, California*

Editor. Quite a few. And many have died prematurely from following the fanatical advice of WCG ministers. We are not saying there have not been documented cases of healing through faith. Nor are we saying that the medical profession should be worshipped. Like the legal profession, it too has its serious problems. Indeed, if one reads books such as Confessions of a Medical Heretic by Robert Mendelsohn M.D., one can easily see the importance of being vigilant in dealing with doctors. Nevertheless, too many WCG ministers have, through their own ignorance, or through the infliction of guilt, and spiritual intimidation, encouraged members to shun various proven medical techniques that could have been of immense value in alleviating pain and improving the quality of life.

* * *

If Herbert Armstrong really believed it is more blessed to give than to receive, the above situation would give him the golden opportunity to prove it He could simply contact Mrs. White and offer her whatever assistance she needs. But Herbert and his church use the lame excuse that she is no longer a WCG member to write her off and forget she ever existed. The tithes she gave and the charitable acts she performed while in the church are quickly forgotten. The conduct of Herbert and his church in heart-rending cases like these stinks to high heaven! It shouldn't matter what doctrines Mrs. White may or may not believe. She was hurt by church advice, and the church ought to willingly help right that wrong.

Remember the story of the good Samaritan in Luke 10:29-37? A traveler was robbed and beaten and left to die. Along came a "righteous" Levite and a priest. Both glanced at the wounded traveler and quickly passed by, probably thinking: "This man is not a fellow priest (or Levite) or someone important. It would neither increase my fame or fortune - no one would even notice - so why waste my time helping." But along came a lowly Samaritan. When he saw the man bleeding and dying, he didn't first inquire which doctrines he believed, if he tithed regularly, if he was in good standing with his synagogue (or church), if his wife wore makeup, etc. - major considerations before the WCG will help you - but he simply opened his heart and pocketbook, took pity on the man, and gave him medical treatment.

In most civilized countries, if you purchase a product and are injured using it due to a defective design, the company owes you monetary restitution. Any legitimate church likewise ought to willingly restore you to your former condition if you are injured due to following its advice. That's only basic Christian love. But the WCG has for so long helped only its own members, and even then, begrudgingly. The thousands of WCG members who left because of conscience or were booted out over such picky doctrines as hair length, wearing makeup, not giving enough money to the church, asking questions the minister didn't like, etc. are left in the gutter to bleed and die - just as the priest and Levite left the traveler to die. Words cannot express the anger, sorrow, and frustration we at the Report feel when we receive letters like the above. Herbert can spare $200,000 for London's Royal Opera or $10,000 for a gift to an Asian dictator like President Marcos, but evidently he can't spare even 50 cents for a sympathy card for the many Mrs. Whites out there.

Oh sure, the WCG gives to "charity." While many former members live in pain and poverty, the church opens wide its hand in front of the cameras to subsidize string quartets, famous entertainers, Red Chinese economists, the USC Law Center, archaeological digs, Asian dictators, pet projects, plays, etc. Funny, but we never noticed the New Testament apostles supporting these types of activities with church funds. We don't remember Paul presenting Nero with silver busts of the Caesars, sponsoring "cultural" events for the Roman upper class, or supporting Roman entertainers with church tithes. We never read of the apostles sponsoring banquets to honor the Roman emperors or senators. They instead preached the gospel of Jesus Christ to them and urged them to repent of their wicked ways. But wine and dine them on the contributions of the poor faithful? Never!

Sadly, Mrs. White is not some unusual case. Over the years we have received many hundreds of such letters. They continue to pour in every week. Some we publish, but most do not wish their story to be made public. Yet for every letter we receive there are dozens or even hundreds more in similar circumstances. The sad fact is Herbert and his band of myrmidons have destroyed the health, careers, marriages, and lives of thousands.

Ambassador Report has attempted to warn all who will listen of the bitter fruit of "the Ambassador experience." We wish we could do more, but we are only a small group of individuals with very little power. Not only are we very limited financially, we are limited in time.

Most AR readers have little idea of the huge amount of time we must spend weekly in answering mail, assisting the news media, and counselling and encouraging those who have no one else to turn to for help. In what can only be described as a personal Christian ministry, the Gerringers, the Zolas, and other Ambassador College graduates affiliated with the Report spend untold hours helping those hurt by, and cut off from, the WCG. They have so regularly opened up their homes to those in need of shelter and help that we have often kidded the Gerringers and the Zolas that they should have been in the hotel business.

Because of the principle found in Matthew 6:1-4, there are those who would prefer that their good deeds not be made public. But the fact remains, there are Ambassador graduates who have implimented many of the Christian virtues learned while obtaining their theology degrees. Nevertheless, no matter how much we try to help those burned and burned out by the "Ambassador experience," the real responsibility for the many tragedies rests with the Armstrong organization. With an income of $10,000,000 per month, you would think they could set aside just one percent of that amount - say $ 100,000 a month - to help the many Mrs. Whites out there.

Perhaps the best suggestion we could offer is that we all pray the WCG finally gets a repentant change of heart and begins to do something to help the many "little people" around the world whom they have so callously used, abused, and discarded.

Editor's Note: Many readers have wondered if we stopped publishing because our regularly scheduled January issue never appeared. Unfortunately, due to illness on the staff and scheduling problems we were unable to put out an issue for the first quarter. Please be assured that we will not discontinue operations without notifying you. Nor do we ever take any subscribers off our mailing list without first sending a renewal letter.

One other thought: We hope this issue will not prove offensive to any readers. Some of the language of the lawyers quoted is, at times, unpleasant, as are many of the details we have uncovered about Herbert Armstrong's private life. As much as we would prefer the truth to be otherwise, we feel it best that the facts be presented without alteration. However, if you prefer not to read of lawyers reviling each other or of Herbert Armstrong's private life, then we would suggest you skip over the first few pages.

The Insanity Continues

On April 16, 1982, through his lawyers, Herbert W. Armstrong, the 91-year-old founder of the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College, filed for divorce against Ramona, his 45-year-old wife.

Since then the legal maneuverings by both sides have been extensive and continuous. Numerous trial dates have been set, only to be later postponed. At present, the proceeding is scheduled to begin April 25, with the judge having set aside five full weeks for the Armstrong divorce trial.

The legal expenses incurred so far by Armstrong's organization are, of course, astronomical. Estimates of just how much the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) has spent on the suit range from a conservative one million dollars to well over five million. Ramona has stated that she would have once seriously considered an out-of-court settlement for half that amount. No wonder many members of the Tucson bar and judiciary are beginning to raise eyebrows at what is transpiring.

To fully appreciate how completely ludicrous, how totally insane, this whole divorce case really is, one has but to read the court record. The editor of this publication has read over 3,000 pages of court documents filed in the case in just the three months following our last issue.

It takes little imagination to visualize the incredible waste of court time (and taxpayers' money) being caused by this ongoing Armstrong spectacle. Judge William Sherrill, who has now replaced the retired Judge Hooker, was undoubtedly thinking of this when, on November 9, he issued the following order:

This action was filed over one year ago and there are now 28 or 29 file folders containing pleadings, motions and exhibits to said pleadings or motions. Some files contain only one or two motions.

On November 7th and 8th, 1983, attorneys for petitioner filed two motions. These two motions, with attached exhibits, are a stack of paper 3/4ths of an inch thick. Respondent, on November 8, 1983, filed a reply to a motion of petitioner, the reply was 3/8ths of an inch thick.

THE COURT FINDS the above is typical and is a waste of space, is redundant and contrary to the concept that pleadings (Rule 3 of ARCP) shall be simple, concise and direct and that motions (Rule IV, Uniform Rules of Practice) "...shall be accompanied by a memorandum indicating as a minimum the precise legal points, statutes and authorities relied upon, citing the specific portions or pages thereof...."

If either counsel expects the Court to fully read each and every page of each and every motion and exhibit, they are misguided.

The Court believes that if counsel are unable to write a motion and argument in ten (10) pages or less, including exhibits, they have failed to analyze the problem or failed to take sufficient time to write it out concisely. These failures should not burden the Court.

While those companies that sell copy machines, papers, and supplies might well applaud counsel in this case, the Court does not.

IT IS ORDERED that no motion, brief or reply exceeding ten (10) pages, including exhibits and attachments, will be set for hearing or considered by the Court unless special permission has first been granted.

The Armstrong divorce trial has been delayed not just because of the excessive paperwork and verbosity. Herbert Armstrong (HWA), who initiated the suit in the first place, and his lawyers have used just about every trick in the book in attempting to withhold information. Here is one example taken from but one HWA deposition, in which Deckter, Ramona's lawyer, is asking about and showing copies of certain extremely large checks - up to $50,000 - made out to and endorsed by HWA:

MR. DECKTER: This is the production of your account, Mr. Armstrong.

THE WITNESS (HWA): I don't see any such thing there. It makes no difference.

Q Sir, I am going to ask you to take a look -

A I don't - I never saw them. I never handled them. I never - my signature is not on any of them. It never came to my attention. It's the first time I've seen it.

Q Isn't it true, sir, that you wrote out personal checks on this account that were converted into cashier's checks on each and every one of these checks?

MR. BROWNE (HWA's lawyer): I don't understand the question. It's vague and ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: As far as I understand the question, I don't remember anything of the kind at all.

MR. BROWNE: All right.

MR. DECKTER: You wrote out numerous checks -

A I won't say that it's true. And I don't know that it was at all.

Q You have to let me ask my question, sir. Isn't it true, sir, that you wrote out numerous checks out of that account, endorsed numerous checks from that account, at least a dozen or so of them as reflected in the exhibits before you?

A I do not believe so.

Q Converted to cashier's checks?

A No, I do not believe so. I do not remember that....

It is amazing how HWA's memory has gone blank at key moments. Here are more examples:

MR. DECKTER: Didn't you cause an additional $10,000 to be forwarded to your brother after he lost or misplaced the first $10,000 that you had sent to him?

MR. BROWNE: I am going to object.

THE WITNESS: I never heard of anything like that in my life.

MR. BROWNE: I object.

THE WITNESS: It's all news to me. I don't know anything about that.

MR. BROWNE: I object to the question as being constitutionally impermissible as previously defined, not relevant and not material. Any payments that are made by the church are not going to be inquired into -

THE WITNESS: That's right.

MR. BROWNE: - in this proceeding. If you want to ask whether Mr. Armstrong personally sent some of his own money to anyone, that we would allow you to go into. But not church finances. So please don't answer any questions, Mr. Armstrong, in that area.

MR. DECKTER: Did you cause $10,000 to be sent to your brother for a down payment on his house?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question. It's been asked and answered and answered.

MR. DECKTER: Do you not have information, sir, that that $10,000 was then taken by your brother's wife and she absconded with it?

MR. BROWNE: Objection.

MR. DECKTER: Well, do you know whether or not his wife absconded with it?

A I do not, no.

Q And that after you received that information that you caused an additional $10,000 to be sent to him for the purchase of a home?

A I have no recollection of such thing whatsoever. I don't know.

Q Are you saying it is untrue or you have no current recollection, sir?

MR. BROWNE: He's answered.

THE WITNESS: I answered you.

MR. DECKTER: Are you saying, sir -

A I said, I do not remember and I don't know.

Q Do you recall telling Mr. David Robinson in May of 1974, at Big Sandy, that you had been having a romance with Amy, a church employee, that you believed to be approximately 25 years old at that time?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question as being irrelevant and immaterial, instruct the witness not to answer it. What's the relevancy, counsel?

Q (By Mr. Deckter) Do you accept that instruction?

A On the advice of my counsel I won't answer. Some of these things I would like to answer, but I know your legal, well, methods. And I think you know my opinion of them. I don't approve of such methods at all .... there was no romantic relationship whatsoever, but there was sort of a grandfather and granddaughter affection, nothing more, and nothing more ever happened.

MR. DECKTER: That is not the question that was submitted to the witness.

MR. BROWNE: I will object to the question, that it's irrelevant and immaterial.

THE WITNESS: The whole question is designed to put me in a wrong light, and it is not true.

MR. BROWNE: State your question, Mr. Deckter. Go on, what's the question?

THE WITNESS: The whole thing is an attempt to defame me.

MR. BROWNE: I understand that.

THE WITNESS: And defame my character, and it is not true. There was never anything in any manner, shape or form wrong. The relationship with this Amy Bowman. I had even forgotten her name.

MR. BROWNE: All right.

Q (By Mr. Deckter) The question is, sir, isn't it true that in May of '74, at Big Sandy, you had a conversation with Mr. David Robinson and during the course of that conversation you discussed your romance and romantic relationship with Amy Bowman, a person who you believed to be 25 years old at that time?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question, that it's irrelevant and immaterial. But you may answer it. Did you tell that to Mr. Robinson?

THE WITNESS: I don't remember the conversation at all, but there never was any romantic relationship with Amy Bowman.

HWA may not remember the conversation, but David Robinson certainly does. A detailed account appears on page 67 of his book. As for Ms. Bowman, she has stated that HWA tried to fondle her breasts, but that she objected. Soon afterward she was transferred from being one of his secretaries to a position in the editorial department. The above objections by Armstrong's lawyer Browne were not isolated occurrences. During the HWA depositions Browne again and again and again instructed his client not to answer questions put to him. Note this exchange:

Q Who is Lucy Martin?

A Lucy Martin is the former head of the department of music of Ambassador College.

Q Was she a church member?

A No.

Q What was her salary while working for Ambassador College?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being constitutionally impermissible as previously defined, irrelevant, immaterial and I would instruct you not to answer that question, Mr. Armstrong. It's a matter of privacy.

THE WITNESS: On my attorney's advice I will not answer.

MR. DECKTER: Did she receive bonuses?

MR. BROWNE: Same objection, same instruction.

MR. DECKTER: Did she receive gifts?

MR. BROWNE: Same objections. From whom are you asking about gifts now? Are you talking about the church or from Mr. Armstrong?

MR. DECKTER: Presentation of furniture and other remunerations.

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, will you get the question on the record?

MR. DECKTER: That's the question.

MR. BROWNE: By from whom?

MR. DECKTER: From Ambassador College and/or Worldwide or whoever her employer was that had previously provided her with use of furniture.

MR. BROWNE: All right. To that question I will object as being constitutionally impermissible and irrelevant and immaterial and instruct the witness not to answer.

MR. DECKTER: Will you answer the question, sir?

A I will not answer then.

Here are a few more excerpts from the HWA depositions:

Q Who is Velma Van der Veer?

A Van der Veer, she is the former head of the Home Ec. Department of Ambassador College.

Q What was her salary?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question. Are you asking what was her salary paid by Ambassador?

MR. DECKTER: Sure.

MR. BROWNE: All right, object to the question as being irrelevant, immaterial and constitutionally impermissible and I instruct you not to answer.

THE WITNESS: I will not answer.

Q (By Mr. Deckter) Was Ms. Van der Veer also given a lifetime contract?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question. You're asking about a lifetime contract from the church or the college?

MR. DECKTER: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question as being constitutionally impermissible, irrelevant, immaterial and instruct you not to answer.... Let's take a five-minute break. We've been going at this for more than an hour and a half...

Q Mr. Armstrong, what has been the source of support of Beverly Lucille Mattson since 1975 or 1976? I'm sorry, Beverly Lucille Gott [HWA's elder daughter].

A I think she's on retirement by contract made out by Stanley R. Rader.

Q Contract. Does she have a contract of employment with Worldwide or Ambassador or one of the various entities?

A I think so.

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question as constitutionally impermissible and not relevant or material. But you may answer the question.

THE WITNESS: I think so, yes....

Q Isn't it true, sir, you got her a lifetime contract?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question as being vague and ambiguous, constitutionally....

Q How many church loans to members of your family have you caused to be made, sir?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being irrelevant, immaterial, constitutionally impermissible and instruct the witness not to answer.

THE WITNESS: On the advice of my attorney, I refuse to answer.

MR. DECKTER: How many loans to relatives by the church have you caused to be forgiven?

MR. BROWNE: Object to the question as being constitutionally impermissible as previously defined and irrelevant and immaterial and instruct the witness not to answer....

Q Do you recall, sir, is that correct, the residence on Como Drive was Mr. Rader's residence and was furnished with, quote, church furniture prior to your stay this time?

MR. BROWNE: Object to as being immaterial and irrelevant and constitutionally impermissible since it deals with Mr. Rader's relationship with the church and has no bearing here and I instruct you not to answer.

THE WITNESS: All right. I will not answer then.

MR. DECKTER: Isn't it true, sir, that you caused a gift to be made of all the furniture in the Como residence to Mr. Rader upon his retirement or resignation from Worldwide?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to....

THE WITNESS: No, on my attorney's advice I refuse to answer....

MR. DECKTER: How many employees of the Worldwide Church of God have you caused a gift of furniture to be made to?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being constitutionally impermissible, irrelevant, immaterial and instruct the witness not to answer. And, again, the constitutional and impermissibility as previously defined -

THE WITNESS: On the advice of my attorney I refuse to answer....

Q Sir, are you familiar with a corporation named Southwest Business Systems?

A Named what?

MR. BROWNE: Southwest Business Systems.

THE WITNESS: I believe that is used for the mail processing office here.

MR. DECKTER: Sir, when you talk about mail processing, does that include money or checks?

MR. BROWNE: Objection, what is the relevancy of that?

MR. DECKTER: We have the account at Valley National Bank and I want to know if that office was used at all with those funds. That's one of the areas that I would like to inquire into.

MR. BROWNE: I don't understand, the office used for those funds? I don't know what you mean.

MR. DECKTER: That's what I will find out. I mean there are checks sent to someplace, maybe Pasadena, then physically brought to Tucson. Then Tucson does some sort of division of those checks and funds.

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being constitutionally impermissible, irrelevant and immaterial. If you know, you can answer. I don't know if you know that.

THE WITNESS: What is the question again?

(Question read)

MR. BROWNE: The question is also vague and ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: The mail processing department includes many things.

MR. DECKTER: Okay. As far as Southwest Business Systems in Tucson, it is a mail processing -

A That is a part of it. That's a division of it, yes. It's all under Mr. Rice.

Q Okay. Are you saying when that's a division of it, are you saying that it does include the handling of cash and/or checks here in Tucson?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as constitutionally impermissible, vague and ambiguous, irrelevant and immaterial.

THE WITNESS: I don't see the connection. I don't know why I should answer.

MR. BROWNE: I will instruct you not to answer. There's no materiality there....

Q (By Mr. Deckter) Sir, have you authorized the transfer of cash from any country in the world to Switzerland, cash? These are not checks or anything. Letter transfers of funds, or anything like that?

MR. BROWNE: You may answer only insofar as it pertains to you personally, and not as pastor general of the Worldwide Church of God.

THE WITNESS: Personally, I have not, no.

Q (By Mr. Deckter) And as pastor general

A Not to my knowledge, ever.

Q And as pastor general?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being constitutionally impermissible, irrelevant, and immaterial, vague and ambiguous, and instruct you not to answer.

Q (By Mr. Deckter) Do you accept the instruction, sir?

A I do. I don't remember of any such thing anyway.

Q Sir, are you familiar with the corporation incorporated in the State of Colorado by the name of Herbert W. Armstrong, the Apostle of the Church of God and His Successors, a corporation sole?

A There were a number of these corporations in different states, filed by my attorneys.

Q Do you know if you sit as an officer or director of that corporation?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being constitutionally impermissible.

THE WITNESS: I refuse to answer that.

Hour after hour, Browne objected to question after question put to HWA. Here are a few more of the questions that Herbert, on his lawyer's advice, refused to answer:

Q Is that your testimony, that everything you do in your life ultimately has a purpose to further the church?

Q Isn't it true, sir, that that's the basis for your testimony when you say that money was used for the church in that you are asserting that everything you do and that everything that is spent is spent on behalf of the church?

Q Sir, was there a change in the rules of divorce in 1976, with regard to - or before - with regard to a divorce between two persons who were both members of the church at the time of the requested divorce?

Q Sir, have you caused a sum of $350,000 to be paid to the University of Southern California?

And HWA refused to answer dozens more! At no time did Herbert clarify adequately his financial relationship to his many church corporations, give a reason for large financial payments and gifts to numerous women and relatives, dispel the persistent rumors of Swiss bank accounts, or counter Ramona's key arguments about the WCG being a cover for HWA's personal financial schemes. The questions left unanswered may very well reveal more about the true HWA than those he answered. And yet counsel Allan Browne persisted in advising his client to be silent on a vast array of pertinent subjects.

Browne's objections became so predictable that even HWA fell victim to their almost hypnotic cadence:

Q Isn't it true, sir, that her only purpose of attendance with you in '75 and '76 was solely as a result of your personal and romantic relationship with Ramona?

MR. BROWNE: Objection to the question. It's vague. It's ambiguous. It's irrelevant, immaterial and constitutionally impermissible; it's argumentative as well.

MR. DECKTER: Go ahead.

MR. BROWNE: Can you answer the question?

THE WITNESS: No, I refuse to answer on my attorney's advice.

MR. DECKTER: Your attorney did not instruct you not to answer it.

MR. BROWNE: I will instruct him not to answer.

The incessant objections also proved a bit too much for Ramona's attorney, Louis Deckter, who on at least one occasion could not contain his frustration with Browne.

MR. DECKTER: Did you cause Garner Ted to be terminated from any position with any of the Worldwide corporations?

MR. BROWNE: Would you repeat that question, please?

(Question read)

MR. BROWNE: Same instruction, same objection as to the previous question.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think that would be entirely an ecclesiastical matter, yes. I refuse to answer.

MR. DECKTER: Did you allow or permit Garner Ted to take with him the furniture from his church residence in quotes at the time of his termination?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to unless you lay a foundation as to what furniture.

MR. DECKTER: You're fucking nuts. How can I lay a foundation?

MR. BROWNE: What did you call him?

MR. DECKTER: How can I lay a foundation?

There were some questions even Allan Browne could not find an objection to, but even in those cases Ramona's lawyers had to pry the truth out of HWA. Notice this excerpt:

Q Tell me about your formal education, sir.

A Well, when I was 18 years old I found a book in the public library titled Choosing a Vocation.

Q I think we are getting off the track, sir.

A Pardon?

Q Excuse me, I want to know about your formal education, sir. Did you attend high school.

A Yes.

Q Did you graduate from high school?

A No, I did not.

Q What year did you terminate high school?

A After three years.

Q Did you even obtain a GED, a general equivalency diploma?

A No. I have honorary PhD's, however.

Q Have you ever attended an accredited college or university?

A No, I have not

Q Have you obtained -

A As a student I have not. I have -

Q I don't mean have you visited at one or maybe having spoke at a school or something like that.

A I just recently spoke before top people in the law school of the University of Southern California.

Q Yes, sir.

A In the presence of the president of the university.

Q What I am asking, though, is if you attended as a student.

A No.

Q Or have received any degrees for work actually performed there?

A I have received an education but not that type.

Ramona's Deposition Gets Nasty

One of the more interesting documents we have come across is the transcript of a Ramona Armstrong deposition that was supposed to be dealing with her ability to pay legal fees. Present were Jack Ettinger, one of her divorce lawyers; Alex Baynes, her lawyer in the pending criminal case (see our last newsletter); David Wolfe, one of HWA's lawyers; and, of course, Allan Browne. We quote from midway into a dispute between Browne and Ettinger:

MR. BROWNE: I think he can answer my questions without -

MR. ETTINGER: You said I am - on the record. I am not talking to her off the report. I'm not off the record. Everything I have said is for the record.

MR. BROWNE: As of this moment you are not but there were periods of time -

MR. ETTINGER: No, there were no periods. Only in your mind there were periods of time, Allan.

MR. BROWNE: No.

MR. ETTINGER: Go ahead, tell him.

MR. BROWNE: No, I think that is not true.

MR. ETTINGER: You have just got to fight over nothing.

MR. BROWNE: I don't want to attack you.

MR. ETTINGER: Yes, you do. Go ahead. Next.

MR. BROWNE: Keep your voice down and we will get along better.

MR. ETTINGER: Look, I will start smoking you out of this room if you want to play like that. I am courteous to you. I don't smoke in the room with you. I don't know what else you want. As usual you want everything your way.

Go ahead, answer.

MR. BROWNE: Please.

THE WITNESS: Excuse me, what was the question again?

MR. BROWNE: Who are these friends you are living with?

A Cliff and Maria McKinney....

[Editor. Here we delete five pages of rambling questions about her previous traveling agendas and further arguing between lawyers.]

Q Did you drive in from Las Vegas for this deposition?

A No.

Q Flew in?

A No.

Q How did you arrive?

A I drove, but I didn't drive in from Las Vegas.

Q Where did you drive from?

A Originally Las Vegas. But I drove in from Phoenix and I spent the night in Phoenix.

Q And who drove the Mercedes and who drove the Oldsmobile?

MR. GAYNES: Don't answer it.

MR. ETTINGER: It's obvious we are going to have to seek a protective order and he's not going into the issues. He just wants to harass you like he always does.

THE WITNESS: I know.

MR. ETTINGER: It's on the record. So he won't get down to the issue of your ability or any funds that you may have in order to pay attorneys' fees. He just wants to harass you.

Let the record so show. Go on with your questions.

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, I'm not going to argue with you because I don't want to waste valuable time.

MR. ETTINGER: You always waste valuable time.

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, don't interrupt me. Let me finish. I let you make your claims. Let me state mine and we will get on with it.

MR. ETTINGER: She answered the question.

MR. BROWNE: I am not attempting to harass the witness.

MR. ETTINGER: You are.

MR. BROWNE: Don't argue with me. Let me just get it for the record.

MR. ETTINGER: The questioning itself will determine whether it's harassment, not what I say or what you say. So why don't we get on with the damn questions.

MR. BROWNE: The harassment is your interruption. That's continuous.

MR. ETTINGER: No, my things are not continuous. It's your questions that require interruption because you won't get down to the issue of her ability to pay and what she's using the money for.

MR. BROWNE: What you are trying to do is interrupt my flow of questioning.

MR. ETTINGER: No, I'm not trying to interrupt anything.

MR. BROWNE: And try and knock my questioning off balance.

MR. ETTINGER: It's impossible to do that because you are going to go on more tediously for days and hours no matter what anybody does or says to you. Okay. Go ahead...

Q Now, after March 1983 when you and Jeff and Mr. Wally McKinney left your sister, where did you go from there?

MR. GAYNES: Let me tell you how I feel about that. I am representing her in a criminal case and I'm not really in this divorce case. But what I came here for was because there's been a request for attorneys' fees. She's receiving $1,800 a month I understand from Mr. Armstrong on a Court order. She's asking $300,000 in attorneys' fees. If she paid away $1,800 a month, every single penny of it, in attorneys' fees it wouldn't matter because it would take her one thousand 66 months or a total of 88 years to be able to pay that amount of attorneys' fees. You are now asking questions about driving, about incidental expenditures and it's my suspicion that you are trying to get far more than just asking her questions about what her present income is and ability to pay. And because she has a Fifth Amendment right, I am asking her not to answer any more of those questions.

MR. BROWNE: Fifth Amendment right?

MR. GAYNES: Right. What you are doing is you are going into things that the county attorney is going into and looking at. They are continuing to investigate her. You are trying to find out where she's going, where she's been, who she's been with, which is part of their ongoing investigation and I'm not going to let her jeopardize herself like that unless you specifically are asking her about things that directly have to do with how in heaven's name she's going to pay $300,000 in attorneys' fees and whether or not that $300,000 in attorneys' fees is reasonable.

MR. BROWNE: You are instructing her not to answer that question?

MR. GAYNES: The last question you asked concerning who is living where, where she went, what car, who she was with, anything that has to do with things that are not directly in relevance to the issue of how she's going to pay $300,000 of attorneys' fees and whether those attorneys' fees are reasonable, I cannot let her answer it because you are getting into things that are afield with obvious attempts to aid the prosecutor.

MR. BROWNE: We have reason to believe that she has enormous funds of money available for the payment of attorneys' fees as well as support and I am intending to ask her where she's living so that I can find out how much she's paying and where she's getting the money to pay for it. Now, the question of where she's going is simply foundational to find out where she went after that so I can find out where she lived, who paid the rent and where she's got the money for it. And this is a series of questions dealing with her lifestyle. And it also goes to the issue of credibility in this case. So those are the points I have asked.

MR. GAYNES: If your claim is that she has enormous funds, which she has denied in previous depositions, she has stated for the record it has not changed and if you are asking for enormous funds of money available elsewhere, then all you are trying to do is aid the prosecutor. I am going to tell her not to answer anything else....

MR. ETTINGER: Ask her questions. Don't ask me any more questions. If you are going to play games with me -

MR. BROWNE: I am not playing games.

MR. ETTINGER: I said get off the record and I will tell you what I told David. It's not part of the report on my - I am not being deposed. You want to depose me don't you? I'm not going to be deposed. You asked me a question and I am telling you. Typical Hollywood, Beverly Hills shit you are pulling. Ask her the questions. Don't ask me any questions anymore. Just like - why have you needed my records today? I'm not being deposed. She doesn't know what is on my records. All she knows is what she knows. That's why I don't trust you or anybody in Beverly Hills.

MR. WOLFE: What day would you like to be deposed?

MR. ETTINGER: You name it and notice me and we will get it set, David.

MR. WOLFE: All right.

MR. ETTINGER: Because you can't do anything with you people off the record and I know [what] I've heard took place and I know you don't tell me the truth when I ask you a question. You want it on the record. Fine.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Ettinger -

MR. ETTINGER: Ask. Will you get on with her deposition. I am so tired of listening to you Beverly Hills lawyers who are - and I am so tired of it and you want proposals and nothing ever comes back. I'm not proposing anything. We are going all the way through with the press. They are going to be at the trial. They are going to be here about the motions being taken I think by your Church. They are going to hear everything and that's - I think that's the way it should be no matter what the cause is. I think that's the way it has to be handled. Otherwise this case is never going to be settled because you like to play games in Hollywood. You like professional games in Hollywood. You don't want to settle anything. You want to try this, milk the Church. I guess you've spent a half a million dollars... to lawyers in this divorce case and you will milk the Church until they cannot stand it any longer.

MR. BROWNE: We had a settlement made.

MR. ETTINGER: You had no settlement. We have never had a settlement, Mr. Browne. You people are low.

MR. BROWNE: Lower your voice.

MR. ETTINGER: I am not going to lower my voice. You have a cigarette.

MR. BROWNE: Okay. Continue yelling.

MR. ETTINGER: You know you are going to milk the Church just like they milked the public. Wait until I get on the trial and the press is there. They will have a ball with this goddamn Church. And I want you to - and this is all part of the record. They are going to have a ball. Right. They are going to have a ball with the Church because they do know they are not honest with the public.

MR. BROWNE: Why aren't we honest with the public?

MR. ETTINGER: Browne, ask this lady questions. You know why. You've been there, Counsel, for many years.

MR. BROWNE: Are you telling me that I am acting dishonestly?

MR. ETTINGER: I never said that at all about you.

MR. BROWNE: Okay.

MR. ETTINGER: You are not the Church are you unless you tell me you are. Don't ask me any more questions because they upset me. I have a very low threshold for you Beverly Hills lawyers. Go ahead with your questions of Mrs. Armstrong....

Q Have you had any conversations with Mr. Gaynes about how he would be compensated for appearing here today in this divorce action?

MR. ETTINGER: Do not answer that question on the grounds that I instruct you, that it is typical Beverly Hills tactics to ask you these questions when Mr. Gaynes came here today and told you he is not here representing her in the divorce action. He is here to protect her rights in a criminal action that is pending that was instituted by the Worldwide Church of God [and] I wonder how many criminals are in that church myself. So, besides that, do not answer the question.

MR. BROWNE: I just want to indicate that my silence is only because I will not give Mr. Ettinger the satisfaction of being provoked into acting like a child. He is using very unprofessional language and I will not respond to it.

MR. ETTINGER: I am using the proper response to the type of questions you are asking. And, you know, you can ask that question properly without getting involved in the criminal action which we are not here on today.

MR. BROWNE: I refuse to get involved in an insulting match because I don't want to drop down to your level.

MR. ETTINGER: That's fine. I wouldn't want to drop down to your level.

MR. BROWNE: You will not provoke me. So you can say anything you want. You can call me a thief. You can call me anything you want.

MR. ETTINGER: I haven't called you a thief.

MR. BROWNE: Anything you want, anything you want.

MR. ETTINGER: I say your tactics are not, do not behoove the type of deposition we are taking on the question of attorneys' fees.

MR. BROWNE: Anything you say will not provoke me.

MR. ETTINGER: Fine.

MR. BROWNE: So you can get red in the face and raise your voice.

MR. ETTINGER: I love it. I'm having a great time here.

MR. BROWNE: All right. That's fine.

MR. ETTINGER: You better-.... finish the questions so the Court can make one ruling.

MR. BROWNE: I cannot go forward under the restrictions that you've placed upon me.

MR. ETTINGER: I haven't placed any restrictions upon you. The Court ordered you to go into the issue. The Court has ordered you to go into the issue of the temporary attorneys' fees, period. You have attempted to go into many issues, including pending criminal charges which you have instigated through your church, other types of matters.

MR. BROWNE: Counsel, I'm not going to sit here and have you make all sorts of misstatements.

MR. ETTINGER: I am not making misstatements.

MR. BROWNE: They are misstatements, purposely calculated to provoke me.

MR. ETTINGER: No, you cannot be provoked. How can you be provoked?

MR. BROWNE: I refuse to listen to it. The deposition is adjourned until another date.

You may have noticed that in the above Browne is claiming Ramona "has enormous funds of money available." Then not long afterwards Browne claimed in a legal document:

Mr. Armstrong does not have the personal financial capability to comply with the September 16, 1983 Order of this Court, the Honorable Robert J. Hooker, requiring that Mr. Armstrong "pay to respondent's attorneys forthwith $100,000.00 as and for temporary attorneys' fees."

It will be very difficult to find a more preposterous pair of statements anywhere.

More Crazyiness

The Armstrong divorce trial has been postponed repeatedly, but it is only a matter of time before the entire mess becomes very public. Going through the court records, one finds an amazing number of remarkable statements. One document filed recently by Ramona's lawyer states:

HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG comes to this Court seeking equitable relief with unclean hands and while he is in pari delicto in that he has failed to maintain and keep the property in proper repair as required, he has failed to pay the court ordered interim attorneys' fees award, he has refused to allow RAMONA ARMSTRONG access to the house without great difficulty, and he has allowed his guards to hassle his wife when she wanted to use her house, all contrary to the spirit and letter of this court's Order of November 5, 1982.

Then, there is a mysterious sealed document dated Dec. 14, 1983 (and from Ettinger and Deckter) with this warning on the outside:

THIS ENVELOPE IS NOT TO BE OPENED NOR THE CONTENTS DISCLOSED WITHOUT COURT ORDER.

Here's another oddity. HWA's lawyers entered into the court record a 12/17/81 correspondence by HWA to Ramona. Here is a key quote (emphasis his):

I wrote you that Satan desires to destroy you, next to me. But GOD ALMIGHTY has called you to be His number one woman on earth - the FIRST LADY of His Church, and all the Church, ministers, laymen, men and women, SINCERELY WANT you to be their FIRST LADY - simply by being one of them, and being my wife. That is a RESPONSIBILITY you simply don't dare reject or neglect.

Another unusual document submitted by HWA's lawyers is a copy of a March 1, 1981 Agreement between HWA and the WCG that ostensibly cancelled HWA's previous contract with the WCG. The agreement seems to paint Stanley R. Radar as some sort of culprit behind the previous contract. But a careful scrutiny of the new agreement reveals this key sentence:

NOW THEREFORE, FOR A GOOD AND VALUABLE CONSIDERATION IT IS HEREBY AGREED AS FOLLOWS:

What that "good and valuable consideration" consists of is not stated. Is it $1 million a year? $2 million? $20 million in a Swiss bank account? We don't know - yet.

We do believe, however, that so much information may eventually emerge from the HWA divorce trial that it could fill a very large book. And apparently it will. Lawyer Ettinger, who is fighting tooth and nail to get HWA to pay him the legal fees ordered by the court, has had to turn to other means to get paid for his services. He has informed HWA's lawyers that he now has a contract with Doubleday to write a book on the WCG and the upcoming trial.

How Not to Have a Happy Marriage

Should the Armstrong case ever go to trial, the lawyers for Herbert will undoubtedly attempt to portray their client as a dedicated man of God and their opposition's client as a "fallen woman." Herbert's lawyers have introduced into the court record various private correspondences between Ramona and a friend, Wally McKinney (no relation to Jack McKinney, an aide to WCG lawyer Helge).

Included among those correspondences (and bear in mind, not only have HWA's lawyers not yet established their authenticity, but Judge Sherrill has indicated he will not allow them to be introduced as evidence at the trial) are a Christmas card from Ramona to Wally, a novelty card from Wally to Ramona (with the punch line "...it makes me feel horny!"), and a number of affectionate short letters from Ramona to Wally written while, it is claimed, she was abroad on tour with HWA.

Assuming the letters are authentic, they raise an interesting question. How did HWA's lawyers gain possession of them? With over $5,000 per month being spent by HWA on Pinkerton agents, one might suppose super-sleuthing was responsible. However, a careful look at the "evidence" leads us to suspect that that may not have been the case. For if one thing comes through in the letters, their postmarks, return addresses, etc., it is that no great effort, if any, was expended to conceal the Ramona-Wally friendship from HWA! And herein lies a remarkable insight into the true nature of "the Apostle."

Longtime readers of Ambassador Report know how Herbert's intimate relationship with Ramona predated their marriage by a number of years. In recent months Ramona has admitted to friends that she and Herbert maintained a sexual relationship for three full years prior to their marriage. At some point along the way Ramona had some misgivings and so asked Herbert what he would do if he discovered some man in the church was involved in a nonmarital sexual relationship with one of the church women. He answered that he would immediately disfellowship them both. "But," questioned Ramona, "isn't what we are doing also wrong?" To her surprise Herbert said, "No." When she asked why, Herbert explained, "Because I am an Apostle!"

We can only speculate on how fast her disillusionment with HWA progressed. Those who have read Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web by David Robinson (still in print and available for $10.00 postpaid from John Hadden Publishers, Box 35982, Tulsa, OK 74135) are aware of HWA's lifelong preoccupation with masturbation and his keeping of a log book in which he has recorded the dates of these episodes. Enough WCG ministers became aware of this oddity that the little book became widely known in the ministry as HWA's "flog log." Not only did HWA discuss this activity with male friends, but while "courting" Ramona he actually told her this lifelong habit was the reason it would be necessary for her to submit to his sexual advances. In other words, if she didn't give in, he would have to again "flog away."

Not only that, he went on to explain to her the details of this personal passion. He told her Brylcreem, the once-popular American hair dressing, was his favorite body lubricant. "Because," he explained, "it most closely approximates the fluids of the female vagina."

Ramona was undoubtedly more than a little surprised by HWA's revelations, especially since he had condemned masturbation as a terrible sin in his widely circulated sex manual. Nevertheless in 1977 Ramona and her spiritual leader were finally married. For a time, it seems, there was marital bliss. But in 1978 HWA suffered a massive heart attack, and it was after that experience that HWA, unhappy with his increasing inability to perform sexually, decided to fly to Romania where, at a famous "youth clinic," he received "shots" (presumably hormone injections) intended to rejuvenate his sagging sex life.

According to Dr. Floyd Lochner, who was HWA's personal trainer and present on the trip (as was Henry Cornwall, who served as an interpreter), HWA proved an uncooperative patient at the clinic and the results were not satisfactory.

HWA then heard of a sex clinic in London, England, and after a considerable effort on Lochner's part, was able to gain admittance. There Herbert was fitted with a ring-like device which HWA's former accountant Jack Kessler has described as "a specially made prosthetic dildo (which he carries in a Hermes pouch)."

Unfortunately for Herbert, this device also did not prove satisfactory. He then began to discuss the possibility of a prosthetic implant. Developed by Dr. F. Brantley Scott at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, this contraption consists of a fluid reservoir placed in the lower abdomen, two inflatable cylinders placed in the penis, and a pump which is placed in the scrotum. HWA, however, never got around to having the implant.

One former Armstrong secretary has stated, "It would be very difficult to imagine any man more obsessed with his own penis than Mr. Armstrong." Nevertheless, it appears that HWA's lifelong fear of surgery prevailed and after much anguish he decided to instead resign himself to what he felt would be a sexually inadequate future. According to certain sources close to the Armstrongs, it was at that juncture that HWA made what can only be described as a very "man-of-the-world" proposition. He told Ramona that because of their great difference in age and because of his sexual dysfunction, he knew she would enjoy dating other men. This, he said, he would allow her to do, but on one condition - that she be "discreet." In other words, it would be okay as long as the church members did not find out about it! One can only speculate as to what Ramona's feelings were at that point. After all, such arrangements were not even hinted at in Herbert's two booklets on Christian marriage or in his book The Missing Dimension in Sex. Nevertheless, it would not be long before Ramona would receive even bigger surprises from "God's Holy Apostle."

HWA Confesses to Incest!

Many readers will recall that when David Robinson's book appeared in 1980 it contained numerous allegations shocking to even some of HWA's longtime critics. No accusation was more startling than that found in the book's last chapter. There Robinson charged that HWA had maintained an intimate sexual relationship with the younger of his two daughters for a period of approximately one decade beginning in the early 1930s.

The Armstrong organization, through surrogates, attempted to use the courts to block distribution of the Robinson book, but failed miserably (Ambassador Report, Sept. 1980). It is most remarkable, however, that in attempting to stop distribution of the Robinson book, never once was it asserted that the incest allegation was untrue. Nor did Dorothy Mattson, HWA's younger daughter, ever come forth to deny the incest story (and she has repeatedly refused to respond to queries from the Report regarding the matter). In spite of all this, it seems there are still some who prefer to believe that the incest story was fabricated. Let us briefly review the facts.

In 1971 Garner Ted Armstrong paid a visit to his younger sister Dorothy. He had long been suspicious of the kind of relationship his father and sister maintained during his youth. They chatted over a few drinks and then Ted told her bluntly of his suspicions. She did more than admit the allegations. With candor she related detail after shocking detail.

For a number of years GTA kept the information to himself. But Dorothy did not. She divulged the same information to many others including David Antion (GTA's brother-in-law) and Lois Chapman (who had been married to the late Richard Armstrong, Ted's older brother).

Dorothy's story as related to Ted and others was that Herbert had begun fondling and heavy petting her in 1933 when she was thirteen years old - around the same time that HWA now claims God was using him to found the modern era of the only true church. But he did not begin to go "all the way" with her until three years later. One day Dorothy returned home from a date with a young bank teller to inform her father that she had just been "half-raped." To her surprise, Herbert was actually "elated" over the news. Herbert decided it was time to show her how it was really done. From then on Herbert went "all the way." The year was 1936; Dorothy was 16 years old. Strangely, Dorothy has claimed that Herbert later went on to become a good friend of the bank teller.

The incestuous relationship went on for years, but it was apparently not mutually enjoyable. Dorothy has related to friends how on one occasion in a hotel room she so strongly protested Herbert's abuse that the manager knocked on the door and asked what the reason was for all the noise. Herbert was quick to inform him that his "young bride" was a bit uncooperative due to inexperience. Satisfied with the alibi the manager left. Dorothy has claimed that Herbert then overpowered her, and after tying her to the bed and gagging her, proceeded to rape her. It's a pity Herbert neglected to include this incident in his book God Speaks Out on the New Morality.

During those years, besides taking her on supposedly church or ministry-related business trips, it was not uncommon for Herbert to take Dorothy out dancing on Friday nights. On one such occasion she asked him if he ever worried that one of his church members would see them. He told her no, because, in effect, they were too stupid to be out dancing on Friday night and that he had them well-trained (in keeping the Friday sunset to Saturday sunset Sabbath).

These incidents were but a part of the awful truth Dorothy related to Garner Ted and others. In spite of church upheavals, arguments with his father, personal emotional problems and considerable notoriety about his own sins, Ted said nothing about his father's shameful past. Not until 1978.

That year, during a heated argument between GTA and his father, HWA threatened to "destroy" Ted through making public certain information about his personal life. But Ted responded in kind saying he could destroy HWA with the information he had. Ted charged his father in no uncertain terms, yelling: "You fucked my sister!" Herbert, shocked at Ted's knowledge of the incestuous relationship, could only reply, "Well there have been times in my life when I have gotten far away from God." The conversation - overheard by GTA associate Benny Sharp - was the last face to face meeting between the two men. And Ted has since related how the hateful look he saw in his father's eye made him suspect they would never see each other again.

As was covered in great detail in our 1977 issue, during the early '70s Garner Ted Armstrong became highly infatuated with an Ambassador College coed. The resulting affair caused great confusion in the higher echelons of the WCG. Former WCG evangelist David Antion recalls how, at the time, he discussed the problem with HWA. Antion was for years perplexed by the almost Freudian analysis offered. HWA told Antion that Ted was simply fantasizing the younger woman as being his own daughter. The statement made no sense to Antion until years later. (As an aside, it is interesting how Ramona has claimed that HWA has been, over the years, very jealous of GTA's supposed sexual prowess.)

The last meeting between GTA and his father in 1978 was not the only time HWA confessed to the incest allegation. In 1980 Henry Cornwall, then an aide to HWA, read the Robinson book soon after it appeared and asked HWA directly if the chapter on incest was accurate. HWA told him it was. He then instructed Cornwall that his wife Ramona was not to see the book or learn of the incest story. Unfortunately for Herbert, Ramona already had a copy of the book and was in the next room listening to the Cornwall-HWA discussion. Shortly thereafter, she too confronted HWA about the incest allegation. And once again, Herbert admitted it was true, but begged and pleaded with Ramona not to let this fact get in the way of their marriage. The cause of the problem, he said, had been Loma, his first wife. Considering the perversity of Herbert's past, is it any wonder Ramona's love would begin to wane?

One can only speculate on how much Herbert's first wife Loma knew of what had transpired for ten years between her husband and her younger daughter. but some individuals who were then close to the Armstrong family did notice that toward the end of her life Loma was not on good speaking terms with Dorothy and that during the last year or so of her life she appeared to have lost almost all will to live. She died in 1967 after an illness that many say could have been cured by medical science, had she availed herself of that help. It is interesting to note also that HWA's great preoccupation with world touring began right around that time.

Ramona has reported to friends how the Robinson allegations preoccupied HWA's mind for a considerable period. She has also reported seeing a typed statement intended for Dorothy's signature. It stated that she (Dorothy) had never had a sexual relationship with her father. The document was, and we'd be willing to bet still is, unsigned. Dorothy undoubtedly knows that to sign such a statement would prove financially costly, removing any leverage she still possesses over her father. (On a recent trip to Big Sandy, Texas, HWA was quoted as saying his daughters show him very little affection and care only for his money.)

forties. In 1943 Herbert officiated at the ceremony in which Dorothy was married to Vern Mattson, who soon afterward was to serve overseas in the U.S. Marines. We have no information that the incestuous relationship continued beyond that point. However, Dorothy has related to friends how, around the time of her engagement, Herbert told her that her marriage need not put an end to their own special relationship.

Shortly after Vern's discharge from the military, Herbert was able to provide him with employment within his growing organization. Although Dorothy drifted away from her father's church by around 1951, Vern continued his association. He was the organization's business manager before the Albert Portune era.

What caused him to leave the Armstrong corporation? Was it then that he discovered the awful truth about his wife and father-in-law? The following quote taken from the transcript of one HWA deposition provides a clue (Ramona's lawyer is asking about Dorothy's house being sold to the WCG):

Q Did she sell it to the church?

MR. BROWNE: Objected to as being irrelevant and immaterial and constitutionally impermissible. Transactions between third parties and the church are none of anyone's business in this particular case and instruct you not to answer.

THE WITNESS: I refuse to answer.

MR. DECKTER: Okay. Where did you provide her with living accommodations?

A I provided her with living accommodations ever since, on and off ever since - Now, wait a minute until I think of the year. Let's see, I don't know. Began back in the 1950s, ever since Vern Mattson resigned from being business manager of the church.

Before leaving the subject, one other desposition excerpt is worth quoting. Ramona's lawyer was asking HWA some background questions concerning his health.

Q And do you suffer from any other diseases or chronic problems other than what we've discussed?

A Not that I know of.... I have had difficulty sleeping for the last, oh, let me see, ever since 1933.

That was the year HWA began abusing his own daughter. Is it any wonder he hasn't slept well since?

Worldwide News

The Worldwide Church of God - aptly called the Armstrong Adoration Society (A.A.S.) by some - is not only still dedicated to maintaining its idol's lifestyle, but is embellishing it even further. The customized Gulfstream II (G-II) that Herbert jets around in is apparently not swank enough for the super jet-setter. The Gulfstream Aerospace Corporation has developed a new jet, the G-III, which sells for about $13.5 million (The Wall Street Journal, Dec. 20, 1983, p. 17). The Gulfstream Corporation, which is taking orders for the new jet, loaned one to Herbert for his recent trip to New Zealand - just so he could get the feel of the new model.

HWA's Plain Truth magazine, which recently celebrated its fiftieth anniversary, now has a circulation of over 6.6 million. The church's theological publication, The Good News, is up to over 207,000 copies (186,000 go to non-WCG members, according to the Dec. 5, 1983 Worldwide News). The Nov. 21, 1983 issue of the Worldwide News reported that the WCG will have a fall feast site in the city of Nanjing in communist China.

* * *

The WCG is again getting some new doctrines from its leader. In his booklet Your Awesome Future - How Religion Deceives You, HWA writes (p. 27): "These scriptures indicate we shall impart life to billions of dead planets, as life has been imparted to this earth." The WCG ministry is also now teaching that its members and their children constitute the 144,000 of the book of Revelation.

In the WCG, some things never change. Notice these two HWA co-worker letter quotes. First, from his Oct 18, 1983 letter.

"I am writing from London. Have had meetings with important key leaders here and in Europe, and obtained confidential information of crucial world events soon to occur. I feel God will move swiftly soon to make a short work preparatory to Christ's coming. It won't be long now!"

Then in his Dec. 18, 1983 letter (emphasis his):

"Brethren and co-workers, these are the most momentous days of earth's history. NOTHING ELSE MATTERS FROM NOW ON! Our ALL should be dedicated to GOD'S USE, to warn as many millions as we may.

"I was interrupted in the midst of writing this letter, by our treasurer, Mr. Leroy Neff. Income has suddenly dropped down during the past six weeks - people apparently are spending money on Xmas gifts.... Need I say to you God's Work NEEDS YOUR PRAYERS? - and a GREAT SUDDEN SACRIFICE IN FINANCIAL OFFERINGS?..."

GTA Burns Bridges

Since the day Garner Ted Armstrong was booted out of the WCG in 1978, there has been speculation - often well- founded - that it was just a matter of time before he would return. In recent months, however, it has become quite evident that no such reconciliation will occur. GTA's Nov. 21, 1983 letter to his followers was his strongest statement ever against his father's organization. Here are a few key excerpts:

"Many have been spreading the rumor that 'Ted will be going back into the Worldwide Church of God one of these days.' (I was executive vice-president of the Worldwide Church of God, and its chief spokesman on 'The World Tomorrow' radio and television programs for over twenty years.)

"Continually, we hear of such rumors; perhaps you are one of those who has believed that I will be 'going back' into the other church one of these days.

"However, my father has made it plain to his closest aides and most trusted friends that THIS IS IMPOSSEBLE! Why, then, do thousands of members of the Worldwide Church continue to believe 'Ted is coming back' when HERBERT W. ARMSTRONG DOES NOT BELIEVE IT?

"Actually, my father has made such an occurrence impossible as he continues to WIDEN and WIDEN great DIFFERENCES - continues to DEPART farther and farther from the body of truth he had taught for the previous forty years!...

"Now, I realize there are great departures being made in doctrine by the parent organization, and that more and more significant differences are being erected all the time....

"I have known, from my early twenties, that Almighty God caused my birth by a miracle. My father and mother told me so dozens of times; my father has explained how, following special prayer, God gave me my voice and speech by a miracle.

"For these past twenty-eight years, since Jesus Christ placed me in His ministry, I have known Almighty God intended me to fulfill my life's calling - that of preaching the gospel of the Kingdom of God TO THE WORLD!...

"But I cannot agree with the Catholic doctrine of 'the primacy of Peter!' I cannot agree that leaders in the church can avail themselves of professional medical attention and deny it to the laymembers! I cannot agree with the brutalization and exploitation of the women of God's church! I cannot agree that the church should be kept on tenterhooks, expecting to 'flee' at any moment when the major prophecies of Christ had not yet been fulfilled! I cannot agree that the 144,000 represents the CHURCH!

"I cannot agree that I should preach before Gentile leaders in the name of 'Allah,' or tell them about a 'strong hand from someplace'!..."

Waiting for UFO's

Last Oct. 24 Garner Ted Armstrong sent out to his followers a letter containing this somewhat amusing story:

Recently, in a small community just to the north of us, we learned of one of the most bizarre incidents involving these false predictions of which we have heard in a long time. A would-be prophet has a number of gullible followers believing that between a set date and this Christmas [1983] they will be "taken up" by "UFO's"! The UFO's are, allegedly the "ships of Tarshish" mentioned in the Bible. The scenario, according to this would-be seer, is that they will be taken up to a space platform to undergo a process of "purification" and then on up to heaven, to return at some time later and rule the world!

All of this would be hilariously funny and merely another example of ludicrous buffoonery were it not for the fact that it has seriously affected the lives of a number, including at least one multimillionaire who has allegedly divested himself of all of his properties and wealth (for the "spiritual leader" of the group has apparently urged such) and is confidently waiting to be met by a UFO!

The millionaire Ted was referring to is former WCG writer Jerry Gentry and the head of the religious group, former WCG minister Cecil Battles. It appears Battles has gained something of a devoted following for his work which he refers to as the "Song in the Night." Believing the UFOs would arrive around Christmas time to take them away, many quit their jobs and decided to refrain from sex (with their mates) as a means of spiritual preparation.

Of course, nothing happened at Christmas time, so the date for the UFOs to arrive was pushed forward to January. When January didn't pan out, the date was pushed forward a few more months. Battles' followers use the WCG hymn book at song services and have added Purim to their list of must-keep days. Members of "The Song" - many of them former WCG members - send their tithes to Battles. Ironically, Battles claims he tithes to Herbert Armstrong, whom he refers to as "the good man of the house" of Matthew 24:43 who suffered his house to be broken up.

Some people never learn.

Alexander Does Prison Time

It is rare that the AR publishes a detailed account of the recent life of a former WCG member, but we think recounting some of the events of Gary Alexander's life after leaving the WCG will prove not only interesting but instructive to our readers. Gary entered Ambassador College in Pasadena in 1963, where he distinguished himself as a student. After graduation he began writing for The Plain Truth and quickly rose to a position of responsibility. He began questioning the church's doctrines in the early seventies, becoming known to close friends as a "liberal."

In Feb. 1976 he left the church and took a job at the University of Southern California (USC) Computing Center as a documentation analyst. His first step out of the church seemed well-executed compared to most WCG employees who got themselves fired before they contemplated getting another job. But after working 3 years at USC and after having received a 10 percent pay raise, he quit to work "for far less money and far fewer benefits at the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International [FGBMFI]," he explained in his newsletter AMEN. Why? "I did it for reasons of conscience because I thought the Charismatic renewal, represented by FGBMFI, was the fullness of the Gospel.... Dumb? Yes! I quickly found out that the politics and hypocrisy of the Full Gospel people exceeded that of Ambassador College, and I begged my associates at USC to take me back, which they did, at lower pay."

Just when it seemed that Gary had "seen the light," he got side-tracked again. Tom Williams - former WCG pastor, insurance salesman, diet-plan (Slender Now) salesman, and now president of Liberty Ministries International (LMI) - contacted him from Virginia and asked him to get involved with LMI, which for $3,000 would ordain you, help you set up your own church, and help you obtain the many tax exemptions available to ordained ministers. Lured by high wages, financial and tax advantages, and what he thought was an opportunity to express himself religiously without control by others, he jumped at the chance in Sept. 1979. (See AR, 3/24/80, p. 6).

Gary wrote: "My work for LMI included: (1) two Liberty Line magazines, (2) an unpublished book manuscript, America's First Freedom: The Religious Roots of Our Republic, and (3) much of the Minister's Manual, the portions dealing with scriptures and philosophy. In addition, I contributed to the promotional brochures, but most of that material was written by Tom and Linda Williams or Bill Morris." Soon, however, disillusionment with LMI set in due to hypocritical conduct by LMI members and their use of church funds, so he left LMI, but he still wasn't paying all his taxes. He claims that even after leaving LMI in late 1980, he was "still under the charismatic influence of Tom Williams until spring 1981," at which time he "sought independent tax counsel" and found he'd "misunderstood the tax codes."

Unfortunately, all this knowledge came too late for Gary because he was accused of income tax fraud (a felony). In late 1981 he testified before a grand jury, paid back taxes with penalties and interest, and agreed to testify against Tom Williams' alleged key co-conspirators. As Gary wrote, "It was that or face 10 years in jail... I was able to plea-bargain down to a misdemeanor... This is a slap on the wrist compared to Tom and Linda Williams, who face 137 years (each) and $407,000 in fines if convicted on all 64 counts they face."

According to the Richmond News Leader (12/8/83), federal tax authorities filed charges against Gary Alexander, former WCG minister Douglas B. Taylor of Florence, Kentucky, and Tom Boody of Howell, N.J. for "allegedly conspiring with others to defraud the federal government of taxes." Gary pleaded guilty in Federal court in Dec. 1983 and luckily was sentenced to only 30 days in a Louisiana prison. He has served his sentence, has been released and has resumed his job as managing editor of Wealth magazine, a new publication advocating buying hard assets and put out by right-wing goldbug James Blanchard III.

Those who know Gary know he's talented, hardworking, and creative. Our readers may be wondering at this point how such an analytical and gifted writer could be so easily sucked into what Gary admitted was a tax-dodge scam. In one of his AMEN newsletters he wrote: "I've always been intelligent, but I've never been smart. My IQ has been tested three times at above 150, but a high IQ is much like being 7-feet tall. It's an accident of birth... and it can easily be a bigger liability than an asset." So Gary had a high IQ but fell for a tax-dodge scam. How? Why? Perhaps because he thought with his heart, not his head. Perhaps because tax exemptions and big money were more enticing than common sense. But probably because he was too trusting. He commented about Tom Williams, the person who talked him into the home-ministry scheme: "Tom Williams became my 'mentor' at college, and he has always been able to manipulate my weaker personality by his dominant leadership. He helped me in practical matters, such as dating and social life, while I helped him with his schoolwork.... Tom called me ... promoting the concept of LMI. He flew me back to Richmond June 10 and made me a vague offer to work for him at 'double the take-home pay,' without spelling out any details. He told me that he had discovered methods for reducing taxable income to zero."

Perhaps one of the main reasons both Williams and Alexander got in trouble with the home-ministries scheme was that neither of them had had any formal education in the technical fields of tax accounting, law, or finance. If they had, possibly they would have saved both themselves and their investors - who by the way each paid $3,000 for their advice - a lot of worry, tax penalties, and wasted time.

Gary's prison experience was insightfully detailed in a recent issue of his newsletter AMEN (Alexander's Monthly Economic Newsletter). For further information write: AMEN, P.O. Box 1727, Metairie, Louisiana 70001.

I have been out of Worldwide since 1972, but still enjoy following WCG events. However, there is life after Worldwide! It's possible to incorporate the experience positively and go on just as you have done and are helping others to do. I am studying to be a chiropractor and enjoy life a lot these days.

As some of you may have already heard, Howard Clark, the former WCG minister and Ambassador College instructor, suffered a massive heart attack in January. After six weeks in intensive care, he is now slowly improving. Doctors have speculated that the problem had its origin in the stress Clark experienced years ago while in the WCG.

In spite of his physical difficulties and mounting medical bills, Clark's well-known wit remains intact. Over the phone he quipped: "When old Herbert had his heart attack a few years ago, they had to massage his heart at one point to get him revived. Not long afterward he started claiming to friends that he had been 'resurrected!' Well, I'm one up on him. When my heart stopped, they needed to use the paddles to get it started again. If I was still in Worldwide, Herbert would probably take me on tour as another resurrection case."

Howard asked us to thank the many friends who sent him get-well cards. Any who wish to drop him a note may write to him at: 3998 Yellow Wood Rd., Oroville, CA 95965.

Buchner Updates Bibliography

John Buchner of Australia has informed us that his Armstrongism Bibliography is now in its second printing and has been expanded. Copies are available for a contribution of $10 each (postage included). Those who ordered the original version and wish to obtain the new section may obtain the supplement for $4.

Buchner is also preparing a new study on the WCG which he recently wrote us about:

A thesis (and subsequent hook) is being prepared that researches the link between the Worldwide Church's media propaganda and its membership. This study will be both scholarly and fair. It is necessary to send questionnaires to former members. The greater number of responses, the more reliable will be the results of the study. The respondent's name will not be recorded. Interested people are urged to forward their names and addresses as soon as possible to John Buchner, P. O. Box 170, Gordon N. S. W. 2072, Australia.

Literature of Interest

Tithing (God's Command or Man's Demand - Which?) by Tony Badillo, Xavier Publications, 3122 Jerome, Dallas, TX 75223. 102 pages, spiral bound. $8.50 plus $1.00 postage. Texas residents add 5% sales tax.

In the last few years a number of excellent papers have been written showing the many flaws in Herbert Armstrong's tithing doctrine. Mr. Badillo's study, however, is the most thorough one that we know of available in print. It is filled with many insights into the subject, giving even those not too well versed in the Bible an understanding of the whole tithing subject. This study may prove of particular value to relatives of those under the Armstrong tithing program.

Shortly after my husband and I left HWA's organization we bought a book called 30 Years a Watch Tower Slave by William J. Schnell. The inner workings of the Jehovah's Witness group is much like HWA's. Good reading for anyone interested in their group.

Author John Tuit (The Truth Shall Make You Free) has informed us that he can supply copies of Herbert and Ramona Armstrong's 1980 Arizona state and federal income tax forms. Interested individuals should send $1.00 per copy (to cover photocopying and

A few weeks ago we received a flyer from Mr. D. C. Hall of the True Didache ["doctrine"] of the Worldwide Church of God, an organization in Oroville, California. Mr. Hall will soon publish a book titled God's Scenario. According to Mr. Hall, "The Bible maintains all religions are false and deceptive. This includes every known sect on earth." Topics to be covered in his book include: "why church doctrines are meaningless; why the breasts of the male show a primordial androgynous creation, proving man originally created bisexual; why and how all mankind to be saved," etc.

The publication order price is $7.95 plus $2.00 postage and handling per copy. For more details write to: Mr. D. C. Hall, P.O. Box 2077, Oroville, CA 95965.

One of our readers, Mr. Leon J. Lyell of Australia, recently sent us a copy of an article he had published in Signs of the Times, a Seventh-Day Adventist magazine. It is entitled "The Seventh-Day Men." Mr. Lyell wrote us:

The article is based on studies I made while still in the WCG. While I am now not in that Church, nor any other, I still have an interest in religious history and am following up the themes outlined in that article. It is surprising to discover that there is a wealth of information about Sabbath keepers in seventeenth-century England which has not been sifted through by the normal historians and which has been "misused" as it were by the Sabbath-keeping churches.

Many Sabbath-keeping churches would have us believe that all through history there has been "One Truth Church, " by which they mean one organization, which held the same doctrines as "our denomination " - whichever one that may be. The truth is quite different and much more interesting and instructive.

If after reading the article you feel it may be worth the consideration of AR readers, I would be happy to send them a copy. I would be grateful if any interested persons would include $7.00 to cover postage and copying.

In addition I am considering starting a newsletter that would concern itself with "Sabbath history" and be mainly concerned with uncovering those Sabbath-keeping groups and individuals pre-William Miller. Ultimately, if the idea takes off, I would hope it could cover the period from A.D. 31 to the present.

The contents of the magazine/newsletter would be historically accurate (rather than denominationally oriented) articles and reproductions of books and pamphlets written by long-forgotten Sabbath keepers.

At this stage I would simply like to see if there is sufficient interest to make the venture worthwhile.

Letters

I am writing to inquire just what has happened in the WCG divorce case.... The ministers here have announced from the pulpit on two or three occasions that HWA and the church were awarded everything he had asked for and the matter had been settled very satisfactorily for the church as well. When some of the members asked questions for further information, they were told it was none of their business.

These ministers are still preaching Petra and the goat dens, urging all to be preparing to leave at once on HWA's call. He has ordered a new plane to be built to his specifications and to be delivered in April, so they say, to help carry those deemed worthy.

-Colorado

I'm motivated to write you at last - hoping you're still publishing - after hearing a rumor through current church members that certain members are being or have been chosen to flee with HWA in the spring, around Passover, to Jerusalem for awhile, then to another place in the Middle East for some time, and finally to Petra. During this period of time, these members have been told, via letters from certain ministers who have not been named, that HWA will be both deaf and blind. However, he will be one of the witnesses - as will GTA. GTA is supposed to be aware of this plan and is in on it, but he hasn't officially been reunited with his father or the WCG (and won't until later). These members (and I assume others) have already sold their property and relocated to a temporary home in anticipation of the planned flight. They have been told that not all members will be chosen to flee, and those chosen ones may invite those close to them to go with them even though they (the invitees) are nonmembers. They must only agree to obey church rules. These members have received no letters from HWA - only from ministers.

My husband and I are quite concerned about this development since we both have several family members who are still loyal to HWA and the church.

-Virginia

Editor. These wacky rumors about Petra persist and persist. The part about GTA is obviously not true. What the origin of this nonsense is we're not sure, but with WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse still loose, any kind of WCG hallucination is possible.

I was visiting with the only remaining WCG member that I know of in this immediate area last fall. He was very concerned that he might lose his farm soon because of his financial situation. He has to pay $20,000 a year in interest expense right off the top before he can do anything else. He had to put in a walk-around irrigation system three years ago when an estate was settled. The first year he had what would be a good dry-land crop (the irrigation system was installed too late in the season to start out as an irrigated crop at the beginning) but not very good for irrigated. The second year a heavy hail storm ruined his crop. It stopped just before it got to my crops. This year it was drought and bugs that couldn't be killed that severely damaged his crop. It would seem that tithing to HWA doesn't help him much.

In my own case I have noticed that I'm doing far better financially than when I was tithing to HWA. If this had happened when I was tithing to him, I would have thought I was being blessed for tithing. I don't know what the future holds, but I can't help but think that, with the conditions that have been extant in this country the last few years, I would be in lots worse shape financially now if I had continued tithing to HWA. This same thing seems to be true of other former members that I have talked to.

- Nebraska

On December 1982 I requested an AR and sent a $5 cash donation to cover cost. Not long after that I began to receive money out of the blue (various unexpected sources) - about $700 plus. What I am trying to say is that in all the years I paid tithes to HWA (six years), nothing out of the ordinary ever came my way. It was quite the opposite. My life became a tragedy. You would not believe the disasters that came on me. I am grateful I did not make much more than about $16,000 per year during my HWA experience. I also would like to state that I am a single person in my late 30s. At the time I did not have any bad habits to speak of. I lived with relatives and my expenses were minimal. I often found it hard to believe how a man with a family could pay three tithes to the WCG and get by. Prior to the WCG I was able to save money and had that to fall back on. But then later, after paying my gross tithe, sometimes I could just barely make it to work.

-New York

Thank you for your literature. I have been out of the WCG four years due to my own observations, mostly to do with doctrine. However, I was also appalled at the fear which gripped the members - the way that even fairly well-educated people were afraid to act upon their own initiative, even in small matters to do with everyday living.

This fear I believe is partly brought about by the persistent instilling of unbiblical attitudes towards the Devil. I remember Francis Bergen's sermon "The Roaring Lion" (around 1975) assuring everyone of the necessity to "stay with the herd - the church - keep within the security and protection of the church."

This kind of teaching plus the continual thundering about "the god of this world" brainwashes people to believe that Satan is more powerful than Christ, with the only protection being the WCG.

Again, when teaching about the mind, the will of God, and/or obedience, the whole thing would be injected with the insinuation that one could never trust one's own mind - one's own God-given common sense. They encouraged everyone to put their trust in the ministers and HWA instead of trusting in Jesus Christ and the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

WCG minds are closed against the fact that the gospel is much more than announcing the return of Christ (which Armstrong only usually brings up when demanding more money).

Indeed HWA seemed to me to be more concerned - even obsessed - with the story of Adam and Eve and the serpent than he ever was with the gospel. And this is craftily engineered to equate with any disobedience towards himself or his organization.

-England

I'm a student at Kent State University in Ohio and am concerned about the WCG influence on our campus. On January 31, 1984, the WCG is sending Mr. Bill Jahns to talk to students.

-Ohio

Editor: Considering that on your campus there is a WCG organization called "Readers of the Plain Truth, Kent Student Organization" you should be concerned.

For many years we were another example of the "doing what we were told" bunch. This blindness on our part caused my husband to quit a good job (it was in a defense part of Tenn. Eastman) and give up a good salary, a good bonus every year, all life insurance policies, hospitalization (full coverage), etc. You know the story. This was at an age too late to build up any place else. So now we are living on social security alone. Fortunately, we own our home. When we finally realized that no man can save us and refused to "bow the knee to HWA" we were disfellowshipped and marked. The only reason we were given was that we had to be totally obedient to Herbert. Neither God's nor Christ's name was mentioned. We quit "cold turkey" before we were disfellowshipped. Thankfully, we realized it was to God that we owed our allegiance.

-Virginia

After viewing the movie "Return of the Jedi" I was struck by the similarities between Herbert Armstrong and the evil Jabba the Hut. Jabba, whose huge jowls shook like jello with every evil laugh, even had a sail barge (flying whorehouse?) complete with dancing women. The only thing lacking from Jabba's lair was a piece of Steuben crystal (are you listening Herbert?).

-Missouri

I did not decide [to leave the WCG] on the spur of the moment. But it all jelled one Sabbath when a so-called minister stood up and said, "On the night much to he remembered you will be meeting in the brethren's homes. We don't want anyone teaching or talking about God's work or the Bible because there wouldn't be a qualified minister there."

And my brain said, 'WHAT?! That is it I have had it. What kind of brainless idiots does he think he is talking to?' And I left that day - I never said a word to anyone - and have never returned and I never will.

That remark was the summation of all I had read and heard. The proverbial last shoe was dropped.

I have not had one person other than the local minister after three weeks call to inquire why I left. They are flat-out scared to ask or they might leave themselves. I find it very sad and very disappointing.

-Ohio

Every time I sit down to read the AR I find myself fascinated reading about what's happened to people who left Worldwide. Some seem to have really gotten it all together and are the model of success, but a surprising number seem to be repeating the same mistakes they made when they joined Worldwide. By that I mean that they are looking for simple solutions to life's major problems and they seem to latch on to anyone with a glib argument without first spending the time to read widely in religion, psychology, philosophy, etc. If those people had done their homework properly in the first place, they would never have joined Worldwide. Yet, after making that mistake once, many invariably end up putting total faith and a lot of money into some new organization headed by an ex-Worldwide minister who, the day before he left the WCG, was teaching total error, but now is a fountain of wisdom and inspiration. It makes no sense. I'm not saying an ex-Worldwider shouldn't seek to join other groups - just that he should sample several, read widely, and be extremely slow to commit his hard-earned money to any group. Otherwise, he may end up once again penniless and bitterly disillusioned.

-California

This is my first correspondence with your organization. I have been a member of the Worldwide Church of God for the past eight years now, and as you probably know, what I'm doing is taboo as far as the church is concerned.

As a prospective member, I was encouraged to prove, to my own satisfaction, the truth of the Bible, but as a member I am told not to lean to my own understanding but to follow without question the dictates of Herbert W. Armstrong. The hierarchy does not permit a free discussion of biblical ideas openly among its members. This disturbs me. I feel I've been manipulated, and I sense more and more an atmosphere of fear and intimidation directed at the ranks by the church leaders. Things are happening in this church that the members are simply not privy to. That's why I've written to you. I'd like to have some answers.

-California

In the April 1983 issue you have listed in the "Executive Exodus updated" the name of Peter Whitting. I rang Peter to inform him of this and he said he would not be contacting you himself in order to deny the allegation. In fact Peter is a minister in a church in Victoria, so would you please set the matter right in your next edition.

Peter was among those suspended out here in 1980 during the big upheaval that took place around July and was reduced in rank as it were to co-pastoring a church. Later, however, he was restored to his full status. Even though I am no longer a member, I hold him in very high regard. The church would be a happier place if there were more like him.

-Australia

Editor It was not an "allegation." However, we want to be accurate. If Whitting is not ashamed to be called an HWA rep, we'll be only too happy to warn the public.

Concerning what happens to former WCG members. I am a Sunday school teacher (adult class) in the First United Methodist Church. My wife sings in the choir. She was a WCG member for over 20 years. We are both former AC students. We both visited the minister [of our current church] and explained that we had no desire to become members and that we would understand completely if he wanted us to discontinue our active role in church activities. He responded that he was very happy to have the contributions we make of attendance and participation. The people are wonderful and we find the experience very helpful. Most importantly we feel free to worship and believe as we see fit and to openly disagree. The Methodist Book of Discipline strongly encourages everyone to continually pursue a deeper understanding of and a personal relationship to God.

The point is, there are many fine, respectable, organizations already in existence where people can contribute to the welfare of others and also worship God in a very personal way.

After reading much literature, we still appreciate the job you are doing and highly respect the material published by Ernest Martin, that is more because of the attitude in which it is presented, rather than because of the positions taken.

WCG members have a valuable experience to share with others when they leave the WCG. By all means they should actively seek out existing churches where they can contribute to the spiritual well-being of the community in which they live.

*-Louis and Sandy Gaskins
-North Carolina*

My interest in the WCG is for my younger brother who has been involved with them since he was 13 years old. He has given them everything he has ever made as far as money and has been convinced that he is not able to own anything. He is now 31 years old and lives with Dad and Mom.

-Oregon

At the present time I wish to be taken off your mailing list. My circumstances are such that I am no longer a member of the WCG, but my husband is. And of course he is very upset if I receive outside literature. I am trying to hold my marriage together and feel for the time being it is best to stop the literature.

Thank you for your time and information through the Report. I hope I can receive the AR again in the future. I can only pray and hope God will open my husband's eyes to what the truth really is.

-Michigan

It appears to me that the young have the most to lose when HWA "gets" them. Not only are they financially crippled, but they are socially crippled, sexually denied, and curtailed from any healthy meaningful interaction with the opposite sex. What a crime and what a tragedy.

-Massachusetts

Please keep the Report coming. We try to get some passed around but the people [in the church] were warned not to read anything. They are told they are welcoming Satan into their home.

I would love for you to do some checking on all the beatings and paddlings the young ones got. I agree with Jack Martin: The child-rearing booklet was a disaster. I did not have any little ones, but I saw beautiful little children ruined. Those little fellows go to school and order their little school friends around and they get into trouble. They are bossy like their parents.

-AR Reader

Editor: According to Armstrong family member David Antion, now a Ph.D. in educational psychology, Herbert was treated very harshly and beaten frequently during childhood. This mistreatment very likely was a major formative factor in his own development.

Thanks for the AR. It is a link to life. It must be hard to continually publish, but believe me it is needed. We believed, and we believed so hard. It isn't easy to put it behind us and forget. I know of no one who doesn't continue to think and remember it all. We were a family - brothers and sisters and who can put one's family out of mind. Never! I'm always wondering where this person is or how that one is doing. More than 10 years have passed since I left and I've had many heartaches in that time. Still I wonder and think. It is such a shame it couldn't have been as we thought.

When something is wrong, you let it go. You put it behind you. Yet, it will be a part of us until we pass on.

I still want to know what is happening to my beloved brothers and sisters. Ambassador Report is that link with that life. Keep it alive.

-Maryland

The Denver minister has repeatedly told the members here that the second tithe is God's money and cannot be spent for anything but travel to and from the Feasts and housing and meals. All that remains must be sent to Pasadena. If anyone fails to do so, they are under God's curse. No one should use it as an additional contribution or to help some other person to attend. But my Bible says it is for my use for anything my heart desires.

Keep up your good work as many of us rely on you for true reporting on what this cult is doing to its members. Many are as sold as the Jim Jones gang and would drink poison if HWA said to drink it. This minister claims all your reports are lies and not to believe anything they may hear.

-Colorado

My wife, who was disfellowshipped November 1982 after 22 years as a WCG member, now wishes I had sent for your AR from its inception. Our own 27-year-old son and my wife's brother [top WCG official] are still in the WCG. It's disgusting how they either ignore or talk down to my wife. They brag about their refusal to watch, read, or listen to any point of view other than Armstrong's as force-fed by his Gestapo ministers. They revel in their ignorance.

When my wife first began to listen to Armstrong in 1957 and began receiving his literature, I spotted him for a greedy charlatan so, from the sidelines as an "unconverted" mate with my "worthless" opinions, I watched the flipflops, destroyed families, and confused youth parade by over the years. My wife and I are so relieved she's free of that Satanic bondage. And, yes, she is still a faithful Christian.

-California

You are continuing to do fantastic work in exposing the Armstrong hoax and other cultists. Please don't stop now. AR is a ministry of its own and has, without a doubt prevented many people from knowing the pain we have experienced as members of WCG (now ex-members).

-Arkansas

Our thanks to all who continue to support our efforts.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR28 July 1984

"God's Apostle" Gets a Divorce

For over two years Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the 91-year-old, self-proclaimed Apostle of the Worldwide Church of God and President of Ambassador College, battled in the courts to divorce Ramona, his 45-year-old wife. On May 11 he got his wish. In Tucson, Arizona, Judge William Sherrill approved an out-of-court settlement reached by the parties, thereby dissolving the Apostle's seven-year marriage. Through the settlement HWA was able to escape what would have been a lengthy and highly publicized divorce trial.

The trial had been scheduled to begin on April 25. During the month preceding that date there was a flurry of pre-trial motions and depositions. In their pursuit of legal business, WCG lawyers even ignored WCG holy days in scheduling their activities. For instance Ramona found herself at a court hearing on April 23, the last day of Unleavened Bread. The presence of WCG lawyer Ralph Helge was presumably excused by an "ox in the ditch."

As before, a review of the statements made at various depositions reveals a great deal about the true nature of the Armstrong organization. An excellent example of this is the deposition of Virginia Kineston. Ms. Kineston, an intelligent, articulate woman of somewhat dominating personality, was, for a number of years, an executive secretary to church attorney Stanley Rader. Her power in the organization was considerable - especially during the State of California vs. Worldwide Church lawsuit. With HWA in Tucson and Rader occupied with the lawsuit, Kineston found herself taking on so many top administrative and executive functions that she earned a reputation as the WCG's real boss. In fact, the WCG ministry's unhappiness over this state of affairs was a major factor in Rader's downfall. While Rader, according to some, seemed to enjoy having the WCG's macho ministers subservient to his secretary, the ministers by and large were not amused and made their feelings known to HWA. Whatever the case, for a time Ms. Kineston wielded considerable authority over the church. Oddly enough, however, Kineston admitted during her deposition that she was not a WCG member, having left the church in

Ms. Kineston readily acknowledged, based on personal observation, that church funds had regularly gone for gifts for HWA, Rader and their friends and relatives. The WCG's accounting methods - incredibly lax by normal accounting standards - were explained in considerable detail by Ms. Kineston. She further corroborated that the church's jet had often been used for personal and frivolous purposes. For instance she testified:

"The G-II was used to take food and club soda to Tucson because Rona Martin, the housekeeper, didn't believe anyone sold club soda except Jurgenson's [a Los Angeles gourmet food store]."

We will not bore readers with further details of her testimony as we have covered these matters in previous issues. However, one comment she made deserves repetition. When asked what her opinion of Herbert Armstrong was, she stated she hated and despised him. When asked why, she replied:

"Well, it gets into the core of his personality. I think the man is a liar, a thief, and a pervert, and I have absolutely no use for him."

This, from a lady who has observed his conduct over many years. Had the Armstrong case actually gone to trial, statements such as the above would certainly have made their way into the newspapers.

It's no wonder then that as the trial drew near, the WCG's lawyers grew increasingly concerned over the impending wave of publicity. Herbert's lawyers even went so far as to ask Judge Sherrill for a protective order that would have effectively barred the press from obtaining key records in the case. Shofar editor Robert C. Williams, authors David Robinson and John Tuit, and Ambassador Report editor John Trechak all wrote letters to Judge Sherrill objecting to the issuance of any such order. Judge Sherrill refused to grant the protective order.

On April 25, as the Tucson news media waited, Ramona Armstrong arrived at the Tucson court building. Accompanying Ramona were an Iroquois medicine man and two Indian associates who gave Ramona a good-luck amulet. (Ramona's father was a registered member of the Cherokee nation, making Ramona part American Indian. This is just one fact among many that Herbert insisted she keep secret from the WCG membership because HWA's marriage to her would be viewed as an interracial marriage, and church policy forbade such marriages.) Later, the medicine man went before the TV cameras to ask all Indians watching to pray that their "sister" receive a fair settlement.

Inside the court building Judge Sherrill was informed that both sides had reached a tentative agreement in principle. Judge Sherrill then recessed the proceedings for a day in order to give the lawyers a chance to draw up a written tentative agreement. According to The Arizona Republic (April 26, page B 1), that afternoon Herbert held a three-minute news conference "in the garage of a Tucson area residence." He told reporters, "I am very pleased that this matter has come to a mutually satisfactory agreement.... There will be no trial."

The following afternoon, after a whole day of legal wrangling, the attorneys for both parties presented Judge Sherrill with a tentative agreement for a divorce settlement. With an oxygen tank kept nearby, Herbert Armstrong was assisted to the witness stand after signing the agreement. Without looking at his estranged wife, Herbert answered a few routine questions put to him by lawyer Allan Browne. Judge Sherrill then scheduled a May 10 hearing at which the agreement was to be fully ratified.

But when May 10 arrived, Judge Sherrill discovered that there was still no final agreement. The hitch was that the criminal charges against Ramona for allegedly stealing gold flatware from the church had not yet been dropped. The dropping of the criminal charges had been a key point in the tentative agreement.

Judge Sherrill, noticeably angry over the new snafu, ordered that the trial would begin Friday. He ruled that the testimony could include details of the church's finances. But he agreed to limit testimony on Herbert's sexual conduct. According to The Los Angeles Times (May 12, Part 1, p. 14):

"In the divorce proceedings, Armstrong's lawyers had sought to limit evidence of a sexual nature, but his wife's attorneys said it was crucial because the church leader alleged that Mrs. Armstrong had breached an agreement of love and fidelity. Lawrence Deckter, Mrs. Armstrong's lawyer, said the testimony would explain an 'understanding' the couple reached about Armstrong's 'prior incestuous conduct with his daughter for many years.'"

Herbert was quickly summoned back to Tucson as attorneys for both sides attempted to solve the settlement problem. The attorneys asked Superior Court Judge Richard Hannah to persuade Deputy County Attorney Kenneth Peasley to at least agree to a plea bargain. But Hannah told the lawyers they had no role in the criminal case and that the deadline for a plea bargain had passed anyway. But Alex Gaynes, Ramona's lawyer in the criminal case, remained optimistic. By Friday, May 11, the problem was solved. Peasley agreed to dismiss the criminal action on condition that Browne provide an affidavit stating that "a trial would be stressful to Mr. Armstrong and might be very injurious to his health," that restitution has been made for the missing gold flatware, and that the victim "has no desire to prosecute in the matter because of restitution." So the last hitch in the agreement was overcome.

On Friday, May 11, the lawyers for both parties informed Judge Sherrill that they had a completed agreement. Judge Sherrill then dissolved the seven-year-old marriage. Ramona had her maiden name, Martin, restored by the court to celebrate the end of her marriage.

Herbert flew back to Pasadena. And Allan Browne, displaying an ignorance of not only scripture, but his client's teachings as well, sounded ever more like Stanley Rader when he told the press, "Mr. Armstrong will now return to doing what he does best, and that is proclaiming the gospel to members of his church."

How much did Ramona get? No one is saying. Part of the very detailed settlement is that no one disclose it's terms. Some newspaper accounts pointed out that Ramona had sought to be awarded "the couple's former house in Tucson, half of a $5 million bank account, $150,000 a year in spousal maintenance and other assets." But later:

"The Tucson Citizen reported that the settlement provided for Ramona Armstrong to receive a total of $300,000, of which $150,000 was to go to her attorneys. The newspaper said her legal bill is at least $350,000. In addition, it said, she will receive the couple's luxury Tucson home - but be responsible for a monthly $785 payment on its estimated $90,000 mortgage - and two cars, in addition to personal belongings, jewels and furs" (Arizona Republic, May 12, 1984).

Friends close to Ramona have hinted that she got nowhere near what she hoped for. It is also clear to us that whatever she did get was not in a lump sum. Undoubtedly the settlement provides that she be paid in installments and that such payments will cease if she discloses any details of the agreement or certain facts pertaining to her marriage to Herbert. Since her divorce, Ramona has declined interviews with the press and has refused to answer all questions put to her by Ambassador Report.

How were HWA's lawyers able to get Ramona to forgo a trial and instead agree to such a small settlement? It appears there were a number of factors. First of all, it is important to realize that the WCG's financial resources make it able to "pay up front" for dozens of high-powered lawyers and to indulge in large scale "paper wars." Ramona's lawyers were not only working on contingency, but were so swamped with paper work by the opposition they were unable to do business as usual. The situation drained them financially. The strategy used by the WCG lawyers was effective too in inflicting great physical stress on the opposition. Ramona's divorce lawyers, Jack Ettinger and Larry Deckter, both have serious personal health problems that were greatly exacerbated by the stress of the case.

Attorney Jack Warner, who represented Ramona in her California suit against the WCG (an action separate from the divorce) ran up a legal bill of over $335,000. As Warner did not become a party to the out-of-court settlement and since Ramona lacked the resources to even make payments on the bill, the amount remains outstanding. The "paper war" in the California case was intense, and when Warner's health began to fail, he asked the court to release him from his responsibilities. When Warner left the case, Ramona was unable to find any lawyer willing to take up that battle. With no lawyer willing to fight on, Ramona's California lawsuit was as good as lost. Thus, even if she could have won the divorce, losses from the California case could have eaten up whatever she won in the divorce suit.

A second, related, factor is that Worldwide's lawyers were not only able, but were also clearly planning to delay for many years the payment of any monies won in the divorce by continuous appeals. Ramona's legal bills would have mounted, but she would have been unable to touch a penny of what she would have won.

A third factor was the impending criminal case. While it is unlikely that she or her son Richard would ever have had to serve prison time, the possibility of being found guilty in that case was a real fear.

A fourth factor was that had the divorce trial actually gotten started, HWA and his myrmidons would have probably "stonewalled." This had already occurred during HWA's depositions, in which he refused to answer hundreds of important questions because of vague "constitutional protections." The inability to get straight answers left Ramona so frustrated that on April 23 she went personally to HWA's Pasadena home, barged in, and confronted him over what was transpiring. HWA unabashedly told her that when the trial started he would absolutely deny all of her allegations. He said that he would say that he never recalled admitting to incest or any other sexual deviation. Nor did he recall ever promising to remain married to her for life.

The realities of the situation were such that Ramona felt forced to settle out of court. After two full years of legal warfare, she longed for a normal life. Friends say that, although she has been left with hundreds of thousands of dollars in unpaid legal bills, she has found great comfort in the loyalty of her friend Wally McKinney. Ramona met McKinney, an articulate, suave Tucson businessman, some years ago at a time when she was so despondent over her marriage to Herbert that she was actually contemplating suicide. McKinney helped her through the crisis and has remained a devoted friend ever since. They intend to marry in the near future.

Armstrong Divorce Documents

One more comment about the divorce case. Thanks to Herbert Armstrong filing for divorce (we often wonder who should be given credit for putting this idea in his head), an absolutely vast amount of sworn testimony about the WCG, HWA, etc. is now available to lawyers and accredited news reporters in need of this information. The county court in Tucson has a microfilm department that makes court records available at relatively little cost (compared to usually expensive photocopies). The complete case is on 102 Microfiche plates with over 100 pages of legal documents on each plate. The court charges 50 cents per plate. The case number for the Armstrong divorce is: D0040771. Lawyers and news organization researchers in need of these official court records should write (on letterhead) to: Clerk of the Superior Court, 111 West Congress, Tucson, Arizona 85701 (Attention: Correspondence, R. Gerald, Microx Department).

McNair Trial Begins

Herbert Armstrong's divorce problems may be over, but the WCG's legal problems haven't gone away. As of this writing, the Leona McNair vs. Worldwide libel and slander trial is under way. In the suit filed in 1979 Leona McNair claims that certain WCG leaders, including her ex-husband evangelist Raymond McNair, conspired to defame her and that Raymond's brother-in-law, evangelist Roderick Meredith, did so in both spoken and written statements made in 1979.

In 1976 Raymond McNair became the first WCG minister ever to divorce his wife. There were three children by the marriage and Raymond has since remarried. In the statements made by Meredith in 1979, the evangelist accused Mrs. McNair of being responsible for the breakup of the marriage. The case (number NEC 27381) should provide further insights into the WCG's divorce doctrine, which changed abruptly around 1975, just in time for HWA to marry a divorcee and for Raymond McNair to pull off the first ministerial divorce. Leona McNair's attorney, Antony Stuart (of the Los Angeles lawfirm of Greene, O'Riely, Agnew and Broillett) says he expects the trial to last about a month.

Legal Solutions - Without Lawsuits

Anyone who has followed the WCG's activities for the last five years knows it would be quite difficult to find a more litigious or lawsuit-prone organization anywhere. With the possible exception of the U.S. federal government, no one loves to spend money on lawyers more than Herbert Armstrong and his myrmidons. Our sources indicate Herbert's church probably spent about as much on lawyers over the last several years as it spent for the poor, widows, and orphans.

That is why we were so amused (not shocked, not disgusted, just amused) to read recently in the Los Angeles Times (San Gabriel section) that the WCG is funding an organization called the Community Dispute Resolution Center. For a fee of only $5, individuals having a dispute with someone can come to the Center and explain their problems. The Center then attempts to persuade the other party to come in. Through fact finding, negotiation, mediation, and arbitration, the Center attempts to solve the dispute quickly, without litigation. The Center's services are available to everyone, regardless of religious affiliation, income, or place of residence. A number of prominent Pasadena-area lawyers and judges serve on its board of directors. The WCG currently provides the Center with $65,000 to $70,000 per year, with that figure likely to rise to $150,000 per year in the future.

We think the concept behind the Center is a good one. But we ask: Why doesn't the WCG simply use the Center, or something like it, to solve its own legal disputes - instead of spending millions on lawyers every time it has a legal problem?

Religion and the Courts

In virtually every lawsuit the WCG has ever been involved in, it has invoked First Amendment privileges regarding its practices and its refusals to answer certain questions. Lawyers representing the Armstrong corporations give the distinct impression that because the Armstrong corporations are in the religion business they are exempt from some of the legal responsibilities placed on other individuals and businesses. The attitude is not unique to the Armstrong organizations, but is found in many organizations involved in religious activities.

More and more, however, U.S. courts are ruling that those religious freedoms guaranteed by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution are not limitless. A number of recent court decisions should give WCG ministers something to think about.

In Tulsa, Oklahoma, on March 15 a jury awarded a $390,000 judgment against a church whose ministers denounced a woman for the "sin of fornication." The church's ministers had followed the teaching of their denomination, the Church of Christ, that sinners be exposed from the pulpit and be denied fellowship with the church's membership. Said one Church of Christ minister after the jury's decision, "That probably will teach us all a lesson.... There may have been a more diplomatic way of going about it" (Pasadena Star-News, March 18, 1984, p. A5).

The April 16, 1984 issue of Time magazine, in an article (p. 42) which mentioned the Worldwide Church of God by name, covered a subject that every WCG parent would do well to ponder very carefully. The subject was how the legal system is responding to cases of parents denying their children medical help because of religious beliefs. According to Time, "State courts have routinely intervened against the antimedicine doctrines of some religious groups in ordering treatment for the children of church members when death is imminent. Now states are beginning to bring charges of neglect or abuse against parents who endanger their children's lives by adhering to religious teachings." In one case quoted by Time, a religious couple was charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of their 16-year-old son, who died after days of agony from an untreated ruptured appendix.

On June 22 in Vermont 130 armed state troopers and social workers went to 20 homes of members of a religious cult. With search warrants they gained entry to the houses and then led away 112 children for a day of medical observation. The families - members of the Church of Island Pond - had long been accused of severely beating their children. The group's founder, ex-carnival barker Elbert Eugene Spriggs, teaches that children should be disciplined regularly with wooden rods. One church leader, Charles Eddie Wiseman, faces charges that he beat one 13-year-old members for seven hours. The Los Angeles Times (July 10, 1984, p. 10) quoted Wiseman as saying, "Even little babies have a fallen nature... and need to be disciplined. We are going to raise a lost generation of children... unless they are properly disciplined and properly spanked.... I have no question you can crush the will and spirit of a child."

The sect, which has many doctrinal similarities to the WCG, has an intense dislike for the press and feels it is being "persecuted." The June 22 raid may have been unusual, but it was not unique. In Michigan in 1983 state officials took 66 children away from their parents who were members of the House of Judah cult. One mother in that cult was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in the death of her 12-year-old son.

Another legal decision that should be making WCG officials nervous is the June 28 California Appeals Court ruling that ministers can be sued for "clergy malpractice." The important decision came in regard to a 1980 lawsuit filed by Maria and Walter J. Nally of Tujunga, California. The suit alleges that their son's 1980 suicide came about after counseling with Rev. John F. MacArthur, Jr., pastor of a Sun Valley church. Both the pastor and the church are named as defendants. In making the precedent-setting decision Justice Vincent S. Dalsimer wrote:

"...The free exercise clause of the First Amendment does not license intentional infliction of emotional distress in the name of religion and cannot shield defendants from liability for wrongful death caused by such conduct."

From the facts presented, Judge Dalsimer wrote that it could be inferred that the defendants:

"Recklessly caused such persons extreme emotional distress through their counseling methods if those persons did not measure up to the pastor's religious ideals."

Sound familiar?

We Beg Your Pardon

Ambassador Report always takes great care that the information presented is accurate. Nevertheless, in our last issue there was one minor inaccuracy that we wish to correct. HWA's Romania and London trips did not take place in 1978 as reported on p. 7. Those trips took place around 1976, a few months before his marriage to Ramona. Knowledgeable sources say that the physical problem we described was, according to HWA's own admission, due to his many years of excessive alcohol consumption.

We also neglected to mention an important point in the incest story. HWA was able to exert great coercion over his daughter, not just because he was her father or physically stronger, but because he repeatedly claimed "God gave you to me."

Child Abuse in the News

Incest is not a pretty subject. Unfortunately, because the problem is so widespread, in recent months it has been in the news more than ever. We do not want to cover the problem in detail in this issue. However, in recent months we have been absolutely appalled to learn of a number of cases of incest in the WCG where for some reason the ministry, though informed of the problem, seemed to turn a deaf ear. It is difficult to believe that the church's ministry does not understand what a terrible crime this really is! They should read Leviticus 18:6-18; 20:11-21.

In the May 1984 issue of Psychology Today there appeared an excellent article by Elizabeth Stark entitled "The Unspeakable Family Secret: Fear and shame have forced almost 15 million victims of incest to suffer in silence." The article contained these insightful statements (p. 42):

"Father-daughter incest, which accounts for 75 percent of the reported cases, is generally considered to be the most harmful. The betrayal of a child by someone she should be able to unconditionally trust and depend on almost always leads to serious emotional problems: low self-esteem, guilt, isolation, mistrust of men, problems with intimacy, sexual precociousness, drug and alcohol abuse, promiscuity, even suicide. 'There is no way that a parent can have sex with a child and not exploit them,' Giarretto [Henry Giarretto, psychologist and founder of the Child Sexual Abuse Treatment Program in Santa Clara, Calif.] says....

"Incest happens at all economic levels, in families that appear completely normal to outsiders. They are often socially isolated, and what little outside social life exists is controlled by the father, usually a strong, patriarchal figure. The wife tends to be financially and emotionally dependent on her husband and often has less education.

"Ninety percent of incestuous fathers suffer from some type of mental disturbance, according to a recent study done by Karen Kirkland and Chris Bauer...."

Another magazine that covered the subject of incest recently was Newsweek (May 14, 1984). That issue contained this remarkable statement (p. 32):

"In a 1981 study, Harvard Medical School psychiatrist Dr. Judith Herman concluded that the most striking similarities among incestuous families were the father's tendency to tyrannize and the mother's fear of questioning his absolute authority...."

Unfortunately, the description given by Dr. Herman not only fits that of the Armstrong family over the years, but it also accurately describes the kind of family organization Herbert has tried to inspire in his followers.

If any of our readers suspect there is an incest problem in their own family, we suggest that your local WCG minister be avoided, as in most cases he will not be qualified to handle this serious problem. A good place to start is to read the two articles quoted above. Then seek assistance from competent, trained professionals - those who recognize incest as the terrible sin it really is and who have the training to properly deal with it.

WCG News in Brief

Recent WCG publications reveal that the WCG's quest for image continues unabated. The July-August issue of The Plain Truth featured the Olympic Games. Page one showed HWA shaking hands with U.S. high-jumper Dwight Stones. The magazine's center spread of photos showed Olympic athletes training at Ambassador College under the watchful eye of AC instructor Harry Sneider, now a U.S. Olympic team coach. Nowhere mentioned is the fact that the modern Olympic games have their origin with the ancient Greeks whose Olympics were held in honor of their gods. Author John Tuit pointed out to us, "It's interesting that the church is told Easter and Christmas should not be kept because of their pagan origins, but the pagan- religion origin of the Olympics doesn't seem to deter Herbert Armstrong from getting involved. The double standard is very obvious."

Double standards and all, however, HWA continues to accumulate the worldly accolades he's always desired. The June 18 issue of The Worldwide News showed HWA chatting with Japanese Prime Minister Nakasone, the July 2 issue showed him with Austrian President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger, and the June 4 issue showed HWA at the White House with Mrs. Reagan and a Chinese children's choir called "The Young Ambassadors."

How HWA gets to be photographed with the world's rich and famous is no secret. In his March 21 letter to his church, HWA wrote (emphasis his):

"We are comparatively small in membership, compared to large traditional churches, yet a VERY GREAT AND REAL P O W E R in the world!... It is only by God's tithing system that we can be such a tremendous power in the world.... The need for TITHE and OFFERING laborers was never greater."

Evaluation of Church Financial Picture

Throughout the fifties and sixties the WCG's membership shot up rapidly, while its income grew at roughly 25 percent per year. Since the mid-1970s, the church's income and membership growth have been relatively flat, with its income not even keeping up with inflation. The church's worldwide audited financial report, compiled by the prestigious accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co., revealed that church membership for both 1982 and 1983 remained at about 75,000 (The Worldwide News, June 4, 1984, pp. 5-7; June 27, 1983, pp. 5-7), which is only 7 percent or 5,000 members higher than reported in 1979. This low growth doesn't look quite so bad when compared to the decline in membership among the mainline U.S. churches since 1973: United Methodist Church - down 8 percent; Presbyterian Church - down 15 percent; Lutheran Church - down 3 percent; Episcopal Church - down 4 percent. However, when compared to the Seventh-day Adventists with 623,563 members (up 34 percent since 1973), the Mormons with 3,593,000 members (up 40 percent since 1973), or the Assemblies of God with 1,879,182 members (up 71 percent since 1973), the WCG seems to be doing poorly (U. S. News & World Report, April 30, 1984, p. 82).

The recent Arthur Andersen audit reported that the Armstrong organization worldwide had a total of $132,182,000 in support and revenue in 1983, up 9.3 percent over the 1982 figure, whereas total expenses rose 9.0 percent to $126,489,000. The financial statements and accompanying notes showed that the organization owned aircraft worth $9.6 million and library books worth $1.2 million. It had travel and related expenses of $3.7 million, professional and performing artist fees of $5 million, and some mysteriously unnamed "Other" expenses of $8.3 million.

While showing two years of comparative financial details and being as complete and well-written as most corporate financial reports, the report still deliberately omitted categories of interest, such as the church expense for executive compensation and legal fees. The report does mention that the church gives out interest-free loans to members - which we learned in the divorce-trial depositions often go to key executives - and that the church-college provides $560,000 in benefits to certain select former employees, though the organizations lack formal retirement plans for their employees.

But just how accurate and useful are corporate financial reports issued by the major U.S. CPA firms? We discussed this subject with an accounting professor of a major Southern California university and with a former auditor of Arthur Andersen & Co. and found the following: While an audited financial statement from a CPA firm can give the general public confidence that the financial statements of a firm are done according to generally accepted accounting principles, this doesn't mean that if several CPA firms were given the same set of corporate books they would arrive at the same bottom-line figures. In fact, their results in certain areas might vary as much as plus or minus 30 percent. This doesn't mean anyone is actually "cheating," but CPAs can make use of a wide range of estimates, inventory costing methods, depreciation methods, tax credits, etc., as well as deciding which of various categories and formats to present to the public - all of which can cause great variability among financial reports. Also, never forget that an "independent" CPA firm is hired by the organization whose books it is auditing and it maintains a confidentiality similar to an attorney-client relationship. If that CPA firm insists on presenting the financial data in such a way that is not deemed in the best interests of the organization that hired it, the CPA firm will be replaced with a more cooperative CPA firm. So while all CPA firms are "independent" of the firms they audit, they aren't nearly as independent from them as, say, the IRS (Internal Revenue Service) is - the difference being that a business can't fire the IRS if it disagrees with its findings.

Furthermore, just because a firm such as Arthur Andersen & Co. audits a church's books, that doesn't mean that it has given its moral approval for the way the church spends its money. It is Arthur Andersen's job to account for the church's expenses and make sure they are presented according to generally accepted accounting principles, but it is not Arthur Andersen's job to comment or rule on whether the church should pay money to HWA's relatives and women friends, whether the church ought to hire lawyers and spend millions of dollars fighting members and ex- members, whether "hush money" should be paid to disfellowshipped ex-ministers under the guise of retirement benefits, whether HWA should have an expense account and what he should use it for, etc. These issues are outside the realm of an audit.

We hope this explanation of the significance and limitations of audited financial statements will aid WCG members and the general public in understanding just what an audited financial report can and can't be relied on for.

A financial report is not the best place to determine whether the WCG is spending its funds for its stated purpose or for practices that would be frowned on by most members if they knew what was occurring. A person trying to decide whether or not to tithe to the WCG based on the church's spending habits will have to rely on his own observations and the news media to determine the propriety of the church's expenditures, because neither the church nor Arthur Andersen is going to come out and say HWA spent x number of dollars at a sex rejuvenation clinic in Romania or that he spent $5 million on lawyers to divorce his wife, etc.

We feel it's the responsibility of every Christian to do all in his power to make sure his church is spending his money the way Christ would want it spent. If his church is not doing so, he or she should demand to know why and cease giving immediately.

Dwight Armstrong III

Dwight Armstrong, the younger brother of Herbert Armstrong and for years the WCG's only officially recognized hymn composer, was listed in our 1976 and 1977 issues as among those who were no longer actively supporting the Worldwide Church. That assessment was an accurate one, having been based on frank discussions between Dwight and Ambassador Report editor John Trechak in 1974. It appears, however, that in later years Dwight reestablished his relationship with Herbert. In his April 1 letter to his church HWA wrote:

"I recently visited my brother, Dwight, who composed all of the music in our Church hymnals except for three or four songs we felt worthy of being included. He has devoted the last 35 years of his life to composing the music of these hymns for us....

"I found him in the last stages of cancer in the bone structure, going through the marrow of the bones. He is a little discouraged, not realizing what a real success his life has been, and with the mortgage on his home still not paid off as he faces the end of his life. He is not expected to live much longer.... He will be 80, if he survives until September 15....

"We have had no experience or precedent to know how one with such musical talent should be compensated for his years of faithful labor, but because of IRS restrictions over us by the government, and the fact he is my brother, I feel he has never been properly rewarded for his efforts. However, if some of you brethren do feel you would like him to know how much his beautiful music has meant to your Christian life, and would care to just write him a few words of appreciation, I know that would brighten the few remaining days he probably has in his life.

"Write to his local pastor, Richard Parker, 5540 34th St., Loop NE, Tacoma, WA 98422."

The comments by HWA have caused many to wonder. Of course everyone is saddened to hear of Dwight's illness. But why the obvious suggestion to send money to the ailing hymnist? The church has supported him comfortably for many years, and besides, his brother Herbert probably makes at least $300,000 per year and could afford to help Dwight himself. If he is dying from cancer (and we don't question that he is), why would Dwight be worrying about an unpaid mortgage? Does he plan to take the home with him? And why the odd comment about no precedent for compensating a composer? Thousands of composers get paid regularly for their work. Why not just pay Dwight as other composers are paid? And what are those mysterious "IRS restrictions"?

Knowledgeable sources inform us that HWA has had serious difficulties with the IRS in recent years (remember: the IRS does not make such matters public) and that he has gotten a bit paranoid over his financial affairs. Others, however, note the date of the letter and speculate that it was just one insensitive April Fool's joke on the WCG membership.

New Lyrics for Hymnal?

While Dwight Armstrong has for years been the only one officially commissioned to write hymns for the WCG, there are others, apparently, who would like a chance at contributing to the WCG hymnal. Karen Griffin of Pasadena, California, told us, "When you consider the new doctrines in the church, it would be appropriate to update some of the hymns to reflect the church's new teachings and attitudes." She has already redone a number of WCG hymns. One that we found particularly entertaining was her rewording of "It Is Well With My Soul." Here is her new version:

It Is Well With My Soul

Yea, Her-ber-t, my preach-er, di-rect-eth my way,
And all of my life doth con-trol.

What-ev-er my lot, Herb hath taught me to say,
It is well, it is well, with my soul... (Chorus)

My life and my will did I give--with-out tho't,

My wealth, not in part, but the whole.
I've giv'n to the Work, and I bear it no more.
Yea, tis so, I have sold Herb my soul... (Chorus)

Though no more Ra-mo-na, though tri-als ga-lore,
Let this blest as-sur-ance con-trol.
Though Herb has me tith-ing my to-tal es-tate,
He hath said this is good for my soul... (Chorus)

And Oh! haste the day when the gun lap shall be run.
The church off to Pe-tra will go.
Then Her-bert shall flee. Oh! I hope he takes me!
So I say it is well with my soul ... (Chorus)

GTA - Problems and Insights

We continue to receive letters from members of Garner Ted Armstrong's Church of God, International (CGI). Quite a few have written us saying CGI represents a vast improvement over the WCG in terms of more humane organization and more reasonable doctrinal positions. Nevertheless, it appears that GTA's past sins continue to haunt him. In a March 5 letter to his readers GTA wrote:

"As you know, we had hoped we were going to be admitted on one of the major 'religious' networks a few months ago. They turned thumbs down on my program!"

GTA's past is something many refuse to forget. But his father's past has caused some to turn their backs on all organized religion. In a May 3 letter to his readers GTA writes of those who "...became so hurt and angered - so 'turned off' at their physical leaders that they simply gave up.... They do not make these accusations at Almighty God, or Jesus Christ! Rather they make the accusations at their former human leadership! If you have had such thoughts, then I want to highly recommend to you a taped sermon by Mr. Ronald L. Dart entitled 'Beyond Disillusionment!' I am offering it now because it was one of the most widely acclaimed sermons Mr. Dart has given in the past several years!"

Some of our readers who've heard the tape say it is worth a listen (the address, for those who are interested, is: P.O. Box 2530, Tyler, Texas 75710).

The same May 3 letter by GTA also offers the public a booklet that sets forth the "over-all parameters" of CGI's doctrines. We haven't seen the booklet and suspect we would not agree with all of CGI's doctrines. However, we can only commend GTA for putting his church's teachings "up front." That is something the WCG still refuses to do. Finally, in regard to GTA, we point out with some pleasure how he increasingly is speaking out on the problems in the WCG. In a May 23 letter to his "fellow laborers" Ted quoted a letter he received from an unnamed WCG member. We reprint the entire letter here because it offers a remarkable insight into the present-day WCG:

"Dear Mr. Armstrong, I have received several pieces of your literature and your newspaper 'The International News' the past few months. I want you to know that they are literally a lifesaver.

"I am a member of WCG and have been for nearly nine years. I just can't believe what is going on in the church now. It scares me to death and makes me sick. (I am especially afraid for the women.)

"I have heard and put up with (out of extreme intimidation and fear tactics from ministers) a lot of strange happenings in 'God's church' the past four to five years. I've suspected there's 'something rotten in Denmark,' but stuck my head in the sand out of fear of losing my eternal life.

"I feel so depressed and hopeless I don't know what to do - and see others the same way - plus animosity being aroused between husbands and wives (paranoia), then I ask myself: 'If this is God's church, why is everyone so paranoid, fearful, afraid to talk to their ministers?'

"The past two to three years I have dreaded going to church and have been trying to psyche myself into a 'positive attitude' - but the fear tactics, etc., get worse every week and now I hate going to church, I tremble with fear through every sermon. We're told that practically none of us will make it into the kingdom, etc.

"For example, this past Sabbath, our minister told us there were a lot of LIARS in the congregation, HYPOCRITES, etc. Then, of course, as usual, he started in on women - made a nasty remark about our 'gossipy natures,' told us we were defying God if we had any of that 'colored dirt' [makeup] (powder) in our house ('God has spoken on this issue. How long will you defy God?!'), made fun of some of the older women because they had put a rinse on their hair to take away the ugly yellow color (I wonder who he thinks they're trying to seduce?), etc.

"Then he tore into the men for not keeping us under submission. Called them wimps, etc., if they 'allowed' their wives to watch soap operas (I hate soap operas, but that's my concern, not his or my husband's if I wanted to watch them - which I don't!). Told them they should check their wives' things for makeup, powder, nail polish, etc. - and 'in effect' (he didn't say this, but insinuated it) - either throw out the wife or the powder!

"He praised certain women in the congregation for 'reporting' (Heil Minister!) to him that certain other women were still wearing makeup to work, etc.

"He ranted and raved at everyone for wasting his time for wanting counseling for stupid things. (He's a very sarcastic man.) I know that many times people have counseled [with] him for something they thought was in a private conversation - expecting him to be discreet, etc., when lo and behold the very next Sabbath he would be in the pulpit mimicking them and making fun of their 'problem.' He wasn't concerned about their problem or them - just outraged that they had the problem and 'bothered' him with it. (He's a frustrated comedian and will do anything for a laugh - even at the expense of someone already hurting.)

"There are some things I would like to counsel with him about (especially about most of us losing eternal life), but wouldn't dare. He gets mad if we don't understand. I just don't understand the man's attitude. He seems to like ridiculing us and putting us down and exercising his 'authority' - especially women.

"I have come to see that many people are staying in the church out of pure fear (including me - it could mean a divorce from my member husband). They are told that if they talk to any 'ex-members,' read any of your literature or anything against HWA - even if it's the truth, it will 'pollute' our minds and we will lose eternal life. Mr. Waterhouse (I'm sure you already know) does nothing but travel all over the world and preach HWA - there's no way to 'make it' unless you go through HWA. If you even 'question' anything he says, you are being REBELLIOUS against 'God's anointed' and you will be cast into the lake of fire! (I heard one minister say he doubted if we would make it into the kingdom if we read Time magazine - because they're 'anti God's apostle'!)

"Any piece of your literature or anyone's not flattering to HWA is to be burned or turned in to the minister. We are not to read it or we will be put out of the church by God Himself. God will not TOLERATE blasphemy against 'His' apostle.

"I wanted to find out where you were for years, read your literature, etc., but was scared to death to even think it. (I'm still scared - not very brave. Is God going to 'get me' for writing to you? I don't know.) Things are getting so paranoid at church, though, I don't know what else to do. Besides, I'm a woman and I'm not going to make it anyway. Right?!

"I just wish there was some way you could reach the rest of WCG members - they've been told CGI is to be avoided like the plague or God will 'get' them." (signed)

The Paranoid Prophet of the Song

In previous issues we mentioned how former WCG minister Cecil Battles had formed a church called "the Song" and how his followers had quit their jobs to wait for UFOs (or more accurately, "fiery chariots") to take them away. One of our readers who had joined "the Song" was fortunate enough to escape its influence. He (or she) has written us this update on the CBC (Cecil Battles' Church):

"Cecil Battles seems to have become paranoid. He rants and raves! He demands complete and total obedience as though he were God. His sermons are hours long. The group sings literally for hours - sometimes half the WCG song book at one time. You know, of course, that they have all quit their jobs. One of the latest is that they are to stay close to home, as God may soon speak to them and tell them the chariots are coming.

"They mail out copies of his 'prayers' and their 'prayers' must be patterned after Cecil's 'words.' He tolerates no questions, no opinions (except his own, of course, as they are 'God's') and no discussions....

"Cecil does not converse as a normal person with others. If you do not 'parrot' his 'words' back to him, he walks away. He has no patience with normal conversation, only 'the words' as the group calls them.

"He has set so many dates for the coming of 'God's chariots' that any normal thinking person would wake up and 'smell the smoke.' But his followers just lap up each excuse like honey. (It's their fault anyway; they are not 'pure' yet.) I have seen them sit in front of him with adoration on their faces. He says his last 'failure' datewise was predicted in scripture! Where?

"It seemed to us like 'something' is guiding him! He uses no notes, flips from one end of the Bible to the other with amazing memory. Says he does no preparation; only speaks what is given him when he starts to preach, and speak he does, for hours, with no notes; most sentences have no end, no punctuation. They seem to mesmerize his people. You would have to see it. It is unbelievable....

"They will do anything he says. Fast days and days, sing for days at a time, quit jobs, quit sex, not marry, cut off family and friends, take children out of school, pack up and move to Oregon if he said to, no TV, no pleasure, no eating out, do away with all pictures of pigs, frogs, mice, etc., no medicine, no doctors. All they do is listen to his tapes over and over. This is not exaggerated.... He teaches them to hate us who have left the group and not to think much more of anyone else outside the group. They who once were ostracized by the WCG are now treating others even worse.

A Letter From Germany

Editor: We received the following letter from a German student some time ago. While it is a bit lengthy we feel it does offer some remarkable insights into both the WCG and current European conditions.

Gentlemen:

I am a student at a German university studying American literature. Over the years I have become acquainted with the publications of the Worldwide Church of God by reading my parents' issues of Klar und Wahr and the older Die Reine Wahrheit. But it was not until I started reading the English Plain Truth that I discovered how cynically racist and bigoted Mr. Armstrong and his main mouthpiece on Germany, Mr. Gene Hogberg, are. When I met with long-time friends in the German branch of the WCG, I was given some older editions of Ambassador Report and found that many of its revelations paralleled my own thinking. After intense discussions with my friends, I decided to write to you and express my views on the WCG and its "prophecies" on Germany.

It is a clever act of deception when Mr. Armstrong tells the American and English readers of the Plain Truth (PT) how prone to aggression the Germans are supposed to be, while carefully deleting the same ideas from Klar und Wahr. For example, much to my astonishment, I learned from an English-language WCG booklet (never printed in German) that I descended from the ancient Assyrians of 2,500 years ago. Mr. Armstrong shows great scholarship here. Considering that 100 generations have since come and gone and Europe has been a melting pot of many migrating peoples and tribes, could all that have happened without racial intermingling? Then I was horrified to learn that we Germans (West and/or East?) are supposed to attack and conquer the U.K. and the U.S. and that we are "known" for our bestiality, ruthlessness and cruelty. Finally, I was told that I am a member of the coming "Beast power" of the Apocalypse to be guided by the Pope. This is especially remarkable in light of the fact that we had Martin Luther and the Reformation here. So before we Germans militarize and unite Europe to attack everyone in sight, let me comment on prophets Armstrong and Hogberg.

I have met Mr. Hogberg personally and hence have a good idea how he arrives at his ghastly nonsense. He obtains his information by staying mostly at expensive hotels where he converses with fellow Americans, English-speaking Germans, or one of his PT cohorts. Mr. Hogberg's knowledge of German goes no further than the crude construction of a phrase. He knows practically no German history or German political philosophy, nor does he have a sense of understanding of the German national psychology. Furthermore, he has no journalistic connections or accreditation. In order to be credible, any journalist or scholar has to have contacts at our major newspapers, universities, or at the Allersbach Insitut für Demoskopie that gauges public opinion. But Mr. Hogberg gains his impressions on a typical wine-and-dine-trip through the country. His surface impressions, which he palms off as "prophetic insights" in the pages of the PT, could be offered by any tourist travelling through our country.

Like Mr. Hogberg, Mr. Armstrong has a warped view of Germany. He evidently lifted many of his ideas on Germany from vicious anti-German propaganda dating back to World War I. Mr. Armstrong was by no means the only one inspired by this trash. For example, some American presidents can be shown to have been attracted by Armstrong- type anti-Germanism. For instance, in one book by Louis Nizer, What to Do With Germany? (Chicago, 1941), the reader is presented with these "revelations" on Germany:

"Was Nazism a coincidence or the fulfillment of age-old German dreams, philosophically and systematically inculcated into German consciousness for centuries? [p. 17]... the evil conduct of... Nazi leaders fits well into the characteristic pattern of bestiality [p. 18]... Those who appeal to this basest instinct of the German people are instantly assured the most devoted following [p. 29].... theirs is a German conspiracy against world peace [p. 30].... The war lust of the German people is composed not only of a philosophy for conquest, but of a race theory to justify it" (p. 39).

Anyone who has even casually browsed through the WCG literature against Germany will notice startling similarities. Mr. Armstrong adopted these ideas, probably more consciously than unconsciously, and sold them as prophecy. Naturally, the pseudoscientific character of his writings would appeal to his simpleminded fellow "prophets" and followers. Anything that reeks of conspiracy, of quick and easy answers to complex political or social problems, appeals to these "illiterates."

Nizer could have been used as a source for the "prophecies" on Germany that Mr. Armstrong states in his book The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy. Again notice Nizer's thoughts:

"For example, in 1900, the book Grossdeutschland und Mitteleuropa um das Jahr 1950 [author unknown] foresaw the triumphant day [der Tag] as falling in 1950: 'All Germans have united, Holland enters the German union; in Belgium, the Flemings grow in power and because the French element causes increasing trouble, Germany is obliged to intervene.... Maybe the French will fight, in which case all Belgium will be annexed and incorporated in the German World Empire... (p. 47).

"In Germania Triumphans (Berlin, 1895) he [author unknown] writes: '...the United States, declining to give way, the German, Italian, and French navies mobilize and set sail for America. The American navy is destroyed. On land, the German armies made short work of the American mercenaries. Under the brilliant leadership of the German Leader, the Germans were everywhere victorious.... The British navy was destroyed. Invaded, the English offered but a half-hearted resistance. The German and Italian soldiers seized London. England and America were defeated'" (pp. 47-48).

More remarkable than the similarities of Nizer's scenario to that outlined in Mr. Armstrong's booklets is the fact that Franklin D. Roosevelt had Nizer's book distributed among his Cabinet. Eisenhower bought 100,000 copies and sent them to his officers, who had to write reaction papers on it before they occupied Germany in 1945 (Current Biography 1955, p. 450).

Nizer's book is one of a long line of anti-German writings, such as Germany Must Perish (1941), Germany Is Our Problem (1945), or No More Germanies, No More German Wars (1944). Toward the end of the war, and for many years afterward, a flood of books on the revival of Nazi-Germany were printed. Again, scores of volumes on that topic were produced, such as Germany Will Try Again (1944); The Hidden Enemy: The German Threat to Post-War Peace (1949); The Nazis Go Underground (1944), and many more.

From this it becomes evident that Mr. Armstrong's prophecies about Germany and the Nazis rising again was nurtured by a popular vein of journalistic sentiments. Mr. Hogberg simply copied Mr. Armstrong's views and took the rubbish for divine truth. I would go so far as to state that Mr. Hogberg may yet use Nizer's quotes and attempt to sell them to his PT audience as "newly discovered truth," regardless of the fact that these writings are known and hopelessly absurd.

All told, Mr. Armstrong put out articles and pamphlets that reflected the racist and political ideas of British-Israelism, that the Anglo-Saxons were destined to a racial and political supremacy in the world. There is no doubt that this view of Anglo-Saxon imperialism is the centerpiece of Mr. Hogberg's world view. It helps very little in the exchange of ideas between Germans and Americans. Mr. Armstrong is not building bridges between nations; he is tearing existing ones down. Many bad feelings are created by this ill-conceived, base, and ludicrous evangelism.

But Germans also do a disservice to their culture when they participate in the production of the PT propaganda on the staff of Klar und Wahr and the American PT. It is that kind of attitude of mindless loyalty that resulted in the Hitler mess. Germans tolerating the published Armstrong nonsense judge themselves since they know what they are doing to their own country under the disguise of "preaching the gospel."

I reject the false PT allegations against Germany, the illconceived, misconstrued, deliberately twisted, fabricated, racially colored statements and articles by Mr. Armstrong and his "prophets." It is not knowledge that inspires their utterances. Rather, it is a premeditated scheme to financially bind the Armstrong church members to a fear and punishment image the "aggressor" Germany. While the church can boast that it has the "truth" on Germany, as the potential Beast power, the members will gladly donate money. In this way, they provide themselves with the illusion of knowing the future, while in the meantime Mr. Armstrong receives a steady lucrative income.

The WCG propaganda that identifies Germany with the devil, evil, or sin has long passed the stages of openminded discussion and has reached the level of theological dogma. Once such propaganda reaches into the grey realms of human emotion, where concepts such as "sin" or "evil" are formed, a conscious, rational dissection of the various themes ("evil Germany") is for the Armstrong follower no longer possible.

Regarding "evil" Germany, it is still a far safer place than the United States, whose crime, immorality (even an apostle's divorce is possible), and intellectual decay is well represented in the Armstrong church.

Mr. Armstrong also claims that anti-Americanism in Germany will lead to a revival of militarism. This is laughable. Actually today in my country anti-Americanism means anti-militarism. The current German desire to engage in a military adventure is about as real as Mr. Armstrong's desire to live according to what he preaches. We perceive America as a source of conflict, and we worry that our country may be drawn into a war between the Russians and the Americans, which is the last thing we want because it could destroy us who are caught in the middle. More troops and missiles mean more of a chance that we will be in a war contrary to our wishes. In addition, 95 percent of our college graduates refuse to do military service. These absent young people would be the leaders in the present, and any future, German army.

The anti-Americanism among the young is paralleled by a trend toward neutrality and reduced military commitment among the intellectual elite. That is evident in their writings, and it involves Strauss, who insists on honoring treaties with the U.S. and the Russians. This same Strauss also wants a veto power over use of American nuclear weapons, even though Mr. Hogberg depicts him as the possible European strongman.

Mr. Hogberg and the PT also hardly ever mention the fact that West Germany has a constitution, the Basic Law, that permits only specific powers to be in the hands of the parties, the Chancellor, the states, or the armed forces. Contrary to the Armstrong church, we do have a system of checks and balances. It is impossible that anyone German, the good Strauss as the prime example, will hold power in the absolute way of an Armstrong. There is no other item that so renders the Armstrong statements void as the fact that the Germans have a constitutional system guaranteeing basic individual and collective rights. In all the Armstrong publications that I have seen, there is only scant or incidental reference to the German Basic Law. If Mr. Hogberg wishes to ignore the realities of our constitutional law, then he is only showing that he never departed from his starting point, the war propaganda, that advocated that Germans were incapable of having a rule of law. Again Mr. Hogberg demonstrates his dreadfully inadequate knowledge of the post-war situation in Germany.

There are a few more items that refute the Armstrong rubbish on my country. They concern the rules of neo-Nazis. The West German government (not to mention East Berlin) has systematically and unflinchingly suppressed any such revival of neo-Nazi parties. For example, the Socialist Reichs Party was declared unconstitutional already in 1949. The German Reichs Party, along with the German Communist Party, met a similar fate. In 1953, the German Free Corps was banned, and the Ludendorff-Circle was handed over to the courts in 1961.

Certainly, there are ideological supporters of Hitler in my country and yours today, just as there are Armstrong followers, even after all the real revelations about him in Ambassador Report. Furthermore, don't forget, the Nazis are legal in the United States, but not in my country. Hitler freaks have no constitutional protection in West Germany, in contrast to American Nazis in the United States who enjoy such constitutional privileges. Hitlerites also have no political clout to make themselves heard in West Germany. All that appears in support of, or like a revival of, Nazism is swiftly prosecuted here.

Finally, our armed forces are strictly limited in their activities by the Basic Law, the NATO treaties, and the occupational statute ending the military occupation in 1955. Our Bundeswehr is not even permitted to have a clearly identified picture of an enemy, a fact that is probably beyond Mr. Hogberg's horizon to comprehend.

I ask, are these the marks of a nation that according to Mr. Armstrong and his chief parrot Mr. Hogberg will militarize Europe and attack the United States? Do the "prophecies" by Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Hogberg ever relate to such empirical reality as outlined above? Only ignorant dimwits could accept their pseudo-prophetic sayings without linking them to any historical and political reality. The foregoing facts fly in the face of Mr. Hogberg's "analysis" of my country. He never has understood, nor apparently will he ever understand, what makes Germany work. He simply has no educational and intellectual background to do so. Mr. Hogberg's and Mr. Armstrong's "prophecies" or "analyses" of my country are just borrowed opinions, and these opinions are impressionistic, ill-conceived, shallow, and inconclusive.

The writings of these people who turn out such plain trash resemble more the deranged concoctions that spring from the broodings and contortions of uneducated, neurotic, and psychotic brains. Nonetheless, these great "revealers of truth" are still desperately trying to build a prophetic monument unto themselves by trying to tell their readers of events in the future, as in the case of Germany as the "Beast power." But they have only adopted this "knowledge" from the popular press, and using the Germans as a scapegoat is nothing but propaganda, as I have shown in this letter. It is then not likely that Mr.

Armstrong or Mr. Hogberg will succeed in going down in history as prophets.

What is certain, however, is the fact that their utterances have no relevance. We can all rest easier because we do not have to be concerned about some simpletons who advertise themselves as revealers of divine truth on Germany - "truth" obtained in propagandistic publications. Such people are not prophets, but charlatans.

Faulhaber: Germany in Prophecy

One of our Canadian readers, A. Marvin Faulhaber, has sent us copies of two books he has written that may be of interest to some of our readers. One is entitled Germany in Prophecy. This work goes into "where Herbie went wrong" on prophecy. The second book is a 61-page reference book titled The How Much Do You Love Your Child? Resource Book for Parents. This book provides a wide variety of suggestions on child rearing as well as numerous addresses where one may obtain information valuable to parents. The books sell for $10 each. Postage is $1 for North America, $3 elsewhere.

Mr. Faulhaber has also written that he hopes to produce a directory of WCG "splinter groups" and establish some type of "recovery network" of individuals and groups who were once affiliated with Worldwide but who would now like to assist in "deprogramming" current WCG members through counseling and friendship. The "recovery network" would also aid former WCG members in overcoming "the personality disorders caused by the hard sell and pressure tactics of the WCG," according to Faulhaber.

Those interested in any of the above should write to: A. Marvin Faulhaber, P. O. Box 3223, Mission, B. C., Canada.

Badillo Expands Services

In our last issue we reported on Tony Badillo's excellent book on tithing. Since then, Mr. Badillo has expanded his ministry to include an interesting newsletter called Newsgrams. We particularly enjoyed its cartoons about HWA. Also worth mentioning are a number of articles by Badillo "exposing HWA's nonsense." They are listed on page 7 of his May newsletter. Those interested in obtaining Newsgrams should write to: Church of God Within, P.O. Box 11074, Dallas, TX 75223.

Richard Marson's New Report

Some years ago, former WCG member Richard Marson wrote a book entitled the Marson Report Concerning Herbert W. Armstrong. Marson has now issued an updated version of that book. The new title is American and British Israelism Debunked. The price is $5.95. Marson also publishes other religion-related material including Reality Report, a newsletter published every other month except July. The newsletter, which has an $18 per year subscription price, is "dedicated to halting religious abuse through education." For more information write: Reality Report, 2442 Northwest Market Street, Suite 193, Seattle, WA 98107.

Richard C. Nickels: Giving and Sharing

Richard C. Nickels recently sent us the following announcement:

"Giving and Sharing is an international nonprofit mail-order religious bookstore. It began in 1978 partly as a protest against religious organizations who 'preach for hire.' We distribute Bibles and religious books and articles on a donation basis.

"Many former Worldwide Church of God members have enjoyed reading two of our books: (1) A History of the Seventh Day Church of God (397 pages, $8 suggested donation), which reveals the origins of the church Herbert Armstrong became a part of; (2) The Remnant of Israel (32 pages, $1 suggested donation), which traces the history of G. G. Rupert (1847-1922) and shows the amazing doctrinal similarities between this minister and Herbert Armstrong.

"Whether you are interested in Church of God history or just want to obtain good religious reading material without high cost, you are encouraged to write for a free catalog and details to: Giving and Sharing, 1606 Taylor, Sheridan, WY 82801."

Brenda Denzler Update

It's been some time since we reported that Brenda Denzler of Kansas was working on a book composed of the stories of many who had joined and later left the WCG. Many have wondered what became of her project. Here's what Brenda recently wrote us:

"I returned full time to college last fall and have done very well. Besides taking a full academic load, I have been working part-time and am also a full-time parent. So as you can see, there's never a dull moment. That is why the book project is not as far along as it might otherwise be.... This summer I will have about 8 weeks with no classes, only work. During that time, I hope to be able to jell the material that I have been sent. Some of it is truly excellent! Writing [about the experiences people have shared] itself becomes hard for me, as I tend to experience rises in blood pressure, lumps in throat, clenched fists, teary eyes, etc."

We know the feeling Brenda, but if you can finish your book, it will be of help to many. Those who may wish to write down their WCG experiences and send them to Ms. Denzler should write to: Brenda Denzler, 917 S. Walnut, Newton, KS 67114.

Robert Williams: The Shofar

The Shofar newsletter, put out by Robert C. Williams, has a new address. It is: P.O. Box 7399, Phoenix, AZ 85011. Mr. Williams has been extremely cooperative with the Report over the last few years, and we wish to publicly express our thanks to him for his kind help in covering the Armstrong divorce case in Tucson.

By the way, in his May 1984 issue of The Shofar, Williams correctly pointed out that Ambassador Report does not attack the theology of the WCG. While it is true that we have, over the years, pointed out a number of anomalies within the WCG's dogma structure, we really have not made it a goal to "attack" the center core doctrines taught by HWA. We hope readers realize, however, that we do not mean to imply HWA's teachings are without flaw! It is beyond our means to turn the AR into a true theological journal. Nevertheless, it should be obvious by all the addresses for religious groups and publications run in the Report that we encourage our readers to very carefully reexamine the teachings of HWA. Those who do will be in for quite a few surprises.

All too often we hear of AR readers who say: "OK, so you proved that the church's leadership is guilty of hypocrisy, adultery, perversions, incest, perjury, idolatry, embezzlement, drunkenness, fraud, lying, stealing, vanity, intimidation, spying, and a few other things. So what? We're still in God's church because we have God's truth." To such individuals we can only say a la Joan Rivers, "Oh grow up!" Does a good tree produce evil fruit?

In this paper long-time anti-WCG activist Emmett Hctor forcefully puts forward the theory that HWA is a classic-case psychopath. Also available from Hctor is a 10-page paper entitled "Ten Years After Armstrongism: A Philosophy Not for Everyone." In this paper, available for $2, Hctor details his exodus out of, not only the WCG, but out of all Christianity and tells why he has now embraced the teachings of Frederick Nietzsche and Allan Watts.

The Religious Empire, by Dr. Martin A. Larson and Rev. C. Stanley Lowell: This book came out in 1976, but is still very valuable to those desiring to understand the relationship between church and state in the United States. The book lists for $10, but can be obtained for $6 if ordered directly from: Dr. Martin A. Larson, P.O. Box 15059, Phoenix, AZ 85060. Of particular interest to us was the authors' description of "corporation sole" (p. 25), since Herbert Armstrong now runs the WCG through a corporation sole:

"In nearly half of the states, what is known as a Corporation Sole is a legal entity, which, though never mentioned in the Internal Revenue Code, is a reality of great importance. As such, a bishop, acting as if he were the embodiment of his corporation - and even the pastor of a parish church - is permitted to hold in his own name unlimited assets in the form of real estate, cash, stocks, bonds, mortgages, etc. A special feature of this arrangement is that, since each successor to the office is invested automatically with all those riches, no deeds or other instruments are necessary to effect a transfer of ownership.

"What the bishop does with this property, especially the revenue, no one except himself is in a position to know. He is not required to make any report to the priests under him, to the laymen in his diocese, to his fellow-bishops, or to any legal authority. If he actually owns all these worldly goods, he may be a billionaire; if he does not, it must be substantively owned by a superior such as the Vatican or the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. The laymen who have contributed everything have neither any ownership in, nor control over, this vast accumulation of material wealth."

Have you had any requests on behalf of the blind or sight-impaired for Ambassador Report on tape? If no such service exists and the number of requests is not too great, I would be willing to put Ambassador Report on cassette and distribute copies to those in need on an "at cost" basis.

A Letter From Gary Alexander

I received your highly informative April edition today, and I thank you for making a fair and unbiased report on my recent 30-day prison sentence. The author captured a very important lesson from all this: the importance of thinking for oneself and doing independent homework before running after another "cause. " His reference to my current employer, Jim Blanchard, as a "right-wing gold bug " was an implication that I may be making the same mistake again. I don't think so, but I'll let that pass.

The major point which I would like to make, and I feel your author missed, is that Liberty Ministries (LMI) was practicing on a small-potatoes, amateurish level what Herbert W. Armstrong has practiced on a massive level for more than 50 years: indulging private tastes under the mask of church funds. In fact, your April edition gave 6 pages of court testimony, partly to that effect, that Herbert wrote $50,000 checks "to himself. " That's basically what some of the LMI people did, only with $500 instead. We were taught to write checks to cash and call them "church expenses" on the memo portion of the check. You have proven that Herbert Armstrong did the same thing, but in the millions. How else can you account for his lifestyle on a $200,000 salary?

There are many sub-points to make from this experience. Herbert has not served one hour in prison, and probably never will. Doug Taylor [former WCG minister] and I each served 30 days of a one-year sentence, with 3-years probation. We were amateurish, could not afford Herbert's "fancy Beverly Hills lawyers" (to use Mr Ettinger's colorful terms) to cover our tracks, and did not have the "appearance of religion" - you know, fleecing the public, begging for money, preaching hell-fire to believers while living a heavenly lifestyle, misquoting scriptures. We only held on to our own money (not begging for money of the 'poor sheep')... illegally to be sure, but still more ethical than taking other people's money.

Note from my enclosed April edition of "AMEN" (not a religious newsletter, folks, but an acronym for Alexander's Monthly Economic Newsletter) that I have assembled my pre-prison and post-prison diary into a 50-page single-spaced document which is available for the cost of duplication and postage (I'm a non-profit and non-prophet organization), at $6, from Box 1727, Metairie, LA 70001. I believe the prison experience was the most memorable event of my life, even eclipsing "The Ambassador Experience" we all shared. (Heck, I'll send the diary for free to any of my old college friends.)

In it, I make some discoveries about myself which are at odds with your author's analysis, i.e., I don't regret the crime I committed, don't regret falling under the influence of powerful "mentors" like the Armstrongs or the Williamses, cherishing greatly the lessons which could only be learned through the crucible of those precise experiences. Libertarianism teaches "buyer beware" on the economic and social level and I believe it applies to the philosophical and religious level too. I can't blame HWA or TKW for misleading me, when I was the "buyer" of their package of lies. Ambassador Report is a much-needed "consumer's advocate" for past, present, and future sheep, but I hope you don't believe the "truth shall set them free," when so few of us were really interested in the truth about The Truth while we were in it. And, for me anyway, it took a few more aborted Crusades before I outgrew the need for a Big Daddy to dispense truth.

He is again a member of the Florida State Pistol Team and attended the National Matches the past two years. He was with the team when they won the Nationals in 1965, the same year he entered the WCG. While Mr. Smyda is glad to be out of the WCG, he is saddened that his ex-wife and four children are still members and will not communicate with him.

Andrew Voth, AC Pasadena class of 1970 and former instructor at Ambassador and Imperial Schools, is now Cultural Arts Supervisor for the city of Oxnard, California. He wrote us: "My fourteen years at AC serve me well in the political spectrum of municipal and county government - the advanced guerrilla techniques learned there catch opponents every time! At least one can reason with them in a logical manner - unlike attempting to communicate with someone such as, say, Raymond McSnare - or whateverhisnamewas."

Gary Murphy, AC Pasadena class of 1973 and former instructor at Imperial Schools, is now principal of Inspiration Addition School in Miami, Arizona, where he lives with his wife Norma and two sons. Kathy Kruger, AC Pasadena 1970, and Pat Boehnhard, AC Pasadena 1971, wrote us a few weeks ago. Kathy moved to Minneapolis in 1974 with her two daughters, Shawna and Bethany, studied art for a time, completed a degree in Human Services, and now earns a living doing technical drawings. Pat was planning to do graduate work in women's studies until the university she applied to decided to check AC's credentials. She went to cheffing school instead and now manages the kitchen of "the biggest, richest, smartest, and most-spoiled sorority at the University of Minnesota." Pat and Kathy said they'd love to hear from old friends. They can be reached by writing to: 3844 Blaisdell S., Minneapolis, MN 55409.

Bill Moore, AC Bricket Wood class of 1969, wrote us the following:

"I wish you would mention in the AR that 'Innovative Living,' which I wrote to you about a couple of years ago, is a potential TV series, not a church. I keep getting letters from people asking if we keep the Sabbath, holy days, etc. I am not in the religion business...."

"My family and I are getting along fine. We finally - after four years - feel free of the mental shackles of the WCG. My family is well adjusted, the kids are doing wonderful in school, and we feel a real part of the community. I have numerous business and personal contacts throughout Omaha. I was even able to coproduce and host this past winter a 12-episode TV series on personal money management called "The Subject Is Money" and cable-cast to over 79,000 households in the Omaha area. A pilot children's television series which I created and co-wrote with a writer from Hollywood has been shot, and the producer will be talking to the networks about it next month. (Keep your fingers crossed, but don't hold your breath - right?) Disney and Nicklelodeon have already called back to say they want to see the half-hour pilot. So, things are really looking up for us out here in far away Omaha."

Just got your April edition and thought that at long last I would sit down and write the letter I've been meaning to write for the last few years. I graduated from AC in 1973, after serving as Portfolio editor and Plain Truth staff writer. I basically grew up in WCG, a more-or-less typical "Church kid." I'm not too sure what's typical about that kind of upbringing, but that's another story.

I first became disillusioned with Worldwide when I sat in the Auditorium as a student in January 1972 and listened to various ministers including HWA lie about their promises of the end of the work/world in '72. (It only took me another 7 years to split. I'm a slow learner.) I left Pasadena for a job with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D. C., in July 1973. In October 1973 Chris Heap and I were married in Pasadena. We now have two daughters, Erin (4) and Heather (8 mo.).

In 1976 we moved to Portland, Oregon, where I went to work as a public information officer with the U.S. Forest Service. In 1979 we were expelled from WCG by the infamous Dan Fricke over a dispute involving his right to determine who could sit at our dinner table. YOU coordinators aren't supposed to backtalk pastors, but, what the heck, I always was a slow learner. I have to say, throwing us out was the biggest and possibly only favor WCG ever did for us. But we should be grateful for the good, no matter where it's found.

In 1980 we moved to Durango, Colorado, where I took my present job as public information officer for the San Juan National Forest. Life (and success) is not only possible, but much sweeter, after WCG.

This brief travelogue is presented in the hope that any of our friends might get in touch with us if they live in or pass through this area. My basic philosophy now is that "Religion is slavery: Christianity is freedom." Chris is active in Foursquare Gospel Church, a moderately charismatic and highly Christian group that others might want to investigate if they are seeking a group of believers without conditions.

Please print our name and address - we'd love to see some of our old friends.

*-Dennis (& Chris) Neill 2935 W. Third Ave.
Durango, CO 81301*

Ambassador Report has really helped me and so many others to recognize that it is HWA and his gang that are "nuts" - not us.

I was recently forced out of the WCG after 12 years of loyalty and service, some in ministerial capacities. In my final discussion with the local pastor I asked him, "If you tell me white is black and black is white, do I have to believe it in order to stay in this church?" He replied without hesitation, "Yes!" He also accused me of disbelieving that the WCG was the only Work of God on earth today. I confessed to that accusation and then handed him my letter of resignation.

I hope all of us who have had the WCG experience can overlook the bitter parts and treasure the good times and friendships we have enjoyed. There has been good in many cases. But the utopian Wonderful World Tomorrow will never exist inside the decadent and deceptive organizations of the world today.

-Steve Ross (class of '76), Oregon

Starting at about 17½ I was an Armstrong slave for over 11 long years. I am now in psychotherapy partly as a result of the cult's influence. I had some personal problems before, but Armstrong's group only made them a good deal worse.

-Texas

I came out of it in 1968, but only because I was not happy and I did not come across a single happy person at any time. The minister was cold and uncaring and was always bawling someone out from the pulpit, so you know the place was full of tattletales. It got so I was afraid to go to church at all for fear I would say or do the wrong thing. I also got fed up with being bugged all the time by the crises.

-West Virginia

I understand you have another issue out updating Herbert's long saga of empty visions and ghastly revelations, plus the latest on his divorce. Imagine an Apostle getting a divorce. I wouldn't know an Apostle if I saw him on the street, but it should be interesting reading about one getting divorced. I would be much pleased if you could send me a copy.

How great it feels to no longer be a slave to this unbelievable farce. It is probably one of the worse predicaments that could befall a human being. The hapless victim is cleverly inducted into something that has nothing to do with how things really are. He becomes a member with the status of something like a mindless worker bee. Before long the member cannot distinguish friend from foe, something intelligent from something stupid - and indeed will do the silliest of things on command from the manipulator. The member will fanatically adhere to the charlatan and his lie. A fact means nothing to a member victim because he has lost his imagination and logic.

I can say these things because I was a former member, which gives me some experience along with many years observation of other victims.

-West Virginia

Although I can't give out any names, there's at least one farmer in this area who is having a dickens of a time getting back the farm which he signed over the "them." At that time, they were prophesying an end to all things and advised people to sign over property, etc. to the church. Too bad people didn't have the sense to know that if "the end" was at hand, why should "they" want all that property?

-North Dakota

I am a widow on social security in low-cost housing, but I gave my life and blood and heart and tears to that organization - unbelievable! What's left of my life is nothing but sorrow, and nothing will ever be the same.

-Oregon

I am a victim of systemic lupus, which I had for several years while in the Worldwide Church. It was not diagnosed until a serious attack hit me, and I could not get up from my bed. I went through a terrible trauma in the Worldwide Church, as I was torn between the need for medical attention and the fear of losing my salvation if I obtained it. As a result of Mr. Armstrong's false teaching forbidding members to obtain help from doctors, hospitals, or medications many died. I am now suffering from crippled hands, joints fused in toes, 40 percent kidney function, a heart murmur, heart-valve damage, an ulcer, and numerous other effects caused by the lupus. Many of these problems could have been avoided if I had sought medical assistance at the onset of the illness.

I left the Worldwide Church around 1972 as a direct result of the trauma I was put through in the aftermath of a hospitalization which was brought about when my fellow office workers became concerned when I called in that I was ill and after three weeks heard nothing more from me. They found me in a coma and rushed me to the hospital when the systemic lupus was diagnosed.

The life expectancy of this illness at that time was eight years. The doctors who handled my case at the hospital told my office worker friends that it would be a miracle if I lived through the coming weekend. My blood count had dropped so low that they could not find a pulse, so they ordered blood transfusions immediately: but my veins had begun collapsing, and they could not find one to take the blood. I remember waking up and seeing the doctor and two nurses over me very much concerned about the situation. The doctor found a place in my leg and the vein held up and it was very close, but blood started flowing through my body again in a surge of warmth I shall never forget. It was life coming into me. I found out later that some of my office worker friends had donated the blood that kept me alive! But believe it or not, I still clung to the idea these were Satan's agents, although my "faith" in Armstrong's teachings had almost cost me my life.

In the meantime my fellow workers had told the doctor that I belonged to a church where they didn't go to the doctor for treatment, take medicine, etc. and that's why they found me near death. Do you know that so-called agent of Satan really cared whether I lived or died! He took time out of his busy schedule to come into my room when I had gained some strength to tell me he thought he knew why I was near death. He talked to me about my beliefs and told me he believed in God too: but that God did not intend for me to lie down on a bed, receive no care, and just quietly die to please him. He said God loved and cared about people, and he did not want to see me stay in a church listening to teachings that would "kill me." At first I rejected what he said, thinking he was an instrument of Satan trying to cause me to question Mr. Armstrong and the church doctrine. I was so brainwashed!

It has since been revealed that Mr. Armstrong himself has been seen seeing doctors for his heart condition. He went to a clinic in [Tucson] for [treatments] and a picture was taken of him while leaving said clinic, which I have seen. He takes medication regularly and has had nurses and doctors in attendance at his home after his heart attack.

Well, I began to think about what the doctor had said to me and what my fellow office workers had done for me. I realized those people and my doctor really cared about what happened to me. Over the prior two years I had experienced much sickness and didn't know what was wrong with me and was afraid to go to a doctor for fear of losing my salvation. I was anointed numerous times by the ministers, but only grew worse. I was told by them that I must be sinning or I must be in a bad attitude. My fellow church members would ask me how I was and I was told not to lie by all the sermons I had heard, so I would say I was weak and tired and did not feel well. Several ladies were quick to tell me it was all in my head and that people did not want to hear about all my problems and that I should say I feel fine. In fact, many of those ladies - when I returned to church after being in the hospital near death - came up to me and began to berate me for having blood transfusions. They didn't even care that I had gone through the near-death trauma as well as mental and spiritual anguish, and God had granted me life. I began to balance out the attitudes of my fellow office workers and the doctor. The office workers, I found out later, had given the blood that revived me. Do you know what I found? The love of God! That love was in the doctor and the fellow office workers, but it was not to be found in the Worldwide Church. God had at last freed me from the bondage of that cult.

May God have mercy on those poor deceived people still in that organization! They do not know what manner of man they are serving. He has proven himself over and over to be liar, a false prophet, a hypocrite and an instrument of Satan used to deceive and destroy trusting people who were not well-grounded in the scriptures.

-California

I shudder to think what it is going to do mentally and emotionally to my husband when this [church] falls. He is so dedicated and so sold that at this point he would die for HWA! The WCG members have sold their souls to the devil - at times I feel like this after 32 years married to a man who needs this. Ask any ex-member, any outside spouse, any parent with a child involved, and their "gut" feelings will all be the same: "pure helplessness" to the situation. We want to do something, but what? We want to tell others, but when we do it sounds so bizarre that they look at you like you are going off the deep end. And then we hear this statement "He is such a good nice person; let him alone, he's not hurting anything or anyone." That statement makes me "throw up." I agree he is a good and nice person, or I would not have married him. But not hurting anyone or anything? Wrong!

It does hurt families, spouses, friends, relationships, etc. It separates and isolates in all of the above areas. It does hurt at birthdays, Christmas, and even on weekends. Friends become church members only, all saying the same phrases, using the same choice words, and having the same thought patterns. It's like associating with robots. When I drop my husband off for church service on Saturdays, the men all seem to be cut out of the same mold: dark suit, white shirt, tie, and vest, and hanging from their right hand is the same design of briefcase. Young men, old men, all the same. HWA sure has found a way with people. Before my husband joined the cult, he was very casual and relaxed in everything he did. Now it's not "Hi," it's "Good evening!" All actions and conversation are very formal. The looks are the same, but the precious personality and fun-loving fellow are gone.

-Minnesota

Editor: Many people who have seen the sci-fi movie "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers" (both 1956 and 1978 versions) have commented on how that movie seems to symbolically portray the very thing you've mentioned - the loss of personality and free agency in individuals who join the WCG and certain other movements. Unfortunately, just like the movie's characters whose minds were taken over by the "pods," once an individual gets "locked into" the Armstrong ideology, there is very little that can be done to help them escape.

Nevertheless, the situation is not hopeless. In recent months we have been amazed at how many long-time WCG members have written to us asking for issues of the Report. It seems that HWA's divorce and the WCG's attempt at covering up the details have made many question their church's teachings and leadership.

Your ministry is one of warning and crying aloud about the evils of the WCG. We will soon make an effect on people. So hang in there.

-Pennsylvania

Please don't quit your efforts until HWA is in hell (the grave). Your work is most important in the religious community of the U.S., and more. You have dogged the trail of the biggest cultist in the world, and you have done it with style and grace.

We are doing all we can to help those in need of the truth about Herbert Armstrong and his movement. If you feel we are performing a worthwhile service, please make an effort to support Ambassador Report. We don't ask our readers to send us their tithes and offerings or to "sacrifice for the Work." But, the fact is, if we are to continue helping those hurt by Armstrongism, we need your help.

Our warmest thanks to those of you who really do care.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR29 October 1984

Leona McNair Awarded $1.26 Million

It took five years of exhausting pre-trial discovery, mountainous paperwork and endless legal maneuvering followed by a grueling seven-week trial. But in the end, it was all worth it for Leona McNair. On August 23, a Pasadena, California, jury awarded her $1,260,000 in her libel and slander suit against the Worldwide Church of God.

The trial was a complicated one with testimony that was often contradictory. Yet the jury was intensely attentive throughout, and in the end, the truth became evident to all.

Leona McNair joined the Worldwide (then Radio) Church of God in 1954. A year later she married the man who had baptized her - evangelist Raymond McNair. Court testimony (including Raymond McNair's) revealed that she had been a faithful, obedient wife and devoted mother. While the marriage was not without stresses, Leona attempted to stifle all critical thoughts until 1973. That year Raymond, who had been in charge of the church's operations in Britain, was transferred back to the United States to assume a position at the church's Ambassador College headquarters in Pasadena. What the McNairs discovered when they arrived was a church headquarters fraught with doctrinal divisions, political infighting, and sex scandals.

To all of this, Raymond turned a blind eye, remaining faithful to his mentor, church founder Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA). Leona's patience with the church's leadership, however, rapidly waned. Her high intelligence (Dr. McKelligott would later testify that her 143 IQ is equaled by only three in a thousand) and strong religious values conflicted with the role she was expected to play. She told Raymond she could no longer continue to support him in what she viewed as the perpetration of a giant fraud. She stopped attending Worldwide Church of God (WCG) services in 1974 and occasionally attended lectures given by such ex-WCG ministers as Dr. Ernest L. Martin.

When the trial ended, Judge Olson told the jury they had renewed his faith in the jury system.

Leona's disillusionment with Herbert Armstrong and her desire for religious freedom were intolerable to Raymond, and he made his feelings known. According to testimony by Leona, in 1975 her husband told her, "I am going to crush you until you are totally dependent on me!" (In court Raymond denied ever making this threat. However, third parties have confirmed hearing Raymond say the equivalent.) Raymond cut Leona off from access to their joint bank accounts, badgered her into giving back jewelry he had given her and then sold them, refused to give her adequate money for groceries, and moved into separate sleeping quarters. Leona also soon began to notice that many WCG friends would no longer have anything to do with her.

Communication between Leona and Raymond became increasingly strained. But in spite of this, Leona - concerned for the welfare of her children - put aside all thought of divorce or separation. Raymond, on the other hand, had different ideas. According to Leona's court testimony, and corroborated by her daughter, on a number of occasions Raymond took her to the door, opened it and yelled, "You're not paying the bills here. Get out!" The reason for this behavior was inexplicable to Leona until later when she realized that, although the WCG had for four decades prohibited all divorce, around 1974 church leaders began to discuss the possibility of allowing divorce for members deserted by nonmembers. Leona's suspicions were confirmed when Mrs. Nancy Tate, one of her close friends, told her how the wife of one WCG evangelist had confided, "If we could just get Leona to leave the house, we could get her on desertion." Before long, Raymond made his intentions perfectly clear. He flat out told her he would divorce her when the time was right.

The relationship was now a traumatic one, but Leona still had no intention of deserting her family. Nor was she lingering on for (what Allan Browne would later claim in court) a "free ride." She started attending college again in 1974 to reestablish her nursing credentials. And when those were obtained in 1975 she found work at a local hospital. But then, a few weeks later in June, Raymond McNair did something no WCG evangelist had ever done. He filed for divorce.

With the exception of a handful of top leaders of the church, almost the entire WCG ministry was absolutely shocked. For decades, the church had taught that divorce was a great evil. The church's official marriage ceremony even stated explicitly that any divorce granted by the governments of man is "null and void" before God. Yet here was a prominent, high-ranking minister - known to have required dozens of divorced and remarried individuals to separate and live celibate or face excommunication - who was divorcing his wife of 21 years. Even more shocking to many was the fact that it was being done with the approval (and many felt, encouragement) of Pastor General Herbert Armstrong!

The divorce became final by September 1976. Not long afterward, Raymond remarried; other Worldwide ministers, too, got divorces and remarried; and Herbert Armstrong, himself, married a divorcee. Within a few years, divorce became an accepted practice in the Armstrong church.

In the meantime, Leona remained unmarried and pursued her nursing career. Her daughter Ruth drifted away from Worldwide soon after Leona did. But her son Bruce remained in Worldwide. And her son Joe - after living with his mother for two years after the divorce - went to Ambassador College in 1979 and is now a church member and employee.

After her divorce Leona led a quiet life in Pasadena. But underneath the reserved exterior was a woman deeply hurt by the "Ambassador experience." Perhaps for that reason - and because she still had friends and relatives in the WCG - she continued to follow the antics of the Armstrong church, especially through the pages of Ambassador Report. The years of subservience to the Armstrong patriarchy and later the shunning by many friends and relatives in the WCG had taken their toll. But at least she was free of the Armstrong organization's oppressions. Or so she thought, until one day in June 1979 when someone showed her the June 25, 1979 issue of the Pastor's Report, an official WCG publication. It contained an article by Roderick C. Meredith, then the director of the WCG ministry. In it, he castigated Leona as having been the cause of the McNair marriage breakup three years earlier. In an attempt at justifying Raymond McNair's 1976 divorce and subsequent remarriage, Meredith described Leona as being a family deserter:

"A classic example of this [marital desertion] would be Mr. Raymond McNair's situation. His wife refused to be a wife to him for over two years - to sleep with him, cook for him, or even civilly communicate with him in a decent manner. Rather, she had left God's Church and was actually FIGHTING God's Church and Mr. McNair, turning his children against him and literally cursing him to his face. Finally, upon advice of Mr. Armstrong and Ted Armstrong, he was finally forced to make legal the already existing FACT that she had deserted him and was no longer his wife in any way whatsoever."

Unknown to Leona then, but later discovered, was the fact that six months earlier Meredith had also made similar statements in public. In early January of 1979 the state of California had brought a civil suit against the leaders of the WCG. HWA, distrusting the "liberal" wing of the church, put right-winger Meredith in charge of the WCG's entire ministry. At an emergency ministerial conference held in Tucson, Arizona, it was announced that such "liberal" practices as voting in elections and keeping birthdays would again be taboo in the church. Then, on the last day of the conference, Meredith, for some reason, felt it necessary to spend five minutes attacking Leona before 1,000 WCG ministers and wives. In court, a tape recording would reveal how Meredith, in strident tones had exclaimed:

Jury foreman Ignacio Gracia: "Here we won't condone these things.... They were driving a knife in her heart."

"...his [Raymond's] first wife [Leona] had left the Church and was virtually cursing him, cursing Mr. Armstrong, with curse words, spitting literally in people's faces and as hateful as a human being could be. And God does tell us and the whole Church of God decided long before this ever came up with Mr. McNair back in I Corinthians 7:15, 'But if the unbelieving depart' - and I tell you before God and Christ, she sure departed. I mean she departed so far that she is one of the major enemies of God's Church in Southern California and remains so to this day and has been working actively and ferociously with the Ambassador Review. [She] tried to call me personally and get me to give them an interview here a year or so ago which I would not do. And everyone else that attends their meetings, attended Dr. Martin's meetings, fighting us, and fighting us actively. And 'if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage' ...and we've come to realize that what God has bound he can unbind. That's part of our understanding on divorce and remarriage which the whole Church came to back in 1974. And so after about two solid years of living without a wife and a virtual hell on earth Mr. McNair was encouraged by Mr. Armstrong and by Garner Ted Armstrong, and this is not a matter of a secret because he told me that he'd done that with Raymond and he told others - Ted Armstrong, that is, and Mr. Armstrong. Both encouraged Raymond to put her away and divorce her since she was just simply wanting to keep him on the string and get a free ride while she cursed him and would not have anything to do with him. There was not even a way of saying hello in a friendly way, living in opposite ends of the house and an armed truce or an armed hell, and the way to do [it] was to put her away and do what I Corinthians 7:15 said on the advice of the two top men in God's work. And so he had done that after about a year and a half, or whatever, and finally, also, several months later, married his present wife. And he is not married to anyone else but his present wife according to the understanding God's Church came to back in 1974. Thank you very much."

Former WCG minister Richard Gipe confirmed in court that some of these comments were interpreted by ministers to mean that Leona was "demon possessed." Seeing the Meredith comments about her in the Pastor's Report proved to be a crushing experience to Leona. Realizing that Meredith's poisonous untruths would be read by many hundreds of her long-time friends, and possibly her sons, she felt devastated.

Known to very few was the fact that her many years of Armstrong-church oppression had, in the past, resulted in numerous psychological problems - fear of heights, traffic, and closed spaces - as well as physical ailments. After her divorce from Raymond and separation from the WCG, her mental and physical condition improved greatly. But after reading the Meredith attack on her in June of 1979, the old phobias and ailments quickly reappeared - and with much greater severity. She sought medical treatment.

Wisely, she also sought legal advice. (Dr. Gottlieb would later testify in court how, from the standpoint of psychological therapy, this was one of the best things she could have done.) Within days, Pasadena lawyer Judith Taylor filed a multi-million dollar defamation suit on her behalf. Later, Pasadena attorney John T. Tate Jr. took over the case. But by 1981, Tate, who was bombarded with expenses and legal paper from Armstrong's lawyers, logically decided to obtain help from a law firm with greater financial resources. The Los Angeles law firm of Greene, O'Reilly, Broillet, Paul, Simon, McMillan, Wheeler, & Rosenberg - a successful partnership with an established record, especially in the area of product liability - was "associated in" on the case. The firm, which has a reputation for aggressively representing the "little guy" against big corporations, assigned the brunt of the workload to one of their newer associates, Antony Stuart, a 30-year-old graduate of Loyola Law School.

Stuart's task was formidable. Worldwide, as usual, spared no expense in fighting the opposition. Named as defendants in the suit were evangelist Roderick C. Meredith, his brother-in-law evangelist Raymond McNair, and the Worldwide Church of God. Lawyers representing the church were WCG attorney Ralph Helge and Los Angeles attorney Bruce Armstrong (no relation to the WCG Armstrongs). Representing Meredith and McNair was Beverly Hills lawyer Allan Browne, who turned out to be the chief spokesman for the defense.

The Trial Begins

After more than two weeks selecting the seven man, five woman jury, opening statements began on July 18. Stuart carefully outlined his position, telling the jury that in 1979 the Worldwide Church was in a crisis and that his client was victimized as an "example to the rest of the church that dissidents were not going to be tolerated." Six months later, Stuart said, Meredith again attacked her, this time in print in the church's Pastor's Report.

Allan Browne, in his opening statement, defended the Meredith diatribes claiming they had been necessary to instruct the WCG's ministry on the changes in the WCG's divorce policies and that Meredith's statements could not possibly have caused the plaintiff any problems. Browne characterized Leona as a woman who "could not accept the step down from the position of first lady of Europe." (Long-time WCG members should, of course, know what nonsense this is, as the "first lady" title was never applied to any woman in the church with the exception of HWA's ex-wife Ramona, whom HWA used to call the "first lady of the church.") Of the McNair marriage, Browne said, "She berated [Raymond] and called him spineless." According to Browne, the Meredith statements about Leona were insulting, but not slanderous - the self-contradiction of which was evident to all, including the Pasadena Star-News, whose article on the trial the next day (July 20) was headlined "Not Slanderous?"

The WCG could not claim the defamatory statements had not been made. Leona had a copy of the Pastor's Report and a tape recording of Meredith's January 1979 speech. Instead, the defense took the position that the statements were true, privileged, and made without malice or reckless disregard of the truth. In attempting to buttress their claims, the WCG lawyers called the following witnesses: WCG ministers Rod Meredith, Raymond McNair, Dennis Luker, Ron Kelly, Ron Laughland, Vernon Hargrove, and Les McColm; Meredith's sons, Jim and Mike; church employees Joe McNair, Lee Pettijohn, Ron Nelson and Charles Buschmann; church members Anne Elliott, Joyce Howe, Marie Docken and Alan Maggio; and physician Creighton Horton. (With the exception of Dr. Horton, all were either on the church's payroll or had some close association with the WCG.)

Contradictions

The over four weeks of testimony produced an astonishing number of contradictions. For instance, Robert Bosch testified how WCG minister Les McColm had once told him Dr. Ernest Martin was put out of the WCG for being "caught in bed" with Leona McNair. (Both Leona McNair and Ernest Martin flatly deny this.) But on the witness stand, McColm claimed he never made this statement.

Leona's daughter, Ruth McNair-Knasin, saddened to have to appear as a witness in the battle between her parents, told the court that, while she loved her father, it was simply not true that her mother cursed or spat or behaved in a non-Christian manner. She said Leona had been a very loving and devoted mother. Yet, when Leona's son Joe McNair - now a WCG employee - took the stand, the jury heard a totally different story. Joe not only painted Leona as having been a negligent parent and family deserter, he fully supported the statements made by Meredith.

To hear her son Joe attack her so vehemently in court - and ironically, on what was her birthday - was heartbreaking for Leona. Back on the stand, however, she lamented his new state of mind, saying Joe had never spoken to her in that manner before. She was very concerned for him and was aware of the high incidence of mental illness in the Worldwide Church. What the jury saw and heard was just "not the real Joe." She was concerned that he had "snapped." Then, over objections by lawyer Browne, she produced letters written by both her sons, thanking her for the love and concern she had always shown and for providing so well for them over the years.

One of the hopes of the defense seemed to be to show that the Pastor's Report was sent exclusively to ministers in the church. But former Ambassador College physical education instructor Bill Damm testified how, along with other AC instructors, he too had received the Pastor's Report. During a deposition Damm was asked by church lawyers if the title Pastor's Report didn't imply that that publication was intended only for pastors. But Damm pointed out how by that reasoning the Pastor General's Report (the current title of the Pastor's Report) would logically be intended only for the Pastor General. He was also asked if it wasn't true that during the course of his employment at Ambassador College he may have taught church doctrines. No, he told them, it never came up in his swimming classes. Damm told us he thought the attempt to turn his swimming instructor position into that of minister was a little silly. If he had been a minister, he told us, he should have been receiving more pay, second-title assistance, a leased car, and a housing allowance. "But who knows," he told us kiddingly, "maybe they owe me some money."

One of the contentions of the defendants was that Meredith's 1979 conference comments on Leona had been made only to the ministers and wives in Tucson and that the conference that day had not been "piped" in to Pasadena as had the Tucson proceedings earlier in the week. Leona was convinced, however, that the entire conference - including the attack on her - had been broadcast to the church members assembled in Pasadena for the so-called "sit ins" of January 1979. To prove his contention, Browne called to the stand Alan Maggio, a WCG member who had been present for all the "piped-in" messages heard during the "sit in" period (see our March, 1979 issue).

Maggio testified he had not heard anything at that time about the McNair divorce, and if he had he would have noted it in his notebook. When Stuart, on cross examination, discovered that Maggio just happened to bring his church notebook with him to court, Stuart asked if he could look through it. Maggio agreed to the request saying, "I have nothing to hide." Then Browne chimed in, "We have nothing to hide." The massive notebook was brought forward and with Browne and Maggio looking over his shoulder, Stuart turned to the pages on the conference. There in front of Stuart were Maggio's handwritten notes on the subject of divorce and remarriage. When Stuart started to read the notes aloud, Browne objected and Stuart replied, "Mr. Browne, I thought you had nothing to hide!" With the entire courtroom alive with giggles, Browne, as usual, asked for a side-bar (out of ear-shot of the jury) conference with the judge.

Ambassador Report editor John Trechak testified how Leona had been a friend for many years and how she had, on occasion, financially assisted the publication. However, contrary to what the WCG was claiming, she was never one of its publishers, editors or writers. Earlier during Trechak's two depositions, church lawyers attempted to delve into such unrelated matters as who Ambassador Report's sources were. But Trechak, quoting sections of the Constitution of the state of California, declined to provide that information.

During the trial, Browne produced photographs of what he claimed was a 1979 anti-WCG "demonstration" at headquarters in Pasadena. Leona was in the photographs. However, jurors would later notice that she was not carrying a sign or even saying anything. She was simply standing on the sidewalk listening to what was actually a news conference given by certain WCG members sympathetic to the state of California's 1979 lawsuit against the church's top leaders.

Another contradiction during the trial concerned the WCG practices of disfellowshipping and marking. Raymond McNair claimed that "marking" simply meant "notification" that a member had been disfellowshipped. Former WCG minister David Robinson, however, characterized "marking" as being analogous to "branding" - an accurate description of the WCG teaching some would now apparently prefer to forget. In fact, there was much that Raymond McNair could not remember. Said one observer, "I've never heard anyone with a more selective memory."

Meredith's Counseling

Meredith's testimony, less rambling than Raymond McNair's - but equally self-justifying - was particularly remarkable in its portrayal of the WCG as one big happy family. Meredith went to some length in describing the close friendship that had supposedly once existed between the McNairs and himself. But Ruth McNair-Knasin, when asked about the matter, said she didn't believe true friendship ever really existed between Meredith and her father. She described their relationship as one that would quickly evaporate were it perceived as getting in the way of "the Work." (In case some WCG member doubts the accuracy of her assessment, just ask yourself: When was the last time Raymond or Rod said a kind word to, or a kind word about, their old "friends" Raymond Cole, Charles Hunting, C. Wayne Cole, Ernest Martin, Al Portune, Ron Dart, Garner Ted Armstrong, or the other 200-plus ministers who've left Worldwide since 1974?)

The WCG may be one big happy family to Meredith, but Leona on the stand recalled how one evening in 1960 Raymond let Meredith into their home and announced, to her astonishment, that he had been invited in to "counsel" her. What followed, according to Leona, was four-and-one-half hours of railing accusation, authoritative preaching, sex-life interrogation, and high-decibel, humiliating verbal abuse from Meredith. Her problem? She was not a submissive enough wife and two ministers (unnamed) had found fault with her. She needed to obey his dictates because he (Meredith) was "God's number three man on earth" and would very likely remain in authority over her for all eternity! She needed to learn true submission! (Those who have seen Bryon Forbes' movie "The Stepford Wives" - referred to by Ruth McNair-Knasin in her testimony - will understand what Meredith was apparently aiming at.)

The 4½ hours of harangue left Leona - then 2½ months pregnant - in utter shock. She began shaking and hyperventilating. While Raymond slept well that night, she sobbed all night. The next morning found her still trembling. According to her court testimony, it was then that her nervous disorders began. In court Raymond claimed that Leona never had any emotional problems during their years in England. But a letter he wrote to her in 1975 specifically referred to her "emotional hangups." And Ruth testified how around 1970 her father had asked for her support in the event that he would find it necessary to have her mother committed.

On the stand, Meredith gave a very different picture of what happened. He described the 4½-hour session as nothing more than a friendly discussion lasting about an hour or so. Meredith's benevolent persona, however, stands in stark contrast to his reputation as a psychologically intimidating and harsh authoritarian in the performance of ministerial duties.

On the witness stand, former WCG minister Robert Hoops (now a minister with the Church of God, International) described Meredith's past directorship of the WCG as extremely oppressive. Even sabbaticals, on which WCG ministers were brought to Pasadena for a period of refresher training, were harrowing due to the interrogations ministers were subjected to by headquarters superiors.

During a deposition and later with us privately, Hoops described how, when Meredith once counseled his wife, Meredith made such insensitive and unwarranted accusations against him that his wife cried for a week. When he found out later what had been said about him, he became so depressed he was almost suicidal. Said Hoops, "When you have really committed your life to the church and believe the ministry represents God, a harsh assessment of you by a superior can literally create severe emotional trauma." On the stand, Hoops was asked by Stuart for his opinion of Meredith. But Judge Olson disallowed the question. Later, however, Hoops was quite candid with us about his assessment of Meredith's character.

"Meredith is a liar," said Hoops. "But that isn't surprising when you consider how big a liar he works for." Sadly, Hoops' opinion of Meredith is shared by many ministers who served under him in years past.

Another former WCG minister told us that after a Meredith "counseling" session with his wife, she became so totally depressed he emphatically ordered her never to discuss anything privately with Meredith again. He explained, "Rod has the ability to somehow dig into a person's mind in such a way as to make them feel utterly guilt ridden and despondent. He seems to revel in this strange power to bring someone down psychologically." The same man also told us how once on a walk with Meredith, Roderick turned to him and said, "You may not realize it, but in all the universe, I'm number five, and you're number such and such." To us, at least, Leona's testimony was quite credible.

On August 20 and 21, the lawyers for both sides presented their closing arguments. As Browne would later point out, "You will never find a case where there are such opposite points of view." (It was one of the few Browne assertions with which we totally agree.) The conflict in the testimony of the two sides was truly remarkable.

Closing Arguments

Stuart's closing argument to the jury was quiet, controlled, well-reasoned, and effective. Point by point he clarified his case and dissected his opponents' contentions. The church, he said, was not justified in publicly attacking Leona. She was no longer a member, and even if their allegations were true, there was no reason for the WCG ministers to have the information Meredith disseminated. But what Meredith had spread about Leona was not true. If it had been, why would she bring a lawsuit and risk certain exposure?

Stuart admonished the jury to recall carefully what they had seen. He reminded them of how the WCG witnesses all seemed to parrot the same story and even seemed to look the same. He reminded them how Raymond's answers were so long and evasive that the path he beat around the bush had become a trench. He recalled how Meredith's sons seemed to know more about the McNair marriage than Raymond did, how the McNair sons did not seem able to look at their mother in court, but how Ruth had looked Raymond right in the eye when she testified.

Stuart wasn't afraid to use theological sources to clarify his position. He quoted Thomas Aquinas on the law of man and the law of God, and James 3:1, which in the New American Bible translation reads: "Not many of you should become teachers my brothers; you should realize that those of us who do so will be called to the stricter account." He suggested to the jury that a fair award might be $10.5 million. He told them, "The Worldwide Church of God is finally being brought to justice for conduct it feels it can do with impunity. Let religions - whether small cults or large denominations - know that that kind of conduct will not be tolerated!"

Browne then had the opportunity to present his closing argument. After a sanctimonious anecdote about a piece of wisdom he had once gained from an elder lawyer, Browne departed down a path of reasoning some lawyers might have cleverly used on behalf of the plaintiff. Having earlier adopted the defense of privilege, Browne went on to point out that the WCG's divorce laws had been "liberalized," and Raymond had remarried in 1977. He readily admitted Raymond's WCG colleagues had wondered: How can someone who is questionable in his practice [lifestyle] come back into such a high position? And how could Raymond still have been living in the house [with Leona] after suing for divorce on grounds of desertion? Good questions, those. But while they must have been intended to show why it was therefore justifiable to attack Leona in public, the rhetorical questions were not flattering to Raymond. In fact, the whole line of argument seemed only to provide listeners with a possible motive behind the Meredith defamation of Leona.

Throughout the trial Browne had attempted to portray Leona as a despicable woman. Now he developed that theme with almost total abandon. With Leona sitting quietly nearby, Browne exaggerated, distorted, contorted, and otherwise mutilated fact after testified fact. With poorly feigned indignation, he sarcastically claimed Leona was not the reserved lady they had seen before them for seven weeks, but was, in fact, the leader of a "band of vigilantes" hell-bent on destroying an innocent church. "Money," accused Browne, "is more important to her than human relationships. She fights at the drop of a hat!"

But Browne's combative performance was strained - he even dropped his large tripod chart once and his pointing stick twice - and his histrionics proved counterproductive. Not only did two jurors openly chuckle at his chutzpah, fellow attorney Bruce Armstrong sounded genuinely embarrassed when he began his closing arguments after Browne finished. Armstrong told the jury that lawyers in closing statements sometimes get carried away. He reminded the jury that they should base their verdict on the testimony, not the emotional rhetoric of any of the lawyers. Then, perhaps sensing the inevitability of their decision, he went on to ask the jury to ponder just how much money the plaintiff was really asking. He made a few technical observations and concluded with an obfuscating Ben Franklin quote.

In his final rebuttal comments to the jury, Stuart likened the WCG to a giant octopus - when it is threatened it puts up a giant cloud to conceal the truth. In fact, the WCG lawyers had done exactly what he had earlier predicted they would do. They continued to attack and defame Leona just as Meredith had done in 1979. The jury had heard over four weeks of testimony and two days of closing arguments. It was now up to them to decide who was telling the truth.

The Verdict

On the morning of August 22 Judge Robert Olson gave the jury their final instructions and they went into deliberation. On the afternoon of August 23 they reached a verdict. The jury had been asked to answer 13 questions. They handed their answers to Judge Olson, who read them to himself before the hushed courtroom. After what seemed an eternity to some, he asked the court clerk to read aloud the 13-point verdict.

Were the Roderick Meredith statements about Leona McNair made at the 1979 minister's conference privileged? No. Were they true? No. Were the Pastor's Report statements about Leona McNair privileged? No. Were they true? No. In making the statements in the Pastor's Report, did any defendant intentionally cause, by extreme and outrageous conduct, severe emotional distress to the plaintiff, or act with reckless disregard of the probability of causing emotional distress to the plaintiff? Yes. Did the plaintiff suffer severe emotional distress as a proximate result of the conduct of the defendants? Yes. Were any of the defendants' wrongful acts done pursuant to a conspiracy to either libel, slander, or intentionally cause, by extreme and outrageous conduct, severe emotional distress to the plaintiff? Yes. Was the plaintiff damaged as a result of the wrongful act or acts? Yes. Do you find in favor of the plaintiff and against Raymond McNair and the Worldwide Church of God? Yes. Do you find in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants Roderick C. Meredith and the Worldwide Church of God? Yes. Do you find in favor of the plaintiff and against the Worldwide Church of God? Yes. What do you find to be the total amount of compensatory damages? $260,000. If you find that the defendants acted with actual malice and if you find that punitive damages are justified, what do you find to be the total amount of punitive or exemplary damages? $1,000,000.

As that amount was read, Leona McNair and Antony Stuart became all smiles. In the audience, John T. Tate Jr., who had done so much of the early work on the case, was jubilant, as was Bruce Broillet, one of the partners in the winning law firm (and who, incidentally, was recently voted Trial Lawyer of the Year by the Los Angeles Trial Lawyers Association). At the announcement of the award, Broillet sprung from his chair, gave a passing bear hug to AR editor Trechak, and flew out the courtroom door to call his downtown Los Angeles office. There would be a victory party there that night.

The defendants were not so enthusiastic. Raymond looked dazed; Rod glowered at the jurors. And Browne, to the guffaws of the entire jury, did what he had done dozens and dozens of times during the trial. He asked the judge for a conference at the side bar. In California, civil cases require only a majority of nine jurors for a verdict. Browne wanted each of the jurors polled individually on each of the 13 points to see how each had voted. His request was granted, but the polling didn't give him much to cheer about. The jury had voted unanimously on all points with only two exceptions. One juror did not feel Leona's distress was "severe" within the definition provided by the court's instructions to the jury. And one juror refused to go along with the $1 million punitive award. He insisted it should have been $15 million.

After the trial, Browne asked the jurors for the reasoning behind their verdict.

The trial ended with the jury expressing praise to the judge for the way he had conducted the trial, and the judge, obviously pleased with the way the trial had gone, expressed his thanks to the jury. They had truly done an outstanding job.

The Jurors Explain

As soon as the proceedings were closed, the press and lawyers rushed to the jury for their comments on the trial. (For some reason, Raymond and Roderick did not wish to talk to any of the jurors, and Meredith told the news photographers, "No photos!" - a command they promptly disobeyed.) What were the key reasons for the jury's decision? Surprisingly, it was evidence and testimony presented by the defense. One juror mentioned an article written by HWA on the subject of the divorce and remarriage doctrine changes. It had been introduced by Browne and company to show how there was great interest in the church on that subject. But when the jurors perused the article, they noticed that HWA had nowhere mentioned individual divorce cases by name. Why then, they reasoned, if the church's leader could explain the divorce doctrine change without getting into specific cases, did Meredith have to go into the McNair case in detail? And why did he not bring up other cases by name?

What led the jury to believe there was a conspiracy? The jurors seemed to have little difficulty coming to a conclusion on this point. One pointed out how Raymond himself had admitted being in the audience when Meredith verbally attacked Leona in January 1979. He was in a position to know that Meredith's statements were untrue, yet he did nothing to correct the false impressions created. In spite of the fact that he had almost six months until Meredith again went after Leona in the Pastor's Report, he did nothing to set the record straight about his former wife.

Another factor in the jury's unanimous decision appears to have been Browne himself. More than one juror admitted to being totally turned off by his over-reaching and harsh treatment of Leona and other witnesses who, for the most part, were completely candid and cooperative.

But the biggest factor in the jury's verdict proved to be the testimony of Leona's sons, and particularly Joe McNair, who had been called by Browne. Juror after juror admitted that witnessing the young man mercilessly berate his own mother was proof-positive that Worldwide had caused Leona the greatest sadness a mother could know. Jury foreman Ignacio Gracia, a city councilman and former vice-mayor of South El Monte, California, said listening to Joe's testimony was very sad. He explained, "This has to be the greatest emotional distress any parent can feel. She lost her family."

Mr. Gracia went on to make a revealing summary of how the jury felt:

"We wanted to send a message to other churches that you can't do this to people - ruin their lives just because you are a church or big organization. Here we won't condone these goings on. The award was not the issue. We wanted to vindicate Mrs. McNair. They were driving a knife in her heart."

Listening to the jury's comments, one got the impression that the award could easily have gone much higher. For instance, the jury never got to hear Herbert Armstrong testify because Judge Olson excluded him as a defendant - a decision Stuart is appealing. Nor did the jury get to hear from three key witnesses Stuart had planned to call, but who, under suspicious circumstances, at the last moment declined to appear. Nor was Stuart allowed to enter into evidence a 1969 letter by Meredith to the WCG ministry. In it, Meredith, in graphic detail, delved into the emotional and sexual relationship of two of his employees - identified by name - who had become romantically involved, contrary to the dictates of the church. The letter, which Stuart felt showed a parallel to Meredith's later attack on Leona, was denied as evidence by Judge Olson, because he felt it was so inflammatory as to be offensive.

After the trial, the church's lawyers said little to the press except that they planned to appeal. So far, however, that threat has seemed a bit limp. In mid-October Judge Olson turned down their request for a new trial. A request that Leona's award be cut back - because, according to Browne, paying the $1.26 million would bankrupt his clients - was also denied. Not only that, Olson granted Stuart his request that the church be required to pay Leona an additional $20,000 to cover the court costs and other related expenses she incurred during the past five years. But lest any WCG tithe payer think Leona McNair is greedily out to devour the tithes and offerings of "the faithful," keep in mind that just weeks before in a pre-trial hearing Leona had offered to settle out of court for less than one-fourth of the jury's award (an amount that surely would have been far less than the total bill for the church's lawyers). Of course, money is never a real concern to Herbert Armstrong or his lawyers. We understand HWA has even said recently he will give Browne a $2 million bonus if he can just find a way to beat Leona through an appeal.

One of the jurors gives "a piece of her mind" to lawyers Browne, Helge, and Bruce Armstrong.

By the trial's end, Stuart (center, gesturing) had earned the respect of all. Here he discusses a legal point with members of the jury. Directly behind him are some of Helge's legal team. Listening in (upper right) is AR editor John Trechak.

In the meantime, Meredith is apparently blaming his problems on some kind of Ambassador Report "conspiracy" (Los Angeles Times, San Gabriel Valley section, Aug. 30). He just cannot seem to admit that he did something wrong. Yet, Stan Rader, the church's attorney at the time, knew full well in 1979 just how serious Meredith's mistake was. Shortly after the June 25, 1979 Pastor's Report was mailed out, Rader's secretary, Virginia Kineston, showed him the Meredith comments on Leona. Rader was stunned. From then on Rader insisted Ms. Kineston check all Meredith writings for legal problems before they went to press. Meredith was stuck with a reputation for executive recklessness, and it was only a few weeks later that he was removed as director of the WCG's ministry. Yet five years later, he apparently still doesn't think he did anything wrong.

The trial overall had been a tense and often bitter one, but it was not without its humorous side. There was Stuart, before the final arrival of the jury, holding up a stethoscope from Leona's satchel and telling friends in the audience, "Just in case it's heart attack time!" There was the rumor that Browne, in closed chambers, had seriously protested the "endless stream" of homemade cookies Leona allegedly provided court personnel for their coffee breaks. And then there was the day when the entire jury showed up wearing matching blue T-shirts that read: "I love being on Judge Olson's case."

But the most hilarious aspect of the trial was the distinct ambience of the match-up itself. At the plaintiff's table was Leona with one attorney. Opposite them, at the defendants' table, was super weasel Allan Browne. To Browne's right was the pugnacious Bruce Armstrong. To Browne's left, and always facing the jury was Ralph Helge, virtually mute for the entire trial, but always looking like some grand inquisitor sucking on sour grapes. Behind the three defense lawyers sat Raymond McNair and Roderick Meredith, feverishly taking notes on yellow pads like a couple of newly baptized church members at a WCG sabbath service. Behind the two dark-suited evangelists was an assortment of lawyers and pseudo-lawyers from Helge's office, there to lend research assistance, moral support, and, it seems, to discourage interested WCG members from attending.

In the end, however, all that heavy WCG artillery proved useless. Dick Lloyd, writing in The Weekly (of Pasadena, Aug. 30) observed:

"But it was a particularly sweet victory for Stuart who took on the giants, and alone in the courtroom filled with church attorneys, beat the best, like a David against Goliath."

A careful look at the defense strategy chosen by the church's lawyers might suggest Lloyd was a bit generous to "the giants." Nevertheless, Antony Stuart - who, in a few days, would be married and leave on a honeymoon - deserved every accolade he received. So did John Tate. And so did Leona McNair, who, no matter how difficult the circumstance or vindictive the opposition, persevered on to finally get her day in court. As she told news reporters afterward, "Justice had to be served."

The End of the Work?

Some things about the WCG never seem to change. In late July the WCG went through one of its periodic rock-and-roll crises, an almost annual occurrence for the last twenty years. On July 30 HWA sent a "special announcement" to all WCG congregations around the world: "I have been deeply grieved, shocked and embarrassed to have positive evidence brought to me that totally unacceptable music has been continually played all day long over the local [church summer camp] radio station KSEP at Orr, Minnesota." HWA was immediately flown to Minnesota to "audition the music" and talk to personnel at the camp. Within a day, the crisis was resolved. On August 1 HWA sent a message to all the ministers in the WCG. HWA assured them that from now on he would personally "be responsible for selecting music that is good popular music."

The music crisis was not the only problem at Orr this summer. The camp made the newspapers (Des Moines Register, Aug. 19) when a measles outbreak resulted in state officials stepping in to vaccinate those who felt vaccines were okay and quarantining the 56 who did not, a scenario that repeated itself a few weeks later at Ambassador College in Pasadena.

Music is very important to HWA. In Pasadena, at the "House for God," the church-subsidized concert series is going stronger than ever. But simultaneously at the church's headquarters there have been some layoffs, some pay cuts, and even difficulty meeting payroll. The reason for the financial problems? HWA has a new jet - a customized G-III worth well over $10 million. He's traveling in style, but what about that "great commission" he used to talk about?

The Worldwide News of Sept. 24 announced that Herbert Armstrong's radio program "The World Tomorrow" would be discontinued in the United States, effective by mid-October. The official reason given was that radio was no longer an efficient medium like television. Of course, the truth is HWA, now in his nineties, is not nearly as effective as he was thirty years ago. His television performances plodding and visually ghastly - are barely saved by editing and extensive use of film clips. In case you haven't noticed, his head wobbles almost uncontrollably from side to side, looking as if it might fall off, if he's not careful, and many times he appears to be trying to get agreement from his viewers while shaking his head "no" from side to side. As one insider told us, "It's only a matter of time before the television program will be taken off the air too."

Just weeks ago, HWA admitted to a WCG congregation that his one "good eye" is now so weak he can only dimly make out the shapes of people in front of him and that he cannot read even large type. The sight of HWA being led about by assistant Aaron Dean has inspired pity in more than a few. And many are wondering how HWA can have any idea of the contents of various documents put before him for his signature. Still he's afraid to hand the reins of power over to a more capable person.

Along with HWA's increasing physical debilitations has come a growing inability to really lead his organization. While official publications portray the church organization as unified and well-managed, the real situation is one of fear and disarray. Department heads complain of a lack of corporate direction and morale (and moral) problems abound as many, having become disillusioned with HWA and those around him, admit privately they are staying on simply for the money.

HWA is not totally unaware of the bleakness of the situation. He has talked privately of personally "fleeing" to Switzerland - a nation known for its secretive banks, good medical facilities and (if you've seen the November-December Plain Truth) hugh fallout shelters. He has also talked of designating a successor (possibly Joe Tkach). And not only is HWA saying the end of "the Work" may be near, he privately told one group dining at his Pasadena home recently, "I think the Work may already be over." Those who watched him in need of help in locating the food on his plate think he may be right. Said one minister to his Pasadena congregation, "We need to pray that God will send us a leader."

Stanley Rader Update

With the exception of Herbert Armstrong himself, no WCG official of the last seven years has been more controversial than attorney-accountant-evangelist Stanley Rader. Even today, three years after HWA removed him from his executive position, many still suspect he holds significant power in the WCG. The truth is just the opposite.

On August 23 Ambassador Report phoned Mr. Rader. He explained that not only is he not involved with the Armstrong organization at present, but there is little likelihood he will ever again be in the future. In 1981, shortly after HWA ousted him, Rader was hospitalized with a severely ulcerated and hemorrhaging stomach. He survived the life-threatening crises, but the condition - probably caused by the years of high tension in the WCG and excessive coffee consumption - is ever present. Today Rader must maintain a strict, bland diet and avoid nervous tension at all cost. He spends little time at his Century City office and none at Ambassador College. Rader did say, however, that he deeply appreciated the many cards and letters he received during his convalescence, and he asked us to express his thanks to all those who took the time to express their concern.

Two Studies from Gene Justice

Among the many non-mainstream beliefs held by the WCG, Israel identity and Sabbath-keeping are especially prominent. During the last ten years, a number of writers have shown serious flaws to exist in these two teachings. Now, former WCG member Gene Justice of Birmingham, Alabama, is making available two new studies on these subjects.

The Israel Identity Syndrome, written by Justice, is an 80-page booklet available for a donation of $4. "The Sabbath for the People of God" is a 20-page research paper written by Gene Justice, Jerry Horton, Leona McNair, and Pearl Schultz. In this paper, available for a donation of $1.50, the authors have tried to present and build on new ideas and cover the old ground only as necessary. Justice asked us to point out that these publications were not produced for the purpose of making a profit. The suggested donations are intended only to cover the large printing and postage costs involved in this Christian-service project. We've read both works and we strongly recommend them for anyone in the WCG or anyone with relatives still in that denomination. To order these studies, write to Gene Justice, P.O. Box 60344, Pasadena, CA 91106-6344.

Bible Sabbath Association Hires Wiedenheft

Ambassador Report regularly receives letters from former WCG members searching for another Sabbath-keeping church. We recommend that such individuals contact The Bible Sabbath Association, Route 1, Box 197, Fairview, Oklahoma 73737. This organization publishes a seventh-day Sabbath-keeping church directory and a monthly magazine called The Sabbath Sentinel.

Their September issue announced that the association has hired Richard Wiedenheft as a public relations coordinator. Wiedenheft graduated from Ambassador College, Pasadena in 1967; received an MBA from the University of Scranton in 1978; and lives with his wife Darlene and two children in Pennsylvania. Those who wish to contact him may write: Mr. Richard Wiedenheft, R.F.D. 1, Box 475, Falls, PA 18615.

A Thank You from the Clarks

Beverly and I would like to express our sincerest thanks and deepest appreciation for the hundreds of letters, cards, and phone calls we received from friends both out of and still in the WCG during my recent heart attack hospitalization and subsequent recovery. We were overwhelmed by the kindness shown from so many. Words could never adequately express our gratitude to all those who generously shared concern, offered encouragement, and extended love. Your messages were more than helpful in seeing us both through some pretty rough times.

-Howard and Beverly Clark

Letters

Having read my first Ambassador Report, I read with interest the letter from the WCG members in Los Angeles who stated that the people in the Los Angeles church area are being told directly in sermons that they are told only what they need to know. I am a member in ---- and ditto! The churches are the very last to know what is going on. We are the "dumb sheep" and all we are told is what happens as reported in the newspaper and only then if headquarters wants to stress the point that we are not to read the news accounts, ask questions, doubt, etc.

I've been in the church [over 20 years]. I've seen it all, but never as clearly as in your quarterly report. In church we don't hear truth, just coverups, lies, and propaganda. I learned a long, long time ago to keep my thoughts to myself. Or I could be faced with strict and severe "counseling for a bad attitude" or immediate excommunication for "not honoring God's Chief Apostle without question" or, as I feel - bowing down before Herbert.

I have known about your report for years, but didn't write for fear of anyone at church finding out - ha! Many in our area are kept in the know by ex-members. I'd rather have my news hot off the press - the Ambassador Report press.

-WCG member

I wish you people who have attended Ambassador College and know the inside of its Satanic organization could come up with something that would so shock these Satan-brainwashed members that they would no longer be so bound. They are constantly told not

U.S.A. Riding to Total Collapse in 20 Short Years!

Here are the naked FACTS that ought to astonish and shock you into immediate action.

by Herbert W. Armstrong

YOU'RE GOING to be shocked to read what goes on undercover in the United States. Five major vices threaten the total collapse of our country inside of 20 years. The handwriting is on the wall of America, now!

Lifting the LID Off Vice

Five major vices are combining to bring America to total collapse, to a fall greater than that of ancient Rome, because we are now more WEALTHY, more POWERFUL than ancient Rome—and the bigger they come, the harder they fall.

Now I use the word "undercover" paradoxically. These gigantic fatal vices are not hidden, actually, and yet, we don't see them, because we don't recognize them for what they are. We are totally oblivious to what they are doing to us.

First, what was it, specifically, that caused the fall of ancient Rome?

The acknowledged authority on the time we wake up and take a look at them.

The Number ONE Vice

FIRST, there was the rapid INCREASE IN DIVORCE, homes being broken up. Look at America today! Here are the actual figures: In 1890 there was one divorce for every 18 marriages. But the divorce rate began to rise. Twenty years later, by 1910, we were having one divorce to every eleven marriages. By 1930, the divorce rate in America had risen to one in every six; and by 1945, this tragedy of divorce had skyrocketed to one divorce out of every THREE AND ONE-HALF MARRIAGES! That was the year that the war ended, and a lot of hasty marriages ended the same year.

Since, the rate has leveled off in a fairly constant one in every four, with more divorces, of course, in the metropolitan areas. In some, it's at least one perous; and people sought leisure, less work, more play, idleness, and as they shirked work, they began looking to the government to provide. Today, we call it doles, relief, pensions, and government aid. When any nation begins to look to its government to provide, that nation is on a greased toboggan-slide to decay and to oblivion. It brought about the fall of Rome. It brought about the fall of proud Babylon long before. And it's bringing about the fall of America today.

NOW, LOOK AT US TODAY! Like Rome, we've grown fat and prosperous and lazy. We Americans are rolling in money. We have more money than any people ever had. Money has come SO EASY! Too many of us are trying to get it the easy way with less work. Business is raising prices. Labour demands shorter hours, more pay.

Yes, we've grown prosperous and see them, because we don't recognize them for what they are. We are totally oblivious to what they are doing to us.

First, what was it, specifically, that caused the fall of ancient Rome?

The acknowledged authority on the history of that period is Edward Gibbon, the famous historian of 165 years ago. His famous textbook, The Decline and Fall of The Roman Empire, is the standard recognized authority. Gibbon lists five chief reasons for the fall of Rome. You probably never read them, but you would think he was writing a description of America today, if you did.

These five specific causes for the fall of Rome are the five outstanding characteristics of American life today. It's year that the war ended, and a lot of hasty marriages ended the same year.

Since, the rate has leveled off in a fairly constant one in every four, with more divorces, of course, in the metropolitan areas. In some, it's at least one in three.

Do you realize that the HOME is the very foundation of any society, and when our homes are being broken up, the very foundation is crumbling away beneath us. The United States is going the way of ancient Rome.

What TAXES Are Doing to YOU

SECOND, just before Rome collapsed, there was a rapid INCREASE IN TAXES. Rome had grown fat and prosperous, we think there money than any people ever had. Money has come SO EASY! Too many of us are trying to get it the easy way with less work. Business is raising prices. Labour demands shorter hours, more pay.

Yes, we've grown prosperous and lazy. We've started on the way of ancient Rome, seeking government aid, relief, pensions. We're looking to the government to take care of us, and just like that of ancient Rome, our government has grown TOO BIG, and we've had a rapid increase in taxes.

What Are the Facts?

Brace yourself for a shock. How much money do you suppose it cost to run the United States government, through all

---

One of our readers sent us a copy of the February, 1956 Plain Truth. We thought you might find the cover page as interesting as we did. In the lead article, HWA predicted the fall of the USA by 1976 because of (1) increases in divorce, (2) high taxes, (3) "the mad craze for pleasure," (4) the buildup of armaments, and (5) "the decay of religion." Wrote HWA, "Religion [in ancient Rome, paralleled to the USA] was becoming more popular, but fading into a mere form, losing touch with life and with God, becoming impotent to guide the people."

to read or listen to anything not sent out by the church. I know several people who came home from the festival so upset and depressed they want to die. The ministers continue to prey on single women and widows, telling them to turn all their cash and property over to the church. This also applies to elderly widowers. They tell older men who cannot attend the feast because of sick wives or children that they are headed for the lake of fire unless they leave them and attend.

I thank God every day that my husband and I came to our senses when we did and got out. Oh, what a weight was lifted from our shoulders when we were no longer bound by them. We would do anything we possibly could to awaken these people.

-AR Reader

Once again the Report covered a lot of evil fruit that HWA and the WCG are reaping. If the many fine people still in the WCG would study the 23rd chapter of Matthew as they studied the 24th, surely some would come to the conclusion that Matthew 23 is a "shoe" that fits HWA!

Verse 3: "for they say, and do not" - after 50 years of teaching against divorce, what did HWA do?

Verse 4: "For they bind heavy burdens" - the fallacious tithing doctrine. "The TENTH shall be holy unto the Lord," not the first three as HWA falsely claims.

Verse 7: "...and to be called by men, Apostle, Apostle." HWA does not even have the signs of an apostle which are miracles, wonders, and mighty deeds (II Cor. 12:12). He has corrupt deeds, some of which are covered in your reports.

Verse 25: "...but within they are full of extortion and excess." Again the multiple tithing system is a classic example of this! The "end up in the lake of fire if you don't tithe threat" is the worst form of psychological extortion I can think of. A Grumman Gulfstream III jet would nicely fall under the term "excess." There are many other relevant points in Matthew 23. Read it.

-Canada

I am not, nor have I ever been, a member of the WCG, but I wish to relate my encounter with one of their ministers. I made the ultimate mistake of requesting a visit from a WCG minister during a period of illness and depression. This minister, or more correctly stated - "zombie" - who came to my home as a representative of

"God's only true church" was so unperceptive, unresponsive, and apathetic that it made it extremely difficult to ask him questions, let alone expect consolation from him.

In fact, this minister even refused to discuss some of my questions, especially those dealing with Catholic prophecy. When I mentioned recent bereavements in my family, including my mother, he did not utter one word of condolence. He acted more like a stern schoolmaster, whose patience was steadily growing thin and I could sense that he did not want to become personally involved with me.

At the close of his visit the minister asked me in a very authoritative tone of voice if I believed that the WCG was the true Church of Jesus Christ. When I answered with a positive reply, I was then invited to attend Sabbath services. This harsh treatment left me deeply embittered and disillusioned with what I thought was my last resource for guidance during a distressful time. Where was the Christian love and the concern for my spiritual welfare that I was so faithfully promised in their church literature? I have been a listener to "The World Tomorrow" and a subscriber to the Plain Truth for many years, and more recently a "gratefully acknowledged" financial contributor, but this was not the church I had envisioned, and I now harbor much misgivings about it

My heartfelt thanks to you. The AR has been a valuable source of information for me; and after doing research on the WCG, I now know that HWA does not have the sole monopoly on biblical truth.

-Iowa

I almost married a man "in the [Worldwide] church." Instead, I followed my heart and married a Catholic (the beginning of my downfall, so they told me). We've been happily married almost 10 years, and I thank God that He gave him to me.

-AR Reader

I wish to comment on "GTA - Problems and Insights" in your last issue. It is true that GTA was turned down by one of the religious networks. However, he asked the church to pray that a better opening would come and it did. In fact, two opened up. He is on the SPN Satellite System and also the Nashville Network. He is getting a very good response from both these networks. I feel you should print the good about him as well as the bad.

I feel GTA is trying to do what is right. The past should be forgotten as long as he is trying to go straight. I am sure he is being watched closely by those in his congregation and others. It would certainly be to his complete disadvantage if he went back to his old ways and I do not think he would get another chance. After all doesn't Jesus come to forgive our sins and forget them when we repent and change?

I went to the Feast of Tabernacles last year with the CGI and it was as different from the WCG as night from day. The people were the warmest, happiest, and friendliest group of people I have ever been around. The ministers were also friendly, helpful and mingled with the people. There was no Gestapo looking over our shoulders or tattling on us and overall it was the happiest, most joyous Feast I have ever attended.

-Wheeling, WV

Editor: You may have a point. We keep getting letters from CGI members telling us what an improvement it is over the WCG. There definitely are some very positive things that can be said about that organization. Frankly, if the WCG's leaders had any sense they'd be on bended knee asking Ted to come back. But, of course, they won't. After all, they've got their "Apostle."

Thank you for your outstanding publication. My husband and I exited WCG a few years after our graduation from Big Sandy in 1972. My father, a WCG member for over 20 years, recently died. But, a year before his death, thanks in part to the AR, Dad was able to extricate himself and the remainder of my family from Armstrong's bonds. That fact is my greatest source of comfort!

-Florida

I want to thank you for the work you are doing in spreading the plain truth about HWA and the good news that there is a way of escape from the WCG cult. Keep up the good work!

-Louisiana

Thank you for the kind letters. We appreciate your support and encouragement. This issue was to have had a few more pages, but besides the fact that it's well past midnight and we're exhausted, we're at press deadline. So, we'll have to save the rest 'till next time. Our warmest regards to all of you.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR30 December, 1984

Why Ambassador Report?

Ambassador Report is published by and for alumni, students, faculty, and friends of Ambassador College. It has grown out of the increasing need for a response to the misinformation contained in many official Ambassador College and Worldwide Church of God publications.

Ambassador Report has the following purposes:

- It assesses the foundational philosophies of Ambassador College and their effect on Ambassador College students. In short, it examines the "Ambassador Experience."
- It brings to light many of Ambassador College's biggest problems that have been too long covered up.
- It presents solutions to Ambassador College's problems and encourages drastically needed changes at Ambassador College and, to a degree, in the church that directly influences it.
- It is dedicated to prodding the leadership of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God, which supports and controls it, to change the practices and policies that are bringing worldwide discredit to Ambassador College.

We welcome and encourage suggestions from our readers regardless of political, religious, or philosophical persuasion, and we warmly welcome all contributions to our efforts.

Long-time readers of Ambassador Report will recall that the above statement appeared at the beginning of our earliest issues. It outlined our purpose then and outlines our purpose now. Ambassador Report is a nondenominational Christian service. While we do provide information about a number of religious organizations, it is not our goal to encourage readers to join or support any particular sect or group. However, if you are in any way associated with Ambassador College or the Worldwide Church of God, we believe we can provide you with valuable information, often available nowhere else.

Our New Address

Please take note that Ambassador Report has a new mailing address: P.O. Box 60068, Pasadena, CA 91106. Mail sent to our old box number (4068) will still reach us, as our new box number is still at the same post office (zip 91106). For the convenience of our postal clerks, however, please send all mail for Ambassador Report to our new box number.

Our Mailing List

The Ambassador Report mailing list is not available for sale or rental. Unless we are given permission by a reader to do so, we will not divulge the name of any subscriber. It is our policy that no one should be added to our mailing list unless he or she personally requests a subscription. We do not want the Report sent repeatedly to those who don't care to receive it. However, as we want our services to be known by all who may benefit, we will send our flyer (starts next page) to individuals whose names and addresses are supplied to us. If you have friends or relatives who may benefit from the Report, send us their names and addresses. We'll send them an introductory flyer and/or sample Report. Of course, your name will be kept strictly confidential.

Our Subscription Policy

We believe Ambassador Report has provided and continues to provide a valuable service. It is, nevertheless, a fact that we have never published an issue that did not leave us owing money. It is only because of the generosity of our readers that we have, each time, been able to pay off enough of our debts to warrant further publishing. While such limitations have perhaps encouraged our humility, we wish we could do more - especially in the area of advertising - to make our publications better known to those who really need them.

We have given serious thought to putting a $20 or $30 per year subscription price or suggested donation on the Report. If each of our readers contributed that much per year, we could actually expand our efforts to include a bit of promotion and advertising. Unfortunately, such a plan would undoubtedly discourage some from giving more, while at the same time, hundreds of our poorer readers would simply not be able to continue to subscribe. It would probably shock you to realize how many of our readers are living below the poverty line, not just because of retirement on fixed incomes, but because of years of being bled white by the Armstrong organization. For that reason (and for a number of other business and legal considerations) we do not want to put a subscription price on the Report.

However, as a means of conserving our very limited financial resources, we have decided on one policy change. We will no longer provide free photocopies of back issues to the hundreds who yearly request them. We had done so for quite some time. However, increasingly this service is proving too costly. Beginning in 1985, we will require a donation (see the last page of this issue) before supplying photocopies of back issues. We will, however, continue to provide a copy of our most recent issue and our new flyer (which begins on the next page) free of charge to all who ask our help. We don't think this is an unreasonable policy, and we hope long-time readers will appreciate why it is necessary.

Our New Flyer

Over the years, many former WCG members have written asking us to publish some type of hand-out that could be used to warn others about Armstrongism. What has been needed is some type of article or flyer short enough to be economically photocopied, yet large enough to adequately explain what the Armstrong church is really all about.

Well, we have finally been able to put together something we hope will fill that need. Following this article is a three-page flyer that we believe our readers can easily photocopy and use to advantage. It explains in a concise manner the real facts about The Plain Truth magazine, Herbert Armstrong, and his Worldwide Church of God. It then lists all the Ambassador Report literature published to date, along with a brief description of each, plus other organizations and literature of value in understanding the Armstrong phenomenon. Those who wish to personally provide others with the facts on the WCG (and help Ambassador Report at the same time) will find this a valuable tool.

What's Behind The Plain Truth Magazine? And Who Is Herbert W. Armstrong?

If you live in the United States, Canada, Australia, Britain, or Western Europe, you have probably seen, during the last few years, one magazine that has been turning up on newsstands, in shops, and in waiting rooms with ever increasing frequency. It's called The Plain Truth. And with a circulation of over seven million, it's one of the fastest growing magazines in the world today.

You may have noticed how the free, full-color Plain Truth reports on world trends, seems to promote traditional family values, and offers readers generous amounts of free literature. You may also be aware that The Plain Truth is published by a church called the Worldwide Church of God (WCG). What you probably don't know, however, is that The Plain Truth is the WCG's primary tool for gaining new converts. And you are also probably unaware of what the WCG really does teach. That's because the WCG goes to some lengths to conceal many of its beliefs from all, except those who have been systematically led through their indoctrination program that only begins with The Plain Truth.

What Is the Worldwide Church of God?

The Worldwide Church of God (originally named the Radio Church of God) was founded in the early 1930s by former advertising man Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA). Today the WCG has a membership of approximately 75,000. The church is headquartered in Pasadena, California, and in 1984 took in over $130 million. The church has its own college - Ambassador College (AC, unaccredited) - with campuses in Pasadena, California, and Big Sandy, Texas (near Dallas). The church also funds an organization called the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, which funnels church money to a number of cultural projects and supports a concert series as a means of enhancing the WCG's public image. Besides The Plain Truth and numerous booklets, the WCG also publishes The Good News, a more doctrinally open magazine for contributors, and the Worldwide News, a newspaper strictly for initiated WCG members.

The WCG's Doctrines

"The gospel had not been preached until God raised me up to preach it.... That gospel you never heard from any preacher except one from this church. You never heard it from Billy Graham. You never heard it from any Protestant preacher. You never heard it from any Catholic priest."

- Herbert W. Armstrong, sermon, July 24, 1976

Here, in brief, are the WCG's most important doctrines and practices: Herbert W. Armstrong is revered by the WCG members as "God's Holy Apostle." HWA claims that he is the only one (along with his ministers) who has preached the true Gospel in 1900 years. The WCG is "the only true church," all others are taught to be of Satan (WCG: A True History of the True Church). The United States and British Commonwealth are the true Israel of Bible prophecy and will soon (the predicted date has been reset a number of times) be destroyed by a resurrected Holy Roman Empire (HWA: The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy). Those in the WCG will be miraculously spared (HWA: "There Is a Way of Escape"). WCG members must give 10% of their gross income to the WCG, use another 10% for keeping the church's feasts, give an additional 10% every third year, and make "freewill offerings" besides (HWA: Ending Your Financial Worries). Christmas, New Year's, Easter, Halloween, and birthdays are all pagan and are not to be observed. The WCG observes the Saturday sabbath and the Old Testament feast days (WCG: Pagan Holidays -Or God's Holy Days - Which? and HWA: Which Day Is the Christian Sabbath?). According to HWA, Jesus was crucified on a Wednesday and rose on a Saturday (HWA: The Resurrection Was Not on Sunday). The Old Testament dietary laws are to be observed (HWA: "Is All Animal Flesh Good Food?"). Women are not to wear makeup (HWA: Truth About Makeup). Husbands are to "rule over" their wives. Corporal punishment of children is encouraged. WCG members may divorce nonmember mates. It's okay to drink alcohol. Generally, the WCG is anti-medicine and pro-faith healing (The Good News, Oct.-Nov. '81). The local WCG congregations usually meet in rented halls. The phone numbers of WCG ministers are almost always unlisted. WCG members are not to serve in the military or to vote in elections (HWA: "How Would Jesus Vote for President?"). WCG members must put their church above all else in their lives - including family and friends. The WCG's organization is strictly hierarchical. WCG members who openly question church doctrines or church leadership are "disfellowshipped" (excommunicated and shunned). The WCG is non-trinitarian and teaches that man's purpose is to eventually become God (HWA: Why Were You Born?).

What Is Ambassador College?

Founded by Herbert W. Armstrong in 1947, Ambassador College, with campuses in California and Texas, has in the past published much of the WCG's literature. The bulk of the WCG's wealth is in the college's name, and the church's world headquarters are located on its California campus. After almost forty years of existence, the college is still unaccredited. While the college is often made to appear autonomous, it is actually completely controlled by the church and can be accurately described as merely an extension of the WCG.

"Apostle" Herbert W. Armstrong

HWA was born in 1892 to parents of Quaker faith. He was a high school drop out and for many years thereafter, an advertising man (The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong). According to The Good News (Aug. 1969, p. 4), he was baptized by a Baptist preacher, and he was ordained by lay members of the Oregon Conference of the Church of God (Autobiography, pp. 365-366). He was never a seminary or Bible college student. He founded the Radio (later renamed Worldwide) Church of God in 1934. He plagiarized writings of the Seventh-Day Adventists, the British Israel movement, and other religious groups and claimed "his" new writings were "revealed truth from God" (AR2, p. 48). In the late 1930s, the Church of God (7th Day) - which had been paying HWA a salary - cut him off for insubordination and teaching heresies. He left Oregon for California in the 1940s (according to some Armstrongologists, because his many failed prophecies and lifestyle had caught up with him in Oregon). He founded Ambassador College in 1947 to train young people to assist him in his work.

By about 1970, "The World Tomorrow" - a radio and television program done by HWA and his son, Garner Ted Armstrong - was one of the biggest buyers of air time in the world. Until the early 1970s HWA taught against divorce, even to the point of requiring new WCG converts who had previously divorced and remarried to separate from their current mates and live celibate. But in 1974 he changed the WCG's divorce doctrine to allow divorce (other doctrines have also been changed over the years as circumstances required). In 1977 HWA married Ramona Martin, a divorcee more than forty years his junior and a secretary he had "dated" for three years prior to their marriage. In 1978 HWA, in an organizational power struggle, disfellowshipped his son Garner Ted Armstrong, who then started his own church - The Church of God, International, in Tyler, Texas. They have not had any dealings with each other since then.

HWA's extravagant lifestyle is well-known. He has his own customized, private jet with personal crew and servants. A few years ago, he had five expensive homes filled with rare works of art. His accountant, Jack Kessler, wrote in 1981 that HWA gave himself a salary of $500,000 per year. He has a number of Swiss bank accounts. HWA regularly mingles with the rich and powerful. These have included: Jacob Rothschild of England; King Leopold of Belgium; Marcos of the Philippines; Sadat and Mubarak of Egypt; Meir, Dayan, Begin, etc. of Israel; seven prime ministers and the emperor of Japan; Strauss of West Germany; Otto von Hapsburg of Austria; and numerous leaders behind the Iron Curtain.

In 1984, after three years of court battles and millions in lawyers' fees, HWA divorced his wife. In recent years, it has been revealed that HWA has had a long history of sexual perversion and that for 10 years he had maintained a sexual relationship with his youngest daughter (Robinson, ARs 14, 21, 27, 28, etc.). In spite of all this, the Armstrong church continues to gain new members and grow in power and influence (Christianity Today, Oct 19, 1984, p. 51).

Ambassador Report Publications

In 1975 a small group of ex-WCG Ambassador College alumni decided it was time that the truth about Armstrong's Ambassador College and Worldwide Church of God be made known, especially to those financially supporting those organizations. This small group of alumni formed an organization called Ambassador Review (now called Ambassador Report, P.O. Box 60068, Pasadena, California 91106). Since 1976 they have produced over 30 highly revealing publications about the Armstrong movement.

The entire Ambassador Report collection represents, undoubtedly, the most thoroughly researched, frank, and shocking look at the inner-workings of Herbert Armstrong's corporations and related groups. The series is exciting, eye-opening reading, especially if read in chronological order. With the exception of the most recent issues, the entire series is officially out-of-print. However, for a reasonable donation (used to help finance further publishing - for details see below), you may obtain quality black and white photocopies of any and all back issues that may be needed. Here in chronological order is a list of what has been published along with a partial description of the contents of each issue. Keep in mind that most issues contain, in addition, many smaller articles and numerous testimonial letters that are often equally interesting:

AR Intro: Ambassador Review's early 1976 introductory letter and the article "An Open Letter to GTA: Was Richard Plache Properly Roasted?" (9 pages).

"The Gerringer Letter": Bob Gerringer's 1975 open letter to WCG evangelist Charles Hunting, explaining why he and his wife Connie left the WCG (28 pages).

"The '39 Article": "Did Christ Reorganize the Church" by HWA. Published in 1939, the article attacks the very organizational methods HWA later adopted (10 pages).

AR 1: Ambassador Review, June '76. Expose articles on HWA, his failed prophecies, WCG tithing, AC's nonrecognition and mail censorship, the AICF, "The WCG Talmud," etc. (51 pages, illustrated).

AR 2: Ambassador Report, 1977. As described by one leading newspaper - "It may be the most devastating expose of a religious group ever published." 30 articles on all facets of the WCG. ## AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR31 March, 1985

The WCG - a Future After Herbert Armstrong?

Of the many questions regularly put to us by our readers, the most often recurring is: What will become of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and Ambassador College once founder Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) passes away? Here is the way one of our readers recently put it:

One of the most interesting questions concerning the WCG is will it be able to function after Herbert Armstrong's death. I left the church about a year ago, and up until that time, Mr. Armstrong was still intent on being around for the second coming. From what I've read and heard, HWA seems to be a man so self-possessed and contemptuous of the membership that I wonder if he will ever make provisions for an orderly transfer of power once he passes on.

Will his empire, his church, be left to myrmidon scavengers who will pocket as much loot as possible and scatter the members to the four winds? Has Mr. Armstrong done anything to insure the continuance of his church either through naming a successor or by setting down some sort of legal directives? Are there still warring factions in the hierarchy and who might they be? Is Stanley Rader still lurking in the shadows?

As tenacious as Mr. Armstrong is, I don't see him living much longer and this certainty isn't lost on his underlings who stand to reap a fair portion of the spoils. And there's about a hundred thousand well-conditioned minds out there just eager to pledge their allegiance and their pocketbook to an influential leader.

I wonder if you might comment on the state of affairs in the church right now, as well as present a few scenarios concerning its future.

Of course, none of us can know with certainty exactly what will transpire. And we do not pretend to be prophets. But from having observed the Armstrong organization closely for almost two decades, we think we can put forth a number of often-discussed scenarios, along with some suggestions as to their probability. Remember, we are dealing here with speculation. With that in mind, let us look at some of the possibilities.

Scenario No. 1: Before HWA dies, he names a successor, and at his death (or incapacitation) there is an orderly transfer of power to one man.

This is the scenario preferred by the majority of Armstrong true believers ("the sheep," as HWA refers to them). But while HWA has talked privately of possibly naming a successor, he has not actually done it, nor do we think he will. To do so would be "out of character" for this incredibly egocentric human being. If HWA were to name a successor, would not the younger man be the one looked to for leadership in the organization? And would not the designated successor take over the limelight in which HWA so loves to bask? HWA has refused to let either Stanley Rader, for many years his closest advisor, or Garner Ted Armstrong, his own son, have any chance at inheriting his empire. That being the case, why should we think he'd leave it all to any other individual?

Egocentricity of this magnitude is not as rare as some might think. Among those leaders in history who did not appoint a successor for an orderly transfer of power were Stalin, Lenin, Mussolini, and Idi Amin. Today, Kadafi and Khomeini appear to be following the same path.

For some time after Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA) left the WCG in 1978, we felt there was a good chance he would reach some kind of reconciliation with his father to again become the heir apparent of the WCG. This possibility has become increasingly unlikely, however. Not only did GTA start his own church, but he has spoken out against changes in WCG doctrine (especially the WCG's adoption of the "Primacy of Peter" teaching of the Roman Catholics), has revealed many of his father's most heinous sins, and has become a symbol of anti-WCG "rebellion." We would not expect the WCG Board of Directors to choose a disloyal "renegade" like GTA to be their leader any more than we would expect the Soviet Politburo to choose a Soviet defector to be the Soviet Premier.

Not only that, since leaving the WCG, GTA has done nothing to ingratiate himself with those around HWA, the ones who really run the WCG. As a result (and, of course, because of the damage done to his image by the scandals of the early seventies) GTA has virtually no support among top men in the WCG.

Some have suspected that in spite of all this GTA would still be lured back into the WCG organization by its big bucks. But those close to him say he is much happier now than he ever was in the WCG and that the price HWA has set for his reentry into Worldwide - humiliating public repentance and the renunciation of his new organization and loyal supporters - is too high a price to pay for something he really doesn't value that much anyway.

In our opinion, Scenario No. 1, with GTA or anyone else as successor designee, is not too likely to occur.

Scenario No. 2: HWA does not appoint a successor, but at his death (or incapacitation) a strong leader, in the style of HWA, emerges from among his top executives.

Among some of the ministers in the WCG, this seems to be the great hope. More realistic individuals, however, have serious doubts that this scenario will materialize.

HWA has maintained his dominance in the church's hierarchy not simply through his mastery of Machiavellian methods, but through truly superior skills in such areas as marketing, advertising, self-promotion, organizational structuring, and personal communication. And not only has he had far greater experience in "the world" than his subordinates, he is, after all, the founder of the WCG.

But when we look at those who might be considered within striking distance of the WCG's top spot, what do we find? Essentially, company men - individuals who achieved their positions through loyalty to their benefactor, not through any truly outstanding creativity, innovation, intellectual brilliance, superior formal education, great courage, or particularly great sacrifice. While there are one or two who are superior to the others in some respects (and we'll get to this later), there is not one so clearly ahead of the others in all the important leadership criteria as to make him an inevitable successor who could rule in the same dominating style of HWA.

It is important to keep in mind that those in important positions around HWA are there because of HWA. But once HWA is gone, whatever leader might emerge as chairman of the board or president will attain and maintain such a position only through the recognition and support of his peers (who will also be able to quickly withdraw that recognition and support). It is inevitable, therefore, that any successor to HWA will simply not have the same authority HWA has had. While Scenario No. 2 is attractive to some, to us it appears very unlikely.

Scenario No. 3: HWA dies, the WCG membership is stunned to realize that God is not "preserving Mr. Armstrong until Christ's return," they come to see they have been worshipping a mere mortal, and the WCG disintegrates.

A lot of people outside the WCG, perhaps out of hope, believe this one. We don't. Mormonism survived the death of Brigham Young. The Seventh-Day Adventist Church survived the passing of Ellen G. White. The Christian Scientist religion survived the mortality of Mary Baker Eddy.

A study of the history of American religious movements shows that while charismatic leadership is often an important ingredient in their birth and early development, there are often factors of greater importance to their survival. At least three should be recognized.

(Readers will, we hope, excuse the use of secular business parallels, but the WCG, like other religious organizations, is not only a religion, but also a business. WCG executive Ray Wright, in a sermon, recently emphasized the concept that the WCG is "a business." If anyone doubts that religions are "sold" to a market, see Positioning - the Battle for Your Mind by Al Ries and Jack Trout, a marketing textbook published by McGraw-Hill. Note particularly the chapter on marketing the Catholic Church.)

The primary factor in the survival of any religious movement is the existence of the market itself. In the case of the WCG, we have in its members a distinct "market" (a group of people willing to give money in trade for something). What this market wants is to believe (the kind of theology or ideology HWA has provided) and to experience (the kind of affirmation of faith and sense of belonging provided by church membership). When HWA dies, the market he fed will still survive.

A second factor is the product provided. In the case of Worldwide, the product traded is both the unique Armstrong theology and the experience of membership in the WCG. When HWA dies, there may be some modifications of both WCG theology and experience, but the essentials of the product will remain.

A third factor is the existence of well-organized administration and distribution systems. WCG propaganda notwithstanding, HWA has for some years now functioned in little more than a figurehead capacity. While it is true that he retains the power of removing and replacing department heads, with perhaps only one or two exceptions, the actual choices made make little difference to the overall effectiveness of the organization. For instance, it makes little difference overall which WCG personality heads the mail processing department or directs the Ambassador Foundation. The function of those offices and their significance in the WCG structure remain unchanged. At HWA's death, although personnel changes will undoubtedly occur, the administration and distribution systems will still remain intact. (While there is some overlap, administration would include the financial, accounting, legal, data processing, and facilities management functions. Distribution would include the field ministry, the foreign offices and publishing - especially circulation. The "product" that is being distributed includes both goods and services.)

"But," some may ask, "who will do the telecast?" It's an interesting question, but perhaps an irrelevant one. Anyone who has seen any of HWA's recent telecasts cannot doubt that they are already no longer an essential membership growth factor. And indeed, the WCG's marketing strategists have clearly anticipated this problem and effectively countered it by placing ever greater emphasis on their print media distribution methods. The Plain Truth news racks popping up everywhere attest to this new direction.

While it is true a charismatic speaker selling the WCG line over the airwaves would add an important marketing dimension - and such a man would undoubtedly gain stature in the WCG's political structure - such an individual probably does not exist in the WCG, and such a marketing method is really not essential. In other words, the WCG no longer needs a broadcast or a telecast to survive. For evidence, look at the Jehovah's Witnesses. They have neither a charismatic leader at the present time, nor an electronic media outreach. Yet, through their print media and "personal selling" methods, they survive, in spite of many failed prophecies and considerable bad press. Similarly, we suspect the WCG, too, will survive.

Scenario No. 4: HWA dies without naming a successor. Three or more of his lieutenants (very likely evangelists Joe Tkach, Ellis LaRavia, and Rod Meredith) "battle" for control. Some members side with each, many leave the WCG with them or join other groups, and the WCG splits into a few parts.

Not without some justification, this scenario has many believers both in and out of the WCG. At HWA's death there will be some WCG members (perhaps even as many as 20%) who will be shocked into leaving. We believe a fair number of these will drift toward Garner Ted Armstrong's organization because of the Armstrong name. Some current WCG ministers have already indicated an intention to do so. But keep in mind that while Garner Ted Armstrong offers a theology similar to the WCG's, there are important differences. GTA emphasizes freedom over structure, liberalism over conservatism, tolerance over condemnation, efficiency over opulence, participation over exclusion. And his organization, by its smaller size and smaller resources, provides a religious experience markedly different from WCG membership.

Those "escapees" who do not align with GTA will join other groups or none at all. However, based on the basic marketing principles discussed under Scenario No. 3, we believe that on HWA's death, the majority of current WCG members will remain in the WCG. The WCG has not only survived, but has actually grown a little, in spite of the mass defections of 1974, the ouster of Garner Ted Armstrong, the 1979 State of California lawsuit, the removal of Stanley Rader, and the divorce and moral discrediting of its founder. It will take much more than the death of HWA to shake the faith of most WCG members today.

As for Tkach, LaRavia, and Meredith "battling" for control - well, those who know them say they are ambitious. Nevertheless, this is where Scenario No. 4 breaks down.

The WCG is not just a group of individuals. It is a legal entity - the Worldwide Church of God, Incorporated. And that corporation has engendered a number of other corporations, including Ambassador College, which at present retains most of the church's assets. Now the key point is this: Those corporate entities with their assets are legally under the control of the boards of trustees of those corporations. And at HWA's death (if not sooner, should they care to exercise their power) those board members will be in charge.

Who are on those boards? Frankly, we're not completely sure. The WCG has never been too open about that information, and while the makeup of the boards is occasionally made public, board membership can and often does change. Nevertheless, we can venture an educated guess as to who is probably on at this time.

Based on the most recent Ambassador College (Pasadena) catalog, the board of trustees for Ambassador College, California, is composed of WCG ministers HWA, Dr. Herman L. Hoeh, Ellis LaRavia, Raymond McNair, Leroy Neff, and Richard Rice. As best as we can tell, the board of trustees for Ambassador College, Texas, is probably made up of the same individuals (we would appreciate hearing from anyone with information on this). As for the board of trustees of the WCG, over the years HWA has changed its makeup many times, often without informing those removed or added. However, those insiders we talked to seem to believe that the WCG's board is now the equivalent of the WCG's Council of Elders: HWA, Dr. Herman L. Hoeh, Ellis LaRavia, Raymond McNair, Leroy Neff, Richard Rice, Joe Tkach, Dibar Apartian, Leon Walker, Norman Smith, Harold Jackson, Dean Blackwell, Roderick Meredith, and church attorney Ralph Helge (the only nonordained man on the board).

At HWA's death these boards of trustees will have legal control of these corporate entities and assets. Undoubtedly, among these men there will be internal bickering, squabbles, factions, politicking, charges of heresy, accusation of ministerial disqualification, and perhaps even a bit of blackmail. Nevermind. In the end, self-survival will dictate, and in order to keep the source of their power and income intact, there will be enough compromises and deals made to insure that a majority will be formed. It is this majority that will choose their chairmen of the boards, their operating officers and their key policies. It is this majority and their chairmen (likely to be the same man for both church and college corporations) that will be legally in charge.

As for the minority, they will either "knuckle under" - and they should find that easy, as they've all been doing it for many years - or they will just not be there any more. For it is a very easy thing for the majority on a board to remove minority members, find cause to fire them from their executive positions (or transfer them to the Philippines), even disfellowship them from the church, change the locks on their office doors, and, if necessary, ask the local police to escort them off the grounds. In anticipation for the day of "finding cause," a few, we understand, are already keeping dossiers on the others!

But how much chance would these minority members - even if united - have at striking out on their own to take away part of the WCG market? Frankly, not much.

First of all, even if (and this is a very big "if") the minority members were united and coordinated (very unlikely), obtained in advance a copy of the church mailing list of members and donors (absolutely essential), did considerable study on their legal options, propaganda warfare, and possible corporate power plays (again, very unlikely considering the intellectual level of this bunch), and had the good sense to obtain top-flight legal counseling and strategic counseling (the names of Robert Kuhn and George Geis come to mind on the latter), the minority would still lack for adequate financial resources. And that is essential. It takes money - and lots of it - to produce the quantities of literature and broadcasts necessary to draw a large following. And in a propaganda war, all other factors being relatively equal, victory will go to the side best able to monopolize the attention of the market. Any minority group (or groups) breaking off from the WCG's vast resources is just not going to have viable financial strength.

A good example of this is the Church of God, International (CGI). When Garner Ted Armstrong left the WCG to start that organization, he had quite a lot going for him - a dedicated group of co-workers, an established ideology, a fairly good executive assistance team, good broadcasting skills, and the ability to write prodigious quantities of church literature. Yet seven years after its birth, CGI is still very small and scattered and in no major way poses a threat to the WCG. The fact is, CGI never had the financial resources to really take on the WCG. Neither will any newly disenfranchised minority from the WCG board.

This assessment of the need for financial resources may well be one shared by most of the WCG's board members already, because these men have shown themselves to be individuals who, while not astutely knowledgeable of finance, are still acutely cognizant of the importance of money. And this leads us to an important reason why any minority-of-the-board group will very likely not even attempt a serious challenge to the majority's control of the market.

The top men of the WCG (i.e., the board members and top executives) are now receiving yearly remuneration of about $75,000, plus perks. That's a lot of money for a bunch of guys who don't even have accredited BAs. That is a higher annual salary than received by many partners in Wall Street law firms and more than is earned by four-star generals in the U.S. Army. How many of these men would risk losing all that on an attempt at starting another WCG spinoff with little chance of survival?

Scenario No. 4, while having some intelligent elements, will just not fully materialize. We believe the WCG, while in for more turbulence, will survive. But what kind of organization will it be?

Our Projection (Scenario No. 5)

With HWA gone, of course, the WCG will have to be different. HWA is unique, and no one will be able to equal him in either authority or style. Yet once he leaves, don't look for earth-shaking changes in either doctrine or organizational policies - at least not for a while. The goose that lays the golden eggs must keep all her feathers.

As now, there will be a sharing of executive responsibilities. By virtue of its very size, the WCG organization requires this. Whether or not certain individuals continue to hold the executive positions they now have will be determined by the controlling majority, not by one man's fiat. Yet even now, this is pretty much the case in the WCG. Many of the decisions supposedly made by HWA today are actually arrived at by a consensus of his top administrators, who then sell HWA on their ideas for his royal stamp of approval. The perceptive reader will realize that the WCG has already been moving from a type of tyranny (selfish rule by one man) to a type of oligarchy (selfish rule by a few), and with HWA's death, the transition may well be completed. Yet there will still be someone who will preside over the controlling board(s). Who will that chairman be?

Obviously, no one (including us) can know with certainty. But by process of elimination, we will make our best guess.

We can immediately eliminate from our list of potential chairmen Dean Blackwell, Raymond McNair, Leroy Neff, and Harold Jackson. They are viewed by their peers as intellectual lightweights. We can eliminate Richard Rice and Leon Walker as they are relative newcomers to the higher echelons. Joe Tkach, another lightweight, also bears the onus of being indiscreet about his personal life, as well as overbearing in his administration of the WCG ministry (he is currently the WCG ministry's top administrator). He maintains his current administrative position solely at the pleasure of Aaron Dean, HWA's personal aide. Thus Tkach is not a true contender.

Ralph Helge can immediately be removed from the contender's list, as he is unordained. Dibar Apartian, the French- language evangelist, can be eliminated because of his alien birth and manner (the WCG is, after all, a predominantly American religious group). Roderick Meredith, although ambitious, has little support on the WCG board. His years of harsh rule over the WCG ministry have left him with few important supporters for any major power role. Thus his name can be eliminated. Ellis LaRavia, also ambitious, has a professional style and a successful administrative history in the WCG. However, his contribution to the WCG has been in peripheral areas - physical plant and AICF - not in church administration or in the proselytizing "commission." He lacks any major support and thus can also be eliminated from our list.

Evangelist Norman Smith - tall, likable, moral, masculine (he was even a western U.S. marksmanship champion), and intelligent - in many Christian organizations would be a logical choice for any top leadership position. Not in the WCG, however. He is not only distant from "where the action is" (he is by choice a minister in San Diego), but he lacks both political instinct and the desire to dominate. We can eliminate his name from the list of contenders.

That brings us down to one name.

Herman L. Hoeh

At first glance, Dr. Herman L. Hoeh (pronounced "hay," not "hooee") may be dismissed by some as unlikely to chair any post-Armstrong leadership council. While an interesting speaker, Hoeh is not a dynamic one and has no real broadcasting experience. By no means can he be described as a charismatic leader along the lines of Herbert Armstrong. Nor can he be described as "macho" - a style sought after by some WCG ministers at the time Garner Ted Armstrong was considered the heir-apparent and therefore the one to emulate. Nevertheless, there are at least fourteen reasons why we believe Herman Hoeh will eventually be the chairman of any post-Armstrong, WCG board of trustees:

(1) His loyalty to the WCG is unquestioned.

(2) His WCG tenure is as long as any other WCG leader, with the exception of HWA himself. Hoeh was among the very first Ambassador College graduates and among the very first to be ordained by Herbert Armstrong.

(3) Hoeh does not present a threat to the legacy of Herbert Armstrong. Unlike some of his colleagues, Hoeh would probably not attempt to tear down Armstrong's image after his death. Hoeh played an important part in the development of HWA's image, having been among the first, if not the first, to call HWA "God's Apostle," in the 1950s. HWA, himself, may well already consider Hoeh as the one most likely to be the faithful "keeper of the flame."

(4) He has had wide experience in all major facets of the Armstrong organization - as evangelist, editor of the Plain Truth and Bible Correspondence Course, writer, advisor to HWA, doctrinal committee chairman, college professor, and college administrator.

(5) After HWA, Hoeh is the WCG's leading ideologist. During the 1950s, especially, he played an important role in helping HWA formulate important WCG doctrines. He understands the theology of Armstrong, its strengths and its weaknesses, and has a strong vision of what the WCG should be.

(6) As a propagandist, Hoeh is equalled by none in the organization except HWA himself. He is sensitive to semantics and is a talented editor, having no close rival in the church. In a new era of print media predominance, he would be indispensable to the organization.

(7) Among his WCG peers, he is clearly the most intelligent and the best read.

(8) Hoeh knows how to handle money. As a result, his years in the WCG have left him more than just financially "comfortable." He doesn't go for flashy cars, big parties, booze, or loose women. He is known for his thrift and would probably make a highly efficient corporate money manager.

(9) He is dignified and cultured. As one former Hoeh associate told us, "You'll never see Dr. Hoeh in a honkytonk bar. He is one of the few Worldwide ministers capable of entertaining royalty or heads of state without making a fool of himself."

(10) He has both a shrewd sense of timing and perseverance. Those who have worked with him say these qualities, as much as any others, have helped him to survive the organizational purges that resulted in the departures of Albert Portune, David Antion, Raymond Cole, C. Wayne Cole, Charles Hunting, Stanley Rader, Garner Ted Armstrong, and many others.

(11) While having adroitly cultivated the image of an ideological Armstrong "conservative," those who really know him say Hoeh is a flexible pragmatist - a "liberal." He is quite capable of appearing as "all things to all men" - no small trick and a prerequisite for success in WCG politics.

(12) He is discreet. Whatever skeletons there may be in his closet, Hoeh keeps them securely out of sight. As the previously quoted former Hoeh associate put it, "You will never see Dr. Hoeh holding a secretary's hand in public or trying to pick up AC coeds." More importantly, he is highly discreet about the sins of his associates. Whereas some top WCG executives have used privileged information to assault, both privately and publicly, the reputations (and thus political standing) of their colleagues, Hoeh has gained a reputation as one who tolerantly turns his back on the foibles of friend and foe. Consequently,

(13) he has few real enemies (unusual in an organization filled with sharks), and -

(14) he has many friends. It is these friends, perceiving Hoeh as not only the best man available, but also the one most likely to protect their own interests, who, we believe, will choose him to chair any leadership group left when HWA leaves the scene.

So with all of the above in mind, what level of probability would we assign to each of the various scenarios we have discussed? Here are our approximate evaluations of each:

Scenario No. 1 (Before his death, HWA appoints a successor, and at HWA's death, or incapacitation, there is an orderly transfer of power to one man - GTA or someone else.) . . . . . 12% probability.

Scenario No. 2 (HWA does not appoint a successor, but at his death, or incapacitation, a strong leader, in the style of HWA, emerges from among his top executives.) . . . . . 6% probability.

Scenario No. 3 (HWA dies, the WCG membership is stunned to realize that God is not "preserving Mr. Armstrong until Christ's return, " they come to see they have been worshipping a mere mortal, and the WCG disintegrates.) . . . . . less than 3 % probability.

Scenario No. 4 (HWA dies without naming a successor. Three or more of his lieutenants - very likely evangelists Joe Tkach, Ellis LaRavia, and Rod Meredith - "battle" for control. Some members side with each, many leave the WCG with them or join other groups, and the WCG splits into a few parts.) . . . . . 9% probability.

Our Projection - Scenario No. 5 (HWA dies without naming a successor. No HWA-like strongman emerges after his death, but the organization becomes a type of oligarchy with Herman L. Hoeh being the initial chairman of the ruling group.) . . . . . more than 50% probability.

As for the remaining 20% (of the total 100%), let's just say that with the WCG, anything is possible. The WCG has enough naive, duplicitous, fanatical, and irrational individuals in its hierarchy that during the stress of a transition period, we might well see a truly unexpected - even bizarre - sequence of events. Time will tell.

WCG Update

Any rational individual who follows the WCG for a time cannot help but wonder about what goes on in the heads of those still enamored of Herbert Armstrong. Even Herman Hoeh is reputed to have once said, "In the Bible, God calls the church 'a peculiar people.' Actually, sometimes they're very peculiar." Here are a few brief news items on the WCG which reveal a little of that organization's current climate:

At the end of January, the WCG held its third international regional directors' conference. With Joe Tkach, director of the Ministerial Services department, moderating, the WCG's twelve regional directors presented their reports to the conference. The twelve regional directors are Colin Adair, Canada; Guy Ames, Philippines; Dibar Apartian, French Department; Stan Bass, Caribbean; Peter Nathan, New Zealand and the South Pacific; Carn Catherwood, Italian Department; Bram de Bree, Netherlands; Roy McCarthy, South Africa; Robert Morton, Australia and Asia; Frank Brown, Britain, Scandinavia, East Africa, West Africa, the Middle East; Frank Schnee, West Germany; and Leon Walker, Spanish Department.

The directors were apparently hoping for some major announcement about who would succeed HWA. Instead, HWA only spoke very briefly on how the WCG's regional offices are like the spokes of a wheel attached to a hub - WCG headquarters (HWA) - but that this wheel has no rim! The point intended was that regional directors should look only to headquarters, not to each other. (We wonder if it ever dawned on these "regional directors" that a rimless "wheel" - one having only a hub and spokes - will never roll anywhere or function in any normal way. Indeed, is not such a circleless "wheel" really a self-contradiction?) Some complained that HWA spent most of the conference sleeping in the front row as the directors gave their reports. (Actually, can we blame him?)

* * *

Over the years HWA has chosen a number of individuals as most likely to become his "Beast of Revelation": Mussolini, Hitler, Tito, F. J. Strauss, Otto von Hapsburg, etc. Now, believe it or not, HWA is pointing at someone else. This time it's a mysterious Jewish Rabbi-politician. In his January 14 letter to his followers, HWA wrote:

"A recent incident occurred which could presage critical world-shaping events for this year 1985, Late one night less than two weeks ago, three Jewish rabbis from Jerusalem called on me. They professed to be on a mission of grave importance that could trigger crucial events leading quickly to the coming of Christ and the end of the world.

"One of these rabbis is a member of the Israeli Knesset, Israel's national Congress. They explained the divided condition politically in the Knesset, and although the ultraorthodox Jews which these men represent are in the minority, they do hold the balance of power. One of them, who seemed to be their leader, hopes to maneuver things to make himself Prime Minister. He claims to be a physicist of distinction and showed photographs of himself with President Ronald Reagan, Konstantin Chernenko of the Soviet Union, and Deng Xiaoping, leader of China. He explained plans to build the third Temple at Jerusalem. He said his group of ultraorthodox Jews had been studying the New Testament. He said (and I have since verified the truth of this) that these Jews expected a pre-Messiah to come almost immediately prior to the coming of the Messiah or Christ, and that he himself is that pre-Messiah or 'ante-Christ' as he termed it. He insisted it is necessary that I help him politically become the Israeli Prime Minister. They seemed to know all about me personally.

"I kept trying to pry out of him how and where they proposed to build the temple prior to Christ's Second Coming. I think it best not now to divulge his astonishing answer.

"At 2 a.m. they left. I gave them my very definite answer. I cannot in any manner join him in politics. The rabbis left rather downhearted. I have checked and this man is in fact who he claims to be. My real appraisal I will not now state."

HWA's February 25 letter to his church and co-workers opened with this Jean Dixon-like prophecy:

"A drastic, world shaking turn of events may occur unexpectedly this year. This is the 'Fortieth Year' and historically the 40th year has been the year of a drastic turn in national and world events."

HWA goes on to explain that WWII ended forty years ago and that he still expects a U.S. of Europe to materialize, but -

"For some reason God has been holding back the fulfillment of this prophecy - BUT IT IS CERTAIN TO OCCUR! [Emphasis is his, of course.] Could this 40th year be the year that will bring it about?"

Dwight Armstrong

Dwight Leslie Armstrong, 80, the official hymn composer of the Worldwide Church of God and brother of church founder Herbert Armstrong, died of cancer on November 17 (Pastor General's Report, 11-21-84). His Sequim, Washington funeral was attended by his wife Karen, his twin sister Mary Lucile Edmonson of Portland, many WCG ministers, and his nephew Garner Ted Armstrong. HWA did not attend - apparently because he had heard, in advance, that his son Ted would be there.

Martin Leaves FBR, Heads ASK

Of the dozens of WCG spinoff groups, few, if any, have had the impact of the Foundation for Biblical Research (FBR). Begun in 1974, the FBR has played an important part in helping thousands of former WCG members see through many WCG fallacies and gain a better understanding of the Bible. It has never been Ambassador Report's position that the FBR possessed all knowledge or has been beyond error. Nevertheless, the FBR has clearly helped many gain insight into the theological literature central to Christianity.

Perhaps because we mentioned the FBR so often in years past, many have written us lately asking for the "inside scoop" on what has been transpiring in that organization in the last few months. In late December Ernest L. Martin, who had been the FBR's president for ten years, sent a letter to the top contributors of the FBR (most noncontributors were apparently ignored) stating that he had been "fired" by the FBR board and was starting a new organization. Almost simultaneously, the FBR sent out a letter stating that Martin had been removed as FBR president, but remained on the board and would continue researching and writing for the FBR. Then the FBR came out with a rebuttal to Martin's letter and Martin came out with a second letter and cassette tape on the situation. Needless to say, many FBR supporters have been more than a little dismayed by the obvious discord.

Over the years, Martin's writings have so monopolized the pages of FBR publications that some have apparently assumed that the FBR was both founded and run by Martin alone. Actually, for some years now, Ken Fischer, as office manager, has been responsible for most of the day-to-day management of the FBR. And as for the organization's beginning, it was actually ex-WCG minister Gary Arvidson and ex-Ambassador College administrator Ken Storey who conceived the idea of starting an organization that could serve as an open forum for discussing and publishing theological research papers. It was Ken Storey's donation of his personal savings that provided the required start-up capital. Arvidson and Storey asked Martin to join them, and in 1974 those three men were the FBR's first board of trustees.

Perhaps due to his former prominence in the WCG, Martin was elected the FBR's first president. By 1976, the FBR board had expanded to seven, with the addition of Vic Orn, Ken Fischer, Gary Reid, and John Cheetham. But disagreements over FBR goals saw Ken Storey, then office manager and secretary-treasurer of the FBR, at odds with Martin. In a 4 to 3 vote engineered by Martin (with Martin, Orn, Cheetham, and Fischer voting against Storey, Arvidson, and Reid), Storey was removed from the board. In 1978, Arvidson, feeling out of step with Martin and not desiring to stand in the way of harmony, resigned from the board. In 1979, Cheetham, unhappy over the way Martin approached the ideas of others, also resigned from the board. Martin was left firmly in control. So much so that in 1980, Vic Orn, a long-time friend of Martin - perhaps believing Fischer to be unquestioningly loyal to Martin and Canadian Gary Reid to be living too far away to make a difference - resigned from the board (with his wife remaining as bookkeeper until last December), stating in a letter to Martin that he was confident Martin's leadership position was secure. And so it was - until 1983, when Fischer and Reid began to have serious second thoughts about Martin.

For ten years, Martin dominated the FBR, but not without criticism. While recognized as having a creative theological mind, knowledge of history, strong writing and speaking skills, and, of late, the attention of certain scholars around the world, there are many Bible students who have complained that Martin's theology unwisely downplays the importance of Christian fellowship and New Testament ritual, overemphasizes the doctrine of "imputation" (that the Christian gains righteousness simply through belief in Christ), has yet to adequately mesh the doctrine of divine judgment with his confidence in "universal reconciliation," and virtually ignores the problems of applied Christian ethics. His interpretations of biblical prophecy have not gained wide support, and there are those who say Martin is not always consistent. For instance, Martin's January tape contained this statement:

"Most people have a misconception of the Worldwide Church of God, in my view. I don't think it's a dictatorship at all. Some people say it is, but I don't think it is. The thing is - you are free, or anyone is free, to leave that organization at any time."

Yet Martin for many years openly bristled at Herbert Armstrong's unilateral style, calling him "that little Napoleon," and even put out a booklet (Church Government and Church Organization) that condemned autocratic church government in no uncertain terms.

Then there was this statement on his tape:

"The Holy Spirit can be taken from people. I'm not saying that anyone that I know has had the Holy Spirit taken from him or her. I'm not saying that. But I'm saying it's possible."

Yet there are those who recall that not long ago Martin was teaching that scripturally it was not possible. Here's another interesting quote from the January tape:

"Christ Jesus came from the Father and he was changed from spirit into flesh.... He became flesh and, I'll tell you, that flesh wasn't wicked. That flesh was holy."

But some of Martin's readers recall how, in 1982, Martin wrote an article entitled "Was Jesus Ever Sick?" in which he stated (p. 4), "Isaiah 53 definitely indicates that Christ was prophesied to be sickly while he was in the flesh. The New Testament certainly backs up this conclusion." Some have asked, "How does Martin's picture of a physically imperfect Jesus square with this new 'holy flesh' idea?"

An even bigger problem concerns Martin's privately stated views that there is no adequate evidence for a universal Noachian Flood and that early Bible chronology is "idealized" and not to be taken as literal historical fact. Many reputable scholars would, of course, agree with him. But some who've read his articles over the years feel that such views are completely inconsistent with the key premise that underlies all of Martin's writings - the same premise which supposedly underlies most Christian fundamentalist religions, namely that the Christian Bible is the revealed "Word of God," and as such is inerrant and to be taken literally.

It is noteworthy that during the last two years, some of Martin's harshest critics have been his own FBR associates. One Foundation employee, who preferred not to be named, told us, "I'm not saying that Doc's writings are all bad. Most of his early FBR work was really good. In fact, we plan to still distribute most of those expositions and booklets. But in my opinion, for the last year or two, Doc [Martin] has been more interested in sensationalism and the acclaim of so-called scholars than in careful research."

There is virtually no past or present FBR researcher that we know of that does not have theological differences with Martin. Some believe Martin is now often overreaching in attempts at buttressing untenable positions. As an example of this, Leona McNair points to Martin's new theory that Jesus and the two thieves were crucified on an almond tree.

Some who've worked with Martin during the last two years say that he had become completely unwilling to allow the FBR to publish any theological material that did not support his own views. For instance, for some time, Ken Fischer, Gary Arvidson, and others have felt that certain biblical passages (Rom. 8:35-39, 11 Cor. 5:1-8, Phil. 1:23, Ps. 139:7-8, etc.) seem to indicate that the "mortality of the soul" doctrine held by Martin, the WCG, and other groups is possibly flawed and should be reexamined. But Martin adamantly refused to allow his view on the subject to be questioned in any FBR publication.

Ironically, it was Martin's own teachings on "universal reconciliation" that led Fischer and Arvidson into such areas of inquiry now labeled by Martin as "anti-Christian." Neither Arvidson nor Fischer believe in any type of eastern reincarnation (where the dead are reborn as animals in repeated future lives), yet both seem to feel that some divine system of resurrection and spiritual growth may be the answer to the problem of harmonizing the doctrines of judgment and universal reconciliation. It is interesting that theologian, A. E. Knoch, whose writings influenced Martin, was able to produce an answer to the apparent dilemma (see Knoch, The Problem of Evil and the Judgments of God), and Origen, the third-century Christian writer often referred to by Martin in years past, taught universal reconciliation and the immortality of the soul (see Sahakian, History of Philosophy, pp. 86-88).

Regarding his book The Original Bible Restored, Martin's opinion that New Testament canonization was completed by the Apostle John has been challenged by writer Gene Justice, who, in a paper submitted to the FBR, presented evidence that canonization may very well have been completed by Peter. Under Martin, the FBR never published the Gene Justice paper. Nor would Martin allow other papers - often well-researched and well-written - to be published if they didn't support his own teachings.

Gary Arvidson told us, "The Foundation had become a one-man show. It just wasn't living up to its stated purpose, which is research without dogmatism. 'Dogmatism' - people need to look that word up and see what it really means. Unfortunately, Ernest seemed to think the Foundation was meant solely as a platform for his own ideas."

One Foundation employee said, "Ever since Ernest started getting attention from certain scholars, he seemed to demand more and more respect from those around him. When he didn't get the type of unquestioning adoration he desired, we were subjected to hours-long self-aggrandizing lectures on the importance and greatness of his work. When he was on a roll, we couldn't even answer the phone without him being insulted. Frankly, I wondered about the man's balance."

Martin finally got to where he was requiring FBR employees to pledge their loyalty to him. To back up this requirement, he told of how, during his years in Worldwide, he knew much of what HWA taught was in error, but that out of loyalty to his employer he did not openly teach what he knew to be true. In the same way, he wanted them to keep their ideas to themselves. Needless to say, such reasoning did little to impress employees who had long ago turned their backs on Herbert Armstrong.

Complaints of runaway egotism were aired by every FBR employee and associate we talked to. Further, many complained that Martin rarely, if ever, gave adequate recognition to those who contributed significantly to many of his "discoveries." This criticism gains plausibility from the fact that Martin's writings contain short or nonexistent bibliographies, few footnote citations, and no real acknowledgments.

But FBR writer Rudy Dykstra is even harsher in his criticism of Martin's methods. Dykstra claims that in a number of articles Martin authored, he actually added words to biblical quotations to produce evidence for positions otherwise unjustifiable.

Martin's editorial policies were clearly a major factor in his departure. But another factor may have been money management. Board members Fischer and Reid admit privately that they were unhappy with the way the FBR's financial resources were being managed. Both seem to feel Martin spent too much, took too many perks (we understand Martin even demanded the FBR pay his cable TV bills and his wife's Cosmo subscription), and gave himself unjustified and unauthorized "loans" and "bonuses." Fischer and Reid were also unhappy over the fact that Martin copyrighted - under his own name - certain books written while on FBR salary and then demanded royalties on their publication. Then, at one point, Martin even started requiring that FBR donors pay an extra $12 if they wanted his autograph on requested books!

Since the FBR shake-up in December, there have been many wild rumors about Martin and the FBR. Not surprising, many of these rumors are untrue. For instance, some have believed that Martin was removed because of a drinking problem. Not so. While Martin has openly discussed his having had an alcohol addiction problem for many years, at the urging of family and friends, he committed himself for over two weeks to Raleigh Hills Hospital in 1984. Since then he has strictly abstained. Not only did his associates at the FBR encourage him in his battle, the FBR and its insurance company paid the $10,000 Raleigh Hills bill. So drinking was not a factor.

Nor was Martin's local "ladies' man" reputation a factor - at least not officially. Board members Fischer and Reid say the subject never came up at the December board meeting. Nonetheless, it is a fact that in recent years a string of female FBR supporters and employees (some married) have complained of sexual harassment and of "being used" by Martin. It's difficult to believe this did not contribute to his decline in stature as a Christian leader within the group.

By December 1984, board members Fischer and Reid had lost all confidence in Martin. The editorial policy disagreements, the financial management problems, and perhaps other factors all contributed to his removal from the FBR presidency. It may not have come as the total surprise Martin now claims it was. For weeks before the board meeting's scheduled date, Martin had consulted with a lawyer specializing in nonprofit corporate law. And (WCG Apostleship contenders pay attention!) two weeks before the scheduled December 13 board meeting, Martin secretly removed the mailing list files from the FBR's Pasadena office, and not until well after that meeting, by which time he had copied the needed information, did he respond to office manager Ken Fischer's demand that he return the files to the office. Thus after his removal from the FBR presidency, he was able to use the stealthily gained information to set up his new organization.

At the December 13 meeting, Reid and Fischer had indicated to Martin that they hoped he would continue with the FBR, on salary, researching and writing at his pleasure. However, Martin's December 24 letter to the FBR's top donors changed everything. Fischer and Reid were stunned by what they felt were Martin's gross inaccuracies and bad faith. Martin refused their demand that he publish a retraction and apology. On February 2, the FBR "accepted Martin's resignation" from the board, and Howard Clark was added to the board and made vice-president (Reid preferred not to continue as vice-president because of residing so far from California. Also, at the earlier December 13 meeting, Fischer and Reid voted to add Arvidson and Dykstra to the board, so there are now five members.)

Just as Martin probably anticipated his break with the FBR, Ken Fischer and others had anticipated that Martin would start a new organization. For over a year, Martin had been indicating that he was tired of writing for the ex-WCG set and wanted to start his own publishing venture, perhaps to be named Elmhurst (after his initials ELM). So while much of what Martin wrote in his December 24 letter irritated his fellow board members, his new business plan did not come as a total surprise. In fact, at the December 13 meeting Fischer and Reid, attempting to show Christian generosity, had actually indicated to Martin their willingness to help him start his own publishing firm. It was the way Martin later went about it that actually upset them.

Martin's new organization is called Associates for Scriptural Knowledge, or ASK. From the articles of incorporation filed with the State of California, it appears that ASK has only one board member - Ernest L. Martin. Perhaps that is why, on his taped message, he exults, "I am not subjecting myself to man in any way! And that's one of the reasons why I am grateful that I am no longer a part of FBR."

His ASK articles of incorporation state:

"The specific purposes of this corporation are to operate a church; to research and establish doctrine and prophecies as revealed in the Holy Scriptures; and to disseminate this information by publications, seminars, and meetings."

On his taped message, Martin says:

"I don't have a commission like [the apostles and prophets] did. But I am on a mission of my own - a mission to see the gospel restored as best as it can be at the end of this age.... We are not interested in raising up fellowship groups around the world. I do not have time for that."

In his second letter to his followers, Martin explained that a major part of his new "mission" would be to produce a new version of the Bible, to be called "the Manuscript Version of the Scriptures." He writes, "This is the 'Elijahan task' that this world needs at this time."

To begin work on his new mission, Martin has set up his headquarters in Hemet, California, the home of Joan Marie, his new wife (his first wife Helen divorced him in 1981). Hemet is more than 80 miles from Fuller Seminary's library and over 100 miles from UCLA's library where Martin supposedly does much of his research. Yet, apparently Joan Marie prefers to remain in Hemet. So it is in Hemet that Martin, with his son Sam, his new wife, and his mother-in-law, will begin the great "Elijahan task." Incidentally, they have already produced their first booklet. Its subject is the "sacred names." Joan Marie was once involved with Jacob Meyer's sacred names movement, which may have something to do with Martin's new interest in the subject. Their address is: ASK, P.O. Box 1863, Hemet, CA 92343.

And what of the FBR? Can it last?

Howard Clark, the FBR's new vice-president, said, "I'm going to do what I can to help it survive. The Foundation can continue to help a lot of people learn important lessons, mature, and become Christians better able to stand on their own two feet."

But will good intentions alone keep the FBR alive? Fischer, the FBR's new president, realizing many will not support an organization lacking a central hero figure, has retained a new Christian accounting firm and has cut back FBR expenditures to the bare bone. He anticipated correctly; FBR contributions have plummeted. Nevertheless, he is not only determined to keep the Foundation going - even working out of his garage if need be - but he has already accomplished something Martin never could, or perhaps, never would.

In the last six weeks, Fischer has been able to rally virtually every thinker rebuffed during the Martin years and gain their support. Some of those who have indicated a renewed interest in the FBR are David Ord (now pursuing a master's degree in theology), former Plain Truth editor Brian Knowles, Sir. Antony Buzzard, writers Gene Justice, Leona McNair, Gary Arvidson, Ken Storey, and broadcaster Tom Hall. Fischer has also been able to line up a number of never-WCG-associated scholars, who could provide a vital new dimension to FBR research.

But will all this save the FBR? After all, a lot of people have become very attached to Martin's style. One of our own readers wrote us, "The Foundation without Ernest Martin is like the New Testament without Jesus Christ." But in February, Gary Reid told us:

"I don't think a Christian educational organization should be run as one man's personal business or ego trip. There are enough Herbert Armstrongs in the world already. When Ken Fischer and I realized Doc could no longer remain as Foundation president we knew it wouldn't be easy. And we knew that removing him might mean the end of the Foundation. But we take our responsibilities as Foundation trustees very seriously, as do our three new board members. Those FBR purposes that we have in print are exactly what we are upholding.

"Maybe if we had acted earlier, the situation would not have gotten so out of hand, but it did. Whether or not the Foundation lasts - well, we'll just have to see. I guess it will all depend on what our readers really want."

After his February 2 "resignation," Martin retained control of his company car, two FBR computers and other property, and demanded $10,000 cash as "royalties," from the FBR. He threatened to sue if his demands were not met, refused arbitration, and lawyers for both sides were unable to reach an agreement. Now, just as we are about to go to press, we have learned that Martin and the FBR, without the assistance of their lawyers, have signed an agreement. As severance, Martin has gotten about $18,000 in FBR assets, including his company car, two computers, his desk and chair, a printer, a typewriter, and a large stock of books. This is somewhat less than the $25,000 in severance Martin got from the WCG in 1973 (in return for a promise not to openly criticize them for five years), but with his new settlement, his ASK is on its way. According to Ken Fischer, "We didn't want to fight with Doc. We just wanted to do the Christian thing."

Tom Williams Found Guilty

In our March, 1980 issue (p. 6) we reported how former WCG minister Tom Williams had started Liberty Ministries International (LMI), an organization that offered those willing to pay $3,000 an opportunity to start their own local church. (And we pointed out how the IRS frowned on individuals starting churches solely for tax-benefit purposes.)

On October 19, 1984, a Richmond, Virginia jury found Tom Williams and his wife Linda each guilty of one count of conspiring to defraud the federal government and 30 counts of tax and postal violations. Robert M. Jacobs, an associate of theirs, was found guilty of one count of conspiracy and four counts of tax violations.

The government charged that LMI, started in 1979, was a pyramid-type scheme that sold in-home ministries to people around the country for purposes of gaining tax exemptions and deductions to which they were not entitled. Testifying on behalf of the government were William M. Morris, Douglas B. Taylor, Gary L. Alexander, Thomas J. Boody, and Keith Hunter, all of whom had been involved with LMI, and all of whom - with the exception of Hunter - have now served short prison sentences. The three defendants did not testify.

On November 29, Judge D. Dortch Warriner sentenced Tom Williams, 39, to five years in prison and fined him $20,000. Linda Williams, the mother of two, was sentenced to 18 months in prison and fined $10,000. Jacobs was sentenced to three months and fined $10,000. In addition, all three will be required to pay the $46,107 the government says it spent in prosecuting the case, and after prison, each will face three years of probation. The sentences could have been far higher. Judge Warriner declined to sentence Tom Williams on 29 of the counts on which he was convicted and declined to sentence Linda Williams on 30 counts. Had he done so, they could have faced more than 100 years in prison and $200,000 in fines.

Attorneys for the defendants said they planned to appeal. And with good reason. At a November 15 hearing, Judge Warriner, while convinced the defendants' rights had not been violated, stated quite emphatically that the government prosecutors had handled much of the case in a highly improper manner. While refusing to throw out the case, he invited the defense attorneys to take his ruling to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. In spite of the prosecution's faults, however, at the November 29 sentencing, Warriner made it plain that he believed the defendants were, indeed, guilty. (The Richmond News Leader, Oct. 20, Nov. 16, Nov. 30.) It should be interesting to see how the 4th U.S. Circuit Court rules on the case.

We seem to be living in the age of bumper stickers. Now Herbert Armstrong has had one dedicated to him, and it succinctly captures his unique message! The peel-and-stick decal (at left) is now appearing on car bumpers (and Plain Truth news racks) around the country. The decals are available for FREE by writing to: Newsgrams, P.O. Box 11074, Dallas, TX 75223.

Letters

My sympathies to the woman from Minnesota who wrote (AR, July 1984, p. 12) concerning the pain of living with a hardcore WCG husband. I have one of those too, and, like her, I feel like screaming at people who admonish me to get off the back of this "good, nice person" who "isn't hurting anything or anyone."

Isn't he? How do you explain the hundreds - perhaps thousands - of divorces directly attributable to a mate's membership in the WCG? Is that why "The Church" has actually had to hold classes on dealing with the violently unhappy reactions of "unconverted" spouses?

What uninformed observers don't realize is that the WCG is not simply a belief system, but an alarmingly rigid cult whose strange practices and excessive demands - temporal, monetary, and cultural - can leave a marriage in shambles when one partner buys into it.

If you happen to be unlucky enough to have a husband in Armstrongism, it's as if a third party - who from now on calls all the shots - has suddenly been introduced into the marriage. Life becomes thoroughly abnormalized, with hardly any aspect left unaffected.

For starters, you find yourself alone a good deal as your husband begins to put in long hours on sabbaths, services, "feasts," "holy days," Bible studies, potlucks, meetings, special events, rehearsals, whatnot. (You can kiss weekends and vacations goodbye for the same reasons unless you agree to attend services with him and "vacation" only at feast sites.)

Your social life begins to disappear. He won't attend traditional holiday parties, and hostesses are put off by his dietary taboos on other occasions as well. Your best friends gradually slip away, and invitations dwindle to nothing. His time is too limited, his practices too restrictive, the marital tension too evident. Eventually (as the woman from Minnesota noted) only WCG members remain friends - which for the nonmember spouse amounts to being forced to fraternize with the enemy or have no social life at all. Many WCGers are pleasant enough personally, but there's still pain in associating with them; no matter how you slice it, they're still my husband's compatriots and supporters in a pursuit that brings me great grief. On top of this, I'm just plain uncomfortable in their presence because I can't understand them. What kind of people are these that they can't see through that unsavory old man [HWA] and his ripoff cult?

Add to all of this your worry about being widowed because of the WCG's anti-medicine stance. If you have children, you stew over their welfare as well: What if he refuses THEM needed treatment in your absence? Your pre-WCG family observances - birthdays and holidays - become empty and depressing, exactly as if you had divorced. The joy goes out of celebrating when the husband and father is absent, even if the absence is in attitude rather than physical presence. Family relationships suffer irreparably - little remains to share and discuss when his time is so limited and so many activities are prescribed. After awhile a cloud of resentment permeates every thing. On top of all this, there is the tremendous financial drain - something the woman from Minnesota didn't even mention, surprisingly. There is also the matter of having to cope with the pinchpenny attitudes engendered by these huge donations. Is it "not hurting anyone" to give away thousands while your family does without? Is it being a "good Christian" to let your home become ramshackle and tumbledown because you're too busy with church activities to maintain it?

Probably worst of all is the sheer FRUSTRATION of watching an otherwise intelligent man check his fine mind at the door and embrace an organization run by someone as totally despicable as HWA. Virginia Kineston (AR, July 1984, p. 7) put it well when she referred to him as "a liar, a thief and a pervert." Are the members utterly blind that they go on swallowing his incestuous past, his hypocrisies, his failed prophecies? What about his constant tacky money-grubbing, his egomania, his lavish living, his changing of the rules to suit himself? How can they remain unmoved at the sight of all the suicides, broken homes, and custody cases that trail after him? Why don't they question his pose as an expert on child rearing when he abused his daughter for years and his grown children despise him? What do all the broken families that were "D & R" victims have to say about his marrying and then divorcing a divorcee himself? The sickening list goes on and on.

Not hurting anything or anyone? I think of my own years of loneliness, alienation, grief, pain, worry, and financial loss and my customary compassion deserts me. I'll be out celebrating on the day Herbert Armstrong dies.

You have my permission to print this, but PLEASE sign it:

-Name and state withheld by request."

When I married I knew nothing of the [WCG] cult. We had religious discussions before marriage, but everything about the WCG was kept secret from me by my husband and his parents. All I knew was that he used to be Baptist. After a month or two of marriage these strange magazines and booklets started appearing everywhere, in his mom's house especially. I started hearing lectures on pork at first, but I still did not realize the magnitude of involvement there. Then our first Christmas together - normally a very special one for couples - I found this correspondence to Ambassador College....

My husband finally admitted in a heated discussion that their beliefs were kept from me (or I should say their rules and regulations). That Christmas he did not want a Christmas tree and he informed me he was getting back to his religion. My first married Christmas away from home and family only to find this out! I wanted an All-American family and the whole nine yards. But the WCG has put a strain on every relationship in my life.

However, I've never been one to take anything lying down so I've done what I can to help the situation. That means trying to show him a Christian has the fruits of the spirit in life: joy, love, etc. There is no joy in his.

I have written the Plain Truth and let them know my disfavor. I would do almost anything short of doing bodily harm to Mr. Armstrong to erase this mess out of our lives. I have found you can't be too nice dealing with these people. In the last two years I have done a fair amount of study. Let me make a few observations: (1) I feel the WCG attracts people with a low self-esteem in certain areas such as relationships with the opposite sex. (2) It draws people that need a lot of structure in their lives, and they become robot-like. (3) I believe it perpetuates a desire to control others - especially women.

Mr. Armstrong definitely has a hang up on women. He appears to draw women with little self-esteem and perhaps those that view other women in threatening ways. I believe WCG men are taught that women are to be viewed in a very limited capacity - almost as if they should not be liked for their unique personalities and character but only as a means to an end (objects).

WCG people become hostile at the slightest question or remark. It sickens me and hurts me in the deepest sense to see the older people, with so little left in life, taken advantage of and then made to feel so bad about themselves.

I don't want to loose my husband. Through it all I love him and want his mind to become unclouded. However, I would fight against this at all odds. I only hope that God will help him where no one else can.

-Alabama

My husband joined the WCG in 1972. It grossly affected our previously happy marriage and caused termination of same in 1982. I felt that after the October Report I just had to respond. I could identify so well with Leona McNair and her plight. The antics mentioned in that story are identical to what my ex-husband did. They must have had the same advice. I also took a nursing refresher course and am supporting myself and my children in this way. My ex-husband pays no support - despite a court settlement that agreed to same. He has just returned from keeping the feast in China.

-Canada

I read with a great deal of interest the report of Leona McNair's experience with WCG. As a former "true believer," I can identify with her anguish and rejoice in her triumph. It impresses me that her first action was to seek her own healing, then, presumably, fight a legal battle not only for her own vindication but for the good of others who might suffer as she had.

There seems to be a message here for women. Regardless of a woman's state of faith when she leaves WCG (or any cult), she needs to acknowledge the special suffering of a woman and at the same time recognize that bitterness will get her nowhere. Open-eyed forgiveness, psychological and/or spiritual healing, and great wisdom in charting her course are needed.

Many of your female readers have no doubt experienced some of these problems: how to deal with a woman's supposedly weak and super-emotional nature; how to determine that one is or is not demon-possessed (this seems funny now, but when one's self-confidence is at an all time low the accusation can be traumatizing); how to compensate for over-zealous child discipline; when to obey and when not to obey; when and how to pursue a career; when to speak up and when to be silent; when to stay and when to leave, and how to deal with divorce. All of these issues are related to the universal problems of loneliness, defining one's concept of God, sorting through one's faith (if indeed, any faith is salvageable), and finding one's own strengths as well as help from God and others.

These topics have been of much concern to me through the years since I left WCG. Women's advocates seem polarized. A woman must either submit totally or repudiate God, men and family and fight militantly. There has got to be a middle ground. I believe Leona McNair found it.

I would like to hear from women who have dealt with these and other particularly female-oriented cult problems, especially from those who feel, as I do, that through it all, God has come closer.

*-Bobette Pestana
10111 North Ashley Street
Tampa, FL 33612*

Some old proverbial cliches run through your mind when you are finally delivered from Herbert's "planned truth"! You know the sort: "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," "If you don't use your mind someone (or something) else will," and "A fool and his money are soon parted."...

Through the "cloudy dust" in the days of yesteryear, one repeatedly failed to notice the spiritual vortex in which we were drowning. It was "service, service, service." Keep 'em so busy that they don't have time to think for themselves. Yes, all we had time to do, as we kept sinking into this "slime" up to our mouths, was to quietly urge others, "Don't make waves, don't make waves."

Yep! Just like "lambs to slaughter" we prostrated ourselves before the "Golden Altar of Mammon." We just sat there, very obediently and dull-wittedly, while from "the top-down" we were being butchered with the sharply honed knife of "psychological menticide" (brainwashing). The most heinous type of "work" was being performed - spiritual lobotomy. Think about it. It was mind control, mass obedience. Oh, the pharisees did a "work" all right, and unfortunately still do!...

Matthew 24:24 never had so much meaning for me as it does today after realizing that I had been "letting" someone else use my mind. I've got it back now and I'm trying to catch up on 20 years of time that didn't stand still while I did. A lot has happened. There's lots to read and my eyes are 20 years older. What's that saying? Oh, yeah, "We get too soon old and too late smart." Well, still, better late than never!

-Maryland

I walked out of Herbert's church in October 1978. I have never been back. My two sons and a daughter are still in Herbert's church and they will not let me talk to them about Herbert or even about a death in our family. My mother died in 1981 at the age of 91 and they would not even let me talk to them about it. They just said, "Do not call us anymore!"

-Tennessee

My wife has been a member of the Armstrong cult for over 15 years and with each passing year the strain has gone from bad to worse. I have four children and it is their future I am deeply worried about. My wife may be divorcing me within the next few months and has already stated that she will demand full and total custody and control of our children. My wife has already informed me that after divorcing me she hopes to remarry within six months. I am told that this is quite normal and is [now] part of the active support given [by the WCG] in such cases.

-England

Thanks for your concern and the copious material you sent. I've contacted [the people you recommended] and I'm sure they will be able to help. It's hard to imagine the utter despair one goes through in my position, but I'm now convinced that I'm not walking this path alone. The thought of losing my children [through divorce] to a woman (my wife) who has been so indoctrinated by the WCG as to be nothing more than an automaton has produced such an anger and a will to persevere that I'm confident we will win.

Adults who are lead away into the hallucinations of HWA are sad enough, but at least they had the will and mind to make their own decisions. The children are the ultimate losers. They never had the chance to decide for themselves and are often doomed by the terrible mistakes of others.

Whatever the outcome of my own legal case (judges have been known to rule contrary to evidence before) you can be assured that the fight against the tyrannical WCG has gained a lifelong compatriot.

-New York

Dear Mr. Trechak:

Our names seem to indicate some ethnic relationship. Although I was born in the USA my parents were from overseas (Russian and Ukrainian by background). Most of my 40 years as a Christian minister has been in Baptist churches (although I've also pastored Presbyterian and Methodist churches). I was also president of Czechoslovak Baptist Convention (USA & Canada) for several years as well as editor of the English magazine of the Russian-Ukrainian Baptists in the USA.

It seems to me that former WCGers are in three groups: (1) Those disillusioned and offended and are now atheists; (2) the various splinter groups off the WCG who still hold most of the teachings of HWA (GTA and Battles would be examples of this); (3) those who have come out completely and are now with Christian groups like Baptist, Assembly of God, Methodist, etc.

I know your "policy" is not to present theology, but I thought your closing comment (paragraph) on page 9 of the July issue on Robert Williams was terrific and hits the nail square on the head. In my opinion all cults are soft on salvation and the doctrine of Christ (these two in particular and often the doctrine of the holy spirit).

Yours is excellent work. I have contacted some of the former WCG groups for their literature because you give full addresses. I commend you for doing thorough work. Thank you again.

Editor: You're very perceptive. The editor's parents are from Czechoslovakia. And yes, your analysis of what becomes of former WCG members is also accurate.

On December 2, I tuned in to HWA's program an "The Plain Truth about Christmas." He was talking about the money that people spend on Christmas gifts. (This, of course, is the money that he wants.) The program was copyrighted 1981. I only watch the HWA shows to catch copyright dates at the end. They all seem to be old tapes made in Tucson even if there is a 1984 copyright date on them. Many of them have 1982 or 1983 copyright dates, but the current issue of The Plain Truth is dubbed in at the end. This is trickery and deceit. I have also noticed the head wobbling you mentioned. If this man needs help in locating even the food on his dinner plate, he could hardly be making new TV programs. So I am convinced that it is only a matter of time before the TV program will be off the air. The faithful church members will probably think that it is "the famine of the Word."

-Manitoba, Canada

Thanks for your continuing efforts to clear the air with true information. I would like to bring another subject to your attention. I recently spoke to Dee and Carl O'Beirn and I commented that they at least got out of WCG with their money. In 1970, Carl (a former WCG minister) was called to Pasadena before the board and expunged from the organization. The meeting concerned doctrinal questions he had raised about the calendar and law based on lunar timing. After this episode there came forth from the WCG ministers a "story" that Carl was leaving the WCG because he had inherited about $80,000 from his family. False! Now what possesses those WCG ministers to say things like that? As usual, a smoke screen to cover the real issue. All Carl got was a humble taken severance check and a quick pick-up of the company car!

-California

Editor: We don't know what possesses them.

You have made a good move in creating a flyer on Armstrong. I also feel that it is good to ask those who believe in what you are doing to support the work financially. People need to be exhorted in a proper way, and this includes giving. Please continue to be creative in getting the facts out.

-Kansas

You are keeping us well informed on what's going on with Armstrong and his lost tribe. I hope they wake up before its too late. If they are still going to Petra, look out.

-Kansas

Hope you will be able to afford more advertising in the most effective areas. Christ stated that we should take heed in the end time that no man deceive us and that many would be doing so. Seems the AR is one group that has taken heed.

-California

Thank you again for making this information available. It is like a lifeline to the drowning person.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR32 June, 1985

The Evolving Worldwide Church of God

For many years, self-proclaimed "Apostle" Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) has claimed that his "Work," as performed through his Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and Ambassador College, is the great end-time ministry warning the world of its sins and heralding "the Wonderful World Tomorrow." HWA has claimed that by following his spiritual lead, his followers would find financial security, good health, happy marriages, obedient children, freedom from mental illness, and complete success. (See Ending Your Financial Worries, Does God Heal Today?, How to Have a Happy Marriage, and The Seven Laws of Success - all published by the WCG.)

Today a great many WCG members who rely exclusively on their local WCG minister's "official line" and on official WCG publications such as the Worldwide News (WN) and the Good News seem genuinely convinced that HWA's promises are being fulfilled. But increasingly, it seems, there are members who are privately expressing disappointment with the results of following their "Apostle." Ever more frequently Ambassador Report is receiving letters from current WCG members and employees (usually writing in confidence or even anonymously) telling us that in spite of their pro-WCG religious beliefs and love for their church, they are alarmed and frustrated by numerous negative trends within the WCG today.

While many of these individuals are not in complete agreement with Ambassador Report editorial opinion, they tell us that they see the Report as the only means available whereby they can vent their frustrations and in some small way perhaps improve their church, without getting themselves fired or disfellowshipped. Some within the Armstrong organization are courageous enough to repeatedly pass on to the Report revealing church documents, internal organizational correspondence, and tape recordings of sermons and meetings to substantiate their assertions. (For this we are most grateful. And to all cooperating in this way, we remind you Ambassador Report NEVER reveals its confidential sources.)

But what are these negative trends some members and ministers find so disturbing? What follows is not the result of a scientific survey. (If the WCG would cooperate, we'd love to do one. But the WCG's self-induced isolation prohibits any such attempt.) Nevertheless, based on hundreds of letters we have received from current members and relatives of current members, as well as inside information passed on to us by current WCG employees, we have been able to isolate the following distinct trends within the evolving Worldwide Church of God.

(1) Increasing Materialism. Many long-time WCG members say the WCG of today is a world apart from the humble Radio Church of God of three decades ago. In years past, they point out, the ministry acknowledged that their church was small and of little power. Today, however, it is not uncommon for WCG ministers at headquarters to openly boast of the WCG's great wealth, power, influence, and big-business characteristics. The Ambassador Auditorium concert series and the many philanthropic projects of the Ambassador Foundation are an increasing source of pride to many ministers and members.

The productions at Ambassador Auditorium are noteworthy. According to the Los Angeles Times (June 9, "Television Times" section, P. 8), a number of television stations in southern California (and probably around the country) recently aired:

"Symphonie Fantastique" - "A Conductor's View." Maestro Riccardo Muti and director Kirk Browning visualize Berlioz' masterpiece for this concert taped at Pasadena's Ambassador Auditorium.

Music lovers may recall that Berlioz' famous "Symphonie Fantastique" depicts the delusions of a man who takes opium. He "imagines he has killed his loved one and is led to execution [movement four]. Finally [in movement five] he dreams that he is present at the witches' sabbath, which includes a parody of the Dies irae [part of the Catholic requiem mass]" (The New College Encyclopedia of Music, 1960, p. 638). Once such music was shunned entirely by the WCG. Today, such productions are broadcast from the "House for God" and are a source of great pride to the WCG.

In March, Queen Sirikit of Thailand was Herbert Armstrong's guest in the United States. With an entourage and security force said to have numbered over forty-five, she toured through New York, Palm Beach, and Los Angeles. In each city she presented a show of Thai art objects said to be valued at over $140 million. The April 1, 1985 Worldwide News featured the Queen's visit and detailed how she stayed at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel (where even a small suite for two costs $450 per day); how in the "Church's white Cadillac limousine, the Queen and Mr. Armstrong were driven across West Los Angeles with an official police motorcade escort"; how the Queen was given a formal dinner at the Auditorium with many local politicians attending; how the Queen's visit made all the papers; how the WCG is financing a project in Thailand that "provides training classes in traditional Thai craftsmanship and vocational skills for peasant farmers and people from Thai hilltribes"; and how "church members viewed the ornate [some called it 'pagan'] Thai exhibit on the Sabbath, as the Hall of Administration was opened for a special Church viewing after morning and afternoon Sabbath services."

One topic the article carefully avoided was how much it all cost the WCG. The cost of the Queen's visit - apparently paid for entirely by WCG funds - is rumored to have exceeded $4 million. We wrote church treasurer Leroy Neff inquiring whether this was so, but he has refused to comment.

The increasing materialism of the WCG's leadership is not just a headquarters phenomenon, but is also a growing characteristic of much of the WCG's field ministry. And there are definite reasons for the trend.

Today, "full-time" WCG clergymen in the field (that is, away from headquarters) receive yearly salaries (including housing allowance) of about $15,000-$20,000 at the local elder rank; about $25,000 at the preaching elder rank; about $30,000-$35,000 at the pastor rank; and about $40,000 and up when in regional supervisory positions. Most get the use of a recent-model company car with gas expenses paid by their employer. WCG clergymen don't pay second or third tithes, but receive an additional 10% for personal church-feast expenses, and some have been known to receive third tithe "assistance."

Those knowledgeable about the WCG ministry say that this current level of remuneration is clearly higher than what most WCG ministers could achieve if they were to enter the secular job market - an assessment that probably explains why so many are willing to ignore the hypocrisies of their superiors in Pasadena. Many people would find such a level of remuneration quite adequate, especially considering that many WCG ministers work less than twenty hours per week and headquarters supervision of their activities is almost nonexistent compared to that of certain previous church administrations. Yet many WCG ministers today are clearly dissatisfied with their employment compensation package.

The church's insurance coverage for its ministers provides meager protection; and there is no pension plan for the WCG's ministry. Nor are WCG ministers eligible to receive Social Security benefits upon retirement. As the WCG's many over 50-year-old ministers approach retirement age, more and more are concerned about their future. But the biggest cause of WCG ministerial dissatisfaction is the fact that at any moment, with very little or no cause, they can be summarily fired. And getting fired means only two weeks' severance pay and a quick repossession of the company car. Thus, very few are willing to openly complain about anything, let alone reveal how they really feel about Herbert Armstrong or their superiors in Pasadena.

Instead, without informing their superiors or their flocks, quite a few have simply gotten themselves parttime or even full-time second jobs. (And it would probably shock some to discover how many WCG ministers' wives are currently employed secretly outside the home.) Consequently, the average WCG minister today is spending less time visiting or counselling and even less time preparing sermons. More than a few have not had time for serious Bible study in years.

While HWA continues to exhort his followers to "sacrifice as never before," a look at the lifestyles and values of the WCG's leadership reveals a high and increasing level of materialism in the ministry (compare this to Micah 3:11). Of course, considering the affluent standard set by HWA, this should surprise no one.

Nevertheless, HWA claimed in his April 25 letter to the WCG membership that the WCG ministry is "much overworked." Then in his April 30 letter he wrote; "Those ministers are swamped..." To solve the problem HWA wants to add 100 new ministers to the church payroll. (Unmentioned is the fact that Ambassador College graduates unhired by the WCG have great difficulty finding employment. The large number of unemployed or underemployed Ambassador graduates in the Pasadena area is no small embarrassment to college officials.) Naturally, HWA writes that his plan will require an increase in contributions from his followers.

(2) Strange Sermons. WCG members believe that their religion is based on the Bible. Scriptural references are found in almost all WCG magazine articles, and it is rare to hear a WCG sermon or sermonette that is not laden with scriptural quotations. Nevertheless, the WCG is more and more becoming a church that stresses its own manmade traditions rather than biblical revelation. "Don't believe me, believe the Bible!" - often said by HWA on radio in years past, is never said to WCG members today. And members are often warned by their pastors not to discuss the Bible among themselves unless a WCG minister is present to guide them. To encourage such dependence, HWA's ministers resort to scripture bending that often produces sermons that can be described, at the very least, as strange.

For instance, WCG evangelist Dean Blackwell, speaking at Ambassador Auditorium on July 28, 1984, attempted to characterize his ideal church member by expounding upon a misquotation of Phil. 2:22, where Paul wrote of Timothy's loyalty:

As a child to a father he has served me in the Gospel. That's the way he is. He's just like a child. He's yielding and pliable and humble. And you can tell him the moon is yellow cheese, you know, and he's just gullible and, uhhh, yielding and humble and pliable and believing.

It is obvious how Blackwell read his views into the verse when you read the original King James quote: "But ye know the proof of him, that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel."

Blackwell then went on to expound on II Cor. 8:5. Again, notice the twist:

This they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord and unto us - have people ever done that? If you're an independent Christian you only do the first, you give yourself to the Lord. Now those are the people we've lost more of than anybody else - independent Christians who just follow Christ. They don't follow any man! Well that's contrary to the Bible over and over. The Apostle Paul and other ministers said follow us, follow [our] faith, follow [our] example of work.

Actually, what Paul wrote was, "Be imitators of me, as I am of Christ" (I Cor. 11:1, RSV). And notice these Bible quotes (again from the RSV): "Cursed is the man who trusts in man" (Jer. 17:5). "You will know them by their fruits" (Matt. 7:16). "Test everything; hold fast what is good" (I Thes. 5:21). "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge; because you have rejected knowledge, I reject you from being a priest to me" (Hosea 4:6). "In vain do they worship me, teaching as doctrines the precepts of men" (Mark 7:7).

The Bereans were praised for "examining the scriptures daily to see if these things were so" (Acts 17:11). While, no doubt, the early Christians were exhorted to respect their elders and imitate their righteous conduct, Jesus made it plain that his disciples were not to rule over their brethren as the Gentile despots of that day did (Luke 22:25-26). And when the commands of those in authority conflict with those of God, the early apostles taught, "we must obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29). Today's WCG preachers, it seems, prefer to ignore these once-taught fundamentals.

(3) Widening of the Double Standard. The WCG's double standard has perhaps existed from the very beginning of HWA's career in religion. But the disparity between what HWA preaches and how HWA lives is becoming increasingly wider and more evident to many.

For instance, some are aware how HWA, while teaching strict Sabbath observance, never denied himself the pleasure of watching TV sports on the Sabbath. And some are aware how a few years ago Robert Fahey, then HWA's personal assistant, discovered HWA drinking a cup of coffee on the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur). When Fahey expressed shock at his boss' blatant disregard of church doctrine, HWA offhandedly said he had never personally taught that it was wrong to drink liquids on that solemn fast day. It was others, he said, who had started that tradition in Worldwide. Some remember, too, how years ago HWA admitted in a Bible Study how at his first dinner engagement with King Leopold of Belgium, he believed the entree served was pork, a food prohibited by WCG doctrine. So, not to offend his host, HWA explained, he simply chewed the meat, but did not swallow - until, that is, he was told that the entree was veal.

Those knowledgeable of the man can recount dozens of such vignettes about HWA's double standard. But now, apparently, some WCG leaders grumble privately about increasingly flagrant disregard for church teachings by HWA and those closest to him. One complaint is that HWA often skips Sabbath services for no reason. So do HWA assistants such as Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Dean and Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Dean. Their critics contend that if they are healthy enough to fly around the world for meetings with oriental despots, they are healthy enough to sit in Sabbath services when in Pasadena.

Another criticism has been voiced regarding this year's "Night to Be Much Observed," an annual church feast, which according to WCG doctrine symbolizes both ancient Israel's deliverance from Egypt and the Christian's separation from the present evil world. This year HWA did not keep this feast (the evening of April 5) with just brethren of the church. Instead, HWA dined with Jehan Sadat, widow of the late president of Egypt. Some of HWA's critics in the WCG say this was a clear violation of his church's teachings (in fact HWA's own teachings) regarding this feast day.

Unfortunately, while some ministers complain privately of HWA's double standard, many others use his hypocrisy as an excuse for their own sins. For instance, a fair number are aware of the fact that on foreign trips HWA has offered certain members of his entourage the services of whores, paid for at church expense. Such standards of morality set by HWA's conduct have not encouraged those around him to "recapture true values."

(4) Sinking Moral Standards. This trend is unmistakably clear in the flow of information coming to Ambassador Report: stories of WCG families cursed by marital infidelity and wife beatings, headquarters administrators philandering with secretaries, field ministers fornicating with women during counselling sessions, WCG executives keeping mistresses, church members suing for divorce with WCG ministerial encouragement, stories of bizarre sex practices and homosexual tendencies among certain church leaders, and even rumors of child molestation at Imperial Schools and at the church's summer camp in Minnesota!

Much of the information we continue to receive on these matters is quite detailed. Apparently, some believe we would revel in publicly detailing every WCG leader's personal life. We would not - even if all concerned were clearly public figures. Nevertheless, this trend is real. Even evangelist Rod Meredith has admitted from the pulpit that this is a growing problem in the church.

But what is the cause? Could it be that this decline in morality within the WCG is somehow related to the fact that the WCG is led by an "Apostle" that has divorced his wife, makes excuses for ten years of incest with his daughter, and refuses to speak to his only son and his son's sons, while all the while claiming he is "turning the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers"?

What Armstrong and his cohorts are actually accomplishing is quite the opposite. In the last few years we have seen the WCG ministry often actively promoting divorce. When one mate in a marriage is a WCG member and the other is a nonmember, it is not unusual for the WCG ministry to encourage the member mate to divorce. This is quite often the case where the nonmember mate is a man who believes he should be the family leader. If he attempts to dissuade his wife (and children) from full WCG participation, the WCG ministry will often pressure the wife to divorce her husband. We know of some cases where the WCG has even provided such women with legal advice and financial assistance to sustain the legal warfare against their husbands. In one such divorce and child custody suit being fought at the present time, the prolonged legal warfare has actually brought the husband to the point of bankruptcy.

(5) Increasing Fear and Isolation. On March 30, WCG members at Ambassador Auditorium listened as WCG ministerial director Joseph Tkach began a sermon supposedly on "forgiveness." But what that audience was subjected to for the next hour and a quarter was actually a rapid fire, high intensity, apathophobic-theophobic caterwaul. According to Tkach:

...they're going to persecute us. And what we went through in 1979 is sandbox by comparison. Are we thinking in terms of suffering? Not only the suffering that Christ went through himself, but the suffering that we ourselves are going to have to go through as we perform the job to which God has called us to accomplish. And believe me, we are going to suffer!

Tkach's paranoid view of the WCG's future is, unfortunately, not unique. Every Sabbath scores of WCG congregations around the world are subjected to similar bone-chilling prophecies of future self-martyrdom.

What confusion! For decades the WCG published an article entitled "There Is a Way of Escape" and taught that it was the "Philadelphia era" of God's Church - the church mentioned in Rev. 3:7-12 - that was to be "spared the hour of temptation" (see Hoeh: A True History of the True Church). Yet now Tkach and others are prophesying that the WCG will undoubtedly be going through terrible trials much like those they have said the end-time Laodicean church would suffer. Ironically, the Worldwide and Laodicean churches share yet another similarity. Their attitude is: "I am rich, I have prospered, and I need nothing." But God warns them that they are "wretched, pitiable, poor, blind, and naked" and sternly commands them to "repent" (Rev. 3:14-19).

Paul wrote that "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:9). He explained to Timothy that "God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind" (II Tim. 1:7). Yet today, very clearly, the followers of Herbert Armstrong are increasingly filled with fear. That fear takes many forms: fear of persecution, fear of "the world," fear of the government, fear of the news media, fear of other churches, fear of criticism, fear of contact with "dissidents," fear of college accreditation, fear of unapproved books, fear of unapproved thoughts, fear of "intellectualism," fear of thinking, and fear of people who think.

This high level of fear is producing not only a diminished capacity for logical reasoning but a diminished capacity for loving. And it is leading to an intellectual isolation that leaves many WCG members living in an "alternate reality" - a kind of make-believe world. This, in turn, often leads to serious consequences.

(6) Increasing Mental Problems. This should not surprise us. Orwell wrote of "double think," and James wrote of the instability of the double-minded (James 1:8). The dichotomies of increasing materialism in practice alongside the ever present calls for greater sacrifice, the ever widening double standards, the increasing and often blatant disregard of traditional moral values by pastors who regularly exhort their flocks to almost unattainably high standards of conduct, and rampant fears are taking a toll on the minds of a great many in the WCG. These ministers seem to have somehow deluded themselves into believing they can secretly adopt a lifestyle emphasizing what the Bible refers to as "the works of the flesh" (Gal. 5:19-21), but Paul admonishes such people: "Do not be deceived; God is not mocked, for whatever a man sows, that he will also reap" (Gal. 6:7, RSV).

If the Bible is taken as a guide, the solution to the mental problems and fears of many church members would seem to be for them to stop living a lie - stop practicing a double standard - and to put real love back into their lives, because "there is no fear in love, but perfect love casts out fear" (I John 4:18).

Recently, Ambassador Report received a copy of a startling open letter to HWA and his Council of Elders. The letter is unsigned, but from what our best sources tell us, it is, nevertheless, very accurate. The letter listed over a dozen top WCG officials who either have severe psychological problems personally, or whose wives or children are so afflicted. We have since learned that a number of these individuals have sought the help of psychologists and psychiatrists. Some are now in therapy and a few have even required hospitalization. (We do not feel it is appropriate to give names here, as it is not our intention to embarrass those requiring help.) Unfortunately (as if these individuals did not have enough trouble), some WCG ministers, apparently threatened by the fact that some in their flock would seek "outside" counseling, have made a point of attacking psychologists and psychiatrists from the pulpit. For instance, in a January 19 sermon in Pasadena, WCG evangelist Roderick Meredith attacked mental health professionals, saying that such counsellors liked to "play God." The comment prompted Ambassador Report editor John Trechak - who read a transcript of the sermon - to send Meredith the following letter:

Dear Dr. Meredith:

There was much in your Jan. 19 Sabbath sermon that I found interesting. Specifically, while you made it clear adultery is a widespread problem at headquarters, many church employees write me that, in reality, the ministry is increasingly turning its back on the extra-marital affairs of church employees, especially top ministers. For instance, during the last year I have received many letters... which more than hint that the moral atmosphere at WCG has sunk to a very low level. If this is indeed true, and it seems to be, it is very sad.

Why then the attack on psychologists and psychiatrists? I am regularly contacted by church members desperately in need of help with their emotional problems. Who can they turn to? The WCG ministry? They've lost confidence in the ministry! And the answer why is very simple: How the ministry lives speaks much louder than what the ministry says.

The members who write to me often need professional help. The upstanding, dedicated counsellors I recommend to them do not tell them to turn their backs on God or their church. Virtually always their advice (given in complete confidence, something not offered by the ministry) is to adopt modes of behavior (i.e., rationality, love for others, faithfulness, moderation, etc.) that the ministry itself should be advocating.

I disagree with you. As a whole, these professionals are not "playing God." But can the same be said for you and your colleagues?

What you have done is made some fear to obtain the kind of counselling they desperately need. The terrible tragedies (the murders) that took place this past year in the church areas of Dave Pack and Dennis Luker - ironically, both proteges of yours - reflect, I fear, the kind of fruit your misguided position will continue to bear. Dr. Meredith, is that really what you want?

Sincerely,
John Trechak

Meredith is not the only WCG minister who has pressured members not to seek professional help with their psychological problems. Attacks on psychologists and psychiatrists have been a recurring theme in many WCG sermons at church headquarters and elsewhere. Even the WCG's lawyers have gotten into the act.

On May 10, WCG attorney Ralph Helge sent a memorandum to hundreds of WCG employees demanding that they inform him whether or not they, their family, or even anyone they know had ever counselled with a particular Pasadena psychologist. Ostensibly the information was somehow needed in regard to a New York divorce case in which the doctor had testified. But many interpreted the memorandum as a highly offensive intrusion into their private lives, intended only to dissuade them from obtaining help with personal problems.

The bullying, insensitive, intrusive, offensive, deceptive and unsolicited form letter had this legalese stamped on at the head:

This document constitutes a confidential communication between attorney and client and represents an attorney's work papers. It is confidential in nature and should not be duplicated. Disclosure to any third person is prohibited except by obtaining written permission of a duly authorized corporate official by affixing the signature of said official and name of the third party.

How would you feel if Herbert Armstrong's personal lawyer sent you such a letter?

(7) Petra - Again! Petra, an ancient ruined city in the rugged desert of southwest Jordan, has for decades held a special fascination for members of the WCG. By piecing together a number of disparate scriptural quotations (Rev. 3:10, Isa. 16:1-5, Isa. 26:20-21, Isa. 33:15-16, Zeph. 2:3, and Prov. 14:26) the majority of WCG members came to hold the belief that one day they (along with unconverted mates and children) would be miraculously swept off to a "place of safety" - most likely Petra - while the world anguishes in "the Great Tribulation" to take place before the return of Christ.

While the WCG has never published a definitive explanation of this widely held belief, this prophetic theory has been widely promulgated in WCG circles through sermons, Ambassador College lectures, a few Petra-related articles in church publications, and most especially through the sermons of the long-winded, wandering star of the WCG, evangelist Gerald Waterhouse.

In recent years, however, a few statements appearing in WCG publications have led some, including Ambassador Report, to conclude that the WCG was abandoning its Petra teachings. Now, however, it is apparent to us that such statements by the WCG were intended only to deceive some in the general public and that the WCG membership is still encouraged to hold on to the Petra doctrine. Earlier this year we talked to an Ambassador College graduate who had recently spent time assisting a WCG minister in the Pasadena area. We were startled to learn that the idea of fleeing to Petra is more popular than ever in the WCG. He told us:

The Petra teaching is very much alive. Most ministers do not teach it as absolutely certain that Petra will be the "place of safety," but the idea conveyed is that it is 90% certain Petra will be the place. Gerald Waterhouse, of course, teaches it as though it were clearly prophesied in the Bible, and he is more popular among the brethren than ever before. Occasionally he mentions Petra by name but usually he talks about a "place of final training." Nevertheless, everyone in the church seems convinced that that is Petra in Jordan.

How would you like to spend 3 1/2 years getting your "final training" in this place? This photo of Petra was taken by Morris Burnham and is from the Steven L. Ross collection.

According to the Worldwide News (March 18, p. 12), evangelist Gerald Waterhouse is now on his ninth tour of WCG congregations around the world. Again the "Prophet of Petra" is "going to and fro on the earth."

One can only wonder about the mental state of a people desirous of fleeing to Petra. The hot days and cold nights of its inhospitable desert climate, the meager water resources, the lack of sanitation facilities, and the barren landscape devoid of fuel for heating or cooking should turn away the reasonable. But not only that, the region is said to be occasionally subjected to cloud bursts that can bring nine-foot-high walls of water down the region's narrow canyons in flash floods of awesome power. If thousands of Armstrong followers were camped in this "place of safety" during such a flood, many would undoubtedly perish. One can only wonder, too, how the Arabs of the region would react to thousands of pro-Israeli, Sabbath-keeping, mostly American religious fanatics setting up a little colony in their midst. Would this really be a "place of safety"? It is interesting that at the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in 70 A.D., the early Christians fled - but not south to Petra. Instead, they fled north to Pella.

Devil Worship at Petra

One of our readers (Emmett C. Hoctor, 3723 W St., Omaha, NE 68107) has done extensive research on the Petra teaching of the WCG. He wrote us:

Petra has been called the "Red Rose City of the Dead." Petra, or Sela, was a city where every type of devil worship thrived. Child sacrifice was so prevalent that there were altars on what was called "the high place" where conduits six inches wide were needed to carry away the stream of human blood.

I have just finished reading a remarkable book about Petra: The Sarcophagus of an Ancient Civilization (Petra, Edom, and the Edomites) by George L. Robinson. It was published in 1930 by the Macmillan Company, New York. The ancient temples and peoples of Petra are detailed. The place is defensible but not totally. Robinson gives references where the Jews captured and forced 10,000 men to jump to their death off the steep cliffs.

Incidentally, I would like to hear from anyone who knows the citation of the National Geographic article Loma Armstrong used as the basis for the Petra theory.

Those interested in the Petra doctrine or those who may have relatives or friends hooked on the idea will benefit from an article recently published by the Foundation for Biblical Research. It is titled "Where Is Your Place of Safety?" Written by former WCG member Steven L. Ross, the article is one of the best ever done to disprove the WCG's Petra theory. The article is available for free by writing to the FBR, P.O. Box 499, Pasadena, CA 91102. Mr. Ross has informed us that he also has a lecture-slide show presentation available on Petra, as well as a number of Bible research papers. His large work - The Christian and the Feast Days - is also available in bound manuscript form for $10.00 by writing directly to: Steven L. Ross, P. O. Box 434, Beaverton, OR 97075.

Seattle Member Accused of Multiple Murders

On January 9, King County, Washington prosecutors filed two charges of first-degree murder and two charges of first-degree attempted murder against Charles E. Harris, a 35-year-old unemployed Vietnam veteran and WCG member.

According to an affidavit filed by King County prosecutor Al Matthews (as reported in the Seattle Journal-American, Jan. 10, 1985, p. A2), the alleged crimes took place shortly after midnight on Sunday, January 6. That night Seattle attorney John Weston and friends Patricia Tobis and Susan Marie Dietsch returned to Tobis' Eastgate home after dinner. Upon their arrival they found Harris present with his former girlfriend, Brenda James, who had been babysitting Tobis' two children. Home owner Tobis considered asking Harris to leave but decided, instead, to allow them to continue a discussion of their personal "problems" in private. Later, however, upon hearing a gunshot, Tobis went to investigate and, according to prosecutor Matthews, she was shot in the chest. Tobis claims Harris remarked, "two down, one to go" as he proceeded to make his way through the home. Weston was then shot in the chest. And finally Dietsch was shot. Prosecutors claim that Harris was attempting to eliminate all potential witnesses.

Weston and Tobis were both hospitalized with severe wounds, but survived; Tobis' two children, in their bedroom during the shootings, were unhurt. Brenda James, 29, and Susan Marie Dietsch, 33, however, both died.

Harris and James were both members of the Worldwide Church of God, according to prosecutor Matthews. They had planned to get married, but James called off the plans because of "religious problems." Harris is black and James was white. The WCG has for decades generally refused to allow interracial marriage. In recent years, however, for public relations reasons the church has avoided making such doctrines clear. Friends of Harris say his regular fellowship with white WCG members made him lose any sense of racial distinction from other members and the sudden realization of the WCG's actual racial teachings may have caused him to "snap."

Nevertheless, this is not the first time Harris has been charged with committing a violent crime. Over a decade ago Harris was charged in the 1970 slaying of his estranged wife. Although he confessed to that crime, he was found innocent by reason of insanity and was committed to a mental hospital for two years. He is now again in a mental hospital undergoing psychiatric observation. His trial is set to begin in July - if he is found mentally competent to stand trial. His defense is being handled by the Public Defender's office of Seattle.

Even though the WCG ministry has distanced itself from Harris since January, friends say Harris still considers himself loyal to the WCG.

Armstrong Follower Held In Murder of Daughter

On Sept. 20, 1984, Armstrong follower Lois Marie Elliott of North Tonawanda, New York was charged with second-degree murder. Police say that before dawn that day, the 36-year-old woman stabbed her four-year-old daughter to death in the child's bed, knifed herself in the chest, in an apparent suicide attempt, and then telephoned police, saying, "I killed her." Officers dispatched to the scene discovered the pajama-clad body of the little girl, Roxanne Elizabeth, in her own bed. She had already died from multiple stab wounds, mostly to the chest. Mrs. Elliott was found nearby bleeding from a wound to her own chest. (The Buffalo News, Sept. 20, 1984, p. 1 and Sept. 21, p. C- 5.)

Elliott was divorced from her WCG-member husband Frederick R. Elliott of Kenmore, New York, and had been living with her widowed mother Olive Baldassara. Mrs. Baldassara was home the night of the tragedy, but was apparently asleep in another room during the attack.

Investigators say that Elliott had telephoned police the previous evening claiming her ex-husband had sexually abused their daughter. But police have since concluded that there are "no facts to support that allegation." After Elliott was treated at a hospital and released into police custody, she told investigators she had "committed a sin that would carry on through her bloodline" and that her daughter had "committed an unpardonable sin and didn't pray enough."

Neighbors described Elliott as a reclusive "religious fanatic" who rarely allowed her daughter outdoors to play. Church acquaintances told us that although Elliott had been disfellowshipped from the WCG, she had remained faithful to church teachings and had desired to be reinstated in the church. Reinstatement was not forthcoming, however, because she had been labeled as having a "demon problem." One of Elliott's church friends said, "I don't think Pack [Dave Pack, a WCG minister in the Buffalo, New York area] ever encouraged her to get psychiatric help. And if he really thought she had demons, why didn't he just cast them out, like in the Bible?"

Another acquaintance said, "We could sense Lois had a problem, but her church experience and her marriage problems didn't help her. Then after she was disfellowshipped she seemed to get worse. She really needed help."

Niagara County First Assistant District Attorney Stephen P. Shierling told the Report he fully intends to prosecute Elliott on the murder charge. But Elliott's attorney, James Perry of North Tonawanda told us that his client has been declared mentally incompetent to assist in her own defense, has been committed to a state mental hospital for treatment, and that there is no way to know if she will ever recover sufficiently to be able to stand trial.

Whatever the legal outcome, the fact remains that a pretty little four-year-old girl is dead. Neighbors told reporters how Roxanne's father had visited the little girl at least twice each week and how happy she always seemed to be when he arrived. The Buffalo News story of Sept. 21 had this ending:

Although neighbors Thursday said that they never saw the little girl playing outside, her father, Mr. Elliott, talked about her energy and her precociousness. She loved to dance and draw and could name all the states, he said.

"She had a mind like you wouldn't believe," he told The News. "She was like a little adult, a little Shirley Temple. She was so vivacious." Mr. Elliott then politely declined any further comment, and broke down in tears.

David Pack's Reign of Terror

On the night of Roxanne Elliott's death, one of the last people - probably the very last one - Lois Elliott phoned before the tragedy was WCG minister David Pack, pastor of the Buffalo (North), New York congregation.. Exactly what was said, we don't know. At least not yet. That information may well come out should Lois Elliott ever recover sufficiently to stand trial. What is remarkable, however, is how often Pack's name seems to appear in conjunction with tragedies in the WCG. For a number of years now, no WCG minister's name has appeared more often in letters written to the Report complaining of ministerial abuse.

Pack, a burly 6-foot, 5-inch Ambassador College graduate known locally for his authoritarian style, has so incensed some in his flock that a group have circulated an open letter detailing his abuses and have called for his removal. The letter describes Pack's ministerial leadership as a "Reign of Terror." On the cover page, addressed to WCG headquarters leaders, they wrote: "David's power-crazed quest to totally dominate the mind, body, and spirit of church members has not been done in a corner and has been done clearly in view of all to see at headquarters in Pasadena."

On the following 13 pages of their letter the allegations about Pack read like a horror story. The authors contend that Pack constantly intimidates members, uses threats and mind-control methods, is given to extreme emotional outbursts, is highly political, believes in winning at all cost, has disfellowshipped members for trivial faults, prescribes diets while "playing M.D.," insists on being addressed as Mr. Pack, enjoys wearing skimpy, skin-tight shorts to sporting events, has actually worn a wolf costume to church socials, enjoys putting down women, and told one married woman with children, "It would be better for you to shack up one night with a man than wear makeup."

The letter quotes Pack as having said, "Everyone who has challenged me has either died, been seriously injured or has been eliminated from the work." And, "God backs me even if I am wrong."

On page 7 the authors made this statement to Pack (emphasis ours):

Doesn't it bother you that while you were in charge of the Rochester and Syracuse area there were three suicides? One can only wonder why they chose to kill themselves while you were their main advisor in the area. Perhaps you suggested to one or more of them that they would in no way make it into the Kingdom of God.... A statement such as, "You are no longer in the body of Christ," could have caused one to give up and kill himself.

The above quote was written well before the Elliott family tragedy. Some who knew little Roxanne and her mother Lois Elliott wonder if it might have been a prophecy.

The Missing Children of the WCG And the $120 Million Lawsuit

On Aug. 24, 1984 The Edmonton Journal, of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, carried a story about a WCG-related parent-child problem similar in some ways to others we've heard of over the years. What was different about this story, however, was the young age of the child involved. According to the article, a Mrs. Carol Dillingham of Winterburn, Alberta, claims her daughter, Lori Ann, first became interested in the WCG at age 14. By age 16, the mother says her daughter was "talked into quitting school" and "left home to become a member of the church." Mrs. Dillingham alleges that as a result of the stress induced by the situation, her husband suffered a stroke and that when Lori Ann was contacted and informed of this, she told her mother, "That's too bad Mom, that's your problem." The Dillinghams have bluntly accused the WCG of "stealing" their daughter. Nevertheless, they at least know their daughter is alive and have some idea where she is. Other parents who have collided with the WCG over their children have not been as lucky.

In 1979, Ambassador Report was contacted by Dr. Galal Badr, a college professor at George Mason University in Virginia. Badr told us how he had been married to a WCG member, had gone through a divorce, and had been granted custody of their young daughter Abigail. Badr told us, however, that his daughter and his ex-wife, Marianna (a one-time school teacher from Philadelphia, maiden name - Dowhan) had disappeared, and a WCG minister, who hinted he knew of their whereabouts, had told him, "If you don't cooperate, you'll never see your daughter again." Badr refused to "cooperate" and true to the minister's prediction, he has not seen or heard from his daughter (or ex-wife) since then. Abigail would now be 12 years old.

In late 1979, Dr. Badr wrote to WCG headquarters asking their assistance in locating his missing daughter. It was some time before he even received a response. Finally on July 3, 1980, WCG lawyer Ralph Helge wrote Dr. Badr that "the Church" would not intervene in his case because, "Any other position would demand that the Church become an investigator and fact finder in thousands of cases.

Did Helge really mean there were thousands of such cases of missing children related to the WCG? Five years ago we simply assumed his comment was hyperbole. Now we are not so sure. Increasingly, it seems, we are hearing of parents claiming the WCG has come between them and their children and sometimes that they cannot even locate their children.

Perhaps such stories should not surprise us for in recent years the WCG, through its Youth 85 magazine and other programs, has been attempting to proselytize the very young. But just how far can a "church" go in driving a wedge between parent and child - especially when the latter is a minor? It appears that that may well be a question for the courts to decide.

The WCG is among the defendants listed in a lawsuit filed by an ex-WCG, Washington state mother who alleges she has suffered the loss of a normal parental relationship with her child and great emotional distress due to the negligence of the defendants in that suit. Besides the WCG, those defendants include: the State of Washington, the Department of Social and Health Services, two John Doe attorneys, Herbert W. Armstrong (corporation sole of Nevada), and a single man - a WCG member, address unknown - whom we will refer to by the pseudonym "Mr. B." We will refer to the plaintiff mother as "Mrs. P."

In the suit (case number 83 2 02833 2 in the Superior Court of Pierce County), the mother alleges that:

Prior to 1976 the minor child [her son] had exhibited exceptional and outstanding scholastic records at his school and maintained a loving and close relationship with his natural mother [Mrs. P].

In about 1976, when the minor child was eleven years old, defendant [Mr. B] began a relationship of oppression and seduction, all designed to alienate and destroy the affections between mother and child and instead to create an unhealthy, improper and illegal relationship between himself and the minor child.

On or about February, 1982, because the mother and child relationship was worsening, the mother [Mrs. P] sought assistance from Pierce County law enforcement agencies....

Immediately thereafter, the Department of Social and Health Services intervened and through gross negligence allowed the minor child to be transported out of Washington to reside with [Mr. B], never to be seen again.

Through the gross negligence of the Department of Social and Health Services by its agents, officers and employees, the mother [Mrs. P] was unlawfully and improperly and without due process deprived of not only the temporary care, custody and control of her minor child, but also to the permanent relationship and love of her minor child....

Although the minor child and defendant [Mr. B] met through the auspices of defendant Worldwide Church of God, as the relationship became more and more injurious for the young boy, the defendant Worldwide Church of God assisted the natural mother in trying to terminate the relationship, but later the defendant church refused to disclose the whereabouts of defendant [Mr. B] when it was advised that [Mr. B] was harboring illegally the minor child....

The aforementioned acts and omissions of the defendants, jointly and severally, has caused (1) substantial interference with the mother and child relationship; (2) alienation of affections; (3) has gone beyond all possible bounds of decency and should be regarded as atrocious and utterly intolerable in a civilized community and thus, the tort of outrage should be applied; (4) has been a civil conspiracy; (5) interference and destruction of the mother's civil and constitutional rights as guaranteed by the first, ninth, tenth and fourteenth amendments to the U.S. Constitution....

The above quote is taken from the Amended Complaint filed June 18, 1984. Earlier, in an affidavit filed May 7, 1984, the attorney for the mother clarified the allegation of negligence against the WCG:

Because [Mrs. P] was a member of the church and because now the church is claiming she still is a member of the church, the church owed a duty to [Mrs. P] when she went to the various ministers and asked assistance in counseling between herself, her son and [Mr. B]. The duty owed is reasonable care by a counselor....

In the same document the mother's lawyer states that the WCG was not cooperating in supplying answers to questions at depositions in spite of the seriousness of the allegations. The plaintiff's lawyer wrote:

The law is clear that any entity, whether it is a person or a corporation, is subject to a cause of action for the interference of the parent-child relationship....

At the very least, the deposition of the three [WCG] ministers [Luker, Dahlgren, and Goethals] disclose their knowledge of allegations by [Mrs. P] as follows: (1) of improper conduct between the boy and [Mr.

B] who were members; (2) the ministers' agreement to assist [Mrs. P] in separating [Mr. B] from the boy, (3) in fact the ministers' contact with [Mr. B] to curtail the relationship; (4) the ministers' failure to terminate or modify the relationship between the boy and [Mr. B]; (5) the church's knowledge that [Mr. B] had no right to the boy but insisted on encouraging [Mr. B] to keep the boy; and (6) in keeping the boy's whereabouts from everyone, law enforcement authorities as well as [Mrs. P].

On April 22, the Supreme Court of Washington denied a WCG motion for discretionary review of a lower court's denial of a WCG motion for summary judgment against [Mrs. P]. What that means is that the WCG remains a defendant in the case. The court was:

mindful of and sympathetic to the underlying constitutional rights asserted by the Church. The court did not believe those rights to absolutely preclude the existence of any duty, however. It concluded instead that the Constitution might allow recognition of a limited duty to disclose information, particularly in a situation involving a minor.

This case should prove very interesting. The mother is asking $20 million in damages for the severing of the normal parent-child relationship and for emotional distress, another $ 100 million for punitive damages, plus attorneys' fees and costs. The trial should begin around March, 1986. The plaintiffs lawyer is Mr. Terry E. Lumsden of the lawfirm of Billett, Comfort & Rosenow, Tacoma Mall Office Building, Suite 301, Tacoma, WA 98409 (phone 206-473-0725).

The Exodus Continues

The exodus from the WCG ministry and administration is continuing. Those exiting the WCG ministry in recent months have included: Daniel Botha (pastor of the Pretoria and Pietersburg, South Africa congregations), Charles Ranchie (pastor of the Penticton and Kelowna, British Columbia congregations), Dan White (pastor of the Helena, Butte, and Great Falls, Montana congregations), James Lichtenstein (Nashville and Murfreesboro, Tennessee), William Cowan Jr. (Tennessee), Charles Crane (Bluefield, WV), Bill Freeland (Liberal, Kansas), James Wells (Topeka, Kansas), Carlton Greene (Pasadena, California), and George Geis (Pasadena, California).

Geis Ousted Over *The Firm Bond

At the end of 1984 there appeared on the shelves of Vroman's bookstore in Pasadena a new book of major interest to some in the WCG hierarchy. The Firm Bond (Linking Meaning and Mission in Business and Religion) by Robert L. Kuhn and George T. Geis, and published by Praeger, explores "the ways in which business could adopt the techniques and outlooks that enable some religious groups to obtain an unparalleled degree of commitment from their adherents." (Quotes are from their book and book jacket.)

The authors analyze the problem of commitment - both corporate and personal - and suggest ways in which commitment is either built or broken. To buttress their arguments they rely heavily on anecdotes. It was these anecdotes, apparently, that caused rumblings at WCG headquarters in Pasadena. For while the book nowhere mentions the WCG by name, both Kuhn and Geis have had a long relationship with the Armstrong organization, and many saw in their pseudonymous examples the WCG with all its corporate and human failings.

Within a few weeks of the book's appearance Geis was forced to resign from his Ambassador College position and the WCG ministry. It was the WCG's loss. Geis was one of the few Ambassador College faculty members possessing truly outstanding academic credentials.

Besides a B.A. in theology from Ambassador College, Geis received a B.S. in mathematics (summa cum laude) from Purdue University, a Ph.D. in educational psychology from the University of Southern California, and an M.B.A. from the Graduate School of Management at UCLA, where he is also a Postdoctoral Scholar. He is currently "Research Coordinator at the Center for Human Research Management, Institute of Industrial Relations, the University of California at Los Angeles."

Kuhn's credentials are equally impressive. Besides a B.A. in theology from Ambassador College, Kuhn holds a B.A. (Phi Beta Kappa) in human biology from Johns Hopkins University; a Ph.D. in neurophysiology from the Department of Anatomy and Brain Research Institute of the University of California at Los Angeles; and an M.S. (Sloan Fellow) in management from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he was also a research affiliate in psychology. He is the author of a number of books on management and currently holds positions with the University of Texas and New York University. He has been disassociated from the WCG and Ambassador College since the late seventies.

Over the years, the WCG and Ambassador College have been able to draw many men of intellect and talent. Unfortunately, the Armstrong organization has rarely been able to hold on to those same individuals. It would be difficult to find another organization with such a pronounced "brain drain" problem. Those running the Armstrong organization might do well to ponder the lessons found in The Firm Bond.

Dr. Charles Dorothy Out Again

During the State of California versus WCG lawsuit turmoil of 1979, church attorney Stanley Rader produced a loyalty pledge all WCG employees were expected to sign. One who refused to sign the pledge was Dr. Charles V. Dorothy, a respected and popular WCG minister and Ambassador College professor. That defiance did not get him disfellowshipped, but it did cost him his job. (Evangelist David Jon Hill also refused to sign and was similarly cut off.) Since then Dorothy has pursued an accredited Ph.D. in religion at Claremont College in southern California, one of the nation's leading institutions in that field. Then recently, he was able to obtain research work at Ambassador College on a contract-work basis. Again, however, Dorothy ran into problems. Some of his research led to theological conclusions unacceptable to his superiors, and they once more told him good-bye. So the Ambassador College brain drain continues.

Dr. Dorothy is currently writing for the newsletter of the Association for Christian Development (P.O. Box 445, Rolling Bay, WA 98061). He is also engaged to be married to Camilla Terhune, sister of Ken Westby, the Association's president. Incidentally, we found Dr. Dorothy's recent series of articles on "the law" of the Bible most enlightening and we recommend them to those interested in biblical studies.

GTA Alive!

On June 7, the "news" spread like wildfire through the offices and corridors of WCG headquarters in Pasadena. At least one major department head called a meeting of his employees to make the announcement. Within minutes WCG members were being phoned across the nation to relay the "news." Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA) had just been "killed in a plane crash!" By mid-day the story had reached WCG members from coast to coast. Hundreds waited near their radios and TVs for a news bulletin. It never came.

There was no plane crash; GTA was alive and well in Tyler, Texas. Who started the rumor? No one knows. But more than a few suspect the story germinated from the wishful thinking of some of GTA's old "friends" in the WCG.

Allan Browne Makes His Move

Since 1979, high-priced Beverly Hills attorney Allan Browne has been the WCG's most prominent trial lawyer. How much WCG money Browne has already put into his lawfirms' coffers is not yet known, but it is undoubtedly many millions. Browne's continued representation of Worldwide caused more than one lawyer to wonder how long it would be before Browne left Ervin, Cohen and Jessup, the firm in which he had been a partner for many years. After all, with the WCG as a regular client, Browne is a "rainmaker." Why share all that WCG loot with so many partners?

Now Browne may not have to. He has formed his own lawfirm: Browne and Woods, with offices at 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, CA 90067 (telephone: 213-274-7100). While Browne is not yet a member of the WCG (he is Jewish), he has been able to provide Worldwide with the kind of lawyering

Herbert Armstrong likes. Good luck Allan.

Ambassador Students Respond

Being Ambassador College alumni ourselves, we always enjoy reading letters from current AC students. In recent months, it seems, more and more Ambassador students in Pasadena have been reading the Report. Here are three letters, each with a different viewpoint, from Ambassador students who read our March issue and were inspired to write to us.

Your speculations about Mr. Armstrong's successor show great insight, but they are incomplete in excluding the college area. You don't honestly believe that Dr. Hoeh would tolerate the frantic appeals of Mr. McNair, do you? Incident after incident, no matter how trivial, has been an excuse for Mr. McNair to run to Mr. Armstrong for help to cover himself. Your scenarios should have foreseen that Mr. McNair has already purchased his ticket to some "small but important church" that needs his help in getting truly behind Mr. Armstrong.

Surely you knew that his right hand club, Mr. Albrecht, loves to be let loose on the students to put into effect drastic measures that make Mr. McNair's scare tactics very pleasant by comparison. Mr. Albrecht wants to prove that he deserves a higher position, and he will get it too. You see, this has to take place because there are too many new leaders at all levels. Mr. Ames is too much of a politician not to use his silent, pushy loyalty and an influential brother-in-law to raise himself to the office of Deputy Chancellor. You should have added one more scenario: Mr. Albrecht will become Mean on [Dean of?] the Faculty under Deputy Chancellor Ames and his present job will be executed by Dr. "let's not go for outside degrees" Albert, who recently completed his own outside degrees with Mr. Armstrong's approval, and in psychology no less.

In this way we will have an administration made up of a man without kids over other people's kids, a divorced man doing marriage counselling, and an ascending Dean who is an outright opportunist and a very poor actor.

I, therefore, have two questions for you. Do you think we will be any worse off than we are now if we don't graduate in the meantime? And, at the rate at which the College is becoming ultra conservative, will a balance ever be achieved between the rank liberalism of the late '70s and the ever increasing conservatism that Mr. McNair is resurrecting from his notorious old Bricket Wood days? At least we can be thankful that such extremes have, to an extent, been eliminated in both the individual faculty members and in the Church administration.

Hopefully yours,
AC Student

Editor: We weren't aware that the problem of extremism had been eliminated anywhere in the Armstrong organization. If it has, that's nice. However, your scenario on the college, which seems quite plausible, would indicate little has changed at the college.

Regarding your question on graduating, as Ambassador alumni who have gone on to pursue accredited degrees, we cannot in good conscience recommend that anyone apply to Ambassador at this time. The institution simply has too many deficiencies in personnel and policy, and we don't believe significant improvement is likely to occur within the next few years. Even Dr. Hoeh encouraged his own children to go elsewhere for their college educations.

Should you leave? A degree from AC is perhaps better than no degree at all. But will your time and expense worth the results? Only you can answer that.

It's high time you received a real Ambassador Report from a student who is proud to study at God's own College and respects "intellectual lightweights" with "unaccredited B.A. degrees" earning "$75,000 plus perks."

In evaluating a speech, the speaker's use of logic is very important. The same with your last issue. But it has a long way to go before it reaches an acceptable stage.

Mr. Armstrong enunciated the Primacy of Peter not because he wanted us to think of him as the highest authority on the face of the earth, but because the doctrine is correct in the first place. If the correctness of this doctrine strengthens his unique position under the Father and the Son no amount of human reasoning will undermine his calling and mission. Obviously, you have no objections to the doctrine itself otherwise you would have mentioned them. But since you accept it you are reasoning against God himself.

You come down on top executives as "company men" with unaccredited degrees, lacking creativity, innovativeness, brilliance and education, yet receiving $75,000 plus perks. I will not argue with your figures because you seem to have access to the facts. But you fail to see that these men have simply been spared the exposure to this world's educational system started by the pagan Greek philosopher Plato. They've missed the garbage of philosophy, the immortality of the soul, and sexual perversions which God condemns outright.

Because these men were anchored in the Word of God they were tested and proven in the fire of persecution. Mr. McNair did not allow marital problems to stand in his way and Mr. Meredith willingly accepted exile to Hawaii knowing that God was able to bring him back at the right time. If Mr. Meredith had filled his head with accredited nonsense he would have been blown totally off course and we would have been deprived of his wonderful example of dogged determination and his unrelenting sense of duty that make him a foremost leader here at Headquarters and a virtual powerhouse. Can these men's qualifications be measured by accreditation or by a few thousand dollars a year?

It's about time you understood that only Ambassador lays the foundations of true education. No paganism, drugs, smoking, drunkenness, fornication or adultery, vain philosophies, evolution or human reasoning, but a piece of heaven in the midst of a sick and perverted world.

Here God is very active in our lives. The constant and watchful eye of Mr. Albrecht reminds us students that God is watching us in exactly the same way. And sitting at the feet of "intellectual lightweights" who have not been polluted by the world inspires us too to nip intellectualism in the bud for true spirituality. It may sound strange to the world that students are willing to pay ten percent of their student income toward the salaries of executives making $75,000 plus perks. But this teaches us to trust God and not temporary material goods. But physical blessings can later be poured on us too after we have proved ourselves faithful in little things as these men have done.

Nothing would please me more than signing this letter. But I am prevented by two things. Firstly, I cannot take the credit for pointing up your faulty reasoning. The credit goes to the men who gave us students a solid foundation in Fundamentals and Doctrines and valuable guidance in correct reasoning in speech after speech. Secondly, I would not like to encourage lower classmen to be in touch with you since they would lack the necessary discernment. The College would disapprove of it anyway.

You must not think that I'm controlled by others. I believe that the decisions of those over us are right and for our good, but I also believe that I had to say this for your own good and to exonerate men I deeply love, respect, and owe so much to.

A Concerned Student

Editor: Your assertions regarding Plato raise a number questions, not the least of which is: Have you ever really read Plato - at least The Republic, The Apology of Socrates, Crito, Phaedo, and The Symposium? Sure, Plato had more than a few erroneous ideas. No one has ever claimed that Plato's dialogues are the "Word of God." But within their pages one can find much that is thought provoking and enlightening - especially to the serious Bible student. Hellenic thought, especially Platonic, had literally saturated the world in which Jesus of Nazareth and his disciples lived. Plato's works offer us an invaluable insight into that world. That being the case, why would a college (especially one emphasizing theology) ever discourage students from gaining such knowledge? The fact is, at Ambassador, Plato is used as a convenient "straw man." Carefully compare what Plato actually wrote to what some AC professors claim he wrote and you may be in for a surprise.

As for the "Primacy of Peter" doctrine - we don't believe it! And neither did the WCG ministry until around 1978 when church attorney Stan Rader, a long-time student of Roman Catholic history, encouraged HWA to adopt that Catholic doctrine. The "Primacy of Peter" was clearly disproven years before in Ambassador College Personal Correspondence Department reprint number 980, copyrighted in 1970. That reprint expounded sound theology the WCG has since discarded. If you can locate a copy of that article, read it. You may discover that your time at Ambassador has so far given you as little understanding of the Bible as it has of Plato.

Your comment about no "fornication or adultery" at Ambassador drew a chuckle here. Ten years of Ambassador Report documenting the opposite indicates a little naivete on your part.

As for "powerhouse" Meredith, thank you for reminding us of his terrible "persecution." Being sent to Hawaii at church expense and while on church salary must have been horrible. Surely one day his Hawaiian "exile" will be included in an appendix to Fox's Book of Martyrs.

I am grateful to Ambassador Report for forcing me to examine the myth I have been living as a student at Ambassador College. The truth is difficult to swallow at times, yet we should be glad to have it.

I was shocked out of my boots to discover that the reports from students reading your publication were in fact true. I mean the reports that Joe McNair had actually stood up in court and testified against his own mother. I used to insist that this had to be a foul rumor started by you to discredit an evangelist, leader of the faculty, and an evangelist's son, leader of the students.

Now there are no ifs and buts about this matter. He did actually do that even though the Bible pronounces the death penalty for showing disrespect to parents. So it dawned on me for the first time through the Ambassador Report that at Ambassador College the Bible and true values are tools to be used on others. However, when the going gets tough personally, even the evangelists put away their wives, marry new ones, and have their sons testify against their parents.

Even though I sought counsel on this, I quickly sensed it was a mistake on my part and talked about other matters instead. You just don't go to the dean of students with big questions such as this and expect to be understood. Might makes right and one must soon come to terms with this fact.

The second event that shook my confidence concerns Mr. McNair Sr. In my college experience I have had the misfortune to be under two McNairs - as if God wanted to insure that I got the point. Mr. McNair Sr. made a sudden midstream change in our senior Bible class this year. The first semester in that class was tying together everything we had learned and was leading us to believe that there was still some value to the Ambassador experience. The semester ended with a climatic expounding of the doctrine of faith in the clearest and most encouraging way that impressed on us the conviction that all major doctrines were worth studying in depth. The next thing we knew the professor was removed and a new one appointed for the second semester. No comment or explanation was offered about the swift and mysterious change, only a forum in which Mr. McNair said that it was not our place to question administrative decisions.

So the class is being "taught" by a man who knows nothing about the subject and is honest enough to admit it. In fact any one of us in the class is more qualified to teach it since we had one semester under a lecturer who knew his stuff and answered our questions with clarity and patience. Now we are back to memorizing scriptures, learning names of world leaders and virtually going back to where we were in our first year. We are also using a textbook which even the new professor admits is hopelessly wrong in many places. He was told to use it and he has to in spite of the comments he made in class against it. Here then, as in the case of Mr. McNair's forum, the policy of Ambassador College is: "It's for us to decide, and for you to listen and obey. Don't question. Don't even ask. Just do what we tell you and if you take it all in a good attitude you will be used by God."

This is exactly what I'm doing now. Having come this far it is better to finish Ambassador College with a piece of paper in my hand than without one. After graduation I would like to ask if I can join your staff so that others can hear about the Ambassador experience.

I am sure your readers would value a firsthand account of the methods implemented from the top down in what is more and more coming to resemble a fully developed police state. I have been here only four years. The strides in this direction, however, have become unmistakably clearer with each passing year.

I pity those who kneel down on a daily basis and give thanks to God for an atrocity such as this. So keep

Worldwide at Kent State

Dale Hartshorn of Kent, Ohio was never a WCG member. He's just a Christian who studies the Bible and feels very strongly that the WCG does not represent true Christianity. So when he discovered last year that a minister of the Armstrong church was coming to speak at the campus of Kent State University, where his wife is a student, he felt compelled to take action. At his own expense he put together an advertisement (shown below) expressing his views and had it published in the campus newspaper.

When Armstrong representative William Jahns arrived on campus to speak, Hartshorn was waiting. Jahns presented a ten minute film on the greatness of Herbert W. Armstrong. He then spoke on a number of subjects: Bible prophecy, the "end times," the "lost tribes," our modern holidays, etc. When he was done, Hartshorn - who had researched the WCG - stood up and said he wanted Jahns to answer a few questions about the misuse of church funds, sexual immorality, excommunications, and false prophecies of the WCG. Jahns then said he would not be taking any questions and quickly left.

Wolverton Has Returned

Monte Wolverton (AC Pasadena 1970), after a long absence from Pasadena and WCG employment, has returned to WCG headquarters to take over as Art Director of the Plain Truth. Wolverton, one of the most creative individuals ever to have graduated from Ambassador, will undoubtedly have an effect on that publication's circulation. Some have already noticed that the photography, illustrations, and graphics of recent editions of the Plain Truth have had a distinctly more focused and energetic quality.

Long-time Armstrong observers will recognize the Wolverton name. Monte's father was the late Basil Wolverton, one of the very first men ordained by HWA and, interestingly, a world-famous cartoonist. It was Basil Wolverton's terrifying illustrations in HWA's 1975 in Prophecy that played a major part in prodding thousands into joining HWA's church in the sixties. The World Encyclopedia of Comics (Vol. 2, p. 705) has an excellent write-up on Basil Wolverton. Here is an excerpt:

Although Wolverton had no formal art training, he soon became one of the most respected and innovative creators in the comic book field. His work was so off-beat, intricate and personalized, Life magazine's editors once called his material work from "the spaghetti and meatball school of design"; many underground cartoonists cite Wolverton as a profound influence on their style.... His early scripts were violent and brutal; retribution being substituted for justice. Spacehawk, an interplanetary crimefighter, was more likely to kill a captured criminal rather than bind him over for proper punishment. Artistically, the feature showcased Wolverton's creative genius. Although some of the work was crude and cramped, it showed brilliant flashes of Wolverton's unequalled effective story-telling....

Alumni News

Brenda Denzler (nee Reser, AC Big Sandy 1971-74) is now an undergraduate majoring in religion at Wichita State University. Ms. Denzler was recently awarded a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship to participate in the Religion in a Democratic Society program at the University of California at Santa Barbara. She was also recently granted a scholarship from the Department of Religion and was named a 1985 Emory Linquist Scholar at WSU. We talked to Brenda in June and were told that although her book on the experiences of former WCG members is progressing slowly, she still plans to complete the project within the next few years.

We have been saddened to learn of the death of ex-WCG minister Bruce Vance (AC Bricket Wood 1968), who was killed in a car crash on January 6. In recent years, Bruce was owner and manager of a drug store in Tulsa, Oklahoma. He is survived by his wife Amy, two sons, and a daughter.

Editor: On May 18, 1985, Ted Gerringer, 69, passed away at his home in Modesto. With his wife Ruth at his side, Mr. Gerringer, the father of Ambassador Report co-founder Bob Gerringer, succumbed to fast-moving stomach cancer, first detected less than three months ago. In memory of his father, Bob Gerringer has written the following remembrance.

A Tribute

I have never before experienced the death of a close family member. It may be that only time can bring acceptance of the fact that my father is gone. In the meantime, while mourning and grieving his death, I celebrate his life and the special way it inspired his family and friends.

Dad was born in Colorado on Feb. 28, 1916. During and after his high school years he farmed with his dad, and, in 1942, married Ruth Canterbury, my mother. He saw active duty during World War II as a bombardier in Europe, after which he returned to farming. With the outbreak of the Korean War, however, he returned to active duty to serve his country. After that conflict ended, he remained in the Air Force Reserve and our family moved to San Diego, California.

His parents began listening to HWA on the radio in the early forties and joined HWA's church in the early fifties. Dad and Mom, however, did not join the WCG until 1962. Soon after joining the WCG, Dad requested a discharge from the Air Force because the church prohibited its members from being in the military. He had served over 19 years, had risen to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and lacked only about ten monthly reserve meetings of reaching the required 20 years for retirement. Dad's integrity would not allow him to compromise his faith in the teachings of the WCG, and thus he lost all the retirement benefits for which he had worked so hard.

It was only two years earlier, in 1960, that Dad made a career change from small business owner to salesman. He became a "lubricants advisor" for Texas Refinery Corp. (TRC), and we moved to Modesto, Ca., situated in the middle of his company-assigned territory. He then began selling TRC's heavy-duty lubricants, oils, greases, and industrial cleaners to farmers, truckers, loggers, etc. At the start, he had no established customers, no experience, six mouths to feed, and, by 1964, three tithes to pay. For many years, things were financially tight, but Dad had an abundance of courage and tenacity.

In 1975, life changed dramatically for Dad and Mom. That year, they left the WCG. Ironically, this occurred only one month after he was ordained a local elder. Dad was very disappointed to learn that much of the WCG leadership did not exercise the same integrity it demanded of the laity. Nevertheless, he did not leave because of their immoral and unethical behavior. It was doctrinal reexamination that convinced both Mom and Dad that they had to leave the Armstrong church.

There were a few years of transition, but during the last eight years of his life, Dad was totally at peace with himself and God. He developed a strong belief that the plan of salvation was universal in scope and that all humankind would eventually be reconciled to God. Dad's approach to the Bible was basically as taught by the Concordant Publishing Concern. His belief in the resurrection was a source of strength for both him and his family at the end.

By 1985, Dad had been with TRC a quarter of a century and was one of their most experienced and successful professionals. He was loved and respected by both coworker and client (many of whom he had served for over 20 years). Dad had said he was going to start "slowing down" in 1986 when he turned 70, but he never planned on retiring.

Over 150 people paid their respects to my father at the funeral where my brothers, sister and I (Chuck, 34; Steve, 28; Diane, 24; and myself, 36) each said a few words. Diane told of Dad's strong religious convictions and his fine example of faith. Steve told of Dad's active and vibrant lifestyle, including his passion for tennis, which he played until the last few months, and square dancing, which Dad and Mom last did on Valentine's Day. Chuck told of Dad's uncompromising integrity. I told of the courage and tenacity which were so much a part of his personal and professional successes.

Dad and Mom were still very much in love after nearly 43 years of marriage. They raised a very close and tight-knit family. In addition to Mom and the four kids, Dad is survived by his mother Lillian, 92, two brothers, one sister, and four grandchildren.

My brothers, sister, and I are thankful to our Mom for marrying the man she did and for being his loving partner all these years. We will miss him unendingly, but we are thankful and proud, very proud, to be the children of Ted Gerringer.

Letters

I have read with fascination of the continuing saga of the WCG and noted the interest of so many in its rather aberrant history. I wondered if some post-WCG experiences would be of any help to your readers. Realizing there is probably nothing as discredited as an ex-WCG evangelist, maybe the following information would still help atone for some of the horrendous mistakes of the past.

Most of us were intrigued by the WCG message - we were searching for truth and a purpose to this complex existence in a veritable minefield of competing theologies. Many became disillusioned at the WCG leadership. Some, like myself at the obvious error in its inconsistent semi-Mosaic approach to God. In spite of having spent 25 years in a futile pursuit of truth, I determined never to close my mind nor to reject or accept a concept until it could be proved or disproved. The search has proven most rewarding. Once you start checking up on some of these self-appointed gurus, the results are startling.

The error in HWA's theology is now obvious - attractive alternatives were sometimes very inviting but careful checking showed just a different set of flaws. The idea that it didn't make much difference what you believed as long as you loved God and your fellow man seemed to place too high a value on ignorance and error. It also was a concept that flew directly in the face of the admonition to return to the faith once delivered to the Church and the very explicit statement of Christ himself when He said that God seeks for those who worship Him in spirit and in truth. If we agree on the spirit, why not on the truth?

In the interest of brevity - a long continuing search and a renewed acquaintanceship with Sir Anthony Buzzard, ex- Ambassador College lecturer in languages, has led to some invaluable theological insights. A number of men have been researching the writings of some of the world's outstanding biblical scholars who are both historians and linguists. Their primary interest was to discover what Christ and the early biblical writers really meant in the context of the setting and language of their day. Much of what they discovered contradicted their own previously held ideas and are in opposition to much of what is being taught today.

The compilation of this research is available to any of us and we can evaluate the information ourselves. I have, and I strongly recommend, yes urge, all your readers to avail themselves of this careful research to get a side of the story that very few have had the opportunity of hearing. I am confident an openminded approach to this research will prove most rewarding. For information write Anthony Buzzard, P. O. Box 100, Oregon, IL 61061.

I have given upon the hope that things would come to a head when HWA passes away - now I figure he's never going to die as even the devil won't have him!

Late News

A "Special Edition" of The Worldwide News, dated June 24, 1985, has just appeared. It is devoted entirely to one lengthy article entitled "Recent History of the Philadelphia Era of the Worldwide Church of God." The author credited is Herbert W. Armstrong, but the prevailing supposition of insiders (and based on internal evidence, well-founded) is that the article was ghost-written by Herman L. Hoeh with assistance from Armstrong aide Aaron Dean. The article, which is generally an attack on the church's "liberals" of the '70s (a popular "straw man" of today's WCG), contains a number of interesting statements:

From that time [1981, when HWA returned to Pasadena from Tucson] the TV program has produced steady growth, until today we are the second in the world in the religious category, with over 300 TV stations worldwide.

Not true. "The World Tomorrow" is not even in the top ten.

In 1978, after my "resurrection" from total heart failure, I had to completely close Ambassador College at Pasadena, starting all over again, as in 1947, with one freshman class.

At least they put "resurrection" in quotes. Finally, the end of the lengthy piece had these statements, obviously, the real message of this "Special Edition":

A final personal word. In a few days I will be 93 years of age. For some years now, there have been some, like vultures, waiting for me to die. They would like to come back and take over the leadership of the Church in my stead. I have been deeply concerned about this, but in no sense worried. This is the Church of God, not of any man. Jesus Christ is the living Head of this Church. I am not.

And Jesus Christ will never receive any of those who have gone out to draw a following after themselves to come back and lead God's Church into Satan's liberalism. It would be no longer God's Church, even as Ambassador College was no longer God's college, and Christ had to start it all over again through me with one freshman class.

When I have, even rarely, mentioned my concern in this category, the response of members has always been the belief that God will keep me alive. I hope that He will, and I do try to take every care of my health and physical condition, but whether God keeps me alive 10 more years, or only 10 more minutes is entirely in God's hands. Brethren, put your faith in Christ and the living God and not in me. If Christ should remove me, He will direct the Advisory Council of Elders to select one of them to continue leading you until the coming of Jesus Christ in power and in glory....

As we indicated in our March issue, HWA will not allow his son Garner Ted to return to leadership in the WCG, he has not chosen a successor, and at his death the WCG's Council of Elders will be in charge of that organization.

On May 17, commencement was held at Ambassador College in Pasadena. College founder Herbert W. Armstrong was unable to give the commencement address. The man chosen for that honor was "Mr." (as he now prefers to be called) Herman L. Hoeh.

Please Remember Us!

This issue of Ambassador Report represents less than half of what we had hoped to publish. Frankly, we are being overwhelmed by the amount of information - especially from lawsuits - coming out on the WCG. We just don't have the financial resources to do the kind of extensive reporting we wish we could. We hope all of you will remember that you are an important part of Ambassador Report. Without your help we could not continue publishing. Our thanks to all of you who are supporting our efforts.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

WCG News in Brief

Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the self-appointed Apostle of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and founder of Ambassador College (AC), continues to lead those organizations despite his 93 years. He also continues to inspire those organizations to levels of deception ever more outrageous.

The WCG has in recent months been running an ad in Broadcasting, a trade magazine for electronic media executives. The ad states:

We Don't Ask for Contributions. People know what to expect from The World Tomorrow. And they know we don't expect anything back. On The World Tomorrow, we've never solicited contributions. Neither have we used television to make converts. Or take sides politically. And we never will. What we do is deliver a message, a message that makes sense. The Bible message, rightly understood. That's why The World Tomorrow is one of the top rated religious programs in the United States.

Those who read Ambassador Report know that, while the above ad may make sense to someone hoodwinked by Armstrong's cosmology, in reality there is not one honest statement in that ad.

* * *

The August 5 issue of The Worldwide News announced that HWA's latest book has come off the presses. It's titled Mystery of the Ages. While this book purports to answer all of the great questions inherent in human existence, some theologians who have purused the book say it is absolutely loaded with theological error and is nothing more than a rehash of old Armstrong theology. Nevertheless, we understand that some WCG members are already looking on the book (being sold in bookstores for $12.95) as some type of extension to the Holy Bible.

During the last decade, as reported on by numerous articles in official WCG publications, HWA has maintained a close relationship with the communist government in China. Now, apparently, he hopes to do the same with the communist government of Russia. In July, HWA was in San Francisco for the 40th Anniversary of the founding of the United Nations. In his July 25 letter to his followers HWA described how, while there, he met with the Russian ambassador:

The Ambassador from the Soviet Union spoke to me twice and said I am too hard on the Soviet Union on the air, although he admitted I was not as hard on them as other TV evangelists, and invited me to visit the Soviet Union.

The Sept. 6 edition of the Ambassador Portfolio (an official Ambassador College publication) reported that HWA has given final approval to Ambassador Foundation participation in developing and operating a school in Sri Lanka (off India's southern coast). The project is named the Armstrong-Disanayake Educational Trust. According to the article, last November Sri Lanka president Jayewardene "personally asked" HWA to begin a project there. The article states:

In early June the [Ambassador] Foundation sent David Baker, an Ambassador graduate, and Trent Meisner, an Ambassador senior, to Sri Lanka to teach English to Buddhist monks at the temple in Mt. Lavinia, a city near Colombo, the capital of Sri Lanka.

The Sept. 6 Ambassador Portfolio also reported that:

Ambassador College isn't shaking hands - again. Because two cases of scabies in the local church area have been tentatively confirmed, the College administration has asked students to avoid shaking hands. The 1983 outbreak of scabies is still vivid in the minds of faculty and many returning students, so the administration has taken steps to prevent a similar outbreak this fall.

Scabies is a highly contagious skin disease caused by the parasite Sarcoptes scabiei, a small mite that burrows into the skin and lays eggs. In ancient times this disease was known as "the itch." It is mentioned in Deut. 28:27 as one of the curses that would strike the Israelites for disobedience.

WCG's Plain Truth Distribution Program Attacked

"There's some of those *@&ç¶ Plain Truth magazines. You take a couple of free samples, tear them to shreds, and I'll go talk to the store manager about removing the PT racks from his premises!" Increasingly we are hearing similar expressions of anger from indignant ex-members all over the world and from concerned members of the public who don't want their loved ones to fall under the Armstrong cult's spell.

Here in southern California, several ex-members confided to us that they watched in dismay as their neighborhoods were blanketed with PT stands, each containing up to 130 magazines. Explaining that their lives and families had been ruined by the hypocritical teachings of Herbert Armstrong and that it was the PT that was one of his primary vehicles for hooking new converts, these zealots said they were determined to rid their cities of PTs. To accomplish this, they went around to store owners, told them the plain truth about the Armstrong cult, and urged them to have all PTs removed from their stores. To date most of the PT newsstands in the greater Pasadena area have been removed by startled church officials. One person wrote us anonymously that he had gladly taken 3,500 free PTs in the last year and destroyed them.

Another former member, tired of having been pushed around by the Armstrong organizations for years, was flying in the U.S. Northwest on Horizon Air when all of a sudden she spied that hated symbol of Armstrongism, a PT, in her plane's magazine rack. Furious, she complained to the stewardess and then wrote a strong complaint to the airline's president. A few weeks later she saw that her efforts had been rewarded when she received the following letter:

John Trechak, Editor & Publisher

Mary E. Jones, Associate Editor

Founding Publishers: Robert Gerringer, Bill Hughes, Mary E. Jones, John Trechak, Len Zola, and Margaret Zola.

With reference to the magazine, The Plain Truth, we do NOT subscribe to it nor do we endorse the Worldwide Church of God in Pasadena, California. The magazine was surely placed there by another passenger, and we have reviewed this matter with the department involved, and I can assure you that any of the magazines that may show up on our aircraft will be removed by our grooming personnel. Thank you for bringing this matter to my attention.

Carmel Campbell
Manager, Consumer Services

Another one of our readers, who resides in the Spokane, Washington area, informed us that he noticed the PT displayed in Tidyman's Warehouse Foods. Determined to have the PTs removed, he wrote Tidyman's owner, explaining that the PT "is perhaps the chief tool" used by the WCG to lead the "unwary, religiously curious into their quite destructive religious trap - membership in the Worldwide Church of God.... As a successful businessman, I'm reasonably certain you would not wittingly promulgate the propaganda of this greedy religious cult." And his efforts paid off. Owner Jim Tidyman wrote:

I have been out of town and just returned and read your letter concerning the free magazine that we are allowing to be distributed in our stores. I agree with you that this organization preys on the elderly and ignorant and I don't want the distribution in our outlets. I have asked that our supervisors check this out and get rid of the publication. Thank you for writing to me so that I could correct the problem.

The U.S. is not the only country where people are fighting the inroads of the Worldwide Church of God and the PT. Phillip Adams, writing in the July 16, 1985 issue of The Bulletin (p. 66), a leading Australian periodical, commented:

I particularly enjoyed the paradox of Herbert W. telling his followers to despatch their few remaining dollars immediately. IMMEDIATELY, as the world was about to end. While on the other [hand], he was forever building larger mansions and buying bigger jets.

These days, the radio network in Australia has finally contracted, although Herbert W. buys a significant amount of television time. Now the main method of recruiting is through Plain Truth, a journal with a similar appearance to The Bulletin or Time. And for reasons I fail to comprehend, this noxious journal, this malignant magazine, this un-Australian, anti-Christian rip-off is being enthusiastically marketed by the federal government....

By any standards, Plain Truth is the spearhead of a most sinister organisation.... Where you will see this exploitative rag is on special display stands on some of the most conspicuous pieces of Commonwealth real estate. If you're an air traveller, you simply cannot avoid the special display stands at airports. In Melbourne and Sydney, the magazines have a way of getting into the Flight Deck and Golden Wing lounges, where businessmen pick them up, presuming them to be conventional news magazines. They are, after all, well camouflaged....

Each year, millions of TAA and Ansett passengers are exposed to the misnamed Plain Truth, which carries as much objective information as Pravda. It is inevitable that a percentage of passengers are persuaded to repatriate huge amounts of their income to one of the most notorious of evangelical entrepreneurs.

In a democracy, in a free society, you are perfectly entitled to believe grotesque nonsense and to give your money away to confidence tricksters. The freedom to be a fool is protected along with freedom of speech, assembly and belief. But I find it hard to accept that this purveyor of paranoia, this pick-pocket from Pasadena, should wear our coat of arms.

Near Toronto, Canada, Ruby Beale, a Markland Woods resident, spotted Plain Truth magazines on the shelves of her local IGA store. Incensed, she contacted store manager Al Muir and vowed to take her shopping elsewhere unless the offensive PTs were removed. Muir told Mrs. Beale that, just as she has a right to say what she thinks, the person who makes the PT has rights, and he initially refused to remove the PTs, no doubt partly because his store was being paid a $20 monthly rental fee by the WCG. (Reported in the Etobicoke Guardian, May 1, 1985.) Mrs. Beale wrote us that "this rack has now been removed, plus 3 others, to my knowledge."

Mrs. Beale was not the only person willing to stand up and be counted in the Etobicoke area. The Etobicoke Guardian (7/24/85) reported:

An Etobicoke variety store has refused to carry The Plain Truth magazine after a resident complained the publication was a subtle recruiting device for the Worldwide Church of God. The store, located at the Martin Grove Road and Burnhamthorpe intersection, received a complaint and forfeited the rental fee for the free magazine, confirmed Kay Neun. Neun was about to approach the store owner herself when she discovered another Etobicoke resident complained first.

"I had friends become involved with the Worldwide Church of God 20 years ago, and it was a very divisive thing. It became very distressing because it cut off our fellowship", said Neun.

The article went on to quote former WCG minister Richard Forkun, who remarked that the PT "looks legitimate but the danger is that it is really a very subtle recruitment. Eventually, if you are interested, you will get a call, a visit and eventually be invited to the meetings. It was my job to follow up on these subscribers."

Forkun's comments provoked an angry response from the WCG's Toronto pastor, Neil Earle, who denied recruiting was the purpose of the PT.

In the July 3, 1985 issue (p. 6) of the Etobicoke Guardian Pastor Earle had published in the newspaper's Public Forum section a long letter explaining the PT. In it he wrote the following:

...we are not in the recruiting business. I suppose one could say there is no evidence for my statement, but our advertising agency in the United States recently ran an ad in the May 13 Broadcasting magazine with the title: We're Not Looking for Followers. Does any other group categorized as a cult or sect take this position in public?

The answer, of course, is no. Most churches - unlike the WCG - avoid cutting down other Christian churches in public, and the churches that do advertise are more honest than the WCG in that they do not say "we're not looking for followers." Who does Pastor Earle think he's kidding? If the WCG is not looking for members, why does the church sponsor lectures for PT readers, sponsor evangelistic campaigns in major cities worldwide, offer tons of free religious literature to the public, print Bible correspondence courses, telecast religious TV programs, and offer toll free phone numbers? If they weren't looking for followers, they would stick to informative secular articles and make no attempt to interest their readers in the church's doctrinal teachings.

Pastor Earle continued his letter by referring to Ambassador Report's 1977 article, "Fleecing the Flock," which discussed financial irregularities in the WCG. He, of course, submitted no examples of errors the AR had made in that or any other article but simply said: "We direct people with any questions concerning our finances to our auditors, Arthur Andersen. The Worldwide Church of God is regularly audited by this reputable firm, and nothing in the manner of the charges made against us was ever found."

Comments like the above show that Pastor Earle is willingly ignorant, incredibly naive, or just plain careless with the facts. Perhaps he is unaware of the fact that Arthur Andersen & Co.'s first audit covered the WCG's 1978 financial statements (The Worldwide News, 9-10-79), while the AR's main articles about church finances appeared in Oct. 1977 - before Arthur Andersen's accounting firm was hired - so their audit didn't even cover the time period our articles discussed. Second, they were hired to audit the financial statements of the Worldwide Church and Ambassador College. Auditing financial statements does NOT include passing moral judgment on Herbert Armstrong's spending habits. If Pastor Earle had bothered to read our 1977 article, he would have seen that we objected bitterly to the hypocritical and unethical spending habits of the Armstrongs and their top cohorts. We did NOT charge them with anything criminal or illegal.

Arthur Andersen's auditors were solely concerned as to whether the church financial statements presented fairly the financial position of the WCG, the results of operations, and the changes in financial position in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles. (See the AR's lengthy article on this subject in our July 1984 issue, p. 4.) When Pastor Earle commented that "we direct people with any questions concerning our finances to our auditors, Arthur Andersen," he seemed unaware that the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants' Rules of Professional Conduct (sect. 301) prohibit a CPA from disclosing confidential client information except with the consent of the client. When Pastor Earle claims "nothing in the manner of the charges made against us was ever found," he again is unaware that "the CPA is usually not competent to determine if an act is illegal or likely to discover such an act" (The Complete CPA Examination Review - Auditing, 1984, p. 66). Furthermore, if a CPA discovers an illegal act while auditing a client's books, the "illegal act should be reported to a high enough level of management to take remedial action.... The CPA has no obligation to notify third parties" (ibid.). Indeed if he notified third parties or the general public, it would violate the rule of confidentiality.

Finally, it's important to remember that even big-name accounting firms are far from infallible. According to the April 1, 1985 issue of Business Week, since 1980 the nation's largest accounting firm, Arthur Andersen (the WCG's auditors), paid out over $137.1 million in settlement of audit-related lawsuits. That's more than seven times the amount any other CPA firm has had to pay in settlement of such suits.

In all fairness to Pastor Earle, if any readers want to get his side of the story, they should write him at 149 Shaughnessy Blvd., Millondale, Ontario, Canada M2J 1J7 or call him in Canada at (416) 495-9419.

Plain Truth Not Catholic

Worldwide Church members have been so anxious to get stores to give away PTs that, in New York, some have told store owners that the PT is a good Catholic publication. It became such a problem that the Western New York Catholic newspaper had to run an article titled "Plain Truth Not Catholic" in its Sept. 1985 issue, p. 20.

WCG Hit With New Lawsuit

In mid-June newspapers around the country carried an AP story telling of yet another lawsuit against the WCG:

A Lowry, Minn., couple has filed a $6 million suit in federal court to recover farmland they said they gave to the Worldwide Church of God after church representatives told them the world was coming to an end.

The suit by Gilman and Gladys Anderson says the couple gave 160 acres to Ambassador College, an agent of the church, in 1969 after they were told they wouldn't need the land because the world was coming to an end. The college and the church have home offices in Pasadena, Calif. The Andersons ended their affiliation with the church in 1984.

"The Worldwide Church of God, through its agents, made numerous fraudulent misrepresentations to (the Andersons) that (they) were living in the end of times and that (the Andersons) would soon have to leave their property and flee for their lives to a place of safety in Petra, Jordan," the suit says.

The lawsuit says the Andersons were told in 1966 that they had a maximum of six years left, that Germany would destroy the United States by 1975 and that "there would be famine so bad that people would eat their own children."

The Andersons "were told that there would be no future for them and they should give all their property to the church," the suit says. "In reliance upon said misrepresentations, (the Andersons) transferred their farmland to Ambassador College in 1969."

Earle Reese, spokesman for the legal department of Worldwide Church of God said the church could not return property in cases such as Anderson's. "This nor any other church could ever exist under such terms," Reese said. "People can't make gifts and then change their mind."

Ambassador College made an offer a few years ago to sell the property back to Anderson at no interest rate and on an installment payment plan, but Anderson did not respond Reese said.

Anderson said he became familiar with the church by hearing Herbert W. Armstrong preach on radio. "It (the end of the world) isn't as close as he has been telling us," Anderson said. "He has been doing that for his own benefit; it's a scare tactic." Anderson said he gave half his property to the church after ministers recommended that not all the land be turned over.

The Andersons are asking $1 million for the lost farmland, its income and economic opportunity and contributions made to the church, $1 million in actual damages, and $4 million in punitive damages.

The Andersons are being represented by attorney Elton Kuderer of the Erickson lawfirm, P.O. Box 571, Fairmont, MN 56031-0571.

WCG Member Convicted of Murder

On August 26, a Seattle jury of five men and seven women found WCG member Charles E. Harris (see our June, 1985 issue) guilty of two murders and two attempted murders. Harris will be officially sentenced on October 15, but legal experts say that hearing will be a mere formality, with Harris, by statute, now required to receive life imprisonment without possibility of parole. (The prosecution did not ask for the death penalty.)

During the trial Dr. Joan Hampson, a psychiatrist, testified that Harris suffers from a mental condition and was driven insane by pressure from the WCG. But the jury did not find Harris' insanity plea convincing. It did not help his case when prosecutors revealed that since 1976 Harris has been legally married to Elsa Bowen, a Canadian woman whom he had once choked when she decided to separate from him (Harris killed his first wife in 1970). During the trial Harris did not take the stand.

The most dramatic testimony came when surviving victim Patricia Tobis tearfully described how Harris had gone through her home cold-bloodedly shooting his victims. Harris, himself, broke down in tears during her testimony. The attack by Harris left Tobis, a mother of two-year-old twin girls, paralyzed from the waist down and subject to constant pain.

Seattle-area newspapers reported extensively on the trial and a number of articles spotlighted the WCG (Seattle Times, Aug. 23 and 31). One of those who testified under subpoena at the trial was former WCG minister Kenneth Westby, now with the Association for Christian Development. Westby described the WCG as a "cult" and later told the press he feels the WCG leaders treat their members "like nerds" (Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Aug. 31, p. A6).

WCG Hires PR Firm

The above Seattle Post-Intelligencer article mentioned that when reporters attempted to get local WCG pastors to talk about their church, the ministers:

referred questions to a Los Angeles public relations firm that works for the Pasadena-based church. At church request, questions were submitted in advance and answered in writing. In a nine-page response, Joseph W. Tkach, the church's director of ministerial services, denied that his church forbids interracial marriage or marriages to nonchurch members. He called charges that the church controls its members "positively preposterous!"

We understand that the WCG's new public relations representatives are The Hannaford Company/West, Inc. with regional offices at 523 W. Sixth St., Suite 224, Los Angeles, CA 90014 (phone 213-622-1000). The WCG account executive is Peter S. Pande.

Apparently in the WCG I Peter 3:15, like so many other ignored Bible verses, is no longer of any relevance.

Editor: Brenda Denzler, a former WCG member and Ambassador College alumnus now studying at Wichita State University, has been working on a book about the experiences of people who have entered and exited the WCG. Recently, while in California, Brenda visited Ambassador Report and made a number of comments that perked our ears. She told us:

Many people don't realize what a profound experience Worldwide Church membership can be, or how difficult it can be to leave once in that group. Joining and leaving Worldwide is not like joining and leaving the Methodist Church or some other mainstream denomination. For many, leaving the WCG can be just as painful as the membership itself.

Brenda told us that over the previous six months she has studied the phenomenon known as Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), the psychological illness so closely identified with veterans of the Vietnam War. She pointed out that psychologists are more and more realizing that the symptoms of PTSD have been present in some veterans of other wars and also in other individuals who have gone through high stress or highly disorienting (though nonmilitary) experiences. Former members of certain religious cults, in particular, have been known to have symptoms remarkably similar to PTSD.

Ambassador Report has noticed over the years that some who have been a part of the Armstrong cult and then left have been able to readapt to the real world quite quickly and with little apparent difficulty. Such individuals are, however, a small minority. Many more experience fairly substantial difficulty at readjustment, at least for a few years, and a noticeable percentage experience very significant difficulty in readjustment. Sadly, it is quite evident to us that some never fully recover. Recognition of this fact is important, especially to those with relatives or friends "still in." The truth is, for many people the "Ambassador or Worldwide experience" is mind-bending, and "coming out" can be extremely traumatic.

We think Ms. Denzler's observations on the subject are potentially very significant, and we asked her to do a short article on the subject for the Report. We welcome any comments our readers may have on the subject. And Ms. Denzler has asked us to remind all of you that she still wishes to hear from former WCG members who will share their experiences with her for possible inclusion in her upcoming book. For more details send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Brenda Denzler, P.O. Box 1005, Newton, KS 67114.

PTSD and the Armstrong Church Experience by Brenda Denzler

For those of us who have been members of the Worldwide Church of God, leaving it, like entering it, happens in different ways. Some are disfellowshipped and leave kicking and screaming. Some, like my father, "wake up" during a sermon and wonder, "What am I doing here?" then promptly grab their Bibles and leave forever.

While the methods of leaving tend to fall into one of two categories (willing and unwilling), the methods of facing and dealing with the Worldwide experience vary widely. Some mourn the loss of hopes, friendships, and an entire way of looking at and responding to the world. Others quickly form new religious and/or social attachments, as if the experience of Worldwide was inconsequential to them. Some become frank materialists after their soul-searing experiences in Worldwide. Others maintain many of the same beliefs and lifestyles that were embraced upon entering Worldwide.

No matter how we react, we all have as part of our past the WCG. And whether or not we admit it, it continues to affect our lives in the present. The question is, to what extent is our WCG involvement still coloring our present lives? Do we recognize WCG-related difficulties for what they are, or do we ignore them - by attributing them to our own personal and moral weakness or by giving Satan undue credit? Even when we do realize that current problems stem from our time and experiences in Worldwide, what do we do about it? What can we do about it?

To gain an insight into our own difficulties, I believe we can learn much by looking at the adjustment problems that have been faced by one group of individuals in our society that have been forced to come to grips with their own disillusioning and traumatic past. I am referring to the veterans of the Vietnam War.

It is estimated by some authorities that more than 500,000 veterans suffer from significant life adjustment problems stemming from their service in Vietnam. The problems that these veterans report sound surprisingly like the problems often encountered by former members of religious cults such as the WCG. Psychologists and counselors working with the vets say that the various difficulties are often aspects of Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, or PTSD for short. The similarities between vets' adjustment problems and the problems faced by many former WCG members are striking.

Some victims of the disorder find it impossible to form or to maintain intimate relationships. There may be frequent marriage and divorce - or avoidance of intimate relationships altogether.

PTSD sufferers may become "action junkies" in an effort to duplicate intense experiences, such as combat. Through racing, skydiving or other high-risk pursuits, the vet may tempt death repeatedly.

In some cases, PTSD sufferers are overtly suicidal. In other cases, suicides are mistakenly classified as freak auto accidents instead of being recognized as bona fide suicides.

Often vets with PTSD will have flashbacks to their war experiences prompted by a chance sight, smell, or sound. They will momentarily re-live a part of their tour in Vietnam and react to the feelings and sensations generated by the flashback.

Vets with PTSD often have trouble holding a job. They may hold several jobs over a period of a few years or may willingly take and keep a job for which they are vastly overqualified, avoiding the field of their training altogether. These veterans may feel irrationally inadequate as professionals.

PTSD sufferers may withdraw from groups and activities that formerly interested them, seeming to prefer instead a life of isolation. Alcohol and drug-related problems are not uncommon and may mask other symptoms of PTSD.

The chief symptom of PTSD is "sealing-over" or "stuffing" - not coming to terms with what happened and what the personal consequences have been. PTSD leads to an over-controlling of the emotions for the sake of psychological survival. For Vietnam veterans, the tools for survival were learned in Vietnam and are still used in their everyday lives, though having outlived their usefulness.

A part of the difficulty for the men and women who served in Vietnam lay in the difference between what their society had promised them upon reaching adulthood and what they actually found as they came of age in the war zone. According to Denver Mills, team leader for the Veteran's Outreach Center in Santa Barbara, California, the Vietnam generation was a "chosen generation," used to having and expecting the best: the best education, the best living standards, the best health care. The opportunities seemed virtually unlimited.

Service in Vietnam produced rapid and profound disillusionment because of the conduct of the war and the management of personnel. Personal survival became the bottom line. Anything that might tend to make a soldier vulnerable had to be controlled.

According to Ron Rogers of the Wichita, Kansas, Veteran's Outreach Center, PTSD, under labels such as "battle fatigue" and "shell shock," has been around for a long time. What is new is its frequency and severity in Vietnam-era veterans. The average age of a serviceman in World War II was 27. The average age of a serviceman in Vietnam was 19. Around age 18-21, says Rogers, important psychological development occurs in a maturing phase leading into adulthood. At this time, ideas and values form concerning the nature of the world and what it takes to live in it. The stresses of a situation like Vietnam, imposed almost constantly for a year on young men and women, caused their evolving perceptions to be skewed along lines that may have been suitable for Vietnam, but could not work well in civilian life. Some vets had trouble making the transition from Vietnam to "normal" society again.

There was no time for the returning serviceman to internally process the images and meanings of Vietnam for himself or herself - no decompressing period. Soldiers were flown from gunfire and booby-traps back into living rooms in Hometown, U.S.A., within hours. They experienced culture shock in returning to civilian life.

Once again, survival for the veteran meant sealing over their experiences and their feelings. Many veterans learned to keep quiet about their service in Vietnam, or to lie about it. Some claim, "I went to Canada for the war."

The primary form of treatment for PTSD among veterans is the rap group. Veterans share their experiences about Vietnam and learn to feel again - expressing the emotions they once had to repress. Breakthrough is often so intense that it may involve uncontrolled sobbing, sometimes even for several days on end, followed by a surge of creative self-expression.

Often PTSD generates a religious crisis for the sufferer. One popular saying among vets is that John Wayne and Jesus Christ died in Vietnam. Veterans' beliefs about God were often profoundly altered by their war experiences, and during the healing process, the Transcendent [God and the quest for religious meaning] is usually confronted. The rap group itself functions like a religious community, offering the veterans a place and a rationale for confession, forgiveness, and cleansing of the past, and for understanding communication with people whose similar experiences help to create bonds of support and affection.

PTSD in Former Worldwidiers

If you have read this far and failed to see yourself in the description of Vietnam veteran PTSD sufferers, you may not be afflicted with the disorder. If you have seen yourself, you still may not be afflicted. PTSD is rapidly becoming the latest psychological label fad. In reality, any one of the symptoms of PTSD may be caused by a variety of other psychological difficulties.

Nevertheless, PTSD is not necessarily exclusive to veterans of wars. Other life experiences may lead to symptoms of PTSD. Victims of child abuse may develop the distorted view of the world and its requirements that is a key feature of PTSD. Members of religious cults like the Worldwide Church of God may also develop personality disorders that resemble PTSD.

D. was a teenager when he learned about the Worldwide Church of God by listening to "the World Tomorrow" broadcast. He became involved in the activities of his local church "as far as I was allowed. But I was never baptized, despite repeated requests. I asked too many questions." After four years, he became sufficiently disillusioned with the WCG to break his association with the organization. He says he is "not recovered, except I'm a whole lot less gullible and trusting. It is remarkable how coming out 13 years ago is still so emotionally vivid, as though it were last month. All I can say is I suffer a lot of severe depression. I still feel like the WCG experience only happened yesterday. I have had two broken marriages, one wrecked courtship, have this week lost my job (for the umpteenth time). Frankly, I can't wait till I'm off this planet - it holds no more illusions which have not been shattered."

A. was the mother of three young children when she and her husband joined the WCG in 1970. "It was a strain to live up to everything. By the third year in it I had a terrible breakdown at the Feast of Tabernacles. It had taken a long time building up and many years to recover. I developed a phobia of 'people' that I still have to a degree, even now, ten years after the breakdown. And I saw other women have identical breakdowns. I still hardly leave the house or go into crowded rooms, so my life is almost a ruin.... We were shattered when we came out. Everything we'd believed in, everything we had done was all for nothing. Words cannot describe the experience... 1970-1976. Not long if you say it quickly. But so much harm was done in that time to my children. Wasted years... most of all my oldest three children. Five years is a big chunk of a child's life. Those short years almost destroyed me. They did destroy my two oldest sons. The oldest is in prison - cannot cope with life outside. The second oldest must have been stronger; she coped quite well. The third one can't cope with life either. When we came out, it was too late for them to regain much of what they had missed as little children. But thankfully it wasn't worse. Other people saw their loved ones die."

Just as Vietnam veterans may become "action junkies," former members of the WCG often become "movement junkies" - obsessed with obscure religious movements or other kinds of groups, continuing their quest for "The Truth" and/or for the satisfaction of considering themselves "in the know" within another self-described "select" group. Such individuals view the mainstream social and religious institutions with continuing distrust, scorning the very real strength and benefit that might be found in a careful and rational acceptance of those institutions, however flawed. One former member writes:

"Psychologists themselves (all I ever knew), and ministers (ha!) - those guys? Who wants those devil's advice? They're the ones who need it."

Another writes, "We welcomed the 'comfort' of Jehovah's Witnesses. At the time we would never have withstood the 'transition' without them. We were like members until last year when we realized the danger of a repetition of the WCG. Fortunately, we never took that fated step of baptism. Now I thank God we realized just in time.... Now I can say, 'That's it. No more churches.' We pray and read the Bible every day. We accept Dr. Martin's literature still and are Christians. But we don't need churches."

Other former members of the WCG have established their own churches, literature, and tract ministries, etc. Many of these are virtually unknown and show every indication of remaining so. Others have achieved varying degrees of notoriety, mostly among former WCG members, but have a tendency to dissension and schism. Their participants part company and continue to pursue "The Truth" that has eluded them once again, or the sense of cosmic purpose which they originally felt during their time in the WCG.

Some former members, such as D., experience a series of failed relationships. Others suffer from depression and thoughts of suicide. One man I know was involuntarily committed to a mental hospital after his exit from WCG. It may be impossible to know how many successful suicides have been brought about by stress disorder directly related to the victims' time in the Worldwide church.

Former members of WCG may find it difficult to return to interests and projects that had been important to them before involvement in Worldwide. Old religious affiliations are often difficult to resume.

Several former members have experienced flashbacks to their WCG days. More than two years after my exiting WCG, I was listening to a representative from a small seminary describe his campus, the graduate program there, and the students. Although he didn't realize the effect he was having on me, I became more and more agitated as he described his seminary in words and phrases almost identical to those used to describe Ambassador College. After some minutes of this, I burst into wracking sobs, totally embarrassing myself and totally surprising the representative. Before this incident, I had thought myself quite "cured" of the effects of my time in the WCG and AC. In talking with other former members, I find that such experiences are not uncommon.

If the effects of an experience like Worldwide on adults can be severe, the effects on children may be much more profound. A., whose story appeared above, attributes two of her sons' legal difficulties to the years that the family spent in WCG. Children have not only one authority imposing itself upon them (as the WCG is the sole authority over adult members), but they also have the authority of their parents, whose attitudes toward and treatment of children may be greatly affected by doctrines and directives from the WCG. Thus, children may doubly be victims of the damaging aspects of involvement in the WCG.

Steady employment is a problem for some former members of the Worldwide Church of God, such as D., whose story appeared earlier. One former member, a professional man, lives as an itinerant, either unable or unwilling to hold a job. Other former members of the WCG have given up their careers for a life of isolation and anonymity.

Some former WCG members seem to sense a healthy need for contact with other former members. One WCG "rap group" I know of began meeting yearly in 1975. Early topics for discussion always revolved around organizational and doctrinal questions arising from the participants' common WCG background, and a lively correspondence moved between the participants throughout the year. As the meetings developed over the years, obvious interest and involvement in the WCG appeared to wane. The participants themselves claimed to have "gotten over" their WCG concerns. As the interest of some members of the group turned to other causes and movements, the cohesion of the entire group seemed to fade. There have been no group meetings for two years.

Several weeks ago, however, I had an opportunity to meet another group of former members of the Worldwide Church of God who have maintained a very close friendship for over ten years. "Oh, we usually don't even talk about the WCG," said one person soon after I had arrived. Perhaps it was just my being there that night, but the church was almost the sole topic of conversation, either explicitly or implicitly, for the next nine hours. As I think about it, that shouldn't have surprised me. Knowing that these people have maintained their friendship for many years since their involvement with Worldwide should have indicated to me that, on some level, the church is a very important tie binding them together. In some ways, I suspect that they function like a Vietnam veterans' rap group, offering each other the support and understanding that feels most authentic when a common past is shared among the members.

Despite the problems often reported after association with the WCG, some people do claim to come out of it with healthy, intact personalities, exhibiting no unusual adjustment difficulties, just as not all Vietnam veterans suffer from PTSD. Often though, the people unaffected seem to be those who were not deeply committed or who were in for only a short period of time. One man even says that he remains in Worldwide in order to bring more people to Jesus. He believes that many people in WCG need help, and that the only way to reach them is from within, not from outside the organization. He plans to remain in Worldwide as long as he is permitted. Interestingly, his decision to remain does not spring solely from his mission. He confesses that he would be a "spiritual misfit" in any other group.

My experience and my knowledge of others' experiences lead me to believe that many people who leave Worldwide would benefit from some form of "rap group" or other therapy. In fact, the formation of circles of friends with common WCG backgrounds seems to be a natural response to the WCG/AC experience. Witness the two groups described above or the work of the Reunion News in England. But some people may require more than a congenial atmosphere of understanding friends in order to come to terms with their WCG experiences. For many of these people, counseling with a psychologist who appreciates the special problems of involvement in a group such as Worldwide may be essential.

PTSD is a recognized malady among Vietnam veterans. Its status as a recognized disorder in victims of other kinds of trauma and stress is less accepted. Victims of the Holocaust, survivors of the Hiroshima and Nagasaki atomic bomb blasts, Vietnam veterans, and former cultists often share many of the same signs and symptoms of personality disorder. In the case of former Worldwidiers, perhaps only the victims themselves will be able to awaken the mental health community to the reality of their problems and their problems' relationship to their experiences in the Armstrong cult.

Investment Scam Bilks the Faithful

In late 1982 a Nevada-based commodities arbitrage trading firm called Elmas Trading Corp. was conceived. Operated by President James Attarian and VP Don Smith, both former Seventh-day Adventist engineers, Elmas Corp. attracted several former WCG members as sales consultants, one being ex-WCG pastor Richard Plache.

Plache - none can deny - is a super salesman, a captivating speaker. Standing about 6 ft. 6 in. tall, he carries an air of authority and respect the moment he enters a room. Mixing well in a crowd, he knows how to make you feel both welcome and special. Conducting sales lectures is his forte. Brimming with confidence, he began one of his Elmas Corp. sales presentations by telling the audience how Jesus Christ had led him, after numerous business failures, to a sales job that was making him - and could make them - rich as long as they just had faith in God. He excitedly explained how two men, both brilliant former engineers and God-fearing Christians, had a spectacular computer program that did currency and commodity arbitrage. ("Arbitrage" refers to a buying of stocks, commodities, etc. in one market and selling them at a profit in another market.) Waving a commission check for $100,000 that he had earned in the last few weeks, he urged his listeners (1) to put all their savings into the operation and earn a guaranteed 36% to 46% a year in interest and (2) to earn a fat 10 % commission by bringing other friends into the deal. (He claimed Elmas Trading Corp. actually was earning 120% a year on investors' money.)

Though incorporated in, of all places, Reno, Nevada, Elmas Trading Corp., his listeners were told, had a special hookup with a giant computer in a San Francisco brokerage house, which enabled Elmas to manage the investment portfolio for an unnamed offshore entity. When asked who the brokerage firm was that was willing to rent its computer and why that firm didn't engage in the same type of arbitrage as Elmas Corp., Plache replied that Elmas was keeping it a secret so people wouldn't bother the brokerage house and that the brokerage house was too big and inefficient to profit from the scheme itself. Perceptive listeners saw a giant red flag waved in front of their face when they heard the preceding lame excuses, but the faithful were told: "Don't take my word for it! You go and pray about it, and if God gives you a good feeling about this opportunity, contact me then." And sure enough, the faithful prayed, they came to believe, and they emptied their pocketbooks into Plache's hands. One source said Plache took in $13 million over the next two and one-half years. Some gave Elmas Corp. as much as a quarter of a million dollars - feeling in their hearts God was behind it. And the "miracle" that people were so eager to invest confirmed to Plache, according to one friend, that truly God must be behind his sales successes.

Plache impressed the uninitiated by sprinkling his talk with dozens of unfamiliar financial terms and drew graphs and charts to make his point. To some it all sounded so believable, and who wouldn't want to make a guaranteed annual return of 36% to 46%! He even told of how he hoped to use the wealth God was granting him to form Christian groups around the country and that he felt he had been called by God to personally minister to the deceived WCG ministry (a minister to minister to the ministry).

While many who heard his sales pitch were captivated, we know of at least five people who voiced serious reservations about the whole scheme to Plache. One person spent days researching arbitrage in the library, concluding he could not in good conscience become an Elmas salesman, and he presented his research to Plache, but Plache simply ignored it. Why? Plache felt God was behind him and his product, so research or expert opinions on the subject became irrelevant.

Unfortunately for Elmas Trading Corp. investors (many of them Seventh-day Adventists), their strong faith was not strong enough to make a bad idea turn out profitable, as Forbes magazine reported on p. 40 in its May 20, 1985 issue:

A cluster of related companies, including Nevada-based Elmas Trading Corp. and Republic Overseas Bank, Ltd., are presently under investigation for a phony arbitrage deal and violation of state banking laws.... How much is left? No one is sure. Bank accounts are frozen. Apparently most of the suckers didn't understand what they were investing in but felt comfortable being in the company of so many coreligionists. The old Judas goat syndrome.

The former head of Elmas? He has been a salesman in a tax shelter fraud based in Arizona. Information about the company? Forbes tried calling another of the principals at home and got his answering machine. The recorded message: "[We] are away from the phone right now, but our two guards are always here, and they are armed to the teeth, if you know what I mean."

The Wall Street Journal in a feature article titled "Religion and Loyal Investors Play Big Role in Alleged Trading Fraud" (9-20-85 issue, p. 25) reported that 4,700 people from 41 states invested more than $70 million in Elmas Trading Corp. and that the Securities and Exchange Commission and other government officials persuaded Federal Judge Edward Reed to put Elmas Corp. into receivership last May for allegedly "defrauding its investors" and "operating what amounted to an illegal pyramid scheme."

Specifically, the SEC, which filed a civil suit charging Elmas with selling unregistered securities and with three counts of fraud, contended that investors were paid dividends not from commodities trading profits but from money subsequently put up by other investors.... According to Elmas's own records, court documents assert, only $8 million of the more than $70 million the firm collected from investors was ever placed in commodities trading accounts. According to the receiver, much of the rest of it was pooled into accounts in Republic Overseas Bank Ltd., a bank Elmas set up in the Marshall Islands.

Some of that money, in turn, was lent to individuals and other companies linked to Elmas, and some of it disappeared, the receiver says in court documents. Consequently, the SEC charged, "the ability of Elmas... to pay such returns [36% or higher] was dependent on the influx of new investors' funds."

We know of several former WCG members (none associated with Ambassador Report, thankfully) who will end up losing a substantial amount of money (including Richard Plache, whom we hear has over $300,000 tied up in Elmas) and others who stand to lose most of their life savings. Elmas owner Attarian, who in earlier meetings had assured investors that God was the chairman of the board of Elmas Corp., had to admit to faithful investors in a Jan. 1985 meeting that there was only "enough liquidity to give back 50% of investors' money." But now Richard Shaffer, the Elmas receiver, is saying investors may get back only 25% of their money. This is bad news for Elmas Corp.'s salesmen/consultants. We have in our possession a letter from a Gary Ringen of the Elmas Recovery Association that shows the seriousness of the situation. Below are several excerpts:

In the opinion of several attorneys who specialize in securities law, you as a Consultant bear two main areas of potential liability: (1) civil, (2) criminal....

Your clients are entitled to sue you for all principal plus interest lost. According to Richard Shaffer, Receiver, the receivership estate has every intention of initiating legal action to recover all finders' fees and consultants' fees paid to you as a consultant, plus your principal deposits and related earnings!...

Knowingly or unknowingly, if you sold, recommended, referred, etc. the Elmas program, you may have already violated federal securities laws which are classified as felonies. The felonies are punishable by fines and/or imprisonment.... Even if jail time is waived, you would be classified as a convicted felon serving a probationary period, which would be a matter of public record. Such a result would bar you from holding any securities or other professional license, procuring bonding, and, perhaps more importantly, obtaining most types of future employment.

In spite of these serious developments, mentioned above, our attorneys advise us that the majority of consultants have a legally defensible position with a good chance of winning.... Even if you have already hired your own attorney and/or understand the serious and far-reaching legal implications presented here, you are strongly urged to attend this special legal seminar [referred to in the letter].

How could so many sincere Christians be suckered into such an obvious Ponzi scheme, especially the ex-WCG members who had just gotten out of a religious scam perpetrated by the WCG? Greed certainly played a part, because everybody would like to find an easy way to get rich.

Lack of having had formal financial training was a major handicap to most, because anyone having such a background would immediately become very suspicious upon hearing someone promise you a guaranteed 36% to 46% return on your money every year. In fact Forbes magazine's annual mutual fund survey (Sept. 16, 1985) showed that out of over 700 U.S. funds, only one returned more than 30% a year over the last 9 years (Fidelity's "Magellan" fund returned 33.3%). Indeed the average U.S. mutual stock fund had an annual average return over the last 9 years of just 15.2%. And Salomon Brothers, Inc., considering the performance of bonds, stocks, old masters, U.S. coins, Treasury

Bills, Chinese ceramics, housing, diamonds, oil, stamps, U.S. farmland, foreign exchange, gold, and silver, said that the number one investment (stocks) in the U.S. over the last 5-year period (ended 6/1/85) produced a compounded annual return of just 15.2%. Over 10 years, the number one investment was U.S. coins, averaging 20.4% annual return. People who regularly read financial publications are aware of such statistics and become extremely leery when they hear some group like Elmas Corp. guarantee you up to a 46% return. While occasionally a certain stock, coin, painting, etc. may appreciate at a rate of 50% or more for several years, Treasury bills are the closest thing to a guaranteed investment because the U.S. government stands behind them, and they paid an average of 12% interest over the last 5 years.

Another reason some ex-Worldwide Church members and other Christians fall for such scams is that they believe in miracles and tend to distrust many of society's institutions, particularly establishment bankers and financial advisers, and so, when a fellow Christian comes knocking on their door to sell investments, they seem to believe God is somehow backing his or her advice. Instead of logically asking: "What does this person know about financial investments, and if this deal is so great, how come the Wall Street wizards who spend their whole lives striving to earn the almighty dollar haven't thought of the idea?", they let down their guard.

The Wall Street Journal (9-20-85) explained that many Elmas investors still believe firmly in the company because, in the early going, they received dividends promptly. Like consultant Tim Johnston who invested $57,000, they believe that big banks and stockbrokers, as well as the government, forced Elmas out of business. "The banking system is a powerful organization, and I believe the banks hated us because we were paying more interest than they could pay." Though Johnston's opinions are pure nonsense, the faithful need a scapegoat - a "Great Satan" - to blame for their predicament. Otherwise, they might have to believe God failed them. The court-appointed Elmas receiver states that many Elmas investors hold him personally responsible for their potential losses, calling him the "deceiver," instead of the receiver. He has received two death threats. But for some reason, the investors never ask themselves: "If this was such a successful investment, how come 50% or more of the money has disappeared?" The receiver didn't cause the money to disappear. It was gone when he arrived!

Those who read business periodicals and newspapers are aware that there has been an epidemic of investment scams over the last several years. Newsweek (Dec. 24, 1984, p. 31) wrote that "Utah, the Land of the Mormons, has earned itself another name: the Stock-Fraud Capital of the Nation" and went on to state that roughly 1 out of every 100 Utahans had been bilked by quick-buck artists. Forbes (June 20, 1983, p. 33) covered the same subject and stated that "most of those bilked are Mormons, and the bilkers, too, profess to be upstanding members of the church and use church connections." (Money magazine also covered this general subject in the issues of June 1984, p. 219 and April 1985, p. 112.) The moral? If you have religious friends in sheep's clothing (woolen suits) suddenly show up at your home selling an investment that's too good to be true, be polite to them, but keep your wallet in your pocket until they leave. You'll be glad you did.

By the way, we hear Richard Plache just wrote an article for World Insight titled "Spontaneous Giving." And the Wall Street Journal article quoted above claimed Plache was looking for overseas investors to help start a "mission of mercy" investment fund to "creatively" make up the money investors lost with Elmas. But, the Journal adds: "So far, he hasn't found any investors."

Larry Johnson's New Address

A number of AR readers have written us asking for information on Larry Gilbert Johnson, the former WCG member who started the group known as the Congregation of Yah or the Laodicean Church of God. At one time Johnson had a mailing list of 10,000 readers, a monthly income of $5,000 and owned four homes. But in recent years few have heard from, or of, Johnson. Now, thanks to some excellent research provided us by Robert C. Williams of The Shofar, we have been able to locate the head of the Congregation of Yah.

Larry Gilbert Johnson is now number 463-07 at Arizona State Prison in Florence, Arizona where, since November 1982, he has been serving a twelve-year sentence for child molestation. Johnson was convicted of having a continuing sexual relationship with the 13-year-old daughter of one of his "wives." (Johnson, who believes in polygamy, claims he has had eleven wives and eleven children but cannot locate all of them.) Court records show that Johnson's physical relationship with the young girl started when she was eight years old.

A psychiatric report in the court record (Maricopa County, case number CR-127 373) reveals that Johnson understood child molestation to be a crime in Arizona, but that he showed no remorse for his acts, believing he was exempt from such laws as a "prophet of God" (Johnson has taught that he and Garner Ted Armstrong are "the Two Witnesses of Revelation"). The court-appointed psychiatrist reported that although Johnson's mental state was close to paranoid and grandiose, he was not legally insane. Because of an anti-lawyer bias, and perhaps thinking God would miraculously intervene, Johnson refused to participate in his own defense. According to court records, he was tried and sentenced in absentia. Later appeals failed.

Martin's A.S.K. Expands

Ernest L. Martin, former WCG minister and Ambassador College professor, has expanded his new Associates for Scriptural Knowledge (A.S.K.) organization by starting an Academy for Scriptural Knowledge. Martin recently announced that his Academy is producing a correspondence course called the Home Study Course of the Academy for Scriptural Knowledge, and he has asked for "pledges" for the support of the new course. According to Martin (letter of August 5), the course will replace "the haphazard way in which I have provided research work... over the last eleven years...."

Martin claims that after taking the course, "you will be able to instruct others in the essential subjects within the Bible.... It can put you into the position of being a 'professional' yourself - and in a very short time" (Introduction, p. 1). Apparently those taking the Home Study Course hope to become "Teachers of the Academy for Scriptural Knowledge (the identifying initials are T.A.S.K.) and all of us together can be a 'T.A.S.K. Force' to help the world know more about Jesus Christ...." According to Martin (p. 4), "The prime key to learning any subject is by repetition..." and repetition apparently will play an important role in the new correspondence course.

For this group of future teachers Martin has started a newsletter called The T.A.S.K Force (A Journal of Prophetic Events in Today's News) that each month will survey news events "which will reflect a fulfillment of biblical prophecy."

But even more interesting, we think, is the special ministry just begun by Martin's wife, Joan Marie. She now has her own little monthly newsletter. Its first edition had the heading "From the desk of Joan Marie" followed by the title: "Postscript" (P.S. We Love You). Her newsletter makes extensive use of the "Holy Names" and promises to publish excerpts from each month's "love letters" to A.S.K. In the premiere issue she writes, "Postscript will provide a means for rejoicing as we select Associates to receive 'love bouquets.' Recipients of these bouquets (symbols, of course) will be honored for extra special deeds of love as associates of A.S.K. or students of the Academy."

The mailing address for "Doc" Martin, Joan Marie, A.S.K., T.A.S.K., the Academy, the Home Study Course, and Postscript is P.O. Box 1863, Hemet, Calif. 92343. Incidentally, because some have asked, although Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard and "Jesus Christ Lightning Amen" (yes, that's really what he calls himself), the founder of the white-robed "Christ Family" cult, both live in the Hemet area, "Doc" Martin and Joan Marie, as far as we know, have nothing to do with either group.

Music From Oregon

Not every religious group split-off from the WCG has become notorious. One church organization that simply ministers quietly to its flock is The Church of God, the Eternal founded by Raymond Cole, one of the first men ordained by Herbert Armstrong and one of the first ministers to leave the WCG in the mid-seventies. Most of this organization's members are scattered throughout the U.S. (One member in Baltimore mentioned how they meet there at Shoney's Motel, the first sabbath of each month and in members' homes.) Their ministers include Bryce Clark, John Mitchell (former WCG ministers), George Leemon, and in Switzerland, Jean Aviolat. Besides personal ministering, the organization maintains a printed literature and cassette tape outreach program.

One unique facet of their ministry is, we feel, worth special notice. The leadership of this church appears to be sensitive to the role of music in biblical worship and has instituted the commissioning of original liturgical music. George King, a church staff member, is a college-trained musician and composer who has been working on a new church hymnal and has also composed a number of lengthy pieces for the church's annual festivals. He eventually hopes to produce works for all the church holy days. So far, using biblical texts as a starting point, he has composed cantatas for Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles and an oratorio titled "The Song of Moses." These works have been composed in a Baroque style similar to that of J. S. Bach or George Handel and have been tastefully orchestrated. Those interested may obtain cassette tape recordings of these choral works by writing to: Church of God, the Eternal, P.O. Box 775, Eugene, OR 97401. Considering how small this church organization is, we think this music program is truly an ambitiously creative undertaking. What a pity that the WCG with its vast resources and the millions it spends on "culture" has not shown one iota of the vision of this small Oregon church.

Literature of Interest

In our 1977 issue (p. 68), we reported on "Herbert Armstrong's Religious Roots," pointing out that many of Herbert's supposedly original teachings match those published by G. G. Rupert (1847-1922) of Britton, Oklahoma. Mr. Rupert wrote many books and articles advocating: tithing, sabbath observance, church eras, avoiding military service, only one true church, a type of British Israelism, and much more that is strikingly similar to HWA's teachings. We recently discovered that former Plain Truth staff member George Johnson now of Johnson Graphics has acquired several of Mr. Rupert's books and has republished that author's Time, Tradition and Truth Concerning the End of the World (200 pages). Copies are available for $6 each by writing to Johnson Graphics, Rt. 1, Box 230, Decatur, MI 49045.

William T. Voyce's June 3, 1985 letter to the Worldwide Church of God is a veritable research paper with a "point-by-point refutation of their interpretation of American Sabbath history." Mr. Voyce is a member of the Church of God, 7th Day and wrote the 7-page letter to the WCG after reading their article "The Church They Couldn't Destroy." Mr. Voyce has not received a WCG reply to his letter, the subject of which he feels is so important that "if the truth about this matter were more widely known, a good share of the Worldwide Church's membership would never have joined in the first place." Copies of this interesting letter are available for $1 by writing: William T. Voyce, 140 South Hickory, Des Moines, Iowa 50317.

Hal Lindsey's Prophetic Jigsaw Puzzle: Five Predictions That Failed! by Dr. Samuele Bacchiocchi. Dr. Bacchiocchi writes that the purpose of his 90-page booklet is not only to expose "the senselessness of Lindsey's sensational scenario, but also to explain the true nature and function of end-time prophecies." His booklet also does an excellent job in refuting the WCG's prophecies about the Beast, the Common Market, Israel, and the end time. Those interested in this new book should send their requests along with $2.95 to Biblical Perspectives, 230 Lisa Lane, Berrien Springs, MI 49103. Dr. Bacchiocchi has also written important books on the sabbath and the time of the crucifixion. Those who may be interested in these subjects should write to the above address for details.

Former WCG member Steven Collins has written several articles refuting Worldwide's prophecy doctrines including one called "A Biblical Examination of the 'Captivity Dogma.'" Mr. Collins believes that contrary to Armstrong doctrine, God is preparing Russia, not Germany, to attack America and her allies. For more information on his material write: 8500-101st St. Circle, Bloomington, MN 55438.

World Insight has several articles and tapes written by former Worldwidiers for former and current Worldwidiers. We noticed an article in the Autumn 1984 issue of their magazine (p. 6) which was especially interesting. Titled "Ministering to the Walking Wounded," this article by Brian Knowles, without mentioning Worldwide by name, draws attention to the parallel between the WCG's ministry and the wicked shepherds of Ezek. 34:2-4, 6. For a list of this organization's tapes and articles write World Insight, P.O. Box 35, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Concepts of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (104 pages) by Matthew Alfs is a work detailing the Trinitarian/non-Trinitarian views held by various Christian denominations. The book has sections on several of what Alfs calls the Second-Advent- spawned groups including the WCG, Church of God (7th Day), SDAs, JWs, and Christadelphians. The hardback edition is $12.95 plus $1.50 shipping and the paperback is $7.95 plus $1.00 shipping. Write to: Old Theology Book House, P. O. Box 12232, Minneapolis, MN 55412.

The Biblical Church of God (Canada) has several studies by Keith Hunt that they are offering free to AR readers. They suggest that their booklets Divorce & Remarriage - What Does God's Word Say? and Law and Grace - A Study in the Book of Galatians might be of particular interest. Their address is: Box 964, Oshawa, Ontario, Canada L1H 7N1.

I would strongly urge those who are involved in Armstrongism to read the book Blood and Honor by Reinhold Kerstan. The author recounts the story of how as a young boy he was led into the Hitler Youth Movement. He was swayed from his faith in Christ to faith in Hitler. This book may be obtained from The Billy Graham Evangelistic Assoc., Minneapolis, MN 55403.

I recently read a book entitled Scripture Twisting - 20 Ways the Cults Misread the Bible by James W. Sire. It is published by the Inter-Varsity Press, Downers Grove, IL 60575 and I recommend it to your audience....

I am currently reading the book Thirty Years A Watchtower Slave by William Schnell, a true story of this man's experiences in the Jehovah's Witnesses. It is like reading a history of the WCG, yet for a much larger organization. The similarity of this and the WCG is so remarkable, that I suggest it as "must reading" for your readers. Most religious bookstores should have it, or it may even be in the public library. Brainwashing, elimination of independent thinking, zombie-like church members, money making in the name of religion, it has it all...

One more book I have come across... is The Cult Explosion by Dave Hunt, published by Harvest House Publishers, Eugene, OR 97402. I don't recommend it to your readership, however, as I feel it may be too upsetting to an already upset audience. It mentions the WCG as well as other cults throughout the book and centers on the similarity in all cults and the spirit (demon) influence in all of them. I don't agree with all his theories, but the book gives an astounding insight into the world of hurtful religion. It seems the Devil agrees with the idea that if you can't beat them, join them. It seems more wars have been fought over or because of religion and its "influence" than for, or over, any other single cause. This book exposes the "influence."

I have studied the literature put out by Herbert Armstrong and I recognize it as the con game that it is. I find it very mysterious how my wife, whom I regard as intelligent could believe such teachings as Herbert puts out. Now I have discovered a book which I believe solves the mystery. It is an important book called The Mind Possessed, A Physiology of Possession, Mysticism, and Faith Healing by William Sargant, published by J. B. Lippincott Co. (2350 Virginia Ave., Hagerstown, MD 21740). The author is an eminent British psychiatrist. I think you would be doing an invaluable service to pass this title on to your readers.

Mr. Joel Bjorling (RR 2, Gilson, IL 61436) has written us that he is compiling a bibliography and historical study of Sabbatarian and Sabbatarian-related groups, churches, and organizations in America. The project is being prepared under the auspices of the Institute for the Study of American Religion of Chicago and will be published by Garland Publishing of New York. Officers of Sabbatarian organizations may wish to contact Mr. Bjorling and provide information about their groups for inclusion in the study.

Readers with an interest in Bible prophecy may find the February 1985 issue of Discovery magazine of interest. It contained an article (p. 34) by Martin Gardner entitled "666 and All That." The article shows how different mathematical methods have been used to relate different names to the number 666. Gardner points out (p. 35) how one such system "yields 666 when applied to the first name of Garner Ted Armstrong, Herbert's excommunicated son who runs the rival Church of God, International, headquartered in Tyler, Texas."

Letters

Although I dropped out of the WCG two years ago, I'm still listed on the church computers as an active member. I still have contact with the members and receive church literature. I can do this because I'm good at biting my lip. After receiving the last Worldwide News, however, I wonder if it's even worth trying to maintain those ties.

First, I want to thank Ambassador Report for the service you perform. I call it a service because like many Worldwidiers who have had the courage to leave, I need reassurance and support from people of similar circumstance, and you people provide that link.

Anyway, in the June 24 edition of the Worldwide News, HWA wrote a special insert explaining the problems the church went through during the decade of the seventies. I'm sure you've read it, and I would be interested in your reaction to it. HWA never ceases to amaze me. He never takes responsibility for his own folly. He blames everything on the "liberal element" in the church. "Liberal" is a dirty word in the church. Remember Pavlov's dogs? You mention "liberal" in the church, and people start frothing at the mouth. HWA has an obvious anti-intellectual bias that he breeds very effectively into the membership. As a result they waive their right to think.

As a defense mechanism, I guess, I've tried to muse over the lies and misinformation HWA puts out, but this makes me sad, and it makes me very angry.

While I am at it, I'll mention another thing the church does that upsets me. Maybe you've picked up on this because it's done systematically and for a reason, Whenever there is a natural disaster or tragedy somewhere in the world, be it brush fire, tornado, hurricane, even a plane crash, the church will invariably report about those members living near the disaster who escaped harm or injury - giving no compassion or sympathy to those "worldly" people who have suffered. The obvious message here is, of course, that God protects his people. And this is the basic theme of The Plain Truth magazine.

But I wonder if statistics really bear this out. Ever read the church obituaries? The members have their share of untimely death. Which prompted, I suppose, the recent Worldwide News article encouraging members to pray more for God's protection. The article seems to imply that if you get hurt in an accident, regardless of who is at fault, you are slack in your prayers. You are less righteous than, say, the pastor-rank minister who wrote the piece and mentioned the mishap he miraculously avoided.

-California

In past ARs you have stated that a WCG member only "pays and prays." You may or may not have noticed in the Ambassador College Bible Correspondence Course that lesson 19 proves you are correct. In fact, they go one step further as to the functions of the individual member. First, keep your mouth shut; second pay; third, pray. According to the course (lesson 19, page 12) a member's duty does not include "personally proclaiming Christ's message to his community or to the world." What it does include is the giving of "tithes and generous freewill offerings" and the "fervent and prevailing, continual PRAYERS of all members." I find it rather amazing that their own literature would verify your evaluation of a WCG member's only duties!

-AR Reader

I am a former AC student (1956-59). It was only when I began to focus my attention on Jesus that I began to see that there was something dreadfully wrong with the movement. Jesus has never been the focal point of Herbert's teaching. In fact songs, etc. that showed deep feeling for Christ were considered stupid sentimentality.

-Kansas

For over two years, I have been calling friends in the WCG and even (at peril to myself considering that I could be held "in a bad attitude) called two ministers I respect [about problems in the WCG]. I felt I had to be going crazy. The church I attended had seemed to lose all semblance of balance or love. Fear held sway and it held the congregation fast. No one evidently dared talk or put into words their distress. There are those who love to call the ministry to inform on the so-called "goats" (as opposed to sheep) among the congregation.

First of all, the taped message by Dave Albert sent to all congregations was unbelievable. Among other things, the unbelievable assertion was made that women's minds were incapable of researching biblically and that he would not think it remiss for a wife to address her husband as "my lord." Only a sense of fascination for what would follow next prevented me from leaving during that tape. No wonder the little dictator-husbands have been literally unrestrained. And as for the impressionable young men, especially, sitting at Pasadena and drinking in this pap - God help their future wives and children.

Then, I became chillingly aware that in sermons locally and by tape from Pasadena, whole quotes and page numbers were being given from The Incredible Human Potential. Is this our Book of Mormon? Whatever happened to "not adding to or taking from the word of God"? To keep my sanity during sermons I played the "margin game." Jesus Christ and HWA each received tick marks when quoted. Guess who got the most quotes? You undoubtedly know.

A recent sabbath turned into a condemnation of us all, but particularly women. The women, I suppose, have been the source of all temptation and if we could just get them plain enough and respectful enough the men would be fine. Purdah (a la the Ayatollah) may be next. High heels, swimsuits, hair dye, vanity - it's all on us. Next to be hit was society, i. e., education, the media, etc. Never mind that God commended the Bereans and used one of the most educated men without parallel to be the apostle to the Gentiles.

Then, power asserted and sword unsheathed, we proceeded to the Mishnah - the fine do's and don'ts of godly conduct. Some of these (emphasized every Sabbath) include: washing one's car before the Sabbath, not removing one's jacket unless the minister tells you to (that is gives his permission), and so on and so forth ad nauseum. In self-defense I took to deliberately leaving the car dirty and going home and applying the brightest nail polish I could. Did I mention the minister who has told his congregation they must ask permission before leaving town for a weekend? Or another one who told his people they need permission to get together in a function with more than two couples present? "Give me liberty or give me death!"

-Texas

Last month, I decided to quit attending the WCG after almost 15 years' membership. I had been on my way out for the past three years or so as a result of spiritual unfulfillment. Through Bible study and with the help of correspondence with some tremendous teaching pastors' programs on the local gospel station, and the prayer for deliverance from cultism on the part of a dynamic woman I met about 1½ years ago (she was delivered from 15 years with the Jehovah's Witnesses and now has a ministry of exposing cults), and also by visiting around to other churches (all without the knowledge of my local WCG ministers), I edged my way out and last month, decided to give it up.

The period of withdrawal was a little traumatic, but not nearly so horrible as that experienced by those naive, poor souls who have attempted to discuss their "religion frustrations" with the ministry. Had I done that, I would have been suspended for revealing that I do not accept that HWA is God's only living Apostle. I would have been told to take a holiday and study all the booklets again, and get myself straightened out in order to be allowed back to church with ministerial blessing.

The thing that helped me most was reading The Godmakers by Ed Decker. He came out of Mormonism. His account of Joseph Smith's personality so resembled facets of HWA's that I thought: "My goodness! There's so much similarity. Here I am laughing at these Mormons for blindly obeying such a strange character. Meanwhile, we in the WCG are doing quite the same thing!" I can't recall the name of the founder of the JWs, but the little I have heard about him makes me inclined to conclude that he was also of the same ilk. Maybe they're all the same.

I really feel sorrow and compassion for Mr. Armstrong, Maybe I shouldn't, but I do. Whether he has willfully deceived his following or not, it is a sad fact that he surely must have deceived himself. All the hue and cry about deception, and look who's the most deceived. Let God judge him. It remains that all of us who fell for it are not without responsibility. For whatever reason, scriptural ignorance, poor judgment, naivety, self-deception, God may very well have used this route to illuminate us. That's not to say I am condoning anything. But some people will never come out of there because they are so happy putting themselves under bondage - it relieves them of responsibility, or so they think. Well, no, they don't think. They fear to. They just "trust."

In coming out, I decided that with this manner of ministry, the only way was to not let my right hand know what my left hand was doing. I didn't want to be forced out, I wanted to go out on my own, when and if I was ready, and when I was sure in my own mind that I had proved truth.

I had not attended those boring WCG Bible studies for about three years (only went through a sense of obligation-guilt, anyway) - time was better spent studying with the radio pastors. Now, however, I am taking four Bible courses at the local Glad Tidings Church, which has a thriving atmosphere of joyful Christians. What a delight to go through the word with excited people and dig out all those "neat things." One of the courses is "Comparative Religions" - how to spot cults and witness to people in them. Of all things, the first assignment is to write an essay on "Armstrongism," ie., HWA and GTA.

-Canada

I became a member of the Radio Church of God in the early '50s and was baptized by Herman Hoeh. I tithed and did all those things for many years, then left when one of their ministers and I disagreed on makeup. I had heard Mr. Armstrong say many times that nothing is wrong in itself but that moderation should be practiced in all things, I agreed, and still do, with that statement. When I told the minister this, he informed me that the church had been forced to take a stand on makeup and the ladies of the church are no longer permitted to wear even a little bit. He informed me that Mr. Armstrong had excommunicated his own daughter, Beverly [Armstrong- Gott] because of the makeup issue. This really irked me because while I didn't know Beverly too well, I liked and admired her, especially her beautiful voice.

I'm afraid our conversation became more heated than either of us had intended. I know I pointed to his very modern and eye-catching attire and accused him of trying to look his best in a modern world by way of conforming to the current styles, hair cut, etc. I was never officially excommunicated, but after that the only thing I received from them through the mail was The Plain Truth. Needless to say, I stopped tithing and disassociated myself from the church.

-California

Because of disagreement about makeup, I was put in the nonmember category... even though I had come into the church during the no makeup period. When the minister said that we were to be slaves to Jesus Christ, I had to agree with him. But could it be that he perhaps put someone else ahead of or in place of Jesus Christ?

The unhappy feelings that I had been experiencing for years in the WCG were enabled to jell with my audacity to question makeup. Even without being one of those "in the know," it has been easy to see the double standards that exist. But the fear of not being in God's church was a strong habit ingrained in me since 1965.

Being a single (D&R case) working mother at the time ('73-'74) I asked for third tithe help. First, the minister asked if I had paid third tithe. Then when I said "Yes, twice during my third tithe year," he said, "Pray more, Mrs.-----." I burst into tears and cried most of the night. In the morning, I couldn't work because my eyes were almost glued shut. This may sound foolish to most people, but I naively thought that God had rejected me through the minister. That man had already seemed not to like me and had talked about going to bat for another in my position when she committed adultery and was on third tithe. He seemed to get pleasure in putting me down....

I have discovered that there is life after the WCG. It does take some time to become totally deprogrammed. It's been about a year. The truth doesn't change and become vain and puffed up - people do. Love of the truth is what we all must hold fast to now so that deception doesn't hold us in its iron-clad grasp.

-Minnesota

My daughter and two lovely children have been left by her husband (after he joined the WCG). He was a loving husband and father prior to joining, but he is now a rigid and fanatical stranger to all of us. We are heartsick as are his relatives.

-California

Please send all future correspondence to my friend's address -----. My wife, still being in the clutches of Herbert, is very antagonistic and not only makes (or tries to make) my life miserable, but has destroyed some of my mail. Being a disabled veteran, I am unable to support you financially at this time, but do appreciate having false apostles and false prophets exposed, as they have brought misery to my life! I know that one day my wife will no longer worship this puny man. That is so comforting.

-AR Reader

As a recent AC graduate, I have given much thought as to how today's AC students and grads can be helped. First of all the sad truth is that most of today's AC students are young, naive, impressionable 18-year-olds who come to college already firmly entrenched in "the church" - due to programming of church and parents. The church is all they know. The college reinforces this from day one. "This world has no hope outside of God's church," they say.

How well I remember Mr. Ames' forums on "How to Survive World War III," inferring that the only way to escape the world's problems and the coming tribulation is through "The Church." (Not to mention Dave Albert preaching "Never, never, never leave The Church.")

Now, in today's complex world with its many problems, fragile economy, etc., coming out of a well ordered "family" - one with all the answers, promises of protection, and where using one's head is not a requisite - is not an attractive option for most.

Somehow, an AC student or grad must be compelled to take a questioning look. My first step was learning how to think on my own. I owe a lot to Dr. Stavrinides and Dr.

Dorothy.... When I began to use my head a little I began scouring scholarly books on Daniel and Revelation. The scholars who wrote these books had intensively researched Daniel and Revelation and compared evidence from many different fields of biblical research. What I began to see finally is that people "in the know" rarely agree with anything HWA has to say about these "prophetic" parts of the Bible. To my dismay, I woke up and realized at last that along with the old adage "there ain't no free lunch," "there ain't no place of safety."

Once I finally debunked prophecy and the commonly accepted myth that as long as I stay in the church God will work out the world's problems and take care of me, the rest began to fall like dominoes. (Although for months after these realizations, I would wake up with nightmares of being "left behind," nuclear war, and/or "Germans.") I think, in other words, that to open up a mind the necessary first step is to remove the security blanket belief of prophecy and the idea of "being protected" somehow, through it all....

It does help to have someone to talk to. I saw a documentary called "Moonchild" and an interview with a girl who left the Moonies. I remember she said she had tried leaving twice and kept coming back. Finally, she requested the services of a professional "deprogrammer" to help her. I feel my situation was similar in that after reading Tangled Web and others, I sought personal verification before I could really believe what I was reading.

-California

My husband and I left the WCG nine years ago after an agonizing period of doubt and disappointment. Finally, we could no longer compromise with our spiritual hunger and had to admit that we were not being sustained by the "neutral sermons" and off-color humor which at that time was the junk-food (and the only food) emanating from the pulpit.

It felt good to be honest with ourselves again, but it was, truthfully, a while before we learned to think for ourselves and trust our own judgment.

Needless to say, when we left we were showered with dire predictions, none of which came to pass. We have been blessed with "worldly" goods which we once were taught could only be expected to be enjoyed by those who held an "office" in the church. We hold a joint position which pays us a good salary, allows the wife (me) to fulfil a potential always before throttled and undeveloped, and which has the added blessing of letting us be of service to a number of fellow human beings. It's all been very rewarding.

We still have many friends in the WCG and hope the day will come when their eyes can be opened too.

-Missouri

After being away from the WCG for a little over a year now, I am still a total mess. Physically, mentally, you name it. I'm wondering if there are any organizations that help former members of cults regain their former strength and vitality? I truly feel I need help and don't know where to get it.

-Minnesota

Editor: Here in the Southern California region we know of a number of psychologists qualified in helping former cult members with readjustment problems. However, we are really not in a position to recommend psychologists or therapists to our readers around the country. We simply have no way of knowing who can help. Locating the kind of assistance you need will probably require a bit of effort on your part. Perhaps one organization that may be able to offer a suggestion is Focus, a support group for former cult members that is affiliated with the Cult Awareness Network of the Citizens Freedom Foundation (the latter's national mailing address is: Box 86, Hannacroix, NY 12087).

I was thrown out of the WCG. They let me back after three meetings with the local pastor. I was out for 14 weeks. I made up my mind I would quit after I got back if they ever let me back. After reading all your reports and believing them, I still can't get myself to quit. Maybe if I read a few more I will be able to, but I doubt it. I honestly don't know where else to go. It seems it doesn't matter how bad the problems are with the leadership, I still believe their proofs for their theology. Don't let me down and quit writing though. Your help is what I need to see both sides.

-Pennsylvania

Editor: You would benefit from writing a letter to The Association for Christian Development, P.O. Box 4455, Rolling Bay, WA 98061. Ken Wesby's recent tape on cults is highly recommended. We think ACD has much to offer current WCG members.

Thank you for the AR. As mental problems increase in the WCG, your work is becoming more valuable all the time. I have been out of it a long time now and sometimes I tell myself I don't really care, what is happening over there. Then I meet someone I know who is still in and see the depressed state they are in. A friend of mine who is still in recently confided in me that he had contemplated suicide.

-AR Reader

I have to take this opportunity to write and explain how we are using the Ambassador Report entitled "What's Behind the Plain Truth Magazine? and Who Is Herbert W. Armstrong?"

I always make sure I have several copies in the car, in my books, etc. If I see someone reading The Plain Truth I always walk up to them and ask if they know who and what is behind that magazine. Most of the time they have no idea. They almost always thank me for my time and effort, but before I go, I hand them a reprint of your article.

I also use that reprint when talking with store managers, owners, etc. They also thank me for shedding more light on this magazine. As of this date, I have never been refused. They always take the magazine out of the windows and out of their stores.

Most establishments are not aware that it is a church (cult) behind the magazine. Some even think it belongs to the Catholic Church.

Keep up the good work and keep the information flowing. Many people rely on you to get the inside story.

-AR Reader

While visiting another ex-Armstrongite this summer, I was given some old ARs to read. It was like coming home. 1960 to 1975 was a big chunk of my life. It certainly is something one never forgets. It has taken 10 years to remove the bitterness. Keep up the good work and please put me on your mailing list.

-Ohio

I was once a member of the WCG. Of all the news you print about them, they must be worse than most churches. Just keep doing what you are doing, maybe some of my friends that are still with the cult will someday realize that your newsletter is the real good news.

-Kansas

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR34 January, 1986

Herbert Armstrong's Sinking Ship

Herbert Armstrong's Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and Ambassador College are in trouble - BIG trouble. The last four months have been one of the most traumatic periods in the WCG's fifty-two year history. Here are the latest developments.

- Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the WCG's founder and its self-appointed Apostle, is acknowledged to be in rapidly failing health. The 93-year-old preacher has not been seen in public since late September. And while there is every indication that HWA is lucid and coherent, it appears from his writings that he is forced to run his organization from his sickbed. The WCG's 1985 fall festival was the first such festival since the church's founding at which HWA was unable to personally address his flock. In his Nov. 25 letter to his "brethren and coworkers" HWA admitted: "I have been confined to my home, with a doctor, who seldom makes house calls, coming to see me every day - sometimes twice a day."
- Church officials claim the WCG's income is down significantly (Worldwide News, Sept. 17). While such claims have often been made over the years to stimulate contributors to greater generosity, other WCG announcements indicate that this time the problem may be real.

Just how desperate the WCG is for money is perhaps best revealed by a recent directive from church headquarters. WCG members already pay first tithe; second tithe, third tithe every three years, feast day offerings (seven as opposed to the three of the Old Testament), special offerings, etc. They also donate generously of their time. But in today's WCG that is obviously not enough! Quite a number of current WCG members have written us of how they have been perturbed by a recent headquarters directive ordering local WCG congregations to turn over what little funds they have in their activity accounts. Those are the funds each congregation saves for church socials, outings, and other fellowship activities. HWA wrote in his Nov. 25 letter, "we must prepare to tighten our belts and reduce our living standards!" He really meant it.

- The church's Plain Truth magazine, long suspected of inflated circulation figures anyway, is soon to be trimmed in both circulation and issue size (by one full signature, or 12-16 pages, according to HWA's Nov. 25 letter). And some recent editions of the Plain Truth have been printed on paper of noticeably inferior quality with more black and white and less color.
- All across the U.S. local ministers have been admitting that the Plain Truth's newsstand program is being cut back severely. WCG finances are one factor. But the big reason? Complaints from the public! While we cannot verify just how big the cutbacks have been nationwide, we suspect that the Buffalo, New York area is typical. There, according to one WCG minister, the newsstand program has been cut back a full 50% due to public pressure. Yet, that minister had the nerve to tell his listeners this has been their "best year ever."
- In his Nov. 25 letter HWA wrote: "We are pruning our less effective stations on television..." What he didn't tell his readers, however, is that a large and growing number of stations no longer want his "World Tomorrow" program. They frankly state that as a broadcaster HWA is way over the hill. Carrying the HWA program can hurt a station's ratings.

While keeping the members in the dark, HWA has been auditioning top WCG ministers in an attempt (at least, ostensibly) to find a new voice for the "World Tomorrow." But so far, HWA claims, there has been no one up to the task. We've heard that Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA), HWA's ostracized broadcaster son, told one WCG official he'd be happy to audition. So far, however, HWA does not appear interested in his son's offer.

- In his December 9 letter to church members, HWA announced that Ambassador College's Big Sandy campus will close permanently at the end of the current school year. Excuses given for the move included the church's financial problems, the state of Texas' requirement that colleges pursue accreditation, and the "needs of the ministry" - HWA's absurd claim that the WCG is growing so rapidly that all available college personnel are needed in "the field." However, in an address to Pasadena church members Dr. Donald Ward, an administrator at the Big Sandy campus, bluntly told his audience that the WCG would not be able to find employment for most of those being terminated and that many dedicated College employees would have to endure a prolonged period of unemployment.

The announcement that Ambassador's Big Sandy campus will soon close its doors has shocked many members who have long believed HWA's claim that the Ambassador campuses represented an important arm of "God's Work." Many, too, cannot understand why Ambassador is being cut at a time when many Christian colleges in the U.S. (for instance, Jerry Falwell's Liberty Baptist College in Virginia) are experiencing phenomenal growth.

Besides the closing of Big Sandy, many in Pasadena believe that Ambassador's oldest and last remaining campus will be closed, too, if HWA lives another year. The lead article in the Dec. 30 Worldwide News was entitled "Education: What does God expect?" In it, HWA, through aide Aaron Dean, instructs the youth of the church on how to go about getting an education outside of Ambassador. (Key points: don't live on campus, and avoid subjects such as psychology, sociology, theology and law - in other words, avoid those subjects that deal with the heart and core of what the Bible is all about because you might discover points of view more intelligent and more sane than that taught by "the Great Apostle.") Some see this article as the handwriting on the wall for Ambassador College.

- Sources in Texas say that the WCG's luxurious executive jet has been quietly put up for sale. Apparently HWA feels he will never again have need of it. There is also well-founded speculation that HWA has no intention that anyone else (including his son Garner Ted) ever have the use of that jet.
- The Dec. 20 issue of the Pastor General's Report (p. 5) has announced that Herbert Armstrong has ordered the reprinting of his Autobiography Volume I and the printing of a new Volume II. While considered by many WCG members as the equivalent of Holy Writ, HWA's Autobiography has been called "about two-thirds fiction" by Garner Ted Armstrong, HWA's son.

An Open Letter to Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong

Editor: Many readers will recall David Robinson's 1979 open letter to HWA reproving him for the great sorrows he has inflicted on his church and very own family. That powerful letter appeared in the appendix of Robinson's 1980 book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web. But Robinson's letter has not been the only one sent to HWA in condemnation of his lifestyle and mismanagement of the WCG. Over the last ten years we have read and heard of many letters written to HWA by former close associates who have implored him to finally begin practicing the way of life he himself has preached for decades.

This past fall we were sent a copy of another such letter - apparently sent anonymously to HWA. Considering how HWA has always turned his back on such counsel we think it highly unlikely such efforts will bear fruit. Nevertheless, the letter was obviously written after much prayerful reflection and we believe it may prove of interest to our readers.

Dear Mr. Armstrong:

For years now you have been granted power, wealth, and prestige, and in your realm, none could stand against your might. Your life, though, has reached a major crossroad, and soon you will be called on to give account to your Maker concerning how you have used your talents to further His priorities.

This letter will evaluate your lengthy reign over the organizations you call God's Church and God's College and reveal what you must do to ensure their success once you leave the scene.

Since your youth you have been given a rare and priceless gift - the power of persuasion. Though President Ronald Reagan is called the great communicator by the media, truly you have been the great communicator on the religious scene for over one half of a century, with few rivals. Your skill and success in marketing and selling your product (the message of the Worldwide Church of God) is one of the big success stories in modern advertising. None can deny the many triumphs you have had in the broadcasting and publishing areas. Due to your almost single-handed efforts your church-college has prospered where most other organizations of a similar nature have gone belly-up.

While your successes have been spectacular, you have had a dark side to your life that few have been aware of. Your reign over the church has paralleled the reigns of the kings of Judah and Israel who did evil in the sight of the Lord. As I said earlier, your life is at a crossroad. Either you can continue along the path you have been walking for the past 50 years and die in shame and dishonor, or you can follow the example of King Manasseh of Judah and repent and begin trying to right the wrongs you have perpetrated over your lifetime.

Perhaps you'll recall the story of Manasseh, which was recorded for all to read, just as your life will be. King Manasseh reigned in Jerusalem for 55 years and did evil in the sight of the Lord, practicing idolatry. But he was taken into captivity by the Assyrians for his sins. Like all the kings of Judah and Israel, he faced a crossroad in his life, but unlike most of the kings, he actually "entreated the favor of the Lord his God and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers" (II Chronicles 33:12). The Lord heard his supplication and brought him again to Jerusalem, and this time Manasseh turned away from idolatry and began to serve the Lord. Will you follow King Manasseh's example?

You had all but died in 1977 with heart failure, but miraculously your life was allowed to continue, no doubt not only to let you reap what you have sown in your life, but also to make you aware of the hypocrisies and sins you have practiced during your ministry so you could repent. And sure enough your immorality, double-dealing, fornications, carousing, drunkenness, jealousy, selfishness, and anger (see Galatians 5:19-21) became headline news in the world's news media. What you practiced in the dark was published for all to see. As Luke wrote: "Nothing is hid that shall not be made manifest, nor anything secret that shall not be known and come to light" (Luke 8:17).

Surprisingly you accurately divulged your true character, proclivities, and value system in your Autobiography. In a nutshell, you described yourself as an aggressive, manipulative, stubborn, power-hungry individual who would stop at nothing to satisfy your desires. You described how you yearned to hob-nob with the wealthy, powerful, and influential. You bragged how you pushed out all other Christians who were competing with you for leadership of the Church of God people with whom you were associated. You gloated over how you put yourself and your work first, even when it meant your family nearly starved or were deprived of the necessities of life. Mr. Armstrong, these are NOT things to be proud of!

According to a number of sources, including your own daughter and son, you abused your daughter during the 1930s and 1940s when you were first building your "true" church. God was emphatically not speaking through you then, and as would be expected, all of your sweeping prophecies came to naught. Your mistreatment of your children has been like a curse on you and on them and on their children, and rather than honoring you as an apostle, you are despised for what you have done to them. Even now, your only surviving son, Garner Ted, would like to at least be on good speaking terms with his human father, but you have hardened your heart against him and refuse to even talk decently to him or his family. Yet, Mr. Armstrong, it was you who has preached for 50 years that you were a man of God whose mission was to turn the hearts of the children to their fathers.

How can a man claim to be an apostle of God - even a Christian - and not be on speaking terms with members of his own family? This is something you need to straighten out before your death. You need to publicly apologize for all the hurt you've brought to your own family and lies you've spread about them, and apologize from your heart to each of them personally. I pray that your heart will soften enough that you can see your great need to humble yourself before God and man. You need to make amends with many of the church officials whom you treacherously and uncompassionately kicked out of your organization after these people had given you the best years of their lives. You brag about being an ambassador for world peace, yet you persecute the church brethren who disagree with you with a viciousness uncharacteristic of a true Christian!

You have caused untold misery to thousands of people in your church with your poorly researched divorce and remarriage policy. You split apart thousands of marriages over this, wrecked happy families, and made mental cases out of many of these victims. Yet you sit there in a wealthy church surrounded with servants and the finest luxuries money can buy and do not lift a finger to relieve the burdens you have caused these people. You have even refused to apologize. Don't you remember Jesus' words: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy"? You are about to face your Creator. If you can't find it in your heart to apologize and make a good-faith attempt to right the heartaches and wrongs you have caused, how do you think your Creator will react to you? You spent millions of dollars on legal fees to humiliate the wife whom you said God gave to you - millions that could have better been spent helping members whose lives you have destroyed - yet you aren't even at peace with your wife Ramona whom you have put away in divorce, contrary to God's law and your own teachings. Do you think God is blind to this?

For 40 years you taught it was wrong to seek medical help. You insisted the sick should avoid doctors and medicine and instead pray for healing. This unbiblical teaching cost dozens of lives and much unnecessary trauma and damage to those who put their faith in you. You have done nothing to remunerate these people for their suffering at your hand, yet you avail yourself of the finest doctors and medical treatment church money can buy. For these actions, you need to publicly apologize to all the congregations of the church and repent before God.

But like the kings of Israel, your worst sin has been that of idolatry. But unlike these kings, you didn't set up idols of other gods. Instead you caused the church to idolize you, your works, and your words. You set yourself up as the sole authority over God's holy Word, and you absurdly claimed that even when you contradicted Scripture and taught error, God bound your error in heaven. And like the false minister Diotrephes, you kicked out of your church all who dared stand up to your heresies (III John 9-10). All along it was you, Mr. Armstrong, who was the leaven in the midst of the church - you and a handful of your cohorts were the fornicators that I Corinthians 5:1-2, 6, 11-13 commands the church to excommunicate and refuse to associate with.

Mr. Armstrong, God has a strong message for you: "Repent! Those whom I love I reprove and chasten. So be zealous and repent!" But you are probably thinking: "I am rich, prosperous, and highly successful. I'm God's Apostle!" But deep down you know that though you are highly adored and flattered by the sycophants who surround you like vultures, you haven't a true friend left. You are even afraid to mingle with the brethren after services. You have wronged so many that you are surrounded by bodyguards and have to preach and then run like a coward after church services. You are truly wretched, pitiable, poor, blind, and naked. Before you breathe your last breath, you need to get right with God in heaven. Mr. Armstrong, remember the immortal words from your favorite oratorio, Mendelssohn's "Elijah": "If with all your hearts ye truly seek Me, ye shall ever surely find Me. Thus saith our God." You desperately need to take the Eternal up on his promise. Then go before all your congregations at the Feast of Tabernacles this year by videotape or satellite and divulge your sins before them, tell them how you betrayed them, and tell them how you've repented and that you are deeply sorry. You need to apologize to them for putting yourself in place of God and causing them to idolize you, and you need to explain why that was wrong. Then you need to promise and carry out big changes in the church - especially in the way you treat members, employees, and former members - and YOU need to provide for those whom you have ruined financially and healthwise.

If you repent, seek wise counsel, and make these big changes, you will have the power to turn many to righteousness, and as Daniel wrote: "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that TURN MANY TO RIGHTEOUSNESS as the stars for ever and ever" (Dan. 12:3). But if you neglect this challenge, some day you may awake to shame and everlasting contempt.

In Jesus' Name,
A Loyal Member

Gallup Ranks the TV Evangelists

For years audiences have heard Herbert W. Armstrong crow about having the number one religious telecast in the U.S. While his program may be number one as far as number of television stations' time purchased, he is by no means the most popular or influential TV evangelist, according to an April 1984 Gallup survey. When the Gallup Organization asked viewers: "Which religious television programs do you watch most often?" only 1% of viewers named HWA's program as their choice. Billy Graham headed the list with 16% of viewers indicating they watched him, followed by Jimmy Swaggart with 13% naming him, followed by Oral Roberts with 12%, Pat Robertson's 700 Club with 11%, Jim Bakker with 10%, Robert Schuller with 8%, Jerry Falwell with 6%, Rex Humbard with 5%, Baptist programs with 4%, Ernest Angely with 2% and, further down the list ranking 16th with only 1% was Herbert Armstrong.

When the Gallup Organization asked viewers to give the names of the religious programs or their sponsoring groups they had watched on TV over the past 7 days, 25% mentioned that they had watched Jimmy Swaggart, 20% had seen Oral Roberts, 18% had seen Pat Robertson, 16% had viewed Jim Bakker, 14% tuned in to Billy Graham, 13% watched Robert Schuller, and 12% heard Jerry Falwell. Ranking 14th on the list was, of all people, Garner Ted Armstrong, Herbert's son, followed by Catholic programs ranking 15th, and then by Herbert Armstrong himself in 16th place. It was indeed surprising to see Garner Ted, with his humble program on only a handful of stations compared to Herbert, so high on the list.

This Gallup survey says a lot about Herbert Armstrong's effectiveness as a TV evangelist. It also indicates that the Worldwide Church of God, which sponsors HWA's programs, isn't getting a very good return on the millions of dollars spent on Apostle Armstrong's shows. Of course, any objective viewer could have told the church that. HWA comes across as an absent-minded, senile old man who is in such poor health that he might give up the ghost right there before his viewers. Groping around for his magnifying glass and misreading simple Bible passages does nothing to dispel his feeble image. And one can't help but notice how his head bobs and rotates back and forth, round and round, almost as if it's in a shaky orbit and ready to come crashing down at any moment. If the church officials were smart, they'd either find another speaker to preach their message, or they would at least cancel the program. But they let Herbert make the decisions and he's so obsessed with his own infallibility and importance that he doesn't seem to know it's time to bow out gracefully.

Ambassador College Accredited

Herbert Armstrong may not want Ambassador College accredited, but, nevertheless, it has been - due to the efforts of Ambassador Report.

On March 21, 1985, the International Accrediting Association sent Herbert Armstrong the news:

Dear Chancellor Armstrong:

We take great pleasure in informing you that upon a careful evaluation of the current Ambassador College catalog, the International Accrediting Association has decided to grant Ambassador College full accreditation, effective immediately. Our Congratulations.

Sincerely yours,
Robert E. Imbeau, Ph.D.
Vice-President

The International Accrediting Association is affiliated with Rev. Hensley's Universal Life Church of Modesto, California and is not one of the thirty or so accrediting associations formally recognized by the U.S. Dept. of Education. Nevertheless, it does have the legal right to accredit institutions and Ambassador College is now one of those institutions it has accredited.

Unfortunately, however, Ambassador College officials have yet to inform their students of this important news.

Exodus Update

The December 6 issue of the WCG's Pastor General's Report announced that Keith Thomas, a long-time WCG minister, has been "removed from the ministry." The notice, typical of others we've seen in that publication, mollified the news with "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas remain members of the Church" and carried the warning "Not to be announced."

Killer Harris Turns Preacher

On Oct. 14, Charles Evino Harris, the Seattle WCG member convicted of slaying two women and wounding two other people in a vicious shooting spree (see our last two issues), was sentenced to life plus 57 years. In imposing the prison sentence King County Superior Court Judge Terrence Carroll stated: "The court has to make certain Mr. Harris does not ever regain his freedom."

According to the Seattle Post Intelligencer (Oct. 15, p. A3), Harris appeared in court wearing a white suit and carrying a Bible. He read selections from the Bible to Judge Carroll and predicted that Christ would return to earth "in this generation," ending war and causing mankind to live in peace and joy. Judge Carroll suggested to Harris that he study other sections of the Bible - those dealing with harming and killing others. Harris' life sentence will allow him plenty of time to study those passages.

Buchner in America

In November, Ambassador Report had the pleasure of being paid a visit by John Buchner of Australia. Mr. Buchner, a former WCG member now in the Christian mainstream, is working on an advanced degree with the WCG the focus of a sociological study to become a thesis and book. Readers will recall that about a year ago Buchner did a survey of former WCG members that attempted to answer many fundamental questions as to why people join and leave the WCG.

As part of his research, Buchner came to the United States to meet with leaders of various organizations having historical ties to the WCG. He was treated cordially by all, with one exception. While some WCG officials had at first agreed to talk to him, all meetings were cancelled, apparently on orders from WCG honcho Joe Tkach who didn't have the sense to see how Buchner's research could actually help the WCG, but instead wrote Buchner an insulting letter.

Nevertheless, Buchner feels his trip was a success. He wrote us the following report on his trip:

The Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the work of the Spirit, is entering the lives of many former Worldwide Church of God people. This assessment is seen through the eyes of faith. My mission to the United States last November and December involved a search for understanding the spiritual processes at work in the lives and ministries of former WCG leaders. Going to meet them as brothers has been an acknowledgment that God is at work in us all, and is for us all in the person of Jesus. Meetings with former WCG evangelists, workers and members were remarkably stimulating and provided rare insights into their contributions, as well as their struggles with the demands of the Gospel.

Meetings with the Church of God International in Tyler were positive, but I sensed a problem somewhat typical of many former WCG leaders - a growing sense of futility over their years in ministry. As age increases, so do the doubts about the value of past work. The stress involved in change was readily apparent, and one senses the presence of a troubled spirit, and the need for healing in these people. In time, the CGI could mature into a healthy evangelical church. The temptation to be reincorporated in a redundant theological and organizational structure is strong, however, and people of goodwill would do well to continue in prayer for Garner Ted Armstrong and Ronald Dart.

The Association for Christian Development in Seattle may be regarded as a healthy and growing part of the body of Christ. Ken Westby and Charles Dorothy understand the meaning of open ministry and prudence in Christian studies. A similar strong desire for fidelity to truth was evidenced in the Church of God, The Eternal and I was granted a rare interview with Raymond Cole. In this body, as with numerous smaller groups, scriptural truth is understood literally and an older tradition of interpretation is stood by. Many important questions are raised in this manner, and yet new categories of thought need to be explored to arrive at more satisfactory answers.

Many of these men and women are high in intellect and in their dedication to religious knowledge, but have not been through the discipline of higher education; they can bring fresh insights to their studies and, as dialog proceeds, acquire appropriate tools for dealing with questions of faith and practice. An inner reality has also been experienced and I had deep spiritual concourse with them. These are people of deep conviction, natural gifts, and energy desperately seeking authenticity in life and ministry, often having to struggle with the reality of their abiding weaknesses.

There are some within the WCG still struggling with their conscience. To protect themselves, some strenuously oppose the Gospel and any approach of good-will. A gracious response is hard to draw from a dry spiritual well, and I am saddened by the insulting reproaches of WCG leaders. Although the dean of students at Pasadena extended some courtesies, my appointments with WCG officials were cancelled because my research was "not congruous with the aims and purposes" of the WCG. Covert meetings with students at Ambassador College revealed a high degree of intellectual myopia.

My mission involved meetings with many former WCG people, as well as academics and clergy involved in cult-research. The most encouraging meetings were with friends at the Church of God (Seventh Day) in Denver. This church is growing in the grace and knowledge of Jesus Christ and has a desperate need for qualified Christians to share in its ministry. A small donation will provide you with their tape Reaching Out to WCG Brethren (P. O. Box 33677, Denver, CO 80233).

I hope that my forthcoming book will adequately present and explain something of the complex phenomenon that is Armstrongism. In the meantime, the preliminary results of my questionnaire are now available. You can obtain a copy for a donation that covers my costs - request Armstrongism in America (U. S. $15), Armstrongism in Australia (A $10), or Armstrongism in Britain (10 pounds). Airmail postage is included. Write to John Buchner, P.O. Box 108, Milperra NSW 2214 Australia.

Book Review by Brenda Denzler

Editor: Brenda Denzler is a former WCG member now majoring in religion at Wichita State University. She will be in the 1986 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Beyond Fundamentalism, by James Barr

Westminster Press, 1984, 195 pp.

Eight years ago, Oxford biblical scholar James Barr published Fundamentalism (Westminster Press, 1978), in which he attempted to provide a critical analysis and description of the fundamentalist (Christian) point of view. His latest book Beyond Fundamentalism, is a more pastoral response to the issues and attitudes of that branch of the evangelical movement known as fundamentalism.

In the second line of his Preface, Barr states that he "does not seek to argue with fundamentalists and convince them that they are mistaken" (p. vii). Rather, his objective is to address those persons who have been in fundamentalist churches and are beginning to question some of the beliefs and attitudes they were taught. Barr says that such people often feel they have lost their bearings due to losing the certitude that seems to be one of the distinguishing motivations of the fundamentalist movement. For Barr, the tragedy is that former fundamentalists often endure "deep pain and personal suffering" in the process of their exiting fundamentalism, leading some to give up on religion altogether.

Barr believes that fundamentalism is an interpretational system in which the Bible is less at the center than is a "peculiar picture" of what the rest of the world is like, and that those exiting fundamentalism must come to see that the Bible points in a different direction and that the "outside" world is of a different character than they have been taught to believe. The emerging fundamentalist must often reevaluate his or her beliefs about the nature of the "outside world." As regards the spirit, Beyond Fundamentalism provides the re-forming fundamentalist with a systematic response of mainstream Christianity to the attitudes and ideas about the nature of faith and the church which are commonly taught in fundamentalist circles.

Barr presents fundamentalism as a system of biblical interpretation (a subset of evangelicalism) that has five central propositions: (1) The nature of God is perfection and constancy, (2) All scripture is inspired by God. (3) All scripture, as the inspired word of God, is infallible. (4) The Bible may be understood without error only when allowed to interpret itself. (5) The Bible is the sole authority for understanding God and for guiding human life. In effect, Barr wants to show that those principles describe a closed circle of reasoning and that fundamentalism "jumped on" somewhere in that closed circle, bringing with it unacknowledged methods and views (interpretations) that work to deny the very propositions that fundamentalism claims to support.

In making this criticism, Barr meets fundamentalism on its own grounds - the question of what the text of the Bible really does say. He insists on stripping away all excuses and smokescreens used to hide what he sees as fundamentalism's repeated unacknowledged breaches of its most important principle: letting the Bible interpret itself. In so doing, Barr investigates fundamentalism's doctrines of the inspiration and infallibility of Scripture, the form and extent of the canon, the uses of Scripture, Christology, the use of the prophetic paradigm, the nature of God, and justification by faith. On each of these topics, he shows that the usual fundamentalist position is at best only one of several possible directions that Scripture might point, and at worst, totally unsupported by Scripture.

In recognition of the fundamentalist-inspired importance of relying solely on the biblical text, Barr centers his discussions around the biblical witness. He avoids reliance upon arguments from tradition, scholarship, or historical criticism. While he also seems to avoid a recognition of the many controversies that exist within fundamentalism - controversies which take into account some of his critical points, he constructs his presentation based upon the experience and practice of fundamentalism by the lay member and the fundamentalist preacher, whose instruction in faith seldom appears broadened by any awareness (much less critical evaluation) of such controversies.

Barr begins his book by looking at the two main texts used to justify fundamentalism's understanding of biblical inspiration and infallibility. He points out that II Timothy 3:16-17 (i.e. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for... ") is the only passage that speaks in any definite way about the inspiration of Scripture and that, judging from the amount of biblical attention given to the issue of inspiration, it is not a priority item in the biblical message. The passage, he points out, raises questions about the nature of the Scripture which is to be considered inspired, the nature of inspiration itself, and the role of Scripture as the supreme (and sole) criterion for faith.

II Peter 1:20-21 ("...no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man..."), Barr claims, encourages a universal and general interpretation of Scripture within the overall Christian community - that mainstream Christianity which fundamentalism despises as Christianity-gone-bad. He points out that it is fundamentalism itself which seeks to privately interpret Scripture outside of (and to the exclusion of) the larger Christian community, thereby violating the very Scripture which it claims to follow. "One may reasonably ask for the meaning of the biblical text taken in itself; or for the meaning as perceived by scholarship; or for the meaning as perceived by the church as a whole. But if one says that one must [emphasis reviewer's] follow the evangelical interpretation, or the conservative interpretation, or some other partisan understanding, then one is likely to transgress the guidance of II Peter 1:20-21" (p. 7). Barr also notes that, contrary to Peter's admonition, fundamentalism pays great attention to individual personalities within its circle.

One of the key presuppositions of fundamentalism is that God is both perfect and unchangeable in word and in deed. Barr shows that fundamentalism has ignored the large witness of Scripture which illustrates God's variability and relative disinterest in absolute perfection [editor: recall David] and has concentrated instead on a handful of verses that make statements about God's unchangeable nature. Barr shows that the Bible presents a creative tension between God-as-omniscient (and therefore unvarying) and God-as-changeable, whereas fundamentalism attempts to deny that any tension exists at all in the biblical portrait of God. Thus, Barr points out, fundamentalism, which is supposedly based solely on Scripture, proclaims a view of God that is contrary to the witness of Scripture, reading into the great historical and literary expanse of Scripture its own more recent ideas about the nature of God - a reading justified only by a few verses out of the entire biblical witness. Barr shows that the fundamentalist corsetting of the living God into a static nature is not the result of the overall portrait of God as presented in the Bible, but rather derives from reason and philosophy more evidently than from Scripture.

Barr describes justification by faith as the "religious core" of fundamentalism. He points out, however, that though the theological concept is central to the evangelical side of Christianity, it is by no means the only understanding with which the New Testament may be read, nor, perhaps, even the best. Even if justification by faith were at the core, however, Barr claims that there is some question whether fundamentalism really obeys and promotes the doctrine. He points out that fundamentalism's precious precept of the infallibility of Scripture serves more to set a pattern and tie the believer down to one set of ideas and approaches than to bring the freedom implied in justification by faith.

Barr closes his book with an explanation of and rationale for traditional Christianity. Though fundamentalism claims to be the most recent expression of a long but often thin line of "true" Christian thought, Barr claims that in point of fact it exhibits little knowledge or insight about church history or the history of doctrine, and certainly little training in the often complex theological positions taken by many of the early church fathers from whom it claims to descend. Fundamentalism, Barr points out, appeals to ancient orthodoxy in a highly selective way. He asks how it can claim to be the sole true heir of a history and a tradition that it accepts only in part. In particular, Barr emphasizes that the treasured fundamentalist appeal to Scripture as the sole source and guide for Christian belief and life (sola scriptura) is found nowhere in early Christian orthodoxy.

Barr addresses, as well, fundamentalism's claim to stand firmly within the Protestant tradition with their emphasis on sola scriptura. He asserts that fundamentalism embraces only a portion of the spirit of the Reformation, and that, even then, it does not do so as strongly as it embraces the post-Reformation orthodoxy and revivalism of several centuries later. While Barr agrees that there is some historical connection between fundamentalism (particularly the more mainstream evangelicalism of which fundamentalism is a splinter-movement) and the Reformation, he shows that, just as evangelical fundamentalism is one legitimate expression of the spirit of the Reformation, there are many other equally legitimate (or better) expressions of the Reformation spirit as well. On the one hand, Barr calls for increased fundamentalist tolerance for nonfundamentalist Christian faith because of their common origins. But on the other hand, he realizes that for fundamentalism to confess itself to be just one among several good presentations of the faith of the Christian Reformation, would be for fundamentalism to deny its claim to be the only current of "true" Christianity in existence.

It is a recognition of the struggle between mutual respect and fundamentalist exclusivism which mark Barr's final chapters. In those chapters, he seeks to present orthodoxy as it sees itself within the stream of Christian life and history, and he seeks to present the former fundamentalist with a rationale end an interpretive method for holding on to evangelical Christianity. Fundamentalism and evangelicalism, he points out, do not have to be synonymous. To those who would defend the fundamentalist position of exclusivity in determining Christian faith and life, he admonishes: "...unless there is openness to all serious possibilities of interpretation, the Bible is no longer primary authority" (p. 177).

In attitude and effect, the doctrine and practice of the Worldwide Church of God is surprisingly similar to that of other fundamentalist groups, their protestations of uniqueness notwithstanding. Like other emerging fundamentalists, former members of the WCG often grope to find different approaches to faith and values in religious practice. Some, who need the certainty that a fundamentalist belief system tries to offer, become members of other fundamentalist sects. Others (re-) integrate themselves into one of Christianity's mainstream denominations. Still others, unwilling or unable to join a mainstream church and yet equally unable to sort out the contradictions they see in fundamentalism, become disenchanted with religion altogether. It is for this last group, in particular, that Barr has attempted to provide a constructive response to fundamentalist dogma by the larger Christian community of faith. His work deserves careful consideration by those former Worldwide members who are working through their own ideas about Christian faith and life.

McNair Lawsuit Update

The WCG is undoubtedly having financial difficulties. And one major reason is the astronomical sums it is paying out to lawyers for no better reason than to protect Herbert Armstrong's preposterously over-inflated ego. While the WCG is tied up in a number of lawsuits draining its coffers, the one Herbert's attorneys seem most preoccupied with is the Leona McNair v. Worldwide defamation suit we reported on in the fall of 1984.

Readers will recall that Mrs. McNair won a $1.26 million verdict. But 18 months later she has still to see even one penny of that money. The WCG's lawyers have posted the required bond (McNair's eventual award will include 10% per annum added on to the original award) and have appealed the verdict to every possible state and federal court. Their appeal of the judgment is currently before the U.S. Ninth Circuit. After losing there, they'll undoubtedly try to spend more WCG money before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Such extravagant pettifoggery comes at a price. Top lawyers today often bill at $250 to $300 per hour. Beverly Hills lawyer Allan Browne is reputed to have made millions off the WCG. And that figure is constantly rising.

Yet, for all the millions in legal fees, what have Armstrong's pettifoggers accomplished? They lost at trial, they lost every appeal, they've given the WCG some of the worst publicity it's had in years, and now they've allowed Herbert, himself, to be drawn into the fray.

Prior to the 1984 trial, Judge Olson ruled that HWA should not be a defendant in the McNair suit. Tony Stuart, McNair's attorney, appealed that decision and after the trial was over won a reversal from a state appellate court. Thus Herbert Armstrong must now stand trial to determine what damages, if any, he must personally pay in addition to those already assessed against the other defendants. But the start of that trial has been delayed by Herbert's lawyers repeatedly claiming he is too ill to be deposed.

One superior court judge, Daniel Fletcher, suggested that an independent physician could examine HWA to determine if he really was too ill to be deposed. But Armstrong lawyer Ralph Helge, behaving like an overly energized Ambassador sophomore giving an "attack speech," yelled at the judge that that would not be acceptable because "We don't believe in doctors!!!" Herbert Armstrong's personal physician sat in the court room even as Helge spoke. Judge Fletcher quietly told Helge he was sorry his suggestion had made him so upset. To which Stuart quipped: "Your Honor, Mr. Helge always behaves like this."

Helge's outlandish performance notwithstanding, the court ruled that HWA must submit to a deposition. But Herbert's lawyers are appealing - again.

Letters

Thank you for the recent AR. Years ago I would have been shocked that I would be reading a "dissident" paper with such relief, but there you are. May your readership grow and grow! Your discretion is much appreciated.

May I confirm what you reported on the Mystery of the Ages. It is being pushed on everyone, especially the children. Our minister says it will make "a nice addition to the Bible." Please go through this book and expose the errors to people. Among many incredible assertions, it states that HWA is the "angel to the Church at Philadelphia." How do they have the gall to put such things in print? At the Feast, members were admonished to read this publication three times!

Also, let me confirm another point you mentioned, Ken Westby of the ACD has been a real help to me. Any of his newsletters and tapes will be a balm to our people. And how we need that balm!

Moreover, I must tell you that the "great escape" is being mentioned often. "The Place of Final Training" is the euphemism they are using now. Much dangling over the lake of fire is threatened nearly every Sabbath. How can the WCG ministry make fun of the fundamentalists for preaching hellfire and brimstone when they do the same thing? Fear is such a good means of control.

Briefly, let me say what has helped me more than anything else. It is the growing conviction through personal Bible study that Jesus Christ is the Rock - not HWA, the "Church," the Sabbath, or anything else. If He is our foundation, we don't need to have fear. But if our foundation is the slippery sand of the WCG doctrine, God help us!

To any souls who are in turmoil let me recommend reading Phillip Keller's book A Shepherd Looks at the Good Shepherd and His Sheep (Zondervan Publishing). The contrast between the false shepherds and the Savior is beautifully done.

Finally, to any who believe HWA's assertion that the WCG is the only true church, think about this: HWA admits that the Sardis era is still a Church of God. Supposedly, years ago, the three final church eras were taught as being co-existent in the end time.

-Texas

It seems that WCG is using any excuse to put the old folks out of the church because they don't want to have to keep them. Some of my friends were put out when they thought they didn't have much money. They don't care that God commands them to look after the widows.

-Florida

I believe Herbert Armstrong is going down fast. They showed a film of him in Tucson that was made Aug. 19. He looked pretty bad. He said he had a fever. Six weeks later, he was supposed to speak by satellite, but they said he still had a fever! I've also noticed that his TV shows are all reruns. Of course, the members wouldn't admit that anything is wrong.

I couldn't believe Herbert's Aug. 19 film. He kept telling the members, "I am your father, you are my children."... Everything [in church] is such a big secret. Your AR is the only WCG news source. Please don't stop.

Late News:

HWA Names Tkach Successor

Just as we are going to press, WCG attorney Ralph HeIge has announced (Jan. 14) that Herbert Armstrong has named evangelist Joseph K. Tkach, 59, to succeed him as church leader in the event of HWA's death. HWA was quoted as saying, "I am in a very physically weakened state, enduring severe pain and with virtually no strength whatsoever." HWA said he named Tkach to avoid "confusion and doubt in the mind of the church members and coworkers regarding the godly authority of his successor" and to ensure that none other than his personal choice attempted to lay claim to the position.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Herbert W. Armstrong Goes to His Reward

It was something many Worldwide Church of God (WCG) members really believed would never occur. Nevertheless, it did. On the morning of January 16, Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the founder of Ambassador College and the self-appointed Apostle of the Worldwide Church of God, died.

Although he was already 93 years old, many of his followers were actually surprised by the news. For years, Gerald Waterhouse, a leading WCG evangelist, had toured the world teaching Armstrong devotees that God would not allow "Mr. Armstrong" to die before the second coming of Christ. But like so many other Waterhouse prophecies, this one also failed.

Waterhouse notwithstanding, the Armstrong organization for a number of months may have been preparing its members for the inevitable. In a letter to members dated Dec. 23, HWA (if it was indeed him writing) mentioned his weakened state, angina attacks, and "the uselessness of this present evil world." Then on January 10 HWA wrote his followers:

This is my first letter to you in 1986, and could very well be my last. Now in my 94th year I am in a very physically weakened state enduring severe pain and with virtually no strength whatsoever. I briefly described my condition in last month's co-worker letter to you, and now it has worsened. It may be that the Work God has given me to do is complete, but not the Work of God's Church, which will be faithfully doing God's Work till Christ, the True Head of this Church, returns.

After much counsel and prayer over the past months God has led me in announcing a decision last week to appoint Mr. Joseph W. Tkach, director of Church Administration, to the office of Deputy Pastor General, to assist me while I am in a weakened state, and should God choose to take my life, to place himself totally in Christ's hands to lead God's Church under Christ, succeeding me as Pastor General, in the difficult times ahead. Christ will lead in the decision about which men will continue the telecast.

According to The Worldwide News of January 27, HWA told his advisory council of his decision to appoint Tkach on January 7, a date very significant to Waterhouse, an avid numerologist. (Actually, we think the date may be significant too, but for a different reason. As Joe Tkach, of Russian decent knows, January 7 is Russian Christmas!)

Only nine days after naming Tkach his successor, HWA was dead. Tkach (called "Old Joe," "Comrad Joe," and "Mr. T" by some who have difficulty pronouncing Tuh cotch´) called an 11:30 a.m. meeting of all church headquarters personnel to announce HWA's death. He told them how "The greatest work lies yet ahead." According to an employee who was there, not one person was seen crying and most behaved as though nothing of great significance had happened. Some supervisors even told their subordinates not to discuss HWA's death, but to go on as though nothing had occurred!

Some WCG observers speculate that before his death, HWA was concerned his funeral might be ignored by the many world leaders to whom he had given so generously over the years. Whatever the case, at HWA's death church officials planned for only a small, private burial service. But grumblings among some WCG members wanting a big funeral seem to have convinced Tkach to change plans. HWA's January 19 funeral was quite public, and as it turned out, HWA would probably have been quite pleased by the large turnout and grandiose style of the event.

According to The Worldwide News (Jan. 27, p. 1):

"The casket was brought to the grave site in a hearse surrounded by an honor guard of Ambassador student leaders, led by Paul Bennett and Anthony Marcinelli, the student body presidents of the Pasadena and Big Sandy colleges, " said Mr. Borek. "We didn't want Mr. Armstrong's body brought to the grave site alone."

"Mr. Armstrong probably had the most dignified funeral service of any of the apostles," Mr. Borek added.

"The entire Advisory Council of Elders were pallbearers", he said. "The lineup was chosen by Mr. Tkach." At 1:58 p.m. the hearse was opened, and the coffin was removed....

The casket was carried to the grave site by Mr. Dean, Mr. Apartian, Mr. La Ravia, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Neff, Mr. Meredith, Mr. McNair and Mr. Smith.

Mr. Armstrong's casket, made of solid mahogany and weighing upwards of 1,500 pounds, "is exactly the same as the one his wife was buried in in 1967," said John Kennedy, Auditorium P.M. assistant pastor....

Mr. Armstrong's burial plot lies between his mother, Eva Wright Armstrong (1866-1961), and his wife, Loma Dillon Armstrong (1891-1967). Mr. Armstrong's son Richard (1928-1958), who died in an auto accident, is buried on the other side of Mrs. Loma Armstrong. None of the burial plots have headstones, only foot stones....

According to news accounts, about 4500 gathered for the funeral at Mountain View Cemetery in Altadena. Among the dignitaries who attended were Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, Pasadena Mayor William Bogaard, consulate representatives of China and Japan, and a contingent of orange-robed Buddhist monks from the Wat Thai temple of Los Angeles. (In recent years HWA gave significant sums of WCG money to a Buddhist temple in Sri Lanka.) Also in attendance, and seated in the front row of the "unconverted section," were HWA's daughters Beverly Gott and Dorothy Mattson, his daughter-in-law Shirley Armstrong, and his son Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA).

Some news accounts reported that GTA "wiped tears from his eyes." Someone also claimed that Gerald Waterhouse appeared to be sobbing. Those two may have been the only ones who shed any tears. One eyewitness said:

It was the strangest funeral. First of all, I never saw so many policemen at a burial. Were they expecting a riot or something? And the atmosphere was really odd. The top ministers looked somber, but everyone where I sat seemed to be having a good time. I really didn't see anyone upset or crying. In fact, Beverly and Dorothy were laughing a bit and afterwards seemed quite happy talking to Aaron Dean. There was also some very uncouth behavior. One Ambassador department head climbed atop a tombstone to get a better view and had to be asked to climb down. It was a strange funeral.

The presiding speaker was Herman Hoeh, Editor of The Plain Truth, who indicated that condolences had been received from government representatives of Israel, Jordan, Great Britain, China, Japan, Thailand, and Sri Lanka. Hoeh's eulogy began:

On this occasion it seemed appropriate to consider the background of the work that Mr. Armstrong had been doing these past decades. We often see only what is present and seldom understand fully the background and the development of the institutions that he founded.

Hoeh proceeded to enumerate HWA's accomplishments (the broadcast, magazine, foundation, college, etc.), and then for the next 20 minutes or so, painted HWA as the most recent in a succession of God-led men beginning with Abraham, Joseph, Moses, and Jesus. He extended that succession right up to modern times with what we must admit was, at times, a most imaginative reconstruction of history. For instance:

And in 1660 they [the Church of God] came to the state, then colony, of Rhode Island. And from there they spread west. And it was in 1927 that Mr. Armstrong came to know and understand the small remnant of this Church.

But before I continue, I must tell you that the Church had already come to the recognition of the government of the United States. The Church of God was here when the American Civil War occurred. The Church of God was the primary instrument in this country to establish the conscientious objector status of those who sought to live in peace on either side in the Civil War.

The Church of God, in the person of Andrew Dugger, presented in the time of the First World War the petition of the Church to remain free of the obligation of killing one's neighbor.

And through Mr. Herbert Armstrong's efforts on behalf of the Church of God in the Second World War and the Korean War, our membership has never slain or destroyed brethren on either side. We have prayed for the peace of the nations. We have prayed for the safety of the world's leaders.

One can only wonder what went through the minds of McNair, Helge, Ames, Apartian, Waterhouse, Meredith, and the others as they gazed at the casket...

Before concluding, Hoeh reassured his audience that:

It is our purpose in this January of 1986 to continue Mr. Armstrong's work, to assure our representatives who are here from many countries around the world that we will continue in our relationship and offer our services....

Hoeh's eulogy (which, incidentally, contained no mention of any resurrection - a subject usually expounded upon at WCG funerals) was followed by a closing prayer by Joe Tkach, whose eloquence about HWA peaked with:

And now as we close another chapter in the book of Acts and begin a new one, we readily admit and acknowledge that there is no man who can fill his shoes, but, Father, we aim to follow in his footsteps....

The Worldwide News of Feb. 10, devoted entirely to HWA, contained letters of condolence from many leaders including President and Mrs. Reagan, California Attorney General John Van de Kamp, United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Peter Tarnoff of the World Affairs Council, Otto von Habsburg, Leopold de Rothschild, Edmund Rothschild, and numerous leaders of the state of Israel. (It appears that HWA's old friends Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos were unable to send their condolences. We suspect they were preoccupied with other problems.) We understand that the special Feb. 10 issue of The Worldwide News is being made available free to the general public. The address to write to is The Worldwide News, P.O. Box 111, Pasadena, CA 91129.

The Press Waves Good-bye

While in most of the U.S. the death of HWA was given relatively little news media attention (and in the rest of the world almost none), in Southern California HWA's demise was big news for almost a week. Most TV stations in the area covered both his death and funeral. Articles appeared in the Pasadena Star-News (Jan. 17, 18, 20), the Los Angeles Times (Jan. 16, 17, 20), the Los Angeles Herald Examiner (Jan. 17), the Pasadena Weekly (Jan. 23), and many other papers.

The most cynical piece we saw was Harold Hubbard's column in the Jan. 25 Pasadena Star-News. It was titled "Tolerance of the Worldwide Church of God comes easier now." Hubbard simply gave a long list of community and charitable projects financed by WCG money and then closed with: "Tolerance comes easier now."

The most irreverent treatment of HWA's passing that we saw in print was in the Feb. 22-23 issue of The Weekend Australian. Phillip Adams' article was titled "End of the World Here for Two - Thank God!" and began:

It must come as a great shock to both of them, but Herbert W. Armstrong and L. Ron Hubbard are dead. These god-like gurus, who dominated the lives of countless disciples, have carked it, snuffed it and kicked the bucket. And the world is a better place for their passing.

The article succinctly covered the lives of both HWA and Scientology founder L. Ron Hubbard, who also died recently.

The cleverest HWA obituary we came across appeared in the Jan. 18 edition of The Guardian, the respected British paper:

Herbert Armstrong, the 93-year-old head of the Worldwide Church of God, stated recently from California that his tome, Mystery of the Ages, "may be the most important book since the Bible." He has now been called in to account for this statement - he died on Thursday.

The most sensational article appeared in the Globe, Feb. 4. Titled "The Holy Man Who Broke My Heart," it told of Garner Ted's repeated attempts to reconcile with his father. The Globe presented a photo of HWA standing close to a seductive young mini-skirted Oriental woman who was supposed to be "Ramona Martin, a half-breed Cherokee Indian," HWA's second wife. Actually, it wasn't Ramona but, according to some sources, HWA's former Filipino girlfriend. WCG members who sent clippings of the article to church headquarters requesting an explanation were never answered.

Christianity Today (Feb. 21) reviewed many facets of HWA's career, including how some of his followers believed he had been resurrected in 1977. Time magazine (Jan. 27, p. 78) noted how HWA had taught his followers to "shun medical care (though he used it as his own health deteriorated) and that remarried members should divorce their second spouses and rejoin the first (though he repealed that dictum in 1976 and a year later married a divorcee)." Newsweek (Jan. 27, p. 72) recalled how HWA had been accused of "misusing church funds" and how he had excommunicated his own son from Worldwide. The obituary concluded: "The two were never reconciled."

That the old preacher and his preacher son never reconciled was a fact that the press repeated again and again in the days following HWA's death. HWA had taught that he was the Elijah prophesied to "turn the heart of the fathers to the children and the heart of the children to the fathers" (Mal. 4:5), but he was not even willing in his final days to say one kind word to his own son Garner Ted. While many newswriters know of HWA's excesses, perversions, false teachings, hypocrisy, and outlandish arrogance, the one fact most often reported on to reveal his true spirit was his completely unnatural and cruel hatred of his very own son.

The Fast Moves of Mr. T

HWA was dead only a short while when Joe Tkach, the WCG's new Pastor General (he has not yet declared himself an Apostle) had armed guards placed around HWA's old residence, the Ambassador College "Social Center," and, it is rumored, spent days personally rummaging through HWA's personal belongings. What he found, we don't know. We do know that at one time HWA had millions of dollars worth of art objects in his basement vault.

Apparently, there has yet been no firm decision as to whether Mr. T will move out of his 280 South Orange Grove parsonage and into HWA's "Social Center" home or whether, as has been discussed, the "Social Center" will be left as is, to function as a church museum or shrine dedicated to the dead "Apostle." Whatever the case, Tkach has already taken over HWA's luxurious old office on the fourth floor of the church's Hall of Administration and is being chauffeured about in HWA's Cadillac limo.

...and as he turned to the camera, what was Garner Ted Armstrong thinking?

---

Not surprisingly, Tkach has appointed a number of trusted subordinates to key positions. Pastor Larry Salyer is now overseeing the WCG's field ministry, and Doug Horchak, one of the WCG's brighter ministers (and Tkach's son-in-law), is Salyer's top aide and likely successor.

The WCG will continue its World Tomorrow telecast with new personalities: Pastor David Hulme, Pastor David Albert, and Evangelist Richard Ames. Tkach hopes he, himself, will eventually be able to tape programs good enough for airing. Actually, David Hulme's first few telecasts proved quite successful, bringing in over 19,000 calls per program as compared to HWA's average of 16,000. Albert's and Ames' programs had lower numbers of responses, but still, we are told, approximated HWA's old average. It appears the WCG should have no trouble gaining new members via TV.

The Plain Truth staff box has changed a bit with the April issue. Tkach is listed as Publisher, but Herman Hoeh remains as Editor. With his relationship to Tkach considered cordial, we suspect Hoeh's influence as the elder statesman of WCG ideology will continue. Nevertheless, the PT itself appears headed for rough times. The March issue (the last with HWA as Editor-in-Chief) was the smallest in years, having a mere 29 pages, little color, and inferior paper. The April issue is no better.

The Pasadena campus of Ambassador College is, for the time being, still headed by Deputy Chancellor Raymond McNair. But the Big Sandy, Texas campus is set to close this spring. The Texas campus may not be sold, however, as it is being considered for the site of a new badly needed minister-retirement complex. Nevertheless, a Japanese group continues to express a strong interest in buying it.

As for the WCG's executive jet, which HWA wanted sold, it has been taken off the market. Tkach intends to use it to meet important world leaders - something not anticipated by HWA. Present at HWA's funeral was Osamu Gotoh who, for years, was HWA's world tours "advance man." We understand he is available as an addition to Tkach's travel team. We have learned that Tkach is already making plans for a major trip. Destination? The Soviet Union.

The WCG's Advisory Council has as yet seen no real shakeup. Council members are: Herman Hoeh, Roderick Meredith, Raymond McNair, Dean Blackwell, Leroy Neff, Norman Smith, Ellis La Ravia, Leon Walker, Dibar Apartian, Richard Rice, Richard Ames, Harold Jackson, Ralph Helge, and Aaron Dean. All are ordained ministers except Helge who is the church's attorney. The youngest of the group is Aaron Dean who, for a number of years, was Herbert Armstrong's executive assistant. Dean is now apparently in a similar position as executive assistant to Tkach. For that reason, he is considered by many as the number two man in the Worldwide organization.

Kevin Dean, Aaron's brother and until recently head of the church's Imperial Schools and the church's YOU (Youth Opportunities Unlimited) program, has "resigned" for reasons not made public (Pastor General's Report, Jan. 24, p. 2). Kermit Nelson will replace Kevin Dean as director of YOU. Jim Snook, the Dean brothers' stepfather remains as head of Ambassador College security and communications - no insignificant post.

Attorney Stanley Rader, no longer an attending WCG member or minister, wrote letters praising HWA that were published in the Los Angeles Times and the Pasadena Star-News (Jan. 26). In an interview with the Star-News (Jan. 17) Rader said HWA was "one of the finest individuals to walk the face of the earth.... The opportunity to work with him was the most rewarding of my life.... He created lasting and binding friendship wherever he went. He believed that it was better to give than to receive and he practiced that." Rader, who was not seen at HWA's funeral, has no position in the Tkach regime and, his gushy laudation of the Apostle who fired him notwithstanding, no one in Worldwide seems to want him back.

Ralph Helge's position as WCG chief counsel seems secure and his influence in that organization will likely grow. Like Tkach, Helge came to Pasadena from Chicago and was a long-time Armstrong follower. Shortly after HWA passed away, he told the press this about his late spiritual leader: "When you were in his presence, you knew you were in the presence of somebody special. There was a dynamic strength that just emanated! But aside, or next to, that leadership of strength was also an absolutely warm hearted person." Helge probably believes this.

The transition from the Herbert Armstrong era to the Joe Tkach era has not been completely free of stress. There have been shouting matches and a rumored physical altercation on "the fourth floor" - the location of Worldwide's key executive offices. But overall the WCG has seen a remarkably smooth transition of power. Most significant is the fact that there have been no major defections of ministers or members and no major drop in church income since HWA's death. There have been a few who have left Worldwide to join GTA's organization or other groups, and there are also a few so disillusioned that after a period of non-tithing and non-attendance they will drift away, but their numbers are very small.

Former WCG minister Howard Clark described the situation very well when he said: "Those in the WCG who have had the intelligence and character to leave have already done so. Those that remain are conditioned to a movement that has become institutionalized."

Unanswered Questions

To the WCG's many thousands of true believers, the circumstances surrounding HWA's final weeks and death may appear as neat as ribbon on a bouquet of flowers. But a careful review of the WCG's official version of recent events leaves many questions unanswered. Let's analyze a few WCG statements and see if they make any sense.

The first problem involves the last two member letters attributed to HWA (dated Dec. 23 and Jan. 10). To many, their syntax and style were different from all past HWA letters. Anyone who has read HWA's co-worker letters over the years knows how every one was literally filled with words in ALL CAPS, words underlined, and exclamation points!! The Dec. 23 letter did not contain one word in caps, one word underlined, or one exclamation point. The Jan. 10 letter, which announced Tkach as HWA's successor, had "PLAIN TRUTH" in caps once, two scripture cites underlined (HWA usually put them in parentheses), and only one emphasized word in the entire letter: "It may be that the Work God has given me to do is complete, but not the Work of God's Church...."

Only months ago, HWA was telling some associates "The Work" would end when he died. Of course, the difference in syntax, word emphasis, and style may have been due to a weakened physical state. But some insiders say that almost to the end HWA was able to play the piano, intimidate and harangue subordinates, and be his old cantankerous, mercurial self. What was it that most upset him? Based on inside information, it was the knowledge that someday all that he had created would be left to another man - most likely, he feared, Garner Ted Armstrong. That being the case, who, or what, persuaded him to name a successor? And of all those he could choose from, why Tkach - a man who never graduated from Ambassador College and who, until recently, was so low on the WCG totem pole that Garner Ted Armstrong did not know him by either face or name.

Let's look at the WCG's official explanation of how HWA told his top executives that he had chosen Tkach to succeed him. According to The Worldwide News of Jan. 27 (p. 1):

Jan. 7, Mr. Armstrong called a combined meeting of the Advisory Council of Elders and board members of affiliated (Church) organizations, according to a press release from the Church's Legal Office. Also present was Ralph K. Helge, the Church's legal counsel.

Evangelist Joseph W. Tkach and Aaron Dean, Mr. Armstrong's executive aide, were with Mr. Armstrong in his home during the meeting. To avoid any contagion to Mr. Armstrong, other board members met in the executive boardroom on the fourth floor of the Hall of Administration and communicated by telephone conference hookup, according to Mr. Helge.

"As was customary, Mr. Armstrong opened the meeting with prayer," Mr. Helge said. "The tone of Mr. Armstrong's prayer was deeply moving to all the men as he stated he felt that the time was approaching 'to pass the baton.' "

Mr. Armstrong then designated Mr. Tkach, director of Church Administration, to be his successor to the office and title of pastor general of the Church and to the other offices, titles and authority held by Mr. Armstrong.

Mr. Tkach would assume the various offices and titles in the event of Mr. Armstrong's death.

Mr. Armstrong announced that he was appointing Mr. Tkach to the office and title of deputy pastor general of the Church and its affiliated organizations, said Mr. Helge.

Personally designating a successor, said Mr. Armstrong, would aid in preserving the unity that exists in God's Church and prevent some from falling away.

Mr. Armstrong said his designation was made after "much prayer, reflection and counsel" with many council members. Board members unanimously endorsed Mr. Armstrong's designation, said Mr. Helge.

Here we have the WCG's legal department, in a carefully worded statement, admitting that HWA was isolated from his entire organization, with only Tkach and Dean having full access to Armstrong. According to lawyer Helge, this was necessary "to avoid contagion to Mr. Armstrong." But why is it that all but Tkach and Dean posed a threat? Are we to believe that HWA had acquired some type of immune system deficiency? And that Tkach and Dean, unlike most mortals, are somehow entirely free of germs? If HWA was truly that ill the week before his death, some members ask, why was there no "hot line" call for them to pray and fast? HWA and others made such appeals to the membership in the past.

According to WCG spokesman David Hulme, the cause of HWA's death was "basically just the effects of becoming old, just old age" (Pasadena Star-News, Jan. 17). Tkach's first letter to the church after becoming Pastor General said this:

I am deeply saddened to have to inform you that Herbert W. Armstrong's illness has ended in the manner least expected by all of us. Mr. Armstrong died peacefully in his sleep at 5:59 this morning while resting in the favorite chair of his late wife Mrs. Loma Armstrong.

Does Tkach really expect people to believe that no one suspected HWA was near death, but that when it happened - just days after Tkach had been named successor - someone was right there with watch in hand to record the exact minute when it happened? And who was that someone? Not one WCG statement anywhere, to our knowledge, has ever indicated who was there at the end. Why the secrecy?

In 1984, Ambassador Report interviewed a lady who had been a personal secretary to both Stanley Rader and Herbert Armstrong. When asked who she thought would succeed HWA, she quite emphatically told us:

Joe Tkach. There's no doubt in my mind. Kevin and Aaron [Dean] want power and they want the WCG's top position for themselves. But they know they're still too young, that's why they need Joe Tkach. Keven and Aaron know how to manipulate Mr. Armstrong. At some point they'll see to it that he names Joe as his successor. Mr. Armstrong will die and Joe will be in charge - at least for a while. Eventually though, I'm sure Aaron or Kevin or both will find a way to take over.

In 1984, we didn't take her opinion seriously. Maybe we should have.

It is a well-known fact that in recent years, HWA, according to his own public statements, was legally blind and unable to read. How then could he really have known what was stated in the letters or other documents he was asked to sign? Of course, letters can be dictated. But did he really dictate his last letters? How aware was he of the decisions he was purportedly making? If he really made his own decisions, whose information was he relying on? And what about those drugs so many have said he was taking? Did they affect his judgment or contribute to his end?

HWA's death certificate was signed by Dr. Ralph Martin (of Pasadena), who had treated HWA since 1984. The certificate states that HWA's death was caused by ventricular fibrillation (an uncoordinated twitching of the muscle fibers of the ventricles of the heart for which CPR is normally administered). Other contributing factors were renal (kidney) insufficiency and chronic anemia. According to the certificate, the death was not reported to the coroner. There was no biopsy. There was no autopsy. There was no inquest.

And what of HWA's wealth? He certainly was no pauper. The following appeared on page 2 of the Jan. 26 Los Angeles Times:

In a will made out four days before his death, Herbert W. Armstrong left all of his real and personal property to the Pasadena-based Worldwide Church of God which he founded. The 93-year-old pioneer radio preacher stated in the will that he intentionally omitted his son, Garner Ted Armstrong, who lives in Texas, and daughters Beverly Gott of La Canada and Dorothy Matson of San Luis Obispo, not because of any ill will but because he thought they were adequately situated and that the distribution of the estate through the church would benefit more people. The document contained no estimate of the worth of his estate. Armstrong died Jan. 16 at his Pasadena home.

HWA's lawyers have seen to it that the public never learns how much he had, where it was, or where it went. Leroy Neff, executor and WCG treasurer, is tight-lipped. The Armstrong daughters, apparently satisfied with what was given them inter vivos, have not contested the will. Neither has GTA, who is said to be terrified by the mere thought of courtrooms and lawyers. Nevertheless, in his own way, GTA is fighting back.

GTA: I Was Robbed!

Early morning on Jan. 16 Garner Ted Armstrong received a phone call from HWA aide Aaron Dean who informed Ted that his father had just died. (Dean, it seems, was one of the very last people to see HWA alive.) GTA immediately headed for California, and ever since has been making it very clear he believes that he - not Tkach - is the one who should be heading the WCG. At a lengthy January 17 news conference held at the Sheraton-Universal Hotel in Universal City, California, GTA told the gathered newsmen he considered himself the "spiritual leader" of the church.

GTA is convinced that HWA's closest aides thwarted his efforts to talk to his father, that they deliberately encouraged HWA's "paranoia" of his returning to take control of the WCG, and that the circumstances in which HWA found himself paralleled the "Howard Hughes saga." Ted said his attempts to contact his father for six months were based on comments from friends inside the WCG who were convinced HWA wanted to see him. (Ambassador Report has reason to believe GTA is telling the truth on this!) However, Ted's phone calls never went through to his father and his letters went unanswered. Said GTA, "I was never told by my father that he did not want to see me." The refusals, Ted said, always came through intermediaries. GTA revealed much about his religion management philosophy when he said:

Sooner or later, a church has to identify with a person. And if it's not the same person [as leader and speaker], there could be confusion.... Who does Billy Graham's preaching? Billy Graham" (Pasadena Star-News, Jan. 18, p. A- 1).

Then, in an interview with the Globe (Feb. 4, p. 23), GTA stated:

I'm surprised that my father would pass over his own son as church leader.... I was the logical and natural choice. My roots go very deep, clear back to the church organization that ordained my father when I was a baby boy. From the standpoint of experience, training, education, and as my father's spiritual heir, I am the most qualified to head the church.

GTA has taken off his gloves and has turned out a number of articles and cassette tapes telling his side of the story. It will be interesting to see how many are willing to listen. His address is: Garner Ted Armstrong, P.O. Box 2530, Tyler, Texas 75710.

Reader Comments on HWA's Passing

Editor: The news of HWA's death inspired a flood of comments from our readers. Here are excerpts from but a few of the letters we received:

Your little green note [that HWA died] was like a winning lottery ticket. I leave it to you to find out who the next despot is.

-Pennsylvania

May HWA Rest in Peace. He sure as hell didn't give us poor dumb sheep any peace while he was alive. Every dog has its day, and I knew his would come.

-California

I really feel that HWA should be given the "Lenin treatment" now in existence in Moscow. Herbie could be stuffed, placed in a crystal glass showcase, and set up in the lobby of his cathedral building for all his devotees to adore. I'm sure he would like that.

-Pennsylvania

So "the Wicked Witch of the West" is dead. The Apostle of the "Only True Church" has come to the end of his gold-bricked road. The Great Consumer with his wolfish appetite is no more. Now, I ask you, who could possibly qualify to don his noble toga and step into his custom-made sandals? Quite an undertaking to follow someone with such lofty connections and who kneweth all things and could not err. Too bad his whole corpus of ideas, which has left such an infection, could not have been laid to rest with him.

It is not the love of money that is the cause of most of our evils, but letting ourselves come under the spell of some of these modern day prophets' delusions and visions. They play on our fears and desires, and like children loving to hear fables, we who are naive or overly imaginative enjoy listening to things that are not true. We are spared the effort of thinking for ourselves. In order to remain safely in the flock they can induce us to swallow many terrible and hard ideas - because out in the darkness awaits the Big Bad Wolf.

In that cult I was suckered into, the preacher had to be a chameleon in disguise. Some Saturdays in one hour his ideas on infallible doctrine could change dramatically. We, the members, were like little chameleons too, changing easily from red-hot to cool-blue. No problem - and if there was one, better not let anyone know - remember the Wolf and the Lake of Fire!

We live in an age of marvelous accomplishments in many fields, and yet a great many of us are not educated enough to spot a charlatan. Too many of us still believe in fairy tales.

It's time Dorothy got out of Oz and went back to Kansas.

-Reader, West Virginia

Living in the vicinity of Los Angeles and reading local news coverage about Herbert W. Armstrong's death provides cause for reflection upon the true nature of his life work. In summarizing his life, the press quoted one of the more sizeable claims of this self-styled apostle. "I have traveled over the four quarters of this globe we call Earth." Armstrong wrote in the introduction to his latest book, 'Mystery of the Ages,' published in 1985" (Pasadena Star- News January 17, 1986).

The curious thing about this claim is how similar it is to the one, and only one, verse in the Bible that speaks of an individual who goes to the "four quarters of the earth." Rev. 20:7 tells about the time when Satan is "loosed out of his prison" and "...shall go out to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth" (vs. 8). And why does he go? Notice those words: "to deceive."

Quite a comparison! But then, it would not be that shocking to those who know the real situation that existed since (and as a result of) the death of Herbert's first wife, Loma, back in 1967. Before that time, he was greatly restricted in travel as the oldtimers know. But with Loma's death, HWA was given the freedom and impetus to travel widely. Some that were close to HWA even perceived in him an underlying "sense of relief" that this, restriction was removed by her death. It was as if he were "loosed" to travel throughout the four quarters of the earth - and to do the things he desired. (Since the travels of HWA really began "in earnest" back in 1967, and ended with his death in 1986, one could even surmise that we have just witnessed one more completion of a 19-year time cycle.)

It would appear to have been through ignorance (or oversight) that Herbert Armstrong used the expression from this scripture to apply to his work when it has such obvious connections with Satan's activities. But, as a former minister of his church, I find that things like this are not all that amusing - especially when one considers the many things which have been done to others because of what the scriptures supposedly say.

Of course, I would not presume to judge another by saying that his intent was to deceive - as in the case of the Devil. Therefore, the comparison is only to be "circumstantially discerned." But, as the church taught so forcibly: "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked..." (Jer.17:9).

*-Gary Arvidson
Pasadena, CA*

I cannot understand how some people can say they could not stand HWA's personal life, but insist he had good doctrines.

-North Dakota

We could look on the appointment of Joe [Tkach] as Herbert's final snub of the "intellectuals" or possibly his final joke upon the church. More likely in his senile state he simply chose his nursemaid, the one that was the closest to him in his last days. Anyone prophesying in the late 1950s that Joe would one day replace Herbert would have brought on a giant belly laugh from all of us (including Joe himself). I feel nearly the same at this point in time. Yet on the other hand, he is a better choice than Garner Stud. But then who wouldn't be?...

No doubt there will be further division and problems as all of these men come under the double curse of Paul as stated in Galatians 1:8-9 (a most profound statement - amazing really for Paul who tried to be all things to all men that he might gain them for Christ). Yet when referring to the preachers of Herbert's Galatian Gospel he states (and again repeats the statement), "Let them be accursed...." We can be sure that, no matter what the outcome of all this, they will be.

-California

Recent issues of the AR have given the impression that you have somehow gone "soft" on GTA. While I admit GTA is a little less objectionable than HWA was, I hope it is not your policy to encourage people to follow him. GTA's recent public comments to the press in Los Angeles revealed him for what he is. This man is still duped by his father's many theological errors, still thinks "the Armstrongs" were given a "commission" and are therefore special, still is out to increase his following, and still doesn't admit nearly enough responsibility for the absolute devastation he brought on thousands of us.

I know many feel sorrow for him for the ill-treatment he received from HWA. Obviously, HWA was wrong in that. But let's be honest with ourselves. Family member alienation is what Armstrongism is all about! Where could you find another religion that on a per capita basis has caused as much family strife and sorrow as this one?

Ted has a lot of nerve to boo-hoo about his father not wanting to see him, because that's exactly the kind of hurt thousands of us have had to endure daily. While he may not want to face it, the fact is GTA for over two decades, played a major role in creating the monster that is Armstrongism. GTA may be a little better than his old man was, but I, for one, will not be shedding any tears over his problems.

-Ex-WCG Member

I'm hoping to be an eyewitness to the falling apart of Herb's empire. There is not a minute of my life that the WCG does not effect because of my husband's blind dedication. Many, many, more hours a week go into his church activities than his home and family activities. I'm sticking with my husband because I know that the person I married is still there and the person he is trying to be hopefully will crumble as the WCG does.

-Wife of WCG Member

[The day I found out HWA died] I took a bottle of champagne home and celebrated. She [WCG member wife], of course, wasn't too thrilled. She had been crying all day, but told our son not to worry because they have a new leader.

-New York

I just read your latest [January] issue, and, as usual, I have now been filled in on all of the "otherside" that my husband doesn't seem to see. Your newsletter is like a small island to me. I'm swimming around in a sea of turmoil. My husband keeps knocking me off the edge of the boat, then your "island" arrives and I know I'm not alone.

For about a week after HWA's death, my husband was rather subdued, and really a bit closer to normal. He studied less, slept more, and we actually spent some time working crossword puzzles together (frivolous thing for a member of God's church to do!). But now, he's back to his usual belligerent, chauvinistic un-self. I guess they came down pretty hard on them at the last Sabbath service. He's such a good robot.

I feel like this will never end, like there's no use in struggling with this marriage any more. But I'm so afraid that leaving him will only cause him to cling tighter to them. He gives them the best of himself his very essence, and I just get "leftovers" It seems like the harder I try, the more demands he makes. But, of course, all of our marital problems stem from "my attitude." All our attempts at communication go in circles: I don't love him, or I would look at what he believes and why. I cannot argue scripture. I don't know enough to. Besides, others have tried and failed.

So tell me, how does God really feel about this mockery of a marriage? I'm not claiming to be a Christian, but I do know right from wrong. Is it wrong for me to leave this man? I don't really expect an answer, but I just wanted to try to express the desperation I feel. How can anyone stand to spend their life like this?

I really feel sorry for HWA. Whether it's now or later, he will have to account for all the unhappiness he has caused. I wish I could be there to add my two cents worth.... Thanks for being on the receiving end of my letter. People around me don't really understand.

-Wife of WCG Member

I just finished watching The World Tomorrow. It was a review of Herbert Armstrong's life work. It occurred to me that ... Armstrong's strength was more in the exterior of the Gospel rather than the interior. The meaning of the Gospel for the interior life seemed to be hidden from his eyes. All the broken relationships that occurred between him and his colleagues and his family as well testify to the lack of understanding of the nature of God. What seemed to have escaped him was all that Jesus and the apostles taught in regard to meekness, humility, purity, and love. The major part of Jesus' teachings and also the apostles' concerns itself with the development of the interior life - the rest with the coming Kingdom. In closing let me quote from The Living Bible (Rom. 12:76), "Work happily together. Don't try to act big. Don't try to get into the good graces of important people, but enjoy the company of ordinary folks. And don't think you know it all."

Aussie Bishop Slams PT

Australian researcher John Buchner recently discussed the WCG with leading Anglican theologians, including John Stott and the Archbishop of Sydney, and commented on HWA's death on prime-time TV news. Bruce Wilson, Bishop of Canberra, offended at what is clearly a misuse of his work by The Plain Truth (PT), wrote Buchner of his disappointment. Bishop

Wilson has apparently concluded what many others have over the years - the Armstrong organization simply cannot be trusted. Here is Bishop Wilson's revealing letter:

22nd January, 1986

Dear Mr. Buchner:

Thank you for your letter dated 2nd January, 1986. I only returned from four weeks' leave yesterday so I was not able to reply until today.

Thank you for the photocopy of the article "Can GOD Survive in Australia?" from The Plain Truth magazine. I had not seen the article and in fact was unaware of its existence. Thank you also for your booklet "Armstrongism in Australia." I remember in my teens listening to Armstrong on Radio 2KY in Sydney. I can't say that I was ever tempted to join. I usually listened as an exercise in comic relief, but I can understand the serious issues lying behind the sort of thing you write about in your booklet.

I am very happy to give you a comment which you may like to include in your thesis. It is as follows:

In 1983 I published a book entitled Can God Survive in Australia? which examined the place and significance of Christianity in the lives of contemporary Australians. The thesis of the book, which is of course open to debate and further exploration, was solidly based in statistical material, the social sciences, Australian history and biography. The book quickly became a best seller. I have seen many, many reviews, a few of which were critical of the book but engaged it with integrity and respect.

The only scurrilous use of the book which I have seen in any kind of review or article on it appeared in an article with the same title as the book, "Can GOD Survive in Australia?", published by the Armstrong sect in their magazine The Plain Truth in January 1985.

The article in The Plain Truth magazine does not attempt to debate one single matter of fact or substance in the book, but with a sweeping assertion dismisses the enormously complicated socio-historical background to the current state of the Christian Church in Australia under the carpet of "religion is in decline in Australia because the institutional churches are corrupt" The Plain Truth article does not itself offer a single piece of factual evidence other than mere assertion for this crudely simplistic explanation of the decline of religious influence in Australia.

The Plain Truth article is not a review of my book. What it does is to take part of its evidence and arguments in order to support what can only be called sectarian propaganda. For example, The Plain Truth article makes no mention at all of my own suggestions for a solution to the declining influence of Christianity; it merely uses the analytical part of my thesis for its own propaganda purposes. Nor does the Plain Truth article mention the fact that I, the author, am myself a senior minister in a mainstream institutional Christian Church in Australia.

As always with publications by the Armstrong sect, the article is attractively written, interesting, provocative and aimed at a very general readership. One wonders whether that readership is capable of discerning the seductive illogicality in the seeming plausibility of the article's argument.

Yours sincerely,
Bishop Bruce Wilson

Sedliacik is Drawn into the McNair Fray

In our last issue we reported on the continuing Leona McNair versus Worldwide Church lawsuit - now in its seventh year. With HWA dead, WCG lawyers can be relieved that he, at least, will not be deposed. Nevertheless, the WCG's legal bills continue to mount as the McNair lawsuit remains unresolved.

The latest rounds in that battle have revolved around WCG writer Richard H. Sedliacik, a long-time church member and employee. Sedliacik, we have learned, worked on the June 25, 1979 issue of the Pastor's Report which contained the Rod Meredith comments that became the early basis of the McNair lawsuit. As that publication's actual editor (under HWA), Sedliacik was in a position to know almost all the key facts surrounding the publication of the offending article. Ironically, however, Sedliacik never testified during the McNair v. Worldwide trial.

Before that trial Sedliacik was grilled for hours by Armstrong's lawyers. But, no doubt, the answers he gave to their questions were not the answers they wanted to hear. Sedliacik refused to bend the facts to conform to the WCG's contrived defense and the church's attorneys decided it was best not to call him to the witness stand. However, Antony Stuart, Leona McNair's attorney, subpoenaed Sedliacik and hoped to see him testify. Surprisingly, at the court house at the last minute, Stuart decided against calling him to the stand. Why, we don't know. But some in the court building hallway observed and overheard (because of their loud tone of voice) how WCG lawyers were pressuring Sedliacik to get him "into line" and how, at one point, one ordered him to flee the court building.

Nevertheless, Leona McNair won at the 1984 trial and since then the WCG has been on its appellate quest to find a sympathetic judge. Tony Stuart, in the meantime, must have wondered what Sedliacik's testimony would have yielded. With the WCG unwilling to settle out of court and the possibility existing that some judge down the line could order a retrial, it is not surprising that Stuart decided to find out what Sedliacik really knew. A few weeks ago, Stuart subpoenaed Sedliacik to appear for a deposition.

Clearly, this was something the church lawyers feared. After a delay, the deposition was scheduled for March 18. Sedliacik again found himself under pressure to bend the facts. Every human being can only take so much. And Sedliacik - described by many former colleagues as a sensitive, sincere, and religious man - was being pushed to the brink. He may have also feared (and with good reason) that WCG leaders were quite capable of setting him up to be the "fall guy." Whatever his motivation, he took decisive action. Without the aid, assistance, prodding, coaxing, or cajoling of lawyers, Sedliacik put in writing everything of relevance that he knew about the June 25, 1979 Pastor's Report. He then had the 18-page statement notarized and sent copies of the declaration, along with copies of supporting documentation, to church lawyers Bruce Armstrong (no relation to HWA), Ralph Helge, Allan Browne, and - Tony Stuart, Leona McNair's attorney.

When Stuart arrived at his office on the morning of March 17, there was a message waiting for him:

Do not open package from Sedliacik. Call me first.
-Bruce Armstrong.

Unknown to Armstrong when he left that message was the fact that the package had already been opened. And Stuart, believing Armstrong had no right to order him not to read his own mail, went ahead and read the Sedliacik material.

The next morning, Richard Sedliacik and his wife Elva appeared at Stuart's office for the scheduled deposition. But before Stuart could begin the questioning, Bruce Armstrong and Marcy Burns (lawyers hired by the WCG) insisted on a private conference with the Sedliaciks. It lasted well over an hour. Armstrong then announced an objection to the deposition because of a possible conflict of interest on his part in representing both the WCG corporation and the Sedliaciks. (Isn't that something he should have considered earlier?) He then accused Stuart of "bad faith" in opening the package sent to him by Sedliacik and threatened that he would attempt to get Stuart and his firm disqualified from representing Leona McNair any further. To that threat Stuart angrily responded: "I'm sure you would love that to happen, but it will be a cold day in hell when it does!"

After a short exchange between the lawyers, the Sedliaciks were subjected to another "conference" with the church's lawyers. After two hours, Richard and Elva emerged. Richard commented that the situation had left him confused. He stated his name, and spelled it, for the record. No questions were asked or answered and the deposition was "recessed." Why didn't Sedliacik stay to answer questions? Rumor has it that during the last two-hour "conference" with the WCG lawyers, Sedliacik received a phone call. It was from WCG chief counsel Ralph Helge who ordered Sedliacik to leave.

Just dealing with lawyers can be a taxing experience for anyone. We understand Richard Sedliacik was so exhausted by the ordeal he felt it necessary to leave the state for an extended rest. The WCG's lawyers have not been able to locate him since. Nevertheless, they have been on the prowl.

On March 26, church lawyers went before Commissioner Christine B. Hickman and asked for, and got, a stay of plaintiff's discovery pending the bringing of a motion for disqualification. The WCG desperately wants Stuart and his firm thrown off the case. In pursuit of that, they intend to dispose Stuart on April 8 - a date obviously chosen for its harassment value. Stuart is scheduled to present his oral argument on the WCG appeal before the Ninth Circuit Court on April 9!

Richard Sedliacik's deposition is scheduled to resume on April 15. Will he appear and answer truthfully?

At the March 26 hearing before Commissioner Hickman, Stuart presented copies of letters written on March 20 by Sedliacik to lawyers Armstrong, Browne, and Helge. The letters to Browne and Armstrong were essentially identical to the letter to Helge which read:

Dear Mr. Helge:

This letter is to inform you that I do not desire to have Mr. Bruce Armstrong represent me at any upcoming deposition. Neither do I want you or anyone from your office to represent me, or any other lawyer for that matter. I will be representing myself. I have no intention of leaving another deposition until it is complete.

Jesus said "the truth would make us free" (John 8:32). My conscience tells me I must truthfully answer all questions asked of me. This, as you know, is God's will for anyone who claims to be a Christian (Exodus 20:16, Romans 13:8-10).

Sincerely,
Richard H. Sedliacik

Letters

I have been out of the WCG for over two years now and it is like a giant burden has been taken away. My marriage is again "on track" - as a matter of fact today is our 37th wedding anniversary.

We both enjoy the Ambassador Report.

-Ohio

We want to thank you and your staff for the work that you are doing. We were loyal members in the Worldwide Church of God for 23 years. We both served as Deacon and Deaconess. The time came when we could no longer put up with the hypocrisy, and then we began to question many of the teachings. We finally had to face the fact that we were merely following a man. We left WCG over 5 years ago. We appreciate the inside information we receive through your publication as our son and his family have remained in Worldwide.

-AR Reader

Thank you for continuing to send out the AR. I have been a member of WCG for 33 years, but for about the last eight or ten years I have known something was rotten in "the Work." So [I] have been working at proving all things, and you have really been a great help to me. I hope you can and will continue to send out the Report as more and more people are going to need it. I pass mine on to all who will read it.

-Texas

Thank you for helping me. For two years I have been trying to leave "the Church" but just didn't seem to be able to quit. Last month on Dec. 6 I left. After 21 years I just became so frustrated and nervous. I thought I was the only one until I read your Report and learned of so many others just like me. Thank you for your good work.

-Ohio

Several weeks ago I wrote my first letter to you which was kindly answered with several recent ARs. Although deeply stunned by these appalling revelations, my wife and I are very grateful to your organization for this release from the deceptions and bondage of the WCG....

Your publications have transformed our lives for the good. Although the discovery of truth can be painful, it does grant freedom. This is true. We hope the AR continues - that more families may be released from the slavery of the WCG as we have been.

-United Kingdom

After I received your ARs several years ago, I took them in to my local minister and asked a few questions. He was not too pleased with me and promptly kicked me out of the church. At first I was heartbroken. None of my "friends" would speak to me and I felt lost without the organizational comfort I had received from the WCG. It didn't take long for me to discover other compensations. My relationship with my husband (who'd never been in the WCG) improved dramatically. And I believe that I'm now much closer to God. I've also found new friends and new activities and no longer miss the WCG.

I feel very sorry for those members who are just staying in because they are afraid to leave the security of the organization. I hope that everyone in that situation can get their hands on a copy of the AR and find the courage to leave. I'm sure that many of these people would leave if they only knew how many of us have already left and found rewarding lives. If only one person in the WCG reads the AR and gets out then you've done a great job. That's why I continue to support the AR even though I've been out for several years. And that's why I hope you can continue to publish.

-Washington

In an Upcoming Issue...

Joe Tkach - who is he? And what kind of man is he? Is he a man of proven character, or another Herbert Armstrong? What is he like as a minister, as a family man, as an administrator? And what kind of people are his closest associates? A lot of our readers want to know the answers to those questions and so do we.

In a future issue we will be taking a look at the real Joe Tkach. In the mean time, if any of you can help provide us with information on the WCG's new hero, please let us know.

Until next time - our thanks for your continued support.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR36 August, 1986

The WCG Moves On

It is now over six months since Herbert W. Armstrong, the founder of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and Ambassador College, passed away, leaving his religious empire in the hands of former top aide Joseph W. Tkach. In the six months he has had at the helm, Tkach has moved quietly to solidify his power base and restructure the WCG hierarchy through the same musical chairs routine so often employed by his predecessor.

Evangelist Roderick Meredith, who, before HWA's death had expressed a strong interest in succeeding to the pastor general position, has been transferred out of Pasadena to head the Big Sandy, Texas campus of Ambassador College. He takes over the position long held by evangelist Leslie McCullough, whom HWA had once seriously considered naming as his successor. McCullough is to be transferred to South Africa to head church operations there. He will replace Dr. Roy McCarthy, who is being "retired."

In "the field," there have been numerous ministerial changes, but they have gone generally unreported in church publications. Said one of our sources, "Mr. Tkach does not want outsiders - or the ministry - to find out what's really going on."

While Meredith has been elated at his new responsibilities, there is some doubt as to the permanence of his position. Only one year ago there were plans to close the Texas campus entirely. But shortly after taking over as pastor general, Tkach announced that the college would seek continued state certification. There is some doubt, however, whether Ambassador (Big Sandy) will be able to meet state requirements and be allowed to continue granting degrees beyond 1988. Even Meredith has expressed serious doubts as to whether the Big Sandy college will survive.

On the proselytizing front, the WCG claims major increases in responses to its religious telecasts - now being done by ministers Richard Ames, David Albert, and David Hulme. But whether that mail increase has translated into financial increase is doubtful. The July 14 issue of The Worldwide News, in a tiny article on page 12, mentioned that the WCG has sold its feast site in Lake of the Ozarks, Missouri. It is difficult to believe that such valuable properties would be liquidated if the WCG's income was really growing. Actually, some insiders are saying the church is already having trouble paying its bills on time and that more assets will have to be liquidated before long.

As for the church's print media efforts, we can only imagine what HWA would think if he were alive to see what has become of his Plain Truth magazine. Down to a mere 29 pages, the PT has not only shrunk in size, but appears to be having difficulty finding new articles. The May issue, for instance, featured "Why Russia Will Not Attack America!" - a hopelessly naive article written by HWA and reprinted countless times in the last few decades. The PT also continues to serialize HWA's book Mystery of the Ages.

In charge of the WCG's editorial thrust is Dexter Faulkner, a nonordained member whose writing style is as dynamic as "Just one more thing" - the name of his regular Worldwide News column. Faulkner is editor of The Worldwide News, The Good News and Youth 86. He is also executive editor of the Plain Truth. While Herman Hoeh, as PT editor, outranks him, insiders say Hoeh spends little time on the PT and Faulkner is really "the brains" behind that publication as well.

Another writer worth special mention is Paul Kroll, who had an article in the June PT. Kroll, once the arch-liberal editor of the PT, was removed during the purges of the early '70s. But with the WCG badly in need of writing talent, Kroll has been rehired by the editorial department after recently rejoining Worldwide and, apparently, being deemed rehabilitated.

One aspect of the WCG's media-game plan has remained the same. As with his predecessor, the new pastor general is regularly shown in photos with the politically powerful, the rich, and the famous. Recent editions of church publications have had photos of Tkach with Richard Nixon, Warren Burger, Armand Hammer, Robert Dole, the Kirov Ballet, and Abbot Phra Thepsopon of the Wat Thai (Buddhist temple) in Los Angeles. Tkach has been traveling extensively throughout the U.S. speaking before WCG congregations. (Some Pasadena church members have complained that Tkach has only given one or two rather ordinary sermons in Pasadena since HWA's death.) Tkach has also begun taking the kind of foreign tours HWA was so fond of. The planned trip to Russia was cancelled, but he has gone to England, Europe, and Africa. Of course, those tours provide opportunities for the PR photos so dearly loved by WCG members.

Since taking over, Tkach has been careful to give HWA honored treatment in all WCG publications, telecasts, and sermons. There are even plans to put out an "official" biography of HWA. But some insiders are predicting that the attention being given to HWA's memory will soon be reduced and Tkach will be pushed further and further into the limelight. Other likely changes to look out for are a change in the format of "The World Tomorrow" telecast (more news, less prophecy) and a possible phasing-out of the Plain Truth magazine.

Will there be doctrinal changes? So far Tkach has been careful to walk in HWA's footsteps. For instance, in his March 24 Worldwide News editorial, Tkach parroted HWA's old hard line against women wearing makeup. But some insiders are saying they see some doctrinal changes coming in the future. One teaching the WCG may have to alter is its doctrine on the imminence of Christ's return. While HWA told his followers for decades that "the Work" was in the "gun lap," some top WCG ministers have privately stated they believe the end-time work may have thirty or more years to go!

Don't look for too many changes between now and the Feast of Tabernacles in October. But once Tkach has presided over his first fall festival as pastor general, anything can happen.

The New WCG - A Church at the Crossroads by Brenda Denzler

Almost every individual who has followed the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) through Ambassador Report or through personal contact with member relatives has, at one time or another, asked himself what it is that keeps WCG members fastened to their church with its rigid hierarchical control, administrative abuses, doctrinal ambiguities, and 50-year history of failed prophecies. Not only do many WCG-watchers wonder about how that organization has managed to survive, but many wonder about the future of friends and relatives still clinging to that dystopian church.

As a former WCG member now majoring in religion at a U.S. university, I have in recent months come across a number of sociological studies that I feel may provide us with significant insights. I suspect it may prove liberating to some to discover that, despite the unique character of the WCG experience, it is in some ways a very predictable experience that clearly fits into the spectrum of known social behavior. By looking at the way belief, commitment, and resolution of contradictory information have all played a part in making Worldwide what it is today, we may be able to gain an insight into what it will be tomorrow.

Defining the WCG Experience

In August 1933, after a long and heated exchange of opinions, Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) made his final break from the Oregon State Conference of the Church of God which had ordained him to the ministry only two years earlier. Armstrong's search for the "one true church" had led him to the little-known Sabbath-keeping group, though he claimed that his association was never more than tentative because the church did not possess all the important characteristics that he believed necessary in the true body of Christ. Apparently two of the more important qualities that the group lacked were extensive public visibility and great power (Armstrong, pp. 308-314).

Within months of the break, and with the support of only about 20 people, Armstrong began The World Tomorrow radio broadcast and The Plain Truth magazine for "the MASS-proclaiming of His Gospel" so that "GOD'S WORK at last could come to life after centuries of sleeping, and go forth in mighty power to all the world" (Armstrong, pp. 450- 451, emphasis his).

From the outset, HWA's exegetical style was to piece together scattered biblical texts in order to proclaim with unblushing certainty the fates of individuals, Western society, and the world in general. In the final analysis, every prediction revolved around the unimaginable horrors that would occur in an imminent Tribulation, with only the few who were faithful and obedient to God's word being protected in a place of safety. Such predictions were not designed simply to inform or warn the public, but rather to fascinate and frighten the unsuspecting person into the waiting arms of the tiny Radio (later to become Worldwide) Church of God, which was fast developing into "God's only true church" under Armstrong's leadership. The literature and broadcasts proved to be very successful in increasing church membership and, not incidentally, the church's financial base.

What was actually occurring in the pages of The Plain Truth and the radio broadcast was a massive effort in the name of God to radically transform the way people see and understand the world - their reality. In varying degrees, mainstream religion provides a similar kind of experience by reinterpreting selected ideas and assumptions of one's subjective reality and building upon that reality. New religious vocabularies help converts to understand the present and to imagine the future in new ways.

In Worldwide, however, the process of conversion demands the near-total disintegration of the structure of one's previous "reality" and the complete re-construction of a "reality" which radically re-interprets not only the present and the future, but the past as well. Peter L. Berger and Thomas Luckmann, in their ground-breaking book The Social Construction of Reality, call this radical resocialization alternation.

Alternation requires that a person become strongly identified with a significant individual, such as an Armstrong, who can explain the alternative perception of reality and who will encourage complete identification with and activity within the group. As a result,

The alternating individual disaffiliates himself from his previous world and the plausibility structure that sustained it, bodily if possible, mentally if not... and thus is protected from... potential reality-disrupting influence... [O]ne must now be very careful with whom one talks. People and ideas that are discrepant with the new definitions of reality are systematically avoided (Berger and Luckmann, p. 159).

The success of the Worldwide Church of God (as with other groups with utopian expectations) has depended on its ability to sustain this redefinition of reality and the exclusivity of commitment among its members. As Rosabeth Moss Kanter states in her book Commitment and Community: Communes and Utopias in Sociological Perspective:

...the problem of commitment is crucial... [A community] must vie with the outside for the members' loyalties. It must ensure high member involvement.... It must often contravene the earlier socialization of its members in securing obedience to new demands. It must calm internal dissension.... The essence of such a community is in strong connections and mutual obligations (Kanter, p. 65).

Successful commitment-building in such communities is a process in which a person's "chance to make other choices or pursue other options" (Kanter, p. 70) is decreased by the demands of the community.

The policy of the WCG since its earliest years has been to promote itself as the sole arbiter of truth while at the same time denouncing all other understandings and practices as inferior, if not Satanic. People who accept the Armstrong "reality" often make irrevocable sacrifices. Families and careers may be evaluated by new standards, be found wanting, and be rejected in order to win the acceptance of the church and gain protection from the Tribulation, direction and purpose in this life, and life itself in the hereafter. The magnitude of the sacrifice(s) made tends to determine a person's likelihood of remaining committed to the WCG after upsetting events or information.

All of these factors - belief, alternation, sacrifice, and commitment - are heavily involved when anyone joins Worldwide or when they remain committed to it despite developments that others would consider logical reasons for ending such commitment.

Commitment and Disconfirmation in the WCG

In the 1950s three sociologists from the University of Minnesota investigated continued commitment to belief systems and proselytizing activity in the wake of events that disproved a group's key beliefs - in other words, after disconfirmation. They wrote in When Prophecy Fails:

Suppose an individual believes something with his whole heart; suppose further that he has a commitment to this belief, that he has taken irrevocable actions because of it; finally, suppose that he is presented with evidence, unequivocal and undeniable evidence, that his belief is wrong: what will happen? This individual will frequently emerge, not only unshaken, but even more convinced of the truth of his beliefs than ever before (Festinger, et. al., p. 3).

The dissonance (psychological conflict) that exists in a member of Worldwide when original expectations and final fact do not agree must be reduced or eliminated if he or she is to remain within the group. The more someone has made irrevocable life changes to conform to the expectations of Worldwide, the harder it becomes to reject the disconfirmed belief system. Instead, the person may try to ignore the fact that disconfirmation has occurred. He or she may attempt to reinterpret the disconfirmed belief, to change the behaviors required by the belief, or even to discover "new" information that will increase the overall harmony of the belief system so as to make the point of dissonance relatively less noticeable (Festinger, et. al., pp. 26-27).

But whatever explanation is made it is still by itself not sufficient. The dissonance is too important... the believers still know that the prediction was false.... But there is a way in which the remaining dissonance can be reduced. If more and more people can be persuaded that the system of belief is correct, then clearly it must, after all, be correct (Festinger, et. al., p. 28, emphasis theirs).

Members may also make further predictions in an effort to get one right and finally receive confirming evidence that not even the skeptical can deny (Festinger, et. al., pp. 214-215).

All of these ways of coping with disconfirmation require strong mutual support within the WCG community. At some point, however, the disconfirming evidence may become so overwhelming that belief itself must be rejected, whether on an individual basis or en masse (Festinger, et. al., p. 12).

Armstrong's major failures as a prophet go back to World War II. He had already failed to make accurate predictions about the course and conduct of the war, but those predictions were fairly minor when compared with the overarching prediction of an imminent and horrifying time of global trial (the Tribulation) which was to be followed by the Second Coming of Jesus Christ. During the early 1940s, this scenario was supposedly being played out within the context of World War II.

The undeniable cessation of hostilities in 1945 without benefit of a returned Jesus presented Armstrong and his followers with a dilemma: how to account for this disconfirmation of their most central prophecies - prophecies that made membership in the church an absolute imperative if one wanted to escape the unspeakable terrors to come. Rather than admit church teaching about the Tribulation and the Second Coming to have been in error, the Radio Church of God proclaimed "new" insight that brought the entire system of belief back into the realm of the believable once again.

God had granted the world a reprieve in order to more adequately warn it of the impending Satan-inspired horrors and the subsequent wrath of God against the disobedient. The words of one 1950s saucer cult enthusiast after her failure to be picked up by extraterrestrials might as easily have come from a member of the Radio Church of God in the late 1940s: "All I know is that the plan has never gone astray. We have never had a plan change" (Festinger, et. al., p. 166).

By redefining expectations without acknowledging that redefinition was occurring, disconfirming events could be transformed into amazing evidences of God's continuing plan for "the Work" and the world. In the face of such unexpected yet exciting events, and with the nagging yet unacknowledged fact of the failure of the original predictions, the entire organization could be expected to have embarked upon a renewed effort to "warn the world" and, not incidentally, offer a "way out" for those individuals who were among the "elect" chosen to escape so fearful a Tribulation.

Within less than a decade, the Radio Church of God extended its broadcasting efforts into Europe, where new members were brought into the fold by implanting the same fear of the Tribulation and extending the same assurances of safety in exchange for absolute commitment to the Armstrong organization. The founding of Ambassador College for the training of additional WCG ministers indicates that Armstrong's message was in fact designed to attract as many people as possible to church membership, not just to warn them in a nonproprietary way. Finally, the little Radio Church of God became the Worldwide Church of God, laying claim to the widespread visibility and power that Armstrong had envisioned for the church that "Jesus" was building.

By the 1960s Armstrong's views on the Tribulation and the Second Coming of Christ, which had become linchpins of church teaching, had solidified once more into definite, time-linked prophecies. The popular booklet 1975 in Prophecy!, generously illustrated with bleak sketches of the Tribulation, became a basic statement of the church's new timetable for end-time events, and WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse became the church's main prophet-of-dire-consequence for slackers and intellectuals who doubted God would heed Armstrong's prophetic timetable.

1972 dawned for the WCG with a breath of expectation followed by a long sign of relief mixed with consternation at the failure of the long-dreaded Tribulation to materialize so that Christ could return in 1975. The phenomenal growth of the organization had begun to slow noticeably since the death of Loma Armstrong (also unpredicted) in 1967. The death of his wife gave Armstrong greater freedom to travel around the world with his message and the slowing growth rate did not seem to dampen his drive to gain recognition and respect for the religious empire he had built.

With son Garner Ted in the U.S. maintaining his strong leadership role in the church, the elder Armstrong bestowed lavish gifts upon the great and near-great as he supposedly "warned" them of the coming intervention of God in human affairs. For this audience, however, Armstrong's message often became merely an admonition about a "strong hand from someplace" instead of the threatening predictions about a Satan-inspired Tribulation and a wrathful Christ that had been so instrumental in building the church. The construction of the Ambassador Auditorium and the founding of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation as the specifically nonreligious arm of the church presented members with further distractions from the disappointments of the early '70s. Through the church newspaper, co-worker letters, and weekly sermons, members were constantly updated on the momentous developments in "the Work."

However, prophetic disconfirmations, the widespread and unconcealable moral lapses within all ranks of the ministry, and several long-standing doctrinal disputes combined to create an overwhelming dissonance for many members and ministers that could no longer be dispelled by the rationalizations and glosses of the leaders. Armstrong's high-level meetings and the cultural events in the Ambassador Auditorium could not disguise the essential frailty of the "reality" that Armstrong so boldly proclaimed as the only way of salvation. Forty years after its birth, the Worldwide Church of God began to seriously fragment.

Since 1974 the WCG has had to concentrate more of its energies on holding on to current members. Armstrong presented his near-death in 1977 as a miraculous, Christlike resurrection, possibly in order to reinstate himself as the focus of members' admiration and loyalty, a position that had become the premature inheritance of his evangelist son, the charismatic Garner Ted. The end result of Armstrong's return to center stage was the ouster of his son in 1978. Hundreds of members left the WCG with him.

Perhaps the single greatest impetus for reinforced commitment to the WCG since 1972 was the receivership imposed on the church by the State of California in 1979. Most members rallied quickly and without suspicion to ministers' impassioned claims that the church was under attack by Satan-inspired forces. The church-state issue was largely useless, however, in prompting new efforts toward proselytizing for the Armstrong/WCG way of life.

In the seven years since the lawsuit, Armstrong's declining health and vitality were matched by a decline in effective proselytizing. The entire organization seemed to be waiting for something - anything - to rekindle the sense of urgency that had marked the church's first 40 years. The Tribulation and the Second Coming of Christ, though still central to the WCG's reason for existence, had been unmistakably disconfirmed and were by this time becoming mere abstractions in an indefinite future.

The final blow to the original Tribulation-Second Coming scenario came with Armstrong's death this year. By the end of January the venerated founder and his exclusivist doctrines had been seriously disconfirmed and threatened to become ineffectual in maintaining the commitment of many members.

Not one year before HWA's death, evangelist Gerald Waterhouse told a Florida congregation that should God let HWA die, it would be proof that HWA was a false apostle. Waterhouse is a textbook example of renewed commitment following the undeniable disconfirmation that took place upon HWA's death. An analysis of the transcript of a recent Waterhouse sermon (Pasadena, March 1, 1986) provides us with indications of how the WCG leadership can reinterpret old beliefs so as to rationalize Armstrong's death and try to offset the wavering commitment it has caused in numerous WCG members.

God's Deception and Church Momentum

For most members, continued affiliation with the WCG will require transferring their loyalty from Armstrong to the new pastor general, Joseph Tkach. Waterhouse has lost no time in promoting that transfer in his sermons. From relative obscurity, Tkach has emerged as the WCG's sleeping giant of destiny. Waterhouse views Tkach as a type of the biblical Joshua who led the people of Israel into the Promised Land. HWA has become, of course, a type of Moses, who died just short of the goal. Loyalty to Tkach is now equivalent to loyalty to HWA, which of course has always been equivalent to loyalty to God.

Waterhouse attaches cosmic significance to things that seem to "key in" Tkach as virtually predestined to follow in HWA's footsteps. The meaning of Tkach's name, the date of HWA's last co-worker letter naming Tkach as his successor, the ubiquitous time cycles, and Tkach's "right lineage" as a street-wise South Chicagoan are just a few of the abstruse matters that Waterhouse finds profoundly significant.

Of particular interest is the way in which Waterhouse presents Tkach's sterling qualities against a backdrop of HWA's shortcomings - shortcomings that were never mentioned while HWA still lived.

According to Waterhouse, HWA's unfortunate tendency to choose men for the ministry according to their talent, ability and charisma led God to permit Satan to stir up the 1979 confrontation with the State of California so that Armstrong could have clear evidence that "disloyal liberals" and "intellectuals" were on the "team" and had to be removed.

Unlike HWA, who was "always at the top of the Work, not down on the grass-roots levels," Tkach has been at the grass-roots for 20 years, which means that he will not need to rely upon counsel from others, as Waterhouse assures us the autocratic Armstrong did. Nor will Tkach's contribution be frustrated any longer by having to take counsel from HWA. As pastor general he won't "have to go to Mr. Armstrong... and wait the time to get the information there. Mr. Armstrong's time was so divided...." As a result of not having to wait for HWA, God, through Tkach, will be able to "accelerate all... departments in a very rapid manner." Over and over again, Waterhouse emphasizes that under the leadership of Tkach, the Work can now "multiply," "magnify," "mushroom," and "accelerate quickly" in a "phenomenal" way.

Perhaps part of the reason for Waterhouse's projection of growth has to do with the planning that can be done now that HWA's whims no longer dictate the daily operation of the organization. Notice this quote (again, taken directly from the Ambassador Report transcript of the March 1 Waterhouse sermon):

Just like in the television area. Mr. Armstrong used to write his own script out. Mr. Omasta did not know when Mr. Armstrong was coming, so they put even a little TV camera out there to let them know when he drove up. They didn't know what he was going to speak on when he got there, so they couldn't prepare weeks in advance. Now they have three men. They can be assigned subjects weeks in advance... and the television crew has the time to back them up, to get back-up material for the telecast, so that it can be done so professionally!

According to Waterhouse, the ministerial services department under Armstrong was characterized by an atmosphere of suspicion because "the ministerial services had been through several administrations and turned off." Tkach, though initially faced with rejection when put in charge of the department several years ago, "brought them out."

All of these observations, however, are retrospectives for Waterhouse, who had been a major proponent of the belief that HWA's death would never be permitted by God, else HWA would be revealed as a false apostle. In trying to reconcile this major disconfirmation, Waterhouse in effect describes God as a deceitful manipulator of a chosen people who would be incapable of maintaining their momentum and continuing to "do the work" if they were to be told the truth about God's plans.

Jesus Christ could not enlarge my understanding to even think that Mr. Armstrong was going to have to die.... He had to keep my momentum strong in supporting Mr. Armstrong, to be transferred over to Mr. Tkach immediately! Once you lose momentum, it's very difficult to regenerate that.... See, he has to keep piecemealing it until we're there!... God only can show you what he knows is good. He cannot show you the end result.

The Future of the WCG

Belief in the Tribulation and the Second Coming of Christ has not died in the WCG. The presentation of Tkach as a type of Joshua leading Israel into the Promised Land would seem to indicate that the immediate millennial hopes of the WCG are not likely to change with Armstrong's passing. Indeed, if the Tkach-Joshua type is taken very seriously, the eschatological expectations of the church can only become more intense, more immediate.

In the original formulation of the Tribulation idea, one purpose of the place of safety was to escape the suffering and death that would overtake 90% of the world's population, especially disloyal members. Suffering and death were clearly undesirable. But suffering has been getting new, though contradictory, attention in the church. A year ago the Ambassador Report reported on a sermon by Tkach in which he alluded to the suffering he feels WCGers will soon have to endure while "perform[ing] the job to which God has called us to accomplish. And believe me," said Tkach, "we are going to suffer!"

While an exaggerated fear of persecution might, to some degree, offset the disconfirming fact of Armstrong's death and help to keep members committed to the organization, it is not impossible that paranoia about persecution could well become a self-fulfilling prophecy, driving the church toward the very suffering Tkach is preparing his followers to face.

To add complexity to the picture, since Armstrong's passing, death seems to have gained a special value in Waterhouse's thinking. Waterhouse rationalizes that God had to let HWA die as a means of keeping him safe from the Tribulation. "Now he's already put in some very safe place - the grave. So Mr. Armstrong is safe. He'll never have to go through [the Tribulation]." Will the WCG's legendary "place of safety" dogma soon be modified to include death as a reasonable way of being saved out of the Tribulation? According to Waterhouse:

"Mr. Armstrong knew it was going to be terrifying. And he hoped we'd qualify to escape. If you remain loyal to [this church], you will. Either through death, or in a place of safety.... If you die in the faith, you are protected from the Tribulation...."

Death is now - at least to a degree - a friend of some in the WCG. When combined with the WCG's heavily misanthropic view of human existence, this development could foreshadow a time of real physical danger to WCG members from within rather than from without the organization. Whether this danger will be enough to break the grip of fear that holds many WCGers in the church remains to be seen. If historical precedent is any indicator, there is little hope that this will happen.

Almost since the beginning of the radio broadcast and The Plain Truth magazine, events have disconfirmed WCG pronouncements. Until the last 20 years those disconfirming events were met with renewed - and very successful - efforts to do "the Work." The church gained membership, visibility and power.

In recent years, though, the cumulative effect of the disconfirmations has produced a different response. Proselytizing, though pursued in innovative programs (as in the PT newsstand program), has failed to win the same kind of response from the public, and mounting internal problems and defections have, to a degree, caused the WCG to retreat into itself with a "hold the line" mentality.

Now, with Armstrong's death, the WCG stands at a crossroads. If indeed the new pastor general is able to vigorously warn the world about the horrifying punishments soon to be inflicted on the world for not living according to WCG precepts, the campaign might draw new people into commitment to the church.

If, however, the leadership must concentrate its attention on consolidating its power over a base of increasingly uncertain and fearful members, the WCG may well close in even more upon itself in a putrifying paranoia leading to total isolation or worse.

In large measure the future of the WCG depends on the ability of Pastor General Tkach to reinforce current commitment to the church without overdoing the persecution theme that could make the church appear undesirably paranoid to potential new converts. Furthermore, Tkach's "street-wise" image may have to be refined if he is to truly, as Waterhouse claims, "follow in the footsteps" of HWA by learning to execute the strong-arm tactics coated with charisma that made Herbert Armstrong an end-time apostle and Worldwide the "one and only true church of God."

HWA Remembered (Part I)

With Herbert Armstrong dead and buried, some readers might prefer to forget about him entirely. But during the last few months, in reorganizing and cleaning out our old HWA files, we came across a number of items we think deserve attention.

One question that has frequently been put to us by our readers is, "What name does the W stand for in Herbert W. Armstrong?" Actually, it doesn't stand for any name. Many who knew him personally say that HWA didn't have a middle name. He adopted the W at some point (at least as far back as 1915) simply to add dignity, dimension or dressing to what he apparently thought was too ordinary a name. And why the W rather than some other letter? We really don't know. But former WCG minister Gary Arvidson has theorized:

"First of all, as an advertising man HWA must have known that of all the letters in the alphabet W is visually the largest, phonetically the longest, and with its three sharp angles, symbolically assertive. Second, W was the middle initial of Henry Ward Beecher, one of the most famous and influential preachers in American history. I have wondered, frankly, if HWA was not unconsciously or even consciously modeling himself after Beecher."

Henry Ward Beecher was indeed one of the most famous preachers of the last century. He had a large following, was rich and politically influential, traveled widely abroad, claimed to be a friend of U.S. presidents and European royalty, constantly sought the public limelight, has been called an opportunist and hypocrite, and made national headlines when he was put on trial for adultery in 1875. David R. Robinson, a devoted student of British and American history, and the author of a revealing book on HWA, told us:

"Henry Ward Beecher and Herbert Armstrong had much in common. The definitive biography of Beecher is Henry Ward Beecher - An American Portrait by Paxton Hibben. That biography, which can still be found in many libraries, first appeared in 1927, shortly before Herbert embarked on his career in religion. I really think Herbert read that book, or at least knew of Beecher's life story. There are just so many similarities in their two lives."

One book that offers valuable insights into factors in American history that helped mold HWA's religious outlook is volume one of The Americans trilogy (The Colonial Experience) by renowned historian Daniel Boorstein. Part one on the Puritans and part two on the Quakers left your editor convinced that in many of the doctrines and customs of those two highly influential Anglo-American religious movements one can clearly see the precursors of much of the teaching and spirit of the Worldwide Church of God. Space here does not permit a detailed examination of the many connections. However, readers may wish to, at least, check out p. 52 where Boorstein recounts the history of Benjamin Franklin's "Plain Truth, one of his shrewdest political pamphlets. Neither pro nor anti-Quaker, the pamphlet gave a full, fair and even prophetic picture of the colony...."

Actually, HWA never hid the fact that he had studied Franklin's life (Armstrong Autobiography, p. 29) nor that Franklin's Plain Truth was an inspiration for his own. From reading about Franklin, HWA was surely aware that the American patriot was not only irreligious and sexually promiscuous, but an astute politician who rose to great prominence and power in a state founded by Quakers - the very religion into which HWA had been born, and a people with many of the unbending "be ye separate from the world" characteristics of Worldwide today (cf. Boorstein, pp. 33 -69). One can only wonder to what degree HWA saw in Franklin a pattern for his own future.

There are undoubtedly many other authors that had a profound influence on HWA. (See Robert Geringer's article "Herbert Armstrong's Religious Roots" in our 1977 issue for some examples of HWA's noncrediting of sources and outright plagiarisms.) One author we have wondered about in this regard is the French philosopher Henri Bergson (1859-1941). While we have never read or heard of HWA quoting Bergson by name, a number of HWA's "unique" teachings seem to have been anticipated by Bergson. For instance, Bergson's philosophy of static and dynamic religions, his view that the laws of physics and chemistry would never adequately explain life, the sharp distinction he drew between human mind and animal brain, his criticism of intellect and his preference for intuition, and his view that the world is a "machine for the making of gods" all predate HWA's later "discoveries" of virtually identical "new truths." Not only that, Bergson's postulation of two types of morality: closed (rote or instinctive conduct which conforms to prevailing conventions) and open ("a preferred or ideal form of behavior motivated or directed by no one but the free individual," "guided by inspiration and intuition," and "best exemplified in the life of heroes and saints" - Sakakian on Bergson) may well have served HWA as an intellectual justification for his own lifelong moral duplicity.

Bergson, considered by some as the most popular living philosopher of the early part of this century, won the 1927 Nobel prize in literature. A librarian at the Portland Public Library, where HWA did so much of his early "research" on evolution and religion (Autobiography, p. 289), told us that, not only would that library have obtained Bergson's works as they were published, but their catalog lists the 1911 and 1920 English editions of Bergson's Creative Evolution as still in their library. And a librarian inspection of the 1920 edition showed that it was acquired in 1921.

Recall that HWA's Autobiography gives the summer of 1925 as the start of his evolution studies (p. 288) and 1926 as the start of his systematic Bible studies. In 1927 the Plain Truth was conceived and a dummy copy produced (p. 506) and in 1928 HWA embarked on his career as a preacher (pp. 346-351) - all during an extended period when he and his family were going through "extreme financial hardship" (p. 351 and p. 506).

Admittedly, the evidence connecting HWA to Beecher and Bergson is still circumstantial. But the connection between HWA and author Bruce Barton is substantiated by HWA having mentioned on numerous occasions that he read Barton's book, The Man Nobody Knows. Here is an excerpt from that best-seller which appeared in 1925:

Jesus as Advertising Man

He would be a national advertiser today, I am sure, as he was the greatest advertiser of his own day. Take any one of the parables, no matter which - you will find that it exemplifies all the principles on which advertising textbooks are written.

1. First of all they are marvellously condensed, as all good advertising must be. Jesus hated prosy dullness.

2. His language was marvellously simple - a second great essential. All the greatest things in human life are one-syllable things - love, joy, hope, child, wife, trust, faith, God.

3. Sincerity glistened like sunshine through every sentence he uttered. The advertisements which persuade people to act are written by men who have an abiding respect for the intelligence of their readers, and a deep sincerity regarding the merits of the goods they have to sell.

4. Finally he knew the necessity for repetition and practiced it. No important truth can be impressed upon the minds of any large number of people by being said only once.

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that HWA's life course, with its self-aggrandizement, distorted self-history, moral debauchery, and manipulation of the lives of thousands was far more a matter of purposeful and knowing choice than many have allowed themselves previously to believe.

GTA Update - The Leopard's Kept His Spots

For a number of years after Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA) started the Church of God, International (CGI), it seemed to us that most WCG members might be better off in CGI. With all its problems, CGI still seems less fanatical, more open about its beliefs, far less (if at all) paranoid about "the world," and has a membership that generally seems more interested in following the Bible than any one man. It has not been unusual for the Report to receive letters such as this:

I would like to point out something, if you don't mind my mentioning this to you. In one issue of the AR, you refer to members of the CGI as Garner Ted Armstrong's "followers." I was a WCG member from 1965 to 1982, and decided to join the CGI in 1982 and am currently a member. I joined the church because it is adhering to sound biblical doctrine unlike the WCG (witness the primacy of Peter doctrine and the 144,000 doctrine currently taught by WCG). I am on the local council of my local church. Believe it or not, about 99% of the members I have spoken to (and there are more than 40 in the church in the local area) do not feel they are in the church to follow GTA. They are there, if you will "in spite of him." As long as GTA is honest enough to preach the Gospel and be true to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ who alone is the Chief Apostle (Jesus, not GTA), we will remain in this church. We do not at all feel that we are the "one and only true church" by any means. Not at all. God's church is made up of those who obey God and are led by His Holy Spirit and are helping to spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

So just a few lines to let you know that we faithfully read your report, and also to let you know that we are not "followers" of GTA.

-California

But not everyone who has joined CGI has found what they are looking for. For instance, one ex-CGI member wrote us a long letter complaining that CGI pays its top brass too much and its field ministers little or nothing, that the organization tends toward nepotism, that CGI's board is too often bypassed by GTA who appears more interested in flying the church airplane here and there to enjoy the physical pleasures of life than in spiritual matters, and the church's financial statements still do not provide members with an adequate representation of who is getting what. The man concluded:

Where did the CGI learn the church business? From Herbert W. Armstrong and the WCG!... GTA once said that people accuse him of going down the same road that his father did. How does he answer them? "Give me 40 years and then make a judgment." We've had no difficulty making a judgment, and it didn't take us 40 years.

-Texas

Another ex-CGI member wrote us:

While our daughter worked for CGI in Tyler, Texas, God opened her eyes to see GTA and his cult for what they are. When Ron Dart told her not to spend time answering letters that didn't have money in them, she woke up. That helped open our eyes too, thank God!

-California

For a number of years, GTA was very clearly distancing himself from many of his father's doctrinal and administrative errors. (For instance, see his article "Who Is Your Authority?" in the July-August, 1984 issue of The International News.) Not only that, in many public utterances, and especially in private, GTA was quite willing to not only reveal his father's worst side, but made it clear his father had adopted a number of outright heresies.

But with his father's death early this year, GTA abruptly reversed his position. In a series of articles, letters, and sermons, GTA has painted his father as a great Christian who discovered great truths, did great works, and who will undoubtedly be in God's Kingdom. Virtually the entire February-March issue of The International News was dedicated to praising HWA and promoting GTA as his spiritual heir! The church paper reprinted a Jan. 18 Pasadena Star-News article in which GTA was quoted:

Garner Ted Armstrong... said Friday he would be leading his father's church now if the two had met recently before his father died.... "And there would have been a different assignment of a successor" to his father's position.... Garner Ted Armstrong said he considered himself the "spiritual leader" of the church... "sooner or later a church has to identify with a person."

Also reprinted was an AP story that appeared in the January 18 Los Angeles Herald Examiner. It quoted GTA as saying:

"I believe that I am my father's successor, spiritually speaking.... I fully intend to follow in his footsteps...."

Some who know Ted say he was clearly making a play for WCG members, and that when the big membership switch from WCG to CGI didn't materialize, Ted was astonished. But even more astonished were some of the members of CGI who couldn't believe their eyes when they read Ted's new praise of HWA.

One CGI member, Steven Collins (who, because of his outstanding research, writing, and speaking skills was a likely ministerial prospect) sent CGI headquarters a very blunt letter (dated March 5) saying that HWA had been guilty of "Deep, chronic hypocrisy.... Deep, chronic idolatry.... Deep, chronic Phariseeism...." that had caused untold misery, hardship, suffering, and spiritual destruction in the lives of thousands. Collins wrote that HWA had "taken the WCG and molded it into a persecuting, oppressive, autocratic, deceived and Pharisical body." With numerous scriptural quotations cited as authority, he pleaded that CGI not give "any more favorable memorialization of HWA."

In a curt letter dated March 27, GTA personally answered Collins:

Your letter is positively quixotic. However, instead of accepting your invitation to "tilt at windmills," I will merely respond by saying that I have received your letter, as I am sure all the others to whom you may have addressed it have, and will give it the attention it deserves.

I do not desire to create "straw men" and attack them viciously, nor to engage in "tilting at windmills," so will not dignify your letter with lengthy disclaimer.

GTA then went on to claim the media "misquoted" him. Collins, in a letter dated April 8, responded that had Ted really been misquoted, the newspaper articles should not have been reprinted without a disclaimer.

We think GTA's short letter is very revealing. First of all, it shows that Ted's communication skills are not simply limited to playing out those old roles he does so well - the all-knowing prophet of Yahweh, the jet-set executive, the honky-tonk lush - he can also turn out the kind of prose you'd expect from a foppish Fifth Avenue fairy.

And what chutzpa! (Let's not even comment on his telling an audience to turn over 40 years of their lives before they could make a judgment on him.) He just wouldn't think of setting up "straw men to attack them viciously." Here is a guy who has built a thirty-year broadcasting career on essentially one rhetorical device - the "straw man." Yet he apparently expected Collins to believe he wrote this thing with a straight face.

But the truly amazing thing is how he - like his father before him - will occasionally throw out a bit of real truth here and there, smugly confident it seems, that his audience is too stupid to catch on. Those who were around HWA for even a few years will recall one of his oddities. He would tell an audience: "I have noticed, brethren, that when men criticize and condemn others for some sin, they themselves are ALWAYS guilty of the SAME SIN!!!"

Then a few moments later he'd be condemning all of the western world for lawlessness, idolatry, and sexual perversion. Now compare to GTA.

Nowhere in his letter does he even refer to one of the many scriptures cited by Collins. No, such things are "quixotic," foolish "tilting at windmills"! And in such truly honest utterances we see the real Garner Ted Armstrong. Students of literature will immediately see what GTA was not so cryptically saying. The triple reference was to Cervantes' Don Quixote, to many, the world's greatest comedic novel and one that represents (like the word "quixotic" itself) a very precise idea: that those who pursue lofty ideals, who are enthusiastic visionaries, who seek after "the impossible dream" - are FOOLS! This was the message of GTA's letter to Collins, and anyone who has ever really studied GTA's life knows it is also the message of his life. For the brief moment it took GTA to write those lines, he was, whether he intended it or not, being honest and was revealing his true philosophy.

Ted's short letter to Collins ended with a subtle suggestion that Collins not return to CGI - a suggestion Collins has wisely heeded.

The CGI has many members we consider very fine people, and our friends. We hope that at least some of them will take enough interest in their church, and themselves, to check into Collins' allegations. He may be contacted by writing to Steven Collins, 8500 101st Street Circle, Bloomington, MN 55438.

Hoops Plans Feast at Tahoe

Steven Collins is not the only one to recently part company with CGI. Robert Hoops, a former WCG minister affiliated with CGI for a number of years, has, in the last few months, been pushed out of that organization also.

Hoops' difficulties with CGI apparently began when CGI headquarters in Tyler, Texas, in the centralized-government style of HWA, issued a directive to its ministers around the country on how contributions from those at the Feast of Tabernacles are to be handled. Tyler stated that CGI headquarters would get all contributions and would unilaterally decide on how all such monies would be spent. Hoops, who coordinated CGI's feast in northern California last year, felt Tyler's new demands were both unbiblical and high-handed.

He strongly believes (1) that members have a right to designate how their contributions are to be used, (2) that there should be more sharing of "second tithe" between members so that the less affluent are able to enjoy the week more fully, and (3) that the feast should be more of a festive family vacation than a way for church headquarters and some top ministers to expand their income. Hoops also has strong feelings about local ministerial autonomy as regards what should or should not be allowed said from the pulpit. (Keep in mind that, with only a few exceptions, CGI's field ministers are volunteers serving without salary, and who work full-time at regular jobs to support their families.)

There were a few sharp exchanges of views in letters between Hoops and Tyler with Hoops' "credentials" then being pulled by CGI.

Nevertheless, Hoops is still coordinator for a group planning a Feast of Tabernacles convention for this fall at King's Beach at Lake Tahoe, California. Bob tells us that among those who will be featured speakers are Steven Collins, Kenneth Westby, and Dr. Charles Dorothy. He also told us that attendance is not restricted to members of any particular denomination and that former (and current) WCG members are welcome, as are any others who wish to enjoy the beautiful environment of that part of the country and the fellowship of friendly Christian people. For details, write: Robert Hoops, 8642 Highway 128, Healdsburg, CA 95448, or call (707) 433-7369 on weekdays between 6 a.m. and noon (California time).

"Doc" Martin and Joan Marie Split

In our March and October, 1985 issues we reported how ex-WCG minister Ernest "Doc" Martin had left his position as head of the Foundation for Biblical Research, and with his new bride, Joan Marie, had started an organization called Associates for Scriptural Knowledge (A.S.K.). Now it appears that Martin's A.S.K. is in hot water. In April, Joan Marie put out a letter to the students of A.S.K. in which she lamented Martin's on-going battle with the bottle, their marital difficulties, and their squabbles over control of A.S.K.

Not to be outdone, "Doc," who was in England when the letter hit, upon his return put out a rebuttal letter. In it, he claims the union was strained by his loyalty to the name Jesus Christ (Joan Marie, he says, prefers "Yahshua"), and her unwillingness to limit her role to that of housewife. He also intimates that it was not he, but Joan Marie, who was having "blackouts." Thus, he writes, it was necessary "to fire her from A.S.K.," but it was really Satan who caused "my beautiful wife (whom I still love very much) to turn against me." Another Dr. Martin letter, dated June 21, gave even more details concerning their troubled relationship. Not surprisingly, the two are now divorced. Martin is still running A.S.K. and Joan Marie is hoping to go into real estate. Their mud-slinging letters make interesting reading for soap-opera buffs. Those interested may write to Joan Marie at P.O. Box 7014, Hemet, CA 92343 and Ernest Martin at P.O. Box 7777, Hemet, CA 92343.

FBR Update

When Dr. Ernest Martin resigned from the Foundation for Biblical Research (FBR) in February 1984, many who had supported that organization from its start in 1974 wondered if it could survive without Martin. After all, for ten years Martin had so monopolized the pages of that organization's publications, many had come to think of Martin as synonymous with FBR. Nevertheless, one-and-a-half years after Martin's departure, the FBR is both surviving and publishing the work of more and more authors.

While FBR publications regularly feature articles by FBR editor Ken Fischer ("The Biblical Significance of Baptism," "The Lord's Supper," "Just Why Should You: Love Not the World?," "The Olympic Scriptures," etc.), the FBR has increasingly published articles by other authors including Joel Bjorling, Peter M. Leschak, Paulos Karageorgi, David Ord, Lambert Dolphin, Gene Justice, William Barclay, Rudy Dykstra, C. Gary Reid, Bernard Dawson, Al Zaizer, Jim Coram, and others. Some of the articles we have found particularly interesting are Gary Arvidson's "The Tetragrammaton" (Commentator, Sept. and Oct. 1985), Millo Accaus' "Life and Liberty" (about the abortion issue, Commentator, Nov.-Dec. 1985), and "Banquet of the Dispossessed" by Dr. James A. Sanders (Professor of Intertestamental and Biblical Studies, Claremont School of Theology; Commentator, Oct. 1985).

The FBR is both nondenominational and nondogmatic, and we've always found them cordial toward us whether we've agreed or disagreed with their published views. Those interested in biblical studies may wish to be on their mailing list. Their address is: Foundation for Biblical Research, P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Alumni News

Editor: Being able to hear from old friends from our Ambassador College days is one of the real blessings we receive from Ambassador Report. In our next issue we'd like to put in an extensive Ambassador Alumni section. If you are an Ambassador Alumnus, drop us a note and tell us a little of what you've been doing since AC. We'd like to hear from you!

Ambassador alumni Bill Moore (Bricket Wood, '69) and his wife Judy (Foster, Bricket Wood, '70) are now living in Omaha, Nebraska where, since earlier this month, Bill has been working as a ticket agent for Continental Airlines and spending most of his free time writing. He recently sent us this letter:

It's enough to make one believe in Fate - or the hand of God. How else does one explain two miracles in one day?

Ever since resigning from the WCG ministry back in 1980, it's been a tough go for us financially. When you're 35 and have virtually no marketable skills, courtesy of Ambassador College's unique educational philosophy, you do what you have to do. In my case, my brother taught me the window cleaning business, so for the next five years I operated a commercial window cleaning business here in Omaha. Call it pride, vanity, ambition, or whatever, but I was determined to not become stuck in the rut of being just another blue-collar worker. But then being just another white-collar worker didn't appeal to me either. What did appeal to me was becoming a professional writer. So, contrary to all the rules, I decided to learn the trade. I read, took classes, did part-time copy writing, and waited patiently for my first big break. Meanwhile....

In March 1985, my son Ari, then 13-years-old, developed endstage renal disease, commonly called kidney disease. He had been a promising young gymnast and a good student. Suddenly all that changed and for the next fifteen months, his life would be tied to a dialysis machine, an unbelievably restricted diet, and much frustration. Well, living with a teenage boy who is going through not only all the changes of adolescence, but living from one blood transfusion to the next (many end-stage renal disease victims require transfusions every several weeks because their own bodies have stopped manufacturing red blood cells) can be a maddening and emotionally exhausting experience for the entire family. If it hadn't been for humor and being able to laugh together, I shudder to think what the last fifteen months might have been like.

Then it happened, all in one day!

June 4, 1986 will be forever etched into our memories. At 4:15 a. m. we received a completely unexpected call from our hospital's organ transplant co-ordinator. I will never forget her words, "Mr. Moore, I believe we have a kidney for Ari. Can you bring him into the hospital right away." It was - pardon the analogy - like waking up Christmas morning to find there really was a Santa and he'd left all the presents you'd hoped for. Ari was instantly awake and eager for the operation - as long as he could take his skateboard with him! (He actually rode it down the hospital corridors just before his operation and his doctor rode it later that afternoon.) Ari had been on the transplant list only 16 days and we were not told who the donor was, but we suspect it was a local 17-year-old girl who was declared brain dead after an automobile accident the day before. The operation, which began about 8:30 a. m. (after Ari's blood was tissue typed and cross matched with the donor kidney) lasted until a little after noon. Although the operation took a little longer than usual, everything went very well. Miracle number one for the day.

Miracle number two came about 1:30 p.m. just after returning home for a change of clothing. The telephone rang and it was Peter Carry, the executive editor of Time-Life's Discover magazine, calling to say they had decided to buy an article I had submitted to them several weeks earlier. I cried. Judy cried. My article ["The Secrets of the Black Boxes"] will be in the August, 1986 issue of the magazine. This was my first major freelance magazine article and to have it published in such a prestigious publication is a thrill.

In all candor, both miracles came at the best time possible. We were all being drained emotionally and financially to the point of exhaustion. As I write this almost four weeks after Ari's operation, he is doing fabulous. He has all the vigor and life of a growing 15 year-old and now he wants me to teach him to drive! He can eat anything he wants (and he's eating us out of house and home). Of course, he will have to take immunosuppressant drugs like cyclosporine for the rest of his life, or until someone comes up with a means to "Specific immunosuppression." And no kidney transplant is forever... Nevertheless, life for us has definitely taken on new meaning and promise. I even have a chance of getting a story produced for the Disney Sunday Night Movie, but more on that if and when it happens. In the meantime, we are enjoying every minute of our lives, grateful for its miracles. Sometimes things really are the gloomiest just before the dawn.

Letters

Thanks for the April issue of Ambassador Report. As I read of the elaborate funeral of Herbert Armstrong, this scripture came to mind.- "I have thought deeply about all that goes on here in the world, where people have the power of injuring each other. I have seen wicked men buried and as their friends returned from the cemetery, having forgotten all the dead man 's evil deeds, these men were praised in the very city where they had committed their many crimes! How odd!" (Eccl. 8:9-10, The Living Bible.)

-Tennessee

Editor: Thanks for pointing that out to us. And, incidentally, that passage on through verse 11 in both the King James and Moffatt translations is also quite relevant.

In Vancouver. HWA's passing was almost a non-event. This left my friend's husband (he's in, she's out) bewildered and even miffed. He expected more. When asked about who and what is next, his remark was. "I don't know. You and your friends seem to know more about what's going on than we do."....

Here 's a typical event in the everyday annals of the WCG that might amuse you: I have a feisty 92-year-old pal who is the only person in the WCG who has not rejected me since I departed the organization. She has a chronic bladder infection which is very tiring. Her mind is sharp, but she's drained physically by this problem. Anyway, she can't endure sitting through church services so she doesn't go. As it happened, she was not able to appear for Passover in the spring of 1985. They informed her of the "Second Passover" for those who were not at the first. By evening, she's pretty much a rag. She didn't make the second Passover, either. Consider her age and her infection, which is not classified information. She does send money.

As the months rolled by, she noticed that mail had stopped coming from the WCG - no epistles, no PT, nothing. At last she phoned to inquire. She was told she had been disfellowshipped and the reason was: "Refusal to keep the Passover." There was no inquiry or follow up and no notification. Just swift, decisive, and of course appropriate action. She is not taking it sitting down, though. She told me she is having the minister over to take him to task over this.

This may also interest you. I have associations with some Christians who are active in deliverance ministry. They tell me of a case where a demon being cast out of an individual was commanded to name himself His answer: "Herbert W. Armstrong." There is actually a demon (or demons) going around named Herbert W. Armstrong.

-Canada

Editor: We've heard such demon stories before and, frankly, don't know what to make of them.

You would think Herbert W. Armstrong never existed from the news in the Pittsburgh, PA area. The only thing that has changed here is that the church got an order from headquarters to combine all the churches into one service on the Sabbath. Four areas will become one now, all in Pittsburgh. This will mean a long haul for some now, but who would voice their disapproval?

The report from headquarters is that money matters were not good and all will have to sacrifice. Of course, the sacrifices will come from the ones who can afford it the least.

Also, the ministers here in Pittsburgh are again telling the people not to go to doctors. They must be anointed instead.

-Pennsylvania

My husband joined the WCG in Feb. 1985 and since then my entire life has been in turmoil. I have three children who are 11, 8, and 15... My husband has not worked a day in 11 months, but he has so far managed to "donate" over $700 in five months. Figure that one out!

-New Jersey

As my husband has been involved with this cult since last summer, our life has changed much for the worse and I am trying to make him see how wrong this cult is. He has been unemployed for almost four months now because in this area jobs are scarce and as he wants to conform with rules of the cult. I do not think he has much chance of getting a job. Fortunately, I am working full-time, but most of my income is used for all the household expenses, and we also have a baby who is now 20 months old... As far as I am aware, he is tithing over 10% out of his unemployment benefits in order to attend the Feast of Tabernacles at Brighton in October, something he can ill afford to do.

-England

I've heard of your Report in years past, but never needed it or had your address, until my minister in Atlanta allowed me to come to North Carolina to take a job, and then the minister in North Carolina disfellowshipped me for taking the job. That's when a friend told me of your whereabouts and so I wrote to you.

...By the way, the only person in the WCG who helped me during my recent trials was the associate pastor of the Atlanta church, Mr. Gordon Harry, who has since also been disfellowshipped!

-North Carolina

I really appreciate getting the Report, but nothing surprises me anymore.... I know you wonder why I stay in the church. I have some very dear friends in there that have not gotten wise yet and it would hurt them so very, had. So I will stay in until I get thrown out.

...I will say, "Let's talk about the Bible," but no one will. All they want to talk about is going to Petra.... It is comical to hear what they really do believe. I heard one say that they are expecting to leave for Petra in Feb. 1986. Mr. Waterhouse told them they would not have to go through any temptation or tribulations. But [his minister] said they would. They are all confused, but still they believe everything they hear.

As you know this church is a secret one. We are not allowed to ask questions. They tell us if there is anything we need to know we will be told...

I know of seven people that the local WCG minister threw out of the Baltimore church and more that quit. And one young man shot his head off because he could not take it any more. He had only been baptized a few months before.

-West Virginia

I've been a member of the WCG since '69 so I've seen a lot of coming and going.... You know, as well as I, we have in this outfit the same format as the "Iron Curtain." We dare not speak freely even to friends. We cannot question. We must be careful that we use the right word and have a certain tone of voice. I do not care to play the "dump sheep" role any more. So may I be put on your mailing list to receive the Ambassador Report?

-Alabama

Since I am a widow living on my late husband's social security and have a visual handicap, plus an adult retarded son, I am unable to contribute as fully as my heart would like to do, but I pray more and more WCG members will wake up as to what really is going on in that cult of deception, lies and gross errors - including my own children!

One of the problems for you, I know, is the fact that those of us who get your newsletter pass it around to others who like to read it for free and refuse to contribute a cent for their own copies. I have stopped doing that and told them to write to you themselves if they are truly interested in what is going on behind the scenes in that marriage-destroying, child-brainwashing, con-artist cult. I saw so much of that going on in my local church, especially the marriage-breakups which were blessed by the ministers to promote unions inside the church (so-called). Leave the mate of your youth and marry someone within the True (ha ha) church seems to be the name of the game these days and seems to be gaining ground steadily every year. God does not break up marriages, but almighty HWA and WCG dictators certainly seem to delight in such practices.

Thank God the husband of my youth did not desert me when I was in that mind-control organization, although I gave him a bad time once in a while (trying to convert him) in my stupidity. He hung in there with me because he believed in the vows we said, "till death do us part." At least death took him from me, not Herbert the pervert!

-AR Reader

Received Ambassador Report yesterday and I find that I am not alone in my thoughts about the Worldwide Church of God. I have been married for 47 years and now my husband is wanting a divorce. I have never been in the church, but he has for the last 16 years and has now met a woman that is a member. He feels that they have something in common and so he wants to call off all the years of our marriage. I can't help but put all the blame of this separation on the church. I'm hoping someday my husband will come to his senses.

-Ohio

The Plain Truth newsstand program is now quite interesting. They may as well cut it back by 50% or 100%! Here in Winnipeg a lot of PTs are being picked up and destroyed. On the streets and in public parks I have seen large numbers of PTs blowing around in the wind. I even saw a bus-shelter floor literally covered with ripped-up PT's - The Plain Trash reduced to its simplest form.

The article "Soviet Economic Crisis" in the Jan. PT is indeed plain trash! It states that the USSR can no longer afford maintaining the East European satellite countries and that eventually the Kremlin would let them go on their own, thus paving the way for a 10-nation United Europe. What ridiculous plain crap! The PT made a 360 degree flip-flop. A few years ago they said, "The Russian Bear moves slowly and ponderously, always ahead, never backwards!"

-Canada

Years ago, I, too, had been interested in joining the Armstrong church. I wanted to attend Ambassador College, "the happiest place on earth," as well. I contacted ministers in 1977 with the intention of becoming a member, having listened to The World Tomorrow radio broadcasts and having read The Plain Truth magazine and other free literature for nearly six years by then.

However, upon meeting the ministers, I instantly developed a very uneasy feeling, as though they were TOO eager to have me join. They repeatedly asked me if I listened to Garner Ted Armstrong every day, and wasn't he wonderful, wasn't he great - which was odd because aren't we supposed to praise and worship God, not people? Now it's plain that the church was undergoing its schism at that time. Maybe the ministers wanted me to side with them against Herbert W. Armstrong. They had an overly familiar "you're one of us now" attitude toward me which I also found offensive. After all, I didn't really know them. And from the conversation, I felt better versed in their own doctrine than they were, which was not the most reassuring sensation in the world for a prospective "believer." Suspicion awakened, I couldn't join.

Of all the off-beat sects I could have been interested in, why the one that was to face national scandal less than a year after my attempt to join? Served me right. I liked their slick, contemporary style, their "relevance to today 's world," their attacks on both Roman Catholic doctrinal error and "sentimental churchianity" so much that I didn't bother to do my homework on the Armstrongs themselves. I was too eager to accept everything they said without investigation and that's precisely what folks like the Armstrongs seem to count on to gain converts.

Now I know that my relatives are in serious trouble from "Strong-Arm-ism." They're under the Armstrong spell so deeply that it may require the spiritual equivalent of "The A-Team" to rescue them at this point. I do fear for them greatly, but I'm not sure I can help. As you indicated in your newsletters, people caught in HWA's devious trap are not even talking about it, so there's a brick wall to deal with first.

-California

Thank you for your kind response to my last note and for supplying [former WCG pastor] Keith Thomas' address. After trying to compose a letter to him during spare moments over the past week, I picked up the telephone last night and gave him a call. And. I'm very glad I did.

We talked for over an hour and I was pleased to know that he is doing relatively well with good future prospects in business. I was struck by the commonsense approach he had taken to the WCG, eschewing the idea of adding to HWA's fan club and by not encouraging his parishoners to read Mystery of the Ages.

I was struck, too, by his description of the church he left behind. I knew there were enough problems back in '78 when I pulled out, but to hear the word on the WCG today is astonishing. The cultism surrounding HWA is incredible, only slightly less so than the seeming approval it is garnering among the ministry. When I was in, there was some effort to disguise WCG theology as "biblical truth" as opposed to just the sage sayings of "God's apostle." How my heart aches at the thought of thousands deceived into believing that this man - or any man - virtually held the keys of the Kingdom in his hands, and that he was to be honored as a great prophet.

But even more than this, Mr. Thomas and I both lamented the many talented and bright people - Jack Martin, Gordon Muir, Brian Knowles, Bob Kuhn, Art Mocarow, to name a few "at the top" - drawn into the WCG only to be chewed up and spat out as they become less useful, i. e., less likely to say "Yes, Mr. Armstrong," to every whim of the king of the hill. Added to the talented members of what you so aptly call the "Executive Exodus" are the thousands of people who are church members and who come from rich, varied backgrounds. It's just so very sad.

The bright spot among all this is that recovery - and even renewal - is possible. Mr. Thomas - one of the more energetic and self-motivated people I've met (he went back to college and earned an accredited Bachelor's degree in his late 40's) - is but one example; Brenda Denzler is another. From reading Ambassador Report and from contacts with people like Keith Thomas, my own desire to help others caught in HWA's traps intensifies.

Equally important, I have come to realize that those who are or were involved in the WCG are people, important to God and important to their fellow men and women. While I've been at times angry at HWA and the WCG for their insidious teachings, I now understand that such anger should and must stop at the people who, like myself have only been pawns in the game to one degree or another. I can only hope that, in some way, my future efforts will be constructive and helpful to the people involved, not just an attack on WCG doctrine.

And, John, I owe this understanding - which is part of a continuing process as I seek to evaluate six years in the WCG and its ramifications in my life - to the work you and your colleagues have done. I'm grateful for that work and want you to know you have my personal support and shall have my financial help as I am able. Let me know if I may assist in any other way. Meanwhile, thanks again and God bless.

One of the really sad things about the "Ambassador Experience" is not simply how many people were abused, but how many really fine people were simply used and discarded. It's a pity Mark Kellner's letter will not be pondered over by the WCG's new leadership.

As we are about to go to press, we have just heard that the WCG's income has taken a significant drop and that Tkach has decided to deactivate a large number of ministers he considers too old, too sickly, or too uncooperative. But as we are out of time and room in this issue, the details will have to wait until next time.

Our thanks for your letters of encouragement and for your kind support of Ambassador Report.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR37 January, 1987

Tkach Turns Apostle

No, we're not kidding. Joseph W. Tkach is now an apostle. Or at least, so he thinks. Worldwide Church of God (WCG) ministers increasingly refer to Tkach as "God's Apostle," and insiders say Tkach seems to like it that way.

It is now one year since WCG founder Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) passed away, leaving Tkach in charge. When HWA died, many hoped that Tkach would moderate the policies of HWA. There have been changes, but as the old saying goes, "sometimes the more things change, the more they stay the same."

Like his predecessor, Tkach enjoys being photographed with the rich and famous. On December 6, Tkach left Sabbath services early to fly to Washington, D.C. where the next day he attended a White House reception honoring actress-comedienne Lucille Ball, singer Ray Charles, and four other entertainers. While there in a reception line, Tkach was able to speak to Reagan for a few seconds. In recent months the "Iranscam" affair has brought the President criticism from both Congress and the press. Tkach, in an outburst of enthusiastic support for Reagan, advised the President to "give 'em hell!" At least some in the WCG have winced at the story, believing the unrequested advice was simplistic and inappropriately phrased. However, when you consider that hell, and how to give it, is something of which the WCG ministry has expertise, perhaps Tkach was really just speaking straight from the heart.

One thing that never seems to change in the WCG is the executive musical chairs routine. A few months ago, Tkach brought his son-in-law minister, Doug Horchak, into headquarters to become assistant to evangelist Larry Salyer, who heads the WCG's Church Administration Department. Things didn't work out for Horchak and Tkach sent him back into "the field." To replace Horchak under Salyer, Tkach brought in Joseph Tkach Jr. from Arizona. A lot of members believe Joe Jr. will one day leapfrog over Salyer to become the WCG's number two man and eventually will be the heir-apparent to the WCG throne.

One WCG bigwig who is now a small wig is Ellis LaRavia. This summer Tkach stripped him of his position over the Ambassador Foundation. Insiders say that Tkach was upset with LaRavia's "inability to control his wife." One day she went into a rage in the church's Hall of Administration building and then physically assaulted evangelist Larry Salyer. The police were summoned and she was physically restrained. We understand she has since been put into an institution for those with emotional problems. The Ambassador Foundation is now headed by David Hulme, one of the WCG's three broadcasters, and recently ordained an evangelist.

Sometimes it's a little hard to figure out the WCG. In The Worldwide News for Dec. 29, 1986, the "Personal From Joseph W. Tkach" column began this way:

What a year of growth this has been!

In fact, the growth has been so rapid that our field ministers, along with the rest of the Work, are at the point that they are hard pressed to support it all.

He then went on to tell the members that the church did not have the $5 million needed to purchase the building in which the church's Mail Processing Department has been housed for years. He asked the members to contribute to a special building fund (which, of course, is separate from regular tithes and offerings). Tkach also announced in the column that there will be major cutbacks in the church's publishing operations and a ceiling put on the Plain Truth's circulation.

Yes, "what a year of growth this has been!"

There are those who do like Tkach and his style. But not everyone in the WCG is thrilled with his leadership. For instance, it is rumored that the WCG's three broadcasters are unhappy that they cannot preach extemporaneously on the air, as does Garner Ted Armstrong, but are required to read from scripts that must be approved. And former HWA aide, Aaron Dean, in a January 10, 1987 sermon, made certain oblique comments that have been interpreted to mean that he believes Tkach's reign will not be a long one and that Dean, himself, is destined to take on a much bigger role in the WCG.

From our vantage point it is clear that there is not much love in the WCG. We continue to receive letters from current members who complain that the WCG is a cold church. Many non-members make the same observation. In the letters to the editor section of The Courier (of Prescott, Arizona) on Oct. 31, 1986 there appeared the headline, "Shocking Lack of Christianity" followed by this letter:

On October 11, 1986, Boy Scout troop 330 arrived at Lake Valley School, returning 4 hours early from a camping trip that was interrupted by a severe thunderstorm and temperatures that plummeted to the mid 40's. Thirty-five boys were cold, wet and some even close to hypothermia. We were confronted by the "Worldwide Church of God" who refused to allow the boys inside Lake Valley's gym to get warm, to use the phone, or even to use the restroom! They insisted the boys stay outside in the continued rain so that they would not disturb their services which were not to begin for at least 15 minutes. This, in my opinion, shows a shocking lack of Christianity and compassion for these boys. I am upset and appalled by this "religious" organization's undeniable disregard for the safety and well being of our fellow man.

The McNair Versus WCG War Continues

The old proverb "justice delayed is justice denied" seems to have been forgotten in California. Those who file a lawsuit in this state must routinely wait five years to get to trial. And if the suit is won at trial, there may still be years of appeals if the opposing party is wealthy enough to be able to afford the luxury. Even famed Harvard law professor Arthur Miller has described litigation in the California state courts as "a fate worse than death."

Leona McNair's libel and slander suit against the WCG and two of its evangelists was filed in mid-1979, but the case did not get to trial until the summer of 1984 (see our September, 1984 issue). In August of that year, a unanimous jury awarded her $1.26 million, but as of January, 1987 the case is still bogged down in the courts. The WCG is presently attempting to get a reversal in the California Court of Appeal. In the meantime, the McNair versus WCG war has continued on a number of other fronts.

For instance, the WCG's legal team, desperate to get something on the scoreboard, came up with a bizarre plan of trying to get Antony Stuart, Leona McNair's lawyer, disqualified from the case for opening mail sent to him by a WCG employee. Not surprisingly, in September Judge Sally Disco threw out that WCG motion.

As we reported last January, Herbert W. Armstrong had originally been named as a defendant in the McNair suit, but the trial court ruled that he should not be a defendant. Stuart appealed that ruling and got it reversed, but only after the trial had ended. It therefore became necessary to plan on a second trial, at which it would be determined what damages, if any, HWA would personally have to pay in addition to what Leona had already been awarded. Unfortunately, HWA died before being brought to trial or even being deposed. This, however, has not stopped Stuart from aggressively pursuing the case against HWA's estate. Stanley Rader, who in 1979 was HWA's top aide and the WCG's chief counsel and treasurer, has been subpoenaed. Other witnesses will undoubtedly be subpoenaed before the trial, now scheduled to begin August 3. HWA's estate - left to the WCG and its size kept secret - is being represented by lawyer Marcy Byrnes, a long-time friend of WCG lawyer Allan Browne.

As we reported in April, a key witness in all this is Richard H. Sedliacik, the managing editor of the Pastor's Report in June of 1979 when the libelous statements about Leona McNair appeared in that publication. Ever since Stuart first subpoenaed him, Sedliacik agreed to cooperate and tell the truth. But the WCG, in its own special way, repeatedly made it clear it did not want him to do that.

In August, 1985 Sedliacik had his Pastor General's Report job taken from him. In November, 1985 he was stripped of his "Bible I.Q." column in the Plain Truth. In December, 1985 he was informed that he would no longer be doing the WCG's YES Bible Lesson. In March, 1986 Sedliacik's Good News "Ministudy" was dropped. Through all this, Sedliacik remained loyal to the WCG, hoped he could remain one of its employees, and was never told that his job performance was inadequate in any way. In fact, with each deprivation of duties, he was actually commended for the quality work he had performed for the church. Yet, step by step the WCG's leaders got their message across - and not very subtly. At one point, Earle Reese, of the church's legal department, told him outright, "The way you answer the questions [from Stuart] will determine what work you'll be doing for the church."

Throughout this entire period there was a stream of letters to Sedliacik from the WCG's legal department attempting to coax him into testifying only as directed. (While the WCG's lawyers tried to put a gloss on their nefarious communications, their true motives were all too obvious.) Sedliacik wrote back that he would not testify in any manner that was not 100% honest. (Among other things, the WCG lawyers wanted Sedliacik to testify that evangelist- author Roderick Meredith was "meticulous." Sedliacik disagreed. They also wanted him to testify that the Pastor's Report was produced under strict time constraints. Sedliacik disagreed.) The WCG insisted Sedliacik follow the orders of Bruce Armstrong, a pugnacious WCG-appointed lawyer. Sedliacik repeatedly refused. He also informed the WCG in writing that he did not want Bruce Armstrong to represent him. Nevertheless, twice afterwards Armstrong showed up in court attempting to represent Sedliacik. Both times the court would not allow it.

Sedliacik is an honest man, but a sensitive man with very serious health problems. One of his sons also has had serious health problems. Sedliacik repeatedly indicated to the WCG that the pressure from church ministers and lawyers was hurting both him and his family. Nevertheless, the letters, phone calls, and visits continued and took their toll. In April, however, Sedliacik and his wife complied with Stuart's subpoenas, appeared for the depositions, and told what they knew.

Ambassador Report attempted for months to get the details of Sedliacik's testimony, but neither he nor the parties to the suit will provide that information. The WCG's lawyers have somehow been able to get the court to seal key documents produced by Sedliacik. And Stuart and Leona McNair adamantly refuse to discuss them. Nevertheless, from the court records that are available, and from sources within the WCG itself, we have been able to piece together much of what Sedliacik testified and to draw some conclusions:

- (1) In June of 1979 Richard H. Sedliacik may have been managing editor of the Pastor's Report, but he reported to others who had "final edit" authority. Those superiors included Herbert W. Armstrong, the publications's editor-in-chief; Aaron Dean, HWA's personal aide; and lawyer Stanley Rader, the WCG's chief counsel and a partner in the lawfirm of Rader, Helge, and Gerson.
- (2) In 1979 certain WCG lawyers had important oversight responsibilities with regard to what was allowed to be printed in the Pastor's Report.
- (3) Reports on the testimony of WCG witnesses at the McNair trial convinced Sedliacik that certain key facts he had relayed to WCG attorneys were not made known to the court, or were distorted in the course of the trial. For instance, in spite of Rader's relationship with the Pastor's Report in 1979, church lawyers got him excluded as a defendant in the case.
- (4) As a result of the above, Sedliacik became distrustful of the WCG's lawyers and began to suspect he was being "set up" as a scapegoat. He seems to believe the documents he has held on to are crucial evidence in his own defense. (He's probably right.)

Sedliacik's problems unfortunately did not end with his deposition. A few days afterward, when he arrived for work in his only remaining church position (as Bible Correspondence Course editor), he discovered he had been locked out of his own office "for security reasons." Not long after that, the church informed him that he was being put on a leave of absence without pay "for health reasons." The WCG told him they made the leave "without pay" because they had to be "good stewards of God's tithes," but not to worry because he would be remembered in their prayers. What followed for Richard was months of continuing unemployment and stress, with more and more health problems.

Then in November, according to sources close to Joe Tkach, Larry Salyer, the WCG's current number two man, made Sedliacik an offer. As an act of "Christian charity," the WCG would give Sedliacik $1,200 per week for one year, followed by over $700 per week for an indefinite period of time. First, however, he would have to turn over the documents he has relating to the McNair case, with an admission that they belong to the WCG. Of course, it is not difficult to see how such a crudely fashioned arrangement could prove to be not only an unenforceable "contract" for lack of consideration, but could even bring against Sedliacik allegations of perjury, larceny, conversion, or extortion. Sedliacik is apparently convinced the offer was not made in good faith and has wisely refused to sign on the dotted line.

Among the papers the WCG wants from Sedliacik are: office memos from Stanley Rader, Aaron Dean, and others, showing their working relationship with Sedliacik and his subordinate position; a Worldwide News statement that the Pastor's Report was a newsletter with Herbert W. Armstrong as editor-in-chief; and the draft of a June 25, 1979 Pastor's Report article by Raymond McNair with hand-written editing by none other than Stanley R. Rader (he preferred that HWA be referred to as "Christ's Apostle," not "God's Apostle").

The Pasadena Star-News of April 12, 1986 had an article on the McNair case with this statement: "Church attorneys claim Sedliacik stole 'confidential' documents from the church. In a written statement, however, Sedliacik said the documents never would have been missed if the lawsuit had not been pursued." A few days later, however, church lawyer Ralph Helge wrote the Star-News saying the WCG never said Sedliacik stole the documents! But if that's the case, then the papers are rightfully Sedliacik's. (Then what's all the fuss about, Ralph?)

While the battle over Sedliacik was being waged, the WCG, apparently unhappy with the California courts, took the McNair war into the federal courts where Ralph ("We Never Lose") Helge and his legal team recently were handed one more defeat.

The WCG has claimed all along that the libelous statements made against Leona were made "in the context of an ecclesiastical debate," and were therefore protected by the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. The California Superior Court that tried the case rejected that argument. In 1985, the WCG sued Leona (and the California Superior Court) in U.S. District Court, claiming that the trial court in the McNair case had violated the church's constitutional rights. The U.S. District Court threw the case out on Younger abstention grounds. The WCG then appealed to the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. That appeal was argued and submitted April 9, 1986 and the three-judge panel handed down a published 11-page opinion on December 5.

Judges Mary M. Schroeder, Betty B. Fletcher, and Donald S. Voorhees clarified 28 U.S.C. Sec. 1257 and held that the U.S. District Court, as a court of original jurisdiction, has no authority to review the final determination of a state court in judicial proceedings. The only court in which to obtain review in such situations is the United States Supreme Court. The judges affirmed the district court's decision and concluded that, although the U.S. District Court below had dismissed the WCG action for other reasons, the U.S. District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction and should have dismissed the case on that basis. We don't know what overpriced legal scholar wrote Worldwide's brief, but we understand that most of Leona McNair's brief was researched and written by Christine Spagnoli, then a law student at Loyola of Los Angeles.

Incidentally, the April 9 oral arguments before the Ninth Circuit Court were heard in that court's new Southern California headquarters - the Vista Del Arroyo building, just one short block from Ambassador's Pasadena campus. Those who've read our earliest editions (ARs 2-4) may recall how in 1977 the U.S. government had planned to give away that multimillion dollar property (formerly a resort hotel turned veterans' hospital) to Ambassador College after it had been declared "surplus" government property. Ambassador College withdrew its application for that government handout only after a much publicized, months-long taxpayers protest (led by Ambassador Report) which resulted in higher government scrutiny of the Armstrong organization. The U.S. government later realized it really did need the property. After a major renovation, it became in 1986 a highly useful federal court and office building, complete with a fine law library (which the AR editor now enjoys using quite frequently).

On April 9 the three judge panel allocated one-half hour to each side in the McNair case to present their oral arguments. Representing Leona McNair was Antony Stuart whose presentation was calm and concise. Representing the WCG, and doing his usual Eddie Haskell imitation, was Allan Brown who attempted to teach the judges about WCG theology. For some odd reason, Judges Schroeder and Fletcher seemed more interested in legal matters and repeatedly interrupted Browne's discourse with pointed questions. To one question on the legal doctrine of collateral estoppel the best Browne could do was a smile and, "Well, it's been a while since I've been in law school, your honor...." Judge Donald Voorhees just sat quietly with a faint grin that may have indicated amusement at something or other. Ralph Helge declined the court's offer of coming to the lectern for treatment similar to Browne's.

Outside, the sun shined brightly; the birds sang. Through the courtroom windows one could see the newly planted flowers that trim the spacious lawn. And in the court building there were some who recalled the part Ambassador Report played in the history of the Vista Del Arroyo.

At precisely the end of Browne's allotted half-hour he was summarily cutoff mid-sentence by Judge Mary Schroeder with a crisp, "Your time is UP." Observing the beautiful decorative trim near the edge of the courtroom ceiling, your editor thought, "What a nice old building," and tried not to smile too much.

Are the U.S. and Britain the Israel of the Bible?

American and British-Israelism, or the theory that the Israel of Bible prophecy is the English-speaking nations of today, remains a major tenant of the WCG and many WCG-related sects. In our September, 1982 issue we ran a letter by N. H. MacMichael, Keeper of the Monuments at Westminster Abbey in London, who stated that the famous Coronation Stone most probably came from Perthshire, not Palestine, and, contrary to HWA's claims, was not designated by Abbey officials as "Jacob's Pillar Stone." One of our readers, who has studied the subject and saved copies of supportive documentation, took exception to MacMichael's views and wrote us:

I was raised in England and I went to a Church of England school. I well remember being taught as a young lad by my teachers in that school, being taught very matter of factually, that the stone under the Coronation Chair was by history and tradition reputed to be "Jacob's Pillar Stone" - we were even shown the scriptures in the Bible to indicate that belief. There was at that time great interest in such things in England because of the coming Coronation of Queen Elizabeth. About three years ago I was back in England and Westminster Abbey - I looked through many of their books and booklets (not those written by religious organizations) and I still found in those booklets put out by official Westminster for the tourists the statements that tradition says this stone was Jacob's Pillar Stone - the stone that he anointed.

The reply of N. H. MacMichael to the person in Australia does not surprise me at all, as it would seem that all official persons connected with the royalty are instructed to deny any connection with the throne of Britain being the throne of David.

Another reader informed us:

The Covenant People's Advocates has from time to time published annotated bibliographies on British-Israelism and has given short life sketches of well-known men who adhered to this belief. The address of this publication is: Box 68, Velma, OK 73091. This group has also established a library in Oklahoma devoted exclusively to the concept of British-Israelism.

While British-Israelism and the WCG's somewhat modified version of it seem to be gaining in popularity, there are many organizations that have put out articles and books refuting the theory. One Ambassador alumnus recently wrote us:

Where Are the Lost Gentiles?

I was discussing something from the Bible recently with a woman at work, when she terminated our conversation with, "Well, you can prove anything from the Bible." I had to agree with her. I know I've heard some strange doctrines "proven" from the Bible.

How about "proving" reincarnation from Matt. 11:11-15 and Mal. 4:5-6? Malachi does say that Elijah the prophet would be sent, and Matthew quotes Christ as saying (v. 14, King James version), "And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come." Therefore, John the Baptist was Elijah reincarnated and you'd better receive it! Or so this argument challenges.

I like the way Christ dealt with one of the strange doctrines of the Sadducees (Matt. 22:23-28). The Sadducees didn't believe in the resurrection (that's why they were sad, you see), and I'm sure they could have quoted many verses from the Old Testament that would "prove" their doctrine. (Ecclesiastes must have been their favorite book.) In verse 29 Christ tells them that they don't understand the scriptures or the power of God, and then proceeds to quote one phrase that they must have known by heart (v. 32). (Could God be much of a God if He would allow the three men, whose very names He uses to identify Himself, stay dead forever?)

Another strange doctrine is British-Israelism. This one I know about, for I used to believe it. British-Israelism is a great doctrine - it appeals to our vanity. We Americans (and the British) are spoiled - we like to be on the winning team. We know we're special and if we can identify with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel we're in. The big problem is that to do this we're going to have to get rid of Paul, the Apostle of the Gentiles. Have you ever read Romans? Romans 11? Romans 11:11?

Now if we compare British-Israelism with Paul's writings (Rom. 11:11) the question is (if I can formulate it): If salvation is come to the Gentiles to provoke Israel to jealousy, yet the Gentile nations who proclaim Christ are really the Lost Tribes, then they are not Gentiles, and therefore the Gentiles must be lost and we now have to identify the Lost Gentiles to know who is going to provoke Israel (who, don't forget, are the Gentiles who proclaim Christ and are prosperous, but can't provoke Israel to jealousy because they are Israel but don't know it, but still can't provoke Israel anyway, because they are Israel even if they don't know it, and.... So the provoking Gentiles are really lost! (Is that right? Have we found the Lost Ten Tribes, but lost all the eligible provoking Gentiles in the process?) Provoking isn't it!

See what I mean? Did you get lost? Are we sounding like the Sadducees? Are we serious?

All kidding aside, this doctrine has lots of problems, but its clash with Paul's ministry to the Gentiles is one of its biggest shortcomings. If we don't realize that Paul had a special commission to take the good news of God's salvation by grace to the Gentiles (the real Gentiles), that Israel's rejection of their Messiah was the open door for God to deal directly with the Gentiles, and that Paul is God's Apostle during this time of the Gentiles with a special gospel not dependent on the old covenant with Israel, we are going to miss a large part of what is called the New Testament.

It seems that Paul's special ministry has been lost in the traditions of Christianity and very few recognize the real importance of these times of the Gentiles. I discovered the significance of Paul's writings from the literature of the Concordant Publishing Concern. Concordant publishes a New Testament, numerous books and booklets on biblical subjects, and a bimonthly magazine called Unsearchable Riches. In the January, 1936 issue of this magazine is the very best article on the problems with British Israelism that I've ever come across.

Concordant has the most respectful, honest, truthseeking approach to the holy scriptures that I've ever read (II Pet. 1:20). I would really hope that you would check into the Concordant Publications for yourself. Their address is 15570 West Knochaven Drive, Canyon Country, California 91351.

-Clyde Walters
Pasadena, CA

Editor: If you found Clyde's comments about the "provoking Gentiles" confusing, well we did too. We asked him to clarify it for us and he said it was meant to be confusing (a touch of humor?). He adds:

The real confusion comes from the use of the term "Israel" in HWA's writings. He stated that most people mistakenly think that the Jews are Israel, but that in reality the Jews are only part of Israel which is composed of the Jews and the Lost Ten Tribes. However, he additionally claimed that the real Israel of today, both racially and nationally, are just the tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh. Now, whichever of his definitions of Israel you choose, you can't reconcile it with Romans 11:11!

The WCG's view of the Israel-Identity theory is put forth in its free booklet The United States and Britain in Prophecy, which has gone through a number of versions over the decades. Some can recall one version that predicted the fall of the United States in the 1970s. Now it appears that the latest edition has again modified older editions. Former WCG member Richard A. Marson, who publishes the newsletter Reality Report, wrote us:

I have taken careful note of the fact that the Worldwide Church of God has continued to strongly promote the American and British-Israel theory since the death of Herbert Armstrong and, in fact, has published a new version of the book dated 1986. Although the latest version is very close to the 1980 edition, it is interesting to compare the two and note a tendency toward becoming less emphatic about various matters: In the new book we read: "Why are the world's best minds often unseeing...." The old book did not include the word "often." In the old book we read: "They are totally unaware! Why?" This statement is left out of the new version. In the old book Armstrong talks about the ancient cities of the Bible and says: "He named every city of consequence.... And He foretold precisely what would... happen...." In the new book the word "every" was left out. There are many other examples of a similar nature, including the proclivity to push the fulfillment of prophecy into the indefinite future.

Since this American/British-Israel theory is still being strongly promoted by the church, I feel it is important to people who are still searching for truth to carefully examine the evidence. For those who would be interested, I have copies of my book on this subject available, complete with notes to the 1986 edition of their book The United States and Britain in Prophecy. The title of my book is American and British Israelism Debunked. It can be obtained by writing Reality Report, 4224 N.W. Market Street, Seattle, WA 98107. Price, $6.95.

Finally, a former WCG minister and Ambassador College professor, who now teaches history at a California college, sent us this interesting letter:

It might interest you to know that the Jan./Feb. 1986 issue of the Biblical Archaeology Review displayed a group photograph of Ambassador College student volunteers at the City of David dig on its color cover. As has been quite common with news releases about the dig, Ambassador is not mentioned by name, but the presence of a smiling Ron Kelly in the middle of the picture makes the identification pretty certain. You will be interested to notice, too, that unlike Ambassador's other dig participants of the 1970s, on whom Herbert W. Armstrong imposed a working-dress code of shirts for men and sleeved shirts or blouses for women, these volunteers of the '80s - now that all "liberal" influences have supposedly been expunged - consist of bare-chested men, and women not only displaying bare upper arms and shoulders, but attired in what one particular Ambassador preacher of righteousness once condemned as "boob tubes."

Incidentally, although the excavations in Jerusalem near the Temple Mount and in the Jewish Quarter unearthed many spectacular architectural remains, one particular early discovery of these Ambassador-supported digs has gone largely unnoticed. In the September 1975 issue of the Biblical Archaeology Review Dr. Magen Broshi of the Israel Museum published an article announcing "Part of Ten Lost Tribes Located." With all the interest in the Ten Tribes at Ambassador, and with the fact that this was one of the first studies drawing extensively on evidence unearthed by the excavations of Professor Benjamin Mazar and Professor Nachman Avigad, both of whom were receiving generous financial support from Ambassador, it is interesting that this article went rather unnoticed there. Based on a more detailed and technical paper he had published elsewhere, Dr. Broshi pointed out that according to evidence obtained from these digs, at the Assyrian conquest of the ten-tribe northern nation of Israel (721 B.C.) there was a large flight of people from these "lost tribes" to the neighboring kingdom of Judah, which was then at peace with Assyria. Broshi stresses that "substantial numbers" of the population were involved. Herbert Armstrong, of course, has insisted that these people, or their descendants, ended up in N.W. Europe. This is the only archaeological excavation I know of which has unearthed evidence so completely contradicting a major doctrine of its financial benefactor. For that matter, how many of the enthusiastic volunteers realized they were helping uncover material that put their beliefs into question?

Yahweh Cultists Convicted of Murder

We sometimes get letters from individuals who seem convinced that Sabbath-keeping, belief in Israel identity doctrines, or knowledge of "sacred names" are sure signs of conversion or deep spirituality. We doubt, however, that that is so. Notice the following, which appeared April 18 in the Hutchinson News.

Survivalist cult leader Michael Ryan testified at his murder trial that "Yahweh" spoke to him directly, and that he could read minds. Ryan, 37, and his son, Dennis, 16, were sentenced to life imprisonment for the 1985 killings of James Thimm, 26, and 5-year-old Luke Stice.

"Yeah, I knew what... people were thinking.... It was weird at times," said Ryan, who denied that he was crazy despite an insanity plea entered on his behalf. He was unconcerned about his fate because "whatever happens is what [Yahweh] wants to happen."

Ryan, who, according to testimony, controlled the lives of the two dozen members of his cult, said he was often reluctant to carry out Yahweh's edicts, but he believed that if you disobeyed, Yahweh would "take it out on someone you love." Former members of his group told of being whipped and kept in chains. In killing Thimm, Ryan said he was "doing what I felt we was told to do, whether I wanted to or not."

Ryan said he began smoking marijuana, which he claimed was justified by the Bible, to soothe chronic pain resulting from a 1978 truck accident. In 1981 he converted to the racist religious tenets of James Wickstrom, former "director of insurgency" for the right-wing Posse Comitatus.

Ryan said his group stole farm animals and equipment, at Yahweh's bidding, to buy food and weapons - as much as 50,000 rounds of ammunition at a time. He said the group only stole from farmers with insurance.

Experts in non-mainstream religions are puzzled by the "talking through the arm" ritual allegedly taught to convicted murderer Michael Ryan by Posse Comitatus leader Jesse Wickstrom. "The arm stuff is used by various groups associated with the Identity Movement [British-Israelism]," said attorney Randal Rehmeier, who helped prosecute Ryan.

In the ritual, a questioner puts one hand on another person's shoulder and the other hand on that person's upraised wrist. When a question is asked, Yahweh signals an answer by forcing the person's out-stretched arm to either rise or fall; a rise means yes, a fall, no. Researchers believe that the ritual is a form of divination, but are unsure as to its origins.

In the spring of this year, the Omaha World-Herald ran a long series of articles on these "Rulo Farm murders," as they were called. Witnesses testified to the verbal abuse, beatings, drug use, polygamy, homosexuality, divination, torture and murder that engulfed the Ryan cult with its iron-fisted dictator who believed in Israel-identity and claimed to be following Yahweh's commands. Convicted along with the two Ryans was cult-member John David Andreas who was sentenced to 30 years on related charges. Andreas formerly attended WCG services in Omaha where his parents are "charter members" of that WCG congregation.

Materials of Interest

One More Sunday by John D. MacDonald is a novel about greed and exploitation in big business religion. Some who have read this novel see parallels to the WCG and the Armstrongs. In fact, they are even mentioned by name on pages 29, 30, and 245. The best seller is available in many bookstores and libraries or for $4.45 (in paperback) by writing to: Fawcett Mail Sales, Dept. TAF, 201 E. 50th St., New York, NY 10022.

The Bible Sabbath Association, Fairview, OK 73737 has recently published a new edition of its Directory of Sabbath-Observing Groups. Christians interested in seventh-day Sabbath observance will find this $7.00 directory a valuable source of information on Sabbatarian churches, schools and publications.

* * *

From Sabbath to Sunday by Dr. Samuele Bacchiocchi is without question the most thorough historical study we've ever seen on the replacement of Sabbath keeping by Sunday observance in early Christianity. Dr. Bacchiocchi, now a Seventh-Day Adventist college professor, was the first non-Catholic to graduate from the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome (summa cum laude) and this work was actually published by the Pontifical Gregorian University Press in Rome (apparently causing some to speculate on whether the Vatican would some day consider the reestablishment of Sabbath-keeping among Catholic Christians).

Anyone interested in the seventh-day Sabbath or the history of the early Christian church will find this 369-page book a welcome addition to their library. A copy of From Sabbath to Sunday may be purchased for $12.95 by writing to Biblical Perspectives, 230 Lisa Lane, Berrien Springs, Michigan 49103, U.S.A.

* * *

Joel Bjorling has informed us that his book The Churches of God, Seventh Day: A Bibliography should soon be off the presses. This bibliography, which includes a history of Sabbath-keeping groups in America, a study of the issues involved in the Sabbath-observance controversy, and a study of the issues involved in the "sacred names" controversy, will be over 300 pages long and will sell for $35. For more information write: Joel Bjorling, RR 2, Gilson, IL 61436.

Giving & Sharing, 4673 Onondaga Trail, St. Charles, MO 63303-7328 (tel. 314-447-8773). This small organization, headed by former WCG member Richard C. Nickels is one we think many of our readers can benefit from. Mr. Nickels describes Giving & Sharing as "a nonprofit mail order bookstore serving the Sabbath-observing Churches of God around the world." They carry most Bibles and religious books in print, and ask for a suggested donation to cover their wholesale cost of materials. Giving & Sharing puts out a very forthright flyer on Nickels' background and beliefs. Their listings include numerous works on the history of Sabbatarian churches and a short, but interesting, biography of Herbert Armstrong. We think that Bible students, even should they disagree with Nickels' theology, will benefit from contact with Giving & Sharing as he makes available Bibles and Bible helps at well-below retail prices. Write to him for details.

Joseph Hopkins, the author of The Armstrong Empire (1974) recently sent us Christmas greetings. We were glad to learn that he, his wife (a professional musician) and four grown children are all well and prospering. Dr. Hopkins continues to teach at Westminster College in Pennsylvania, is minister of visitation at First Presbyterian in New Castle, Pennsylvania, and is very active as an international tour guide. This year alone he traveled to Britain, Ireland Kenya, and the Sough Pacific. Dr. Hopkins continues to follow the WCG's activities and has put together a new four-page outline of WCG beliefs and history. Those interested in a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Joseph Hopkins, c/o Westminster College, New Wilmington, PA 16172.

The Cult Awareness Network (CAN) is an organization devoted to alerting the public to the danger of destructive cults. CAN keeps tabs on hundreds of cults and reports its findings in a monthly newsletter. CAN also publishes some excellent papers giving advice to parents or relatives of those who have become ensnared in a cult. Not surprisingly, CAN considers the WCG to be a cult, and over the last few years, CAN and its 58 regional offices have often cooperated with the AR. Those interested in learning more about this organization should write to: Cult Awareness Network National Office, P.O. Box 608370, Chicago, IL 60626.

The April-June, 1986 newsletter of the Personal Freedom Outreach carried an article by M. Kurt Goedelman called "The Plain Truth? - or - Nothing of the Truth? A Christian Look at the Worldwide Church of God." The address for Personal Freedom Outreach is P.O. Box 26062, St. Louis, MO 63136.

Our Christian friends at Cornerstone magazine have informed us that their 1987 Directory of Cult Research Organizations will soon be coming off the press. It should be around 50 pages and will contain the names and addresses of evangelical countercult ministries and nonevangelical cult research organizations and experts. The directory sells for $4.95 and may be ordered from: Comerstone Press, 4707 N. Maiden, Chicago, IL 60640.

Former WCG member and Ambassador alumnus Harold Hemenway has produced an eight-page booklet entitled "Rejected Knowledge!" which shows how the WCG has followed the Roman Catholic Church and adopted some of the latter's theological errors. He has also written a 14-page paper entitled "What Does the Bible Say About Obeying a Man?" which analyzes the primacy of Peter doctrine from the viewpoint of scripture. The booklet is available for 500 and the larger paper for $1.50 by writing to Harold Hemenway, 4036 S. 128th St., Seattle, WA 98168.

Long-time AR supporters and Ambassador alumni Des Griffin and Karen Anderson-Griffin have moved their family and their publishing operations out of the smog of Pasadena and into the clean air of rural Oregon. They report that they and their children, Dan and Karmonde, are thrilled with their new home. Their new address is Emissary Publications, 9010 S.E. St. Helens, Clackamas, OR 97015 (phone: 503-824-2050). Among the books they distribute are the Armstrong exposes by Robinson, Tuit, McNair, and Hopkins. Write to them for details.

Steven Collins continues to turn out articles that could benefit many in the WCG. Of particular interest are "Petra: Place of Safety or Latter-Day Death Trap?" and "How Many Tithes in Tithing?" For a price list of available materials, write Steven M. Collins, 8500 101st St. Circle, Bloomington, MN 55438.

We were totally dumbfounded to learn that a fair number of former WCG members are now embracing something called the "Serpent Seed Doctrine." Those holding to this teaching believe that Satan had sex with Eve, producing "Satan's seedline," and that the seedline is now composed of the Jews and/or the Blacks. We actually know of some who now take this teaching so seriously that they become physically shaken whenever near anyone who happens to be Jewish or Black. The "Serpent-Seed Doctrine" has been given an appropriate critique in an article recently published by the Association for Christian Development, P.O. Box 4455, Rolling Bay, WA 98061. We strongly recommend that those caught up in this new doctrine write the Association for this article and give it prayerful consideration.

Tony Badillo of Xavier Press has discontinued his inewsletter Newsgrams because of a lack of public support. However, he continues to distribute other materials. Badillo still has copies available of his excellent book on tithing ($9.95). His 30-page article "Born Again - But When?", which completely takes apart HWA's doctrine on that subject, is available at $3.00 per copy. Those interested should write to Xavier Press, P.O. Box 11074-AR, Dallas, TX 75223.

* * *

Restoration Fellowship, headed by former Ambassador College professor Anthony Buzzard, publishes scholarly papers on theological matters, including challenges to a number of WCG doctrines. Their paper "Elohim does not mean God in Two Persons" is one we found most interesting. Their address is Restoration Fellowship, Box 100, Oregon, IL 61061, U.S.A.; or in Europe: 91, Hughendess Rd. Marshalswick, St. Albans, Herts., England.

* * *

The Restoration Fellowship's strict monotheistic views are not without critics. One is ex-WCG member Bill Shrewsbury who has written an open letter on the subject. He also has a paper on tithing. They are available on request by writing him at S.R. 3, Box 615, Eustis, FL 32726.

* * *

Author Gene Justice wrote us some months back that he still has copies available of his booklet The Israel Identity Syndrome ($4) and the research paper "The Sabbath for the People of God" ($1.50). Also, he has a free brochure listing other works on biblical topics. For a copy of the brochure send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Gene Justice, P.O. Box 6801, Birmingham, AL 35210.

* * *

The Shofar continues to shock. Publisher and editor Robert C. Williams is convinced that almost all of the WCG's doctrines are in error. For instance, in the June-July issue of his newsletter Williams argues that the Sabbath should begin at sunrise, not sunset. The address for The Shofar is P.O. Box 7399, Phoenix, AZ 85011.

* * *

Former WCG minister Don Prunkard and his wife Jeanne write that they are no longer associated with any church organization, but do have a small publishing, taped-message, and letter-answering ministry. As they have since the mid-70s, the Prunkards maintain some strong views on the WCG. Their address is 8302 Brunswick Ave. North, Brooklyn Park, MN 55443.

* * *

Oscar Murray is a former WCG member who, since leaving that church, has produced a number of research papers on divorce and remarriage, the theology of Paul, and other biblical subjects relating to the WCG. Mr. Murray wishes to share his research with others. For a list of what he has available, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: P.O. Box 124, Millersburg, OH 44654.

* * *

Former WCG member Harold W. Strong is blind, but that has not deterred him from being a dedicated student of the Bible. Via tape recordings, Mr. Strong has given some very sharp observations about the personality of Herbert Armstrong, the WCG's doctrinal errors, and about certain WCG policies that callously ignore the handicapped and burden government welfare programs. Mr. Strong can provide information on such topics via cassette tapes to those that are interested. For his convenience, questions to him are best put on cassette tape. His address is: Harold W. Strong, 111 East 7th Street, No. 108, Sioux Falls, SD 57102.

In the last few years, a number of our readers have stated that they have been helped considerably by the publications of The Christian Verdict, P.O. Box 1311, Fallbrook, CA 92028-0904. One reader wrote us: "Verdict helped me initially with the Sabbath question, but later even more with their articles on biblicism. I now believe they are right in saying that, in a sense, we've made a god out of the word. We should be emphasizing and revering the Word of God, not the word of God. Even Jesus, when quoting from the Old Testament, did not always do it accurately. The Bible has its place, certainly, but it was not intended to be worshipped as we have done."

Although the title "prophet" was not among the many he heaped upon himself, Herbert Armstrong saw himself performing a prophet-like function of "warning the world." In this role, Armstrong found it necessary to spend many millions of dollars in going to world leaders with his message. One former WCG member we know of also believes he has a God-given, warning message task, but he is able to accomplish his mission with only a very tiny fraction of the budget required by the WCG operation. The man's name is John Kerly. And through his "Messenger of the Covenant" ministry, he gets his message to world leaders in the most direct and economical way imaginable - he simply writes to them. In this straight-forward way, he has actually contacted more world leaders than Herbert Armstrong, himself. We've seen copies of some of his letters, and the responses, and quite frankly, we've been left almost speechless. We believe the big spenders of the WCG could learn a thing or two from messenger Kerly and suggest they write him at "White Rock," P.O. Box 1506, Gatlinburg, TN 37738.

Hossca Harrison, P.O. Box 1559, Boulder, CO 80306. Years ago we knew him as WCG member Daryl Harrison of Sacramento, California. But about five years ago, while vacationing in Hawaii, Daryl was in a "drowning accident," went into a coma, and had a near-death experience. As recounted by Harrison, it was during his recovery that a celestial being named Jonah, who Harrison describes as a "master" and "teacher of righteousness," began communicating to, and through, him. Jonah has since given Harrison the name "Hossca," which supposedly means "the shining one." Hossca now tours the country giving seminars on such topics as "Atlantis - Yesterday and Today," gives private readings at $75 a visit, and has a tape program. We'd normally discount such phenomena as less than claimed. However, we did notice in a lengthy article on Hossca in the Boulder, Colorado Sunday Camera of Feb. 10, 1985 that Seattle psychotherapist David Calof says Hossca is "more psychic than psychotic" and claims he has healing powers. We have yet to see the evidence.

An Important Comment on "Groups"

Attempting to keep track of the ever increasing new WCG-offshoots, the offshoots of the offshoots, and the many other groups to which disenchanted WCG members turn is becoming increasingly difficult. We remind our readers that we do not have the resources to check into each listed group, and that mention of a group - even if accompanied by favorable comments - DOES NOT CONSTITUTE AN UNEQUIVOCAL ENDORSEMENT OF EVERYTHING THEY DO OR TEACH.

For instance, in our October 1985 issue, we mentioned the Church of God, the Eternal (CGE) headed by ex-WCG minister Raymond Cole. Our comments were somewhat favorable because of glowing reports from certain current CGE members. As soon as that issue was mailed, however, we received letters from a number of former CGE members who said the leadership in that organization was extremely oppressive, uncaring, self-righteous, and hypocritical, and that we were extremely naive. Perhaps that is so, but unless we have information to the contrary, we still feel it's preferable to think the best of others and give the benefit of the doubt whenever possible. Richard C. Nickels of Giving & Sharing (see above) offered us this criticism:

I have been associated with a couple of WCG spinoff organizations, and am intimately aware of others. Without judging any specific group, I can truthfully say that some WCG offshoot groups are as bad or worse than the WCG. Rather than "quietly ministering to the flock," as you say, some have, like the WCG, left a wake of shattered individuals suffering from PTSD (Post Traumatic Stress Disorder). I know of several ex-members of offshoot groups who have given up all religion, twice burned by the same sort of thing.

The dangerous offshoots haven't gained notoriety because AR and other media haven't covered the story. There is an "Ambassador Report" but not a "WCG Offshoot Report." I continue to receive correspondence from hurt individuals of various ex-WCG groups, and do what I can to help.

I'm sick of hearing of ministers, WCG or ex-WCG, who don't practice what they preach. Isn't this really what the AR's message should be, exposing the hypocrisy of those in the WCG or ex-WCG, and not promoting a repeat of the same errors?

Mr. Nickels does have a point, but still there are many AR readers who ask that we keep them informed of new WCG-related groups and movements. We think there is a value to mentioning such organizations and we hope we can continue to do so. But please keep in mind that unlike the WCG, whose headquarters are in our own "backyard," many of these groups are located in distant states and we do not have the means or the inclination to check into all their activities. That being the case, listings should not ever be viewed as endorsements of everything these organizations do or teach.

Alumni News

One of the nice things about publishing Ambassador Report is being able to hear from, or about, many AC alumni we've known over the years. Unfortunately, not all that we hear is good news.

We were saddened to learn of the death of WCG Preaching Elder Mike Hechel (Big Sandy, 1966). Mike's wife, Kay (Big Sandy, 1962-66) told us he died from colitis which had developed from the stress he experienced while serving in the WCG ministry for over 19 years. She wrote us:

As of this date, five months since Mike died, not a single person from the WCG has ever called to see how my three teens and I are doing. The local pastor who replaced Mike has never called. The lack of Christianity in the church now is unbelievable. I have been around the WCG for close to 30 years and spent four years at AC. To be treated like this is very sad.... I have removed myself from their presence and I have come through this ordeal only with the help of a lot of friends. I am happier now and more at peace than I have been in years. Until recently, I did not realize how the WCG was depressing us and keeping us from being true Christians. It is very sad to know of the many lives - including my husband's - that they have destroyed with their total domination.

-Mrs. Kay Hechel
203 White Church Lane
Summerville, SC 29483

Former WCG minister Stan Suchocki (Bricket Wood, 1969) recently wrote us:

After leaving Ambassador College employment in 1980 I began working as a cost engineer at Santa Fe Braun in Alhambra, California. But in August I was laid off and Betty [nee Rupp, Pasadena, 1966] and I decided to move back to western New York and look for work here.

Spiritually speaking, Betty and I are active lay members in non-denominational Christ-centered churches wherever the Lord leads. While in the Pasadena area, we were members of Lake Avenue Congregational Church for two years after leaving the WCG and then were led to become active members in the Cornerstone Christian Fellowship pastored by Jim Johnston. I highly recommend this fellowship to anyone wishing to hear anointed messages about the good news of Jesus Christ. Every meeting is blessed and you sense the Holy Spirit's presence. Meanwhile, Betty, our two kids, and I are waiting to see what the Lord is doing in our lives in this western New York area. We are expecting a miracle.

Barbara Davisson (Big Sandy, 1965-1969), now Barbara Woodbury, recently wrote us that in 1982 her husband Vance lost his job as a ranch foreman after being severely injured in a horse accident. After the accident, Vance - whose parents had donated their family ranch to the WCG in the '60s - was able to find employment only as a janitor and bus driver for a small elementary school. To help support their four children, Barbara also started working as a school bus driver and cleaning homes between bus runs. She wrote:

At AC we were ingrained with the teaching that mothers such as myself would never have to work outside the home. And, of course, Christ was supposed to have returned five years before it was necessary for me to help make ends meet. At AC the most important thing was learning how to live, not how to make a living. I had four years of AC but I am barely qualified for any job. I am not the only one who feels this way. Even loyal WCG-member alumni I've talked to feel that an Ambassador education is not worthwhile in the world in which we live.

Many Ambassador alumni complain, with good cause, of the inadequacy of their AC education. And we've known some for whom the "Ambassador experience" played a major role in later severe depression, drug or alcohol addiction, chronic unemployment, etc. There also appears to be as many divorces among former-WCG-member alumni as among current-member alumni. Nevertheless, we've noticed that those Ambassador alumni who've been able to psychologically overcome the "Ambassador experience" and then obtain an accredited degree or marketable work skills are often quite successful both in their careers and in their personal lives.

Marvin J. Plakut (Pasadena, 1979 and Student Body President there his senior year) writes:

From 1979 to 1982 I was the student Housing Officer at AC in Pasadena. In that position I worked regularly with Raymond McNair, Rod Meredith, Dick Ames, etc. During that same time I also diligently studied philosophy, biblical scholarship, and history, and became "enlightened." Pasadena was then rapidly descending into the severe regimentation mentality of Raymond McNair's Bricket Wood and by 1982 I could no longer tolerate the "double agent" role I had to play. I was "kicked out," but by December 1984 I had my MBA from Cal. State, Los Angeles. I am now Director of Support Services for a large health organization here in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Linda Lance (Pasadena, 1971-1973) taught Home Ec. at Imperial Schools and in 1973 married Steve DuCett (Pasadena, 1973). They left Worldwide in 1974. In 1975 Steve enlisted in the Air Force, served four years as a pharmacy technician in Idaho, earned a second Bachelor's Degree (Psychology), an Associate's Degree in Pharmacy and a Master's in Counselling Psychology. He currently works for Dow Chemical selling agricultural chemicals in Iowa and is a captain in the Army Reserve. Linda teaches pre-school, and they have one daughter Laura, who is 12.

Many who attended Bricket Wood in the late '60s will remember Stan Potratz (class of 1969) for his unabiding interest in just about everything having to do with agriculture. Stan recently wrote us:

Ann [nee Morrell, Bricket Wood, 1969] and I separated in 1980 and I have since married a local girl. My wife Jean and I own and operate a mail order business called Premier Sheep Supplies, Ltd. We import specialized products from England, New Zealand, and Australia for resale nationally to U.S. sheep producers. I travel regularly in the northern U.S. and overseas about every two years. The WCG left me disillusioned, but not bitter, and I would be very interested in meeting old friends again. My address is: RR 1, Box 159, Washington, Iowa 52353.

In 1974, WCG employee Andrew McCooey (Bricket Wood, 1974) and Margaret Bond (Bricket Wood, 1970) had just been married and were on their honeymoon when, "in the typically sensitive style of the WCG," Andrew's employer made him "redundant." Margaret wrote: "At the time we thought it was a disaster, but it wasn't. Andrew went into law and after studying and doing articles for five years qualified as a solicitor in 1979. He is in general practice now." Margaret writes that she still finds time for reading and painting despite being the mother of two daughters, assisting Andrew in his work as a lawyer, and pursuing her own legal studies. The McCooey's left the WCG in 1981 and now live in Sittingbourne, Kent, England.

Many of our readers will remember Jeff Calkins (Pasadena, 1973) for his decade's worth of articles in The Plain Truth magazine. Calkins was among those AC graduates who, realizing the severe limitations of an unaccredited degree, saw the value of pursuing a legitimate college education. While working for The Plain Truth, Calkins earned an M.A. in political science at Cal. State, Los Angeles in 1978. He then went on to study law at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles where his achievements included the Dean's Service Award, the West Publishing Co. Award for General Scholastic Proficiency, membership in the St. Thomas More Honor Society, and an editorship with the Loyola of Los Angeles Law Review. Calkins graduated magna cum laude in 1982, is currently a member of the California Trial Lawyers Association, and is with the Santa Ana, California, lawfirm of Lemkin and Kutinsky. His wife Mary (nee Marcussen, Pasadena, 1973) remains a WCG member.

Marc D. Tollefson (Pasadena, 1976) had two years of accredited college work before coming to AC and although he comes from a family of lawyers (his father was a judge), he always wanted to be a dentist. So after Ambassador, he completed his (accredited) undergraduate work at the University of Washington and then went on to get his D.D.S. at that University's dental school. He left the WCG at that time. Marc now is in private practice in Tacoma, Washington. He and his wife Barbara have three children.

Theresa Gordon (Pasadena, 1966-1969), a CPA for some time now, recently wrote us: "This summer I received my Ph.D. from the University of Houston and accepted a position with the University of Idaho as assistant professor of accounting."

This past summer, Gary de Jager (Bricket Wood, 1970), his wife Roberta (nee Mitchell, Bricket Wood, 1972) and their three children, stopped in Pasadena for a few days on their way back to Australia from a six-month stay in Britain. Gary holds a position as tertiary lecturer in computers at Queensland Institute of Technology in Brisbane, Australia (and still maintains his interest in squash, chess, and classical music). The de Jagers left the WCG in the mid-70s.

Allan de Jager (Pasadena, 1969) and his wife Sheena (nee Kenworthy, Pasadena, 1969) live in Brisbane, Australia where Allan is director of a medium-sized computer company. They have four children.

As a WCG employee in the early '70s, Harry Eisenberg (Pasadena, 1969) "began to see the writing on the wall." He applied to Pepperdine University (one of the few accredited universities that would accept an AC undergraduate degree) and earned a Master's in history in 1973. Sheepskin in hand, Harry fled the WCG coop and wound up in Washington, D.C. where for a time he was quite successful as a Savin copier salesman. However, at that time, his marriage to Deanne (nee Cihal, Pasadena, 1968-1970) ended in divorce. (Deanne has since remarried and lives in New York.)

The divorce and a renewed interest in religion spurred Harry to emigrate with his two children to Israel where he lived for four years. But the murder of one of his close neighbors jolted him into realizing, as he puts it, "that I wasn't God's instrument to reform Israeli society and I was happy to return home."

After short stays in New York and North Carolina, Harry returned to the Los Angeles area. Having a strong desire to be a screenwriter, he enrolled in a writing seminar at UCLA where he learned of plans to revive the old Art Fleming TV game show "Jeopardy!" Harry writes:

I contacted the producers to apply for a writing job and with all the other applicants was asked to submit one "game board" within 48 hours. Wanting the job pretty badly, I submitted two. We were basically rated according to how many "good" questions we submitted, and having submitted twice the requested number, I had more acceptable questions and was hired. The show has done very well. We are presently the second-highest rated of some 200 syndicated shows and this year our writing staff was nominated for an Emmy award.

Harry lives with his two children in Saugus, California, and is now engaged to marry Debby Fleming, formerly of Houston, Texas (and never in the WCG).

Attention AC Alumni!

Since August, we've received more AC alumni comments than we have room for in this issue. But we intend to continue the Alumni News section and will include many more next time.

Aside from the fact that we enjoy hearing from, and about, old friends, we think the Alumni News section is important for two reasons. First, current Ambassador students who read the AR benefit from the experiences of alumni. Second, we think case histories help all of us to get the "Ambassador experience" in proper perspective.

Unfortunately, we are often unable to tell some very remarkable stories. All too often we hear from Ambassador alumni who have gone on to real success, but say, "Don't put it in the AR. I don't want anyone to know I was ever a part of the WCG." Frankly, we think that's a little silly. Here's why: (1) The WCG is not the only group in the world that has problems. Many people, if not most, at one time or another in their lives get involved in some less-than-perfect (or downright crazy) church, movement, political party, or government operation of which they are later embarrassed or ashamed. But that's life. We all make mistakes. Why make our involvement with Worldwide a bigger problem than it is, or was? (2) Those who read the AR understand the WCG enough so that when they read of an alumnus with problems, they understand. And when they read of success stories, they know that such success came against great odds. (3) The WCG wants you to hide your story! We know of many WCG "leaders" who regularly tell the lie that all alumni who have left the WCG are "under a curse." Of course, if you're an Ambassador student who rarely, if ever, has any contact with an exmember alumnus, it's easy to be duped by such nonsense.

So why not give the current students at AC and us a hand? If you've ever spent any time at Ambassador College as a student or faculty member, we'd like to hear from you. But please - type or print clearly, include dates of AC attendance, campus, maiden name if you're a married woman, and concisely give us a few highlights of your life since AC. Just use the above Alumni News section as a guide to the kind of news our readers would find interesting.

Our apologies for the long delay since our last issue in August, but circumstances made it impossible to get out an edition in the last quarter of 1986. Although we published quarterly for years, in 1986, as in 1985, we were only able to get out three issues. We hope this year we'll be able to get back on our quarterly schedule, even if one or two issues must be a little shorter than usual. Our thanks to the many readers who wrote us recently, encouraging us to keep publishing. And our special thanks to those whose generosity made this issue possible.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

Tkach Rewrites HWA's Healing Doctrine

Joseph W. Tkach, coronated as the successor to Apostle Herbert Armstrong (HWA) little more than a year ago, has just made the most monumental change in church doctrine in the Worldwide Church of God's 53-year history. Declaring that Christ had revealed "additional new truth to His church," Tkach, "on the authority of Jesus Christ" established a new healing doctrine that is the exact opposite of what HWA had taught for over five decades (The Worldwide News, Mar. 23, 1987).

While we commend Mr. Tkach for his courage and honesty in changing one of the WCG's flawed dogmas, we take issue with his statement that the WCG's revised healing doctrine is "new truth." While it is possible that Mr. Tkach only recently discovered this "new truth," the early New Testament church certainly understood the proper roles of physicians and divine healing, and the mainline Protestant and Catholic churches have had an essentially correct understanding of doctors and divine healing for decades. And as early as 1974 all of Mr. Tkach's "new truth" was discussed heatedly in the WCG's doctrinal committees and was known to hundreds of ministers and church personnel, some of whom were fired for insisting the church recognize this "new truth" along with the real truth about Pentecost, tithing, and divorce. In fact, David Antion, the WCG's director of church administration and the field ministry in the early '70s, wrote a widely circulated paper in 1975 containing the same material Tkach's article on healing "revealed." Also, in 1974, the Foundation for Biblical Research released a detailed booklet (Healing, Medicine, Physicians) that explains the same "new truth" Tkach discovered plus much more, and it is estimated that 20,000 WCG members and former members read it.

We realize Mr. Tkach couldn't afford to say it from a church politics standpoint, but, instead of implying that Christ had just revealed new, additional truth on healing to the WCG, he should have admitted the following: HWA taught heresy on the subject for over 50 years and, even when told of the suffering and death caused by the major flaws in his teaching, HWA absolutely refused to consider any changes to his doctrine. The many ministers who knew better were unable to reverse this heresy until now.

A lot of our newer readers must be asking: "So the church modified their healing doctrine. Who cares?" To answer that, let us first explain what the WCG taught on healing and then show how that teaching affected human lives. David Antion's doctrinal committee paper of 1975 ("A Study and Summary of the Doctrine of Healing") summed up the old WCG position well. His paper noted seven tenets underlying the old doctrine:

(1) It is God's will to heal each and every disease or sickness and He makes this promise in the Bible. (See Psa. 103:3; Heb. 13:8; Mal. 4:6; James 5:14.)

(2) Healing is the forgiveness of sin. Therefore since only God can forgive sin, only God can heal. Healing cannot come by any other means.

(3) One of God's names is "God, our Healer" (Ex. 15:26). Since it is part of God's name that He heals, it is idolatry to trust (and by extension "use") any other means to cure sickness. (See II Kings 1 and II Chron. 16.)

(4) Healing is the forgiveness of sins through the stripes of Christ. Therefore not to trust God for healing is to reject the sacrifice of Christ and to make oneself unworthy to take the Passover!

(5) Faith - it is according to your faith that you will be healed (Matt. 9:29).

(6) We must repent of physical sins just as we would repent of spiritual sins in order to receive forgiveness. (See John 5:14.)

(7) It is sin to administer or to accept drugs since Rev. 21:8 says that "sorcerers" (Greek pharmakos) will have their part in the lake of fire.

Herbert Armstrong stated the following in Does God Heal Today?, his authoritative booklet on the subject written in 1952:

Here's God's instruction to you, today, if you are ill. If we are to live by every Word of God, we should obey this Scripture. God does not say call your family physician.... He does not say, call the doctors and let them give medicines and drugs, and God will cause the medicines and drugs and hope to cure you. Yet that seems to be the way many professing Christians believe, because it's what they practice. Instead God says call God's ministers. And let them pray, anointing with oil... (p. 19).

But what if that alone didn't work? The little booklet answered that one too:

Don't pay any attention to how you feel, or what you see, after you have called upon God for healing. Just know you are to have it - and that's that! (p. 20.)

Garner Ted Armstrong was even more fanatical in a Good News article (June 1964, pp. 4, 22):

To rely on any foods, supplements, medicines, drugs, knives, or even on fasting, for healing (and none of these can, ever have, or ever will heal!) is to break the commandment against idolatry!

The effects of these now-admitted heresies were devastating to the church members who adhered to them. Over the years we have received hundreds of letters from members who saw loved ones die in agony or suffer needlessly because they feared to consult physicians or take medicine. One Oregon reader wrote:

We watched a person in the WCG waste to death rather than go to a physician. Another young person died of appendicitis rather than going to see a doctor. I sit here in continual pain and hemorrhaging because years ago I was "afraid" to visit a physician, and today I can't afford it.

Herbert W. Armstrong's own wife Loma died without proper medical treatment and suffered needlessly due to the stupidity of his heretical teachings on healing. Yet during the last decade of his life HWA surrounded himself with physicians, nurses, medical advisers and every form of medication available in a futile effort to preserve his physical life, all the while refusing to change his healing doctrine for the church (see our issues of Dec. 31, 1981, p. 2; and Jan. 1983). Members refused vaccinations and didn't carry health insurance. Strangely, though, while members avoided aspirin, they swallowed vitamin pills by the millions.

In his recent major article on healing, Tkach writes: "Jesus was deeply compassionate, empathizing with the suffering of humanity. He 'was moved with compassion' toward the multitudes and healed their sick." When you read the above paragraphs, you can't help wonder which Jesus Herbert Armstrong and his cohorts have been praying to and following all these years. How, in God's name, could these arrogant men (HWA, Garner Ted Armstrong, and evangelists Hoeh, Meredith, McNair, etc.) claim to follow a compassionate Jesus and still harden their hearts to the cries of the sick and afflicted? How? - especially when for over 12 years the truth on healing and physicians has been at their fingertips. Oh, they knew better! Of course they did. But pride, arrogance, and a big paycheck had a higher value than did other people's lives. Perhaps with Mr. Tkach in charge the church's hardline approach to dealing with its members will soften, and mercy and compassion will be the new watchwords.

Whatever the case, church members will benefit from the WCG's new understanding of healing. Tkach's material, no doubt influenced by the research of David Antion and the Foundation for Biblical Research (FBR), points out, as did both Antion and the FBR, that Luke was a beloved physician in the New Testament and that "God nowhere in His Word commanded Christians to avoid doctors, to avoid checkups, to avoid medicines, inoculations, or any surgical operation." He goes on to say: "God is our protector and deliverer. Yet does He expect us to avoid calling the police if we hear a prowler in our yard?" Antion, in 1975, wrote: "Is healing totally the prerogative of God? We know that one of God's names is 'God our Healer'... He is our Protector, Provider, our Banner. But we use police protection, security guards, protective helmets, goggles, and seatbelts. We buy insurance. We don't think that this violates or is committing idolatry."

In a real slap at HWA's old teaching Tkach states:

A person can even refuse to seek medical attention because of vanity - a desire to appear somehow more spiritual.... But fear, vanity or self-righteousness is not faith. To die "in faith" without seeking medical attention because of fear, vanity, or self-righteousness would be nothing more than self-delusion.... God does not expect us to just sit down and leave everything up to Him. He has given us minds and He expects us to use them.... Physicians are only mortal men and can only work with the laws God designed to speed, enhance or aid recovery. God has never condemned that. As healing is not a "test of righteousness," neither is going to a physician a "test of righteousness." It does not show lack of faith in God's ability to heal and does not prevent God from performing a miracle....

Let's realize that one kind of medical procedure is not intrinsically more righteous or less sinful than another.... Special diets or supplements are just as physical as surgery, radiation or chemotherapy. One is not more spiritual than another, though some may have more side effects than others (The Worldwide News, Mar. 23, 1987).

Let us rejoice with Mr. Tkach and the WCG over this new enlightenment and hope more new truths will be acknowledged in areas that directly affect people's lives.

The TV Evangelist Wars - Not Enough Sheep to Go Around?

1987 has not been a good year for American TV evangelism. For months now the U.S. news media has reported with unrelenting intensity on various TV preachers who have been hit with accusations of immorality, fraud, and financial irresponsibility.

First there was evangelist Oral Roberts who early in the year told his television audience that God would "call him home" (that is, take his life) if they did not send him $4.5 million by March 31. That fund-raising tactic got Roberts a lot of flak from the press, but it also brought in $3.2 million. As Roberts' deadline drew near, however, he was still $1.3 million short of what he claimed God was demanding. So he told his flock that he would go into a room high up on the "Prayer Tower" at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa to fast and pray, presumably so God would spare his life. That exercise, although carried out briefly, proved redundant when a Florida dog-racing promoter, who candidly admitted he thought Roberts needed psychiatric help, came forward with the $1.3 million ransom needed to stay Roberts' execution. (One can only wonder how many people were disappointed by the dog-racer's generosity.)

Roberts' dramatics hurt the image of TV evangelism, but that image was tarnished ever further when it became known that Tammy Faye Bakker, wife of Pentecostal preacher Jim Bakker and co-host of the religious "Jim and Tammy Show," was admitted to a drug-rehabilitation clinic because of a serious drug-abuse problem. To make matters worse, shortly afterward, her preacher husband resigned from their religious organization, the PTL (for "Praise The Lord") Club, because of accusations of personal immorality. Then, almost daily, those vague charges were fleshed out with more and more lurid details from the news media.

First Bakker claimed he had only once, in 1980, committed an indiscretion in an attempt to get his wife jealous during a low point in their marriage. (It later came out that this low point was when Tammy became romantically involved with a country-western singer.) Bakker tried to portray his fling as a 15-minute episode during which he was so nervous he was unable to perform. But when the "victim," Jessica Hahn, a tall, slender, 27-year-old came forward with her side of the story, Bakker changed his. He attempted to portray Hahn, who was a 21-year-old church secretary at the time of the incident, as an experienced woman who "knew all the tricks." But Hahn later countered that the supposedly 15-minute fiasco had really been an hour-and-a-half session in which she was drugged, forced to perform oral sex on Bakker, and then was turned over to another evangelist for more sex.

While Bakker, in seclusion at his Palm Springs-area home, has tried to give the impression that his moral failings were limited to one incident only, The Nation (April 4, 1987, pp. 419-420) insinuated that local police knew that Bakker "used to put on a blond wig and consort with hookers." To further complicate the Bakker scandal, the preacher claimed that as a result of his affair with Hahn, he fell into the trap of paying blackmail in a futile cover-up attempt. But as more facts surfaced, it became clear that this "blackmail" was really a legal settlement arranged through lawyers to ward off a lawsuit by Hahn.

One would have thought that because of the nature of the Bakker scandal, other TV preachers would have avoided all contact with it. Not so, however. With the exception of TV evangelist Pat Robertson, who is running for the United States Presidency, almost all of the top TV religious personalities have gotten into the act. Smiling Robert Schuller and Oral Roberts, down from his tower, have allowed themselves to be interviewed repeatedly on the matter and have come out with statements in Bakker's defense. And evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, who some accused of being behind Bakker's public humiliation - and for ulterior motives - was quick to publicly condemn Bakker for, not only his personal lifestyle, but for the style of his ministry. (It's not the first time Swaggart has publicly condemned other preachers. Marvin Gorman, a New Orleans evangelist who says he once had an affair but repented, claims Swaggart hounded him out of the ministry with unfounded accusations of multiple adulteries. Gorman is now suing Swaggart for $90 million.) It is interesting that Bakker's PTL network dropped Swaggart's programs last year after Swaggart began endorsing author David Hunt, whose book The Seduction of Christianity strongly criticizes many evangelists, including some who are friends of Bakker.

Most prominent, however, among those interjecting themselves into Bakker's affairs is Rev. Jerry Falwell, who has stepped into the fray to become the new chairman of PTL. Oddly, however, Falwell is a Baptist and PTL is Pentecostal. Because the two denominations have not seen eye to eye on many doctrinal matters, Falwell's move has made many of his own followers wonder about the purity of his own motives. While "The Jim and Tammy Show" (now with a new name and new hosts) is ranked only 13th in the ratings among religious programs, the PTL organization has a $129 million per year income and substantial real estate holdings, including a 2,300-acre theme park, Heritage U.S.A., which draws 6 million visitors per year. (To supplement her income, Tammy Faye sold recordings - 15 albums-worth of her singing religious songs - and had her own line of cosmetics, jewelry, and panty hose. We're not sure if Falwell will be involved in the marketing of these products.) But more significant, perhaps, is PTL's ownership of a cable television network. In the Los Angeles Times (April 11, 1987, Part II, p. 3), reporters Russell Chandler and John Dart pointed out that "Falwell is the only top electronic preacher who doesn't have a satellite network and thus has to syndicate his programs." Of course, with Falwell now the chairman of PTL, that may change.

In writing about the "pulpit wars," the Los Angeles Times, Newsweek, Time, and other publications have all commented that much of the current chaos in the electronic ministry seems to be due to too many preachers trying to share too few viewers. While television evangelism is big business (about $1.3 billion per year), the number of viewers interested in a religious product is not unlimited. In recent years, many TV ministries have experienced lower ratings and declining revenues. Here is what Todd Mason and Scott Ticer wrote in the April 6 issue of Business Week:

The concept of evangelists in need of white knights is a jarring one, but broadcast evangelism always owed as much to Adam Smith as to the Apostles. From the early days of radio, evangelists paid up front for airtime and relied on salesmanship to raise the necessary contributions. These days, though, too many evangelists are chasing too few faithful. "The evangelists have done something even Coke couldn't do," asserts Arthur C. Borden, president of the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability, an accrediting organization. "They have saturated the market."

That market is huge - about $1.3 billion. No longer confined to Sunday mornings, groups like PTL and Pat Robertson's Christian Broadcasting Network use satellites to feed all-day programming to cable systems and independent broadcasters. Bakker's PTL had revenues of $129 million last year. CBN revenues probably top $200 million.

These empires rest on a very small audience by commercial-television standards. A 1985 study by the University of Pennsylvania determined that only five million Americans watch an hour or more of religion per week. The typical viewer is a blue-collar woman at least 50 years old. The growing flock of evangelists is carving this limited audience into ever-smaller pieces. Even top-rated Robert Schuller, the mellow heir to Norman Vincent Peale's positive thinking, is sagging in the A.C. Nielsen ratings. Last year, Schuller's revenues fell $6 million short of his target of $42 million, according to his producer, Michael C. Nason. "We had to cut our budget last year. We're not getting the revenues."

Despite these problems, the demand for airtime keeps building. Dallas ABC affiliate WFAA could fill every morning with religious programming, says President David T. Lane. "There is that much demand, but we won't do it. It's overkill." Meanwhile, evangelists must contend with competing programming, such as the ubiquitous homeshopping shows.

Newsweek (April 6, p. 20) gave this insight:

[Television preachers] tend to come from the same background as their audiences: rural, relatively low income, often somewhat alienated from mainline America. The viewers, says the Rev. William Fore, executive director of communication for the National Council of Churches, "feel they are on the short end of things," and they find order and promise in the televangelists' messages. The preachers, he believes, begin their careers wanting to establish true ministries but fall victims to their own success and a kind of Faustian bargain: to expand, they need ever more viewers, ever more air time and ever more money to buy it. In time, the money becomes an end in itself and the appeals more blatant. Falwell has encouraged his followers to use their savings and even borrow to send him money. Swaggart warns that if he can't buy air time, "then people will die and go to hell by the thousands."

No matter how bad the allegations against Jim and Tammy Bakker, our guess is that within a couple of years they will be back on the air. Most people who support such organizations are either very forgiving or very blind to reality. Long-time readers of the Report know that Garner Ted Armstrong's past makes Jim Bakker seem like an angel. Yet GTA's TV program continues on the air. And even though the documented private life of Herbert W. Armstrong made even GTA seem like a saint, Herbert Armstrong was never taken off the air, and the program he started is thriving as never before. It's a strange world, isn't it?

World Tomorrow Rises in the TV Ratings

How does the WCG's "World Tomorrow" fit into the TV religious picture? Amazingly, just one year ago "The World Tomorrow" was not even among the top fifteen religious programs on TV. But after HWA's death, a change in the program's format boosted it in the ratings. Today "The World Tomorrow" is ranked number four among TV religious programs by both the Nielsen and Arbitron rating organizations (Los Angeles Times, Mar. 25, 1987, p. 29). (See page 4 for a chart showing how television's top religious programs are currently ranked.)

"The World Tomorrow" program's high ranking among religious shows doesn't mean it commands a very large viewing audience when compared to other popular TV programs. For instance, "The Cosby Show" was seen in 28.4 million homes for the week ending March 23, according to Nielsen's ratings. This means the Cosby show's audience was 50 times larger than "The World Tomorrow" program's for that period. And even the 66th-rated show was seen in 8 million homes. Looked at another way, "The World Tomorrow," on 236 TV stations, is drawing between 2,300 to 4,500 viewers per station on average - not a very impressive number when you consider many of these stations are in major metropolitan areas with millions of potential viewers.

WCG contributors perhaps ought to ask themselves if church officials are making wise use of their tithing dollars by pouring millions of dollars into TV programs in hopes of capturing some of the 5 million Americans who watch at least one hour a week of religious shows, when over 230 million Americans are not even tuned in. U.S. News & World Report (April 6, 1987, p. 63) reported that "evidence suggests that the big television ministries direct fewer of their dollars to humanitarian and missionary programs than do the traditional churches." This statement certainly applies to the WCG.

The WCG takes in more money every year than any of the big televangelists, including Bakker's PTL Club. Yet even though there are between 10,000 to 30,000 homeless people within a 10-mile radius of Ambassador College campus in Pasadena, the WCG virtually ignores the homeless and instead pours millions into concerts for the rich and TV programs talking about the end of the world and the sad state of humankind. And like Bakker and the other televangelists, the WCG's leaders wallow in wealth, live in quarter-million-dollar homes, and dine in the finest restaurants. One cannot help but wonder what good it does the homeless to hear (if they have access to a TV set) that "the end is near" and "billions live in misery." But the WCG has always been a church full of people who like to preach at others from a safe distance rather than have to deal one on one with the poor, blind, and naked of this world.

WCG Teenagers on Trial for Murder

Fourteen-year-old Brooks Wilson Trew of Lake Forest, Washington will go on trial July 19 for the murder of Kevin W. Wisman, a 28-year-old North Seattle resident. Wisman was shot to death on the morning of July 13, 1986 and his body was discovered the following day by a friend. Police discovered Trew's wallet at the scene of the crime, and after an investigation Trew, then 13, and a friend, David Richard Mills, age 14, were charged with premeditated murder. The parents of both Trew and Mills are long-time WCG members and the two boys became acquainted through church activities.

Mills has already gone on trial and in December was found guilty of first-degree murder. According to court testimony from Mills, he and Trew planned the murder as a way of getting revenge against Wisman for having previously lured them into sexual acts. On the evening of July 12, the two youths, accompanied by an unnamed 11-year-old boy, went to Wisman's apartment. As before, Wisman provided them with alcohol and sexual acts were performed. According to statements the boys made to police, as Wisman then lay face down intoxicated on his bed, the two teenagers massaged his back. It is alleged that Trew quietly pulled out a .22 caliber revolver, put it to the back of Wisman's neck and killed him with a single shot. The three boys then fled the scene.

According to the Seattle Times of July 22, 1986, Mills had been a friend of WCG member Charles Evino Harris, who in 1985 was convicted of murdering two women, crippling a third, and attempting to murder a fourth individual during a shooting spree (see our June, 1985; October, 1985; and January, 1986 issues). During Harris' trial, Mills' father testified how he and his wife once "thought it would be nice if our sons could get together [with Harris] on a weekend or something, sort of like a big brother, spend some time teaching him things." However, according to testimony given by the unnamed and youngest of the three boys, teenager Mills once talked of how Harris had actually taught him guerrilla warfare and how to kill people.

Accomplice Mills, who has already been sentenced, was tried as a juvenile. Under Washington state law those convicted in juvenile court must be released by their 21st birthday. Accused triggerman Trew, however, will be tried as an adult. David Compton, one of Trew's defense lawyers, presented testimony to the effect that Trew is a troubled youth obsessed with war and death - a Rambo fan who is desperately in need of help. But Judge Norman Quinn, in ruling that Trew be tried as an adult, said that no one has given him a clear idea of how long it would take to cure Trew of his emotional problems, and should Trew reach 19 and still be resistive to treatment, he would regret having kept the case in juvenile court. Mills and Trew are the youngest individuals ever charged with first-degree murder in King County, Washington. And Mills is the youngest person in King County ever convicted of that crime.

HWA Remembered (Part II)

During the '50s and '60s "The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong" ran serially in the Plain Truth magazine. Then in 1967, the episodes covering HWA's life to 1934 were combined to form one 510-page book, The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, Volume I. (This volume was revised and reprinted in 1973, but after a few years the WCG ceased sending copies of it to the public.) Volume II has never appeared, but some months after HWA's death in 1986, the WCG issued another revision of Volume I of the Autobiography.

The new edition opens with HWA's personal crest (some wonder about its symbology) and contains many previously unpublished photographs of HWA as a young man. Some reveal an arrogance typical of HWA in later years, but never before seen in photographs published in official church publications. The new Autobiography is worth looking at, but how truthful is the text? In the past, Garner Ted Armstrong has referred to his father's 1967 Autobiography as "two-thirds fiction." We suspect the new version may be no better. Here is what one of our readers wrote us after reading the new Autobiography, Volume I:

Many times HWA said he would never dignify accusations with a reply. But he did! With reference to page 8 of your April 1984 issue of Ambassador Report: "That was the year [1933] HWA began abusing his own daughter. Is it any wonder he hasn't slept well since?" Note pages 546-547 of the new edition of his Autobiography: "The year and three months (Dec. 1931-Feb. 1933) spent in Astoria, averaging perhaps less than five hours sleep per night - with one ordeal of three days and three nights with no sleep - had left me in a condition which made it difficult to get to sleep at night."

I checked the September 1960 PT, page 5, and did not find that explanation in the original version. He inserted it in the first chapter not covered in the old Vol. I, at a time frame of late March 1933.

There are many, many sentences omitted in the new version, sometimes whole paragraphs and sections. In their place are a few new paragraphs. For instance, he omits some of the references to his having visited Baptist ministers.

On page 426 of the new edition, he omits the fact that it was Taylor, an ex-SDA minister, later a "pentecostal" minister who wrote articles against the Sabbath (pages 410-411 old 1967 edition, also omitted), who first suggested that HWA be ordained (page 398, old edition). On page 427, new edition, he omits the fact that he was ordained so that he could join Taylor in the campaign at Eugene (p. 399, old edition).

He deleted references to the "Sardis church," as well as references to the work GTA is doing.

It is interesting to note that the persecution he writes about did not start until 1933, and then it seemed to be universal. The ministers of the Church of God knew he was not one of them.

On page 567, he writes that Elder Dugger had invited him to join their church, but "I never did formally join it." The word "formally" is new.

Not new, but interesting, is the comment on page 635, "All of us at Eugene church... severed all connection and effort at cooperation with those who had proved themselves willing to serve Satan and their own personal greed, and to injure the very work of God!" This was in August 1937, when HWA's ministerial credentials were revoked. He must have known it was due to his no longer being the husband of one wife, as his god had given him his daughter....

Alumni News

Former WCG writer Robert Gentet (Pasadena, 1962) now lives with his family in Wichita, Kansas and works for Boeing Airplane Co. His wife, Margie (Eaton), Pasadena, 1962-63) is an architect. They have two daughters: Rochelle is studying at Wichita State University, and Renee is majoring in chemical engineering at Trinity University in San Antonio. Besides working for Boeing, Mr. Gentet also writes about science and religion for World Insight magazine. Old friends can write him at 653 Harding St., Wichita, KS 67208.

After 20 years in the WCG, David Summerfield (Big Sandy, 1970) was "marked" in 1982. David writes us that since leaving the church he has "lost many 'friends' but has gained Christ and new friends. I no longer tithe but do help the needy and am blessed far beyond what I was in the church. There is life after the WCG but it is not always easy. If we trust God and follow His lead, He will restore what we gave up and abundantly more." David is married to the former Julie Buchholtz and is a foreman for a successful South Bend, Indiana building contractor.

Claude Michael Murphy (Big Sandy, 1969) and his wife Lois (Holman), Big Sandy, 1968-69) left the WCG in 1975 after "reading the Bible without WCG materials and finding that the WCG was not preaching the truth at all." Mike is currently a licensed engineer for the state of Oklahoma. Religion still plays an important role in the Murphys' lives. Over the past few years, Mike has found spiritual rewards in teaching himself to read the New Testament in Greek. The family regularly attends Eastland Hills Baptist Church, and the Murphys' teenage son hopes to someday become a minister.

A few months after graduating from AC-Pasadena in 1969, Paul Lay was told by WCG minister

Richard Plache that he was demon possessed. Paul wrote us that "for about 12 hours Mr. Plache had me scared out of my wits thinking that I might have a demon. Finally, I came to the conclusion that I didn't have a demon and that if there was a demon causing problems, it was in the church organization."

Soon after this episode, Paul flew back to his parents' home in Des Moines and entered Iowa State University. Since graduation, Paul has been working as a Social Security disability examiner in Des Moines. While working on a claim at a local hospital in 1976, he met medical records clerk Theresa Janssons, whom he later married.

Since leaving the WCG, Paul has been actively involved in several different churches including the Church of God (7th Day), the Bible Church of God (7th Day), the Assembly of Yahweh, and the Living Word Ministry. Recently, however, Paul has found spiritual fulfillment in his close association with several like-minded friends who meet occasionally to discuss religion. As a hobby, Paul writes songs based on the Bible.

Not everyone who has left the WCG is still "religious." After graduating from Ambassador (Pasadena) in 1973, Larry A. Taylor worked for the WCG for a time. But after reading Humanist magazine, he became more interested in humanism and is currently active in the humanist movement. (There are about 4,000 active humanists in the United States, but they are divided into a number of special or single interest groups.)

Taylor, who is a member of the Pomona, California chapter of the American Humanists, attended a 1986 De Benneville Pines retreat for Humanists and Mensans (those with I.Q.s in the top 1% of the population). The Religion section of the Whittier, California Daily News of September 20, 1986 had an article on Taylor and the retreat and quoted Taylor as saying:

"If people were taught real science, we'd have less problems with creationism, astrology, and pseudo-scientific things.... People don't understand science as a method. They think it's a bag of facts. But it is a method of arriving at new facts and new understanding.... We adopt as a philosophy that human beings take responsibility for themselves. We do not appeal to the supernatural for our predicaments."

Taylor is married to Beverly Serbell of Whittier, California (where they now reside) and is currently employed in computer operations for a major bank.

In our last issue we mentioned Ambassador alumnus Jeff Calkins, who became a lawyer after graduating from Loyola Law School in Los Angeles. Another Ambassador graduate who went on to study law at Loyola of Los Angeles is Nancy Wagner (Pasadena, 1976). She graduated from Loyola and passed the bar in 1984. She currently works in the legal department of KNBC-TV in Burbank, California.

That famous television station is where a number of popular television programs (including the Johnny Carson Show) are taped. Also working at that station is John Portune, the former WCG minister and AC faculty member who many regard as one of the best minds ever to teach at Ambassador. He is currently an electrical technician at KNBC. Apparently turned off with the American religious scene, Portune has been quoted as saying, "We need more religions about as much as we need new warehouses."

Quite a number of Ambassador alumni are currently in teaching careers. For instance, Michael C. Kusheba (Big Sandy, 1971) now teaches data processing at Kilgore College in Texas. He told us he has fond memories of AC students and wishes that his current students possessed a little of the dedication of the students he knew at Ambassador.

Many former AC alumni will remember Calvin Tormanen who taught chemistry at Big Sandy from 1975 to 1977 and at Pasadena from 1977 to 1978. Since 1981, he has been an associate professor of chemistry at Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant, Michigan. Tormanen and his wife Susan were members between 1971 and 1979. As well as being an AC veteran, Tormanen is an army veteran who served as a rifleman in the 199th First Infantry Brigade in Vietnam. Tormanen is thankful that he has come through both these experiences relatively unscathed and is now able to live a full and happy life.

Orlin Grabbe (Pasadena, 1970) for a time worked as an assistant to WCG evangelist David Jon Hill and taught theology classes at Ambassador. In the early '70s, however, he decided to move on to other things. After studies at California State University, Los Angeles and the University of California, Berkeley, he went on to Harvard University where he earned a Ph.D. in economics. He is currently a professor at the prestigious Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania.

Orlin's brother, Lester Grabbe (Bricket Wood, 1968) went on to earn a doctorate in theology from the Claremont School of Theology. He taught religion for some time at Ambassador but was found to be "too intellectual." He is currently a professor at the University of Hull in England.

Another brother, Crockett Grabbe, earned degrees at the University of Texas and then went on to earn a Ph.D. in physics at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, California. He is now a professor of physics at the University of Iowa. As a church member in his precollege days, Crockett wanted to go to Ambassador College. His application, however, was rejected because he was considered "overweight." "That," says Crockett, "was the luckiest thing that ever happened to me."

Ambassador alumni David Price (Bricket Wood, 1968) and his wife Sheila (Tremlett, Pasadena, 1970) call London, England home, but their careers regularly put them on the continent. After Ambassador, both of the Prices went on to get university degrees. David received his M.A. in European Studies from London University. After working for a Fleet Street news magazine and for the B.B.C. newsroom, in 1980 he became Information Officer for the European Commission's scientific research programs in Brussels. He left the Commission as an official in 1982 and became a freelance journalist. (He says he much prefers the independence of freelancing over being part of a bureaucracy.) David is currently editor of I'M (Information Market) newsletter, an English and French publication that encourages the use of database and other online computer information systems. (David writes that Report readers who would like a free copy should write to I'M, 177 Route d'Esch, L-1535 Luxembourg.) While his work as a journalist is demanding, David still finds time to pursue his studies toward a doctorate, and he has given seminars and lectured at both London University and Oxford University.

After Ambassador, Sheila earned a joint degree in French and history at London University and later earned an M.A. at the London School of Economics. She went on to do research and teach at South Bank Polytechnic in London where she lectured in French on French politics. In recent years, while working on a London School of Economics Ph.D. in international labor history, she has lived and studied much of the time in Paris. She is currently lecturing at the University of Kent.

David writes, "Since 1980, travelling to and from Brussels, London, and Paris has been a way of life for us." Despite their busy schedules, however, the Prices still try to stay in touch with Ambassador alumni friends.

New Ambassador Alumni Association Formed

Go to virtually any normal college or university in the United States and you will discover an affiliated alumni association. Most institutions of higher learning encourage, and even sponsor, such associations knowing that they promote institutional pride, provide a reservoir of knowledge that can assist the institution in an advisory capacity, and provide their members with a means of maintaining friendships begun in their student years.

Until now, there has been no viable Ambassador College alumni organization. Some years ago, AC attempted to start one, but, perhaps fearing that the "innies" would be contaminated by contact with the "outies" (yes, Ambassador alumni both in and out of the WCG have adopted belly-button symbology to describe their church status), the association did not admit non-WCG member alumni. The WCG-assisted organization folded almost as soon as it was formed.

In the last few years we have received numerous letters from Ambassador College alumni who have suggested that Ambassador Report start an Ambassador College alumni association. We thought the idea was a good one, but we were never quite in a position to get the project rolling on our own.

Now, however, through the efforts of a dedicated group of Ambassador alumni, a legitimate Ambassador College alumni association has been formed. Membership is open to all who were ever students, faculty members, administrators, or on the staff at any of the Ambassador campuses. The organization is not tied to any religious group (or to the Report, for that matter), and is intended as a completely secular organization open to all alumni regardless of personal religious or nonreligious affiliations. So far AC and the WCG have had no involvement with the new organization, but association spokesman Bob Boyce says he would welcome any reasonable WCG involvement church leaders would feel appropriate. The new organization has already achieved nonprofit tax status. Thus all donations are tax deductible.

The association's working committee is composed of Bob and Judy Boyce of Longview, Texas (214-759-0835); Jack and Pat Martin of Dallas, Texas (214-867-5619); Paul and Mary Jo Flatt of Atlanta, Georgia (404-422-5040); Curtis and Melba Borman of Longview, Texas (214-663-2018); Jeff and Linda Booth of Amarillo, Texas (806-353-4400); Tony and Natalie Hammer of Dallas, Texas (214-520-8704); Bob and Sandy Haworth of Tyler, Texas (214-839-7104); Charles Groce of Tyler, Texas (214-561-2525); David and Molly Antion of Pasadena, California (818-577-7870); Jack and Ruthann Pyle of Manchester, Missouri (314-394-5839); Bob Ellsworth of Pasadena, California (818-449-4902); Wayne and Cheryl Freeman of Longview, Texas (214-759-6644); and Dennis and Joye Pyle of Overland Park, Kansas (913-362-8185).

"The Alumni Association," as it is officially called, is currently planning to host an Ambassador College alumni reunion "for all classes since the inception of the institution." The reunion is scheduled to take place at the fabulous Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas, Texas (really a resort within a hotel) on the evening of Saturday, July 4, with a business networking social to follow the next morning. We understand that David Antion will M.C. the Saturday evening activities. Bob Boyce, who is coordinating the event, told the Report that the reunion will provide an opportunity for many old friends to get together in a truly beautiful environment and, for those interested, an opportunity to help chart the association's future course.

The association is very young and its future activities will depend on the needs and desires of those who wish to be involved. Some ideas that are being tossed around are a possible reunion of alumni to be hosted in the Pasadena, California area in 1988, other reunions in other parts of the U.S. and even abroad, and perhaps some type of newsletter or yearly update on alumni. (The Dallas reunion will have a printed program and, we are told, they are accepting paid-for advertisements. Write to them for details.)

We think The Alumni Association may serve a real need for thousands of Ambassador alumni around the world, and we encourage all those who may be even a little interested in its possibilities to either call one of the working committee members listed above, or write to:

The Alumni Association

P.O. Box 9342
Longview, Texas 75608.

They have put together a fine package of information on their organization and the Dallas reunion, and they tell us they will send a free package to anyone requesting it or to any names and addresses provided.

The Concordant Publishing Concern

In our last issue, Clyde Walters of Pasadena mentioned a Christian organization that many of our readers tell us has helped them greatly. The Concordant Publishing Concern, founded in 1909, is a small nondenominational teaching and translating ministry. Their address is: 15570 Knochaven Road, Canyon Country, CA 91351 (telephone: 805-252- 2112). Though it is not associated with any church, there are a few small independent congregations and Bible study groups in the United States and Canada as well as other parts of the world that have an informal association with it. The Concern's ministry, however, is primarily to individual believers, including a good number of former Worldwide Church of God members. Though they publish literature on nearly all major biblical subjects, the Concordant Publishing Concern is best known for its Concordant Literal New Testament With Keyword Concordance and its bimonthly expository magazine, Unsearchable Riches.

Jim Coram, now 41, became the president of the concern a couple of years ago. But when he was in his early 20s, he was a member of the Columbus, Ohio congregation of the WCG. He met his wife-to-be, Suella Grimm, through the WCG in 1972. Shortly after their marriage the following year, they resigned from the WCG, and before long became interested in the teachings and work of the Concordant ministry. Due to the fact that they had resigned from the "true church," strange childbirth "curses" were summarily pronounced upon them shortly after they married. Nonetheless, Jim and Sue have one child, a healthy and bright 12-year-old son, Marc.

Mr. Coram is presently working on a book entitled His Achievement Are We. The following is an excerpt from that theological work:

Believing the Scriptures by Jim Coram

Through the Scriptures we enjoy fellowship with the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. We want to know Him, "the only true God," and the One Whom He commissions, "Jesus Christ" (John 17:3). If we wish to believe the testimony of the scriptures, however, we must first know what they say.

Subsequently, we will need to learn to discriminate between their words and our mere inferences from them, and to apply them to the right time and people, besides judging their sense and apprehending their figures. But before any of these endeavors can begin, we must first know what they say.

Through definitive passages, concerning all subjects of consequence, the sacred writings provide their own internal evidence which establishes the significance of their vocabulary terms and grammatical forms.

It is to be regretted that those who cannot concur with our findings nearly always appeal to "scholars" and "authorities." We do well to consult others, and it is not wrong to agree with them. But the least suggestion that truth concerning any certain subject is practically established because either the "majority" or a certain class or movement find accord among themselves concerning it, is only a manifestation of foolishness if not conceit.

Most have little inclination and no idea how to discover the meaning of scriptural terms for themselves. Few seem to realize that translations, for all their likenesses, frequently vary in many important particulars. They do not merely differ in the way the passage is expressed, but they differ concerning the essential ideas which the passage contains. Their differences are frequently substantial, not merely incidental. It is evident, then, that even scholars are often confused, or that they are at least quite inconsistent in the application of their knowledge.

Who are we to believe - those who boast the loudest of their credentials or those of their mentors? Are we to entrust our faith to those who are the most vociferous and adamant - who insist that they and theirs alone are "orthodox," "evangelical," "conservative," "spirit-filled," or perhaps even the "true church" or "apostolic"? Through such shibboleths, those who appeal to such things are only removing all doubt that they are entirely out of sympathy with the apostle Paul's words, "Let no one be boasting in men" (I Cor. 3:21).

The meaning of any certain word may not always be vital, but the principle involved of founding all upon God's Word, apart from human learning and theology, is always vital and must be sustained at all hazards.

The scriptures are our only authority. There are helps (and hindrances), but no "authorities." Expositions represent fallible human endeavors to grasp God's truth as revealed in His word, and are neither authoritative nor inspired. The opinions of the founders of evangelical movements, however great or godly, are no more authoritative than those of other believers, are equally amenable to the tribunal of Holy Writ, and must stand or fall by its verdicts. To set up the teaching of any man, or set of men, as an "authority" is a return to Romanism.

When considering the meaning of a word in the Concordant Version, or in any version, most presume that the meaning intended is that of the common definition (including its usual connotations) which prevails in ordinary English usage. As a rule, they already know this definition without consulting a dictionary. But even if they do refer to some type of lexical aid, most still presume that the primary or most popular English definition which is given in such a work is the idea the translator had in mind. But this is not always the case, and it is never the way to engage in discovering the meaning of a scriptural expression.

In preparing a version, even a comparatively literal one, consideration must be given to idiom, and in many cases concessions must be made due to a lack of correspondence between the original and the receptor language. Though it should not be the primary consideration, good diction must be preserved as well. This is essential if a version (or "translation") is to be useful to the great majority of its readers.

In the nature of the case, on the whole, all translations must be imperfect representations of the original. Yet even the worst are accurate in many particulars. They contain much that is true, even though a high percentage of their renderings are either poor or positively false. Understanding the words, phrases and grammar of the original, based upon the knowledge gained from its own definitive passages, is the only sound (or possible) basis for faithful translation. This is the Concordant method (and, it is the only Concordant method). To the degree that we follow it, our renderings are correct. Others follow it to a great degree themselves. If they did not, all their renderings would be wrong instead of only some of them.

A "word" is simply a speech form that denominates or describes a particular object or action. Within any certain period of time, those words which come into common use during such a period (or already exist at its beginning) cannot possibly denote more than one idea, even if they should soon find themselves being employed in a multiplicity of special applications. Otherwise, communication (much less translation), except for perhaps a few well-placed grunts, would be impossible and vanish from the face of the earth.

In the majority of cases, the words which comprise a statement are not used definitively. Their declarations may be vital, but that has nothing to do with whether or not they are definitive. For example, the words of Roman 3:24 are of the greatest importance to us, for they lie at the heart of the gospel: "Being justified gratuitously in His grace, through the deliverance which is in Christ Jesus." But what does it mean to be justified? What does it mean for something to occur gratuitously? What significance is there to the fact that this gratuitous justification occurs in God's grace? Neither the passage nor its context will inform us.

We must learn the force of each of these terms from other places. For example, "justify" appears definitively in passages such as Deuteronomy 25:1 and Luke 7:29; "gratuitously" is illuminated through John 15:25 and II Thessalonians 3:8, even as "grace" in Romans 4:4 and 11:6.

It is through such passages as these latter ones that we determine the meaning of these key expressions. We then carry the knowledge we have gained concerning the meaning of these words into our considerations of Romans 3:2-4. Before we read it, we already know what each of these terms mean, and only wish to note their particular usage in the passage at hand. There is no other way to be certain of the meaning of a word whenever it appears (as is usually the case) in a passage that is less than definitive. In many passages it is possible to assign any one of several ideas to a term and still express a conceivable thought through the clause in which it is found. But this is only to speculate, it is not to know. We are not to guess, we are to believe. Yet we cannot know what to believe if we do not know what has been said.

The best of tools still require competent workmen, if good work is to be produced. Likewise, the most accurate translations of the scriptures must be used intelligently and skillfully. There is much to consider beyond the matter of translation. But an accurate translation will prove to be very useful to all its thoughtful readers and is simply indispensable to the careful student.

The Concordant Publishing Concern has recently put out a tape entitled "The Meaning of God's Words." The tape is normally $3.50, but Report readers who write to Concordant at the address above may obtain the tape, a copy of Unsearchable Riches, and a listing of available materials for only $2.00. Those interested in theological study may find this an economical way to acquaint themselves with this unique ministry.

Letters

My husband and I were faithful sheep for nearly 18 years, but upon reaching our late 70s, we were no longer able to physically or financially participate in WCG activities. When we began to absent ourselves from activities and services, it soon became apparent that we were no longer welcome. When we did attend, the minister would reach across in front of me to shake hands with the "faithful." Members would turn away when I approached. This was a challenge and was welcomed by me. I began to vocally air my opinions.

There came a day when a minister phoned for permission to hunt on our property. I refused him. Next came the "witness of three." Each member in his turn paid us a visit. They sat at our table and ate our food... while all the time they were getting information to take back to the preacher. Another phone call came for permission to hunt and another "no" was given. The preacher then said, I understand that you do not approve of the way the church operates." I told him I did not care one way or the other what the church did... he then asked me if I was familiar with Matt. 18:16-18. Next Sabbath we were officially disfellowshipped.

Only one couple stood by us. Others hid when they saw us in a store. One lady we know phones and asks if we've received the latest AR. If we have, I will discuss it at length with her over our party lines. She phoned me... and in the course of the conversation she said they were the lowest they had ever been financially, but that they had heard a sermon on offerings and tithing. She said, "How can you give the 10th dime if you only have nine?" She says there is little communication between WCG members and that everyone is afraid to say anything. She knows how great we feel being free from that bondage.

-Missouri

When we came into this church, my husband had an excellent reputation as a barber and hair stylist. Unfortunately, his boss's business was open Tuesday through Saturday, and when Saturday was cut out of his work schedule, it left only a four-day work week. He could cut only so many people's hair in four days, and his boss and a co-worker did all they could to make him miserable. Since we were instructed to tithe ten to twenty percent (plus), it wasn't long until we were late on rent, utilities, and bills. The assistant pastor told us to "tighten our belts." Three moves later (that is, the last time we were asked to leave our home), we began to question why God takes from the poor. It became obvious we couldn't afford to tithe.

When my husband couldn't get by working only four days, his alternative was to open his own shop. Things seemed to work smoothly... but, we had unforeseen setbacks. In 1984, we couldn't come up with our taxes. We counselled with the ministers [and were told to] "hang in there." They made it obvious that they were disgusted with our financial problems, and we were told, "You'd better do something quick!"

We wrote to Ambassador College for further help and asked them if God made provisions for the poor. When our minister found out, he was fit to be tied. We received no answer from headquarters so we called them. They gave us smooth talk, but no real answers. This was the real beginning of our woes with the minister, assistant minister and several members. We felt like two unwanted, unloved, rejected-by-God nothings! We tried to fight the depression, but... unfortunately even my best friend became convinced that we had deep spiritual problems.

My husband was under so much stress. We were unable to pay our taxes, we were forced to go out of business, and yet we kept on tithing! We observed the Feast of Tabernacles in 1984. During this time, we opened our home to a church family that turned out to be wolves in sheeps' clothing. We knew this family had problems and we wanted to help them if we could. It wasn't any secret by then that we weren't in good standing with the ministers. This man went back and told the ministers that we were going to start our own church - an out and out lie! We were upset, but not idiotic enough to do that!

Well, after we sold the shop, my husband couldn't find a decent job.... He searched the Bible for answers regarding the provisions God gave for the poor. He came across Lev. 25:35-36 and we were able to cross-reference Mal. 3:9-10 with Proverbs 3:9, Deut. 18:20-22, Jeremiah 14:14 and Jeremiah 28:9. We also found a booklet published by HWA in 1956 titled "1975 in Prophecy." This began to open our eyes and we realized God was still with us and that this church was a false church!

-Ohio

Editor: We contacted this couple recently and were pleased to learn that since leaving the WCG their situation has greatly improved.

A young woman I know was asked to turn over her property to the WCG. The woman's first husband had been killed in a traffic accident and the property was intended for their young son. After her first husband's death, the woman remarried a WCG member who sent all his money to headquarters and lived off her salary. When the church insisted she turn over her property to them (or to her second husband who would have then turned it over to the church), she refused. As a consequence, she was declared unwelcome. She ended up leaving both the church and her second husband.

-North Dakota

Editor: We are in the process of compiling a file on how the WCG's legal department "assists" members with their wills and in signing over their estates to the church. We would appreciate hearing from any readers with information in this area.

Since my husband joined the WCG, my situation has proceeded downhill all the way. My husband started throwing out all "impure" foods, from canned vegetables to boxed foods, cereals and frozen foods. He even went so far as to throw out medications. He stopped giving me money. He insisted upon doing the food shopping himself. He stopped our credit cards, gas credit, and turned off the electricity. He beat me twice and finally the judge made him leave the house. He still hasn't given me a dime and I have three little children to support! Yet in one eight month period, he gave the WCG over $3,000! The Children's Protection Service got involved and when my husband was questioned about not giving us support, he denied everything.

-AR Reader

Editor: This letter is unfortunately typical of dozens we have received this past year from women all across the U.S. It appears that in the evolving WCG, supporting the ministry is considered more important than supporting one's own children.

My husband has become involved with the WCG. He has not joined it yet, but it has already done enough damage to our marriage that it will never be the same again. If I can do anything at all to turn him around, I will. Maybe he will read the AR and start thinking for himself again. We have been married for 25 years, have children and grandchildren, and I am not willing to give up on this marriage just because some organization has him brainwashed. I will continue to fight to save our marriage until I see there is no hope left...

I thought I was going nuts and thought maybe I was wrong because I felt so strongly against this. Then I read some of the letters in your report. I find I'm not alone. If I can just show him that he is wrong in believing some of these so-called "truths"! He has changed from a very loving, caring man into a very sad, frightened, unfeeling human being. For some reason, he is not able to see this. If I could just have the man I married back again!

-Colorado

I will begin by saying I attended the WCG for 25 years (baptized 17 years ago). I am now out of it and picking up the pieces of my life.... At 19, I was very anxious to get married as [we were taught] there were only two years until the time to flee to Petra. That was also the year that my husband borrowed money to give to the church while I begged him for more money to feed us. From day one we struggled. Also, he was the head of the household so he could demand full course meals three times a day with meat at lunch and dinner - no matter what.

Everytime he lost his job it was my fault because I was so security minded and God had to punish us. I suffered for 16 years, but fortunately I was blessed with wonderful children and my love for them kept me going. My husband and I are now separated and getting a divorce. Thankfully, I guess because I did most of the child-rearing, our children no longer want to go to WCG services.... My husband is bitter towards me and holds the threat over me that if I interfere in any way [with what he teaches the children when he has them], that he will have me "marked." Much of my family is in the WCG so I have to be careful not to say anything.

I am trying to deprogram myself from the mind-control and teachings of the WCG... Sometimes when the pressure is too much I read the articles in the AR and it helps me to be so thankful that I am out and starting the climb up to a better life. I have lived with guilt for one thing or another for so long that it is difficult to rid myself of it. How can that possibly be the way God wants us to live?

-Canada

One day I happened to notice in my husbands Sabbath notes a complete lesson or sermon on how important it is to have foreplay with your mate during sex. It made me sick!... I made a promise that when HWA came into our bedroom that was where it would end.... My husband has been a member for almost a year and it's been a year of hell and misery for our marriage and our family. I have fought this cult in every way.... I don't understand why anyone would let an organization like this run their life.... Well, I've had it up to here, and I will not stand quietly by and accept this garbage.

-Connecticut

My wife is still a member and the WCG keeps hounding her for money and she doesn't know any better than to give it to them. Just recently she pledged $300 to send to Hawaii in the amount of $25 per month for a year. I don't know what the money is for, but I think it is for the Y.O.U. program. She won't talk to me about the WCG and she doesn't want me to talk to her about the Bible, so my home is a lonely place.... My wife will only listen to what her ministers say and will no longer read anything that does not come from the WCG. She is afraid she will be deceived if she reads anything that is not approved by their ministry.

I left the WCG about six years ago after being a member for 15 years. It is so good to be out of that dictatorial bondage and to be able to study the sacred scriptures myself. I have learned much and am growing spiritually. I am at peace with God and rejoicing in His grace free from fear.

- Washington

I am very interested in keeping up with all the changes and developments in the WCG as several of our children and their families are yet entrapped in this organization - after all these years. I can see the terrible eroding effects it is having upon their lives and I also know of the terrible after-effects that this organization can have upon a person, even years after they have come out of it. In the case of my daughter, it has left deep emotional and mental disturbances.

-Minnesota

Thanks be to God, my one daughter and her family are now out of Armstrong's Satanic control and the letters in your recent report should help to withdraw my other daughter and her family. Meanwhile, I am not communicating with that daughter and her family at all since I made it very plain that while they are prepared to give honor to Armstrong in preference to their own mother they can just forget I exist.

I believe... that family is beginning to feel hurt at my ignoring them. So once again the saying that to some, "one has to be cruel to be kind" may be proving fruitful. I have not replied to their Mother's Day card and gifts, but instead have cut out and sent them the letter in your report telling of the Deacon and Deaconess who woke up to the fact that they were following the instructions of a mere man.

-Virginia

Editor: We can well understand your strong feelings on the WCG. But if your children are thoughtful enough to send you a Mother's Day card, wouldn't it be better to "disagree without being disagreeable"?

I realize that the AR is not meant to be a sounding hoard whereby ex-WCG ministers should confess their shortcomings, but it seems odd to me that out of the hundreds of them there hasn't been even one that I can think of that publicly apologized for the wrong-doing they have done toward their fellow man. Or do they still feel as they did when they were in "power" - that they are beyond reproach?

-Minnesota

Editor: We've known of a few who have expressed remorse over their involvement with the WCG. For instance, note the following letter.

Many thanks for your efforts. It's hard to believe the destruction we ministers wreaked on some very lovely people who have sacrificed so much for a handful of wind. Keep plugging, maybe you can pry a few more from the wreckage.

*-Charles Hunting
(Former WCG evangelist)
Florida*

People are still dying over Herbert Armstrong's doctrine that members cannot see doctors. A local elder's wife died here recently. She had refused to see a doctor up to her last breath. She literally starved to death. She was buried and her husband was on his way to the Feast of Tabernacles that same afternoon.

-Pennsylvania

Editor: Hopefully, with the WCG's new healing doctrine we may see fewer of these needless tragedies.

Brenda Denzler honed in on a trend which has nagged at my mind for months. Before my exit, I was shocked at the attitude communicated "from the top down" that death was to be embraced. Sorrow or normal grief over a death was heretical, putting a member's "conversion" in grave (no pun intended) doubt. Gerald Waterhouse (is there no stopping that man?) mentioned in a tape last spring that there were only two ways to live through the Tribulation - death or Petra. Given Petra with Gerald, death probably would be better, come to think of it... What are the implications of a philosophy like this? Suicide, mass murder, and ever-present fear seem very likely possibilities.

-Texas

After reading your last report I feel better in knowing I was right in what I saw and felt about the WCG. I once thought it was just me. Most of all in the WCG there is the fear to question anything. Be dumb, blind, and ignorant or be put out. The capacity for logic is not there, and if you have it, you will be told that "many ways seem right to man but such are the ways of death." Love and concern have diminished. You may even be reprimanded for using the word "love" in a prayer! Sincere desires to improve the church will get you disfellowshipped. Tunnel vision is what you are required to have. No thoughts, no ideas, no feelings, no expressions, and most of all - no answers to questions. Divorce is being promoted heavily; counselling of man and wife with a minister is often refused. The minister here uses EXTREME emotional outbursts. Men I know of in the church are afraid to speak to him for fear of being put out of the church.

-Kentucky

Thanks very much for sending me your AR. Having been associated with the Radio-Worldwide Church of God since 1957, and having been the first "mixed," black-white family in "the church," I can attest to the validity of the things that you write in the AR.

-Illinois

Getting out of that church was the hardest thing I have ever done. I still have feelings that I have lost my salvation through leaving. I am getting letters from some in the church who wish they had the nerve to leave like I did. I simply couldn't afford second and third tithes!

-Pennsylvania

I don't know how I would have made it without your reports. I felt like God had left me. I found out about the AR from others that were kicked out of the WCG. I felt like there was no place to go. Your reports gave me courage to go on and find a new life. Now I know God is there when I need him. I feel closer to him than I have for years. HWA used to teach that there was no going back once you joined the WCG or you would be lost forever. The fear of this nearly made me lose my mind.... I am happy now. I study the Bible and am close to God.

-Illinois

Our old friends in the WCG keep "coming out." It's just a matter of time until they call us. It's like we're the alumni and our group keeps getting larger and larger. It gives us a good feeling to know where we're going and that God's will is being done in our lives now more than ever.

-New York

I would deeply like to thank you for the Ambassador Report. Just to know there are others who faced the same disillusionment and confusion that I once faced is a great comfort.

-Nebraska

I would like to mention that I have phoned and asked the WCG several times why World War III hasn't started yet. Herbert said on national TV that WWII would start "in our lifetime." I assume "our" included Herbert's lifetime. So far, no response, but at least a couple of the operators on their toll-free number might think about it.

-New York

Editor: The WCG's toll-free number is 800-423-4444.

I sincerely believe that much could be done to prevent the WCG from disrupting or shattering lives if a concerted effort were made by your readers to complain to every radio and TV station and every store which is spreading WCG propaganda (via broadcasts, telecasts, or PT in their own area). Personal experiences or tragic letters printed in current or former ARs from members or former members, etc., could help convince radio and TV stations and stores that they want nothing to do with such a cult. There is great power in numbers and there are large numbers of former WCG members who would like to spare others the unpleasant experiences which they themselves have endured. If they desire enough to spare them, they will act! Previous issues of the AR have shown how the statements of one or two people have made a store reject the PT. The last issue showed how people in Winnipeg have hampered the PT distribution effort. In one way or another, the propaganda could be stopped if those who know what the WCG is got involved.

The WCG is constantly losing members, so their resources would constantly decrease if their attempts to gain new members through the PT and broadcasts or telecasts were hampered. Listen, all of you who have suffered at the hands of the WCG. Think of all the heartaches, the traumas, the shattered lives, the family breakups, the suicides! Help protect unsuspecting future victims from suffering likewise at the hands of the WCG! If you really care, ACT!

A Few Words From the Editor

Longtime readers of Ambassador Report know that we have never made it a practice to spur our readers on to greater and greater contributions to the Report. Nor have we ever suggested that our readers should "sacrifice" for the Report. Such tactics not only repulse us, but we know how financially devastated many have been by their involvement with Worldwide, and we know too how many of our elderly readers have great difficulty just surviving on meager fixed incomes (and such individuals should disregard the following).

I wonder sometimes, however, if our reticence about our financial needs hasn't been a mistake. Our last two issues have left us significantly in debt. That is especially disappointing considering how many have written us saying they greatly appreciated those two issues. Unfortunately, a lot of those letters of thanks were not unlike the one that said, "Keep up the good work! Ambassador Report has been a tremendous blessing to my life and I am sure it is helping many hundreds of people around the world. I'm sorry I can't contribute, but I know God will bless all of you some day in His Kingdom."

That's all very fine, but it somehow just doesn't help us pay the Report's bills. Frankly, I suspect that most of our readers really have no idea how much effort and money it takes to put out a medium-sized, fully typeset, carefully edited newsletter such as Ambassador Report. That may be because we can all go to any newsstand and purchase many high quality, slick, full-sized magazines for two to five dollars an issue. I suspect, however, that many do not realize that the price of such publications is kept artificially low by extremely high volume printing, which drastically cuts the per unit cost, and advertising, which provides most of the revenue for most magazines (and which consumers eventually pay for through increased prices on advertised products). Ambassador Report has neither of these significant marketing advantages. But because of the standards that we adhere to, we still have many of the same expenses that the "big boys" have: office supplies, reproduction fees, long distance phone calls, investigative research fees, legal expenses, travel bills for distant interviews, photocopying costs, tape duplicating, photography (when we can afford it), typesetting, printing, mail processing expenses, post box fees, bulk mailing fees, postage, and on and on it goes.

In order to economize, we do not rent office space, but work out of our own homes. We have no one on salary. And we always shop around for the best prices on those things we need. Nevertheless, just getting one more issue out has often meant very real sacrifices on our part.

Our next issue has been some time in the making and will be one of the most important we've done in some time (and for that reason it may be a bit delayed). That issue won't be published at all, however, without the financial assistance of our readership. If you like Ambassador Report and want to see it continue, please show your appreciation by financially supporting our efforts. Your contribution will make a difference.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR 39 September, 1987

WCG Now Bigger Than Ever

The Worldwide Church of God (WCG) has been without its founder, Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA, 1892-1986), for well over a year now, but still it continues to physically prosper. The Pasadena Star-News, in a front-page article on August 30, reported how the WCG's unaccredited Ambassador College recently celebrated its 40th anniversary. According to the article, WCG membership is now at 87,000 and the church's annual budget is a whopping $163 million.

Clearly, the WCG is growing. And from everything we can tell, it's still pulling in those big bucks by doing the same thing it always has - bleeding its members dry. On page one of the Los Angeles Times business section for August 2 there appeared an article entitled "Debtors' Lives Are Open Book in Bankruptcy" by Times staff writer Michael A. Hiltzik. The lengthy article was not about the WCG per se, but about the current state of confusion in America's bankruptcy courts. The article, however, did contain this eye-opening lead which does tell us a good deal about the level of fanaticism still extant in the WCG:

The legal questions that arise in the federal courthouse of Fargo, N.D., do not normally cover such grand issues as redemption and salvation. But one day last year Bankruptcy Judge William H. Hill found himself confronted with these ultimate matters.

Before him was the case of David and Kathleen Gaukler, who by most measures would have to be judged destitute.

The Gauklers had annual expenditures of $28,470 on their annual income of $21,700. They were supporting four children. Mrs. Gaukler had lost her job. They had lost their home, and their car had been repossessed. They were spending $280 a month on food for their family of six, an amount that Judge Hill considered adequate "to purchase little more than subsistence provisions."

Where was the money going? To the Worldwide Church of God, the fundamentalist church known for its luxuriant Pasadena campus and the sweep of its television ministry. Of their monthly income of $1,800, the Gauklers were contributing more than $672 per month to the church.

Hill took the opportunity to question the church's credo. "It seems a quite stern and uncaring religion that would require faithful adherence to such a level of giving," he complained. Of the Gauklers he wrote: "Apparently they are willing, on the basis of church dictates, to sacrifice the financial well-being of themselves and their children in order to make contributions they obviously cannot afford."

But he could not bring himself to step between them and their God, and, with a figurative sigh, he approved their petition of bankruptcy. "This wasn't a case of their setting themselves up as a religious corporation and donating money to themselves to buy a Mercedes," he said later. "These people were very sincere."

All of us at Ambassador Report were moved to read of the plight in which Mr. and Mrs. Gaukler (and their four children) find themselves. We called the Gaukler residence to offer our assistance, but Mr. Gaukler, sounding very nervous, refused to discuss the matter. Later calls were not answered. And a follow-up letter offering some advice (along with back issues of Ambassador Report) received no reply.

Filippello's Elijah Work

On the morning of July 1, thousands of readers of the Pasadena Star-News were confronted by a full-page announcement entitled "Open Letter to the Worldwide Church of God." The ad began with a strong rebuke of the WCG's leadership and charged that there is adultery among the church's top ministers and serious deviation from scriptural teaching. (The ad's author is particularly angry with the WCG's latest divorce doctrine and with the church's policy that ministers need pay only first tithe, not the three tithes required of the lay members.) The ad then provided a very detailed prophecy outline of the "end times" based on the author's understanding of over two dozen quoted biblical passages.

Most Pasadenans, after reading 15 years' worth of headlines about WCG scandals, defections, investigations, lawsuits, and the like, were probably amused by the ad. Undoubtedly, however, some were not laughing when they read that "beginning April 1st, 1988 no rain will fall on the United States, England, Canada, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand... April 1st 1988 to July 1989 one third of the above nations (their populations) will die from famine, pestilence and disease epidemics caused by the first four trumpets."

Who placed the ad? For a few days we didn't know. The ad was sponsored by the Church of God Philadelphia Era (1800 S. Robertson Blvd., Suite 49, Los Angeles, CA 90035), but contained no identification of its author other than this cryptic statement: "The name Shiloh, Elijah, Wonderful Numberer, One of the Two Witnesses, Joshua, an Eagle, a Peg, the Last Prophet and many more hats I will be wearing of which my major responsibility will be Rev. 12:14...." A few days later, on July 6, the Pasadena Star-News ran a story about the ad and identified its author as Martin C. Filippello, who in March of this year resigned from the WCG ministry after 29 years of service. In a March 7 letter to WCG

Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach, Filippello not only resigned from the WCG, but turned down an offer of full-time employment by the church (in recent years he has not been on full salary with the WCG). Among the reasons he gave for his decision was this statement: "We should be teaching God's people that God hates divorce and yet leading ministers are married to divorced women. We wonder why we are having a disaster with many marriages in God's church. The entire book of Malachi indites [sic] us. We are the ones stealing God's tithes."

After listening to a number of the taped sermons that he offers free to those who write for them, we phoned Mr. Filippello, and he graciously consented to an interview. Mr. Filippello was cordial and quite open. He does not hide the fact that he believes he is the prophesied end-time Elijah, and he is convinced he has the responsibility of attempting to turn the WCG from its sins. Filippello, besides identifying the Elijah of Malachi's prophecy, teaches that the WCG is the Laodicean Church of Revelation, that Joseph Tkach is the "man of sin" described in II Thessalonians, that Herbert W. Armstrong will be resurrected in January 1988, that Tkach's reign will end in March, and that "the great tribulation" will begin April 1st (a day we think many will find appropriately symbolic).

The WCG has tried to distance itself as much as possible from Filippello, even going so far as to insinuate to the press that he has a mental problem. Perhaps the two to three hours of Bible study that Filippello does each day have produced an overly vivid imagination. But frankly, he doesn't really sound any less rational than most WCG ministers, and he sounds considerably more rational than some such as Gerald Waterhouse.

Why Filippello feels so compelled to take on such a unique mission we don't know. It is interesting, however, that Filippello and Tkach are both from Chicago, were once very close friends, and were even ordained local elders on the very same day. We understand the WCG has told its members not to listen to any of Filippello's tapes but to immediately destroy any they receive. But if everything Filippello says is crazy, why should this be necessary?

Mr. Filippello told us that he will send, without charge, copies of the July 1 Star-News ad and the July 6 Star-News article along with a cassette tape of his sermon "The Resurrection of Herbert W. Armstrong" to all who request them. We've listened to that tape and can honestly say it is without doubt completely unlike anything we've ever heard.

Dankenbring's Triumph Publishing

William Dankenbring is a name many former WCG members will recognize. After graduating from Ambassador College in 1963, Dankenbring wrote for the Plain Truth for 11 years. He wrote on an amazing variety of subjects, and one former Plain Truth editor has called Dankenbring "one of the best writers the church ever produced." In 1974, however, the Plain Truth went through an editorial department reorganization and Dankenbring found himself no longer working for the WCG.

In the years that followed, Dankenbring, a hard-working family man who was once an Eagle Scout, went on to careers in insurance and real estate, and in recent years has been a high school registrar. His first love, however, has remained the Bible. Cut off from writing opportunities with the Plain Truth, Dankenbring, nevertheless, remained loyal to Herbert Armstrong and the WCG's theology. But he still desired to use his writing and business skills in a way that would advance what he saw as "God's truth." That desire led to his founding Triumph Publishing, an independent publishing company devoted to disseminating - on a commercial basis - many of the same teachings the WCG was promulgating.

Right from its start, Triumph did not thrill the WCG. Dankenbring was not criticizing the WCG's leaders and he was in harmony with all its teachings. In fact, he remained a loyal, tithe-paying member. But Triumph still made many in the WCG uneasy. "Who gave you the authority to do this?" was a question frequently put to Dankenbring by members who could not fathom "truth" coming from any source other than HWA or his hirelings. The ministry, too, on a number of occasions, challenged him on certain wordings that appeared in his articles and on whether it was appropriate for him to market his books during the WCG's Feast of Tabernacles. Behind his back, however, the official WCG position toward Dankenbring was vehement. In an article either written or approved by Tkach, the April 23, 1982 Pastor General's Report (a publication sent to WCG ministers) contained this attack on Dankenbring:

Question: Several ministers have asked about Mr. William Dankenbring's advertisement for his books which have been distributed to members through mailings, at Feast sites, etc. Are the books endorsed by the Church? Does the Church approve of them or recommend them? Is Mr. Dankenbring still a member of the Church?

Answer: Mr. Dankenbring is classified as a member of God's Church. But that does not imply that his privately-sold writings have the approval or endorsement of the Church.

Human nature seems to want to use God, or God's Church, for personal gain or profit. The moneychangers used God's temple as a place of business to sell at a profit to God's people. In blazing anger, Jesus drove them out. Jesus said, "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise" (John 2:16). We, the members, are God's house, builded into a HOLY TEMPLE (Eph. 2:20-21).

In II Peter 2:3 God warns, "And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." Yes, SELLING FOR PROFIT their words in writing to the members of God's Church.

Perhaps the selling of doves and things for sacrifice was not in itself wrong, but exploiting God's HOUSE as a place or means of selling to God's people was.

The membership of God's Church has been exploited for private gain a number of times by those no longer members.

God has commissioned HIS CHURCH - not private members on their own - to feed the flock. The Church publishes much literature - magazines, booklets, books, reprint articles besides the personal ministry, to feed the flock - AND WE DO NOT CHARGE A PRICE OR MAKE MERCHANDISE OF OUR MEMBERS IN SO FREELY GIVING GOD'S TRUTH! [Editor: Recall that books by HWA, Raymond McNair, and Stan Rader have had price tags.]

Although Mr. Dankenbring is a graduate of Ambassador College and has studied under Mr. Armstrong and our ministers, he has stated in writing, "I appreciate him (Mr. Armstrong) very much, although I have disagreed with him from time to time on some relatively 'small' or 'little' things." But what the writer might consider "small" or "littly" disagreements might in God's eyes be vitally important disagreements.

God's Church therefore does not endorse nor give approval to Mr. Dankenbring's books, nor those of others than the Church's own publications or those definitely approved.

Still, Dankenbring was not disfellowshipped. Triumph continued to grow, and by 1986 more WCG members than ever were familiar with Triumph's books and articles.

Official WCG tolerance for Dankenbring, however, ran out some months ago when, instead of simply putting out materials that echoed official church dogma, Dankenbring published an article that put forward a new view of the 2300 days prophecy of Daniel. The article was distributed to a few members and a handful of ministers, most of whom seemed to view it favorably. He was then to learn, however, that in the WCG "new truth" can still only come from one source - the man at the top.

After 30 years of dedicated service to the WCG, Dankenbring was summarily disfellowshipped in January. None of his old friends in the ministry cared enough to even want to discuss "his problem" with him. Phone calls requesting counselling on the matter got him nowhere.

The WCG again showed itself to be a very cold and cruel church. But in dumping Dankenbring it may have also (once again) shot itself in the foot. Dankenbring, like many others, is now convinced that the WCG is the Laodicean church of Revelation and he has put out a number of new articles challenging the WCG on some important doctrines. Our mail indicates that despite official WCG warnings against doing so, many Worldwidiers are reading and passing around his publications. Those interested in Dankenbring's books, articles, and Prophecy Flash newsletter should write for his price list. The address is Triumph Publishing, P.O. Box 292, Altadena, CA 91001.

GTA Still Preaching

Whether you like him or not, there's one thing you have to say for Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA). The man has staying power. No one in the religion field (not even PTL's Jim Bakker) has ever been put under the kind of scrutiny to which GTA was in the 1970s. And no preacher has ever been so thoroughly discredited by his own church (then the WCG) and his church's founder (in this case, his own father). Yet here it is 1987 and GTA is still at it, still preaching much the same thing he always did (and many say still behaving in exactly the same way he's always behaved).

Today, GTA is clearly in command of his Church of God, International. His good looks, trim physique, and forceful speaking style all remain. His weekly telecast is on about 20 stations across the United States. His free magazine, Twentieth Century Watch, while lacking the huge circulation of the WCG's Plain Truth, is clearly superior in writing style, layout, and even paper quality. And GTA is not hiding behind "spokesmen," hired announcers, or press releases. For instance, on July 23 he was one of the guests on the popular television talk show hosted by Oprah Winfrey.

In the last few years, GTA has been increasingly open in his criticism of the WCG. For instance, in the spring issue of his Twentieth Century Watch was a revealing GTA article about his father's claim of apostleship. That issue also contained an interesting article on the disfellowshipping or excommunication doctrine of the WCG. The address for GTA and Twentieth Century Watch is P.O. Box 2530, Tyler, Texas 75710. The phone number is (214) 561-2525.

Ernest Martin Reorganizes

Dr. Ernest L. Martin, the former WCG minister who went on to head the Foundation for Biblical Research for a number of years and then started the Academy for Scriptural Knowledge (ASK) has a new address. After Martin's second marriage ended in divorce in 1986, Martin's output seemed to dwindle. Recently, however, after marrying for a third time (to a successful real estate agent named Ramona), Martin seems to be getting more active in the religious publishing field.

ASK recently put out a large list of works by Martin (the list is free, the other materials are not) that are available in print, including a good number of new ones on prophecy, and some that are sure to be quite controversial. (For instance we notice that Martin now postulates that Jesus actually "died according to the Law of Moses and it was by stoning." We have also heard that Martin is now convinced that he knows the exact spot where Jesus was born.) In recent years we have not always agreed with Martin's conclusions, but we know that in the past many in the WCG have found his writings of interest. The new mailing address for ASK is P.O. Box 7777, Alhambra, CA 91802.

New Works on "British Israelism"

"British Israelism," or the belief that the English-speaking peoples are the true descendants of the so-called Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, continues to fascinate many who have left the WCG. We have recently heard of a number of new works related to the subject (both pro and con) written by former WCG members.

Pastor Keith Hunt of the Biblical Church of God (Canada) believes firmly in the theory and recently wrote us that he has written and published a "very large book" on the subject. Its title is In Defence of David's Throne, and it sells for $10. The address to write to for further information is: Biblical Church of God (Canada), Box 36, Station A, Kelowna, B.C., V1Y 7N3, Canada.

* * * * *

Former WCG minister and Plain Truth editor Brian Knowles has written articles for a number of Christian publications since leaving Worldwide. One article he's written that we found particularly worthwhile appears in the September 1987 issue of Bible Advocate and is entitled "Was Dan Really a 'Serpent's Trail'?" While the article does not criticize Herbert W. Armstrong by name, Knowles does take issue with Joseph Allen's Judah's Sceptre and Joseph's Birthright, the 1902 book upon which HWA based so much of his own prophecy teachings. Those who would like a copy of the September Bible Advocate (it's free) should write: Bible Advocate, P.O. Box 33677, Denver, CO 80233.

* * * * *

Former WCG member Leona McNair is known to many Ambassador Report readers because of her ongoing legal battle with the WCG. But many will be interested to learn that Mrs. McNair, a nurse by profession, is also a devoted Bible researcher and budding writer who has recently completed a 55-page commentary on Genesis 49.

Entitled "Shadows of a Better Covenant," the thesis puts forth "the concept that Jacob's blessing of his sons is directly related to the message concerning the Redeemer of Isaiah 9:2-8, and that the 'word given to Jacob' refers to the prophecy of Genesis 49." Mrs. McNair's insights into the symbology of Genesis 49 stand in sharp contrast with the views of many British-Israelism supporters (including her ex-husband, evangelist-author Raymond McNair) who see Genesis 49 as a revelation of the identities and fate of certain modern nations.

While a good deal of effort has already gone into this project, Mrs. McNair hopes to eventually enlarge her thesis into a full-size book. That, however, may take a few years. In the meantime, those who are interested in obtaining a copy of "Shadows of a Better Covenant" should write to: Leona McNair, P.O. Box 41494, Pasadena, CA 91104. To help cover production, printing, and mailing costs, Mrs. McNair is asking $7 (U.S.) per copy. She also tells us that she would very much appreciate receiving any comments or criticisms readers of her thesis may have regarding her work.

C. Gary Reid's Series on Prophecy

Those who have followed the activities of the WCG and its many offshoots will have noticed that interpretation of Bible prophecy has played, and continues to play, a major role in the religious experience of these groups. But some observers who have followed these movements for a decade or more will have noticed how many of their interpretations have been both radical by mainstream Christian standards, and with time have proven themselves clearly erroneous.

The prophetic passages of the Bible are fascinating reading. But all too often, it seems, they are used by the ill-trained, the fanatical, and the unscrupulous to coerce the ill-trained, the fanatical, and the naive into handing over huge sums toward the promotion of self-proclaimed prophets and apostles. With only a few exceptions, it appears that Bible commentators among those who are either in, or have left, the WCG, approach the subject of Bible prophecy with very little objectivity.

Perhaps that is why we have found a recent series of articles in the Commentator of the Foundation for Biblical Research to be so eye-opening. Written by C. Gary Reid, the three-part series entitled "Prophetic Interpretation: Apostle-Style" looks at the unanticipated way many biblical passages have been fulfilled in the past, and from that basis postulates that in the future biblical prophecies that are yet unfulfilled may come to fruition, but in ways quite different from the literalistic and simplistic scenarios envisioned by some modern-day "apostles."

Besides having a theology degree from Ambassador College, Mr. Reid has a Master's degree in mathematics and has written for a number of publications including Ambassador Report at its inception. Those interested in his excellent series on Bible prophecy should send their requests (there is no charge) to: The Commentator, Foundation for Biblical Research, P.O. Box 499, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Alumni Association Holds First Reunion

On July 4 and 5, the newly formed Ambassador College Alumni Association (see our April issue) had its first reunion at the Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas, Texas. Ambassador Report has heard from a good number of the Ambassador alumni, former faculty members and administrators who attended, and overall, it seems, the gathering proved a real success. One Ambassador alumnus who attended sent us this report:

The Anatole Hotel, where the reunion was held, is one of the most elegant hotels in Texas. It was built for the Republican convention that nominated Ronald Reagan for President. When the Anatole's management discovered that Bob and Judy Boyce were chairpersons of an alumni committee that would be bringing people from all over the country to the Anatole, they offered the Boyces the elegant Ronald Reagan suite. Those who checked in with the Boyces by phone were graciously invited to an impromptu reception at the suite before the evening's activities.

The reunion later began formally with an hors d'oeuvres reception. Even though the fresh fruit, vegetables, fondue, meat nuggets, and cheeses were inviting, they were barely touched for about half an hour because the crowd was so intent on seeing old acquaintances and on viewing the bulletin board displaying memorabilia and letters from those who could not attend.

After the social hour, chairman Bobby Boyce welcomed the alumni with a brief history of how the reunion originated. He told how a group of friends, no longer associated with the Worldwide Church of God, had continued to gather for yearly vacations. They felt that an Ambassador College alumni association would provide a means of keeping in touch with old friends in a relaxed environment, sharing a common history, and providing a social and professional network.

Bob then introduced the Master of Ceremonies for the evening, David Antion. After the preliminaries, Antion explained that he would announce in sequence each year of the college's operation. Former students who attended Ambassador College in those years could speak for one minute if they desired, telling what had happened in their lives since they left the college.

The first one to speak was evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong. (As he began to speak without introducing himself, someone jokingly yelled out, "What's your name?") Ted told of his church's activities in Tyler, Texas and at the one-minute time limit quipped that this had been the shortest speech he had ever given.

Wayne Cole was one of the earliest AC students attending the reunion. He is now working in real estate. Others attending included Ron Dart (Ted's colleague at the Church of God, International), Tony Hammer, Bill McDowell (now in oil exploration in Louisiana), and David Robinson (author of the book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web). Robert Kuhn, now living in New York, gave greetings from George Geis, recently named a distinguished professor in the Graduate Management Program at UCLA. Also attending was Jill Hockwald Banker, the former daughter-in-law of Joseph Tkach (the current chief of the WCG). Paul Hunting transmitted greetings from his father, former WCG evangelist Charles Hunting, who now lives in Florida.

After one alumni member joked that he had attended "God's headquarters college in Pasadena," Jack Martin said he had attended "God's most righteous college in Bricket Wood." Jack was followed by a Big Sandy alumnus who announced he was from "God's country club college." Gary Alexander (whose IRS problems have been reported in the AR) elicited the strongest laughs of the evening by announcing that he had performed an experiment to see if not paying taxes was more dangerous than not paying tithes.

Door prizes went to Bill Farr for traveling the farthest to attend the reunion (from northern Alberta, Canada), and to Ted Armstrong for being associated with Ambassador College the longest.

The celebrants were asked to fill out a questionnaire asking their opinion on the current reunion and their input for the next one. This open opinion poll was a refreshing change from the non-democratic environment of the WCG. As the evening closed, everyone was invited to share a brunch together at the Anatole the next morning.

The general feeling regarding the reunion was that it was long overdue. It was for some the first contact they had had with the Worldwide Church of God (even if just with former members) since they left that church. And it was for some an acknowledgment, finally, of the part the WCG and Ambassador College had played in their lives. Of the 168 people in attendance, several had driven for hours or flown hundreds of miles to attend. Some alumni who still belong to the WCG decided to attend the reunion and they were warmly welcomed in keeping with the committee's goal that the gathering would be open to all who were associated with Ambassador College at one time, regardless of their current associations. The depth of feeling regarding the reunion was illustrated by one current church member who supports it so strongly that he or she anonymously sent a $250 donation toward expenses.

Although the reunion will probably not be an annual event, the consensus of opinion of those present was to hold another gathering next year in Palm Springs, California. Several hundred are expected to attend since plans have been announced a year ahead of time and the Southern California area has a large number of alumni living there.

The reunion organizing committee included David & Molly (Hammer) Antion, Jeff & Linda (Shaklee) Booth, Curtis & Melba (Jenison) Borman, Bob & Judy (Prince) Boyce, Bob Ellsworth, Paul & Mary Jo (Bailey) Flatt, Wayne & Cheryl (Vance) Freeman, Charles Groce, Tony & Natalie (Pyle) Hammer, Bob & Sandy (Holladay) Haworth, Jack & Pat Martin, Jack & Ruthann (Schutt) Pyle, and Dennis & Joye (Williams) Pyle.

While most who attended the reunion seem to have found it a positive experience, there were a handful who were somewhat critical:

I've heard that Garner Ted Armstrong will be hearing from a few people. Many were shocked at his presence at the reunion and he certainly did not try to keep a low profile. He stood to talk twice. I don't believe anyone else did that. Many expected GTA to stand and apologize for the havoc he personally has caused in so many lives. Of course, that apology was never forthcoming and never will be....

Mr. Bob Boyce closed with a statement that former students owe a great deal to their former instructors. I don't believe that was the popular opinion, not with those to whom I talked. There is a big division still between ex-students and ex-ministers. The same with ex-members and ex-ministers and never will there be harmony there.

While it was wonderful to be re-united with old friends... the scars are very, very deep. I personally contacted a dozen former students and they informed me they could in no way endure such a gathering. The healing of wounds has not taken place and they feel they could never attend such a meeting. I think some of those who thought they were up to it really felt a good deal of pain and resentment.

-Anonymous, California

The thing I liked best about the AC reunion was that GTA was treated just like any other AC grad.

-Name Withheld

Listening to the stories of my fellow alumni at the reunion in Dallas, it was notable how many of the Ambassador College alumni own their own businesses or hold graduate degrees. It would appear that many of us became successful in spite of Ambassador College, not because of it.

-Pasadena Alumnus

Like any other human organization - especially one just beginning - the alumni association has, and will continue to have, problems. But that doesn't mean that the idea isn't a good one. Most of those who attended the reunion apparently found it to be a very positive, and even therapeutic, experience. Undoubtedly, it could have been an even better experience had Ambassador College given the association a little bit of encouragement. We understand that not only did Ambassador's Chancellor, Joseph Tkach, refuse to attend (thereby passing up a golden public relations opportunity for the college and an opportunity to show true Christian love) but Tkach, in true WCG-cult style, even discourteously refused to reply to a personal invitation sent him by chairman Bob Boyce. (Boyce, however, says he is not insulted and hopes Tkach will decide to attend next year.)

We at Ambassador Report feel that, in spite of whatever small inadequacies it may have, the alumni association can perform a very useful function. We encourage all our fellow alumni to support the efforts of its organizing committee by helping locate as many alumni as possible. Those on the association's mailing list will then be able to receive details of future reunions. Bob Boyce has informed us that in a month or two he will be mailing out a small publication, tentatively called Alumni News, which will contain a complete report on the Dallas reunion. The association has also put together an official "Statement of Purpose" which clarifies the goals of the association. Those who would like a free copy of the Alumni News and the Statement of Purpose, or who would like to provide alumni names and addresses, should write: The Alumni Association, P.O. Box 9342, Longview, TX 75608.

"The Bible Speaks" Cult Loses a Round in Court

The following news item appeared in a number of publications this spring, including the Boston Globe (page 1) on May 20:

Following a 3-week nonjury trial in Worcester, Mass., U.S. Bankruptcy Judge James Queenan Jr. has ordered The Bible Speaks to return all of the $6.5 million donated to it by heiress Elizabeth Dayton Dovydenas.

Judge Queenan rejected the church's claim that the First Amendment forbids such intervention. He asserted that the Rev. Carl Stevens Jr.'s conduct "reeks of undue influence" and that the Bible Speaks pastor had abused Mrs. Dovydenas' trust "as well as the trust of many good and devout members of the church" in what testimony revealed to be "an astonishing saga of clerical deceit, avarice and subjugation."

The judge found that Stevens achieved "total dominion and control over Dovydenas in part "by deceit and insincerity," persuading her that she "was a special person anointed by God to promote good through gifts" to the church. He also noted that the pastor's "attempts to ruin the claimant's marriage were intentional and malicious."

Mrs. Dovydenas, 34, is the daughter of a founder of the Dayton-Hudson Corp., the 5th-largest retail chain in the U.S. She sued the church on grounds of undue influence and fraud to recover donations she made while a member from 1983 to 1986.

The judge's decision has set the stage for the possible forced liquidation of the 20,000-member church's 70-acre headquarters in Lenox, Mass. But The Bible Speaks' lawyer, Norman Grutman, has said that if he lost the case, he would take it all the way to the Supreme Court.

One newspaper (in a UPI release) quoted Gordon Walker, attorney for Dovydenas, as saying: "I think the case stands for the proposition that even evangelists are accountable and must play by the rules."

During the trial Dovydenas testified that cult leader Stevens "said he had the delegated authority of God, that when he speaks, it is Jesus speaking.... I was afraid I would be punished by God, even to having my life shortened, if I didn't obey him."

Judge Queenan's decision comes as a breath of fresh air to many who feel that the U.S. courts put on blinders and castrate themselves virtually every time some defendant raises "religion" as a defense for fraud, misrepresentation, larceny, etc., etc. But whether his decision will stand remains to be seen. The July 26 Los Angeles Times reported that an appeal has been filed on behalf of "The Bible Speaks." The lawyer for "The Bible Speaks" is the flamboyant Norman Roy Grutman who represented Larry Flynt's Hustler magazine not long ago in a lawsuit brought by the Rev. Jerry Falwell (whom Grutman then referred to as "Foul-well"). As it's turned out, Grutman, who claims he is presently a Christian Scientist, was PTL's lawyer when Jim Bakker was dethroned, and so Grutman now represents Jerry Falwell's PTL. (Stan Rader, where are you now that big-time religion really needs you?)

Congressman Pickle's Hearings

The controversy that has surrounded the Jim Bakker-PTL scandal has apparently prompted more than a few citizens to write to Congress. The Oversight Subcommittee of the House of Representatives' Ways and Means Committee will be spending a day or so in October on hearings concerning the tax laws by which religious nonprofit corporations are able to escape thorough government scrutiny.

During August and September Ambassador Report editor John Trechak repeatedly phoned government officials in Washington attempting to persuade them of the need for major reforms in this area of the law. The following is a letter your editor sent to Ms. Russlyn Guritz, the staff member coordinating research for those Oversight Subcommittee hearings:

Dear Mrs. Guritz:

As I indicated to you in our phone conversation earlier today, I am sending you a number of back issues of Ambassador Report and some other materials that I hope will prove insightful to Representative Pickle and the subcommittee.

Having reported for over ten years on the scandal-plagued Worldwide Church of God and other religious organizations, I have become firmly convinced that there is a great need for our tax laws to be reformed so as to require greater financial accountability by religious nonprofit corporations.

While I am aware that some Constitutional questions may be raised by such a proposal, I am a bit cynical toward any suggestion that such reform would violate the First Amendment. First of all, I believe you will find most legal scholars assert that a complete wall of separation between church and state (Jefferson's phrase, not the Constitution's) is not mandated by either the free exercise clause or the establishment clause. And second, as a practical matter, such separation does not exist today.

At the present time, religious and pseudo-religious groups are easily formed into nonprofit corporations through state law and are then given significant tax advantages through federal law. Many of these corporations then make extensive use of the public airwaves and the U.S. Postal Service to generate huge revenues and, quite often, to provide huge incomes to the heads of these government-created "nonprofit" entities. Yet in many cases it is virtually impossible for the contributor (often very devout but financially unsophisticated) to ever find out what became of his or her contributions.

I therefore applaud Congressman Pickle's interest in the problem, and I hope you will contact me if I may be of any further assistance to you, Representative Pickle, or the subcommittee.

Sincerely,
John Trechak, Editor

The congressman most responsible for the upcoming hearings is Rep. J. J. Pickle of Austin, Texas. His Washington mailing address is: Rep. J. J. Pickle, House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515 (phone 202-225-4865). We've suggested to Congressman Pickle that along with some of the big names of TV evangelism who have already been asked to appear that the Oversight Subcommittee subpoena "Apostle" Joe Tkach and WCG treasurer Leroy Neff. We'd find it fascinating to see them explain how they intend to spend the $163 million the U.S. government is helping them make this year. We've also suggested that while they're at it, they could subpoena former WCG accountants Stanley Rader and Jack Kessler. We're confident both of them could prove very valuable witnesses. If you think those are good ideas, why not write Congressman Pickle or your own Congressman (or woman) and tell them what you think.

Letters

Editor: The following letter came in response to our April issue in which we reported how the WCG finally - after 50 years of doctrinal error - changed its position on "divine healing" so as to allow its members to seek medical help when they are ill.

How wonderful that God has finally led His "True Church" out of the darkness and into a "New Truth" that the rest of the Christian world caught onto quite some time ago - God doesn't mind if his followers go to doctors!

Too bad that careless God didn't think to let His "True Church" in on that little piece of truth a bit earlier for there would be more of His followers around to support His Work.

I received your April issue today, on what would have been my mother's 62nd birthday. She died at age 44, after a decline in health over several years, during which time the total medical care she received consisted of being anointed over and over again as she wondered what sin she had committed that was so heinous that God would withhold his gift of healing. The emotional impact on our family (three children at home; the youngest age seven) was, to say the least, devastating.

I am actually very grateful that Joseph Tkach has had the intestinal fortitude to reverse one of HWA's strongest and most harmful doctrines. Now, perhaps, my remaining parent will not have to be prematurely sacrificed on the altar of Herbert Armstrong's megalomania.

*-Sandra (Haux) Entler
AC Pasadena, 1972*

My wife and I have been members of the WCG since the early '60s and have been able to see a lot of changes take place. It seems that when the leading ministers want to do something that is against church doctrine the doctrine is changed. About all we hear in services is sermons on tithing and obeying. It's almost like a broken record.

-Kentucky

As an Ambassador grad and ex-member of the WCG, I could not help but reflect on Ambassador College when I recently had the chance to see a special edition of the college newspaper which was printed at graduation time this year. As usual, there were photos of the beautiful people of Ambassador, living the lives that such a stimulating environment offers. I caught a glimpse of a few familiar faces of people that I knew from the mid-seventies, noticed the usual action photos of AC people enjoying the good life in Southern California, and had an opportunity to see the new Pastor General, among other things, serving pancakes at a college breakfast. It certainly looked wonderful. Who would ever guess by reading this publication that this college and its sponsor, the Worldwide Church of God, could have brought so much sorrow to so many people's lives.

While I have some good memories of my alma mater, there is one fact that prevails above all else: I am not welcome there! All of my time and money invested in Ambassador are given no recognition by those in power who make the rules. Indeed, I know of people that have invested enormous amounts of money in that college and church, and they are not even welcome to walk on the very property they helped pay for!

I came to Ambassador as a graduate from another college: accredited, I might add! But I did not have much use for my accredited degree. I wanted to go to Ambassador. There I thought I would find friendship and happiness. I was to find out five years later how much value my Ambassador friends were: only a few remained friends. In all of the nine years that have passed since I graduated from AC I have not heard from the college so much as once!

Now, notice the contrast when I write of the "worldly" college I attended. I continue to receive alumni publications and have for over a decade. For years, I have received several letters a year from this college inviting me to on-campus alumni functions and to participate in alumni trips. The department in which I did my major study sends me a yearly survey and updates on the department. When I recently returned to take some classes, I was welcomed and treated with kindness! All this from a college that I counted of no value!

And Ambassador College? Well, we know how "concerned" they are for all their alumni. And to think I loved Ambassador more than any other place on earth. Because of the horrible things the WCG has done and the reflection this places on AC, I have become ashamed to say that I ever attended Ambassador. Thankfully, I had an accredited degree. My wife, who also has an AC degree, has not been so lucky. After almost a decade, she is still working toward an accredited degree while working full time. Many people in her field have long since completed their masters' programs and are working on doctorate programs. But thanks to Ambassador, my wife is still spending time and money to get back to the point she thought she had reached when she was handed her AC "degree."

Yet for all the problems this church and college have caused people, these "institutions" continue on their merry way. Not a single apology has been offered. No sorrow expressed from the vaunted leaders who have caused so much hurt.

What then is the real purpose of Ambassador College? Why continue to exist if college officials continue to ignore a large segment of its alumni population? How incredible to see Ambassador alumni having to form their own alumni association because Ambassador College refuses to recognize many of its own graduates! If anything speaks of the treachery of these AC officials, this is it!

A closing comment on WCG and AC personnel management style. As Dorothy said while in the Land of Oz: "My, people come and go so quickly around here!"

-An Ambassador Grad, Missouri

Our son was always a bright man who made good grades, played football in school, and graduated with flying colors. After graduation he immediately started working and saving his money. At the age of 19, he bought a nice little house and a brand new car. He was doing so well that he started saving money to build a bigger house.

After a while, he met a girl.... Eventually, she moved in with our son and within about two months they got married. Eight months later they had a darling little girl. After the baby came she continued working as before, because they were saving for a new house. When she first met our son, she told him that she left home because her parents were too strict. They were members of the WCG. She told our son that she stopped going to their church and often made fun of it when her parents came to visit them....

After about a year, they sold their little house and started building their new house out in the country. In the meantime, they moved in with my husband and me. I took care of their little girl while they worked and waited for their house to be built. About two months after they moved into their house, our son came to visit us and announced that they were going to sell their house and move into an apartment. We asked him why he would do that when they hated apartments. I told him there would be no future in an apartment and that he should look to the future.... He just laughed and said, "We won't need a house because the world will end before I retire, and besides, having a house and nice things is too materialistic. We're not supposed to have materialistic things." When I asked him what he was talking about, he laughed again and said, "Can't you see how the world is today? It's a sign of the end of the world." He said that Jesus is coming soon and will destroy this world. He also said that the government and the whole world is possessed by the Devil.

I couldn't believe my ears! I was in shock. Where did he hear all this? It must have been from his wife's family, and he took it seriously. Right away I knew that he must have joined, or was planning to join, the WCG. I wouldn't believe it because he was born, baptized, and raised as a Catholic. He always said that if he ever stopped going to the Catholic Church, he just wouldn't believe in any other church. He then started telling us that we are all going to hell because HWA's church is the only true church and that all the other Christian churches (especially the Catholic Church) are of Satan. We tried to tell him how the Catholic Church was started by Jesus and then by Peter and the other apostles, but he wouldn't believe us. We would read scriptures in the Bible and he would put different meanings on them and they would be all twisted. It got to the point where he told us not to visit him anymore, so we left him alone.

Soon after that he lost his job because his job required Saturday work and he wouldn't work on the Sabbath. He was without a job for almost two months when he finally got another job with a big cut in pay. His wife then quit her job because her religion forbids mothers to work outside the home. After his cut in pay and her quitting her job, their income dropped to less than half of what they used to make... They finally put their house up for sale and moved in with her parents....

It's heartbreaking to see a child doing so well and then let it all go because of some weird religious beliefs. We have been under a lot of stress as we are still trying to get him out by writing to him and sending him booklets about our religion, but he seems to be so brainwashed or hypnotized that nothing seems to penetrate. We were hoping that when HWA died the church would die too. However, he has other cronies now on TV that have taken his place preaching the end of the world. I think it's terrible that so many families are broken up and hurt because of a weird church like the WCG. They actually encourage their members to leave their family if the relatives don't agree with them. Is that love? That's not how God would want it.

-Texas

It's so good to continue to receive Ambassador Report. I was glad to hear of the change in teaching about healing. I was in Pasadena during Loma Armstrong's illness and death. HWA's attitude at that time was a major factor in opening my eyes.

I had terrible headaches about that time. Although (or because) I was making every effort to conform, I was told my headaches were a result of a bad attitude. Finally, I got up enough courage to buy aspirin. I still remember seeing the nose of an AC employee pressed against the drugstore window!

GTA visited Lakeland a few months back. We drove up to see him, thinking surely he had learned a few things during the last twenty years. Since we had trouble finding the place, we arrived a little late but just in time for his sermon. He got up and started talking about beating your children - I couldn't believe it! Only the gray hair was different. All the old memories were so overwhelming I couldn't stand it so I got up and left.

I am happy to tell you that I recently completed an M.A. in Counseling at the University of South Florida. I was truly amazed at how caring and unselfish the "secular humanists" can be! I still have a strong faith in God and His leading, but am not much involved in religion. I have just begun working at a maternity center where I believe I will have the opportunity to do some good.

Thank you so much for continuing the AR.

-Bobette Pestana, Tampa, Florida

Would you please be so kind as to send me another copy of the Ambassador Report? My 91-year-old mother destroyed the envelope with the latest report before I even had a chance to read it.

-Ohio

Jim Coram gave me a copy of the AR and I found it to be of interest. (I work at the Concordant Publishing Concern.) I was a devotee and fellow-traveler of the WCG from age 12 to about age 28 (1957-1972), but never did join up because the requirements for salvation were too severe. But because of my faith in their prophecy, I took German in school and eventually joined the Roman Catholic Church so that I could be on the "right" side when "Assyria" (Germany) invaded "Israel" (the USA). Ha! Anyway that's all over with now and I really can laugh about it.

-John Swanson, Pasadena, California

I have very little to do with Jimmy Swaggart, Jerry Falwell, and Pat Robertson. But I think there is somewhat of an apology in order for grouping them with HWA.

Jimmy Swaggart, I do know, through his program "Child Care International," prepares between 300,000 and 400,000 meals a day for children, has built 277 schools, and purchased 57 mobile self-sustained medical units in Third World countries. Contrast that with the self-centered attitude of the WCG.

If there is good, then there is indeed good and we should recognize that. We have come out of something that is not good, and too often we are quick to assume all religious organizations and their leaders, "under the skin," are somehow related. Not so.

*-Dr. Larry Jackson
Gaithersburg, Maryland*

I'm dropping you a line regarding an item in your most recent issue of the AR (Jan. '87). You had mentioned how dumbfounded you were to learn of ex-WCG members now embracing the serpent seed doctrine. Of course, this is nothing less than an example of how people give heed to "doctrines of demons." What you may have done, unwittingly, is contributed to others persuing that false teaching. You listed, along with other groups, the Church of Israel in Schell City. They teach precisely that which you condemned - and rightly so - on the previous page.

Because the Church of Israel holds to some teachings similar to WCG (annual Holy Days, Israel Identity, etc.) it may have attracted some who still see valid the keeping of those days, etc. Satan has his snare out for many such. I have read some of the literature of this group and they are one of the most racist groups around. They take great pride in being Israelites. They have a whole series of tapes and literature on so-called anthropoidology, that all races other than their own are animals. The superiority of "us" and the inferiority of "them" is no new teaching. Every nation from modern Japan to the ancient Assyrians and Egyptians have promulgated that Satanic lie. There is much more that I could say about this group, but the less said about such garbage the better.

-British Columbia, Canada

It is good to see that there are people who have come out of the WCG and your report has helped them. It is like you finally have someone to talk to and listen to about your complaints in the WCG. For in that church you just never knew where you stood. If you kept all to yourself you were fine. If you tried to discuss and counsel with anyone, it was always as a subordinate. They were there to tell you, not to help you. Speak too much of your own mind and they'd tell you to get back in your place!

-Illinois

It has now been five and a half months since I quit attending [WCG services], and I feel as though I'm more a part of the human race. I know I'm not yet disfellowshipped (I still get the WCG lit), but I also know it's coming. It'll probably be around Passover or just after. I find there are some really kind people "in the world " and they're much more tolerant! I've also come to the conclusion that many of us in the WCG are quite immature - immature in our actions, ideas, and the way in which we treat others. Indeed the ministry speaks to the people as though they are children.

-Oklahoma

First HWA got us to turn our relatives and friends against us, then when you find out [the truth about the WCG] you leave and lose the friends you've made in the WCG. Many don't leave because they fear to be lonely.

-Missouri

It's been over a year since I left the WCG. It isn't easy when the friends you had are almost all in the church. I've really helped myself to a certain extent because I love to read. Through books I travel, get to know about young love and right now [I'm reading] a scary one about human cell experiments. I'm an old lady, alone but not lonely, and I love reading the AR.

-Wisconsin

Our son joined the WCG. His wife and her family are so brainwashed that we can't get close to them. They completely ignore us except for a small gift for Mother's and Father's Day. We helped him so much and now we're getting nothing back - no letters or signs of love - just silence. It's worse than death. It breaks our hearts. We need the assurance from people like you that the truth is getting out, but it needs to get to every WCG member - our son and his family included.

-Minnesota

My husband is a WCG member and we are now going through a custody battle. He is filing so many papers, he will run me dry financially before my divorce. I am being supported with food by the Salvation Army, three local churches, and family and friends have also helped financially. I have sold most of my valuables to keep my house and children going. My husband pays $60 a week in child support (when it comes). Most of his salary goes to the WCG. His own children he neglects; no medicine, food, or clothing has he paid for since August 1986. He's never even considered paying for other household bills, but he refuses to give up his support of the WCG.

-New York

Please keep up your good work. Your newsletters mean so much to me and have really helped me over the past five years - since my ex-wife (a WCG member) and I divorced and I was left with three sons to raise.

-Kentucky

My son and his wife are very much into WCG teachings and you don't dare make a negative remark or talk to them. If you say anything they will not answer you. Or more seriously, as they have four children, I would not be allowed to see them. I tried to talk to my son, but he said he is sure this is the only real church there is in the world and he believes so strongly (his wife too) that it scares me....

My daughter-in-law's sister was staying with them as well and suddenly we didn't see her anymore. They wouldn't answer when we asked where she was so I asked my grandson and he said that Satan deceived her and she left the church.... I suddenly knew in my heart the extent of the bondage they were under. The children are beaten a lot and all have callouses on their behinds. I never hear them talking about Jesus, but always about Satan and what a bad guy he is. I see they want to be right so badly that they follow all the WCGs rules and regulations according to the letter.

-Canada

Something I've never heard discussed in your report is how our experiences [as WCG members who've left] have made us stronger spiritually. Like the persecution in the early church or in today's communist countries, our persecution made us more zealous for

God. I think that's often why we are so dissatisfied with the way Americans "play" church. Even though in our zeal we were not worshipping the true God, our intentions were there. When our allegiance shifts to God, it is usually much stronger than that of most Christians. We can count our blessings.

I find it very interesting to learn what is going on in the WCG. However, what is more important about the Report is it has given me support over the last five years with the realization that I am not alone and that there are many others around the world in a similar situation. Also, it gives me hope in the fact that people do wake up to the falsehood of the WCG, leave, rehabilitate themselves and live productive lives again with a free mind.

-Australia

A few days ago I went out to lunch with some friends from work who have never been in the WCG or had any idea that I had been. When they asked me what had brought me to California from my home state of Washington, I actually found myself lying to them in order to avoid mentioning the WCG. Afterwards, I couldn't believe I'd done such a thing! After all, I've been out of that church for almost 14 years, have adjusted well since leaving, and most importantly have never lied about the experience before. So why was I starting now?

After much thought, I finally decided that there were several reasons. First of all, yes, even after 14 years, I still have painful memories of the WCG that can upset me. I also feel some shame at having been taken in by a group that everyone in Los Angeles seems to know is bizarre.

After exploring some of the reasons why this event happened, I became rather angry at myself. After all, why should I feel ashamed of having been a WCG member? I did nothing wrong except be young and idealistic. The ones who should be ashamed are the WCG officials who have done so much damage to so many lives.

Now that I've had more time to think about what happened I once more feel pretty good about myself. After all, I survived the AG/WCG experience, got an accredited degree, a good job, and have good friends (none of whom have rejected me just because of my former AC/WCG connections). If on occasion, I have flashbacks to painful WCG experiences, it doesn't mean that I haven't adjusted properly, it just means that I'm human. I'm sure there's not one former WCG member who found it easy to leave that church, but I bet most have found their lives much better and much more rewarding since leaving. I know I have (despite the occasional setback).

-California

Thank you for a job well done. Because of the AR I'm getting my life back in order.

A Note From the Editor

I owe our Report readers an apology. In our last issue (April 1987), I stated in closing that I was working on an article that would be "the most important we've done in some time." As of mid-September that article is still not done, and although much research has been accumulated, I can't in good conscience release the results yet. It's become clear to me that in order to do the kind of quality reporting we have in the past I'll need another three to six months for completing the research for that article and putting it all in print.

At first we planned to just hold off publishing this issue. But a good number of you wrote saying you'd appreciate receiving almost anything from us just to know we're still "hanging in there." Well, we are. That's why I became convinced it was important to get out this edition even if it lacked the lead article that's been in the works now for almost two years. I apologize for not getting out the big article I'd hoped for. But I really think most of you will have found this issue worthwhile nevertheless.

When our April Report went out we were concerned that this one might be our last. But thanks to some generous contributions, we've gotten caught up with most of our bills and so far, at least, we're able to continue.

We should point out, however, that even when an edition of the AR doesn't come out on time, we are still able to help many who write to us through back issues and personal correspondence. While a large percentage of those who write us are former WCG members or relatives of members, in recent months we seem to have been getting an ever increasing amount of mail from current WCG members. Apparently, the death of HWA and subsequent changes in Worldwide have prodded a good number into reexamining why they are in that organization. We hope that trend will continue.

Our thanks to all of you who are helping us to help them. Your continued support is very much appreciated.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR40 March 1988

Tkach Consolidates Power, Names Successor

When Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA), the founder of Ambassador College and the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), died in early 1986, he left his religious empire in the hands of evangelist and church administrator Joseph W. Tkach. In 1986, some old-timers in the church wondered if Tkach's tenure as head of the WCG would be permanent. After all, they pointed out, Tkach is not a brilliant theologian, a dynamic speaker, or a good writer (he relies heavily on ghost writers). He is not even a college graduate. But Tkach's critics overlooked one thing. Tkach is politically astute - at least when it comes to the inner-workings of the WCG.

A little over two years after HWA's death, Tkach is firmly in charge of the Armstrong empire. So much so, in fact, it is highly unlikely any faction in the church could have him ousted, or would even try. So secure is Tkach that even the trappings of his position are ballooning. No longer, for instance, is he simply the "Publisher" of the Plain Truth. The latest Plain Truth staff box designates Tkach as "Chairman and Editor in Chief." (At the same time, the names of article authors are no longer under the article titles, but are smaller-type, article-end by-lines.) Insiders also say that Tkach hopes to sell off the church's G-III executive jet and replace it with a full-size Boeing 727. Apparently that will allow him to take along an even larger entourage on his world travels.

In recent months, Tkach has demonstrated his control of the WCG organization by consolidating power through the appointment of loyalists to important church posts. Tkach's most significant move has been the raising of his son Joseph Tkach Jr. (AC, Pasadena, 1973) to what is, in effect, the number-two position in the WCG. While many considered him a flunkout from the church's ministerial training program just a few years ago, Tkach Jr. has now been raised to "Pastor rank" and is over the administration of all the WCG's U.S. churches. (Church administrator Larry Salyer now only oversees the WCG's foreign churches.)

Joe Jr., who stands out in church publication photographs because of his distinctive rabbi-

like beard, is currently married to the former Tamara Hall (AC, Pasadena, 1978). His earlier marriage to Jill Hockwald (AC, Pasadena, 1973) ended in divorce. Tkach Jr. now lives next door to his father in Pasadena, and insiders say Joe Jr. is the Pastor General's most influential advisor. (This may not be a bad thing. Besides having an Ambassador degree, Joe Jr. also has an accredited M.B.A. He may well turn out to be a positive influence on the WCG. At least we hope that will be the case.)

There is every indication that Joe Sr. is very pleased with Joe Jr.'s performance in his new responsibilities. So, a short time ago, when Tkach Sr. told subordinates that he had already chosen his successor, many began to speculate whether it was his son. Pastor General Tkach apparently refused to disclose the name of the one he has designated. But we are told the name of "Apostle" Tkach's successor is written down in a sealed envelope locked away in a church safe. The contents of the envelope will only be revealed in the event that the current "Apostle" dies or is incapacitated. We, of course, cannot say with certainty what name is in the sealed envelope, but our guess is that it is Joe Tkach Jr.

Besides putting his son into the church's number-two position in the WCG, Tkach has filled other important positions with loyalists. For instance, evangelist Raymond McNair has been removed as Deputy Chancellor of the Pasadena Ambassador College and is being shunted off to New Zealand where he will run the church's small office there. (Former New Zealand office manager Peter Nathan has a brain tumor, we are told.) Taking over as Deputy Chancellor in Pasadena is Dr. Donald Ward, formerly dean of faculty at the Ambassador College in Big Sandy, Texas.

While Ward appears to be a Tkach supporter, how well the two will work together remains to be seen. One area in which they seem to differ is in their views on the nation of Israel and on Jews in general. Tkach is viewed by many as very pro-Jewish. He continues HWA's policy of maintaining strong WCG ties with the government of Israel, and his affection for the Jewish people is reflected in his peculiar habit of quite regularly beginning sermons with greetings in Hebrew. These, in turn, are followed by loud responses - in Hebrew - from the congregation (The Worldwide News, Aug. 31, 1987, p. 6).

Ward, on the other hand, is described by some long-time friends as highly distrustful of all Jews. Not only has Ward collected anti-Semitic literature, we are told, but on one occasion he referred to Ambassador College professor Mark Kaplan as a Jewish "double agent" simply because of Kaplan's ethnic background. It will be interesting to see if Ward is able to moderate such views in his new position.

* * *

Replacing Dr. Ward as dean of faculty at Big Sandy is Dr. Michael P. Germano. In the 1970s, Dr. Germano served as dean of faculty and then vice president for academic affairs at Ambassador College in Pasadena. In recent years, Germano, a local elder, has been an associate pastor for WCG congregations in Banning and San Bernardino, California. Undoubtedly one of the best educated members of the WCG, Germano holds a theology degree from Ambassador, a B.S. in physics from the University of Illinois, a doctorate in educational administration from the University of Southern California, and a law degree from the University of La Verne. With such outstanding credentials, Dr. Germano is viewed by many as a likely choice to eventually replace Big Sandy Deputy Chancellor Roderick C. Meredith.

HWA Still Dead as Filippello Waits

In our last issue (Sept. 1987), we reported how former WCG minister Martin C. Filippello, had prophesied that the late Herbert W. Armstrong, founder of the WCG, would be resurrected in January 1988. January has come and gone and, not surprisingly, HWA is still dead. Filippello had, as recently as December, preached that if his prophecies did not reach fulfillment his listeners would know that he is a "false prophet."

Considering how dogmatic Filippello had been in his predictions, we wondered what his current position would be. When we phoned him in early March, he readily admitted HWA did not rise as expected. So sure had he been of his prophecy, Filippello said, he had actually waited at the cemetery on January 16 to be on hand for the event. He wasn't alone. A good number of WCG members, we are told, cruised near the cemetery the entire day in anticipation of "something big." But nothing happened.

Now, Filippello says, he's just "trying to hold together." His followers, who once numbered over 150, have now dwindled to under 50. But Filippello, although sounding a bit discouraged, still holds out a glimmer of hope in his prophetic timetable. April 1, he feels, is still going to be the date on which "the great tribulation" will begin.

"But," we asked, "what if it doesn't?" "Then I am a false prophet," he replied. "And I'll send out a letter of apology to those who listened to me... and I'll start looking for a job." If he does that, he'll be a far better man than his hero, Herbert W. Armstrong, ever was.

The California Court of Appeal Reverses the McNair Decision and Orders a New Trial

On Dec. 30, 1987, the California Court of Appeal for the state's 2nd Appellate District reversed the $1.26 million defamation verdict won by Leona McNair against the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) in 1984, and ordered a new trial. As reported in past issues of Ambassador Report,<sup>1</sup> the McNair v. WCG defamation suit revolved around statements made in 1979 by WCG evangelist Roderick C. Meredith during a ministerial conference and in a church publication.

In ordering the new trial, the court held that the U.S. Constitution's free exercise (of religion) clause takes precedence over a state's interest in promoting a citizen's reputation through defamation laws. With the concurrences of Justices Robert Feinerman and Herbert L. Ashby, retired Justice James Hastings<sup>2</sup> (sitting by appointment) wrote in the 15-page opinion:

Our accommodation of the competing interests of our society - one protecting reputation, the other, the free exercise of religion - requires that we hold that in order for a plaintiff to recover damages for defamatory remarks made during the course of a doctrinal explanation by a duly authorized minister, he/she must show, by clear and convincing evidence, that the defamation was made with constitutional malice, that is with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not. Whether a plaintiff is a "public figure" or the method of publication is via a "newspaper" is irrelevant under this holding.<sup>3</sup>

The Pasadena Superior Court jury that granted Leona the $1.26 million in damages had not been instructed about deciding constitutional malice so the jury could not have determined whether the evidence supported a verdict in her favor, the justice wrote. Consequently, the court ordered that the McNair case be completely retried.<sup>4</sup>

Antony Stuart,<sup>5</sup> Leona McNair's attorney, told the Report:

Of course we're disappointed in the Court of Appeal's decision that the case should be retried, but we are supremely confident about prevailing in a second trial should the California Supreme Court affirm the Court of Appeal's decision. And that is because the only thing the Court of Appeal required be done differently is to ask the jury to determine whether Meredith's remarks were made with "knowing falsity or reckless disregard for the truth" ["constitutional malice"]. We believe the jury did find that and more in the initial trial. They found, first of all, that the statements were false; second, that the defendants made the statements with the intent to cause severe emotional distress to Leona; and third, that the defendants engaged in a conspiracy to defame and injure her.

We are comforted by the Court of Appeal's affirmation [of the principle] that Leona, and people like her, who are victimized by the heavy-handed conduct of any church, have a right to sue for their damages. But we are concerned that the Court of Appeal's opinion provides more protection to churches for libel and slander than that which is given to the press, or to anyone else for that matter.

What Stuart was referring to was that the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that media defendants obtain the so-called "constitutional malice" standard when sued by public figures in libel actions over speech on matters of public controversy.<sup>6</sup> (The reason for granting the press this level of protection is that in a democratic society the press plays an essential role in the political process.) The California Court of Appeal's new law, however, grants churches even more protection; so that when churches are sued for defamation in the future, "constitutional malice" will have to be proven even by plaintiffs who are private figures and even in cases involving matters of private concern.

A thorough analysis of the McNair case's relation to the modern law of libel and the First Amendment's free speech, free exercise, and establishment clauses would involve discussions of complex legal doctrines more appropriate in a law review article. But suffice it to say, many legal scholars who are aware of the reversal in the McNair case recognize that the California Court of Appeal, by its new law, has completely ignored the establishment clause of the First Amendment and has now given churches speech protections significantly superior to those of the press and vastly superior to those of private citizens.<sup>7</sup>

The California Court of Appeal, by its broad language in the McNair decision, has also given us many more questions than answers. For instance, what did the court mean by "during the course of doctrinal explanation"? In the WCG, and indeed in most churches, religious doctrine covers the full gamut of human existence. A WCG minister, Catholic priest, or Jewish rabbi can quite logically be viewed as almost always expounding upon religious doctrine when speaking publicly or writing, for these religions' doctrines relate to virtually everything.

And what did the court mean by "a duly authorized minister"? Many religious organizations consider clergypersons "authorized" only if they have been ordained through special rites. Some religionists, however, consider a clergyperson "authorized" if simply "self-dedicated." Others consider a minister "authorized" only if "ordained by God," or if God's special favor is shown through a life of celibacy or by speaking in tongues (glossolalia). Are these the kinds of indicia that courts will henceforth weigh in determining who is "authorized" under the new law?

It is quite apparent that should the California Court of Appeal's new law be allowed to stand, the inevitable consequence will be that future courts will have to define scores of religious terms. In so doing, the government will be declaring which clergypersons are "authorized," which topics are "doctrinal," which organizations are "churches" - and which ones are not. Obviously, such determinations (and they will be necessary under the California Court of Appeal's new law) will lead to increased government entanglements with religion, and, if left unchecked, could eventually stamp an imprimature of state approval upon certain religions.<sup>8</sup>

Not everyone, of course, is hurt by the Court of Appeal's new rule. For instance, some publishers of newsletters dealing with religion-related topics have obviously been given new far-reaching protections significantly greater than those afforded the general press. But many who believe in "separation of church and state" cannot help but feel uncomfortable with a court decision that augurs increased government meddling with religion. And we should all feel uncomfortable with an activist court creating a law that promises not simply protection for the Billy Grahams and the Archbishop Mahoneys of our society, but that also promises preferential judicial treatment for the Gene Scotts, the Rabbi Kahanes, and the Louis Farrakhans.<sup>9</sup>

Stuart's appeal to the California State Supreme Court may take months. It is quite possible that the case could then be brought before the U.S. Supreme Court. In the end, there may well be a new jury trial, and after that, quite possibly, more appeals. But while the lawyers, judges, and legal scholars engage in the paper chase, Leona McNair waits for justice, alone in Pasadena. As a result of her lawsuit against the WCG, one WCG-member son speaks to her only briefly if she calls him. Her other son, a WCG employee, refuses all contact with his mother and will not even give her his address. Although Leona earns her way as a nurse, friends say she is unable to afford the therapy psychologists have testified she needs as a result of evangelist Meredith's attack on her and as a result of her traumatic experiences in the WCG.

Sources have indicated that the California Court of Appeal's decision hurt Leona deeply because in its published opinion, the court repeated, as fact, many of evangelist Meredith's statements about her that the unanimous jury had found to be untrue. That the court would do this, friends say, was devastating to her. But, we are told, through prayer and Bible study, and with the encouragement of friends, Leona has since been able to regain the spiritual strength she needs to carry on.

2. Justices Hastings and Ashby were appointed by then governor Ronald Reagan. Justice Feinerman was appointed by former governor Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown Jr.

4. Previous to the California Court of Appeal's ruling, of course, no legislative or judicial body had ever set down such a difficult standard for private citizens attempting to prove defamation. The layman can therefore liken this activist panel's reversal to some governing body in the sports world taking away a champion's medal and saying, "Okay, you won under the old rule, but we don't like those rules now. So go back and try to win under these new, more difficult rules we've just created."

Those who've never studied the law, but who've been blessed with old-fashioned common sense, might ask: Why go through all the time, trouble, and expense of a new trial? Even if the Court of Appeal's new rule were correct, wouldn't it make more sense to simply regather the jurors from the first trial (the ones that, after all, sat through almost seven weeks of testimony) and, through a court proceeding with the Court of Appeal's new instruction added to the previous jury instructions, again ask the jury for their verdict?

Those interested in learning why so much of our law is archaic and inefficient will find enlightenment in distinguished attorney Charles Rembar's book The Law of the Land (published by Simon and Schuster). Mr. Rembar's work is an entertaining history of the barbaric origins of our Anglo-American legal system and its numerous anachronisms.

5. Mr. Stuart is with the Los Angeles lawfirm of Greene, O'Reilly, Broillet, Paul, Simon, McMillan, Wheeler, & Rosenberg.

6. The "constitutional malice" standard, as it has come to be called, derives from a line of U.S. Supreme Court decisions beginning with the famous case of New York Times Co. v. Sullivan (1964) 376 U.S. 254, and as refined in cases such as Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc. (1974) 418 U.S. 323, and Dun and Bradstreet, Inc. v. Greenmoss Builders (1985) 472 U.S. 749, all of which were cited as authority by the Court of Appeal.

7. The establishment clause requires that "Congress [and the courts, by case law and logical extension] shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion...." We think it is very significant that nowhere in its opinion did the Court of Appeal in any way address the establishment clause implications of its ruling.

8. Perhaps belatedly sensing the inevitable difficulties its broadly worded opinion will create, the court, in a procedure not usually seen, filed an additional footnote to the decision a month after the opinion itself was filed. The footnote (a revised number 13) reads:

Our opinion is based on the unique facts of this case that involve a former well-known and important member of the church (respondent) in a controversy that raises questions concerning church doctrine and teachings. We are not saying that explanation of church doctrine per se can shield the speaker or writer from a negligence action for libel or slander. There certainly must be a nexus between the person allegedly slandered or libeled and the religious activity involved. Accordingly, any determination of the malice required must be decided on a case by case basis.

It is somewhat amusing to see Leona McNair being portrayed as "well-known." In 1979, not one WCG member in 10 probably knew who she was. Among the general public, undoubtedly, not one American in a quarter million would have recognized her name.

It is also amusing that the court should want to make Leona "important." Of course, in one sense, all human beings are important. But in the general sense of "important" meaning influential in society, how could any woman in the WCG be "important"? In the WCG no women are ordained to the ministry, none are allowed to preach, and at the present time none are corporate officers or trustees. WCG women are taught to be completely subservient to men (fathers, then husbands), even to the point of having men decide what makeup, if any, they may put on their faces. That being so, how could any WCG woman be viewed as "important"? Unless, of course, all human beings are "important." But if that egalitarian definition is embraced, then the court's choice of words is meaningless in the context of its opinion.

Transparently, the court was attempting to paint Leona McNair as a "public figure." Yet, the lower court found, as a matter of law, that Leona was not a public figure! What's more, the Court of Appeal, in the body of its own opinion, stated that "[w]hether a plaintiff is a 'public figure'... is irrelevant under this holding."

The court's statement that there must be a nexus, or connection, between the person allegedly defamed and "the religious activity involved" (not defined) is so vague as to make us wonder how any future court could find direction in this attempted limitation. What degree of nexus, and exactly what kind of nexus, does the court have in mind?

Finally, in the last sentence of the note, the Court of Appeal seems to throw up its hands in frustration and feebly admit that it really has not articulated a clear rule to be relied on in deciding future cases involving defamatory statements made during activities relating to religion. Future cases of this type, it writes, will simply have to be decided on a "case by case basis."

9. That greatly increased entanglement of religion and government could occur in the U.S. in the near future should not be assumed to be far-fetched. In this regard it is interesting that among those candidates now running for the U.S. Presidency, at least four (Gore, Hart, Jackson, and Robertson) are seminary educated. Two (Jackson and Robertson) are ordained ministers. And one (Robertson) claims that God personally talks to him. According to the Los Angeles Times (March 4, 1988), Robertson has stated that only those adhering to certain specific religious beliefs are qualified to run for political office. The same Times article also reported that Robertson has been known to speak in tongues, and he has stated that within 10 years he expects to see "judges speaking in tongues from the bench."

HWA Remembered (Part III)

As was inferred in Parts I and II of "HWA Remembered," even though Herbert W. Armstrong is now gone, new insights into his famous career continue to emerge.

Volume two of the Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong has now been released by the WCG. (Free copies may be obtained by writing the WCG or by calling one of their toll-free numbers listed in the Plain Truth.) This final volume, which is a compilation of many HWA autobiographical articles formerly serialized in the Plain Truth and of some of his co-worker letters, is reported to have been edited by WCG evangelist Herman L. Hoeh.

Many readers who were in the WCG during the last two or three decades will undoubtedly be amazed at Hoeh's editorial chutzpah when they read this 659-page work. Volume two, which covers HWA's life from about 1938 to his death in 1986, tells of his struggles in building Ambassador College, the Worldwide Church of God, the Plain Truth, and of his travels to meet world leaders (many of whom, HWA notes with some astonishment, either died or were removed from office shortly after meeting him). But what is most striking about his book is what is not covered. There is virtually no discussion of Worldwide's many turbulent years of political infighting, doctrinal changes, ministerial defections, and splinter groups. There is no hint of the many articles and books that have appeared in recent years accusing HWA of gross immorality and extreme hypocrisy. The state of California's 1979 investigation of the WCG and the receivership imposed upon the church are given only passing comment.

Even more surprising (because it so blatantly reveals this book to be the duplicitous puffery of HWA that it really is) is the treatment given HWA's son Garner Ted Armstrong. With the exception of a few passing references, Garner Ted is almost nowhere to be found. Yet for over two decades, when the Armstrong empire experienced its greatest growth ever, Garner Ted was the church's leading evangelist and its chief spokesman on both radio and television. Now, however, the official WCG line, evident by volume two of the Autobiography, is that Garner Ted Armstrong has become a "non-person."

The Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong is unquestionably propaganda. But amateur sleuths interested in HWA's real past will find that this book does offer occasional insights - if one is capable of "reading between the lines." For instance, beginning at page 48, HWA recounts how from April through July of 1942 he left his wife and sons behind in Eugene, Oregon and moved into a Hollywood, California apartment with his daughter Dorothy, then in her early twenties. The move to Hollywood, we are told, was necessary because the recording facilities there were so much superior to those he'd been using in Oregon, and being in Hollywood provided access to top radio announcers such as Art Gilmore.

However, one professional recording engineer that we talked to, a long-time member of the Audio Engineering Society and a man whose extensive experience in entertainment industry sound engineering dates back to the 1940s, said that HWA's explanation is ludicrous. While Hollywood (and New York City and a number of other entertainment industry centers) did have generally superior facilities for recording large orchestras and movie sound tracks, studios and equipment for doing broadcast-quality recordings of the spoken word were available throughout the United States by 1942 and such equipment could even be purchased then by individuals for home use. Radio announcers, too, were in no short supply. And even if one decided to use a particular Hollywood announcer for a few sentences of opening and closing comments, as were spoken by Art Gilmore, the technology of the era allowed for high-quality, lathe-cut masters for dubbing. Books on the subject of recording-arts history clearly bear this out. In other words, contrary to his Autobiography assertions, there was really no technological reason for HWA to have gone to Hollywood in 1942.

Then there is the excuse given by HWA for Dorothy's company. At page 48 we read that Dorothy "demanded" that she be taken to California in the hope that she might see her Marine fiance. But a careful reading beginning at page 47 shows that her fiance was in Quantico, Virginia and that there was only "some possibility" of him coming through Los Angeles or San Diego or San Francisco on his way to the Pacific theater. Further, it is admitted, such a stop-over, if it were to have happened (and it didn't), would have been "very brief," perhaps only "twenty-four hours - or even less." Yet Dorothy lived with Herbert in Hollywood for close to four full months!

HWA readily admits that during all this time his wife Loma was back in Eugene running the church office while trying to raise their two sons on her own. We then read that in June Loma called Herbert to tell him she was having difficulty maintaining discipline over their son Dick and so she was sending him down by train to be with his father. When the thirteen-year-old arrived, what did Herbert do? Did he talk to his son about Christian values, lecture him about why he should have been more thoughtful toward his mother, or organize his son's summer plans toward productive activity? No! He first takes him on a tour of sin city. Then, the next day he suggests to his son that he go off alone and visit one of his young friends who had recently moved down from Oregon. Dick's friend lived in Hawthorne (in pre-freeway days, probably about two hours out of Hollywood). HWA then tells his thirteen-year-old, "You have to begin right now learning to be self-reliant and finding your own way around.... I'm too busy getting the broadcast ready to tell you [how to get to your friend's home]. Here's car fare. You're on your own. Find your way back. And be here in time for dinner. Goodbye, son."

Apparently Dick made it back without getting mugged or molested because in the days that followed, HWA would regularly give him money and, in effect, tell him to get lost. This, HWA claims, was all done to teach his thirteen-year-old "self-reliance."

While we don't doubt that HWA treated his son the way he describes, we don't believe that his claimed motive for doing so was his real motive. Considering HWA's years of advocating strictness in childrearing, HWA's abandonment of supervision over his son in order to enhance self-confidence in him (and since when did HWA ever encourage people to be independent?) seems completely out of character. The motive that does fit the man and the circumstances, however, is that he didn't want little Dick around during the day to witness what was really going on.

Herbert's almost four-month-long Hollywood odyssey only ended when Loma and some associates - very likely suspecting something was amiss - drove down to Hollywood all the way from Oregon and brought Herbert and the rest of the family back to Eugene. That's not the way HWA worded it. But as you read Herbert's version of what happened, isn't that what really jumps out at you from the printed page?

Recall that since 1980 when David Robinson's book Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web first appeared, there has been wide circulation of the allegation that beginning in 1936 HWA had a very long incestuous relationship with his daughter Dorothy. Considering the significance of those charges, it is remarkable that editor Hoeh would allow Herbert's thinly-disguised Hollywood odyssey to be included in the Autobiography. Was Hoeh attempting to bring HWA's image down to earth? Or did HWA before his death order that his Hollywood odyssey be included in his Autobiography as some sort of cryptic message to the worldly potentates he loved so much more than his humble brethren - a cryptic message that he was able to sin more than all of them and still get away with it?

We may never know the answer to that. But we believe the Autobiography of Herbert W. Armstrong, when read with the skeptical eyes of a careful detective, reveals dark secrets about the man his followers called "the Holy Apostle of God's True Church."

Bobby Fischer Update

Ever since we published our large 1977 issue, which contained an interview with former world chess champion Bobby Fischer, we have regularly received letters from readers asking for updates on the renowned chess genius. Over the years, we have attempted to locate Fischer to ask for another interview and to offer assistance in promoting his once-budding career. Unfortunately, it has proven impossible for us to locate the elusive chess champion. Recently, however, a reader sent us a clipping from the November 13, 1987 edition of The Globe and Mail (of Canada) in which reporter Bill Girdner wrote about Fischer's current lifestyle. The article is informative:

U.S. chess wizard held in check by his own eccentric fears

Riding an orange public bus that runs between Pasadena and Los Angeles, say chess players, is how the eccentric and enigmatic American chess genius Bobby Fischer now spends his days. "He never gets off," said an international-class player living in Los Angeles who asked that his name not be used. "He just stays on, going round and round."

Mr. Fischer has retained his genius and can still "smash" almost any opponent, said former friends and competitors, but he now applies his mind to memorizing anti-Semitic literature and preaching against the Soviets. "He's not well," the player said. "He's a smart and loveable man, but it's bad. He doesn't have money. He's very poor."

Mr. Fischer became an unlikely American idol in the Icelandic city of Reykjavik in 1972 when he beat Soviet Boris Spassky for the world championship of chess - a game that generally receives almost no attention in the United States. He made the covers of Sports Illustrated, Time, and Life magazines, and North American viewers followed the slow play-by-play of his contest with Mr. Spassky on television. Chess groupies even emerged who worked their way up the ratings chart, according to chess players and teachers, in the hope of eventually seducing Mr. Fischer.

"Chess is like war on a board," Mr. Fischer said then. "The object is to crush the other man's mind." Part of what made Mr. Fischer a media star, observers have suggested, was that the match became a symbolic superpower confrontation: Mr. Fischer was the only American to wrest the world title from the Soviets, who have dominated chess since the Second World War.

When, temperamental as always, he threatened to quit play after only a few games, then President Richard Nixon and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger telephoned to coax him back to the board.

In the world of chess where mastery of the game is all, Mr. Fischer was and remains legendary. "He's as great as everything that everybody said about him," said Max Wilkerson, a chess expert who directs the chess room at the Mechanics Club in San Francisco and has played Mr. Fischer. "But he is completely unforgiving as a person."

Mr. Wilkerson was present when Mr. Fischer made his first appearance in the Manhattan Chess Club, the most famous chess milieu in the United States. At the age of 11½, he played senior master Walter Shipman and lost. Members of the club had heard about the young sensation, and they crowded around Mr. Shipman to ask: "How's the kid?" Mr. Wilkerson says he can remember verbatim the prophetic answer: "Not yet boys, but just wait."

Born in 1943 in Chicago, he won the U.S. championship at 14 and the world championship at 29. But then things began to go wrong. Mr. Fischer refused to defend his world title in 1975. He came under the wing of a fundamentalist church in Pasadena, the Worldwide Church of God, and gave the church much of his royalties and prize money.

Mr. Wilkerson said he turned away from the Worldwide Church of God after a leader of the church predicted the return of Jesus Christ on a particular date. When that event did not materialize, Mr. Fischer rejected the church. Players in the Los Angeles area say that since then, he has been living with friends or in seedy hotel rooms, surrounded by chess books and Hitler memorabilia. He has alienated many of his friends through his "paranoia" and his ability to "eat everything that's not nailed down," they say. They describe Mr. Fischer as a "human vacuum cleaner" sucking up food and egos. Friends say he never lets them know where he is staying, always requesting that he be dropped off and then finishing the route home on foot. One of his principal fears is that he will be killed by Russian agents, they say, and he also believes that all defectors from the Soviet Union are KGB agents still loyal to their Soviet masters.

In the spring of 1981, Mr. Fischer was arrested by Pasadena police [when he was found] wandering along a highway and, when he refused to give his address, [he was] charged with vagrancy. He wrote a small book about the experience called "I Was Tortured in the Pasadena Jailhouse." It became a hot item in chess stores, and employees at a chess store in Los Angeles sold their 200 copies out in two weeks, even though the book said nothing about chess. A number of people including Soviet news reporters have requested copies since then, said the employees, but they are no longer available.

Now, Mr. Fischer lives in Pasadena with another chess player, said chess enthusiasts in Los Angeles and San Francisco. He still studies the game along with a book promoting white supremacy that he has memorized word for word. For example, if a friend gives him a page and line number of the book, he can recite the exact words of that line complete with punctuation.

"He has a terrible illness. He may feel he's going to come back and play in a tournament," the international player said. "But he couldn't handle people watching him, the proximity of people. He would flip out." Mr. Wilkerson, however, said people forget that Mr. Fischer has dropped out before and every time he came back stronger. "Nothing Fischer could ever do would surprise me any more," Mr. Wilkerson said. "If he came back tomorrow, it wouldn't surprise me. If he never came back, it wouldn't surprise me either."

The Coronation Stone Revisited

Editor: As many WCG observers know, the Coronation Stone of Westminster Abbey figures prominently in the WCG's Anglo-Israel teachings. In 1987, after considerable research, writer Bill Moore (AC, Bricklet Wood, 1969) sent us the following letter regarding his research on the subject.

I read your January 1987 AR and wanted to respond to the letter on page four regarding "Jacob's Pillar Stone." One of the very first things I did on my October 1986 trip to London was to visit with the head librarian of Westminster Abbey. Very few tourists visit the library since it is reached through an ancient and continuously locked wooden door off a wing of the cloister. The library was converted from a monk's dormitory in the 1600s and houses a rare collection of 17th-century volumes. I asked the librarian, an obliging whisp of a woman in her late 40s or early 50s, if she had any historical background material on the coronation stone. She dug out a dog-eared copy of the abbey's standard tourist guide in the margins of which she had written copious notes similar to the way WCG members mark the margins of their Bibles. She recited the legend of the stone originally having been brought to the British Isles from Israel thousands of years ago. She hastened to add, however, that no reputable historian places any credence in the legend. Unfortunately and ironically, despite the hundreds of ancient volumes in her library, none deals with the history of the coronation stone. For that you have to go to other sources, and I have.

Alfred P. Smyth is recognized as one of the world's preeminent medieval historians. His book, Warlords and Holy Men - Scotland AD 8 - 1000 (published in 1984 by Edward Arnold, London), was recommended to me by Dr. D. H. Caldwell, Assistant Keeper, National Museum of Antiquities, Edinburgh, Scotland. I have corresponded with Dr. Smyth regarding the legend that the coronation stone, which was removed to Westminster Abbey in 1296 by Edward I of England from its original location in Scone, Scotland was the Lia Fail of Tara Hill. He kindly took a great deal of his time to find and photocopy two obscure scholarly dissertations relevant to the question of the origin of the coronation stone in Ireland and known as Lia Fail in Irish history. The first was written in 1836 by John O'Donovan, who, in the words of Dr. Smyth, was "the greatest of nineteenth century scholars." O'Donovan's unpublished "Letters Containing information relative to the Antiquities of the County of Meath" contain information I believe your readers will find of interest. Here are a few excerpts:

Keating [a 16th-century Irish historian] says that the Irish Colony who emigrated to Scotland in the beginning of the 6th-century took with them this stone, and he quotes or rather translates from Hector Boece an old rann from which he believes that the Scots would obtain monarchial sway in whatever Country [sic] they could bring (find) this stone. Keating, after giving us a full account of the virtues, history, etc., of this stone, says that the above prophecy was fulfilled in the then reigning Monarch [sic] of Great Britain (Charles I ?) who was of Scotie origin and found the Lia-Fail at Westminster Abbey.

The rann above referred to runs as follows (But his rann is nothing else but a translation of Hector Boece's Latin "Ni fallat fatum" by Keating himself): [I have omitted the Latin version for your readers - W.M.]:

The Scotie tribe, a noble race
Unless the prophecy be false
Wherever they find the Lia-Fail
Are entitled to supremacy.

O'Donovan then quotes Sir Walter Scott's rendition of the poem:

Unless the Fates be faithless found
And Prophets voice be vain
Where e'er this Monument is found
The Scotie race shall reign.

O'Donovan continues:

It is said that in the reign of Edward I this stone was removed from the Abbey of Scone in Scotland to Westminster where it is now to be seen but called by the name of "Solomon's Stone."

I could never find an older authority for the removal of this stone to Scotland in the 6th Century than Keating's and I therefore have not believed it since I began to question the divine authority of Irish history. Keating does not quote any authority and as we have the authority of the poem of Cuan O'Lochain in the Dinnseanchus that the Lia Fail was at Tara in the time of the writer (10th century) we must reject Keating's story as a silly fable, or at least as founded upon oral tradition or perhaps drawn from the fabulous writings of Hector Boece and other Scotch historians of the same descriptions.

Regarding the accuracy of Hector Boece's history, the eleventh edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica says the following, "The composition of [Boece's] history displays much ability; but [his] imagination was, however, stronger than his judgment: of the extent of the historian's credulity, his narrative exhibits many unequivocal proofs; and of deliberate inventions of distortions of facts not a few, though the latter are less flagrant and intentional than early 19th century criticism has assumed."

The second publication which Dr. Smyth sent me is of much more modern vintage. It is a 1971 archaeological review of the monuments at Tara Hill, County Meath, Ireland, written by the late Sean P. O'Riordain, Professor of Archaeology, University College, Dublin. According to Dr. Smyth, Professor O'Riordain was "the greatest archaeologist in Ireland in this century." Your readers will recall that Tara Hill was the site of the throne of the ancient high kings of Ireland. According to Professor O'Riordain, the Lia Fail still stands on Tara Hill today:

Towards the centre of Rath na Riogh are the two earthworks marked the Forradh (or Royal Seat) to the east and Teach Cormaic (Cormac's House) to the west.... Here also we see, beside the modern statue of St. Patrick, an upright granite stone [looking surprisingly like a phallic symbol - W.M.] marked lightly with a cross, the letters R.I.P. and initials - for it marks the grave of some of those killed in the Battle of Tara in 1798. It already stood there in Petrie's time but tradition had it that it formerly lay near the Mound of the Hostages. Now this according to the Dinnshenchas, was the position of [Lia Fail], the inauguration stone which roared under the feet of the king. Hence the stone over the '98 grave is taken to be the Lia Fail - notwithstanding the late story in Keating of its transfer to Scotland.

So if the Lia Fail - "stone of destiny" is still standing at Tara Hill, then what is the origin of the red sandstone block housed under the graffiti-riddled oak throne chair in Westminster Abbey?

The question of the origin of the British coronation stone was thoroughly investigated in 1869 by William F. Skene in his 44-page treatise, "The Coronation Stone." After recounting the purely legendary movement of the Irish coronation stone from Egypt [not Israel, notice] through Spain to Ireland, he states the following:

It is somewhat remarkable that while Scotch legend brings the stone at Scone from Ireland, the Irish legend brings the stone at Tara from Scotland. The two legends, at all events, are quite antagonistic to each other, and there is one historic fact certain as to each. First, the Lia Fail, or Irish stone, did not leave Tara, but was still there in the eleventh century; and secondly, the Scotch stone was not in Argyll during the existence of the Irish colony of Dalriada, nor was it used in the inauguration of their kings. The first appears from this, that the Irish translation of Nennius, made in the eleventh century, has appended to it a list of the Mirabilia or wonders of Erin, among which are the three wonders of Teamar or Tara; and the third is "the Lia Fail, or stone which sounded under every king whom it recognized in the sovereignty of Teamar." Another version says "there is a stone at Temhar, viz. the Lia Fail, which used to sound under the feet of every one that assumed the kingdom of Erin." Petrie, in his Antiquities of Tara Hill, quotes other older documents to show that the stone still remained there. The second fact is shown by the account given by the biographers of St. Columba [the 6th-century founder of Christianity in Scotland] of the inauguration of Aidan as King of the Scots of Argyll. The account is given by two of the successors of St. Columba - Cumine the White, who was abbot [of Iona] from 657 to 669, and Adomnan, who was abbot from 679 to 704. St. Columba had obtained at the Council of Dumceat the independence of Scotch Dalriada; and if ever there was an occasion on which the Stone of Destiny might be expected to play a prominent part, it was in the solemn rite by which St. Columba constituted Aidan king, in obedience to a divine command declared in a vision, and accompanied by a prophecy regarding his successors. He ordains him by placing his hands upon his head, blessing him, using what Adomnan calls "verba ordinationis"; but, throughout the whole description, there is not a single allusion to the Fatal Stone.

After quoting Professor Ramsay who physically examined the coronation stone and concluded that it was, in all probability, cut from the sandstone bedrock found in the region of Scone, Skene concludes that:

[T]here was no connection between the stone at Scone and the Lia Fail at Tara, and that the legends of their wanderings, like the tribes with whom they are associated, are nothing but myth and fable.

It was the custom of Celtic tribes to inaugurate their kings upon a sacred stone supposed to symbolise the monarchy. The Irish kings were inaugurated on the Lia Fail which was never anywhere but at Tara, the "sedes principalis" of Ireland; and the kings of Scotland, first of the Pictish monarchy, and afterwards of the Scottish kingdoms which succeeded it, were inaugurated on this stone, which never was anywhere but at Scone, the "sedes principalis" both of the Pictish and of the Scottish kingdoms.

In conclusion, Irish and English historians, as well as Irish tradition (with the exception of Keating in the 16th-century), reaffirm the fact that the Lia Fail - or fabled "Stone of Destiny" - never left Tara Hill in County Meath, Ireland. It still stands as part of a memorial to Ireland's fight for independence from England. As for the English Coronation Stone in Westminster Abbey, it was removed - more militant Scottish nationals will say "stolen" - from the royal seat in Scone, Scotland in 1296 A.D. by Britain's King Edward I. It is this stone that later was mistakenly called "Jacob's Pillar Stone" in a transparent attempt to biblically justify the growth of British imperialism from the 16th to the 19th century. Neither the large phallic stone at Tara Hill nor the sandstone block at Westminster are "Jacob's Stone" regardless of what Anglo-Israelism or Worldwide Church of God dogma may teach. This is an incontrovertible fact of history.

More on Anglo-Israelism

Ambassador Report continues to receive letters regularly on Anglo-Israelism or British-Israelism - the teaching that the English-speaking "white" nations are the so-called lost ten tribes of Israel. The doctrine is not unique to the WCG, and more and more groups seem to be adopting it, although with variations. For instance, Time magazine (Oct. 20, 1986, p. 74) reported how the militant Aryan Nations and other new racist groups in the U.S. make "Identity," as they call the teaching, a central part of their belief system.

It is interesting to note some of the variations of the doctrine now being promulgated. For instance, one group (The Pathfinder, P.O. Box 291, Spokane, WA 99210) puts out a flyer on the supposed migrations of the "lost tribes," and equates them with "the Caucasians" or "Western Christian nations." It is unclear from the flyer whether or not Catholic Spain and Italy are considered Christian by the author, but he is somehow convinced that "among the peoples of Anglo-Saxondom, you will always find Bible and worship of Jesus Christ, just as the Bible states that Israel would do."

Then there was the AR reader who wrote us: "All white Christians are true twelve tribe Israel. Russians and all Slovanics are [the] tribe of Issachar." Perhaps Joe Tkach will appreciate learning this. Whatever the case, it is remarkable to us just how far some will extend the boundaries of their "modern Israel."

One of the best papers we've ever seen on Anglo-Israelism is titled Truth Line (dated August, 1981) and is published by TSL Publishing House, P.O. Box 18122, Cleveland Heights, Ohio 44118. Besides giving a biblical critique of the doctrine, the paper provides an interesting history of the belief and lists a good number of groups that adhere to it. We know very little about the TSL group, but they appear to be former WCG members who put out a number of free publications aimed at helping Worldwidiers.

The Bricket Wood Sale - What Really Happened

Editor: Ambassador College currently has two campuses: one in Pasadena, California and the other in Big Sandy, Texas. But until 1976, the WCG also operated a beautiful and developing college campus at Bricket Wood, England in London's green belt. In 1976, when the Armstrongs sold off that campus, it was claimed that financial difficulties had forced the sale. Many of us, however, who had spent time at the college in England and who knew the stated goals of the church, suspected that there was more to the sale than the official line. For surely, if the WCG really was in financial difficulty, other assets could have been liquidated at less cost to the effectiveness of "the Work." For instance, we wondered, why not sell off one of the jets, or cut back on the concert series or cut back on the amount of land owned for keeping the fall festival? Why sell off a whole college campus - one that eventually could have developed into a respected academic institution? We recently asked Charles Hunting, for many years the WCG's business manager in England, what he knew of the Bricket Wood sale. He sent us the following account of what really transpired:

The story of HWA and the Bricket Wood meltdown is, I think, an uncomplicated story of HWA faced with a decision brought about by one of the periodic supposed "financial crises" and his own personal desires to live a different pattern of existence after the death of Loma [Armstrong, HWA's first wife].

A decision was made largely, I think, between HWA, church attorney Stan Rader, and Ted [Garner Ted Armstrong, HWA's son, and then a church V.P.] that one of the colleges had to be closed because of the financial problem. Ted had then come back into power and the job was left to him as to which one was to go. There was no question probably in Ted's mind as to which way the decision would eventually go, but there had to be a selling job on the demise of Bricket Wood. It became Ted's job to push the decision, and as it turned out, a huge struggle ensued between Ted and myself as to which one would go, Texas or England. I was just a bit naive still at this stage of the game, but should have realized, even then, that it was all show.

I was called to Pasadena for a conference chaired by Ted, with Ron Dart, Bob Kuhn, David Antion, and about five others whose names escape me for the moment. HWA and Rader were out going to and fro, India or most likely Thailand, keeping in close touch with the proceeding by lengthy telexes. The final recommendation was to be arrived at by the august body of advisers at the above mentioned conference and was to be referred to HWA and Rader for the final inspired decision from on high.

The conference raged on all morning, with Ted presenting his reasons for Cactus Alley and I as the lone exponent for England. I sighted the whole international scope of the work, the huge printing facility in England, etc., etc., as valid reasons for the continuation of the English college. There was scarcely a word out of the mouths of the other members of the "advisory" team.

The meeting broke up for lunch. After the close of the morning session and before its resumption in the afternoon, virtually everyone of the "team" came to me and told me that I was right in my arguments; there was no need for two American colleges, and the one in Bricket Wood should remain open or both should be closed. We resumed after lunch in Ted's office, this time with just a few of the elite - Garner Ted, Kuhn, Antion, Dart, and Ted's Court Jester (I've forgotten his name for the moment). Although all of these fellows had told me Ted's best little you-know-what-house in Texas should close, not one, nil, zilch would make even the slightest protest in that short, informal, afternoon session when Ted guessed that it was the consensus of opinion that [the college in] England was to go down the tubes. So the sham morning meeting was merely the, window dressing for Ted's previously made decision.

I will never forget the scene that followed. I looked at each one of the "consensus" who had thirty minutes before told me Ted was wrong. Not one would look at me and not one raised even a whisper of protest. I will never forget it. One looked at the floor. Most kept their eyes fixed on their bread and butter. When no one disagreed with Ted, Bob Kuhn spoke up and said, "Let's telex HWA and tell him that it is the unanimous recommendation of the group that Texas will remain open." I told Bob, "Don't you dare put my name to that telex!" Ted was furious that I would oppose his august highness in the presence of the group, but he cooled off and the telex sans my name was sent.

It is my studied opinion that nothing was done in any major action by Ted, or anyone else, in which HWA did not totally concur or else didn't really care. In the case of closing the college, Herbert, now free of Loma, would be happy to be free of Bricket Wood.

Free, free, free to pursue the life of a wealthy jetsetter. So closing Bricket Wood was what he really wanted, but he had to make some kind of a show and he could always blame Ted as the Simon Legree in the act. If the Texas college stayed open, it didn't tie him down. That was Ted's problem. And after all, Ted was now the voice of the last, great, end-time work and it was no small gesture on HWA's part to keep "the Vice," sorry, "Voice" happy. HWA did the same thing when Teddy wanted to start his [Plain Truth] newspaper. We in England screamed to high heaven that it would do nothing in England but create a litter problem. But HWA didn't even really care about his beloved Plain Truth and let Ted put out his miserable failure to supplant the [magazine format] PT. It did create a litter problem, too.

HWA was getting what he wanted out of life. To pursue those aims, he wanted to separate himself as far as possible from the agony of day to day decisions and from contact with students and/or people in the church with whom he had so little in common. It is a well-known fact that TV religionists all hate to meet up with their followers. They do have much to hide. And it was to the advantage of all of us in the top echelons [of the WCG] to provide a cover and cater to the Armstrongs.

One final comment about HWA. I am sure you are as aware as I am of the total selfishness of the man and his complete lack of sentimentality about anything that was in the slightest degree remote from his own personal desires. People who had served him well were immediately removed from the scene at the slightest hint of a threat, whether they constituted a real threat or not. Take my case. I was not taken in, or even involved in, any of the meetings in which HWA participated that ended with my removal from England. HWA didn't even call me, or talk to me, until after he had made his final decision. And even this was to only yell at me something about kicking him in the stomach. This was just before he began speaking to the church in England. The man had no personal loyalty or sentiment toward England, the Bricket Wood college, or anyone there after Loma's death. It was an encumbrance to his new lifestyle. And it was a continuous thorn in Ted's side because of my [past] close contact with HWA (but that had really virtually ended by this time as I was no longer included in the flying entourage).

This might fill in part of the picture for you. But they are only my own personal opinions, and I have never discussed them before with anyone.

- Charles Hunting, New Smyrna Beach, Florida

Charles Hunting on Radio

Many who were in the WCG during the sixties and seventies remember how church executive and evangelist Charles F. Hunting was then one of the church's most captivating speakers. And those of us who were privileged to have Mr. Hunting as a theology and speech professor at Ambassador College, Bricket Wood, also recall that he was a man of warmth, humor, integrity, and compassion.

When your editor left the WCG in 1974 he sent letters to dozens of WCG friends (he thought) explaining his reasons for leaving. Only two wrote back to express any concern - one was Charles Hunting. In 1975, when Bob and Connie Gerringer left the WCG, only one WCG minister cared enough to write them and express his feelings of concern on the matter - Charles Hunting. (Bob's 22-page response is the so-called "Gerringer letter" which has been widely circulated in WCG circles ever since.)

By the late '70s Hunting could no longer tolerate the situation in Worldwide, and for reasons of conscience felt compelled to resign from the organization he had served wholeheartedly for two full decades. For doing so, he was ostracized by virtually all his Worldwide associates. (And he has a son and a daughter who are still members.)

In the eleven years since leaving Worldwide, Hunting has apparently been involved in a number of business ventures, and has spent much time in theological study (he is currently working on a book about the trinity doctrine). Until recently, however, he had not really spoken out publicly about the WCG. Now, that may change. On August 5, Hunting was interviewed for over two hours on the Clyde Thomas WHIS radio talkshow in Florida. There was no bitterness in Hunting's voice. But he was very frank and revealed a great deal about his experiences with the Armstrongs and about how the WCG operates. (Hunting's comments about HWA's meetings with world leaders and about HWA's spending habits were particularly interesting.)

Will Hunting be doing more interviews in the future? Perhaps. He wrote us: "Maybe I am just now coming out of a mental shell. And with a little practice at this sort of thing I might be more effective in the future. Who knows? I do know that there is a tremendous interest in these matters on the part of the public."

Those who are interested in the WCG will be pleased to learn that Mr. Hunting's interview on WHIS was recorded, and cassette tape copies are available for $1.50 each (to cover duplicating and postage costs only) by writing to Charles Hunting, 314 Columbus Ave., New Smyrna Beach, FL 32069.

Materials of Interest

Among current WCG members, there is probably no church doctrine more frequently questioned than the anti-makeup doctrine. Apostle Tkach reiterated HWA's dogma on the subject in a Worldwide News article that appeared in June. Now Keith Hunt of the Biblical Church of God (Canada) has challenged Tkach's makeup position in an article entitled "Makeup - Our Answer to Joseph W. Tkach" which appeared in Hunt's newsletter The Truth of the Matter. We found this article educational and believe many involved with the WCG will benefit from it. Free copies may be obtained by writing The Biblical Church of God (Canda), Box 36, Station A, Kelowna, B.C. Canada V1Y 7N3.

Another author who addresses the makeup issue is Ralph Woodrow. His book Women's Adornment - What Does the Bible Really Say? contains much Bible teaching and much common sense. Women in the WCG will find this a very helpful study. We understand the book is priced at $4.00 and is available by writing to Ralph Woodrow, Box 124, Riverside, California 92502.

It is certainly not the purpose of Ambassador Report to promote atheism or to campaign against religious faith. Intellectuals who wonder why that is so may find something of an answer in the works of Carl Jung and in Peter Shaffer's play Equus. Nevertheless, we readily acknowledge that some of the most insightful writing on religion today is being done by individuals some Christians would call agnostics or atheists. In the past year, unsolicited copies of three generally anti-religion publications made their way into our mailbox. We think they should be mentioned because some of our readers will, at least, want to be aware of their existence.

Free Inquiry is a large, well-written, scholarly, and often entertaining quarterly published by the Council for Democratic and Secular Humanism. Free Inquiry publishes articles on the nature of religious experience, the history of religions, provocative letters, editorials, book reviews, and advertisements. Their exposes of many religious organizations are particularly interesting. Many of their articles are by world-renowned scholars and the writing is usually first-rate. Free Inquiry is not free. Sample copies are $3.75 each, available by writing Free Inquiry, Box 5, Buffalo, NY 14215-0005.

The American Rationalist is a small magazine (or newsletter) published six times per year by the Rationalist Association. The American Rationalist bills itself as "The Alternative to Religious Superstition" and appears to promote a philosophy similar to that of Free Inquiry. Sample copies are $1.00 each and may be had by writing The American Rationalist, 2001 St. Clair Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri 63144.

HUMSIG is a newsletter of the humanist special interest group in Mensa, the high IQ society. This small, but well-written, newsletter is edited by former WCG member Larry Taylor who, after earning a theology degree at Ambassador, went on to earn accredited Master's degrees in both history and computer science. Sample copies of his newsletter are $1.00 each and may be obtained by writing HUMSIG, P.O. Box 5456, Whittier, CA 90607. The one issue we saw contained an article by Taylor questioning the accuracy of the Gospel account of Jesus' life. (We suspect that that article will generate a rebuttal or two from Christian scholars and we'd like to see any that may be published.)

As to religious orientation, what happens to WCG members who leave the WCG? We've noticed, over the years, that some rejoin mainstream churches. But a very large percentage lose all interest in religion, and a very significant percentage move on to religions just as nontraditional as Worldwide.

Lois E. Murphy (nee Holman, AC, Big Sandy, 1968-69) is a former WCG member who is now an active member of a mainline church. For Lois, the transition out of Worldwide and into the Christian mainstream was not easy. There were many disappointments along the way. Yet, she says, it was all worth it. Her experiences are contained in her article "Why the Prodigal Doesn't Return" which appeared in the November issue of Moody Monthly. Those who would like a free copy of her very fine article can obtain one by writing to Lois E. Murphy, 541 Oak Park Drive, Choctaw, OK 73020. As a courtesy to her, however, please be sure to include a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Long-time readers of Ambassador Report will recall that in our December 1981 issue we published portions of a series of newspaper articles about the cult phenomenon written by Dan'l C. Markham. Rev. Markham, an editor, church pastor, and county commissioner, has continued to study the cults and recently expanded the original series of articles into a 120-page book entitled The Cultic Phenomenon. It is available in bookstores in Britain, Australia, and New Zealand. In North America, however, it may only be obtained (for $8 per copy) by writing: Dan'l Markham/Book, P.O. Box 1, Ilivaco, WA 98624.

Finally, one of our readers sent us the following thought-provoking letter:

Dear AR Friends:

I obtain your wonderful AR from a friend and have been a regular reader for the past seven or so years. It is well-written, informative, and appealing. I especially find the letter section and the segment detailing new publications and groups to be valuable. I have passed on your address to many persons and will continue to do so.

*I want to relate a few things that I think you and your readers will find of interest or use. My strongly held opinion is that the greatest obstacle to members of the WCG and other Christian sects experiencing the liberating power of real Christianity is the fundamentalist mind-set engripping such ones! I can testify to this myself having been associated with a Christian sect similar to the WCG for almost 15 years. What freed me from the totalitarianism pervading my own sect was purging myself of the above-described "mind-set" through some well-chosen literature, discussion with friends of intellectual bent on a free level (unsupervised by sectarian authorities or literature), and some good, hard, honest thinking. As regards literature, I particularly want to mention James Barr's tome Beyond Fundamentalism which I believe is simply one of the "books of the century." Barr demonstrates how fundamentalist-minded groups structure the thinking of their laity so that they view the Scriptures through colored glasses, not as they are actually meant to be viewed. Sectarian groups use the Bible and the concocted verbal-plenary doctrine of inspiration merely as a political tool or lever with reference to the members. Barr's research goes to prove that the Bible can be assessed honestly and straightforwardly as it was meant to be so that a vibrant and productive Christian faith can be anchored. It is an eye-opener in the true sense of the word, and yet so sensitive and pastoral - a really fine work from all vantage points. It can be ordered for only $9.95 from the Verdict people (P.O. Box 1311, Fallbrook, CA 92028). I have also found useful some of the literature of Fundamentalists Anonymous, P.O. Box 20324, Greenley Square Sta., NY NY 10001. I would also like to mention that a perusal of sociological studies by people such as Bryan Wilson, James Beckford, Joseph Zygmunt and others specializing in sectarianism and authoritarianism has proven most helpful and informative. (Sociological journals can be found at most college libraries.)*

It is enlightening to see one's sect in the light of and in comparison with, the teachings and practices of other sects with similar bents, etc. I've found helpful here works of comparative religion, among which I'd like to mention Alfs' Concepts of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (available from O. T. B.H., P. O. Box 11337, Minneapolis, MN 55417) and the multi-volume works by Melton and Piepkorn. I would like to add that the least helpful works were those done by "anti-cultists" like Walter Martin and other evangelical preachers who merely substitute a so-called "orthodox" brand of fundamentalist thinking for a so-called "Unorthodox" brand. The review in the 2/9/86 issue of Christian Century of Martin's Kingdom of the Cults was appropriate in this regard when it remarked that such a work "is a conservative Protestant, normative-minded book of reference and judgment," containing, to be sure, some good information in the form of quotations, but which is "very, very difficult to dredge up and use, given its ideological wrapping." The review concluded with the observation that the author "seems to have little faith that one can report what a group stands for and let it be judged by people of various vantages. He helps - over-helps - them along."

In conclusion, I would like to say that the joy of asking the questions is just as great as the joy of receiving the sectarian "answers"; the joy of uncertainty is just as great as the joy of certainty; the joy of groping for God each day is just as great a joy as having "found" Him (all wrapped up in a neat, man-made package) in the sect. There need be no abyss to fall into beyond the perimeters of the sect's controlling influence: one may simply find there (as I believe I have) a springboard into a better life!

- An AR reader from the Midwest

Beg Your Pardon: Two of our readers have pointed out to us that in our January 1987 issue we gave an incorrect address for Reality Report. Their correct address is 2442 (not 4224) N.W. Market Street, Seattle, WA 98107. Besides their newsletter, this organization publishes the book American and British Israelism Debunked by Richard A. Marson. We hope our error has not inconvenienced too many readers.

Letters

I have heard ministers say that Herbert W. Armstrong was greater than any of the original apostles. Then, after the death of Herbert W. Armstrong they were saying that he was disorganized and a hindrance to "the Work." Now Joseph W. Tkach is an "apostle" in the office of Elisha - with twice the spirit as HWA. Or is he now in the office of Joshua? Now "the Work" will leap forward greatly since HWA. is out of the way....

I stopped attending the WCG shortly after returning from Red China around the first of the year. I saw WCG government in action in Red China, where I worked for two months. I attended WCG [services] for 26 years. What a waste! But that was my fault.

*- Jon Johnson
(AC, Pasadena, 1965)*

I want to ask you people at AR something. Around 1982 there came out a book called Holy Blood, Holy Grail written by three men. It was about the history of a very old secret society of some of the most famous men in history. According to this book, this society is still around and they are working toward a United States of Europe to be headed by an imposter-Christ. The three authors of Holy Blood, Holy Grail have now put out a sequel called The Messianic Legacy. It is published by a Henry Holt. I saw a copy the other day in a bookstore and noticed in the back that Mr. Herbert Armstrong is mentioned and that headquarters had somehow read the first hook and had investigated the authors. I also noticed that the end of the book predicts what Mr. Armstrong preached for years about Europe.

So I asked a friend in the Church if he knew about any of this and he said he had heard from a friend in CGI that Mr. Dart was up on this. He also heard from a friend that a lot of the ministers had read these hooks. So I asked our local minister about it. He was very silent. Then after a long pause he said, "You are not to read those books or discuss them with anyone. Is that clear?" I asked him why, and all he yelled was "Is that clear?!"

When I mentioned this to my friend he said that he was told something similar by his church pastor. What I want to know is why are we not to read or discuss these books, especially considering the Church's prophecies are the same?

- Illinois

Editor: Sorry, we don't know. Perhaps it's because authors Baigent, Leigh, and Lincoln do not ascribe to a fundamentalist view of the Bible or because they delve into the history of Anglo-Israel doctrines. Whatever the reason, we find their writings most interesting, even if a number of their conclusions are unconvincing. You'll notice, for instance, if you read their second book carefully, that it appears that they may well have been duped by the "secret society" and that the society may well be fictitious.

Long after I left the WCG a friend of mine, a long-standing member of that cult, became afflicted with cancer. Not only did the church not offer any kind of help or encouragement, but when he was no longer able to attend services, not one of the members came to visit him. Instead, at the Feast of Tabernacles in Rapid City, South Dakota, some minister stated that cancer was due to sexual sins, which, in my friend's case, was the farthest from the truth.

Also, to add insult to insult, when my friend was at his lowest ebb, a local elder from the Watertown church came around and asked his mother (not a member) if there were any "envelopes" for them. Meaning, of course, containing tithes and offerings. This shows what a coldblooded congregation of evildoers they are while operating under the deceptive guise of "God's Church."

- North Dakota

I am generally not in the habit of buying "skin magazines," but I bought the November and December issues of Playboy to read the two-part series by Jessica Hahn. They are very revealing to say the least, and some of the things she describes are very familiar. In many ways the PTL is much like the WCG. Did PTL learn from HWA or did HWA learn from PTL? It is amazing how so-called Christians can use and abuse people and then fling them aside like mere garbage! It is also of interest how Jessica Hahn came to adore and worship the ministers and leaders of the church instead of God, and how the same thing takes place in the WCG. Another interesting point is that PTL spent millions of dollars on buildings that are built in the competition for money and to make them look big and powerful. This reminded me of the articles "Edifice Complex" and "Fleecing the Flock" (Ambassador Report, 1977). I hope that the Playboy article will cause many more people to wake up and think for themselves instead of letting ministers and church leaders do their thinking for them.

- Manitoba, Canada

You might be interested to know that I was recently made a "non-member" (but not disfellowshipped). Apparently, [my minister] and the church administration in Pasadena are especially upset that I never paid off my college bill... I never planned to renege on the bill, but unfortunate circumstances have prevented me from making payments.... Currently I am wondering if the church will take me to court over the bill or release me from the debt after seven years (Deut. 15:7).

- AC Alumnus

Editor: If the tithing laws of Deut. 14 are still valid (and the WCG teaches that they are), then, logically, the debtor release laws of Deut. 15 should also be valid. Right?

I left the WCG in 1974, and, with the exception of one couple who met us "on the sneak" once a year, have had virtually no contact with anyone in the WCG organization. Imagine my shock then when out of the blue, two friends from the WCG, who are still members in good standing, phoned me and asked if they could come over for coffee. I was so curious, of course I said yes. The visit was pleasant enough. However, I wondered if they were buttering me up for a future kill. They said their minister preached a sermon saying that, if members left on their own and were not disfellowshipped publicly from the pulpit, and were not trying to spread any of their [own] ideas, it was okay for a WCG member to keep in touch on occasion! Is this a "new truth"? I certainly never heard of it before. A ex-member friend of mine, whose member sister lives in Texas, told me that her sister heard the same sermon preached in her congregation.

- New York

Editor: We don't know if there is such a new policy, but if there is, it certainly would be an interesting change from the many years of "the Dracula complex" (to be explained in a future issue).

I thank you so much for the Report I love to read it and can't wait for the next one. You are doing a good thing so keep up the good work.

I haven't been to church in... weeks.... I'm sure there is nothing new as we hear the same old sermons over and over. All that goes on is for the young teenagers who [WCG ministers] say will be our leaders in times to come. So pity us if it's true.

- West Virginia

My wife's brother, former PT editor... is just as smug, superior and close-minded as ever. My wife, who had been a WCG member for 22 years, loaned him our copy of David Robinson's Tangled Web some time back. He later told her he "did not want to read it." My wife, who was as brainwashed as they come for 20 years (I lived with it!) replied, "...you can't read it because the church won't let you! You aren't allowed to even think for yourself. Why can't you realize that?" She may as well have talked to a wall, and that sad situation persists to this very day.

- California

You people and your work are all that keep up the sanity of a lot of folks like myself. Just when I feel like I'm on a desert island, I get a new AR or I spy an old one and reread it. Please don't ever stop what you're doing - the world needs to know.

- Kentucky

As I have many friends in the Amish community where I live, I am aware that no one is safe from the WCG. A few people who were members of the Amish church have left it to become Worldwidiers. I talked to one man who did so, though I realized it was too late to do any good. I did so simply because his father asked me to do so. It is heartrending to see how such a move on this man's part has upset his mom and dad. I gave his father a copy of one of your older magazines and he had several copies made for some of his friends. So your magazine is at least known by a few people in this area.

- Ohio

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for this publication. I had doubts of my own about the WCG, but I also believed in - and never really questioned - its doctrines, practices, and authority. My method of "proving all things" consisted of reading Herbert's "ideas" and then looking up the prescribed scriptures and that proved it.

The AR is truly an eyeopener. With your help, I - and, thankfully, my mother too - am beginning to see the light. Its not easy, but I don't think I ever would even have seriously considered leaving "the Church " if I had not seen the evidence presented in the Report. I have you to thank for my newfound freedom.

- Washington

I have now left the church of GTA. I had been put out of the WCG in 1979 so I believed GTA but now I know I made another mistake. I no longer go to any church as I don't know who or what to believe. So I read my Bible and try to do the best that I know how.

God has been with me and has kept me on the right track so goodbye to the phonies.

- Florida

I wish all your letter writers would sign their letters because I am so eager to hear of the many I knew from AC. It really hit home to me how much hurt and pain has been inflicted on every person who has stepped into the trap of WCG. The most dangerous part can be a root of bitterness if we're not careful.

My indoctrination in the WCG began when I was 11 years old. I left in 1980 and so WCG had 21 years of my life to form and shape. Unfortunately, I couldn't afford to go back for four more years of college to learn a new career, etc. The hardest thing to change in my thinking pattern is [the idea that] there is no future and so no need for goals or planning for the future. That idea has been there so subtly for so long. Thank God I now see it and it's changing.

Each time I hear of someone else leaving, I'm thrilled. To all of you who have left or are on their way, I wish you the best. I've wondered about everyone I used to know at one time or another. I'm glad we have the AR to connect with each other. I know for me, 21 years of my life are closed to me as if I had no past except through the AR.

*- Marilyn (Haupt) Howald
(AC, Pasadena, 1970)*

My husband divorced me because of leaving the WCG and now can freely come and go as he pleases. I think the WCG [made a fraud of] our marriage as I chose to live with him, and he put me away. He now puts church activities over our three children also. I am going through deprogramming with my two girls, and it is hard. My son is still going [to WCG services] with his dad. I still love my ex-husband but know it will never work unless he gives up the WCG and comes back to me. I think he tries to avoid and hurt me because of this. I pray daily about it and have gone back to the Methodist church where I now feel comfortable. This domination thing is big to him also. He thinks he needs to be "the man in charge" and in control of every situation.

I would appreciate your prayers. I won't wait forever for him, but it would be nice if we could be back together as a family again some day. I am getting my life back together slowly and surely. It feels good to be free again and out of bondage.

- AR Reader

I left my husband last November when things got to be more than I could stand. We were divorced in April. I just learned that he's all set up to marry a woman - you guessed it - in "God's true church." I guess I was still entertaining notions of a reconciliation, but now I realize that will never happen. I know there were things I did wrong in our marriage, but the WCG was always the seat of our difficulties. We became so alien to each other, and it still makes me sad to think of the shell he's become.

I know enough about his personality to be able to predict the outcome of this union; it will only be a matter of time. And to think that he was constantly accusing me of being unfaithful. I still can't even seem to dredge up enough interest to even date.

Well, life goes on and we learn, etc. It's a new day tomorrow and I'm different than I was yesterday. I want you to know I send all my love out to you people with this letter. I hope you can always carry on. I don't think my belief system now is exactly compatible with yours, but I think we will arrive at the same destination one day, just different paths. You perform more of a service to "outies" than "innies." I think sometimes because we all do what we really want in our lives anyway. There is a reason the WCG exists and a reason why "they" are in. They have to live and learn too.

- Kentucky

As I watch the constant parade of TV ministers forced to admit their sex sins on the news, I can't help but feel that the AR opened the way for this type of information to come out in public. If you think about it, your 1977 issue started the ball rolling. Ever since then it seems that the press has been more forthcoming with information about sex sins by ministers and politicians. Unlike some people, I feel that this information should be told and am proud to be able to give some support to a group of people who had enough courage to tell the truth about these matters.

I feel that it is important for a minister to set a good example to his congregation. If he is not setting that fine example and has sexual or other profound problems that he cannot control he should get out of that profession and get some help.

At any rate, it's interesting that the AR was really the first publication to report these types of problems. People who give their lives and money to an organization need to know just what they're supporting. The AR is giving people the kind of information they need about the WCG and its many offshoots. Keep up the good work.

Editor's Note

Many of you have written me in the last few months asking for more information on the background of "Apostle" Tkach. Unfortunately, it has proven incredibly difficult to get most who've known Tkach over the years to tell what they know about him. For some odd reason, those who seem to know the most are also the most tightlipped. I am still working on that story, however, and one of these days it should be in print.

Our last issue was dated September 1987. I had hoped to get out an issue in December. But a lengthy illness coupled with two powerful earthquakes breaking up my Los Angeles-area apartment (plus my being in graduate school and trying to earn a living) made a December AR impossible. It's been a long time between issues, but I hope you'll notice that this edition is longer than most and is really filled with valuable information.

My thanks to all of you who write to the Report telling a little about your lives. I read each of your letters carefully and really value your comments and suggestions.

Finally, my special thanks to those who are financially assisting the Report. I hope that those who are able will continue to support our efforts. The letters we receive from hundreds and hundreds of readers tell us that Ambassador Report is not just informative, it really is accomplishing a great deal of good. But if we are to continue publishing, we need your help.

My warmest wishes go out to each of you.

---

AR41 March 1989

Joseph W. Tkach -
God's New Rep on Planet Earth
(Part 1)

by John Trechak

On January 7, 1986, Herbert W. Armstrong, the former advertising man who founded the Worldwide Church of God and Ambassador College, lay grievously ill in his Pasadena, California mansion. Sensing that his end was near, the 93-year-old, self-proclaimed "Apostle" named his top aide, evangelist Joseph W. Tkach, as his successor.<sup>1</sup> Nine days later, Armstrong was dead and Tkach became the Pastor General of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), the Chancellor of Ambassador College, the President of the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation, the Publisher (now Editor in Chief) of the Plain Truth magazine, and the Chairman of the Board of the WCG and its subsidiary corporations.

From his executive suite on the top floor of Ambassador College's opulent Hall of Administration building in Pasadena, Tkach (pronounced Ti kotch) today rules over a religious empire with yearly revenues of well over $170 million. With the WCG's corporate jet providing him a second office in the sky, Tkach travels almost constantly throughout the U.S. and abroad to speak before church audiences and to meet with influential business and political leaders. He has been photographed meeting with then President Reagan and the First Lady, former President Richard Nixon, industrialist Armand Hammer, former Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, Senator Robert Dole, Jordan's King Hussein, and many other newsmakers. Tkach's monthly magazine, the Plain Truth, is published in seven languages and has a circulation last reported at over seven million. The WCG's "World Tomorrow" television program, on which Tkach is not a speaker but of which he has total editorial control, is regularly rated by the Nielson organization as among the top three religious programs in the United States. And while the Plain Truth magazine and "World Tomorrow" broadcast cover many religious topics, both also deal extensively with important issues in the areas of national politics, military preparedness, international relations, economics, crime, morality, health, public welfare, and virtually every other area of major public concern.

Tkach's monthly editorials in the Plain Truth, while very short, invariably touch on wide-ranging matters of great consequence. And through his oversight of all WCG publishing and broadcasting operations Tkach's views are disseminated not only throughout the United States, but far beyond. For instance, the Plain Truth maintains 12 foreign offices, the WCG has over 50 foreign congregations, and Tkach's organization maintains close relations with political leaders in many foreign countries including Israel, Jordan, Japan, Sri Lanka, and Thailand. Where Tkach's influence is most keenly felt, however, is in the lives of the WCG's more than 80,000 devoted members.

The Followers and Their Faith

In order to carry out "the Work of God," the WCG, with its more than 725 local congregations, has molded itself into an organization as well-coordinated as most armies (an observation not lost on Tkach who enjoys referring to the members as his "troops").<sup>2</sup> And like most armies, membership in the WCG is no casual thing. The WCG claims to be, and is, "a way of life." And that "way of life" is one that is highly structured and carefully monitored by the WCG's ministerial hierarchy.

Like most fundamentalist Christian churches, the WCG teaches the infallibility of the Bible and the divinity of Jesus Christ. But beyond that, many religious scholars see the WCG's belief structure as eclectic, with various doctrines paralleling those of Jews, Seventh-Day Adventists, Identity groups, Quakers, Mormons, and Jehovah's Witnesses.

Central to WCG survival is its redistribution of wealth program. To advance this program, the WCG teaches as dogma that all human beings who do not give a tithe (10%) of their gross income directly to God's headquarters (in Pasadena, of course) are stealing from God and are therefore under a curse. But members don't just send in their one tithe; they put aside a second tithe for the keeping of the church's holy days, and every third year give an additional third tithe that is supposedly earmarked for the church's poor. (There are many poor in Worldwide, but, it seems, they rarely receive much "third tithe." In the past, Ambassador Report has documented how a significant amount of third tithe funds have been used to buy fuel for the corporation's jet and to refurbish the homes of top WCG executives.) In addition to first, second, and third tithes, WCG members are expected to give holy day offerings, free-will offerings, building-fund donations, youth-camp donations, and - if they have anything left - to occasionally make interest-free loans to the church.

Not only does the WCG strip its members of most of their disposable income, but it also monopolizes their time. Worldwidens are expected to do a considerable amount of daily prayer and Bible study. They are required to observe strictly the seventh-day Sabbath and the annual holy days of the Old Testament (Christmas, New Year's, Easter, and Halloween are all condemned as "pagan"). And not only does the WCG ministry tell its members what they must do with their time and money, but the members are also told what hairstyles and clothing are appropriate, what their sex lives should be like, what they may or may not eat (the Levitical dietary laws are observed), what makeup they may use, and what they may think. They are also required to be "separate from the world." Because of the latter, Worldwidars generally refuse to serve in the military, refuse to serve on juries, refuse to vote, and distance themselves from non-member friends and family.

Such regimentation is seen by the WCG hierarchy as not simply a requisite for salvation but as necessary for one of the church's supposed functions - warning the peoples of the United States, Great Britain, Canada, and Australia ("modern Israel" to Worldwidars) that we will soon be conquered by a United States of Europe led by a militant Germany (and with the Pope's blessing). Not surprisingly, in the last fifty years the prophetic timetables of Worldwide's seers have repeatedly had to be altered. The WCG's numerous failed prophecies, however, have not significantly deterred the organization's continuing growth.

Motivating "the Troops"

For most people who must struggle today just to earn a living and support their families, it is mind-boggling that anyone would willingly put himself under the kind of bondage offered by the WCG. But even a few rather bright and well-educated individuals have, over the years, been lured into Worldwide's indoctrination process and have gone on to become WCG true believers (the "sheep" as Herbert Armstrong was known to contemptuously refer to them).

Getting fascinated by the "World Tomorrow" program is easy. It's well-produced, newsy, not too religious-sounding, and it's often on interesting and timely topics. The telecast offers the FREE Plain Truth magazine. You subscribe. And then you order the FREE "Bible Correspondence Course," and the many FREE booklets that are offered in the magazine. Pretty soon you feel guilty for getting all this incredible "knowledge" for FREE, and so you send in a couple of contributions. Now you're a "co-worker." A few more contributions and you're invited to attend WCG services - a real honor because until now you never even heard there was this group secretly meeting in your very own town. (The WCG's Sabbath services are held without public notice in rented halls. The time and place are not advertised. The general public is not invited. And the phone numbers of local WCG pastors are usually unlisted.) By now, your family thinks you're behaving a little strangely. But at WCG services you meet people who actually believe some of the same things you do. You're then encouraged from the pulpit to avoid the ways and ideas of Satan's world (which encompasses just about everything). You spend less and less time reading about, or thinking about, anything that contradicts WCG dogma ("The Truth"). Before long the WCG doesn't just make complete sense to you - it's your whole world.

Actually, getting into Worldwide is easy. It's getting out that's the tough part. That's because to encourage you to stay, the WCG ministry has some pretty potent motivators.

On the "stick" side, there is still that old standard: hell fire. But WCG ministers are far too sophisticated to simply rely on that basic Bible doctrine as a motivator for their flocks. To substantially augment the hell-fire teaching, Worldwide has its Petra doctrine. Here's the essence of it. Supposedly, when everything comes crashing down on us soon in the U.S. and Britain, God is going to miraculously whisk all the Worldwidiers away to Petra, a desolate area of Jordan in the Middle East, where, WCG doctrine has it, God will protect and educate his chosen during three-and-a-half years while the rest of the world is in chaos. But, so the teaching goes, you won't get to go on this fun trip unless you are a WCG member in good standing. As nutty as it sounds, this teaching, ridiculed by a long line of prominent WCG ministers who have since thought it wise to depart the WCG, has such a stranglehold on Worldwide's group psyche that it continues to be a major reason why many members "hang on" It also is a major reason why many relatives of Worldwidiers really fear that one day their Worldwide relatives will be on a plane to Jordan destined for the WCG's version of Jonestown.

On the "stick" side, there's one more motivator that should be mentioned. Like the Jehovah's Witnesses, the WCG's ministers wield the disfellowshippment ax. Step out of line and you're disfellowshipped - that is, put out of the fold and shunned. For a lot of people, this turns out to be one of life's really lucky breaks (although they may not realize it at the time). But for those with a mate, family, or close friends still ensnared in Worldwide, it can be, and often is, traumatic.

On the "carrot" side, Worldwide has a few more motivators for the flock. One big one is that the WCG ministry promises its devotees that the ultimate reward for their diligence is that they will become GOD. (No, that's not a typo.) To the WCG, God is a family into which all Worldwidiers will eventually enter. (Some undoubtedly already have their sights set on certain galaxies they would like to rule over when this occurs.) But not only are Worldwidiers going to be God, in their minds they already are very special. That's because the WCG fervently holds that it is the one and only "True Church of God." To the WCG, all other churches, even those professing to be Christian, are really "of the Devil." It's the kind of elitist view of the world that can make even the least-educated and most poverty-stricken feel they are very important.

Worldwide's unique belief structure and the separationist attitudes it engenders almost always cause those joining Worldwide to become increasingly alienated from family and friends who are not WCG members. Once in Worldwide, the member becomes increasingly sucked into the WCG's activities and thinking patterns, as well as increasingly subject to the WCG's Big Brother government.

And that brings us back to Tkach. As the one cleric sitting at the very apex of the church hierarchy, Tkach - like Herbert W. Armstrong before him - is seen by Worldwidars as God's chief spokesman on earth and one whose authority is so great that he is answerable only to God. Indeed, like Herbert Armstrong before him, Tkach has declared himself "the Apostle of Christ." That being the case, the influence (and even control) that Tkach exercises over the lives and minds of his followers is absolutely enormous.

It is no wonder then that since Tkach took over the WCG's reins, Ambassador Report has received a steady stream of mail from relatives of Worldwidars asking us for more information about Tkach. A few current members, too, have apparently found official WCG pronouncements about Tkach unsatisfactory and have asked us to look into his background.

Getting the Facts about Tkach

Putting together a biographical sketch and assessment of Tkach's life has not been easy. First of all, in contrast to Herbert Armstrong, who loved to reminisce about his past and wrote a massive two-volume Autobiography, Tkach has provided the public with very little information about himself. The closest thing to a Tkach biography is a short one-half page article ("Passing the Baton" by Jeff Zhorne and Michael Snyder) that appeared in the Jan. 27, 1986 Worldwide News, the official church newspaper. That article, which introduced the new Pastor General to the WCG's members, contained many gaps in Tkach's story and left many questions unanswered.

Second, the WCG's top leaders refused to cooperate on the research for this article. While certified letters were sent to Tkach, his wife, his son Joe Jr., his executive secretary, his attorney, and numerous associates asking for interviews or for specific information, neither Tkach Sr. nor anyone employed by his organization ever responded. (Of course, should this cool aloofness someday dissipate, the pages of the Report will be available for their comments.)

Third, by no means the least of my problems was that a fair number who have known Tkach over the years adamantly refused to discuss what they know about him. Some appeared to take this position out of Christian benevolence (misplaced, I think), some because they wish to place the agony of their WCG experiences completely out of mind, and some out of fear of reprisals.

Fourth, among those who have known Tkach over the years (and who are not reticent), there is a very wide spectrum of views on what he is really like. Former WCG evangelist, college professor, and church administrator, Ronald Dart, for instance, has privately described Tkach as "tough as nails, not very bright, a liar, and - a true believer."<sup>3</sup> One Orange County, California AR reader wrote me, "My memories of Mr. Tkach, in particular, are horrifying. He was cruel, hateful, uncaring, and idiotic. I pray for him." Others who've known Tkach have described him as "fanatical," "bullheaded," "oppressive," and "ruthless."

On the other hand, there are a few people who have described Tkach in terms that are quite flattering to him. Richard Plache, Ambassador College Dean of Students during the late '60s and for a time one of Tkach's superiors at the WCG's San Marino, California congregation, told me his recollections of Tkach were that of a decent man who did his job properly and was never involved in any scandals. Dr. Robert Romagnoli, a college professor of physics and a current WCG member who has known Tkach for over twenty-five years, views Tkach as a humble Christian who "sincerely believes he sits in Moses' seat" and is making an honest attempt at reforming the WCG.<sup>4</sup> Another scientist, Dr. Stig Erlander, a former WCG member and former Ambassador College faculty member, who now resides in Altadena, California, emphatically told me he thought Tkach was "a great guy" who, as far as he knew, was always humble, courteous, and caring.

Clearly, there are among those who have known him opinions that differ greatly as to what Tkach is really like.

Finally, after more than two years of sifting through data for this article, it has become clear that much of what the WCG disseminates about Tkach is not just inaccurate information - but consciously created disinformation. And just as happened with Herbert Armstrong, there is now a great deal of mythology about Tkach that the WCG membership has come to accept as absolute truth. Separating the fact from the fiction has been fun, but it has also been time-consuming work.

The "Official" Tkach Story

According to the Worldwide News article by Zhorne and Snyder, Tkach served in the U.S. Navy during World War II and afterward returned to his native Chicago to work at Hupp Aviation. On March 31, 1951, Tkach married Miss Elaine Apostolos<sup>5</sup> and in the next few years the young couple had three children: Joe Jr.,<sup>6</sup> Tanya, and Jennifer.<sup>7</sup> Tkach was baptized into the WCG (then the Radio Church of God) by WCG evangelist Dean Blackwell on March 1, 1957. On June 7, 1961 Blackwell ordained him a deacon, and on June 3, 1963, WCG evangelist Roderick C. Meredith ordained him a local elder. About this time, Tkach resigned from Hupp and started working full-time in the ministry. For three years Tkach served in a number of the WCG's midwest congregations and in 1966 was transferred to Pasadena, where he took a few classes at Ambassador College and served in the local ministry. Not until 1974 was he raised to the rank of preaching elder. In 1979 he was assisting evangelist Herman Hoeh at the WCG's "Pasadena A.M. church." All of a sudden in 1979 Tkach became personal assistant to church founder Herbert W. Armstrong, was raised in rank to evangelist, and was named director of Ministerial Services (now called Church Administration). In March 1981, Armstrong appointed him to the WCG's Advisory Council of Elders. And just before his death, HWA named Tkach as his successor.

Origins

The above paragraph provides the highlights of the official Joseph Tkach "biography." At least, that is as much of the official story I feel we can trust. Beyond that skeletal outline, however, there is a lot of contradictory information circulating about Tkach and a lot of fiction.

Take, for instance, the simple matter of Tkach's age. For some odd reason the WCG doesn't want to reveal Tkach's exact birth date. Church employees currently refuse to provide that information over the phone. And those who write to WCG headquarters asking for information on Tkach are sent a WCG form letter that claims Tkach was born in 1926.

In reality, Tkach was born March 16, 1927. That is the birthdate on his California driver's license and that is the date on his birth certificate.<sup>8</sup> Why the Tkach organization gives out the phony 1926 birthdate I have no idea.

Then there is the matter of Tkach's ethnic background. Here again fictions abound. Perhaps because he often begins his sermons with greetings in Hebrew, some are convinced Tkach is Jewish.<sup>9</sup> Even WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse has called Tkach a physical "Levite" - that is, a descendant of the tribe of Levi, a branch of the ancient House of Judah. However, I have found no evidence whatsoever that Tkach or either of his parents were ever, by any reasonable definition of the term, Jewish.

While many seem to know that the surname Tkach is somehow Russian, the rumor that Tkach, himself, was bom. in Russia is not true. According to Tkach's birth certificate, Tkach was born at his parent's home at 5038 South Rockwell in Chicago, Illinois. The birth certificate also states that Joe's parents both immigrated to the United States from Czechoslovakia.<sup>10</sup>

A great deal of insight into Joseph Tkach's background was graciously provided the Report by Joe's last surviving sister, Mrs. Anna Bregin<sup>11</sup> of Oak Forest, Illinois. In a lengthy phone interview last August, Mrs. Bregin related how Joe (Senior) was the youngest of five children and the only son of Vassil and Mary Tkach. Mrs. Bregin said that although her parents had emigrated from Czechoslovakia, her parents were, in fact, of Carpathian Russian stock. Students of geography and history will recall that the Carpathian Mountains, part of which separate Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union, "have been a whirlpool of races where Germans, Magyars, Slavs, Gypsies, and various Asiatic tribes have mingled for centuries." <sup>12</sup>

Mrs. Bregin, Joe Tkach's sister, said that their mother, Mary Tkach, had been from the village of Svidnik (in what is now the northeastern corner of Czechoslovakia.<sup>13</sup> Their mother came to the U.S. at about 17 years of age, their father at about age 21. Mrs. Bregin said their parents met and married in the United States. Their father died in 1963, their mother in 1984.

Russian Boy in Chicago

That the Tkach family would settle in Chicago is not surprising. Besides its large Irish, Italian, German, and Scandinavian ethnic populations, Chicago has, since the turn of the century, attracted large numbers of working class immigrants from eastern Europe. Probably no other area of the United States has such a large concentration of Czech, Slovak, Ukranian, and Polish Americans. And perhaps no other big city in America has such a large number of ethnic neighborhoods.

The neighborhood where Joe Tkach grew up was one such ethnic neighborhood. With St.

Peter and St. Paul Eastern Orthodox Church located there, the neighborhood, I have been told, was composed then mainly of blue-collar working people of Russian origin. Many of the men who lived there undoubtedly worked in factories located in the nearby Central Manufacturing District and the Kenwood Manufacturing District. Some may have also worked at the nearby Imperial Accordion-Star Concertina Company or at the Italo-American Accordion Company.

In sermons, Tkach and some of his underlings have insinuated that Tkach grew up in a very rough neighborhood. Some have painted Tkach's childhood as having required pugilistic skills for survival. Tkach, himself, has even jested how he wanted to learn the violin as a child but that carrying violin cases in his old neighborhood had gangland connotations.

But the area west of Gage Park, where Tkach grew up, is not the rough and tumble "Back of the Yards" area of South Chicago! Nor is it Cicero where the Capone gang was once centered!<sup>14</sup> Father Semkoff, of St. Peter and St. Paul<sup>15</sup> told me that the neighborhood where Tkach grew up had always been, and still is, clean, quiet, and free of gang violence. Former WCG minister Arthur Mokarow, who grew up in the same area and at the same time as Tkach, agrees that the neighborhood, although blue collar, was a relatively good one. Business people and educators familiar with that part of Chicago and its history all told me the same thing. Most said it still is a quiet neighborhood. And when I commented to Tkach's sister, Mrs. Bregin, that I had heard that she and her brother had grown up in a rough part of town, she replied incredulously, "No way! Who could ever have said that?" I didn't have the heart to tell her it was her brother and some of his fellow ministers.

What's in a Name?

For many years, most Worldwidiers in Pasadena knew the current Pastor General only as Joe Tkach. But when Herbert W. Armstrong died, some observers noticed that something new was immediately added to Tkach's name - a middle initial. For a few days in January 1986 Tkach's middle initial was a K.<sup>16</sup> Shortly thereafter, however, in public announcements, the WCG replaced the K with a W, and before long the WCG's ministers began saying the W stood for "William."

Not surprisingly, some Ambassador Report readers are the suspicious type. Recalling how Herbert W. Armstrong had not been given a middle name by his parents, but had himself adopted the W for effect,<sup>17</sup> some wrote the Report and asked if Tkach had done the same thing. Knowing that William is not a common name among Russians and that working-class eastern European immigrants in the past often did not give their children middle names, I, too, wondered. So I checked the Tkach birth certificate provided me by the Cook County Department of Vital Statistics. The document gives Tkach's name as simply Joseph Tkach. There is no W or William. However, Tkach's marriage certificate of March 31, 195 , reveals that by that date Tkach's name had acquired a W. Why, I don't know. Nor do I have a clue as to why Tkach appears to have begun publicly using the W only after HWA's passing.

But, some may ask - what's in a name? To many people, not much, perhaps. But in Worldwide some see great mystical significance in such things. Notice what evangelist Gerald Waterhouse, the WCG's leading preacher, had to say about Tkach's name:

So in Mr. Tkach's case, Joseph William Tkach - it all has meaning to his calling! Joseph means "add to," so God provided through Mr. Armstrong the foundation and the guidelines that he adds to. Now, the name William comes from Wilhelm - means "strong will," with a helmet, which typifies authority, and the general needs a helmet to lead the soldiers. He's the pastor general over the soldiers - we're soldiers, you know. Christian soldiers. And then Tkach, in Russian, means "weaver." And he's been assisted by Robin Webber, and in German, Webber means "weaver" too. So he's been weaving with his assistant, and they're weavers.<sup>18</sup>

Is there any validity in what Waterhouse says about the meaning of Tkach's name? In the course of researching for this article, I phoned each of the dozen or so Tkach's listed in the Chicago phone directory. None are related to the WCG's Tkach and most didn't seem to feel their family name had any special significance. However, one lady told me that she had done a bit of research on the etymology of her family name. The name Tkach, she said, is fairly common in Russia, the Ukraine, and in Czechoslovakia. While the name Tkach appears to mean "weaver" in Slavic tongues, she said, it also means "tailor" or "spider."

The WCG has made a big deal out of the "weaver" definition of Tkach. WCG ministers have even gone so far as to routinely refer to God as "the Master Weaver."<sup>19</sup> WCG ministers, however, never seem to bring up the "spider" definition. As one long-time WCG observer, paraphrasing poet Mary Howitt, told me, "Welcome to my parlor said the spider to the fly. Herbert [Armstrong] used to call his followers sheep. Are Herbert's sheep now flies?" Obviously, being "the Master Weaver's master weaver" is more desirable than being simply "God's little spider." "Spider" brings to mind Sir Walter Scott's famous analogy of the liar ("O, what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive") and the "spider's web" metaphor of Isaiah 59:5.

Stretching the Facts

Calling someone a liar, as evangelist Ronald Dart and others have called Tkach, is not nice. "Liar" is a strong word. It's harsh. It's unpleasant. And in a society such as ours where politicians, lawyers, advertising men, and televangelists are often respected and compensated in direct proportion to their ability to bend words, we should perhaps not be too critical of an "Apostle" who likes to stretch the truth. Nevertheless, it is amusing to compare some of Tkach's claims with stark reality. For instance, the Jan. 27, 1986 issue of Tkach's Worldwide News (p. 3) stated: "The pastor general established churches in South Bend, Fort Wayne, and Indianapolis, Ind.; Rockford and Peoria, Ill.; Davenport, Iowa; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Cincinnati, Ohio; and St. Louis, Mo." (Whew! Did even St. Paul start that many congregations?) Actually, with his list "the Apostle" is stretching things quite a bit. Ministers who were in the WCG in the early '60s say that while Tkach may have preached in those congregations occasionally or assisted the pastors in charge there, they don't recall that Tkach "established" any of those churches (as the word "established" was always used in the ministry). In the '60s, as now, the work of establishing, or starting up, new local churches was almost always delegated to Ambassador-trained ministers of higher than local elder rank. In actuality, the WCG's churches in Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, and Grand Rapids were established by evangelist Dean Blackwell. And the WCG congregation in St. Louis was actually established by Gene Carter, the brother-in-law of former WCG evangelist Raymond Cole.

When HWA died and Tkach took over as Pastor General, Tkach's PR people told the press that their boss had once been a "Chicago-area businessman."<sup>20</sup> Yet, not only is there no evidence that Tkach ever owned or managed a business in Chicago, the WCG also has claimed that before Worldwide, Tkach had really been a "supervisor" (over "several hundred employees," no less) at a Chicago manufacturing plant. But as will be shown below, even that claim by Tkach is untrue!

Tkach: My Early Life

Here is the way Tkach has had his writers portray his early life:

Before coming into God's Church, Mr. Tkach served in the U.S. Navy, receiving a certificate in basic engineering in 1945.

He then attended the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago, studying industrial management, industrial safety and human factors in industry.

In 1950 Mr. Tkach was hired by Hupp Aviation, where he worked in the apprentice program. Before resigning in 1963 to serve in the ministry, he advanced to supervisor and obtained journeyman credentials.

He was once fired by Hupp Aviation for keeping the Sabbath, an incident he described to the combined Pasadena churches Jan. 18.

"I was threatened if I didn't come in on that Sabbath for a special meeting that I would be fired," Mr. Tkach recalled. "Upon coming home from Church services there was a telegram waiting for me stating that I was fired."

"Monday morning I received a telephone call from the personnel manager saying, 'Management would like you to come in immediately, as fast as you can get here.'

"I didn't know what to expect," the pastor general continued. "But after arriving at the plant, out in the parking lot there were almost 2,000 people milling around on a wildcat strike because they heard that I was fired.

"You see, we serve a God who fights our battles for us. My job was given back to me."<sup>21</sup>

Out of curiosity, I phoned Hupp Aviation in Chicago. The company's receptionist told me that Hupp is now officially called Aircraft Gears Corporation. "Your company must be very large," I said. "Oh, no," she replied. "We're very small. We've never had more than a few hundred employees at the very most." I told her a little about the article for which I was researching and she transferred my call to an older engineer who had been with the company since at least the early fifties.

"Do you remember an employee by the name of Joe Tkach?" I asked. After a moment's reflection the gentleman told me he did. He not only remembered Joe, but he also clearly remembered Elaine, who had worked in the company's office and who had become Tkach's wife. "Had Tkach been a manager or supervisor at the plant?" I asked. "Oh no," he said. "What was his position then?" I inquired. "He was just one of the guys - just one of the guys who worked in the plant," he answered. The engineer said he was sure his memory was accurate. Tkach had not been a manager or a supervisor, or even a union leader, for that matter. He was "just one of the guys."

"But surely you must recall the incident when two thousand Hupp employees demonstrated at the plant on Tkach's behalf," I said. Not only did the engineer not recall such an incident, but he was sure nothing of the sort had ever taken place. First of all, he explained, the company had never been so large as to have such a large number of employees demonstrating. And second, he said, even an incident involving a handful of employees would have been very big news at the small plant and he would have known of it. "I'm sure nothing like that ever happened here," he told me, "but if you don't believe me, check with the front office."

I had my call transferred to the company's personnel department. At my request, a helpful employee went to get Tkach's file. Returning to the phone, she said, "Let's see - oh yes, he started working here in February 1947 and he quit September 20, 1963.<sup>22</sup> You know, for someone who worked here that long there is very little in his file." I then asked her, "Was he ever a supervisor?" "Oh no," she replied. "It says here he was just an hourly wage employee." The company's records clearly reveal that for the 16½ years Tkach was at Hupp he did one thing and one thing only: "assembly work." Do the company's records show that he was fired and rehired after two thousand employees demonstrated? No.

WORLDWIDE CHURCH OF GOD
PASADENA, CALIFORNIA
91123

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your recent inquiry about Mr. Tkach. It is our pleasure to be of service.

Joseph W. Tkach, born in 1926, is pastor general of the Worldwide Church of God and publisher of The PLAIN TRUTH magazine.

Mr. Tkach, an experienced administrator, succeeded the late Herbert W. Armstrong in January 1986 as leader of the Church and its related organizations.

A member of the Worldwide Church of God since 1957 and an ordained minister since 1963, Mr. Tkach was named director of the Ministerial Services Department by Mr. Armstrong in July 1979. He was ordained an evangelist--the second highest Ministerial rank in the Church--that same year. Mr. Armstrong named Mr. Tkach to serve on his personal advisory board in 1981.

In addition to his duties as temporal head of the Church, Mr. Tkach serves as Chancellor of the Ambassador College campuses in Pasadena, California, and Big Sandy, Texas. He is also chairman and president of the Ambassador Foundation.

A native of Chicago, Illinois, Mr. Tkach served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. Following his military service, he took part in a government-sponsored educational program for veterans, where he studied industrial management, industrial safety, and human factors in industry. In 1946, he was employed by a midwestern manufacturing corporation, where he began his management experience. Before Mr. Tkach resigned to assume a full-time a in the ministry, he supervised several hundred employees.

After helping establish and pastor several Midwestern congregations of the Worldwide Church of God. Mr. Tkach attended Ambassador College in Pasadena for three years. Married since 1951, Mr. Tkach and his wife Elaine have one son, two daughters, and several grandchildren.

Thank you for your interest. Whenever we may be of additional service, please feel welcome to let us know.

So Tkach was not born in 1926, was never a Jew, did not establish churches during the sixties, was never a Chicago businessman, was never an aviation industry production supervisor, and never had thousands of fellow factory workers demonstrating on his behalf. What about his claim of having attended the respected (and long accredited) Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT)?

In late 1986 I phoned IIT and asked a clerk in the college's records office if IIT could verify Tkach's claimed attendance at the institute. After a lengthy search through their records they informed me that they had no record of a Joseph Tkach ever having attended IIT. Being concerned that perhaps they were mistaken, I wrote formally to the registrar of IIT requesting a careful check of their records to verify whether or not Tkach had ever attended. After many months Registrar Marvin Cohen wrote me: "I regret to inform you that we are unable to locate any record of Joseph W. Tkach..." Unwilling to believe that "master weaver" Tkach would not only fabricate lies out of whole cloth but would also publish them nationally, I once more phoned IIT and asked that they again carefully check their records. My insistence was no doubt irritating, but once more the polite folks at IIT made a thorough records search. When I called back they were emphatic: "There has never been a Joseph Tkach at this institute!" What's more, they informed me that from a careful review of past school catalogs it was clear that the courses Tkach claims to have taken at IIT - "industrial management, industrial safety and human factors in industry" - had never been offered at IIT!<sup>23</sup>

Tkach's claim of having attended an accredited college (IIT) leaves the impression he at least graduated from high school. But did he really? Having gotten to the point that I did not trust anything the man said, I decided to investigate this matter also.

From a number of sources I learned that Tkach had, at least, attended high school in Chicago. And by phoning school officials there I was able to get verification that Tkach began his secondary school education at Gage Park High School (then a modern public boys' school) where he was a student from September 7, 1940 to June 27, 1941. Records at the school show that Tkach then transferred to nearby Tilden High School (another boys' school).

Officials at Tilden High, however, say they have no record of a Joseph Tkach ever attending there. One school employee told me that had Tkach ever completed even one class at Tilden his name would be in their school's records.<sup>24</sup> Tkach's loving sister, Anna Bregin, assures me her brother did attend Tilden High and she seems to recall he may even have graduated. However, Garner Ted Armstrong, for many years Tkach's superior in Worldwide and therefore someone with probable access to Tkach's education history, claims Tkach is an eleventh grade dropout. Whether Tkach dropped out in the eleventh grade or whether he dropped out before even finishing the tenth grade at Tilden is unclear. But either way, one thing is obvious. Ambassador College Chancellor Joseph Tkach, like Chancellor Herbert Armstrong before him, never made it through high school.

The Tough Guy

Pick up a copy of the Plain Truth, and on page one you'll see the official portrait of Joseph W. Tkach. He looks kind. He looks understanding. He looks friendly. He looks personable. That is the way Tkach and his handlers want him to appear to the general public. That is also one-half of Tkach's image before his followers. However, another facet of the Tkach image, not projected to the general public, but often projected to "the sheep" is that of a tough guy. Notice the following quote taken from the 3/1/86 sermon by evangelist Gerald Waterhouse:

So God had to have a tough man - a fighter. Mr. Tkach used to just love to fight. He'd fight anyone that looked like he wanted to fight. If he didn't look like he wanted to fight, he'd make sure they looked like they wanted to fight. So he'd get a fight. Very unusual man.... Up in the office the other day he said, "I don't even fear demons." One time one came into the office there, I heard, and tried to get him to move out. And he just leaped over the table and grabbed him, and on the way down, I'm sure, that demon was fightin' about that. He just leaped over the desk, grabbed him on the way down, shook him [and said], "You don't say that in my office." Man, that demon went back and he said, "Satan, there's one guy down there - he's tough! He scared me!" I imagine that really shocked him. Most of 'em kind of recoil, you know, and get out of the way. Here's one that came over the desk at him!

[Waterhouse then quoted Joshua 1:5.] "There shall not any man be able to stand before you all the days of your life. As I was with Moses, so I will be with you. I will not fail you nor forsake you." Now, he didn't add this responsibility to a man that didn't have a base for it, 'cause he adds to our talents. See, he had to make sure this man was born of right lineage, grew up in South Chicago among tough individuals, a fighter, fearless, so he could then add to that, like Saul, who was a strong individual. When he was going up to Damascus, he wasn't going in saying, "Oh, I think I'll tiptoe up through the sand over here. I'll go up and see if I can reason with these Christians up in Damascus and see if I can convert some of them to Pharisiasm." No, he was breathing out threatenings! He's already caused people to blaspheme and to - well, put some to death even!

For now, let's put aside the question of whether being from Chicago really shows "right lineage," and let's also, for the time being, overlook this business of Tkach chatting with demons. Let's just ask ourselves: Does having a belligerent, physically combative spirit really indicate the presence of righteous character? Gerald Waterhouse thinks it does. So too, it seems, does Tkach, who, while projecting a "nice guy" image via church publications, often plays a not-so-subtle "tough guy" before his "troops." Now notice the following quote taken from a taped holy day sermon (10/25/86) given by Tkach on the subject of ruling "da masses."

When we are gods we will be given the responsibility to judge da masses. How will we deal with people? What will be the tools of our trade? Will it be the rod of iron? Or soft-headedness?....

Many will have to learn how to work during the White Throne Judgment. You are going to have to be responsible to insure that they learn these habits - that it becomes a part of them. And what Paul is saying - to see the benefit of doing an honest day's work and labor. In II Thessalonians 3:10 the apostle Paul said that if a man doesn't work neither shall he eat. Are we going to be softheaded enough to give in simply because we see the suffering of someone? Instead of insisting and upholding the law of God and enforcing it as God demands it to be done? Christ is going to come to rule with a rod of iron.

Of course, there are times in life when all of us must be tough. And toughness - at least when guided by law and intelligence - is an important executive characteristic. But many who've observed him over the years say Tkach's crude brand of toughness is nothing more than misguided, insensitive, bullheadedness.

About a year ago, while having lunch with a long-time friend of Tkach, I mentioned how many perceived Tkach as violent and capable even of murder. A few weeks later, Tkach's friend wrote me a letter ending with the following paragraph:

Before he was made head of CAD [Church Administration Dept.], Joe Tkach said there were instances in which those over him would try to "set him up." Several said that he was free to divorce his wife. One even brought this to HWA's attention. On another occasion, one asked Joe if he would commit murder if asked to by HWA. Joe said that no matter how he would have answered, his answer would have been used against him. He said something like, "You ought to know what I will do." I wonder if this was the origin of the report that he would commit murder.

The Big Black Car

Quite a few people that I talked to told stories about Tkach's pseudo-gangland style. But there is one incident, in particular, that stands out in this regard. Jack and Rick (not their real names) were two Ambassador College (AC) graduates of the class of 1970. Like a lot of AC alumni since then, they found their unaccredited Ambassador degrees virtually worthless in obtaining meaningful employment, their insistence on strict Sabbath-keeping also cost them many job opportunities, and so both went through very hard times after AC. For Jack, the years 1970-73 were spent in mere subsistence-level jobs, alternated with periods of unemployment. In mid-1973 Jack was just getting by on the little he earned as a night-time liquor store clerk. Although he had tithed faithfully for years, there were few "blessings" to show for it. His clothes were old, he had no car, and then he lost his apartment. Rick, who had not long before gotten a job as a pressman at the Ambassador College Press, heard of Jack's situation, and, being a generous fellow, told Jack he could sleep on his living room sofa and share what little he had until he got back on his feet.

During the few months that Jack was staying at Rick's place there was much happening in the WCG. Numerous church theologians were circulating papers showing that there were serious errors in many Armstrong teachings. Jack, a zealous Bible student, became convinced that church leaders he had supported loyally for years were wrong on many key doctrines and that wrong teachings and policies were destroying the lives of thousands in the church. In November, he heard church founder Herbert W. Armstrong tell a congregation that he would never change his teaching on divorce and remarriage (actually, he later did when he decided to marry a divorcee) and that anyone who didn't agree with him had no business sitting in WCG services. Jack agreed; it was the last WCG service he ever attended. It was about that time that outspoken WCG pastor Al Carozzo resigned from the WCG and started his own local congregation in Pasadena. Jack attended a few of Carozzo's church meetings and was reported to WCG headquarters by church spies (yes, the WCG has them).

On a Monday evening in early 1974, Jack answered a knock on the door only to find himself nose to nose with Tkach and, standing behind him, an associate named Elmer. "We've come to talk to you, Jack. It'll only take a few minutes," said Tkach. Jack wasn't feeling very sociable. For the last few weeks he had been hearing stories of how Herbert Armstrong had known for many years that his marriage-destroying doctrines were in error, but for ego reasons had refused to change them. Jack had also learned that for years Herbert's evangelist son, Garner Ted Armstrong (GTA), had seduced dozens of Ambassador coeds and ministers' wives yet was still allowed to continue as church spokesman on radio and television. But besides having all that on his mind, Jack could see in Tkach's bloodshot eyes that Tkach really wasn't interested in his concerns about the church or in his personal problems. Tkach only needed "a few minutes" because he had come to subject Jack to the "knuckle under or be disfellowshipped" ritual. Jack thought, "If anyone needs to be thrown out of the church, it's HWA, GTA, and goons like Tkach." Jack didn't move out of the doorway but looked Tkach in the eye and said, "I'm busy and you didn't make an appointment." A startled Tkach could only stammer, "But Jack, it'll only take a few minutes." "Good night!" said Jack, as he shut the door in Tkach's face.

Rick, who had overheard the brief conversation from the next room, said, "You know, if you leave here tonight, Tkach will be waiting outside for you. He's not used to being talked to that way." When Jack responded that he thought the suggestion was silly, Rick pointed to the guncase in the corner of the room - a case that held a doublebarreled, twelve-gauge shotgun. "Look," said Rick, "don't load the gun, but take it with you. When they stop you, they'll see it, and it'll give them a good scare."

Jack thought Rick was letting his imagination run amuk, "but what the heck," he thought. "Maybe Rick knows something I don't; it might give us a laugh." He waited ten minutes, then hung the guncase containing the shotgun over his right shoulder. He exited the building, turned left, walked twenty yards and, not seeing anyone, went back to Rick's apartment feeling very foolish for listening to Rick. But Rick was adamant. "No! No! I'm sure they're out there!" he yelled. "You should have turned to the right. They're out there waiting for you. I just know it!"

"Okay, okay," said Jack, rolling his eyes. "Just to show you what a nut you are, I'll go back out there." Jack walked out the door, again with the sheathed gun hanging from his right shoulder. This time he turned to the right. Halfway down the darkened street, he heard a car engine start up somewhere behind him. Then over his left shoulder he noticed a black Plymouth Fury slowly following him. He walked a little faster. The car sped up. Suddenly, as he approached a driveway, the black sedan surged forward and pulled to the right, partly blocking his path. Before even coming to a complete stop the car's back door was swung open by a push from a shadowy figure in the front passenger seat.

It was Tkach. In an angry and authoritative voice, he commanded, "Get in Jack! Right now!" The thought flashed through Jack's mind that maybe he had made a mistake in not loading the shotgun. Jack glowered at Tkach and told him firmly, "No one's forcing me into any car. No one!" Jack instinctively reached up for the strap on the guncase. But then as the shotgun slid down into better view, Tkach screamed out in a panic to his driver, "It's a gun, Elmer! Get out of here!" Elmer's foot hit the gas peddle like it was made out of solid lead. Burning rubber for half a block, the black Fury sped away into the night.

Back at the apartment Jack and Rick had a good laugh. The next day Tkach never called for an appointment, but he had Elmer phone. And Elmer told Rick that if he didn't immediately order Jack out of the apartment, he'd be fired from his job. That evening Jack, penniless, found himself literally on the street.

Not many churches are headed by apostles who enjoy making zealous Bible students homeless, or who will sneak up to Christians on darkened streets to hustle them off in big, black cars. Such overbearing behavior has undoubtedly contributed to some of the sinister rumors surrounding Tkach. But it's important to notice that Tkach does not relish conversations with angry people toting shotguns. Perhaps that shows he isn't really the tough guy he often pretends - or maybe it shows he has a bit of sense after all.

Tkach the Warrior

In WCG circles much is made of Tkach's military career. Evangelist Gerald Waterhouse regularly paints Tkach as a born fighter. And Tkach's leadership skills have been compared to those of General George S. Patton.<sup>25</sup> While I don't doubt that Tkach was in the military service,<sup>26</sup> I have strong doubts about some of his claimed exploits.

Shortly after Tkach took over Worldwide in 1986, certain church members communicated to me how in sermons some WCG ministers were claiming that Tkach, during the second world war, had been a navy gunner who had gained fame for his relentless downing of kamikazes. I was told one minister had been so vivid in describing how Tkach had single-handedly decimated much of the Japanese air force that some church members had become physically shaken by the bloody accounts of Tkach's ravagings.<sup>27</sup>

It is not my desire to disparage Tkach's military service, but I have a problem believing his "gunner Joe" claims.<sup>28</sup> According to The Worldwide News, during World War II Tkach was a crewman on the destroyer USS Austin.<sup>29</sup> Now here is what the U.S. Navy has to say about the USS Austin:

The second Austin (DE-15) was launched 25 September 1942 by Mare Island Navy Yard, Vallejo, Calif, as HMS Blackwood; sponsored by Mrs. W. C. Sprenger, wife of Lieutenant Commander Sprenger; taken over by the Navy and reclassified DE-15, 25 January 1943; and commissioned 13 February 1943, Lieutenant Commander H.G. Claudius, USNR, in command.

Attached to the Pacific Fleet, Austin operated with TF 51 during the recapture of Attu (11 May 1943). She then escorted convoys between San Francisco and Pearl Harbor until 14 September 1943, when she sailed once again for Alaskan waters. For the next year she escorted vessels between Alaskan ports, patrolled, and acted as a weather ship. From April 1945 until the end of the war, Austin was on escort and patrol duty in the Carolines (1 April- 10 June) and Marianas (12 June-August). Returning to San Pedro, Calif, she was decommissioned 21 December 1945 and scrapped in 1947.

The above quote is taken from the authoritative Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships, Volume I (1959), published by the Navy Department, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, Naval History Division, Washington, D.C. This Navy publication lists every warship that has ever flown the U.S. flag. For instance, even the first Austin built in 1839 is listed. Furthermore, the publication details every naval engagement in which each ship participated. Notice that the Austin was not involved in the battle of Leyte in 1944, nor at Okinawa in 1945 - the two battles in which the Japanese used kamikazes.<sup>30</sup> The closest the Austin ever got to any action at all was during the landing of troops on Attu in the Aleutian chain on May 11, 1943.<sup>31</sup>

Even if Tkach was on the Austin then (he would have been only 16 and the Navy during WWII required all enlisted men to be 18 or over), the Japanese on Attu did not have kamikaze planes.

Going AWOL

Perhaps when the Navy Department finally gets around to digging out Tkach's service record for us it will somehow corroborate some of his claims.<sup>32</sup> Be that as it may, however, evangelist Gerald Waterhouse has told congregations around the world how during World War II Tkach, fearing for his life, went AWOL. Here is how Waterhouse told that story in Pasadena (3/1/86):

[Mr. Tkach] was in the U.S. Navy on an aircraft tender, loaded down with aviation fuel.<sup>33</sup> He began to get the premonition the ship was going to be blown up, killing everyone on it. He had a close friend on the ship - a German person (not nationality, but extraction), and he said, "When we get to this island, you and I are going to jump ship." [His friend] said, "I'm not going to jump ship!" Mr. Tkach said, "If you don't jump ship, I'll beat you up!" So he decided better to fall into the hands of the Navy than Joe Tkach! So when they got to this island, they were still a mile off from the beach, and they packed their sea bags very full for flotation, tossed them over the side about midnight, slipped down the anchor chain, pushed the sea bags for a mile to the beach, went into the jungle, watched the ship until it left, and then turned themselves in to the local marine commandant. He said they were put in the brig, and they had fights with Marines every day. I'm sure Mr. Tkach enjoyed that! Telling those Marines, "I'm a swabbie. Come in here, boys, I'll show you!" So he had his recreation, his exercise, with Marines. Now if you think this is not of God's hand.... They could have been court martialed, and even shot, if you understand, when you jump ship in time of war. But God was dealing with him. So another [ship] comes in and these two men, with their identical ratings, [Mr. Tkach and his friend] transferred out without being court-martialed, and the other ship was hit and blew up killing everyone on it. Now this very day the German calls Mr. Tkach up on that anniversary and thanks him for saving his life, 'cause he still appreciates it. That's respect. He's a fighter....

I'll make no attempt at reconciling the obvious contradiction between Waterhouse's story of Tkach going AWOL and Waterhouse's conclusion that Tkach is some type of super warrior.

[Part II of this serialized article will appear in the next issue of Ambassador Report.]

Footnotes

1. The January 27, 1986 issue of The Worldwide News, which announced the death of HWA on page one, very clearly stated that HWA had named Tkach as successor on January 7, 1986. In the weeks that followed, WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse not only corroborated that fact in sermons throughout the United States, but he saw incredible significance in that date. Here are Waterhouse's exact words on the subject taken from his 3/1/86 sermon in Pasadena:

And then the baton was passed exactly 52 years from the day Mr. Armstrong began to preach the gospel. January 7, 1986 is when Mr. Armstrong signed the official document that transferred the authority to Mr. Tkach as deputy pastor general and in case of his death, he would assume the role of pastor general. Now he was gonna sign it on the 6th, Mr. Neff was telling me, but God didn't want him to sign it on the 6th. So he let a little problem come up, and Mr. Neff was involved, and he heard something through the telephone, and Mr. Armstrong's heart began to act up and he couldn't sign it on the 6th because God wanted it signed on the 7th. He doesn't always have to find a reason. He just makes someone - he just finds a reason. He made sure he found one. And he got so stirred up, his heart acted up so much, he couldn't sign it on the 6th, so he signed it on the 7th. Exactly 52 years from the time he began to preach the gospel to the world.

In the April 1986 issue of Ambassador Report, I pointed out that January 7 is the traditional day of Russian Christmas. Since that issue some in the WCG have begun claiming that Tkach was actually named successor on January 8.

2. See, for instance, The Worldwide News, June 22, 1987, p. 1.

3. Ronald Dart in 1978 occupied the position of head of WCG church administration. With only the two Armstrongs over him, Dart was then the WCG's number three man. He is currently Garner Ted Armstrong's top executive assistant in the Church of God International, in Tyler, Texas.

The quote marks are a bit of editorial license as Dart did not say these words directly to me. However, the quote comes via David Robinson, author of Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web. It should further be pointed out that Dart's reputation among many former (and current) WCG ministers and AC alumni is that of a man of high intelligence and integrity. That being the case, I feel the quote is very significant.

4. Because WCG members, especially if on the WCG payroll, are so habituated to parroting the official WCG line, I usually assign very little weight to their opinions. Dr. Romagnoli, however, is not a church employee, has outstanding academic credentials, and possesses a high level of independent thought. Therefore, although he is a WCG member (and I suppose because he is a rather interesting personality), I don't feel his comments should be carelessly slighted.

5. "Apostolos" is the Greek word for "apostle."

6. Joseph William Tkach Jr. was born in Chicago on Dec. 23, 1951. He is now Joe Senior's top aide, and many in the WCG acknowledge him as Joe Senior's heir apparent.

7. Tanya is married to WCG minister Douglas Horchak, who pastors the WCG congregation in Glendora, California. Jennifer is married to Paul Butter, a WCG member in Tasmania.

8. Copies of Tkach's birth certificate and marriage certificate may be obtained from the Bureau of Vital Statistics (for Cook County), 118 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois 60602.

9. See, for instance, The Worldwide News, June 22, 1987, p. 3, where Tkach is quoted beginning a sermon with greetings in Hebrew.

Among those who claim Tkach is a Jew is Eureka, California minister Don C. Hall. Hall, who has labeled himself "The True Didache of the Worldwide Church of God" and distributes anti-Jewish literature, claims that Tkach is "an Oriental Khazarian Jew" and that "LeLom Tickach" in Hebrew means "always take." I find the "True Didache" unconvincing.

10. Tkach's birth certificate reveals other family history some WCG members may find interesting. Joe's father, Vassil, was a laborer who at Joe's birth was 35 years old. Joe's mother (maiden name Mary Zavoda) was a housewife, then age 32. Joe was apparently born at home with no physician, but a midwife (Mrs. A. Soltis), attending. While Joe's birth brought the number of living children in the Tkach family to five, two other children had been born alive to the couple, but had died in early childhood.

11. Mrs. Bregin, recently widowed, is retired and has never been a member of the WCG. She, nevertheless, had nothing but kind words about her brother.

12. Encyclopedia Americana, 1958 edition, article "Carpathian Mountains." See also the article "Carpathian Ruthenia." Carpathian Ruthenia, formerly the eastern-most province of Czechoslovakia, was ceded to the Soviet Union in 1945.

13. Both of my own parents come from this same region of Czechoslovakia. My mother, Mrs. Helen Trechak, recalls that during her childhood, Carpatho-Russians in Czechoslovakia were very proud of their district ethnicity. In other words, they saw themselves first as Carpatho-Russians, not Czechs or Slovaks. My mother also recalls that the name Zavoda (Mary Tkach's maiden name, meaning "freedom") was a very common name in Svidnik, as were the Christian names of Mary and Vassil (a derivative of Basil, meaning "kingly").

18. From Waterhouse's taped sermon at Pasadena, California, March 1, 1986.

19. Tkach, himself, often uses the "Master Weaver" metaphor. For instance, in his 10/25/86 pre-recorded "Last Great Day" video, Tkach said, "Yes, the tapestry of humanity is now being completed by the Master Weaver." Tkach, too, has been called a "master weaver" in regard to his sermons. See The Worldwide News, June 27, 1988, p. 1.

20. Los Angeles Times, Jan. 17, 1986, p. 36.

21. The Worldwide News, Jan. 27, 1986, p. 3, col. 1-2. While the quote is taken from "The Passing of the Baton" by Jeff Zhorne and Michael Snyder, recall that Tkach is Editor in Chief of all WCG publications.

22. Notice that Hupp's records show that Tkach began working there a full three years earlier than he claims. Why Tkach wants to distort this part of his personal history, I don't know.

23. As will be shown in future parts of this serialized article, Tkach's chief mentor was WCG evangelist "Dr." Herman L. Hoeh, I find it an interesting coincidence that Hoeh himself thought nothing of fabricating huge chunks of his own academic record. See Ambassador Report, June 1979, p. 12.

24. Out of fairness to Tkach, I should mention that from the comments made by Tildon High administrators, I got the impression the school's records for the early forties were somewhat in disarray. It is therefore conceivable Tkach's file was misplaced, lost, or stolen. Tildon administrators say, however, that they made a thorough search.

25. The Worldwide News, June 8, 1987, p. 3, col. 4.

26. The Military Personnel Records section of the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis has confirmed that Tkach did serve in the U.S. Navy. His service number is 728 00 41. Under the Freedom of Information Act a request for information on Tkach's service record has been filed with the Department of the Navy. After more than four months, however, the Department of the Navy has yet to respond.

27. I am told that the minister who repeated Tkach's war stories so vividly was Dennis Van Deventer speaking at Imperial School, Pasadena on or about February 1, 1986.

28. Previous to Tkach, the only other "gunner Joe" I was aware of was Senator Joseph R. McCarthy who, during his campaign for the U.S. Senate in 1946, inflated his meager service record and told Wisconsin voters to put a "tail gunner" in Congress. While McCarthy's contrived military record apparently helped him to enter the U.S. Senate, historians now say his whimpy military activities during the war had only been that of a self-serving "promoter." In the Senate he gained a reputation for manipulation, violent accusation, disregard for law and custom, and pervasive lying. He was censured by the Senate in 1954. See Robert Griffith, The Politics of Fear: Joseph R. McCarthy and the Senate, the University Press of Kentucky (1970), pp. 5, 9, 15, 24.

30. See the Simon and Schuster Encyclopedia of World War II (1978), article "Kamikaze."

32. See note 26 above.

33. This claim, of course, contradicts Tkach's other claim that he served his WW II hitch on the destroyer USS Austin.

WCG News in Brief

Joseph Tkach's popularity among WCG members continues to soar as his campaign to totally transform the WCG moves forward. While some church employees in the past criticized Tkach for "running headquarters like Joseph Stalin ran the Kremlin," many now seem to view him positively as the WCG's Gorbachev.

Tkach recently announced that women in the church will again be allowed to wear makeup (WN, 11/14/88, p. 1). The church's prohibition against membership in "worldly" clubs seems to have been quietly dropped also. A number of WCG executives are members of Pasadena-area men's clubs. For instance, a friend of the Report met one WCG executive last year at a Lions' Club Christmas party and was told, "We're getting the best of both worlds! We're keeping the church's holy days and the world's holidays too!" Tkach, himself, was made an honorary member of the Pasadena Rotary Club on October 26 (WN, 11/14/88, p. 8). Some church insiders say that the next change to look for will be a relaxation of the WCG's prohibition against birthday celebrations.

Like Herbert Armstrong before him, Tkach is maintaining contacts with the rich and powerful. This past year, for instance, Tkach and his entourage attended private receptions for the Duke and Duchess of York ("Andy and Fergy") at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles and aboard the 412-foot royal yacht Britannia (WN, 3/28/88, p. 1). Also like his predecessor, Tkach continues to support worthy artistic endeavors. Notice this excerpt from The Worldwide News (4/18/88, p. 1):

The Dance Theatre of Harlem, acclaimed as one of America's principal dance companies, begins a five-week tour of the Soviet Union May 10. The trip is sponsored in part by the Ambassador Foundation.... Foundation chairman Joseph W. Tkach announced funding by the foundation March 10 at the home of entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. who was host to a fund raiser for the tour.... Arthur Mitchell, a former principal dancer with the New York City Ballet, founded the Dance Theatre of Harlem in 1969 after being moved by the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr., the black civil rights leader, the previous year.

The WCG's Gulfstream III corporate jet was recently replaced by a less luxurious, but significantly larger, British Aerospace Corp. (BAC) 1-11 jet (WN, 12/14/88, p. 1). The new jet will allow Tkach to take a much larger entourage with him on his travels.

For many years Herbert W. Armstrong, Garner Ted Armstrong, Gene Hogberg, and other WCG prophecy experts pointed to Franz Joseph Strauss, the premier of the state of Bavaria in West Germany, as the man who would be "the Beast" of Revelation. In the Obituaries section of the Los Angeles Times on Oct. 4, 1988 it was announced that Strauss, 73, died on Oct. 1 following an apparent heart attack and surgery from which he did not recover.

One sad news item - Frank Schnee, the WCG's longtime regional director for German-speaking areas is suffering from Parkinson's disease and has had to be replaced by John Karlson (AC, Pasadena and Bricket Wood, late '60s).

During the past year, Tkach raised at least three more ministers to evangelist rank: Dr.

David Albert, Dr. Donald Ward, and Gregory Albrecht (WN, 5/2/88, p. 1). One interesting fact - all three, besides having AC training, have graduate degrees from accredited universities.

Under Chancellor Tkach Ambassador College, like the WCG, appears destined for dramatic changes. Tkach recently announced that beginning with the 1989-90 school year, the Big Sandy, Texas, campus will offer a four-year program (it currently has only a two-year program), and the student body will be increased to about 500. Tkach also stated that he wishes to see the Big Sandy college pursue accreditation. But, some may ask, wasn't this kind of thing tried before? Here's the way Tkach (or his ghost writer) answers the critics of his accreditation plan (WN, 9/19/88, p. 8):

I should note that some of the problems encountered in the late '70s, such as the relaxation in admission policies and in faculty hiring and supervision, had no relationship to the pursuit of accreditation and certainly will never be repeated.

Those decisions, though they may have been made in all sincerity, were made by an administration no longer associated with God's Church, in an effort to vastly increase the size of the college without regard to sensible admission policies based on the real purpose of the college.

But what about AC Pasadena? Doesn't Tkach want the church's main college accredited? Actually no, say insiders, who claim Tkach, fearful of increasing earthquakes, wants to see all of the WCG's Pasadena real estate sold. According to church sources, if Tkach can find a Japanese buyer willing to spend $200 million for the church's Pasadena real estate, the WCG may move its headquarters from Pasadena to Big Sandy, Texas.

John Tuit Rejoins Worldwide

John Tuit, the key initiator of the famous 1979 lawsuit against the WCG (see ARs 7-14) and the author of the 1981 book The Truth Shall Make You Free, recently phoned the Report to announce that he has returned to the WCG. Said Tuit, "I feel that the church problems that caused me to leave the church in 1978 have been corrected. I think Mr. Tkach is doing an excellent job straightening the church out." Tuit says he no longer plans to distribute his book. A few copies may still be available, however, from Emissary Publications, 9205 S.E. Clackamas Rd., no. 1776, Clackamas, OR 97015.

The McNair Lawsuit Takes a Bizarre Turn

In October the Leona McNair v. Worldwide Church of God libel and slander suit (see ARs 29, 34, 37, 40) took a bizarre turn when a Los Angeles Superior Court judge prevented the case from going to a jury by summarily dismissing the suit.

The suit had been filed in 1979 following vicious statements made against Leona McNair by WCG evangelist Roderick C. Meredith. After years of depositions and interrogatories, the case finally went to trial in 1984. The unanimous jury awarded Leona $1.26 million. The WCG then attempted to get the federal courts to intervene on its behalf in the McNair case, but the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles declined the WCG's invitation.

A WCG appeal to the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals was similarly rebuffed (see our January 1987 issue). But in 1987 the California Court of Appeal threw out the jury's verdict and ordered a new trial to be held based on a new rule of law it created (see AR 40). In March 1988 the California State Supreme Court, over minority votes by Justices Mosk and Broussard, refused to consider reversing the Court of Appeal decision (Los Angeles Times, 3/18/88, Part II, p. 3).

The case was set for retrial. Judge Robert Olson, who had presided over the first trial, decided not to preside over the second. The case then went to Judge Melvin Grover, a former Santa Barbara police officer with a tough, no-nonsense approach to his judicial duties. When for lack of timeliness, a WCG motion for summary judgment was not permitted, Beverly Hills lawyer Allan Browne and the rest of the WCG legal team showed their dislike of Judge Grover, and they were able to get him disqualified by affidavit on the very day the trial was to begin.

Because no other judges were available then in Pasadena, the case was transferred to downtown Los Angeles Superior Court where Judge Christian Markey was assigned to preside over the jury trial scheduled for December. When the WCG again moved for summary judgment (a procedure that allows the judge to decide the case on his own, thus keeping it away from the jury), Judge Markey only reluctantly allowed oral argument on the motion to be scheduled. Judge Markey even told the WCG's lawyers he honestly believed they were wasting their time.

But then just days before the motion was to be argued, Judge Markey made a startling announcement: He was immediately retiring from the bench to become General Counsel for the University of Southern California. (USC Law Center is, incidentally, where WCG lawyers Allan Browne, Stanley Rader, and Jack Kessler all obtained their law degrees. It is also where the WCG has contributed hundreds of thousands of dollars to establish the Herbert W. Armstrong Professorship of Constitutional Law. See our July 1983 issue.)

The WCG's motion for summary judgment was then made to Judge Richard Lavine, a prominent member of the Beverly Hills Bar Association who once taught law at USC. Lavine quickly decided in favor of Allan Browne's client. In fact, so sure was Lavine that the WCG's position was correct, his written opinion on the motion was actually completed a full two days before he heard oral argument on the motion.

It has been reported that WCG attorney Ralph Helge, elated over the WCG's good luck, has assured the WCG's ministry that the suit was won "God's way" and that it is now completely over. But it really isn't. Antony Stuart, Leona's attorney, is taking the case back to the California Court of Appeal. And no matter which side wins there, you can be sure that the case will once again come before the California State Supreme Court. Said Stuart, "After what she's been put through all these years, my firm is just not going to abandon Leona McNair!"

Plache in Prison

On September 13, Richard Plache, former Ambassador College Dean of Students and WCG pastor, was sentenced to four years in prison for his involvement in the Elmas

Trading Corp. scam (covered in our October 1985 issue). In mid-summer Plache was tried in the U.S. District Court in Sacramento (case no. CR 87-164) and was found guilty on 18 counts of mail fraud and SEC violations. Elmas, which was essentially a Ponzi scheme aimed at Christian fundamentalists, netted about $76 million from 5,500 investors. Prosecuting attorney Geoffrey A. Goodman told the Report there was no doubt in his mind that Plache was guilty.

Among those also convicted in the case were James Attarian, 76, the president of Elmas who was sentenced to eight years, and Don Smith, 53, the vice-president who was sentenced to four years. Both Attarian (who is reputed to be distantly related to California Governor George Deukmejian) and Smith are supposedly devout Seventh-Day Adventists. Attarian, Smith, and Plache are presently serving their time at the federal minimum security prison at Lompoc, California.

Incredibly, the entire Elmas story has received very little press coverage in spite of the fact that $76 million was involved and thousands of Christian believers were victimized. A small number of publications covered the story in 1985. And the Walla Walla Bulletin (of Washington State) ran a series on the scam in 1985-86. Since then, however, almost no one in the press has been willing to adequately cover the story. Repeated letters and phone calls by Report editor Trechak to newspaper editors throughout California got no results whatsoever. The Los Angeles Times and the Pasadena Star-News didn't even mention the Plache trial.

Although Plache was not one of the founders of Elmas, he was one of its outstanding money raisers, having collected some $6 million from about 500 trusting investors. Those investors - all of whom were promised huge profits - will only get back about 40 cents for each dollar invested. Apparently most of the money taken in by Elmas has been accounted for. But according to court-appointed receiver Richard Schaffer of Los Angeles, about $4.5 million cannot be located. Nevertheless, through it all Plache seems to have maintained his optimism. Shortly before leaving for prison he told the Report, "I have now found a peace that surpasseth all understanding."

A Case of Stealing from the Blind

In 1970, Garnet H. Hill was a 77-year-old WCG member whose eyesight was beginning to fail him and whose wife was dying of cancer. In spite of his personal problems, however, when Herbert Armstrong sent out a co-worker letter saying the church was in dire need, the long-time WCG member sold all the real estate he owned. With the $30,000 he received, he gave $20,000 to the WCG as a gift. The WCG minister who handled the transaction, however, never gave Hill a receipt. Instead, Hill was simply told to keep quiet about the matter.

As the years went by, Hill began to suspect something was wrong. He didn't want his gift returned; he just wanted to be sure "headquarters" had gotten it. He started asking for the receipt he never received and kept asking what happened to his contribution. For his persistence, he was disfellowshipped (and Joe Tkach later affirmed the local minister's action). It was a terrible blow for the old man who by now was legally blind, without a wife, and dependent on his friends in the church for companionship and help. Hill died in 1983, a month short of his 90th birthday. His last years were spent cut off from "the Work" he loved. Interestingly, while the church would have nothing to do with him, just ten days before he died, the church's legal department wrote Hill asking if Ambassador College was still in his will!

While the WCG turned its back on the old blind man, one former WCG deacon did not. Mr. N. C. Gilbert of Lantana, Florida, took care of Hill in his final years, and when the old gentleman passed away in 1983, Gilbert saw to it that Hill's remains were buried in his native Canada, where as a young man he had been aviator Lieutenant Hill.

The sad story of how the WCG treated Garnet Hill, an old, blind man who loved "the Work," has been written up in an article by Mr. Gilbert. Those who would like a free copy should write Mr. N. C. Gilbert, 7087 Washington Ave., Lantana, Florida 33462.

James D. Tabor's Genesis 2000

There is rarely a week when Ambassador Report does not receive in the mail at least two or three new publications about religion from publishers hoping for a review, or at least a mention. The majority of such books, journals, and newsletters go unmentioned, however, because so often they are poorly written or on subjects I am convinced our subscribers would find uninteresting or even offensive. That is why it is a pleasure to bring to the attention of Report readers a new journal about religion that is not only of exceptional quality, but is, I'm sure, one many Report readers will find absolutely fascinating.

The journal is called Genesis 2000, and its editor is James D. Tabor. As it turns out, Professor Tabor was actually at Ambassador College when I was there (we're both class of '70 Pasadena grads), but it has only been in the past year that we really became acquainted by correspondence and telephone. To present some of Dr. Tabor's unique background, let me take a shortcut and quote from one of his letters:

....I was raised in the Church of Christ and graduated from Abilene Christian University in 1966 with a B.A. in Greek and biblical studies. I had begun to listen to GTA/HWA back in high school and followed them with some interest through college. After graduation I spent a year in Europe in the mission field, working with Christian believers behind the Iron Curtain (Yugoslavia, Poland, Russia), smuggling in Bibles and literature. I returned to the States in 1967 and was determined to go out to Ambassador College to investigate things there firsthand. Over the years I had continued to study the Bible, and more and more had concluded that the Armstrongs had something nearer the truth than my own background of the Church of Christ. I was baptized (2nd time) by Tony Hammer around Passover, 1968 and that fall entered AC, Pasadena. I spent two years there, 1968-70, and divided my time three ways: teaching the first Hebrew and Greek classes (David Albert was in my Hebrew class) at AC; getting a second B.A. in Theology from AC; and going to Pepperdine University to get an M.A. Basically my experiences at AC were positive. I was never mistreated in any way, and left voluntarily in 1970 with no hard feelings or regrets. Remember, this was in 1970, before all the disruptions of the '70s, and in the absolute heyday of the WCG. I left because I could plainly see that those people were not open-minded seekers of God's truth. There was an atmosphere of fear and suspicion, of dogmatism about any area of biblical research. And I had had enough training at Abilene and Pepperdine to see that there were a lot of flaws in many of their teachings. I was frankly disappointed. I felt I had been misled by all the rhetoric I had heard about just following the Bible, honestly proving things, etc. I honestly thought AC would be that kind of place. I was sorry to leave my friends, especially Olin Degge, Mike Marlan, and Robert Kuhn. I also deeply admired many of the leaders in that work. Robert begged me to reconsider and stay on, working within to change things, which he eventually tried to do, I think. But it was not for me.

I spent the next decade at the University of Chicago getting first a second M.A., then finally a Ph.D. I was exposed to the most radical historical-critical biblical studies and gradually lost all faith in God, the Bible, or any idea of ultimate human purpose. I was reading, during all that time, dozens of books on philosophy, science, psychology, etc. I would characterize myself as a romanticized, bohemian, existentialist, nihilist - basically a follower of Freud and Nietzsche. I taught six years at the University of Notre Dame and for the past three years have been teaching here at the College of William and Mary. My field is Christian origins (NT) and ancient Judaism, as well as Greco-Roman culture and religion. During all this time I pursued a successful scholarly career publishing a major book on Paul which took me ten years of research, numerous articles, etc. I am currently working on a second book with Harper and Row titled A Noble Death? Suicide and Martyrdom Among Ancient Jews, Christians, Greeks, and Romans.

Just about two years ago, for reasons it is difficult to fully explain, I began to turn back toward some kind of theism, and gradually, toward faith once again in the God of the Bible, and even in the Bible itself, but in a non-fundamentalist way. This has been a slow process. I would call it a crawl back to faith through the door of the Hebrew Bible. I have not yet "arrived" hence Genesis 2000 and its approach of questing. But my foundational beginning is the fundamental revelation of God in the Bible, primarily the Hebrew Bible (OT), at least as a starting point. I don't like labels, neither Jewish (which I am certainly not), nor Christian (since I think what Jesus of Nazareth was all about has so precious little to do with Christianity). This return to faith really means simply that out of all the philosophical options I have considered, the one I find most compelling is the claim of God as revealed in the Bible. This is nothing new to many, foolish to others, but to me it is a hard fought ground upon which I now stand. I remain self-critical. That is my key point....

To do justice to Prof. Tabor's qualifications and writings would require a whole issue of the Report. Instead, I'll just briefly point out that his book Things Unutterable: Paul's Ascent to Paradise in its Greco-Roman, Judaic, and Early Christian Contexts has received acclaim from scholars around the world. For instance, one reviewer, Michael Goldberg of William and Mary, wrote:

What Albert Schweitzer did for comprehending Jesus by locating him historically in a world of apocalyptic expectation, James Tabor has done for understanding Paul. Thanks to Tabor's careful, thorough study, no serious scholar, whether historian or theologian, can hereafter justifiably speak of "Paul's message" apart from the discussion of the "ascent to Paradise," which was its ground. This book is, in short, indispensable for all students of first-century Christianity and Judaism.

Another reviewer, Morton Smith of Columbia University, wrote:

This is a remarkably honest effort to acknowledge what Paul actually says, and to identify what he was talking about - the ideas and experiences of men of his time. No other book on the market comes so close to the real Paul.

Those interested in more information about Things Unutterable... should write its publisher: University Press of America, 4720-A Boston Way, Lanham MD 20706.

Reading through the first issue of Genesis 2000 I was immediately struck by Tabor's wonderfully readable style. Unlike so many scholars today, Tabor has not lost the ability to communicate with "normal" people. He doesn't obfuscate. His writing (at least in the journal) has a clarity and accessibility that is, I think, uncommon among academicians in his field. What's more, he is not preachy. Volume I, Number 1 has an editorial, two book reviews, the preface to a future Letters section, three articles on rather profound subjects: "The Great Religious Questions," "In Defense of Theism," "Knowing the God of the Bible," and a "Bible Study" section that utilizes modern "narrative theology."

I personally look forward to reading future issues of Genesis 2000, and I'm sure many Ambassador Report readers will also. For a free subscription, write to Genesis 2000, P.O. Box 754, Williamsburg, VA 23187.

Editor's Note

My apologies for the long delay between issues. But my personal schedule in 1988 made it impossible to get out an issue since March. I hope to do better in 1989.

During the early '80s Ambassador Report newsletter came out four times per year. In 1986 and 1987, there were only three issues per year, and last year there was only the March issue. Obviously, the Report is no longer a quarterly. Nevertheless, with your help, I hope to keep Ambassador Report going.

My thanks to all of you whose gifts and encouragement make Ambassador Report possible.

Joseph W. Tkach - God's New Rep on Planet Earth

(Part II)

by John Trechak

In Part I of this article (in AR 41, our March 1989 issue), I gave an overview of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and showed how Joseph W. Tkach, the WCG's Pastor General, has promulgated an official biography of himself that is very much different than his real life story. I showed how, contrary to his claims, Tkach was not born in 1926, did not grow up in a violence-plagued neighborhood, never attended the Illinois Institute of Technology, was never an industrial plant manager, did not establish churches throughout the Midwest during the sixties, and is not a World War II U.S. Navy hero.

Since March, the Report has been able to obtain additional information about Tkach from the U.S. Department of the Navy via the Freedom of Information Act. Tkach's permanent Navy record, including his official separation documents, amplify the conclusions reached in Part I of this article.

Tkach's U.S. Navy Record

While Tkach claims to have been a heroic "gunner" who shot down many Japanese kamikazes, Tkach's service record reveals that he did not wear the enlisted specialty insignia of an antiaircraft machine gunner, gun pointer, or gunner's mate. Tkach's rank was "fireman second class," an entry-level rank indicating training only in elementary mechanical maintenance. The only awards or decorations Tkach received were an Asian Pacific Area Ribbon and a World War II Victory Ribbon, which indicate merely that he served in the Pacific during the second world war. He was awarded no medals of any kind.

The Navy's records show that Tkach's period of service was January 17, 1945 to July 22, 1946. After receiving eight weeks of basic training at the Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Illinois, Tkach served on just two ships: The destroyer escort USS Austin (DE 15) and a converted cargo ship, the USS Jupiter (AVS 8). As I pointed out in our last issue, the Austin was never in a battle where kamikazes were involved, and she only saw limited action at Attu on May 11, 1943 - 16 months before Tkach joined the Navy. So even though he served aboard the Austin briefly at the tail end of the war, the heroics Tkach fantasizes about could not have taken place aboard the Austin.

What about the USS Jupiter? The authoritative Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships, Volume III (1968), has a lengthy article on the Jupiter's very distinguished wartime record. For almost the entire war, the Jupiter carried supplies and troops into battle, often while in danger from enemy fire, during the campaigns for the Solomon Islands, Guadalcanal, the Gilbert Islands, Tarawa, the Marianas, Saipan, the Palau Islands, and the Philippines (including the Battle of Leyte Gulf). Quite likely, it was from some of the Jupiter's older mates that Tkach first heard the war stories into which he later inserted himself. But one thing is certain, Tkach was not aboard the Jupiter during any of its dangerous World War II missions. The Jupiter's last brush with danger in WWII was at Iwo Jima where she remained until Japanese resistance on that island ceased March 16, 1945. Coincidentally, that was Tkach's eighteenth birthday and, according to the Navy's records, he was just then completing his basic training in Illinois. The Jupiter, for almost the entire war, cargo ship AE 43, returned to San Francisco in late July 1945 and during a four-day period was converted into an aviation supply ship (AVS 8). For the remaining month of the war she sailed on a few routine missions, but none put her in any danger.

Clearly, the U.S. Navy's official records show that Tkach could not possibly be the tried-in-battle warrior he and his associates claim he is. Additionally, the military records offer a number of other insights into Tkach's character. For instance, one of Tkach's top assistants has publicly stated that Tkach wanted so badly to serve in WWII that he falsified his age to Navy recruiters in order to enter the war before all the real fighting was over. But the Navy's records correctly give March 16, 1927 as Tkach's birthdate. And I was told by Tkach's last surviving sister that with the aid of his father's signature, Tkach was able to enlist in the Navy two months short of his eighteenth birthday in order to avoid being drafted into the Army. Obviously, it was only years later that Tkach's phony 1926 birthdate would so conveniently help him pass off his fanciful war stories. Anyone capable of adding 18 years to 1927 would have realized Tkach's service in WWII was too brief to have included all his claimed exploits.

In Part I of this article I wrote how Tkach began his secondary education at Chicago's Gage Park High School in September 1940. After one year Tkach was transferred to Tildon High, where he would have graduated in June 1944 had he remained in school. But as I pointed out in Part I, Tildon officials have been unable to locate any record of Tkach completing even one semester there. Tkach's military records show that from January 1943 to January 1945 he worked as an apprentice tool and die maker for Center Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. Those same records also show, however, that Tkach falsely represented to Navy recruiters that he had completed four years of high school before entering the service.

Finally, the Navy's records show that Tkach was honorably discharged. There is no indiciation that he jumped ship, went AWOL, brawled with Marines, or spent time in the brig. Nor is there any indication in the records that he ever served aboard a Navy tender, a gasoline tanker (an AOG), or an oiler (an AO) that was later blown out of the water. Those Tkach stories, as spread around the world by evangelist Gerald Waterhouse, are apparently nothing more than yarns spun by "the master weaver."

The Education of the Chancellor

There is a funny story told in some circles about when church founder Herbert W. Armstrong put Tkach over the WCG's Church Administration Department. Ambassador College professor Roderick C. Meredith, who preceded Tkach in the top Church Administration post, contacted a fellow elder and vented his feelings about the new appointee. Meredith, absolutely dumbfounded that Tkach would be chosen for such a high position, explained how, during the 1960s, he had personally reviewed all the entrance applications and I.Q. scores of field ministers brought to Ambassador for formal training. Tkach's I.Q., said Meredith, was among the very lowest of those ever admitted and was in fact "even lower than the Blacks!"

While the anecdote probably says more about Meredith's attitude about race than it does about Tkach's intelligence, it does reflect a perception of Tkach that, although privately held, appears to be widespread among WCG executives - namely, that Tkach is just not very bright. Of course, we should not fault someone for what nature has not provided. Most of us do not have a precision of mind, command of language, and store of memory of which we may be proud. But regarding Tkach, there is the perception among many that he has never made a real effort to gain any type of education or to achieve excellence in anything other than WCG rank (if indeed "excellence" and "WCG rank" may properly be used in the same breath).

Arthur Mokarow, a respected former WCG minister and administrator, who went on to study at Oxford and now runs a successful management consulting firm in Houston, grew up with Tkach in the windy city and attended the same schools. Mokarow told me that he doesn't remember Tkach as excelling in sports, student leadership, social activities, or in academic work. Said Mokarow, "Joe just didn't stand out."

Claims about Tkach having attended the Illinois Institute of Technology notwithstanding, I have seen no evidence that Tkach ever took even one class at an accredited college. At unaccredited Ambassador College, where he is now the Chancellor, Tkach supposedly had three years of classes - at least that is what was stated in the Jan. 27, 1986 Worldwide News. But according to many I interviewed, including former WCG administrator Al Carrozzo who was Tkach's superior during the period in question, Tkach really had only one full year at Ambassador and his academic performance was mediocre, at best. Afterward he may have sat in on a few lectures, but he was never matriculated toward a degree, and he definitely never graduated.

But what about self-education? Certainly many men and women, unable to attend a university, are motivated to prepare themselves for successful careers through extensive reading and personal study. Strangely, of the scores of people I have interviewed for this article and who have personally known Tkach, not one could recall Tkach ever reading, collecting, quoting, or even talking about any book,<sup>34</sup> with the exception of the Bible. And some who worked with him in the past say he didn't seem all that interested in studying the Bible, either. I wonder if similar observations were made by Plain Truth editor Herman L. Hoeh and church founder Herbert Armstrong. For in the past, Hoeh is said to have derisively referred to Tkach as "that Russian peasant" and some who were close to HWA say that the church founder viewed Tkach as "a virtual illiterate."

As many WCG members in Pasadena are aware, Tkach is not able to read prepared scripts convincingly off a teleprompter, and so, the The World Tomorrow's broadcasting chores have been delegated to ministers David Hulme, Richard Ames, David Albert, and Ronald Kelly. What many Worldwidiers don't know, however, is that Tkach must rely on surrogates in other areas, as well. For instance, for articles and editorials bearing his by-line, Tkach is utterly helpless without his team of ghost writers, editors, and secretaries. So poor are Tkach's writing skills, I understand, that without assistance he even has great difficulty answering simple letters.

Tkach has been lucky enough to find ghost writers to do his writing and "hirelings," as Garner Ted Armstrong calls them, to read scripts on The World Tomorrow. Tkach, unfortunately, has yet to find a way to use proxies to permanently replace himself in the pulpit. For while Worldwide News articles invariably describe Tkach's sermons as "inspiring," "moving," and "powerful," most Pasadena Worldwidiers know better. As a preacher, Tkach is just not an Armstrong.

One Tkach inadequacy, I am told, is that he just can't seem to come up with interesting new topics. At his prime, HWA would speak on new topics almost every week. Garner Ted Armstrong still does. Insiders say, however, that Tkach has very few subjects with which he is comfortable, "church unity" being a theme he has beaten into the ground for over three years now. Perhaps this inability is one reason Tkach now so often takes his sermons on the road. Out there, before local WCG congregations around the world, it is not necessary to come up with new ideas. The novelty of a visiting "Apostle" is enough to inspire great enthusiasm - the kind required to maintain an apostolic level of ego inflation.

But burning up a fortune in jet fuel<sup>35</sup> visiting "the troops" doesn't solve Tkach's second major speaking problem: his grating style. Tkach's sermons are often frantic, high-pitched, monotone deliveries of simplistic ideas described with much repetition and limited vocabulary. But even worse, during moments of special excitement - as when describing prophesied martyrdom - Tkach's pace and pitch can rise to levels that bring listeners shudders like those from flat chalk on blackboard.

All of the above leads to two rather obvious questions: How is Tkach able to run the mammoth WCG organization? And how in the world did Tkach ever get put in charge?

Playing the Role

Considering Tkach's very limited education, how is it that he is able to preside over all the business, legal, personnel, and spiritual facets of the 85,000-member church, Ambassador College, the Ambassador Foundation, and all the other affiliated WCG operations? The answer is that, unlike the WCG in the heyday of autocratic HWA (the 1950s and 60s), the WCG today is not really run by one man, or two. It's run by an oligarchy - a relatively small group of about 30 or so top elders and department managers. Although Tkach by church doctrine has more than just veto power, Tkach is far more of a team player than egocentric HWA was ever capable of being. As a result, insiders say, the WCG's top managers get their way more often than not.

In return for Tkach's great deference to the church's management team (and in return for his generous use of cash "bonus" payments<sup>36</sup>), the management team is only too happy to inflate, prop up, and massage Tkach's image before the members. A similar relationship exists between Tkach and his field ministry. Although, as in HWA's era, the ministers "out in the field" (to use WCG headquarters jargon) are frequently transferred to different pastures - lest any develop too devoted a following and become sheep rustlers - Tkach seems to allow his field reps considerable latitude in decision making. Consequently there is more and more variety of doctrine among WCG ministers. One AR reader wrote me:

I am not a Worldwide member but I deliberately go to church social events with my [member] husband in order to meet people in the church. I have found that there is a lot of variation in what members are taught. For instance, the local minister in our area de-emphasizes Petra. But I have heard from a friend in New York that the minister in her area is hot on going to Petra. Worldwide ministers each seem to put their own funny twists on what they were taught. One evidently will not eat food unless it is blessed. I could give many other examples. Aren't the ministers all taught the same thing? It seems to me that the only generalization that can be made about the WCG's ministers is that they are inconsistent.

One striking example of how the Tkach organization now operates may be seen in the WCG's adoption of a new "Five Year Plan." Not unlike the five-year plans so popular in the centrally managed socialist countries, the WCG's Five-Year Plan was put together by a committee composed of some of the WCG's top executives. According to the April 3, 1989 Worldwide News, the plan (which begins with a general overview, ends in specific details, and will be renewed annually) was put together by: Dexter Faulkner, editor of church publications; Barry Gridley, manager of Publishing Services; David Hulme, manager of Communications and Public Affairs; Joseph Locke, Ambassador Foundation vice president for international affairs; Leroy Neff, church treasurer; Larry Omasta, producer of the The World Tomorrow; Rick Pelt, manager of Facilities Administration; James Peoples, manager of Computer Information Systems, Purchasing and Travel;

Richard Rice, manager of the church's Mail Processing Center; Larry Salyer, associate director of Church Administration; Fred Stevens, manager of accounting; Ray Wright, manager of Media Planning and Promotion; and Bernard Schnippert, the director of Media Production Services who was also the one who chaired the committee.

In addition to the above individuals, there are, of course, a number of other important WCG executives who share in the power structure. Tkach's son Joe Jr. has his father's old position over the WCG's U.S. ministry and is heir-designate to his father's throne. Ralph K. Helge, who, like Tkach, came to Pasadena from Chicago during the 1960s, is the WCG's chief legal counsel.<sup>37</sup> Finally, there is Dr. Herman L. Hoeh, the editor of the Plain Truth who for decades was HWA's chief doctrinal theoretician and propagandist. During the seventies Hoeh was Tkach's direct superior and mentor. According to certain insiders, Hoeh's spiritual influence over Tkach, although invisible to the unenlightened, is actually significant.

How He Got There

One of the most frequent questions put to Ambassador Report is: How in the world did Tkach ever become Herbert Armstrong's successor? Interestingly, the question often comes from people who have personally known Tkach. As one long-time church employee explained on the phone: "I always assumed Mr. Ted Armstrong would wind up on top. Let's face it. Not only is he Mr. Herbert Armstrong's only living son - his own flesh and blood - but he can really preach. He's a prolific writer, too. And he's a professional broadcaster who doesn't even need scripts. He graduated from Ambassador College and he's got a Ph.D. He speaks fluent Spanish, he's a singer and musician, he's a sportsman, he's an athlete, and he's a licensed jet pilot. He even has good looks and charisma.<sup>38</sup> Mr. Tkach, on the other hand-well, he's just Joe Tkach!"

To understand how Tkach was able to rise to the top of the heap, we need to review a bit of WCG history. Beginning around 1973, Armstrong organization maladies and a series of very public scandals produced an exodus of the WCG's best preachers, teachers, administrators, and thinkers (see our "Executive Exodus" lists in ARs 2 and 24). By mid-1978, even HWA's son Garner Ted Armstrong had left (actually he was thrown out) to form the competing Church of God, International, headquartered in Tyler, Texas. To most observers at that juncture it appeared that upon the death of its founder, Herbert Armstrong's empire would fall into the hands of church attorney-accountant Stanley R. Rader (see "Ex-Jewish Convert May Inherit Church's Wealth," Time magazine, June 19, 1978). But it was not to be.

In January 1979, the attorney general of the state of California launched a major civil suit against the WCG, invaded the Pasadena campus of Ambassador College with a team of investigators, and placed the entire Armstrong organization in receivership (see our 1979-80 issues for details). Rader encouraged Pasadena church members to stage a sit-in demonstration at headquarters, and he then called together hundreds of the WCG's top ministers and administrators for a meeting in Tucson, Arizona, where 87-year-old HWA lived with his 40-year-old wife. Tkach, who was then only an insignificant "preaching elder," was not invited to the meeting. He was left behind in Pasadena.

At the start of the state's action, the man in charge of the WCG's church administration department was evangelist C. Wayne Cole. But when Cole decided to cooperate with the state attorney general, Rader - who was the primary target of the lawsuit - saw to it that Wayne Cole, evangelist David Antion, and a number of other prominent church moderates were fired.<sup>39</sup> HWA replaced Cole with evangelist Roderick C. Meredith, an arch-conservative and HWA loyalist who, during the 1960s, had held the same top administrative position.

Although Meredith was put over the field ministry, during 1979 it was really Stanley Rader who ran the WCG. Rader's control was almost total. If decisions were not made by him, they would routinely be made by Virginia Kineston, his domineering executive secretary.<sup>40</sup> More significantly, because HWA's wife, Ramona, and HWA's two personal aides, Kevin and Aaron Dean, were all then personally loyal to Rader, Rader really controlled almost all access to HWA. Meredith, aggrieved over the extent of Rader's power, confided to a number of ministers that he wanted to see Rader removed. It wasn't long before Rader learned of Meredith's desire from a number of sources including Tkach. In mid-1979 Rader saw to it that HWA removed Meredith as head of church administration. Rader then chose "loyal" Tkach to take over Meredith's responsibilities. On Sept. 27, 1979, Rader, Tkach, and Ellis LaRavia (then also a Rader loyalist) were all raised to evangelist rank.

It's not difficult to see why Rader chose Tkach. First of all, Tkach pretended to be personally loyal to Rader. Second, because Tkach was not a dynamic speaker, not an Ambassador graduate, and not a theological giant, it was unlikely he could upstage Rader, a virtual Bible illiterate who lacked both an Ambassador degree and adequate pulpit skills. Third, Tkach was clearly no ideologue. His participation in the January sit-in - clearly contrary to long-standing church doctrine - showed Rader that Tkach would not be hindered by church doctrine when ordered to act contrariwise. Finally, Tkach gave the impression of being one who carried out the orders of superiors with mindless gusto. Former WCG administrator Al Carrozzo, who had been Tkach's superior until 1972, recalls about Tkach:

I certainly remember how Joe worked for me. He was a sycophant. I'd ask him to do something, and he would. But he'd do it with such excessive speed and excessive thoroughness it just wasn't balanced. He was also flattering toward me to the point of dishonesty. In sermonettes, for instance, he'd say things about me that were nice, but he'd exaggerate to the point that everyone knew they weren't true. That kind of thing really embarrassed me. But Herbert Armstrong just loved that kind of behavior.

Some oldtimers say that Tkach learned to be unctuous and fawning toward superiors by observing the way Dean Blackwell, his own superior in Chicago, treated HWA on his visits there during the '50s. Many who knew him say HWA loved to be surrounded by sycophants. (Isn't this the true origin of that WCG phenomenon "the Super Deacon"?) And HWA loved flattery. In this regard, many of those in the WCG during the '70s recall how HWA would glowingly bask in the undisguised puffery heaped upon him - in his presence - by Stanley Rader when giving the annual "state of the church treasury" reports at the fall festivals. Yes, HWA loved the kind of behavior described by Carrozzo. And, apparently, so did Rader. But in advancing Tkach, Rader seriously blundered. It was a miscalculation that would lead to Rader's ouster in 1981.

Switching Sides

Of the many myths in the WCG concerning Tkach, none is bigger or sillier than the story of Tkach's role in the 1979 church crisis. According to evangelist Gerald Waterhouse, Tkach was the moving force, the "real brains" behind the famous 1979 sit-in demonstration at church headquarters. In his March 1, 1986 sermon in Pasadena, Waterhouse said:

When the attorney general hit, you knew who was instrumental in getting the sit-in to protect the buildings? Mr. Joe Tkach! He kept Mr. Blackwell here, but the rest of us were over in Tucson at the conference. Mr. Blackwell was the senior man here. He kept him up until 3:30 in the morning and said, "I'm not going to let you go to bed until you authorize this sit-in, because, can't you see, the spirit of God is stirring up these people from all over California to protect his properties?"

The demonstration revealed how easy it is for the WCG's membership to be led into activities totally contrary to longstanding church doctrine. For until 1979 the entire ministry had taught that to engage in any type of civil disobedience was a sin. Evangelist Meredith had even referred to demonstrations for political purposes as "demon strations." Nevertheless, the sit-in, perhaps the biggest in Pasadena history, did succeed in keeping state investigators out of church buildings a few days, and the publicity generated did gain the WCG support from numerous mainstream churches that the WCG had previously labeled as "of the Devil." But was Tkach really the moving force behind the sit-in?

Stanley Rader's book Against the Gates of Hell, written and published while Rader still considered Tkach a loyal friend (manifested by a few positive references to Tkach in the book), nowhere credits Tkach as masterminding the sit-in. Even the Worldwide News of Feb. 5, 1979, which covered the church crisis and the sit-in, nowhere reports Tkach as in charge of anything. When the sit-in took place in January 1979, Ambassador Report co-publishers Bob Gerring, Len Zola, and I spent three days near the scene of the demonstration. It certainly did not appear that Tkach was in charge. As other newsmen noticed, the one who seemed to be in command of the demonstration was Kevin Dean, HWA's aide and then a Rader loyalist. (See the photo on page 5 of our March 1979 issue. Kevin Dean is shown clearly in charge of the group that confronted us near the sit-in.) Most significantly, when A. Sheridan Atkinson, the chief operating officer of receiver Steven Weisman, attempted to enter the church's blockaded administration building with his staff, it was not Tkach who confronted him. It was deacon Wayne Pyle who spoke for the church and blocked the doorway.

Although Tkach was apparently one of those asked to phone members to get them to demonstrate and was one of the ministers who spoke at the sit-in, he was clearly not the mastermind behind the episode. The real mastermind was Stanley Rader. Tkach's role in the sit-in was actually minor.

There is a second reason why Waterhouse's sit-in story is silly. It portrays Tkach as a man whose loyalty to the WCG was undivided. In reality, Tkach's loyalties were once with those who brought the civil suit against the WCG.

The one who initiated the big lawsuit was WCG member John Tuit, then of New Jersey. As the suit was being put together, Tuit's lawyers suggested that it would be helpful if the suit was formally initiated by a group of relators that included a California resident. Tuit, then sympathetic toward Garner Ted Armstrong's organization, asked GTA's son, Mark, if he had any suggestions. Mark mentioned a man by the name of Earl Timmons. No one seemed to know much about Timmons, but Mark recalled that when his father had been put out of the WCG, Timmons showed up one day at GTA's home. He brought an envelope containing a very large amount of money. It was this gift that apparently was the first to Ted's new church organization. As a result of such generosity, it was thought Timmons might enthusiastically cooperate with Tuit. That is how Timmons became a relator in the big 1979 lawsuit.

Unknown to Tuit (and Mark Armstrong probably) was the fact that Timmons, although a WCG member, was extensively involved in criminal activities.<sup>41</sup> He was also a long-time, close, personal friend of Tkach. Timmons has told me that well before the state initiated the lawsuit, he informed Tkach completely of what was going to transpire. And C. Wayne Cole has related to friends how before the state served church officials with the complaint, Tkach tipped him off that the action was coming and introduced him to Timmons. Therefore, although Tkach now pretends that he was always 100% loyal to HWA and the church organization, this is clearly not so. Had Tkach warned HWA and Rader of what was about to transpire, church attorneys may very well have headed off the suit and saved the WCG millions of dollars in legal fees. Tkach clearly did not put HWA and the WCG corporation first in his life. He used the confidential information he gained from Timmons only to his own political advantage. Once it became clear that Rader was not going to just lie down and die, Tkach's loyalties switched (at least ostensibly) to the side of Rader.<sup>42</sup>

Rader's Fall

By 1981 Rader knew that he had been duped by Tkach. On Feb. 1 of that year he sent HWA a lengthy telex from Japan. It contained the following comment:

With respect to Joe Tkach, I recommended him. Although I did know about his connection with Mr. and Mrs. Timmons (two of the relators in the lawsuit), I did not find out the full details concerning his illegal fencing activities until they surfaced recently when we were preparing our civil rights case. He is obviously not the man I recommended to you and I apologize for my error in judgment.<sup>43</sup>

By the time Rader sent the above telex it was already too late for him to do anything about Tkach. For by then Tkach had secured his position among HWA's inner circle of aides. Within that small group, Tkach aligned himself with Kevin and Aaron Dean whose loyalties were no longer with Rader. Kevin, the most intelligent and dominant of the three, hatched a plot to destroy HWA's confidence in both Rader and Ramona, HWA's wife. The anti-Rader forces surreptitiously taped Rader and Ramona in private conversations, some of which were not complimentary to HWA (see AR 16 at p. 2). Through the use of such illegally gotten recordings and through rumor, innuendo, and character assassination, the conspirators were able to turn HWA against both his long-time attorney and his very own wife. Almost immediately, HWA moved out of his Tucson home and back to Pasadena, instituted divorce proceedings against Ramona, and fired Rader.

Rader had fallen prey to Tkach in the same way that other superiors of Tkach had in the past. Carrozzo recalled of Tkach in the early '70s: "At some point it became obvious to me that Joe was reporting to those above me on what I said and did - and not always accurately. It's interesting that when I resigned Joe was given most of my old responsibilities." A similar scenario was played out later when Wayne Cole was ousted in early 1979 and when Roderick Meredith was ousted in mid-1979. Then, when Rader was knocked out of power in 1981, Tkach, along with the Deans, inherited much of the influence over HWA that had previously belonged to Rader.

Uriah Heep

One long-time observer of WCG politics has pointed out that Tkach's personality and modus operandi match perfectly that of Uriah Heep. In Dickens' novel David Copperfield, Uriah Heep - the unctuous, fawning, and scheming clerk - managed by deceit to worm his way into partnership with Mr. Wickfield, after which he proceeded to gain full control of the business.

From mid-1981 WCG publications pictured HWA as firmly in charge of the WCG. But HWA's three top aides, Tkach and the two Deans, were exerting tremendous influence because they were able to monitor HWA's activities and filter most of the information he received. Recall that during this period HWA was in his nineties, was ailing, hard of hearing, and legally blind. During all this time, however, HWA did not name a successor. Suddenly, in early 1986 HWA named Tkach as his successor. Why?

The explanation usually given in church circles is that HWA, then very ill, feared his son Garner Ted Armstrong would somehow take over the WCG upon his death. HWA may have been led to believe this because his hatred of his son was constantly fueled by the rumormongering of aides who had everything to lose should GTA ever have reconciled with his father. But the fact is, GTA no longer had a following among WCG members and he was no longer a WCG minister respected by that church's ministry. GTA, therefore, was really not in a position to take over the WCG.

Furthermore, if there was a need for HWA to name a successor, why didn't he choose a respected evangelist such as Norman Smith, Herman Hoeh, Ellis LaRavia, or Roderick C. Meredith? Certainly, had HWA not designated a successor, upon his death the church's council of elders would have chosen one of these four men.

Some believe that HWA's three closest aides manipulated HWA into making Tkach his successor. That may be a partial answer. But the main reason Tkach was chosen, I believe, is that egocentric Herbert W. Armstrong wanted to guarantee that his successor would not be a man capable of outshining him in any way. One distinguished California psychiatrist, who has followed the WCG very closely for some years, has said privately that in choosing Tkach, Herbert Armstrong very likely was motivated by a subconscious desire to see his successor fail.

That theory makes a lot of sense. As I reported in the January 1986 issue of the Report, just weeks before his death HWA ordered that his corporate jet be put up for sale. Clearly, HWA never anticipated that Tkach would carry on in his own grandiose style. Yet, not only has Tkach carried on in the same way, both his new jet and the gifts he spreads abroad are far larger than Herbert Armstrong's ever were!

After gaining control of the WCG, Tkach energetically thrust himself among the rich, the royal, and the powerful. Former WCG minister and author David Robinson told me, "Tkach is a classic example of someone being where he ought not be." Then, quoting Ecclesiastes 10:7, Robinson said, "I have seen servants upon horses, and princes walking as servants upon the earth." Anyone who has seen Peter Sellers as Chauncy Gardener in the movie Being There will understand.

Former WCG minister Gary Arvidson has called HWA's designation of Tkach as his successor, "Herbert's last big joke on the church." That may be so. But as Tkach dismantles HWA's doctrinal edifice piece by piece, discontinues the publication of most of HWA's writings, and turns the legacy of Herbert W. Armstrong into a faded memory, the biggest victim of that joke may turn out to be Herbert W. Armstrong, himself.

Footnotes

34. Those who made this observation knew Tkach only in his pre-apostolic days. It is quite likely that since then his ghost writers have attempted to cover up this once very obvious idiosyncrasy.

35. Former WCG minister David Robinson, a licensed pilot, says the WCG's BAC 1-11 jet uses about 800 gallons of fuel an hour at almost $2 per gallon. One Worldwider close to Tkach has estimated that when we add to those fuel costs the cost of payments on the jet (or depreciation), pilots' salaries, insurance, hotel bills for Tkach's huge entourage, and the price of the hugely extravagant gifts Tkach gives to the dignitaries he meets, the actual cost of Tkach's ego-maintenance trips approaches $30 million per year. That figure sounds a bit high to me, but refuting the allegation is impossible since the WCG refuses to open its books to any outside investigators.

36. Tkach, unlike HWA before him, knows the value of a buck. He also knows how to use carrots. Bonus checks have become a regular part of life for WCG employees who are loyal to Tkach. Shortly after Part I of this article appeared, I am told, many ministers in the WCG received "bonuses" of up to $10,000. Why, I have no idea.

37. Helge, a long-time church employee and bombastic speaker, has yet to be ordained even a local elder. Yet Helge's assistant, Earl Reese, was recently ordained. This obvious snub of Helge has led some to speculate that Tkach's confidence in Helge is waning and that Reese will eventually be the WCG's chief counsel.

38. Tkach has none of these qualities or qualifications. I have heard some WCG members say that Tkach is both an accomplished guitarist and licensed helicopter pilot. They are mistaken on both counts. Such false notions arose only because of the audacity of Tkach's PR men. The Worldwide News of June 27, 1988 showed Tkach posing with a group of musicians while holding a guitar as though performing. And the Worldwide News of Jan. 18, 1988 showed Tkach sitting in the cockpit of an in-flight helicopter while wearing pilot headgear as though he was piloting the craft. Both shots were staged.

39. The most dramatic and poignant account of what took place at this juncture in WCG history is contained in a tape recording made by evangelist David Antion in early 1979. Copies of the tape, entitled "Firing and Disfellowshipping, January 1979," are probably still available from Mr. Antion, 311

Waverly Drive, Pasadena, CA 91105.

40. As a Newsweek magazine stringer covering the court proceedings in 1979, I vividly recall Kineston's presence on the witness stand. In her shimmering outfit she was self-assured, sharp-tongued, and haughty. She lacked only a whip to have appeared a Madam deSade. As such, she represented the antithesis of idealized WCG femininity. Some are convinced that the way she intimidated and dominated the WCG ministers she interfaced with was a major cause of Stan Rader's eventual downfall.

41. The Los Angeles county court building in Pasadena has a very thick criminal file on Timmons. He has been convicted for drug dealing and felon firearm possession. How Timmons became involved in the lawsuit is explained in John Tuit's book The Truth Shall Make You Free on p. 140.

42. Besides Cole, another individual who was told in advance that the lawsuit was coming was Herman L. Hoeh, Tkach's superior in 1978. The fact that neither Cole nor Hoeh warned Rader of the impending suit in late 1978 is probably the main reason Cole was fired and Hoeh was not allowed to be a church trustee in January 1979. It is noteworthy that although Tkach also knew the suit was coming, he was not disfellowshipped along with Cole. This logically leads to the question: Was Tkach the one that betrayed Cole and others to Rader? I am convinced he was.

43. The entire telex was published in AR 23, our January 1983 issue. Before publishing the telex, I wrote Tkach asking him to respond to the allegations it contained. He never answered my letter.

[Part III of this article will appear in the next issue of Ambassador Report.]

WCG Growth Stalls As Doctrines Shift

According to official WCG publications, under Joseph W. Tkach's leadership, the WCG has achieved a new high in effectiveness and unity. But even in official pronouncements there are hints that all is not well in the Tkach organization. For instance, in his June 26 letters to members and coworkers, Tkach admitted that at that junction the WCG's income for 1989 stood at only 3.7 percent over the same period in 1988. By the end of July that percentage was down to 3.2-almost 3 points less than the low 6 percent growth rate that had been expected! When inflation is taken into account (currently running over 5 percent per annum) a 3.2 percent growth rate represents a loss in purchasing power. This, in an organization that used to boast of an annual growth rate of 30 percent. What has happened?

There are probably many reasons for the slackened growth rate. But one important factor appears to be widespread lack of confidence in WCG teachings. In the WCG, doctrines come and go. The keeping of birthdays, once forbidden in the WCG, is now okay (see the Worldwide News, July 17, 1989, at p. 3), and there is talk in WCG circles that voting in government elections will soon be declared allowable.

Because of the Tkach administration's doctrinal shifts on makeup, healing, birthdays, and voting, some conservatives complain that the WCG is now coming into line with the Systematic Theology Project (STP). The STP was an early 1970s attempt at codifying WCG doctrine into an official statement of belief. Its principal author was Dr. Robert Kuhn, Garner Ted Armstrong's executive assistant. Although the STP had, and still has, many admirers, many church conservatives saw it as a Trojan horse of liberalism, and HWA ultimately rejected it.

Comparing recent WCG doctrinal changes with the STP, one sees numerous parallels. However, Tkach is really going much further than the STP. First of all, Tkach has put forward a new interpretation of Matt. 24:42 that completely contradicts one of HWA's central teachings and puts the WCG in line with mainstream Protestantism. In the July 3, 1989 Worldwide News Tkach's editorial had this explanation:

Jesus did not tell his servants to watch world events in order to figure out what he clearly told them they were not given to know. Rather, he told them to stay continually on alert, to be always ready and ever prepared, so that whenever he returns they will be ready.

Those familiar with what HWA taught will immediately recognize that Tkach has completely reversed a major WCG doctrine. For HWA taught the church members that it was imperative that they "watch world news." (See HWA's June 25, 1985 co-worker letter.) Indeed, ministers even taught that this was one reason members should listen to The World Tomorrow broadcasts. Notice also that Tkach downplays the reliability of Bible prophecy, something HWA would never have done.

Second, under Tkach the WCG is putting new emphasis on the person of Jesus, thereby putting the WCG, again, more in harmony with mainline Protestantism. In the January 23, 1989 Worldwide News, Tkach wrote:

I am thrilled to announce that our new booklet, Who Was Jesus?, written by Paul Kroll, is now printed and ready for mailing. Until now, we have not had a booklet devoted entirely and specifically to teaching people about who Jesus was, what He did and is now doing, His purpose, and the supreme importance of what it all means to each human being ....

I believe this will be one of our most important pieces of literature as we continue to do the job of preaching and teaching the full gospel of Jesus Christ - the unparalleled good news about the salvation of mankind through Jesus, and [editor: note the order] His prophesied Second Coming to establish the Kingdom of God.

The new emphasis on the person of Jesus alters what HWA taught concerning the church's purpose for existence. For HWA, the primary purpose of the church was not preaching Jesus. HWA taught that the church's primary function was to publish and broadcast the gospel of the coming Kingdom (or millennial government) of God "as a witness" to "modern Israel" and the world. (See HWA's reprint article "What is the True Gospel?")

A third major shift brought about by Tkach is a new emphasis on racial equality. While HWA's theology placed an emphasis on the special place of "modern Israel" (the English-speaking nations) in this world and in the coming Kingdom, Tkach seems to emphasize the equality of all races before God (see the May 11, 1987 Worldwide News, p. 1). This new concern for minorities is reflected in numerous church policies. For instance, last year's incoming freshmen class at Ambassador College, Pasadena, was composed of approximately 20 percent minorities. As one Ambassador coed told me on the phone, "Mr. Tkach is not living in the past. He is leading us into the twenty-first century."

Although some doctrinal changes, like those on healing and makeup, have been announced formally, many have not. Tkach and his team often allow new doctrines to be slipped into articles in church publications without any fanfare. In the same way, doctrines that Tkach doesn't care for are quietly de-emphasized or ignored altogether.

While HWA was adamantly opposed to the "positive thinking" philosophy of Norman Vincent Peale and Robert Schuller, a recent Good News article ("Someday Isle" by Peter Moore, in the July-Aug. 1989 issue) espoused essentially that philosophy. While HWA (often quoting Eccles. 9: 10) emphasized that you should strive for excellence in all things, one recent article in a WCG publication (the Nov.-Dec. issue of Youth 88) suggested that doing things in a slipshod manner is okay - as long as you are having fun. The article was appropriately titled "How to Play the Piano Badly." And, while HWA taught the doctrine of "church eras," many WCG members say that that doctrine has just disappeared. Apparently Tkach has said, "Don't even mention eras to me again." Clearly, Armstrongism is gradually evolving into Tkachism.

Perhaps as a result of the many doctrinal changes in recent history, WCG members, more than ever, are reading publications that are challenging the validity of current WCG doctrines. One small organization whose publications are having a big impact on the WCG is William F. Dankenbring's Triumph Publishing Co. Dankenbring, a former Plain Truth writer who still holds to many WCG doctrines, has written a string of articles that challenge a good number of WCG teachings. In Worldwide many have been reading his articles "Prove All Things - 35 Places Where the Worldwide Church of God Plunged Into Error!", "The Astonishing Prophetic Errors of Herbert W. Armstrong!", and "Who Is 'Shebna' in Bible Prophecy?" (in which Dankenbring sees Tkach fulfilling the role of Shebna in the prophecy of Isaiah 22:15-19). For a price list of Dankenbring's writings or for a free subscription to his Prophecy Flash newsletter write to Triumph Publishing Co., P.O. Box 292, Altadena, CA 91001.

Another publication that has caused a considerable stir in WCG circles is The Faithful Word newsletter. Published and distributed by a group of WCG members (some of whom have now been disfellowshipped), The Faithful Word has challenged the church's new healing doctrine, the use of white flour in Passover bread, the totalitarian nature of the WCG ministry, and other church teachings and practices. The Faithful Word newsletter has been widely disseminated at certain church feast sites and also may be obtained by writing to The Faithful Word, Box F-191, 323 S. Franklin Bldg., Chicago, IL 60606-7094.

The keeping of sabbaths - both the weekly and annual holy days of the Old Testament - are an important part of WCG teaching. Yet even in this area there is much questioning. A number of the WCG's best minds, for instance, are convinced that the church is calculating the dates of its annual holy days incorrectly. One individual in the WCG wrote us:

The Jan.-Feb. 1988 issue of The Good News contained an article on the calendar which provides a continuation of the deceit that originated under Armstrongism. On page 10, Mr. Neff writes, "God entrusted the preservation of the Old Testament Scriptures and the details of the calendar to the Jews. The Jews preserve these Scriptures and the calendar to this day." This is not true! Any Jewish Encyclopedia will admit that the Jews have made unscriptural changes in their calendar. The history of these changes is well known. The present Jewish calendar originated in Babylon no earlier than 359 A.D. All historians refer to it as the Jewish calendar. Books written by AC staff members call it the Hebrew calendar. But to the supposed dumb sheep, it is presented as God's calendar.

Mr. Neff describes details of this calendar, some of which are such "that certain of the feasts God established would fall on appropriate days of the week." Mr. Neff fails to mention that these feasts are Atonement (not really a feast) and Trumpets. Nowhere does scripture specify days of the week for any Feast but Pentecost. For their own convenience and through a process of evolution, the Jewish rabbis, the tradition of whom was condemned by Jesus, decided that Atonement should not fall on Friday or Sunday. This prohibits Trumpets from falling on Wednesday or Friday. Later Sunday was added to the days on which Trumpets was prohibited. Roughly speaking, the new moon in the seventh month occurs on these three unscripturally prohibited days over 40% of the time. This one error alone makes the Jewish calendar wrong over 40% of the time.

There are other unscriptural errors. Scripture requires that the first day of the first month be determined for the spring holy days. Due to the effects of the sun, the various months may vary by several hours from the mean length. So one can not always determine the first day of the first month by counting backwards 177 days from the first day of the seventh month, as the Jewish calendar proscribes [sic]. But it is a simple matter to look in an almanac to find the time of the new moon and convert to Jerusalem time. Then determine which evening it could be first seen.

Christian churches which adhere to the Jewish calendar do so in an attempt to avoid confusion. But to the best of my knowledge, only Armstrongism is deceptive about the history and evolution and name of the Jewish calendar.

Not only are the calculations of the annual holy days being questioned, some are questioning the way the weekly sabbath should be figured! Behind this line of thinking is former WCG minister Martin C. Filippello who, convinced that Tkach is the end-time "man of sin," had hoped and prophesied that Herbert W. Armstrong would be resurrected in January 1988 (see our Sept. 1987 and March 1988 issues). On March 8, 1989 Filippello ran a large ad in the Pasadena Star News in which he stated: "Is Saturday really God's Sabbath? Can you prove Saturday is God's Sabbath from the Bible? God's Sabbath (Gen. 2:1-3) must be the 7th day counted from the new moon (new month)." Filippello's theory apparently revolves around lunar cycle calculations. At least that is the impression we got from the free tape he offers via the Church of God Philadelphia Era, 1800 S. Robertson Blvd., #49, Los Angeles, CA 90035.

Finally, there is a doctrinal debate brewing concerning Herbert Armstrong's place in church history. Some are aware that during his early ministry (the 1930s and 40s) and later (during the 1970s and 80s) HWA displayed few, if any, signs of conversion. This observation seems to haunt a few who now rationalize that observation with the church's doctrine that HWA was the first person to preach the true gospel in 1900 years. To see God's hand in HWA's life - despite all his flaws - there is now the 18-year time cycle theory.

The theory goes like this: During the first 18 years of HWA's ministry (1931-49) HWA was not really converted. It was during this "cycle" that HWA had a long-term incestuous relationship with his younger daughter (see ARs 27 and 40). As a result, God did not bless his ministry. But, so the theory goes, when HWA stopped having sex with his daughter in the 40s, God began to work through him and, beginning in 1949, God blessed "the Work" with tremendous wealth. Then in 1967 when HWA's wife Loma died, HWA again reverted to seeking after young flesh, drunkenness and debauchery. Again, so the theory goes, God withdrew his power from HWA for 18 years. Beginning in 1967, however, God gave his spiritual power to none other than Joseph W. Tkach.

The 18-year time cycle theory raises a number of questions. First of all, if God is working through some alternating evil-good-evil time-cycle plan in the WCG, does that mean Tkach - now in his second time-cycle - is in a non-converted phase? Second, who was the originator of this theory? Could it have been Plain Truth editor Herman L. Hoeh, the man who originated the 19-year time cycle theory back in the 1950s? And if so, where did Hoeh get the idea? Certainly nowhere in the Bible do we find an 18-year or 19-year time cycle doctrine (although "time cycle" doctrines are central to certain eastern religions). Nevertheless, Tkach is said to be aware of the new time-cycle doctrine and has not criticized it. In fact, it appears that he may be convinced that in HWA's last cycle HWA was not converted. And some speculate it will be only a few years before Tkach turns HWA into a "non-person." Already, Tkach has ordered that HWA's magnum opus Mystery of the Ages no longer be distributed and, reportedly believing the book to be an evil influence, has ordered all remaining copies in storage to be destroyed.

Hope for the Dead

Ambassador Report frequently receives letters from WCG members who say they are unhappy in Worldwide, but fear leaving because of the church's doctrines on hell fire and the unforgivable sin. Not unlike certain other denominations, the WCG's teachings on hell fire instill in many a deep fear of disobeying the church's ministry.

Former WCG member David C. Strickland of Doncaster, England says that much of the fear experienced by WCG members is caused by a misunderstanding of a number of scriptural passages. Mr. Strickland did two years of research on the doctrines of salvation and hell fire and that research has resulted in a thought-provoking 89-page booklet. Entitled Hope for the Dead - All the Dead, Mr. Strickland's booklet should prove of assistance to many who wish to exit the WCG but feel doctrinally constrained from doing so.

Those interested in obtaining a copy should write the author at 20 Mutual Street, Hexthorpe, Doncaster DN4 OEF, England. Mr. Strickland has indicated that as long as his limited supply lasts he will provide a free copy to any AR reader who requests his booklet.

Greg Doudna's Showdown at Big Sandy

Greg Doudna, an alumnus of Ambassador College (Big Sandy 1972-75, Pasadena 1976), has written a remarkable 600-page book about the WCG and his personal experiences while a member. The title is Showdown at Big Sandy (Youthful Creativity Confronts Bureaucratic Inertia At an Unconventional Bible College in East Texas) and it is published by University Microfilms International, 300 N. Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106. When ordered from the publisher the cost per copy for universities or their students (including postage and handling) is $30.25 paperback or $37.25 hard cover. For individuals not associated with a university the cost is $51.75 paperback or $61.75 hard cover.

Doudna's book is well-researched, very readable, and contains both a helpful bibliography and a very large "index of persons." Because of the high cost, those doing research on the WCG would probably find a complete set of AR more helpful (because our back issues cover more thoroughly the historical events covered in the Doudna book). However, those who were students at Big Sandy in the early 1970s will find this book very entertaining; those writing about the WCG will find this a useful reference work; and anyone with a friend or relative studying at Ambassador will find this book most helpful in that it shows what it is like to be a student at Ambassador College (and surprisingly, the atmosphere at both AC campuses has changed very little in the 13 years since Mr. Doudna was a student).

Those wanting copies of Mr. Doudna's book may obtain them by writing University Microfilms International (see above). However, Mr. Doudna has informed us that he has a very limited supply of paperback copies which he will sell at cost ($22 each) as long as his supply lasts. For information write to Mr. Greg Doudna, 973 W. Exchange St., Akron, Ohio 44302.

1989 Biblical Theology Symposium

A very unusual gathering took place in Pasadena, California the weekend of June 23-25. Sixteen individuals, from several states and as far away as England, met for two days of intensive study and discussion as part of what was called a 1989 Biblical Theology Symposium. The list of participants reads like a Who's Who roster of former WCG/AC evangelists, pastors, faculty members and administrative leaders: David Antion, Phillip Arnold, Anthony Buzzard, Al Carrozzo, Wayne Cole, Ronald Dart, Olin Degge, Charles Dorothy, Lester Grabbe, David Jon Hill, Charles Hunting, Brian Knowles, Robert Kuhn, Ernest Martin, Jack Martin, and James Tabor.

The Symposium was planned and sponsored by James Tabor and Robert Kuhn, and had no connection to any organization. The theme of the Symposium was "Twenty Years After." Kuhn and Tabor found it fascinating that all participants would have been in fundamental agreement on all basic biblical doctrines back in 1969, during the heyday of the WCG. But, they wondered, what about today, twenty years later? The only stipulation in making up their somewhat arbitrary and selective list of individuals to be invited was that each one have some kind of ongoing interest in biblical areas. Tabor explained, "We were not interested in current church affiliation or personal matters, nor in trying to hammer out some kind of agreement or harmony. We knew that many very different attitudes, approaches, methods, and conclusions would be represented by such a group. That was what we wanted and expected."

The sessions focused on three subject areas: Christology and Salvation, Prophetic Scenarios, and the Biblical Covenants. Three to four hours of discussion were allotted to each. Many participants prepared formal papers, most of which had been predistributed.

According to Tabor, the atmosphere was relaxed and enjoyable, with a good mixture of humor and earnest debate. Many of the participants had not seen one another for a decade or more and this personal aspect of renewed friendship turned out to be as valuable as any substantive exchange of views. "As it turns out," he said, "one could have hardly assembled a more diverse group in terms of the biblical areas we discussed."

Though the group represented various directions and achievements over the past twenty years, it is interesting that of the sixteen, six had gone on to earn accredited Ph.D. degrees from major universities. None of the participants are current members of the WCG. Although several WCG leaders were invited they declined to participate. Tabor and Kuhn hope that some of the papers presented can be edited and published in a small volume. They also stated that similar meetings might be planned for the future.

Tuit Leaves Worldwide - Again

In our last issue, we reported how John Tuit, the author of The Truth Shall Make You Free, had returned to the WCG. Shortly after that issue appeared, Tuit called us to say he had again left the WCG. He explained how he had hoped that under Tkach the WCG would be different. It didn't turn out that way. Said Tuit, "The package is different, but underneath there are the same spiritual problems." It's been months since Tuit stopped attending, but, he recently told us, "The local minister still hasn't called me to find out why."

Letters

This Joe Tkach can't be too bright! I've been an ex-WCG local elder now for several years - thanks a great deal to you people. But I can't help but think that if I had ever met this man and he started to tell me of his Navy experiences during WWII, I could tell that he was lying as soon as he started talking. To begin with, a DE is not a destroyer, but a destroyer escort. (Not to diminish the record of WWII DE's.) I served on a destroyer from 11/43 to 11/45 (USS Aulick DD569 Pacific). Anyone who served on a "can" during this time can cut his story to ribbons. Is he too dumb to even have realized this? He is a disgrace to the men who died aboard those gallant ships.

- Walt Scull, New Jersey

I think you misread your notes. On page 3, you state that I view Joe as a humble Christian who "sincerely believes he sits in Moses' seat." Joe never believed that he sat in Moses' seat. He used to sincerely believe that HWA sat in Moses' seat. I would appreciate your printing a correction in the next issue. I view Mr. Tkach as a humble Christian who "sincerely believed that HWA sat in Moses' seat." He no longer believes this.

- Robert Romagnoli, California

I'm really liking your article on Mr. Tkach. I don't like the title of your article, however. You should have added a question mark.

- Karen Griffin, Oregon

As you mentioned in your article, Slavic individuals often did not have middle names. That was so in my case as well. But after repeatedly being asked for my middle name in elementary school, I assumed my father's [Christian] name as my middle name. My middle initial E stands for "Efrem-ovich," i.e., "the son of Efrem." Perhaps Tkach, believing William to be equivalent or similar to Vasili, his father's [Christian] name, may have done the same thing.

- John K. Karenko, Illinois

Editor: The church's letter answering department has recently begun explaining Tkach's acquisition of the W in just that way.

I must tell you how close I was to "joining" WCG, to the point where I received an initial visit by two ministers (Mike Swagerty and Ron Dick - perhaps you know them). I mentioned before that since 1959 I was "hooked" on the literature, radio broadcast (less frequently) and tithing (when I was able). It was only four months ago that I contacted Pasadena and asked to see a minister! (Almost 30 years later, but I was ready.)

So what changed my mind? Well, one thing was the way I was received by Messrs. Swagerty and Dick. I mean to say that after 30 years of expectation, I was excited about finally meeting someone from the "true church." I received them as a child would - thrilled, happy, rejoicing, etc. But all they had to say was "read the literature again, look up every quote (Bible passage), call us back." Well, that was exactly what I'd been doing for 29 years, reading and re-reading every piece of WCG literature I could get my hands on!

Those two fellows were so remote, while I laid my heart open to them. They asked if I would trim my beard (which probably looked about as shabby as that of one of the sojourners to Canaan after 40 years in the desert). I said yes, I'll trim it, shave it, you name it, because I know the WCG's men are mostly clean shaven. I said I really wouldn't care to insult anyone, "just get me to the church on time!"

Ha! After they left, my wife expressed her shock and anger at these two from WCG. They did not speak with her at all, though she was in the room while they directed questions at me. Now, she asked, "Did either one of them grab you and hug you and say hello or God bless you? No!" (I, in my excitement, started to hug them when they arrived, but immediately got a cold signal.) Their visit and how it left me cold nearly shattered me. I mean, after nearly 30 years of waiting to meet another Christian?! And they just said call us again after you get all the answers down pat. Well, within days of their visit, I was led mysteriously to questioning the WCG. Almost magically a copy of Kingdom of the Cults was handed to me in a second-hand store - the price was 25 cents! I read it and boy was I surprised. I don't agree with the author so much, but it sure started me to questioning my idol HWA. Well no, actually I said, maybe he was in error about this or that but basically HWA is a good fellow. Hmm.... Next I discovered the AR. Just a couple of weeks ago, and whew! Now I am one of the thankful ones who never quite walked through that door. I have a 2-and-a-half-year-old daughter and a wife of six years - what would have become of them? My wife definitely would have balked at, or challenged, the HWA line. Somehow I was led here. Thanks for your help and work. I hope if we ever meet it will be a joyful experience, unlike the cold Swagerty and Dick meeting, which hurt me inside.

- Fred Burkhart, Chicago, Illinois

We lost our daughter to the WCG nine years ago now and haven't seen or heard from her in four years.

-Canada

I have found your report very helpful. I will give the copies to my boyfriend, a WCG member. I am having a very hard time standing up and watching him change from a good, honest, patient, loving person into a cold, distant, critical person. He has been a member for six years, left about a year ago and went back after the Feast of Tabernacles came up. Since then, our life has been a living hell. He constantly stated he was determined daily to go back to the church, and I knew there was trouble when he snuck behind my back to speak to the minister to ask permission to get back into the church, after we had agreed to talk it over first. When asked if he really wanted to go back to the church, he replied, "No, but I don't know if I can stay away." I pray he will see the light. I am currently doing a complete study on the WCG and will give him the completed project. Hopefully it will open his eyes. I think your report is well worth it.... I am at the end of my rope. I almost can't take anymore, but I love him way too much to see this happening to him.

- Illinois

The WCG has ruined my wife's mind. She sleeps most of the day. I don't know what to do about it.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR43 December 1989

Joseph W. Tkach - God's New Rep on Planet Earth

(Part III)

by John Trechak

Editor: Because Part III of this serialized article does not repeat certain key information contained in Parts I and II, it is important that the two earlier parts be read first. They were published in ARs 41 and 42 (our March and September issues). In that way, what follows may be understood in proper context.

As explained in Parts I and II, Joseph W. Tkach, the new Pastor General of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), Chancellor of Ambassador College, and "God's Apostle for this age," has created for himself a colorful official biography very much at odds with his true past history. Separating fact from fiction in Tkach's past is often difficult. That is especially so when it comes to the many stories circulating in WCG circles that connect Tkach to criminals and criminal activity.

Those stories include the allegations that in the past Tkach misappropriated for his personal use thousands of dollars of church funds set aside for the poor, that Tkach was once a fence (one who disposes of stolen property), and that he has had dealings with numerous criminals including professional hit men. Such stories are widely believed in WCG circles. But are they true?

Is Tkach a Crook?

Because Tkach and his lawyers refused to be interviewed for this article, the first step in my search for answers was the central criminal records files for Los Angeles County. I discovered that for the 22 years Tkach has lived in Los Angeles County, no Joseph Tkach has been convicted there of any felonies, or even misdemeanors. But what about in Chicago where he previously resided? Not wanting to spend money on air fare, I phoned a respected private investigator in Chicago and asked him to check the criminal records of Illinois to see if Tkach had ever been convicted in that state. When he phoned back in a few days, he apologized, saying, "I'm sorry, Mr. Trechak. I really am. Criminal files in Illinois often get lost or even destroyed. But I don't think your man was ever convicted up here. There's just no record of him." After all the colorful stories I had been told, I was a bit surprised. Just to be sure, I contacted one more private investigator - one who had been helpful to me in the past. After a few days he phoned me with the results of his investigation. Not only could he find no record of Tkach having ever been convicted of any crime anywhere, he could find no record of Tkach ever having gotten even one traffic ticket!

Convictions make for easy reporting. But truth does not begin and end at a courtroom door.

The allegation that Tkach in the past misappropriated to himself church funds set aside for the poor comes from numerous sources. In our March 1982 issue I published a lengthy letter that had been written by WCG attorney-accountant Jack Kessler to the WCG's board of trustees. The Kessler letter recounted numerous ethics violations by top WCG executives. The letter contained the following statement:

According to Mr. Robin Webber, Mr. Joseph Tkach apparently felt justified in giving himself from a trust fund he controlled a little advance of $5000.00 as a "needy Church member" to take advantage of a special investment in unregistered securities then illegally being peddled (against advice of counsel) by the Dean brothers.

In early 1982 I wrote both Tkach and the WCG's legal department asking if they wished to comment on the Kessler allegation. Neither replied.

Beginning during the early sixties, when he was still in Chicago, Tkach's superiors often gave him responsibility over the "poor fund" or "third tithing" accounts of local congregations.<sup>44</sup> Earl Timmons, for a decade a confidant of Tkach, told me that Tkach would often siphon off funds by making loans to needy church members, then labeling the loans on the books as gifts paid out, and finally pocketing the loans when they were repaid. I personally recall how during the early seventies, a number of my WCG friends, unemployed at the time, went to Tkach for assistance. In each case they were granted a few hundred dollars. They were startled, however, when Tkach informed them that the amount they received was only a loan and that the loan had to be repaid to Tkach personally in cash.

I asked one former church secretary, who had known Tkach quite well during the seventies, if she believed Tkach had siphoned off funds meant for the poor during those years. She told me, "Oh sure he did. But so what? In those days a lot of the ministers were doing the same thing." Perhaps that is so.

In defense of Tkach, one of his friends wrote me:

I [once] heard from Tom Justus [a former WCG minister] that Joe Tkach was stealing from Third Tithes. Joe was then living in a rented house, paying little more than $200 per month rent. He tried to buy a house. But, according to Paul Knedel, he could not qualify, as his income was under $18,000 per year. Some secretaries were making more than that. So where's the loot?

The allegation about Tkach having once been a fence was contained in a Feb. 1, 1981 telex from WCG attorney Stanley Rader to church founder Herbert W. Armstrong. As I have quoted in past issues, Rader's exact words were:

With respect to Joe Tkach, I recommended him. Although I did know about his connection with Mr. and Mrs. Timmons (two of the relators in the lawsuit), I did not find out the full details concerning his illegal fencing activities until they surfaced recently when we were preparing our civil rights case.

Rader is not the only one who has made such allegations. It was in January 1979, as I waited to be interviewed for a TV news segment about the WCG receivership, that Earl Timmons first mentioned to me how Tkach had knowingly dealt in stolen property. Whether the item was a refrigerator for a church member or gold rings for his daughter Tanya's wedding, Tkach apparently had no qualms about buying or selling goods that his friends warned him were stolen. According to Timmons' wife, Shirley, Tkach would rationalize such dealings by saying, "If you don't know where it comes from it's not wrong."

The Mafia Apostle

As I explained in Part I, Tkach likes to be thought of as a tough guy. In his yarns about shooting down kamikazes, beating up Marines, or in telling employees "the way Mr. Armstrong would chew people out was sandbox compared to the way I do it," there is always that "tough as nails" theme. Along that vein, the WCG abounds in stories about Tkach having friends in organized crime-friends that can be called upon when needed.

Such stories have convinced most Worldwidiers that Tkach is not just tough, but is one who should be feared. As a result, many - even among those who have left Worldwide - refuse to say anything regarding Tkach for fear of retaliation. Three long-time Tkach acquaintances even warned me that by writing about Tkach I was putting myself in grave physical danger. Nevertheless, is such fear of Tkach really justified? And where did those wild stories about Tkach's gangland connections come from?

In the course of investigating Tkach's background I decided to see if any of Tkach's in-laws could offer an insight into his past. Using the Chicago phone directory, I began phoning people with the name Apostolos - the maiden name of Tkach's wife. I reached a man named Mike Apostolos. When I asked if he knew an Elaine Tkach (Joe's wife), he answered in a low voice, "She's my sistah." Apostolos spoke with a slow gruffness reminiscent of convict characters in 1930s gangster movies. But he was quite open about his life and background. He said he was 77 years old, not married, a WCG member, and was considered by some to be senile ("that's what they tell me"). He explained how both his parents had been of Greek ancestry and how his father had been a strict disciplinarian. He also said he had spent 19 years of his life in Pontiac Prison.<sup>45</sup> When I asked for further details, he would only say he didn't like to discuss his past crimes.

Apostolos sounded contrite about his past mistakes, yet there seemed to be a residue of certain old values. At one point he said, "My father was Mafia. He knew Alfons." Naturally, I asked, "Alfons who?" His reply was, "Alfons Capone. My father and Alfons were good friends." Not knowing how to react to such talk, I commented, somewhat awkwardly, how, over the years, I had read a few books about the Mafia's history and was aware of their so-called "code of honor." Apostolos' voice became animated: "Yeah, if you treat the Mafia good, the Mafia treats you good. In prison the Mafia treated me real good."

I then asked him if Joe Tkach had ever been involved in any criminal activities. His reply was: "Who? Joe? Nah. He would never do anything like that. Joe is a good man. When I was in prison he used to always visit me."

Two ex-WCG members who knew Tkach back in the sixties told me they don't recall Tkach as being involved with crime or criminals in those days. But they recalled how, at some juncture, Tkach gained a reputation as one with contacts in organized crime. Said one ex-member, "I seem to recall it was Alan Manteufel who started that rumor." (Manteufel was a WCG minister who died in 1978-from alcoholism, some say.)

Whether it was because of Tkach's visits to his imprisoned brother-in-law, or because of an overactive imagination on the part of Manteufel or someone else, the rumor of Tkach's Mafia connections became widely accepted as fact in WCG circles. As for Tkach, not only did he make no effort to dispel the rumor, he encouraged it. Ken Nagele, a former WCG member who once worked for Tkach told me, "Joe Tkach even used to kid about his old Mafia connections." A number of former members also recall how Tkach had a "Mafia Staff Car" sticker on the black sedan in which he used to visit members. While many undoubtedly took the sticker as a joke, others did not. Some have since noticed in the news how one major crime figure apprehended not long ago in Southern California also had such a "humorous" sticker on his car.

To many people the idea of openly claiming to be associated with organized crime is both in poor taste and stupid. After all, if one really is involved with organized crime, why broadcast it? Nevertheless, there are some individuals involved with the underworld who take pride in such connections. I personally recall how, some years ago, certain Mafia leaders in New York City turned a Columbus Day parade into a media event interpreted as pro-Mafia. I was in the New York area at the time and watched a news interview with one of the parade's organizers, a reputed Mafia don, who did everything possible to enhance his gangster image.<sup>46</sup>

Tkach has often behaved in a similarly childish manner. But is there any real substance behind the image of an "Apostle" with lots of gangland friends? One man who answers unequivocally in the affirmative is Earl Timmons.

Earl Timmons<sup>47</sup> is certainly one of the most unusual individuals ever to have gone through the WCG. During the early seventies, he was a successful plumbing contractor in the Pasadena, California area. A WCG member since the early sixties, he was a very close friend and confidant of Tkach from 1969 through 1978. The two were so close they would get together almost daily over coffee. Shirley Timmons was also close to the Tkach family, as she was one of the church women who, for years, took care of Tkach's ailing wife.

Because of his plumbing business, Timmons came in contact with many Los Angeles County businessmen. One was George Pappageorge,<sup>48</sup> who owned a service station and U-Haul rental business at Rosemead and Colorado Boulevards in Pasadena. According to Timmons, however, Pappageorge was not just a legitimate businessman, but the central figure in a major crime ring. Timmons alleges that Pappageorge and his associates were involved in burglary, robbery, and interstate trafficking in stolen cars and other merchandise, with the U-Haul business furnishing a convenient cover for the movement of stolen goods and contraband.

Court records show that Timmons' allegations should not be thought of as fantasy. George Pappageorge and two accomplices, Kenneth Casper Moran and Sidney Bartolotta, were convicted in 1974 on multiple counts of kidnapping (at gunpoint), robbery, burglary, and conspiracy.<sup>49</sup> One of the kidnapping victims (of the three separate kidnappings listed in the original indictment) was Donovan Hargens, then owner of Don's Market in Pasadena. Pappageorge and Moran were convicted on all - counts with Moran going to Folsom Prison and "Pappy" going to San Quentin.<sup>50</sup>

Reading through the huge file on the case, one is struck by the large number of individuals that were involved. One of Pappageorge's accomplices was Ron Hayward, described in one affidavit as a volatile, violent, and psychotic<sup>51</sup> individual whose main goal in life was to become a successful hit man (a goal Timmons fears Haywood has achieved). At some point during the police investigation of the kidnappings, Hayward turned state's evidence and somehow implicated Timmons. Timmons, in turn, was granted immunity from prosecution when he fingered Pappageorge.

The court records I have seen do not implicate Timmons in any of the more violent activities of the ring. For instance, he was not an accomplice in any of the kidnappings. But, by his own admission under oath, Timmons was involved in one highly unusual escapade with Pappageorge. In 1972, as the police began to move in on the ring, Pappageorge hastily called Timmons to a private meeting. He told Timmons that the police had just searched the home of Moran's wife and he thought his place of business would be searched next. Pappageorge, a demolition expert missing a few fingers because he wasn't expert enough, told Timmons that at his garage there was a carload of contraband explosives that he wanted moved. It is unclear from the records I have seen whether the TNT and dynamite were stolen, intended for safe cracking, or worse. But there was a lot of it - about a quarter ton or enough to blow up a city block. Timmons got the explosives, destroyed some by dilution, and finally dumped the rest in the mountains north of Pasadena.

From reading the court records it becomes obvious that Pappageorge and his many associates were involved in a very wide range of criminal activity. Yet, according to Timmons, George Pappageorge and his associate Kenny Moran were very close friends of Joe Tkach. Timmons is sure of this, he says, because he was the one who introduced Tkach to Pappageorge. From then on, says Timmons, Tkach would often spend time socially with Pappageorge and Moran. Why? According to Timmons, "Joe just liked them. He'd go out to restaurants with them and he liked their company."

The extent of Tkach's dealings with the Pappageorge-Moran gang is speculative. But the statement by WCG attorney Stanley Rader that Tkach once engaged in "illegal fencing activities" raises a number of questions. During the early seventies, the WCG started a local discount store for its members in the Southern California area. Called the Crown City Commissary, the Pasadena store was a pet project of Pastor Al Carrozzo who saw it as a way for the WCG to give something back to its members. But when Carrozzo left the WCG in late 1973, Tkach moved into the vacuum caused by Carrozzo's departure.

Some now wonder if Tkach was fencing through the Commissary. They recall how the Commissary often had on sale, for very low prices, huge lots of some items (sporting goods, for instance) for which there was very little demand among church members. Some also remember how the Commissary was abruptly shut down in mid-1974 amid rumors that "hot stuff" was being sold there. Former WCG minister Howard Clark remembers how in early 1974 Timmons (who had been a contractor for the remodeling of the Commissary building) told him he was providing Tkach's Commissary with "merchandise." Timmons denies he did anything illegal in those days, but he does not make the same denial for Pappageorge and Tkach.

The wild stories about Tkach that WCG evangelist Gerald Waterhouse tells in sermons are apparently believed by most WCG members. There is one story Waterhouse has told around the world, however, that has raised a lot of eyebrows. According to Waterhouse, during the 1979 WCG crisis when the State of California investigated the WCG and installed Judge Steven Wiseman as a receiver over its operations, Tkach was supposedly in contact with two prominent residents of Joliet Prison who offered him the services of hit men.

Although Waterhouse is probably wrong about a detail or two (like the name of the prison), the story may actually be true. At least one man, Earl Timmons, believes Waterhouse. Timmons told me that in 1979, when the State of California versus Worldwide suit was in progress, he was informed by a deputy attorney general that Tkach was using his influence to assist in the release of Kenneth Moran from Folsom Prison and George Pappageorge from San Quentin. Affidavits in the Los Angeles archives reveal that for some time Timmons was convinced Pappageorge had taken a contract out on his life. Finding out in 1979 that Tkach wanted Pappageorge and Moran released only exacerbated those fears. For in 1979, as a relator in the state's action against Worldwide, and as one who knew much about Tkach's past, Timmons feared Tkach would gain much if Pappageorge was successful in getting revenge. Timmons quickly sold his Pasadena home and immediately moved out of the Southern California area. He has made himself very difficult to find ever since.

Having been informed by California authorities since then that both Pappageorge and Moran have been released from prison, Timmons remains frantically concerned about his personal safety. I wonder, however, if by becoming so fearful, Timmons has not reacted exactly the way Tkach had hoped. After all, by Timmons being in hiding for over a decade, much important information about Tkach, that should have come out in 1979, has remained unpublished until now. It could well be that Tkach is actually much more clever than many believe.

Personal Tragedy

Tkach has achieved financial success, power, and influence. His life, however, is not without ongoing personal tragedy. During the mid-sixties Tkach's wife, Elaine, suffered a devastating mental breakdown from which she never fully recovered. Eyewitnesses have told me how for many years she seemed to be in a "trance-like state," behaving "like a zombie," and "not in reality." Some who have known her well say that at times she complained of "atomic bombs going off in her head." Some talk of how she has roamed around Ambassador's Pasadena campus in only a robe and slippers. Others have told stories of incredibly destructive rampages in the Tkach residence that led to her being forcibly confined to her room for months at a time and never left unattended. (Those who recall the insane Bertha Rochester in Charlotte Bronte's novel Jane Eyre will have a good idea of what Mrs. Tkach's condition and confinement were like.)

One individual, close to the Tkach family, has written me that since HWA's death Elaine's condition has improved. And a number of people have reported how she is now able to go shopping on her own. (Any appearance of improvement may be due to the powerful drug Haldol, which is used to treat schizophrenic psychosis. Tkach made a positive reference to the drug in his Oct. 14 satellite broadcast to the WCG.) However, when I recently saw Mrs. Tkach wandering about in Pasadena, she still seemed to me to be very disturbed.

Mental illness is always a tragedy for any family. But that is doubly so for families in the fundamentalist WCG. Until recently, the WCG's ministry taught that all illness was the fruit of sin and medical science was a Devil-inspired substitute for God's forgiveness. In 1987 the WCG reversed its position on those two doctrines. However, most WCG members still seem to believe that mental illness is always the same thing as demon possession. And according to some who've known the Tkach family, Tkach is convinced his wife is demon possessed.<sup>52</sup> Many other WCG ministers are similarly convinced. Yet neither Tkach nor his subordinates have the ability to cast out the demons in the Apostle's wife.

Mrs. Tkach's problems have caused the WCG ministry no end of embarrassment. Members ask: How can Mr. Tkach live with demons and not be affected? And why would "God's Apostle" tolerate the presence of demons in his wife? To counter such questions, Herman L. Hoeh, the WCG's leading propagandist and authority on demons, has put forward what must be the ultimate in WCG theological oxymorons: the doctrine that one can be filled with the Holy Spirit and be demon possessed at the same time. The folks at WCG headquarters apparently thought Hoeh's ideas on demons so important, a tape of Hoeh's sermon on the subject was required listening for WCG congregations in August of this year. Notice the following excerpt:

So in this life, we resist the devil. We resist demons. And if you don't resist demons it's possible for a converted mind to become temporarily demon possessed. And that demon, or demons, have to be cast out.... Yes, it is possible for a person to have the Holy Spirit. The demon does not displace the Spirit of God. The demon displaces the human will. The Spirit of God does not determine your will. You do! The Spirit of God is simply that spirit force that you, your will, your mind, can call on in addition to your own. A demon does not link up with your mind like the Spirit of God does. It displaces your will from your bodily functions and your mental functions.<sup>53</sup>

WCG members should ask Herman Hoeh how the above teaching squares with II Tim. 1:7, a rather uncomplicated Bible verse that used to be quoted quite often in WCG sermons. In the King James version it reads: "For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

Why Did She Snap?

Among those who've personally known the Tkach family, Elaine's affliction has been attributed to a number of supposed causes. One WCG member, a long-time friend of the Tkach family (and one who views Tkach as a dedicated servant of God), wrote me:

I have never known a woman more outgoing and filled with Christian love and God's Spirit than Elaine. In her quest for the truth, she gained a knowledge of the Scriptures that surpassed that of many of the ministers. And what she learned, she put into practice. Besides serving her husband and children, she helped many families in the Church. During the Feast days she would serve another dozen or so who stayed at their house. The Evangelist in the area [Dean Blackwell] would take her along visiting, as would her husband. Her entire life for about a ten-year period was dedicated fully to the service of God and His people.

After they moved to Pasadena in 1966, it did not take Elaine long to discover the true character of the Armstrongs. In less than two years, she started staying away from services due to headaches. Then she started to proclaim that both Armstrongs were "inhumane." After that she became overly quiet and withdrawn. She is the first Church member I know to have come to the discovery that the Armstrongs were not what they claimed to be. This knowledge was too much for a woman so filled with Christian love and dedication and good works. Part of her died. She is no longer the same person. Her human spirit was crushed. Part of her brain was damaged by this intense emotional realization and disappointment. Another precious life ruined by the lies and hypocrisies of the Armstrongs.

A few, who have personal knowledge of the situation, have speculated that Elaine's condition was exacerbated by Joe's domineering insensitivity and by the intermeddling of church official Roderick C. Meredith in Tkach family matters during the mid-'60s. However, almost all the WCG oldtimers I talked to were convinced that there was a connection between Elaine's condition and a sexual relationship she allegedly had with evangelist Dean Blackwell, her husband's superior in Chicago during the early '60s.

The Tkach administration now wants the Blackwell affair downplayed as having been merely verbal overtures by Blackwell. With only one exception, however, all the WCG oldtimers I talked to said their understanding was that the Blackwell affair was out and out adultery - at the very least. And, significantly, that widespread perception in WCG circles arose as a result of statements made to numerous individuals by Joe Tkach, himself. When I suggested to former WCG pastor Al Carrozzo that Blackwell's romantic relationship with Elaine Tkach was now being portrayed as only verbal, he replied, "That's not the way Joe talked about it years ago. He believed Dean Blackwell had gone to bed with his wife."

Carrozzo is known for his frankness. He is a man that does not mince words. His understanding of the Blackwell affair with Elaine Tkach, however, is very mild compared to what some others have said. For instance, at least one WCG evangelist has described the Blackwell-Elaine trysts as "wife swapping." When I first became aware of this accusation I assumed the evangelist was confusing Dean Blackwell with Blackwell's brother, Lowell, who was put out of the WCG ministry years ago because of alleged wife swapping. That sordid business was actually detailed in a turgid open letter written to the entire WCG ministry by church administrator Roderick C. Meredith in the early '70s. But a similar accusation against Tkach has now come from other sources, as well.

In March, I was contacted by Indiana businessman Robert Skaggs, who had been a WCG member in the Midwest during the early '60s. He had then been involved with the WCG's visiting program and had been very close to both Tkach and Blackwell. Skaggs claims that when he knew him, Tkach was not genuinely interested in religious truth, but was possessed by a lust for power. Skaggs told me that in his quest for power Tkach stooped so low as to allow evangelist Blackwell, then his superior, to sleep with Elaine, his wife. In return for this favor, says Skaggs, Blackwell had Tkach ordained into the WCG ministry.

When I was told this I pointedly asked Mr. Skaggs, "Are you saying that Joe Tkach was ordained in return for participating in some kind of wife-sharing arrangement?" His answer: "Absolutely!" Skaggs went on to state that Blackwell had at least one other man ordained for the same reason.

As shocking as they are, Mr. Skaggs' accusations regarding Blackwell are in step with Blackwell's reputation among many former colleagues. Former church administrator Gary Arvidson told me, "Yes, Dean Blackwell had something of a reputation. Without going into details, let's just say he was known as someone who really knew how to bring relief to the widows." Another former WCG minister recalled how Blackwell repeatedly had to be brought into headquarters for periods of moral rehabilitation. Some such periods culminated in pulpit pronouncements by Blackwell (somewhat akin to those of Jimmy Swaggart) that he had finally repented and learned his lesson.

Another former WCG minister who commented to me about Blackwell's reputation is David Robinson. He recalled how, in the fall of 1971, WCG minister Don Wineinger confessed how he had obtained a quick promotion to the rank of preaching elder. Wineinger said he became aware of Blackwell's double lifestyle and threatened Blackwell with exposure if he wasn't raised up a notch in rank. Within days, Blackwell had Wineinger ordained a preaching elder. I would have liked to have verified this information with Wineinger. Unfortunately, Wineinger committed suicide in 1978 after murdering his wife at a Spokane, Washington divorce lawyer's office. As for Blackwell, my letters to him, asking for an interview, were never answered.

The Women in Tkach's Life

In 1966 Tkach, along with his family, was brought to Pasadena for what was to have been only one year of study at Ambassador College. While in Pasadena, however, his wife's mental condition continued to deteriorate to where she proved an embarrassment to the image-conscious leaders of the WCG. Because of her often bizarre conduct, Tkach's superiors felt he could not be sent back to "the field." And so Tkach became stranded in Pasadena, working only as a local elder, doing nothing but giving sermonettes and visiting members.

Because of his wife's condition, friends say, Tkach was deprived of a normal marital love life. For female companionship he was forced to look elsewhere. He didn't have to look far, however. The WCG has always had its share of ministers' groupies - lonely females romantically attracted to authoritative "men of the Word." And so it was with Tkach. Even in his first year in Pasadena, one passionate young woman followed him from Chicago to enroll at Ambassador College just to be close to him. So inflamed were the young woman's passions, Herbert W. Armstrong became convinced she was demon possessed. One minister recounted to me how Armstrong attempted to cast out the woman's Tkach-love demon, but, alas, no amount of spiritual coercion from HWA could do the job. In the end, the young woman was expelled from the college and sent back to Chicago.

The college girl was by no means the last female to be aroused by Tkach's charms. One former church employee of the early '70s wrote me:

My recollections of Joe when I knew him are not favorable to him. I was concerned for his heart because he drank so much coffee every morning, sitting in our CAD [Church Administration Dept.] office talking to Mr. Cole's secretary. One morning I came to work an hour early and discovered Mr. Tkach had left a gigantic bottle of champagne on [Miss X]'s desk. Being a naive individual, I couldn't put it together. [Minister] Fred Coulter later remarked to me: "Didn't you know Mr. Tkach is having an affair with Mr. Cole's secretary?" Then it all made sense. Mr. Tkach had an invalid wife and was very friendly with women, too friendly. I hope he has repented of his problem. According to Mr. Cole, you can never accuse someone of adultery unless you were in bed with them.<sup>54</sup> But in this case, there was an appearance of evil, even if they didn't go all the way. I can just imagine how my wife would feel if I gave my secretary a big bottle of champagne!

I was able to locate Miss X; I wrote her and left messages on her phone answering machine. To my requests for an interview I never received an answer. A friend of hers said that although Miss X, in the past, admitted she tried to get Tkach in bed, Miss X claimed Tkach was "too self-righteous to do anything." Earl Timmons says, however, that Tkach's affair with Miss X was "hot and heavy." Timmons told me, "I used to let them use my house in the afternoons so they could be alone together."

Others have talked about Tkach frequenting Pasadena coffee shops and flirting with waitresses. One former church employee wrote me of how Tkach was frequently overly helpful to "church widows." In the last few years I have been told repeatedly of Tkach's relationships with a number of church secretaries. I wrote to three of them asking for an interview and, as usual, received no reply.

One of those women deserves special mention. "Mrs." Ellen Escat, a divorcee, is regularly quoted and shown in church publications.<sup>55</sup> When quoted, she is often describing Tkach's sermons in glowing terms. When shown or reported on, it is usually in regard to her accompanying Tkach to some important function. Described by one WCG insider as "a domineering woman prone to temper tantrums," Mrs. Escat is Tkach's top female assistant and, as such, has considerable influence in the WCG power structure.

Exactly how long Mrs. Escat has worked at WCG headquarters is not clear. But she first came to the attention of many headquarters church employees in early 1979 when, according to eyewitnesses, she and Joe Tkach were seen on numerous occasions holding hands in public and appearing romantic toward one another. When I mentioned these reports to one of Tkach's close friends, he tried to explain away such conduct as being due to Tkach having an affectionate nature. "But that's all it is," he said. We are to believe that Tkach, whose marriage is now in name only, has been leading the life of a "eunuch for the Kingdom" (Matt. 19:12).

Regarding Mrs. Escat, the question naturally arises: Where is Mr. Escat? A story told among top headquarters personnel is that in 1980, when Mr. Escat discovered the relationship his wife was having with Tkach, he angrily confronted Tkach and other top WCG leaders about the matter. In return for his pledge of silence, so the story goes, he was granted some type of beneficial arrangement.

As Mrs. Escat never responded to any of my letters, I decided to contact Mr. Escat. Although he was not listed in any phone directory, through a bit of detective work, I discovered Eugene Baptiste Escat Jr. was a retired businessman living alone on Pasadena's wealthy southwest side. I drove over to his home, noticed a for sale sign out front, and found Eugene working in his garage. He was a trim and well-dressed gentleman who appeared to be in his mid-fifties.

Eugene gave me a cordial greeting. But when I explained that I was with Ambassador Report, he became visibly nervous. Hoping to gain his cooperation, I gave him a few back issues of our publication. I then noticed a curious thing. In a nervous reaction, he rolled up the issues, as one would large building plans, and held them at chest height with both hands. As I talked about Tkach, his face contorted into a deep frown and his trembling hands began to squeeze and twist the rolled-up issues almost as though he was strangling the neck of a chicken.

Eugene then blurted out, "I've met Tkach. He's weak! Very weak! I can't believe he's in charge over there." He went on to say how he had also met with and had had business dealings with church attorney Stanley Rader. But when I pursued the matter, Eugene checked himself and said, "I better not say any more." He then hastily retreated into his home and bolted the door.

It's too bad we couldn't have talked further because I would have liked to have asked how it was that he achieved such a favorable divorce settlement with his ex-wife. In looking over the 1981 Escat divorce papers at the Pasadena court building, I noticed that even though the Escats were married for 12 years and even though California is a community property state with "no fault" divorce, Ellen came out of the marriage with little more than her personal belongings. Eugene, on the other hand, did very well indeed. He got their entire house (which he recently sold for $425,000), and he was not required to pay one penny of alimony.

Perhaps that's just as well. As one of the WCG's most important personnel, Ellen receives a generous salary from the WCG. And in 1987 Tkach had Ellen moved into a luxury condo almost directly across the street from his own church residence. Explained Tkach to one volunteer mover, "I want Ellen to be close to her work."

There are many church employees who condone Tkach's personal lifestyle because of his wife's affliction. Some even see a certain righteousness in the fact that, although most top WCG ministers feel it would be okay, Tkach has refused to divorce his wife and remarry. Some who know Tkach, however, are not convinced that his refusal to do so has been motivated by principle. One woman pointed out to me that by refusing to divorce his wife, Tkach has avoided alienating his three children.

Another woman, a former top secretary at church headquarters, told me, "Unfortunately, there are a lot of unfaithful husbands around who stay married just because it's part of their lecherous game plan. They will entice women with sad stories of how their marriages are on the rocks. But once they've had enough of the new woman, they'll say they want to be faithful to their wife again." The former church secretary told me how some years ago, when Tkach had been installed in a bigger office, he told her privately how the new office had a hidden bar. He then flirtatiously asked her if she'd like to see it and have a few drinks with him. She explained to me, "I told him absolutely not. I was married and he was married. But that didn't seem to make much difference to Joe."

It wouldn't have made any difference to most WCG employees, either. After all, virtually all top headquarters personnel privately acknowledge that church founder Herbert W. Armstrong had a ten-year ongoing sexual relationship with his youngest daughter.<sup>56</sup> Yet that didn't stop the WCG from revering Armstrong as "God's Apostle." In today's more liberal WCG, any revelations about the real Joseph W. Tkach will probably cause no impact whatsoever. The WCG's members are, after all, true believers.

[Part IV of this article will appear in the next issue of Ambassador Report.]

Footnotes

44. Some of Tkach's more strident critics point out how, during Jesus' earthly ministry, Judas was given an identical responsibility (Jn. 12:4-5, 13:29).

45. I attempted to get this claim verified by prison officials in Illinois, Michigan, and Indiana. They could find no record of Apostolos. Similarly, my private investigator in Chicago could find no mention of him in any Illinois criminal records. Nevertheless, two former WCG members who knew both Apostolos and Tkach in the early sixties say Apostolos was convicted of armed robbery and served a prison sentence in Indiana.

46. He wore a black shirt with white tie, kept his ugly bodyguard close by, and used the kind of self-evident lies and rough talk one would expect from a hood. Within a few weeks he was assassinated - quite probably by brighter Mafia associates who realized that flaunting one's underworld connections only brings greater scrutiny from law enforcement and the press.

47. Correction: In our last issue I wrote that Earl Timmons had been convicted of drug dealing and felon firearm possession. Since September I have discovered that that statement is not quite accurate. Earl Timmons was actually convicted of burglary in 1954. Affidavits in the criminal records archives of Los Angeles also contain allegations by former associates of Pappageorge that in the seventies Timmons illegally purchased and carried a handgun, used various aliases, and attempted to bribe friends into committing perjury. It should be noted, however, that those allegations all come from friends of Pappageorge, a man Timmons helped put in prison. Other than his 1954 burglary conviction, for which he received a five-year suspended sentence, it appears that Timmons has not been convicted of any felony.

It has been pointed out to me that the Earl Timmons convicted of drug dealing in Pasadena is properly James Earl Timmons. Although the Earl Timmons of WCG fame rarely uses his full name, it is properly Alvin Earl Timmons. The two Earl Timmonses should therefore be distinguished. Friends say Alvin Earl has been a respectable businessman for years and now avoids all contact with criminals. I hope that my error has not caused embarrassment to either Alvin Earl, or James Earl, Timmons.

48. Like "Apostolos," "Pappageorge" is a Greek name.

49. The court records are found in People v. Moran, et. al., files A309048 and HC204116 in the archives of Los Angeles County Superior Court.

50. One facet of the case that deserves brief mention is how many of those involved had colorful nicknames. Pappageorge was "Pappy." Three of Timmons' friends were "Tricky Ricky," "Bob the Bikeman," and "Val the Pullman." Timmons, himself, was called "Earl the Plumber" - on the surface an innocent enough designation considering he really was a plumber. Yet, some will recall how during the early seventies when Watergate was continuously in the news, "plumber" for a time took on a special connotation.

51. In one affidavit it is stated that in 1973 Hayward chose as a hold-up victim Walter Pudinski, then the Commissioner of the California Highway Patrol.

52. Tkach's belief that his wife is demon possessed may explain evangelist Waterhouse's comments about Tkach talking to demons and Tkach's own pulpit comments about taking phone calls from demons. ("After all, you never know when God will call.")

53. Thinking people will undoubtedly wonder why the church hierarchy feels compelled to resort to such demonic illogic to explain Mrs. Tkach's affliction. Most experts in the medical field view schizophrenia as essentially a biochemical imbalance of the brain (see N. C. Anderson, The Broken Brain, Harper and Row, 1985). And many types of schizophrenia are treatable with drugs. Some physicians even claim that some afflicted with the disease show marked improvement with megavitamin treatment. In other words, if Tkach simply accepted medical science's understanding of schizophrenia, his wife would be characterized as just ill - not demon possessed.

Openly adopting a scientific view on the matter, however, could cause problems for both Joe Senior and Joe Junior, the church's number two man. Most medical experts view schizophrenia as having a genetic connection. (See "Study Ties Schizophrenia to Genetic Flaw" in the Los Angeles Times, Nov. 10, 1989, p. 44.) In other words, a tendency toward schizophrenia is seen as transferable from parent to child. Should such information become well-known among the WCG's ministry and membership, many would begin to view much of Joe Jr.'s frequently questionable behavior in a new light. Further, many would begin to see Joe Sr.'s designation of Joe Jr. as his successor-to-be as truly the worst possible choice. It takes but little imagination to foresee the bizarre and tragic consequences that could ensue should the myrmidon character of the WCG's membership be left at the whim of a schizophrenic Pastor General.

54. If this indeed was Cole's view, he was wrong. In the centuries preceeding "no fault" divorce, thousands of divorces were granted in common-law jurisdictions around the world on grounds of adultery. In only a very small percentage of those cases were the offending mates ever actually caught in bed with their "correspondents."

Raymond Cole - whose speaking style has always reminded me of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's - is now the head of the Church of God Eternal (P.O. Box 775, Eugene, OR 97401), a church whose members take pride in having retained most of HWA's original teachings. I personally phoned Mr. Cole hoping to pry something out of him about Tkach, but it was quickly obvious I could not. I then very facetiously said how nice it was that Mr. Tkach had remained faithful to his ailing wife all these years. After a slight pause, Cole retorted (again in a tone reminiscent of MacArthur's), "I think you need to go back and do more research!"

55. In church publications Ellen Escat is often referred to as Mrs. Escat. See, for instance, The Worldwide News, Aug. 14, 1989, p. 1, column 5. The fact that Mrs. Escat is a divorced woman has, to my knowledge, never been revealed to the membership, as a whole.

56. See the April 1984 issue of Ambassador Report and Herbert Armstrong's Tangled Web by David Robinson (John Hadden Publishers, Tulsa, Oklahoma, 1980).

WCG Income Hits $201 Million - But Audit Raises Serious Questions

Throughout the fifties and sixties the WCG's membership shot up rapidly, while its income grew at roughly 25% per year. But since the media disclosures in the 1970s of financial mismanagement and sexual immorality committed by the WCG's top leaders, the church's income and membership growth have slowed considerably. The church's worldwide audited financial report for 1988, compiled by the prestigious accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co., reveals that church membership reached 92,000 baptized members at the end of 1988, which represents an annual increase of 4.1% per year over the last 5 years. (See The Worldwide News issues of Aug. 28, 1989, p. 8, and June 4, 1984, pp. 5-7.)

The recent Arthur Andersen audit reports that the church and its affiliated organizations garnered $201.3 million in support and revenue in 1988, up 4.6% over the 1987 figure, which means church income just about kept up with inflation. But church income had been growing at 8.8% compounded annually since 1983, so the 4.6% increase for 1988 may be indicative of a slowing trend in the church's income. Another barometer of a slowdown in church growth may be the fact that postage and shipping for church publications rose only 3.3%, indicating that requests for church publications are relatively flat. And remember, it's church literature that converts people into tithe-paying members.

Expenses for 1988 shot up to $199.8 million, up 10.9% over the previous year. The biggest contributory factor to this rise in expenses was due to a 12.3% increase in salaries, up from $65.9 million to $74 million. Professional and performing artists' fees for the Ambassador International Cultural Foundation were up a whopping 36% to $4.6 million, while travel expenses were up 14.7% to $6.6 million. Meanwhile, needy members received assistance of only $7.4 million, up a measly 4.9% over the 1987 figure.

But even though Arthur Andersen gives the church a clean bill of health by stating that the audited financial statements present fairly the combined financial position of the church and its affiliated organizations, this pronouncement should absolutely not be taken to mean that the church is spending its money in the manner expected by most of its unsophisticated members.

Let's take, for instance, the issue of how third tithe is spent. Members have been led to believe by numerous sermons and church publications that third tithe goes only to needy members. Yet our investigations over the years have shown that much of it has been diverted to the apostle's travel expenses, jet fuel, decorations for ministerial homes, and ministerial salaries. The financial statements show that $7.4 million was spent to assist needy members in 1988, but strangely the figure showing how much money was donated for third tithe is missing.

We decided to estimate how much third tithe was collected by the church in 1988. To figure out what percentage of the $187 million of contributions received in 1988 came from third tithe, we reasonably assumed a member would typically donate 14% of his income to the church for first tithe and offerings. Assuming a member would have an income of $10,000 a year, this would come to $1,400 per year. Next, we conservatively estimated he would give 15% of his second tithe, or $150 per year. And finally, since third tithe is given only 2 years out of every seven, he would give $1,000 two years out of every seven years or an average of $285.71 a year (2.85% of his income per year) for third tithe. If we take $285.71 given for third tithe and divide it by the total hypothetical yearly contribution of $1,835.71 ( $$1,400 + $150 + $285.71$ ), we see that about 15.56% of a member's donations should be for third tithe. If we further reasonably assume that only 75% of the church's contribution revenue of $187 million in 1988 came from members, we can deduce that the church took in at least $22 million in third tithe.

But the church paid out only $7.5 million in assistance to needy members in 1988 - not $22 million! Where did the rest of the money go? Did it go for the travel expenses of the top leaders? For partying with the rich and famous? For expensive furnishings in ministers' homes? We frankly don't know.

While the church was skimping on supporting its needy (thereby putting a greater burden on the relatives of members and on government services), it managed to purchase property and equipment of $17.6 million in 1988 and $17 million in 1987. Interestingly, another $725,000 was given to "certain" former employees on a "discretionary basis" in 1988. Why only "certain" former employees? Is hush money involved? Why aren't all employees given retirement, assuming some of this money is for retirement? Is former church attorney Stanley Rader being paid some of this money? These questions, unfortunately, are not addressed by Arthur Andersen's audited financial statements.

It is time that all WCG members ask their ministers these kinds of questions and demand some answers. And if answers aren't forthcoming, perhaps it is time all church members ask themselves: Am I being a faithful steward over what God has given me when I send my tithes and offerings to such an organization?

Members Detail Doctrinal Changes

Since our last issue, a number of current WCG members and some friends of members have written us stating that the WCG's evolution is proceeding at a much faster pace than even we had reported. Here are a few excerpts from those letters.

Thank you for the September AR. The material on JWT was most interesting. I'd like to comment on a couple of the things you brought up in that issue. First, the changing doctrines. You pointed out several that I had missed. I had noticed the renewed emphasis on Jesus Christ. This is also evidenced in the change in meaning of the Passover bread from symbolic of the sacrifice for physical sin to the symbolic taking into our lives of Jesus, the bread of life. Going along with this there has also been a greater emphasis on the need to be in union with Jesus, having Him live His life in us, although, as I pointed out before, it is unlikely that they will carry this concept to the ultimate (that God rules individuals through His Spirit). This would not be healthy for their concept of church government and power over the people, which I predict will not be changed. A very important change that you did not mention is clarification of the role of works in the Christian life. For years some ministers had said that although one receives eternal life by grace apart from works, one has to qualify for it by good works. An article under the authorship of JWT in the Worldwide News pointed out that this was so much doubletalk, and that qualification for eternal life is by faith. Works come in to determine the reward, or the position in the kingdom. This matter of qualification did not come from HWA, but HWA did contribute to the confusion by saying that works do not determine one's salvation, yet on other occasions he implied that they did. This kind of dichotomy is found in his book Mystery of the Ages. That book as well as all other HWA publications have been withdrawn from circulation for extensive rewriting to bring them into line with current doctrinal changes.

I found the letter about the Hebrew Calendar interesting, although I disagree with its writer that the arbitrary determination by Jewish authorities of some of its starting points and Feasts was unknown to the congregation. Many sermons were devoted to this subject, especially by Herman Hoeh. In addition, he pointed out that the order of the years with the intercalary months within the 19 year cycle was changed by the Jewish authorities in the 300s AD to bring the calendar back in line with the seasons. It is no secret that the calendar is not exact and has to be manipulated from time to time. In my opinion going by the Jewish version of the Hebrew calendar makes sense as it does avoid confusion. Some of the holy-day-observing churches do make these determinations for themselves, resulting in differences of a day or two from one to another congregation.

One more comment. In the WCG there have been several antipsychology sermons, one by Joe Jr. Where they are going with this remains to be seen.

-California

I am quite disappointed at the performance of the new "apostle"! I was naive enough to think that he would finally put the church "back on track." Now I wonder if there is a track. If there is, I don't think he can find it.

The enclosed article is about a local church building. Have you heard about the WCG wanting to build local church buildings? Is this a "Tkachism"?

Church Alters Plans

by Donna Carreiro

Love thy neighbor means a lot to [WCG minister] Ben Hofer, which is why he's not going to build a church on his property after neighbors objected. "Mr. Hofer didn't want his neighbors for enemies," Robert Vandenberghe, who opposed the church, said yesterday.

Vandenberghe told the Sun this week he was angry Hofer planned to build a Worldwide Church of God - with a 170-car parking lot - at St. Anne's Road and Forbes Road. "It would have attracted too much traffic to our area," Vandenberghe said. Although city councillors said there was nothing they could do to him, Hofer gave in to neighborhood pressure.

But Vandenberghe is not accepting his victory with grace. "Mr. Hofer should have consulted us to begin with," Vandenberghe said. "It was only through my fighting it all the way up the hill that he succumbed. I feel I worked for it."

City Coun. Al Golden disagreed. "It was very magnimonious [sic] of Mr. Hofer to change his plans like that," Golden said.

Have you heard about the $100,000 donations Mr. Tkach gave - $100,000 to the victims of Hurricane Hugo and $100,000 to the victims of the recent earthquake in northern California?

According to my mother, who still attends WCG, this announcement was made at the Feast of Tabernacles that she attended. Many folks were shocked and did not agree with the giving of the donations because of the "be apart from the world" doctrine. "Mr. Herbert Armstrong would never have done that," some said. Other folks thought the donations were a good idea: "Letting our light shine."

-Missouri

Another doctrine being allowed to simply peter out is the prohibition against interracial marriage. Long overdue, I'd say. Incidentally, they have to get rid of that old doctrine if they ever want to get Ambassador accredited. My WCG friend is directly involved in the issue, being of mixed race. He mentioned that they apparently allow mixed dating now. He, himself, dated a half Caucasian, half Japanese girl at the college two weeks ago with no flack. That's good, but I can see a lot of racially minded people leaving the church over that one, can't you?

Also, according to...the WCG isn't the only holder of "the Truth" anymore. In fact, "other churches may have truths that haven't been revealed to us yet" is a direct quote of... (as staunch a member as they come). I never heard that when I was in college. I think people still inside the WCG aren't realizing the massive ideological changes the church is undergoing. The deletion of the church eras doctrine in itself would have made old Herbie pop a few veins, don't you think? But if people would notice this, maybe they'd notice it's all a big petty game being played by whoever's in charge and looked to as "the Apostle."

-Recent AC Grad

A lot of members complain that all the doctrinal changes in WCG are making the church just like CGI [Garner Ted Armstrong's group in Tyler, Texas]. But really there is more going on here. You failed to notice how many of the changes have put the church in line with the teachings of Ernest Martin. And I have heard that Mr. Tkach used to study Martin's old Foundation writings, even though we were all taught it was a sin to do so.

-California

Last sabbath our minister (Rod Dean, Elkhart, Ind.) told us to purge our literature from the church. We are to throw away any old articles and booklets. He said we should just read current literature! Interesting. We are to forget the past. I wonder if this will eventually include HWA.

-Indiana

Ernest Martin, ASK, and the Tithing Dilemma

Of the more than 250 ministers who have left the WCG in the last two decades, none has had a greater impact on the WCG, itself, than Dr. Ernest L. Martin. Once the head of the Theology Department at Ambassador College and formerly the President of the Foundation for Biblical Research in Pasadena, California, Martin is now Director of the Academy for Scriptural Knowledge (ASK). Some months ago Martin moved the headquarters of his organization out of Southern California. The new address for Martin and ASK is: P.O. Box 25000, Portland, Oregon 97225-5000.

One of our readers, Bob Ellsworth, has brought to our attention the fact that Martin has rewritten his booklet The Tithing Fallacy and has produced a thought-provoking new study titled The Tithing Dilemma. We've seen a copy, and agree with Bob that The Tithing Dilemma completely debunks the WCG's triple tithe doctrine. Martin makes the assertion that "It is a sin for anyone today to pay a biblical tithe to any preacher, church or denomination and it is equally a sin for any ecclesiastical leader to receive tithes from any person." Many WCG members and friends of members will, undoubtedly, benefit from reading The Tithing Dilemma. We understand copies of the 52-page booklet are available (for a suggested donation of $5.00) by writing to ASK at their new Portland address.

Ministries That Can Help

The ministries listed below offer current or prospective WCG members special help in the form of literature (or cassette tapes) on religious topics relating to WCG teachings and/or have personnel familiar with the WCG. Appearance on the list should not imply that such organizations agree with everything AR publishes or that we agree with all of their teachings. Over the years, however, AR has received favorable comments about all of the following ministries:

Christian Research Institute, P.O. Box 500, San Juan Capistrano, CA 92693. This organization publishes Christian Research Journal, a magazine founded by Dr. Walter Martin, who, we are sad to report, recently passed away.

Christian Research Institute - Canada. 114-13th Ave N.W., Calgary, Alberta T2M OE2, Canada.

Apologetic Research Coalition, Box 168, Trenton, MI 48183.

Ralph Woodrow Evangelistic Association, P. O. Box 124, Riverside, CA 92502.

Robert E. Erickson Ministries, P.O. Box 1830, Indio, CA 92201.

Association for Christian Development (Kenneth Westby, Director), 4449 South Star Lake Road, Auburn, WA 98001 (new address).

Great Joy Publications, 12 Ballynahinch Road, Carryduff, Belfast BT8 8DN, Northern Ireland.

Steven M. Collins (author and publisher), 3901 Crescent Drive, Sioux Falls, SD 57106 (new address).

Focus on Truth (Richard A. Wiedenheft, Editor), P. Box 45, Lake Winola, PA 18625.

Sentinel Publications and The Southern Sentinel (Christopher J. Patton, Editor), P.O. Box 6241, Lakeland, FL 33807.

MacGregor Ministries, Box 73, Balfour, B.C. VOG 1CO, Canada.

World Insight magazine (Kenneth Storey, Editor), P.O. Box 35, Pasadena, CA 91102.

Concordant Publishing Concern (Jim Coram, Office Manager), 15570 W. Knochaven Dr., Canyon Country, CA 91351.

Reunion News (R. M. Kachere, Editor), 190, Tythe Barn Lane, Whitlocks End, Shirley, Solihull, West Midlands B90 1PF, England.

Watchman Fellowship (Phillip Arnn, Director of Reserch), P.O. Box 13251, Arlington, TX 76013. Their Watchman Expositor (Vol. 5, No. 5 for 1988) had a revealing interview with Garner Ted Armstrong, who had much to say about his father, HWA.

Kenneth Fischer, 1930-1989

We are very saddened to report that Kenneth Fischer, the President of the Foundation for Biblical Research (FBR) has passed away. A student at Ambassador College, Pasadena, during the late fifties, Ken worked for the Worldwide Church of God until 1974, when he joined with the newly formed FBR. Shortly afterward, Ken became the FBR's office manager, and in 1984 the Foundation's President.

Perhaps because of a serious hearing difficulty, Ken was not a charismatic speaker. But during the early eighties his research and writing skills developed to where he was turning out a major study almost every month. During the mid-seventies, when the FBR lost its previous director (Ernest L. Martin who went on to form the Academy for Scriptural Knowledge), the FBR's income dropped to where just keeping the Foundation in existence was an arduous task. Yet, almost single-handedly, Ken was able to put out an issue of the FBR Commentator every month and to personally answer the many letters he received from Bible students around the world.

About two years ago, Ken's health began to go steadily downhill. Then this past spring he was diagnosed as having "pulmonary interstitial fibrosis" - a scarred lung condition apparently caused 35 years ago when he regularly inhaled fiberglass dust while working in a paper factory. During the last few months of his life he was emaciated, bedridden, and weakened to where just reading or speaking a few sentences was exhausting. Yet, his faith in God remained strong. He died Nov. 4, only a few hours after telling his family he knew his time had come.

Ken was buried Nov. 7 at Mountain View Cemetery in Altadena. (His grave is only a short walk from Herbert Armstrong's.) The grave-side service, led by Gary Arvidson, Ken Storey, and Mike Fischer, was attended by family and close friends. Also attending were a few WCG employees and, in a gesture appreciated by the Fischer family, Herman L. Hoeh who brought condolences from the WCG's Pastor General.

Ken leaves behind his wife, Clara, five children, and many friends. All who knew him will remember his enthusiasm for the Bible. But we will all remember also his warm Christian outlook. Mary E. Jones, who worked for the FBR during the early eighties, said, "Ken was a good employer and a kind man. He loved life and he loved people. He had a genuine concern for everyone, no matter what their economic status or their level of faith. He will be missed by all of us."

* * * * *

As for the future of the FBR, its new president, C. Gary Reid, told us, "Ken's death is a real loss for all who've had a part in the FBR. We've now got to ask ourselves - where do we go from here?" Gary Reid says he will be in Pasadena in late December to meet with the rest of the FBR board to determine the FBR's future plans. Friends of the FBR who would like to offer their suggestions may write to Gary Reid (c/o General Delivery, Sandford, Ont. LOC IEO, Canada) or to board members Gary Arvidson, Howard Clark, and Gary Schultz (c/o Foundation for Biblical Research, P.O. Box 928, Pasadena, CA 91102). Those who would like to send condolences to the Fischer family may write to them in care of the FBR address.

Letters

My sincere thanks for your latest revelations about the current WCG chieftain, Joe Tkach. The Sept. 1989 AR is really more than that. It is a gripping study of the degeneration of human character and mass deception.

-Axel Hart, Australia

Thanks for the latest AR. I have read it with underlining pen in hand, and enjoyed all your observations. However, there is one problem. I have trouble reconciling a "not too bright" Tkach with the man who has managed to worm his way into the position of influence and power that he now holds. Perhaps Tkach isn't "book smart," but there must be little doubt that he is cagey - a survivor, indeed, an "overcomer" in the most crass sense of the word.

-Brenda Denzler, North Carolina

My husband and I love Ambassador Report! More importantly, we need it. When we were WCG members, we used to throw it out when it was sent to us, I suppose at someone's request. Being typically suspicious, we trashed them - what an incredible waste! How we wish we had those ARs back, but now we've gotten past editions through some ex-Worldwidiers in the area.

The WCG has always lacked something and we knew it. Just prior to my baptism, the older minister [a close friend of the Tkachs] who'd counseled me threatened to spank me if I didn't get baptized. Then some months later, during individual marriage counseling, he made a pass at me, claiming to be conducting a "project," which was to be kept confidential. Then he took me in his arms and kissed me on the lips hard. Then he had me picture a lewd scene (a nude woman tied to a tree - the rest is too embarrassing to mention).

He tried to get me to admit to something in regards to sexual behavior which I believe he admitted he himself was guilty of. By the way, he was particularly fascinated by pantyhose and had a few sexual theories regarding it. He was just a filthy old man! But I, at the time, did not think to question his weird behavior, being so "new in the faith."

The WCG almost destroyed our lives. I can't believe we allowed this organization to come in and swallow us up. The funny thing is, we're not alone, just one of many tragic, but now triumphant, cases that seem to follow a very similar format. Even the ministers are a lot alike in how they deal with their congregations.

-Ex-members from Wisconsin

Editor: Over the years we've been alarmed to learn how many top WCG ministers and officials have been unable to resist the temptation to experiment with adultery, homosexuality, incest, and/or other sexual perversions. For those WCG leaders who are unable, or unwilling, to tap the Almighty's help in overcoming their sexual obsessions, there is an organization that they might seek help from: Sexaholics Anonymous. This group has chapters all over the U.S. and Canada. Write to S.A., Box 300, Simi Valley, Calif. 93060 and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. All correspondence is strictly confidential.

Incidentally, aside from the spiritual and psychological reasons why the above "minister" should seek help, there is also a very practical reason why he should. Wisconsin is one of four states in the U.S. that makes it a felony for clergymen to sexually seduce or abuse church people who come to them for counselling.

My "ex" is at the Feast this week and showering my kids with gifts and good times while his child support is late and he owes me $500 for taxes which the government took out of my return (I don't think he even files). What a farce! Let me know if I can help anyone who is going through the agony of a mate joining the cult. Unfortunately, my situation ended in divorce mostly over many of the policies which have now been changed. Again, a joke! What a bunch of absent-minded hypocrites. I appreciate your efforts at exposing them and hope those efforts might prevent (or at least console) the crisis families go through because of "God's True Church."

-California

I praise the Lord I found an address to those who have come out of the Worldwide Church of God and know the truth of God.

My reason for writing, my brothers and sisters in the Lord, is we have a cult problem at [Sing Sing,] the prison that I am in. Many of the believers in Christ read Armstrong's The Plain Truth. I ask, do you have any tracks exposing Armstrongism and/or the WCG?.... Anything I could pass around would help. Please help, but pray first. Thank you for your time and cooperation.

According to the local minister, Pasadena is sending Mr. Vic Kubik [a WCG minister] to Russia four days after the feast. Pasadena has briefed him on how to talk to the Russians about the World Tomorrow and how to get it aired in Moscow. He is going to say that adults and teens need help with problems such as drugs and alcohol. Apparently it could mean a big jump in church literature going to the Russian people because their broadcasting stations cover large areas.

-AR Reader

I have just been made aware of your organization and would like to know how accurate your information is on the WCG. My husband has turned our house upside down in his new "religion" of HWA. Two of our three children are very bitter now on religion since his change. He seems out of control, irrational and brainwashed. This has been going on for three to four years now and two weeks ago he announced God leading him to HWA as a follower. He won't accept the fact it is a cult.

-Michigan

It has been a struggle since I left the WCG, but it has been worth it. I know now I made HWA and "the Church" my god and not God and the Lord. But we all make mistakes. I still write to one former member that you put me in touch with and she is a God-send. We need a lot of support when we leave and I got it from family and friends, but not from any of the supposed "loving" members of the WCG.

-Illinois

I've been very ill for nearly two years. I have a muscle disease, much pain and weakness. I'm hardly able to do what has to be done - cook, clean, etc. But does my pain stop my husband from going to the Feast or anything else they do? No! Now, my blood pressure and pulse are so faint, it's hard to find.

-Ohio

My wife has had Alzheimer's for about seven years and it's developing into the advanced stage, at age 59. We have Catholic friends who are more concerned about her health than two of her sisters who are presently with the WCG. To me this church is like a cult - only interested in what's going on in their own little circle. They must feel loving your neighbor doesn't apply if you aren't in their organization.

-Kansas

I have been a student of the Concordant Publishing Concern for the past eight years (since leaving WCG) and am very happy to be free from the bondage of the dictatorship of that [WCG] organization. But my wife is still a faithful member and unable to study or even talk about the Holy Scriptures with me. I miss having her fellowship in the Scriptures. We were together in the WCG 17 years. I am hoping and praying that sometime she will also see the truth about that so-called church and stop attending. But, I know only God can make it happen and I believe He has a purpose in its existence and that all things are out of Him.

-Washington

Thank you very much for exposing the monstrous evil covered up by Herbert Armstrong. Keep it up. I have been away from the WCG since 1986 and am just now realizing what it is that I had been a part of for 18 years.

My wife is in Worldwide and is divorcing me (apparently with the sanction of her minister). I was "put out" for questioning the competence of the church ministry in helping people with marital problems. For nine years I struggled to keep my marriage alive. After constantly going to them with my problems and being told to avoid "outside" professional help, I told them finally what I thought of their capabilities.

I'm fighting for my children against a woman who insists on staying on welfare yet refuses to allow me to take care of, or even visit, my own children....

While church members struggle to observe the [Mosaic] laws, stand up to threats to their economic life for obeying God, and struggle to make ends meet, Tkach and his ministers live in luxury and don't even pay tithes. They verbally abuse, berate and tell their flocks not to think. They have made it a sin to use the mind that God gave every one of us.

The last thing I was told before I left was that I had to obey everything, without question, whatever [our minister] spoke from the pulpit which was to be taken along with the Bible as unquestionable truth. And Mr. Armstrong's book Mystery of the Ages was to be as if it was part of the Bible - in spite of its racist and unbiblical ideas on "Israel."

Only late this year have I begun active deprogramming of my mind. I have read The Tangled Web and it has helped. People need the facts to truly evaluate someone's alleged "Work."

-California

I am very interested in continuing to receive your report. Having spent 25 years in WCG as a D&R case, I feel they have had a little something to do with my life being wasted. But I still want to hear what goes on with them.

-California

Editor: Previous to the mid-70s, the WCG taught that once a person married (in any church), no divorce was possible in God's eyes. Therefore any marriage after a divorce was considered void. In those days, one who joined Worldwide as a divorced and remarried person (a "D&R case") was required to separate from his or her mate (and children, if necessary) and live celibate. See Al Carrozzo's article "Home Breaking - Armstrong Style" in our 1977 issue. Since the 1970s the WCG has dropped its "D&R doctrine," but, unbelievably, has come up with new family destroying doctrines. More on that in a future issue.

We left the church in 1979, and not like others who were bitter and some we knew who took their own lives, it made us stronger Christians. How simple God's truth is when no one is between you and God.... Our only son, daughter-in-law, and granddaughter are still in WCG and have turned away from us. We never hear from them. We have written many times with no response so I don't write anymore. I just pray for them and hope that before it's too late, and we are gone, they will wake up to the truth.

-California

I just wish someone could find a way to open the eyes of those yet in this cult. I have several dear family members and other friends who will starve their families in order to be faithful and good tithing payers.

-Colorado

Editor: Tragically, there really are people who would allow their families to starve rather than disobey their church's dictates. The following Associated Press article appeared in many papers on Sept. 9, 1989:

Pair Convicted in Starvation Death of Son

A jury convicted an unemployed couple of third-degree murder Friday for starving their 14-year-old son during a six-week fast that the family endured while leaving nearly $4,000 for God and waiting for his help.

Larry and Leona Cottam, who are Seventh-day Adventists, held hands and showed no emotion as jury foreman Maria Uitti read the guilty verdicts before the packed Luzerne County [Pennsylvania] courtroom.

Eric Cottam died Jan. 3 after the family had not eaten since Nov. 22. The Cottams' 12-year-old daughter, Laura, recovered from malnourishment and is in foster care.

Besides third-degree murder, which required a jury finding of malice on the part of Cottam, 39, and his wife, 38, the couple were found guilty of reckless endangerment and endangering the welfare of children. The Cottams remained free on $50,000 bail each posted by an anonymous benefactor. No sentencing date has been set. The Cottams face a maximum of 28 years in prison.

Thank you for your dedication to making the truth known. It is truth that sets men free and I am sure that many WCG members have you to thank for helping them out of the bondage of false teachings. Keep up the good work.

-Alfred E. Sauer
Moundridge, Kansas

I was a WCG member for five years, left for a year, recently returned last fall. But, after receiving a copy of the AR and reading the AR of 1977, I've stopped attending. I never believed in the apostleship of HWA and when Mr. Joseph T. was made leader and proclaimed an apostle, this was about all I could take. I left shortly after seeing the members revere and worship the newly appointed "apostle," the church news boasting his every move, and Mr. Waterhouse preaching the Tkach gospel. I thank God for your report and look forward to any more issues or information you can send me.

-Illinois

I was a member of the WCG for years up until this past summer when I finally quit checking my brain at the door and checked out a few things. My daughter still attends Worldwide, but will tell me nothing. I have heard the church is in turmoil and I would like to keep abreast of what goes on.

-Oklahoma

Thanks again for the Report. As usual it was filled with information and very thought provoking. Time after time I intended to drop you a line and express my appreciation for all your effort and that of your staff, but for some reason never got around to it. Perhaps I didn't because dwelling on the WCG is painful. Having experienced AC at Bricket Wood and later having served in the [WCG] ministry, I am left with a deep appreciation of what might have been. Unfortunately, that ideal is positioned alongside the dismal failure we see today.

Your description of the "thug" mentality used to subjugate the members during Tkach's ascension to power was sickening. Where is the concern, love, if you will, of these pretenders in the ministry? You know many of them personally, just as I do. How can they even mention the word faith in a sermon without waves of remorse coming over them? Apparently there was a lot less there than met the eye when we knew them.

Gerald Waterhouse and his ability to find significance in the acts of those who pay him would be humorous if they were not such an affront to reality. I also am a Naval veteran and they would do well to get their facts straight, especially about the "apostle's" pugilistic encounters with the Marines. If this sounds a little indignant just let me mention that other ministers express the same disgust with seeing the flock pillaged and perverted.

It has come to my attention that considerable effort is being devoted to bring the "lost sheep" back into the fold. There is an old saying in the marketing world that "there's gold in them thar inactive accounts." Herbert W. would have understood that perfectly. They know where the money is! I proved, as did many others, that the root, the foundation, the bedrock, bottom line of the WCG in HWA's later years was money, period! Faith had long ago fled to higher ground.

In the AR you have a potent vehicle to help others - most of us are frustrated but have little leverage to change the situation. I will be looking forward to the next issue. Keep the cutting torch burning.

-Lawson O. Price
Johnson City, New York

From the Editor

My sincerest thanks to all those who have made this issue possible. We usually don't run pages of letters from readers who have been helped by the Report. Nevertheless, our mail clearly shows thousands continue to benefit from our work.

Finally, with the holiday season approaching, I wish to extend to all of the Report's readers my warmest season's greetings and my prayerful hope that all of you will have a prosperous, healthy, and spiritually fulfilling New Year.

---

Ambassador's Pasadena Campus Folds Up

In mid December, Joseph W. Tkach, the Pastor General of the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), announced that the Pasadena, California campus of Ambassador College would be phased out of operation and that the WCG's college program would be centered only at its Big Sandy, Texas campus. For the time being, however, the WCG still plans to keep its headquarters in Pasadena and use Ambassador Auditorium for the Ambassador Foundation's concert schedule. Rumors of the possible closing had circulated in church circles for weeks. But when Tkach's decision was finally announced, it still proved a major disappointment to most Ambassador students and church members who had taken pride in the beautiful Pasadena campus, which first opened in 1947.

Whether or not the WCG will ever again maintain any kind of college program in Pasadena remains to be seen. There has been some talk of using the Pasadena campus for a graduate school of theology that would offer "certificates" (not degrees), but those discussions have not yet materialized into an actual plan. In December there had been some hope that the Pasadena campus, could be used to at least teach a freshmen contingent of students. That plan, however, was quickly scuttled.

Tkach had hoped that most of the WCG's operations could remain in Pasadena. But WCG department heads informed him that by moving most of the Ambassador student body out of southern California and into the ranch land of east Texas, Worldwide's headquarters operations would be deprived of most of the cheap labor now provided by student workers. So Tkach then decided to move a good number of WCG and Plain Truth departments to Texas, along with the entire Ambassador student work force. Now, however, some department heads in Pasadena are wondering who will be doing the janitorial, gardening, and other lowly tasks currently being done by first-year student laborers.

Why Such Confusion?

The current confusion at Ambassador College comes as no surprise to the Report. In our large 1977 issue we published the thoroughly researched article "The Missing Dimension in Ambassador College - Accreditation" by Margaret D. Zola. The author detailed why Ambassador remained unaccredited after 30 years and what it needed to do to become accredited. Ambassador's administration in 1977 and those administrations since then obstinately refused to pay any heed to the accurate data, logical conclusions, and good sense contained in that article. As a result, for the last 13 years Ambassador College has remained nothing more than an unaccredited diploma mill.

Fortunately, in the last few years, anti-diploma-mill legislation has been passed in both California<sup>1</sup> and Texas.<sup>2</sup> In effect, the new laws make it impossible for an educational institution in those states to offer degrees unless that institution is accredited or has achieved a state-defined level of minimum qualifications essentially equal to those normally required by recognized accrediting associations.<sup>3</sup> To bring both the California and Texas campuses up to those minimum standards would require the expenditure of more church funds than Tkach finds acceptable.<sup>4</sup>

Tkach's plan, for now, is to turn the Big Sandy college (currently a two-year school) into a four-year college and, hopefully, to get it accredited. Toward that goal, Ambassador has purchased hundreds of acres of real estate in the Big Sandy area and has begun construction of a new college administration building.<sup>5</sup>

That Ambassador College will someday achieve accreditation should not be assumed. College founder Herbert W. Armstrong told the college's first students in the late '40s that full accreditation was not far off. Ambassador students in the '60s and '70s were told the same thing. Now the obstacles facing Tkach's accreditation plans are as formidable as ever. Some insiders have told the Report how a number of Pasadena faculty members have turned down Tkach's request that they move to Texas and how Ambassador is having difficulty recruiting qualified professors and instructors. Others have stated that the fundamental inadequacies that plagued Ambassador's accreditation efforts in the past all remain.

The organization that will determine whether or not Ambassador College gets accredited is the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. Ambassador alumni who may wish to provide the Southern Association with insights into Ambassador's strengths and weaknesses should write: The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Attn.: Dr. David Carter (Associate Executive Director of the Commission on Colleges), 1866 Southern Lane, Decatur, Georgia 30033-4097. The Association's phone number is: (404) 329-6500.

On Friday, May 18, the last commencement was held at Ambassador's Pasadena campus. As evangelist David Hulme told a reporter a few days earlier, "It's the end of an era." For the immediate future, church officials hope to lease some of Ambassador's classroom space to Pasadena City College." But as one WCG insider told us, "As soon as a wealthy buyer can be found, I think Mr. Tkach will sell off most of the campus."

Ambassador is not the only college that has run into trouble with the new law. The State Board of Education evaluation team has recommended that state approval be removed from the Institute for Creation Research in Santee (San Diego County), the only creation science school in the country offering Master's degrees. ## Joseph W. Tkach...

(Part IV)

by John Trechak

Is Tkach Really Russian?

Since the earliest years of Herbert W. Armstrong's ministry, doctrines concerning race and racial origins have played an important role in the WCG's theology. The WCG's views on Bible prophecy, for instance, are to a great extent built upon racial identity theories. And because HWA read Bible prophecy as indicating both a present and future special role for the "Israelite" peoples (whom he believed to be not just the Jews, but also the nations of northwestern Europe), it was once very common in Worldwide for ministers and members to attempt to find in their lineage ancestral connections to the peoples of northwestern Europe, especially those of the British Isles. That is undoubtedly one reason why older WCG members often express amazement at Pastor General Tkach's frequent references to his supposed Russian roots.

Not only does Tkach claim to be of Russian descent, but WCG publications, especially the Worldwide News (WN), in recent years have regularly played up persons, places, and things that are Russian. Apparently equating Russia with the U.S.S.R. (they are not equivalent), the WN's editors have reported how Soviet officials have visited Pasadena, how the WCG has sponsored tours by famous Soviet performers (WN, 6/13/88), how the WCG has sponsored tours by famous Soviet performers (WN, 6/13/88), how the WCG has financed a U.S. ballet company's tour of the U.S.S.R. (WN 8/22/88), how a 12-year-old daughter of an Australian WCG couple wrote a letter to President Gorbachev and was then able to meet the Soviet Ambassador to Australia (WN, 1/23/89), how a large group of WCG teenagers were given a WCG-financed tour of the Soviet Union (WN, 8/22/88), and how one Nevada WCG member translates Russian for official U.S. inspectors at U.S.S.R. nuclear test sites (WN, 2/6/89).

The WN has openly called for greater understanding of the U.S.S.R. (WN, 12/7/87, p. 2) and has even featured a front page photo of Tkach and Joe Locke, a Tkach aide, wearing Russian winter hats (WN, 2/15/88). Then when Russian cellist-conductor Mstislav Rostropovich came to Pasadena to receive an Ambassador Foundation award from Tkach, the WN (2/20/89) was quick to put the famed musician's words to Tkach on page one: "Thank you, my dear Russian brother."

Of course, AR is not criticizing the building of bridges between nations nor the recognition of the many achievements of the Russian people. Nevertheless, all of this new emphasis on Russia - mainly because Tkach claims to be Russian - is very, very silly. Why? Because Tkach is not of Russian descent!

As I pointed out in part one (see our March 1989 issue), Tkach was born in Chicago and his parents came to the U.S. from Czechoslovakia. Tkach's parents were, themselves, members of a minority ethnic group in that country. While often calling themselves Carpatho Russian, the people of northeastern Slovakia (the Presov Region, where Tkach's mother and father came from), southeastern Poland (the Lemkian Region), and Ruthenia (Subcarpathean Rus) are all essentially one ethnic group: the Carpatho-Rusyn, Rusnak, or Slavish people. Because of the Pan-Slavic movement and the influence of the Russian Orthodox Church in that mountainous region over the centuries, the Rusyns (especially those coming to America) have often thought of themselves as being Russian. But by looking at a map of eastern Europe one will quickly see that they are not really Russian. They are as ethnically distinct as the Welsh are from the English. Separating the Carpathian region of northeast Slovakia and the westernmost part of Russia proper is about 500 miles of the Ukraine. And just as the Latvians, Lithuanians, and Estonians are not true Russians, neither are the Ukrainians. And most certainly the Carpatho-Rusyns with their distinct geographical location, culture, and language, are not true Russians.

Some months ago I wrote a lengthy letter to Pastor General Tkach attempting to help him understand a bit of his own ethnic background. I even pointed out how some historians trace the origins of the Rusyn people to a Scandinavian tribe that settled in the area of Kiev in the ninth century A.D. (the so-called Normanist theory which ties that Scandinavian tribe to the Normans who conquered northwestern France and later England). Apparently my letter and the accompanying materials I sent made no impression for, I hear, Tkach is still saying he is Russian. Oh, well ....

Those who are interested in learning more about the Carpatho-Rusyn people will enjoy reading Our People: Carpatho-Rusyns and Their Descendants in North America by Professor Paul Robert Magocsi (Chairman of the Ukrainian Studies Dept. at the University of Toronto, Canada). This 175-page book is published by the Multicultural History Society of Ontario, sells for $20, and may be ordered from the Carpatho-Rusyn Research Center, 355 Delano Place, Fairview, New Jersey 07022. Be sure to also ask for a list of their other fine publications and for information about Carpatho-Rusyn American, the quarterly newsletter devoted to the study of Carpatho-Rusyn ethnic heritage.

Another book that will help researchers to understand Tkach is The Orthodox Church by Timothy Ware, published by Penguin (and Pelican) Books. Just as Herbert W. Armstrong's theology contained facets reflective of his childhood in the Quaker religion, some see in Tkach reflections of his childhood in the Russian Orthodox Church. Timothy Ware's book provides insights into both Tkach's religious past and the turbulent religious history of eastern Europe.

Helping Relatives and Friends Exit the WCG

by John Trechak

Ambassador Report frequently receives letters from individuals concerned about a relative or friend<sup>1</sup> who is about to join the Worldwide Church of God (WCG), or who has already joined and who is now exhibiting self-destructive behavior. Such behavior often includes excessive financial contributing (even to the point of giving away one's home), withdrawal from family and friends (even to the point of leaving for parts unknown), excessive secrecy, arrogance toward non-WCG people, and habitual lying. The concerned individual who writes us often will ask if there is something that can be done to influence the friend or relative into leaving the WCG.

We at AR are not psychologists or professional counselors, but after 14 years of publishing the Report, witnessing thousands exit the WCG, and helping many of those exiting along with their families, I believe we can offer a number of observations and suggestions that may be of help to those concerned about their Worldwide relatives or friends.

Maintaining Contact

First of all, it is difficult to help someone if lines of communication are not kept open. In our experience, communication with the WCG member often breaks down because the concerned individual is not fully aware of the true nature of the WCG and because misconceptions and resulting miscalculations will often cause the concerned individual to prematurely take steps that greatly harm whatever rapport he has with the Worldwider. Let me strongly suggest a number of "Do Nots."

(A) Do not overdramatize the WCG's problems. Even though the WCG is a destructive cult,<sup>2</sup> it is not the worst of the modern destructive cults. There are some cults, for instance, that openly advocate drug use, "free love," incest, prostitution, human sacrifice, devil worship, terrorism, etc. The WCG does not. This is important to keep in mind because portraying the WCG as worse than it really is will only help to put a gulf between you and the WCG member, and doing so will only reinforce a key WCG belief-that deep down everyone in "the world" is hostile to everyone in "God's True Church."

(B) Do not forget that in the U.S. and in most Western nations we have something called "freedom of religion." In the U.S., for instance, everyone has a right to believe any religious idea he or she chooses, no matter how illogical it may appear to everyone else. And with the exception of acts that are specifically prohibited by the law (such as using illegal narcotics in religious ceremonies), conduct based on religious belief is generally still protected, even if that conduct is self-destructive to the cultist (for example, quitting one's job and putting one's family on welfare in order to keep certain holy days). The point is this: All too often well meaning individuals, in an unsophisticated effort to help a WCG relative, show disrespect for the member's legal rights as a free citizen and thereby tear down the lines of communication they have with their friend. Helping the member then becomes far more difficult, if not impossible.

Two specific cases of this problem come to mind. Some years ago, I was contacted by a very distraught Jewish mother whose son had left the Jewish faith to join Worldwide and was contemplating marriage to a young woman also in the WCG. The mother's main concern was keeping her son Jewish, an understandable reaction from a Jewish mother. However, as she spoke to me it became increasingly obvious that the mother was completely oblivious to the fact that her son was an adult (albeit a young adult) with every legal right to choose his own religion. I was simply unable to convince her of that obvious fact, and she pursued her own obstinate course in dealing with her son. Her attitude only furthered the breakdown of communication between parent and child and pushed the son further into the WCG.

Coincidentally, not long afterward I was contacted by a Catholic mother who was in an identical predicament and who had exactly the same attitude as the Jewish mother. Again I was unable to persuade the mother to acknowledge that her son needed to be treated as an adult (even if he lacked the maturity of his parents). The Catholic mother pursued her own intolerant path and, not surprisingly, achieved the same negative outcome that the Jewish mother reaped - there was a giant gulf put between her and her son, with the son drawn ever further into the WCG.<sup>3</sup>

(C) Do not assume that there is some magical statistical formula as to what kind of people are attracted to the WCG. Those drawn to it come from all age groups, religions, philosophies, education levels, races, nationalities and walks of life. The WCG has even drawn a few college professors, lawyers, engineers, scientists, and corporation vice presidents. The majority of WCG members are generally hard working, lawabiding, and self-sacrificing (even if such sacrificing becomes directed only toward the WCG's mission).<sup>4</sup> The above caveat is important to keep in mind because too often those trying to help their WCG relative or friend will inadvertently or even maliciously characterize the WCG as composed entirely of worthless people. This is clearly not so. Any such negative characterization of the WCG's membership will be seen by the member as inaccurate and will only further reinforce the WCG teaching that it is the "One True Church" and "the world" is out to get them. Simplistic characterizations of the WCG are therefore self-defeating for the one trying to provide exit help.

(D) Do not assume that only a certain type of person ever exits the WCG. All types of people leave and often for very different reasons. However, it does seem that people who tend to be individualistic, intellectual, creative, and/or inquisitive do have a better chance of either leaving or, more likely, being thrown out.

(E) Finally, in regard to keeping lines of communication open, do not assume that the WCG member doesn't already have much of the information you wish to offer him. We have discovered that there are some - not many, and by no means a majority of - WCG members who know their church is filled with both doctrinal error and great corruption in its hierarchy. Yet, for whatever reason, that small group has made a conscious decision to remain in the WCG. Frankly, we have a number of such individuals on AR's mailing list. We not only respect their right to worship and fellowship with whomever they choose, but we also still consider them friends.

Affirmative Steps

At this juncture those who would like to help their relative or friend exit the WCG are probably thinking something like this: "Ok, I see the necessity of not disrespecting my relative's right to freedom of religion, and I see it's important not to make assumptions or unfounded accusations. But I love my relative, I believe the WCG is a destructive cult, I am convinced my relative's involvement with the WCG is hurting him and his family, and I feel morally obligated to take some kind of action. I agree that there are some things I should not do. But beyond simply keeping lines of communication open, aren't there some affirmative steps that are appropriate? Isn't there something I can do?"

The answer is yes. There are affirmative steps that can, and should, be taken to help someone who is becoming ensnared or is already ensnared in a cult.<sup>5</sup> But determining what should be done (proper strategy), when it should be done (proper timing), and how it should be done (proper execution) is not easy. That is simply because every human being is, in some ways, unique. Even in some of the most radical cults where zombie-like uniformness is mandated, every member is going to have an inner self with needs and desires somewhat different than anyone else in that cult. There is therefore no magic formula that will work 100% of the time in extricating members out of the WCG. Nevertheless, after 14 years of publishing AR, we have noticed that some methods work better than others.

Classic WCG Exit-Assistance Scenarios

Let me be specific. There are some Christians well versed in their Bible, who upon learning that a friend is enamored of Worldwide teaching, will sit down with their friend and attempt to rationally discuss Bible theology in an attempt to disentangle their friend from Worldwide teaching. Preliminarily, let me just point out that this approach often fails because either the one who sincerely believes he/she is "well-versed" in the Bible really isn't, or because the WCG invitee<sup>6</sup> actually knows more about the Bible than the one attempting to rescue his friend. But putting aside those problems, here is what we have noticed often happens. A knowledgeable Christian layman or minister counsels with the WCG invitee or member and fairly conclusively demonstrates that a number of WCG doctrines are in error. Very commonly the WCG member will respond like this:

Okay, so we are wrong on a few points, but we have been wrong before - on Pentecost, healing, birthdays, and other things - and we changed. That's because we have God's Spirit; no other church does. Even if we are wrong on almost everything, I don't care. This is God's Work and I am not going to take myself out from under God's authority and protection!

Believe it or not, that is exactly the rationalization used by thousands in the WCG.

Now, let's look at another weak, although not always ineffective, approach-attempting to show the WCG member that the WCG's leadership is corrupt. Typically the way this happens is that the caring individual will find out about Ambassador Report, will request and read a few copies, and will then ask the WCG invitee or member to read them also. If the friend is still in the invitee stage and has not gone too far along in the WCG's indoctrination program, there is a fairly good chance the invitee will see the danger ahead and will turn away from all involvement with the WCG. Sometimes, too, even WCG members of long-standing will read a few issues of AR and decide it is time to leave. This most often is the case where the member is having significant financial, marital, health, psychological, or employment problems and has come to the realization that the WCG has really not provided the answers to those problems and may even be a significant cause of the difficulties.

However, what about the staunch WCG member who is not having significant problems, or who, at least, is not aware that he is really in trouble? In the vast majority of such cases, simply handing the member copies of AR will do no good whatsoever. First of all, members are taught they must never read Ambassador Report, and many are taught they must even burn whatever copies they receive or turn them over to their supervising minister.

Nevertheless, even some staunch members are too curious to obey those standing orders and will read a few AR issues. What happens then? Very often the member will simply deny to himself the possibility that AR is truthful. He'll say, "It's all lies!"<sup>7</sup> Some, however, will sense that AR is telling the truth, Then what? Here is the kind of rationalization that most often follows (and let me emphasize, this kind of rationalization is very common):

Okay, the church has some problems at headquarters and maybe Mr. Tkach isn't perfect, but David wasn't perfect either.<sup>8</sup> We are not to judge.<sup>9</sup> Even if everything the Report says is true we still have God's Truth so I am not going to take myself out from under God's authority and protection!

The essence of the above argument is this: "We have the Truth so evidence that the church lacks the Holy Spirit (as shown by major corruption throughout the church hierarchy) is irrelevant to me." Notice that this argument is really the inverse of the previous scenario's argument, namely: "We show evidence of the Holy Spirit (good works, doing the Work of God, etc.) so not having all the Truth is irrelevant to me.

Now, over the years, we at AR have noticed a remarkable thing. If (1) a member is willing to listen because lines of communication have been maintained (and because of a search for answers to personal problems and/or because the member has retained some independence of thought) and (2) one can show that the WCG's hierarchy is corrupt and (3) one can show that the WCG has serious doctrinal errors, then, we have discovered, there is a very good possibility the member will be on his way out of the WCG.<sup>10</sup> The member may decide to leave then and there. More likely, however, he will begin asking questions openly in church circles. Before long, on some pretext (usually "you have a bad attitude," or "you lack respect for authority") the local minister will order the questioning member not to return to church and not to talk to other Worldwidens. The member will be out.<sup>11</sup>

In some cases, all three factors (willingness to listen plus awareness of doctrinal errors and political corruption) are present, yet the member remains in Worldwide. Sometimes the reason is obvious - a good paying job with Ambassador College or the church, or perhaps family ties. At other times the real motivations of the member are unknowable - at least to those of us at AR.

I hope that what I have discussed to this point illustrates some of the difficulties one can expect in attempting to assist a WCG member in exiting. Successfully assisting a friend or relative in exiting the WCG is not impossible but, as the above should demonstrate, it does require wisdom plus a proper mind set: "Be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves [Matt. 10:16]."

Getting Prepared Before You Act

Recall that the first major principle I gave above is that lines of communication must be maintained with the WCG member.

The second major principle in helping a Worldwider exit is this: Before you take affirmative steps to really intervene, you need to have an understanding of two important areas of information. You will need: (A) an understanding of what the WCG is all about in terms of teachings and practices, and (B) an understanding of what destructive cults are and how they operate.<sup>12</sup>

Let's discuss the first type of information needed - that concerning the WCG's teachings and practices. Obviously, how much of this type of information will be needed will depend on many factors. One important consideration is how long the friend has been involved with the WCG. The longer the friend has been in Worldwide, the more information about Worldwide you will most likely need. Unfortunately, most of us have limited resources. All of us have only so much time, money, and energy that we can devote to the problems of those we care about.<sup>13</sup> Nevertheless, let me suggest some minimums.

Besides the issue you are now reading (AR 44), I would strongly suggest that the individual planning an intervention read, at least, AR 30 (Dec. 1984), AR 41 (March 1989), AR 42 (Sept. 1989), and AR 43 (Dec. 1989). AR 45, when it is published, should also prove helpful.

Once those AR issues are digested, I would suggest that the would-be intervenor then watch a few World Tomorrow telecasts, carefully read a few issues of the Plain Truth, the Good News, a few WCG booklets, and perhaps a few parts of the WCG's Bible Correspondence Course - all with a critical eye.<sup>14</sup> You will notice that much of what the WCG preaches to the general public is fine.<sup>15</sup> In fact, there is much that is very commendable.<sup>16</sup> Your research will give you some idea of the kind of allure that the WCG possesses. (An educated and/or astute individual, however, will also notice the frequent use of fallacious reasoning and the pervasive oversimplification of just about everything.) Then compare the niceness of the WCG's public positions with the testimonials of former Worldwidars in AR and with your WCG friend's problems, and you will have a much clearer idea of what you are up against.

At this juncture in the concerned individual's research, it will be a rare person, indeed, who will not feel a bit overwhelmed. There are a number of reasons for this. First of all, the WCG is not just a branch of Christianity. It is radically different than mainstream Christianity. Second, its unique doctrines do not simply cover ritual and ethics, but cosmology, history, race, health, sociology, international politics, etc. - in other words, everything. There are few people educated sufficiently to take on all WCG teachings in any kind of spontaneous debate. And frankly, I would not recommend that approach with regard to helping your WCG friend.

What about seeking the advice and counsel of respected clergymen? Of course that is something to be considered. Unfortunately, we have found over the years that most clergymen, even theology professors, are ill-informed about the WCG. If you do find one who is knowledgeable about the WCG, he may prove invaluable in assisting you to understand the WCG. Certain religious organizations may also be able to help to some degree. In the past, we have recommended that readers write to various organizations which have former WCG ministers or members on their staffs and who put out literature (or, at least, are able to offer advice) concerning WCG doctrines.<sup>17</sup> Many exit counsellors make similar suggestions and even recommend that the would-be intervenor carefully maintain files of all available publications of the target cult and publications by critics who are countering the cult's teachings.

While such diligent research may prove valuable when the time for active intervention finally arrives, it usually will prove very time consuming, especially if the would-be intervenor is not fairly well-educated in biblical theology. Additionally, even if the concerned individual has a fair amount of Bible knowledge and has the time to research and refute dozens of WCG doctrines, such effort will often prove fruitless because the research was directed at issues not central to the WCG members key problems.

Let me give a couple of examples. A relative joins the WCG and soon the rest of the family notices that, among other things, he will no longer eat ham or seafood. Some Bible students in the family will then embark on a Bible research fling to "prove" to the WCG member that the dietary laws of Leviticus were only ceremonial in nature, that the idea that "unclean meats" are unhealthy derived from rabbinical theorizing during the Middle Ages, that the Leviticus dietary laws never applied to Gentiles, and that the early Christian church never applied the majority of those dietary laws to Gentile converts. Now, whether or not such assertions are true is not what is important here. What is important is that the whole issue is not central to the WCG member's main problems! If the WCG member doesn't want to eat ham or seafood, why make it a big deal? Aside from the fact he'll probably be consuming less cholesterol and fat than the rest of his family, why not simply respect his wishes?

Christmas observance is another area where many create needless family strife. Because Worldwidars believe Christmas is really a disguised version of the ancient Saturnalia, they do not observe Christmas either as a religious holy day or as a secular holiday. Many non-Worldwidars take offense at this and will try to pressure their WCG relative into getting the Christmas spirit and may even attempt to refute the WCG's teaching on the subject.<sup>18</sup> But why? The WCG's teaching on Christmas is not central to the member's key problems!

What is central to the WCG member's problems (his psychological pain, social dysfunction, career derailment, family stress, and very likely his poverty) is not what days he worships on, what foods he avoids, what clothes he wears, or what holidays he prefers not to observe. What is central to the WCG member's problems is his having been psychologically coerced and subtly duped into a system of controlled behavior that encompasses the four key cult characteristics described in footnote number two: (1) isolation, (2) nonthinking, (3) absolute obedience, and (4) giving everything. If the concerned individual is going to do doctrinal research in preparation for an intervention (and I am convinced such research should be done), that research should center on those four cult characteristics.<sup>19</sup>

As for WCG organizational policies and practices (as opposed to theological doctrines) there are a very limited number of sources. I believe back issues of Ambassador Report will prove the most valuable, but the books by David Robinson and Marion McNair, as well as John Buchner's Armstrongism Bibliography, can be helpful.

Understanding the Destructive Cult Phenomenon

I explained above that before the concerned individual attempts an intervention, he needs to (A) understand the WCG's teachings and policies, and (B) understand what destructive cults are and how they operate. For years, I have emphasized the first point above. In recent months, however, I have come to believe that the second point - understanding the nature and methods of destructive cults in general - is equally important.

How then can the concerned individual obtain this needed understanding? To that question I respond with both bad news and good news. The bad news is that until the last ten years or so there really weren't too many books that even dealt specifically with the cult phenomenon. Those who wanted to get a handle on the problem had to spend considerable time locating and reading a variety of works (often quite technical) in the areas of behavioral psychology, group psychology, comparative religion, advertising techniques, symbology, semantics, logic, and fallacy. All of this took a lot of time - a lot more than most have been willing to invest, even for the dearest relative or friend.

Now for the good news. In the last two or three years a few really excellent books have appeared which deal very precisely with the cult phenomenon and which offer excellent guidance for those with relatives and friends ensnared by a cult. Let me recommend one of those books in particular: Combating Cult Mind Control by Steven Hassan.<sup>20</sup> I cannot recommend this book too highly. If you have a friend, relative, or loved one involved with the WCG (or some other destructive cult), or if you yourself were once a WCG member, buy this book, read it, and study it! The money and time you invest in it will come back to you many times over as a result.

Hassan's book contains so much information of value to the individual who wishes to help a WCG member that it is not practical for me to cover all the pertinent parts. (Amazingly, however, nowhere in the book is the WCG so much as even mentioned.<sup>21</sup>) Allow me, however, to briefly outline what his book covers.

Hassan begins with his own experience of getting duped into the Unification Church and shows what it was like to be a Moonie. As I read this portion of his book I not only found dozens of parallels to my own years in Worldwide, but I was astounded to see that our experiences were virtually 95% identical. Hassan then goes on to show how his parents were able to rescue him from the control of the Moonies in 1976. After a period of readjustment, he was able to continue his college education (he now has a Master's degree in counseling psychology), and during the last ten years has specialized in the exit counseling of cult members.<sup>22</sup>

Hassan then goes on in chapter three to show what destructive cults really are and their various types, how they recruit, why they are successful, and how they induce phobias in their members. Chapter four deals with "understanding mind control." This chapter has shocked a number of Ambassador grads, who, even though long out of Worldwide, did not realize how they had once been manipulated and how much negative WCG psychological baggage they still retained. Chapter five is on "cult psychology." Again, the reader will see the WCG's methods on virtually every page. Chapter six deals with how to protect oneself from the influence of cults, and there are many insights provided on how to analyze a cult's dynamics.

Chapter seven covers "exit counseling," Hassan's non-coercive system of helping friends and relatives leave a destructive cult. Hassan's methods (both in their overt and covert forms) are not to be confused with so-called "deprogramming," which is often illegal and has a number of negative psychological aspects, besides. Chapters eight and nine further amplify Hassan's methods, and chapter 10 covers "strategies for recovery." (Incidentally, I'm sure many exWorldwidiers could greatly benefit from reading this chapter. Our experience has shown that even some who have been out of the WCG for many years are still being adversely affected by what the WCG did to them psychologically.) Finally chapter 11 covers a number of interesting legal and sociological topics relating to the cult phenomenon.

Because he is a professional exit counselor, it is not surprising that Hassan encourages readers who wish to intervene in a relative's cult addiction problems to obtain professional help. I am well aware of the fact that probably a large majority of those reading this article will not be able to afford the kind of professional assistance Hassan recommends.<sup>23</sup> Nevertheless, even if financial resources are lacking, those hoping to help a friend or relative exit Worldwide should still study Hassan's book. In fact, the more inadequate the concerned individual's financial resources, the more time and energy needs to be spent in preparing for the intervention. For such individuals Combating Cult Mind Control will prove invaluable in planning the strategy, timing, and execution of an intervention.

There is Always Hope

As I have indicated above, there is no simple solution to the problem of how to help a friend or relative exit the WCG. But neither should the problem be viewed as hopeless. There are certain pitfalls that need to be avoided, but there are also positive steps that can, and should, be taken.

In a future issue I hope to amplify a number of points discussed only briefly in this article. In the meantime, I hope this short article will be of assistance to the many readers who continually write to us out of concern for WCG friends and loved ones.

Footnotes

1. In this article I use the terms "relative" and "friend" interchangeably. Either or both terms may also refer to a parent, child, or acquaintance of the concerned individual. I use the term "individual" or "concerned individual" to refer to the non-cultist attempting to help the cult member friend or relative. And, rather than use he/she throughout, I have opted for the traditional "he" to refer to both sexes. Obviously, however, females are just as susceptible as males to the influence of cults.

2. Since our 1976 issue (AR 1, see p. 36), we have used the word "cult" to describe a particular type of religious organization--one having four specific characteristics:

- (1) Isolation - the encouragement of separation (even if only psychologically) from nonmember family and friends.
- (2) Nonthinking - the condemnation of any substantial questioning of the leader's teachings.
- (3) Absolute obedience - the development of response patterns in the member whereby he obeys, without questioning, the orders of religious superiors.
- (4) Giving everything - the encouragement of members to excessively contribute money, homes, property, and time, even to the point of severely harming his family and himself.

The above definition is in line with the way the major news organizations use the word "cult" today. There are, however, some problems with the term. First of all, a glance at any dictionary will show that the word "cult" can and sometimes still does refer simply to a religion or a religious system, even if generally beneficial to its adherents and generally respected. In AR we do not use the term "cult" in such a broad way. Second, many religious groups use the word "cult" to refer to any religion with which their own doctrines disagree. For instance, many fundamentalist Christians would refer to the Sikh religion as a cult. Even though Sikhism is a cult in the sense of being a religion (so is Christianity) we, again, do not use the term in that simplistic sense. Finally, even among psychologists and sociologists there are a number of different formulas used in defining a "cult." Nevertheless, in comparing the various definitions used by experts with the four point definition we have used over the last 14 years, one will immediately see that the four-point definition captures the essence of what many experts are defining in somewhat different language.

Cult expert Steven Hassan prefers the term "destructive cult" over simply "cult." That may be a clarification of terminology we should adopt in the future.

For more details on the way the term "cult" is used by experts in the counseling fields, see J. Gordon Melton, Encyclopedic Handbook of Cults in America, Garland Publishing Inc., New York and London, 1986; and Rachel Andres and James R. Lane (eds.), Cults & Consequences, Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles, 1988.

3. As an aside, let me make one observation about young people, parents, and cults. I have seen repeatedly that young people will very often join a cult precisely because their parents do not want them to. In many cases it seems joining a cult can be part of the maturing process of leaving mother and father and becoming "independent" (even if that independence is only fictional). When that is the case, over-insistence by parents for continued obedience to them will often prove to be counter productive. Not only that, if parental insistence and protests are too strong, should the child join the cult, it becomes doubly difficult for the child to leave. For to do so the child will have to openly acknowledge by his leaving that Mom and Dad were right after all. It is my personal feeling that for many unhappy cult members, it is the unacceptability of "loosing face" with family and old friends or the fear of extreme humiliation - that keeps them from acknowledging the giant mistake of their cult membership and from leaving its influence. With that in mind, let me suggest that the concerned parent (or other concerned individual) should not be so openly hostile to the WCG that the child or friend will have to face unbearable humiliation should they later wake up and decide to leave.

4. Cult expert Steven Hassan states that the majority of destructive cults much prefer people with better work habits, social skills, and professional credentials rather than those who are physically or educationally handicapped because the former, being more productive, are able to give the cult more money and service, while the latter often require the cult's financial assistance. This is clearly so with the WCG.

5. There is a very strong parallel between the situation where a family is being hurt because a family member has become ensnared by a destructive cult and the situation where a family is being hurt because a family member has become seriously addicted to alcohol, drugs, or gambling. There is a wealth of published information available showing how families can deal with a family member beset by one of the latter addictions. It is only in the last few years, however, that psychologists have come up with plausible and systematic intervention models for the cult addiction or ensnarement problem.

6. I am using the term "invitee" to designate one who is not yet a member of the WCG, but who is reading WCG religious writings, is perhaps beginning to attend services, and is contemplating full membership in the WCG. Dissuading an invitee from joining the WCG is usually far easier than persuading a long-time member into leaving.

7. Those that kid themselves into believing AR is "all lies" seem to forget that the WCG has a large, powerful, and litigious legal department. And those lawyers have, in the past, leaned very hard on the press - even when the press was reporting on the WCG very conservatively. The Pasadena Star-News, for instance, is one paper that has been sued by the WCG in the past. It no longer does any expose-type reporting on the WCG.

The WCG's lawyers will take on just about anyone for just about any reason. In 1988, a Gerald D. Langenderfer began distributing flyers which equated Joseph Tkach with "the Anti-Messiah." The flyers contained a number of outrageous statements that would have led the average citizen to suspect its author was in need of a bit of sympathy, if not therapy. From the WCG he received neither. Instead, the WCG's lawyers immediately filed a complaint for damages and injunctive relief for invasion of privacy, civil harassment, trademark and servicemark infringement, tradename infringement, and defamation. Langenderfer, apparently too poor to even maintain a permanent residence, was unable to retain counsel and, in essence, lost very quickly by default to the WCG's legal team. He is now under a permanent injunction not to distribute the offending materials. My point is not that Mr. Langenderfer was correct in either his conclusions or in his methods. But the case (L.A. Superior Court case number C681878) demonstrates that the WCG is very quick to flex its legal muscle whenever it feels someone is hurting its reputation with the publication of even the most trivial of false information.

WCG members seem oblivious to the above. There is another curious fact about the members who believe AR to be "all lies." While a good many get angry with us for being "so evil," a very large number take a bizarre delight in feeling that AR articles are "persecution." Obviously, this is a nonsensical notion. AR is not burning down church buildings, nor lynching, shooting, or throwing stones at anyone. That would be persecution. We are only expressing our views and reporting the facts as best we see them. The expression of ideas, even when critical, in a free society's marketplace of ideas is what democracy is all about. Nevertheless, to many Worldwidars AR represents "persecution." The really odd thing, however, is that quite a few Worldwidars actually thrive on this so-called "persecution." Here is what one recent Ambassador graduate wrote me:

I'm sure you realize that for the WCG members, persecution is invigorating and even desirous, as it confirms their belief that they are Satan's main target, and it just makes them pray and study harder and send more money into HQ. I know, I was there. So were you.

Students of psychology will recall the chapters on religious masochism in Theodor Reik's classic work in psychoanalysis: Masochism in Modern Man (1941, now published in paperback by Pyramid Books under the title of Masochism in Sex and Society).

8. WCG members seem to forget that David was a bloody warrior and a king - not a priest, rabbi, or New Testament minister of the Gospel. Refer to I Timothy 3:1-7. Worldwidars also seem to forget that the editors of the Hebrew scriptures saw fit to leave David's most heinous sins in the record for scores of generations to read.

9. This WCG view derives from an out-of-context interpretation of Matt. 7: 1. For a clear understanding of what Jesus was getting at, keep reading (verses 2-5), then compare with the parallel account in Luke 6:37. For a clearer translation of Matt. 7:1-5 see the Charles B. Williams translation (The New Testament in the Language of the People). Finally, compare Matt. 7:1-5 with I Cor. 6:2-4 and Rev. 2:2.

10. Please note carefully that in making this observation I have not gone into any detail regarding when or how such an intervention should be done.

11. An important caveat needs to be made at this juncture. All too often individuals attempting to assist a relative out of the WCG assume they have solved all the member's major problems once the relative exits Worldwide. Unfortunately, that is all too often not the case. There are two major reasons for this: (1) The problems (emotional, family, psychological, etc.) that initially caused the relative to get interested in Worldwide may very well still be there. And (2) any extended membership in the WCG (or any other destructive cult, for that matter) tends to put onto the cultists even more problems (psychological, physiological, medical, financial, marital, etc.). For these two reasons it is not uncommon for ex-Worldwidars to experience great difficulty in adjusting to reality after exiting

Worldwide (this is true of those exiting almost all destructive cults). It is also not unusual for those exiting to go through a phenomenon psychologists call "floating" (slipping back into a cult-altered state of consciousness). Unfortunately, we have seen this occur all too often, with some former members returning to Worldwide or joining cults even more destructive than the WCG!

The solution appears to lie in some type of post-exit rehabilitation program involving family, clergy, and/or psychologists trained in the cult phenomenon. If that is the case, there is a direct parallel to the rehabilitation programs advocated by physicians when dealing with drug addicts who have gone through "detox." For a thorough discussion of rehabilitation as it applies to former cultists, see Rachel Andres and James R. Lane (eds.) Cults & Consequences. This helpful book may be ordered for $14.95 by writing the Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles, 6505 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90048, or call (213) 852-1234.

12. Actually, there is another area of information that is important - knowledge about what the member or invitee is really like. I will assume that the concerned individual is close enough to the WCG friend or relative to have a fairly good idea. However, this is obviously a very big assumption. We often do not really "know" those very near and dear to us. I will not attempt to say more about this potential problem, however, as it is clearly one for those trained in psychology and counseling.

13. Not everyone, of course, is so constrained. In the last year, for instance, we have received letters from a number of highly educated individuals who, in preparation for intervening in a WCG relative's situation, have read a half dozen books on Armstrongism and then sent the Report a check for $150, requesting everything we ever published. Such thoroughness, while admirable, may be overkill for most individuals planning an intervention. On the other hand, we have found that that degree of study is often terrific therapy for the friend who has recently exited Worldwide and finds himself in a highly tense and confused state, attempting to find out what really happened to him and around him during his WCG years.

14. Notice carefully what I have italicized for emphasis: "with a critical eye." I stress those words because, in fact, when the would-be intervenor begins to study WCG publications there is a danger that if the materials are read passively the would-be intervenor can, like his friend, get sucked into the WCG mind set. It has happened. In fact, the same phenomenon happens with other cults as well. So if you are not fairly well-educated in theology, and in studying WCG materials you find yourself getting hooked, do yourself a big favor - contact a competent clergyman, theologian, or one of the organizations listed in footnote 17 and get a different perspective. Don't let overconfidence in your own intellect and education propel you down the same path of error previously taken by the one you are trying to help.

15. The would-be intervenor needs to understand the basic outline of the WCG indoctrination program. The World Tomorrow telecast is aimed at the general public and is almost never of a controversial nature. Most of the positions taken are very mainstream (condemnation of drugs, promiscuity, crime; concern about the environment, the arms race, and the breakdown of the modern family). The main underlying purpose of The World Tomorrow TV program is to continually get new subscribers for the free and also fairly noncontroversial Plain Truth magazine. The Plain Truth then leads the more religious-minded onto The Good News magazine, a more theologically oriented publication, and onto the WCG's doctrinal booklets. These, in turn, lead Bible students onto the WCG's Correspondence Course where the WCG's key doctrines are more openly expounded. Usually, by lesson seven the student is introduced to the WCG's tithing doctrine. If he swallows that one and starts tithing to Worldwide, it is usually not too long before he is invited to attend WCG Sabbath services. It is in church services (where tape recording by members is prohibited) and especially in personal counseling that the WCG promulgates its truly cultic doctrines: absolute obedience to the ministry, spying on fellow members, distrust of all WCG critics, disfellowshipping and "marking" of ex-member critics, divorce of mates too critical of Worldwide, the cursing by God of those who do not conform to the WCG's triple-tithe system, etc. In recent years, the WCG's legal advisors, fearing continued bad publicity and lawsuits, have advised the church's ministry not to put such cultic teachings in writing. Hence those doctrines which exemplify the WCG's use of mind control and which show the WCG's truly destructive nature are not easily found in the WCG's official publications or even in letters written by WCG officials.

16. AR agrees with many positions taken by the WCG in its Plain Truth magazine. There is often a lot of common sense in its articles on the breakdown of the modern family, the drug problem, the evils of the arms race, the deterioration of the world's environment, race relations problems, the horrors faced by many of our senior citizens, crime and violence in America, and the rank materialism of the Western world. To understand, however, how we at AR view some of those "good words" by the WCG, let me resurrect one of WCG founder Herbert W. Armstrong's favorite allegories. In putting down the teachings of some of the famous preachers of his day he would say in effect, "Take a glass of 100% pure water. It's natural, healthful, and life-sustaining. But if you add just a few drops of cyanide to the glass and drink it, the contents of that glass will kill you-even though 90% or more of what you drank was natural, healthful, and life-supporting." I personally can think of no better analogy for describing the WCG's doctrinal brew.

17. Among the organizations in this category are: Concordant Publishing Concern, World Insight magazine, Association for Christian Development, Focus on Truth, Academy for Scriptural Knowledge, and Reunion News. See AR 43 (our Dec. 1989 issue), pp. 7-8, for addresses and details.

Additionally, let me make a further recommendation. One individual who has helped thousands of Worldwidiers over the years (including the entire AR staff) is former WCG pastor and Ambassador College instructor Howard Clark. Although saddened by much of what he observed during his years at WCG headquarters, and although the WCG's hierarchy has turned their backs on him because of his criticisms of the WCG's leaders, Howard still says, "I never met a Worldwide Church of God member I didn't like."

Because Howard, a few years ago, suffered a severe heart attack which left him chronically weakened (on top of the afflictions he's borne from the Korean War), I am reluctant to give out his northern California mailing address for fear he'll be swamped with lengthy letters. However, Howard says he is always willing to talk to any Worldwide member or friend of a member who is having a problem. Howard Clark's phone number is: (707) 457-3147. Many WCG members having church-related problems or individuals who would like to help a relative exit the WCG will find that Howard's understanding, compassion, and knowledge of the WCG could be of great help.

18. Most fundamentalist Christians who attempt to refute the WCG teaching on Christmas find that the WCG has some pretty good arguments against its observance. Nevertheless, the very best counter to the WCG's position, I believe, came from the late Walter Martin of Christian Research Institute (P.O. Box 500, San Juan Capistrano, CA 92693).

19. I don't mean to suggest that the WCG's hundreds of doctrines are not of any significance. But the world-be intervenor normally has limited resources. By limiting doctrinal research to the central problem areas, the preparation phase for the intervenor becomes far more manageable.

There is another reason why I suggest limiting research mainly to the central cult issues. If the Worldwider can come to understand that he is in a destructive cult and he makes the decision to come out from that mind-control environment, he has a whole lifetime ahead of him in which he can pursue knowledge in the fields of theology, philosophy, psychology, history, etc. Once his mind is freed from the shackles of cult mind control he will be able to work on those doctrinal questions that may be affecting his life, but which are not central to his key problems.

In a future issue I hope to cover a number of scriptural passages relevant to the four major cult characteristics described in footnote two. Of course, those researching the subject now can begin with Strong's Concordance, Bible dictionaries, and other Bible helps, or may consult with clergymen who have some knowledge of the cult phenomenon.

20. Combatting Cult Mind Control by Steven Hassan (copyright 1988, 199 pages plus chapter notes and appendices) is published by Park Street Press, One Park Street, Rochester, VT 05767. It is distributed in the U.S. by Harper and Row and in Canada by Book Center, Inc. of Montreal. Most larger bookstores in the U.S. either carry the book or can order it for you. It may also be ordered over the phone by calling Harper and Row's toll-free book ordering number: 1-800-638-3030. Hassan's book, available only in hardback, sells for $16.95. If ordered directly from Harper and Row there is also a $1.50 mailing fee if one can wait four weeks for delivery or a $7.50 mailing fee if one wants express mail delivery. Those who cannot afford to purchase a copy should check with their local public or college library. If your library does not have a copy, talk to the head librarian, explain what Hassan's book is about, and ask them to order a copy.

21. I recently heard the funny story of one WCG member who started reading the Hassan book to learn more about what those crazy cults - not her own "True Church" - were all about. By the time she finished the book she came to see that she was in a destructive cult! She has since left the WCG. Let me say, however, I would not recommend that the concerned individual just give a copy of Hassan's book to the WCG friend expecting such dramatic results.

22. Bostonian Hassan has become recognized as an international expert on cults. He served as National Coordinator of FOCUS, a support and information network of former members of destructive cults. In 1979 he founded Ex-Moon, Inc., a support group composed of more than 400 former members of the Moon cult. For the last 12 years, he has lectured at dozens of colleges and universities, including Harvard, Yale, MIT, Johns Hopkins, Tufts, Oberlin, and the University of Pennsylvania. He has appeared on virtually all the major talk shows (Larry King, Oprah, Good Morning America, The Today Show, Geraldo, etc.). And he has been interviewed and quoted extensively in the press (see, for instance, the "Trends" section of Newsweek, Oct. 23, 1989).

23. Experienced exit counsellors usually require a three-day period of counselling with the cult member to assist him in making the initial break with the cult. Such counsellors usually charge a fee of $500 to $1000 per day plus expenses (airfare, food, and lodging). Additionally, many exit counsellors require the assistance of at least one former member of the cult. Such assistants often charge $200 to $300 per day plus expenses. Thus a three-day exit counselling program can easily run $3,000 to $5,000, and there is really no guarantee the exit counselling will be a success. On the other hand, even a mere five to ten years in the WCG can cost a member $20,000 to $100,000, or more, in contributions alone, not to mention the potential destruction of career, family, health, and mental well-being.

New Support Groups

Exiting the WCG, like exiting any other destructive cult, can be a stressful experience for the member and also for the member's family and friends. One of the best ways to alleviate some of that stress is by having friendly contact with people who have themselves gone through the WCG exiting experience. Such contact can provide insights into the kinds of problems the Worldwider can initially expect, information about sources of help (books, organizations, cult-aware psychologists, understanding clergy, etc.), encouragement that the Worldwider can eventually overcome cult mind control and personal problems, and, most important, understanding friends who are both willing to listen nonjudgmentally and to share their own experiences.

Although some of the WCG "spin-off" groups do provide satisfactory assistance to those who are comfortable with the teachings of those new groups (and a number are a big improvement over the WCG), we at AR have noticed that many in need of a support group are simply not comfortable turning to another religious organization for help. That is why we are very pleased that a number of nondenominational support groups composed of former members are springing up around the U.S.

One such support group that deserves special mention is "Help Net" of Merrill, Wisconsin. Composed of men and women who have exited the WCG in Wisconsin in recent years, "Help Net" is a nondenominational (although predominantly Christian) group that meets every two to four weeks for mutual support and provides assistance to those facing WCG exiting problems. The group recently wrote AR:

We are only too happy to talk to anyone who has a problem regarding the WCG: members who are considering leaving, family and friends of members, and even WCG members who wish to remain members, but wonder why some of us have left. We are willing to correspond with those in need of emotional support. We are willing to visit with WCG members and relatives. (We are not a wealthy group, but we are willing to drive, or fly, a few hundred miles occasionally for a visit if travel expenses can be provided.) Presently, our group is preparing several packets of information dealing with different WCG facets: doctrinal, historical, biographical (HWA, Tkach), and cult analysis materials. We are also compiling a bibliography of materials relating to Worldwide. We emphasize that it is only our desire to help those in trouble. We are not attempting to steer anyone toward any particular religion.

For information on our support group, send us a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope, along with a summary of your needs and situation. You will receive a personal reply along with a list of available information, Write to: HELP NET, P.O. Box 811, Merrill, Wisconsin 54452.

Another support group may soon be forming in the northern New Jersey area. One of our readers, Warren J. Carlson, wrote us:

I think there's a real need for some sort of support group for those of us who are suffering our own sort of PTSD after the WCG/AC experience. Like Vietnam veterans (of which I am one), we ex-WCGers are an isolated lot often with no one to share our unique experiences.

I would like to form a Worldwidewers Anonymous support group for ex-members in the northern New Jersey area who would be interested in getting together periodically to rehash and let loose old experiences which I know have had a profound influence on most of us. There is no one, other than ex-WCGers, who can completely understand the "Armstrong experience" without having lived through it. I learned this recently in trying to explain to someone untainted by WCG propaganda just exactly how one becomes a member of that church. He found it extremely hard to believe that one couldn't just walk into services when he/she felt like it, as, for instance, in the local Methodist Church with its "All Welcome" sign out front.

I have plenty of my own experiences to relate regarding the WCG "life." I was a member from 1970 until 1979 and attended AC (Pasadena) for a semester in 1976. I went back to a local state college and will receive a B.A. (Honors) in History this month, and at the ripe old age of 45!

Those ex-Worldwidewers in the New Jersey area who would like to get together should write me [Warren J. Carlson] at 67 Clark Street, Glen Ridge, NJ 07028.

Can Christians Be Demon-Possessed?

by John Buchner

If Herman Hoeh [a WCG evangelist] really teaches that a Christian (that is, one in whom the Spirit of God dwells) can also be indwelt by an evil spirit ("demon"), he is not far from the kind of teaching that is common among modern pentecostals.

A review of several books on the topic, in pentecostal bookstores, indicates a fairly high preoccupation with the spiritual dangers faced by Christians. Titles such as Conquering the Hosts of Hell, Pigs in the Parlor, The Adversary, and Demons Defeated represent the field of popular, somewhat neurotic ideas on the topic. Somewhat calmer in its approach, Dickason's recent Demon Possession and the Christian nevertheless proposes that true Christians can be "possessed." However, a more conservative range of opinion is found in Montgomery (ed.) Demon Possession.

The autobiographies of many religious (mostly pentecostal) leaders abound with tales of demonic onslaughts in their early ministry; Herbert Armstrong's case is no different. A more subtle form of "satanic influence" is recounted by a professor of psychiatry (Wilson, in Montgomery - above). He says that "there seems to be a pervasive personality influence that results in evil." Such people become "wolves in sheep's clothing," intruding into religious organizations for their own gain, while appearing normal. Occasional aberrations are tolerated, because the individuals have built up what is called "idiosyncratic credit." As long as these people give their followers what they want (and cult members are quite often complicit in their situation) their position is secure.

The psychiatric literature (an interesting source is Checkley's The Mask of Sanity) abounds with inexplicable behavior and mental disorders that lend themselves to supernatural explanation. However, it is beneficial to consider a number of possible ways in which "demonic" influence is effected. The notion of the existence of supernatural beings, identities with characteristics and personalities which attempt to colonize human beings, with evil intent, is rather oldfashioned. No one (let alone Christians) need fear such a "possession."

Any "demons" may well be unresolved conflicts in the human psyche, manifesting themselves in a number of perplexing (and sometimes distressing) ways. Manic-depressive illness is more common than admitted, and in extreme cases may be attended by bouts of hysteria followed by profound melancholia. The thought processes accompanying this condition may give rise to fantasies and paranoid states, and there are a host of complex psychological states that can dominate and adversely affect those predisposed to them.

An "evil spirit" is often thought of as an attitudinal disposition, especially in authoritarian regimes where the legitimacy of the elite and the system depends on unquestioning obedience from the followers. Therein lies the manipulative power of terms such as "demonism": all thoughts, feelings and actions that show independence in the face of church hierarchy are defined as being of malevolent supernatural origin (the oxymoron being that a "normal" member would not have these attitudes, so the attribution of spiritual intervention follows).

Normal people, however, experience a range of fluctuating emotional and mental states and are not absolutely consistent with their behavior, so it is necessary to accept that we all come under negative forces (mostly arising out of our own psyche) and are capable of having evil thoughts and of performing the most unfortunate and cruel acts. To the extent that we love less than we ought, disregard the needs of our neighbors, and shunt God into some irrelevant corner of our lives, we all are culpable of wickedness. Such a state (despite the fact that we are by faith saved and filled with Christ's righteousness) can be compared to the demonic personality.

Christians are not exempt from these stresses (which may arise from social and relational disorders), and it may be that people who are inclined toward religion evidence a fairly high tendency toward neurotic and delusional personalities. It is easier for such people to interpret "normal" psychological variation as spiritual oppression. It may just be a case of "self-fulfilling prophecies."

Arguably more important, and mostly overlooked by person-oriented religionists, is the "demonic" nature of the oppressive, demeaning, exploitative and inequitable social structures - and consequential relational disjunctures - that characterize our human society. The corrupting influence of power, wealth, status, and competition may be the real "demons" we need to confront and declare impotent through faith in the living Christ who conquered "the world," and through responsible participation in the affairs of mankind.

The "devil" must be exorcised from religion, perhaps more urgently, as he is the embodiment of all those wicked structures that keep in power the enemies of the Gospel's liberty and grind the weak and pitiful under their fascist heel. Those who speak most vehemently against the devil in their midst are often the most authoritarian and unspiritual merchandisers of religion. They exercise the "spirit of fear" that shrivels the love of many.

Within these parameters, there could be no more demonic organization with its elfin rulers than the Imposter Church in Pasadena. Hoeh could be right, but he would find it hard to accept that his whole company of "christians," from "apostle rank" to lowliest third-tither, inadvertently are deceived and "possessed of the devil." As long as that arrogant and oppressive system (the details of which have long been cataloged in AR's pages) exists and opposes the liberal Spirit of God, every deluded supporter is an enemy of Christ and is in Satan's bonds. Only the Gospel of Jesus Christ will save them.

A New Perspective on the Afterlife

by Robert L. Jackson*

Every time I read the section on new religious groups in Ambassador Report, I'm surprised at how many new church groups have been formed by former Worldwide Church of God (WCG) ministers and members. What amazes me the most, however, is that these ex-Worldwidiers, after being lied to and mentally abused for years by the WCG often opt for another religious group that is little more than a clone of the WCG as far as doctrine is concerned. Having worked with the WCG doctrinal committee and editorial department for years, I learned firsthand that the majority of the WCG's teachings are based on dubious research, specious reasoning, quoting scripture out of context, and just plain intellectual dishonesty, and over the last 14 years Ambassador Report has printed article after article exposing this. Yet a number of these new groups who have read the AR regularly still continue to cling to WCG teaching uncritically.

I can almost see these people look at me in disbelief, shake their heads, and say: "What do you expect us to do - go back and join a Catholic or Protestant church and adopt their beliefs, beliefs we rejected when we joined the WCG? Or are you suggesting we should explore different belief systems that offer non-Christian explanations about our purpose for being on this planet, how God is judging us, and what awaits us in the afterlife?"

A Unique Alternative

Ten years ago just after my wife miraculously recovered from cancer a close friend of mine gave me two books that gave us a totally different perspective on our purpose for life and what awaits us after this life. Those two books were entitled Life After Life and Reflections on Life After Life (both published by Bantam Books). The author, Dr. Raymond A. Moody Jr., received a Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Virginia and later returned to school and obtained an M.D.

Since leaving the WCG, I had sought to understand our purpose for existence and what happens when we die. I always felt the answers of many Christian denominations were inadequate. Some churches, for instance, stress that salvation depends on baptism by immersion and receiving the holy spirit. Others offer sprinkling as a form of baptism, infant baptism, or baptism for the dead, all apparently intended to ensure that you get to be in God's presence in the afterlife.

Dr. Moody's books offered me a totally new perspective on this subject. What Dr. Moody did was rediscover and document an experience that is widespread in the human condition. He called it the near-death experience (NDE). People who have an NDE appear to be at the brink of death or may even have been pronounced clinically dead from a heart failure, a bad accident, a drowning, etc. In general an NDE consists of a person leaving his or her body in spirit form and traveling through a tunnel or passageway to a world beyond that glows with love and understanding. In this realm the "dead" person meets dead friends and relatives bathed in glorious light and is guided through a life review by a Supreme Being, who sends the new arrival back again to live on earth.

Dr. Moody first heard of the NDE as a philosophy student at the University of Virginia. While working as a philosophy professor and later as a medical student, he began compiling case studies on NDEs. Today Dr. Moody has studied more than a thousand case histories of adults and children who have clinically reached the point of death and survived. He has devoted his entire psychiatric practice to counseling patients who have had NDEs.

But how common are these NDEs? Dr. Moody writes in his latest book The Light Beyond on page 6 that pollster George Gallup found that eight million adults in the U.S. have had some form of an NDE.

What Are Near-Death Experiences Like?

Dr. Moody derived nine descriptive traits that define the near-death experience, but he explains that not all people who undergo an NDE have all nine traits. One of the traits is a sense of being dead. The person may find himself floating above his body watching the physicians trying to revive him or he may pass through a wall into another room and observe what other people are saying. Later when he is revived, he can recount the details of what he saw and heard. A person having an NDE has a real sense of peace and painlessness and finds himself in a spirit body that some describe as a cloud of colors or an energy field.

At some point in the experience a tunnel or portal opens to the person, and the person is propelled through the dark space toward a brilliant light. Some people go up stairways instead of through a tunnel. Once through the tunnel, the person usually meets beings of light glowing with a beautiful luminescence that seems to permeate everything and fill the person with love. Some see beautiful pastoral scenes. One woman told Dr. Moody that she saw a meadow surrounded by plants, each with its own inner light. Occasionally people see cities of light that defy description in their grandeur. People communicate in telepathic ways that result in each person immediately understanding the other.

As the experience progresses, the person is drawn to a Supreme Being of Light who radiates total love and understanding. This Being takes the person on a total life review in which the person sees every action that he has ever done and the effect of that action on all the people in his life. The Being of Light helps him put the events of his life in perspective and points out that the two most important things in life are love and knowledge. Time is greatly compressed, and the experience is so pleasant that many become upset that they must return to their body on earth.

When I first describe an NDE to someone, he usually responds by saying that the NDE must be just a dream. But NDEers claim the experience is much more than a dream in that the experience transforms them. After the event NDEers say they no longer fear death - the obliteration of consciousness or self. One NDEer Dr. Moody spoke with was a fire and brimstone preacher who commonly told his congregation that "if they didn't believe the Bible in a certain way, they would be condemned to burn eternally." When the preacher went through his NDE, he said the Being of Light told him not to speak to his congregation like that anymore because it was making the lives of his congregation miserable, but the Being of Light did it in a nondemanding way. When the preacher returned to his pulpit, he offered a message of love, not fear, Dr. Moody recounts.

Upon their return, almost all NDEers say that love is the most important thing in life. Most find it the hallmark of happiness and fulfillment. They return from "death" with a sense that everything in the universe is connected and carry with them a newfound respect for knowledge. They become acutely sensitive to the immediate and long-term consequences of their actions. One sociology major told Dr. Moody:

The most important thing I learned from this experience was that I am responsible for everything I do. Excuses and avoidance were impossible when I was there with him reviewing my life.... I remember one particular incident in this review when, as a child, I yanked my little sister's Easter basket away from her, because there was a toy in it that I wanted. Yet in the review, I felt her feelings of disappointment and loss and rejection.... But when I was there in that review there was no covering up. I was the very people that I hurt, and I was the very people I helped to feel good.... It is a real challenge, every single day of my life, to know that when I die I am going to have to witness every single action of mine again, only this time actually feeling the effects I've had on others. (See pp. 46-47.)

In all my years in the Worldwide Church, I never heard such a clear and beautiful explanation of God's judgment. The WCG stressed gehenna fire, death, and three resurrections, one of which was to cast the evil people of the world into a lake of fire. While I can't prove the above passage by the sociology major is true, it does seem to reflect how you would expect an all-loving Supreme Being to treat his children.

NDEers Become More Spiritual, Less Religious

NDEers "tend to abandon religious doctrine purely for the sake of doctrine," Dr. Moody writes. One former seminary student reflected this attitude when he described his NDE to Dr. Moody:

My doctor told me I "died" during the surgery. But I told him that I came to life. I saw in that vision what a stuck-up ass I was with all that theory, looking down on everyone who wasn't a member of my denomination or didn't subscribe to the theological beliefs that I did. A lot of people I know are going to be surprised when they find out that the Lord isn't interested in theology. He seems to find some of it amusing, as a matter of fact, because he wasn't interested at all in anything about my denomination. He wanted to know what was in my heart, not my head.

You can guess after reading the above passage that proponents of the near-death experience might receive some opposition to their writings from conservative ministers who tend to very zealously protect their tithe-paying supporters against teachings contrary to their denomination. And sure enough there is opposition from them. Dr. Maurice Rawlings, M.D., writes in his book Beyond Death's Door (published by Bantam Books) that a person's initial encounter with the Being of Light could represent "merely a sorting ground. It could also represent a deceptively pleasant situation to imply security and sanctuary and to prevent a desire or need for changed lives. This could be a satanic deception according to Charles Ryrie, Billy Graham, Stephen Board and other Christian spokesmen who quote II Corinthians 11:14" (p. 70).

And on page 100 of his book, Dr. Rawlings, himself a staunch Christian, explains that many theologians take issue with the concept of universal forgiveness offered by the Being of Light to patients having "good" experiences, whether their lives were good or not or whether they were believers or not. Dr. Rawlings reminds his readers that Satan, seldom appearing in a bad light, is capable of appearing as an angel himself.

While there is no way to prove or disprove the theory that Satan is deceiving those who have an NDE, there is also the unprovable possibility that Satan is using these Christian-professing ministers to deceive people about the Supreme Being's true personality. Perhaps the Supreme Being is far more merciful and forgiving than these ministers have ever grasped, and perhaps this Being has an agenda for humankind that none of us have truly comprehended. I think you have to judge the NDEs on their own merit. Are people who have had an NDE becoming atheists, or are they more certain than ever that a Supreme Being exists? Are they more despondent after the experience, or do they have a new zest for living? Do they seek to be more loving and kind than ever, or do they dive into materialism?

While Dr. Moody's three books will help you answer the above questions, you should also read Dr. Kenneth Ring's much lengthier and more scholarly works titled Life at Death: A Scientific Investigation of the Near-Death Experience (published by Quill in 1982) and Heading Toward Omega: In Search of the Meaning of the Near-Death Experience (published by William Morrow & Co. in 1984). Dr. Ring is a professor of psychology at the University of Connecticut and president of the International Association for Near-Death Studies, the only organization devoted to the spread of information about the NDE to professionals and the lay public.

I found rereading my NDE books and writing this short article to be an exhilarating, emotionally moving experience. I hope all AR readers will pick up one of the NDE books I have mentioned. I guarantee you that reading such a book is a joyous and captivating experience - especially reading the dozens of personal accounts from those who cheated death and lived to tell about it. Another nice feature about the NDE concept is that it is not the product of any religious group. Therefore, reading about the NDE will not lead you to some weird cult that wants to clean out your pocketbook. Knowing about the NDE, however, may broaden your outlook on life and give you an inner peace of mind by offering you answers to questions on the afterlife unavailable from most churches.

Letters

I am a former member of the WCG. For almost a decade of my life, I found it a very depressing environment, a society in itself with rules, policies, and regulations that ruined most of our lives. I found myself depressed all the time. I was afraid to even counsel with anybody about it for fear of being reported to a minister. I guess I was supposed to smile and be a hypocrite. I found church services like a morning religious show. People there never seemed to get to know one another. Because everybody was suspicious of one another nobody trusted anybody. Was this God's church with so much fear and intimidation?...

I left because the minister in my area was beating up on the people and throwing them out like trash. I saw this, got scared, and left. WCG ministers don't seem to care for their people, other than for their property and money. There's no justice in that church.

-Canada

My son dropped out of college at the age of 19 and married a girl from the WCG. He has changed from a nice, proper young man to a rude, nasty person I don't know. He was in art and music. He no longer has any interest in such things. He and his wife have been married 2-1/2 years and now have a baby boy 15 months old. In the beginning I got close to the baby, but we had a disagreement and now they won't let me see the baby. I worry about him so much. They have moved and changed their phone to an unlisted number. I cannot tell you how much this hurts....

My son's father-in-law was also in the WCG. He died suddenly in his bedroom at home. My son was living there at the time. He found him dead and called me. I went over there and when I got there they were just taking the body out. One of the pastors from the WCG... was in the bedroom looking for a will. The body was not even out of the house yet. I could not believe my eyes....

The AR helps me a lot. When I read it I know I am not going crazy, that they have brainwashed my son, and he is not the son I used to know. I worry about him so much, but all I can do is pray for him that someday he will come back....

I used to show ARs to my son when his wife wasn't around. He acted like he was interested. But then he wouldn't talk about it in front of her. He seems to be afraid to let her know he read them.

-A Sad Mom in Ohio

Our only son and his wife became WCG members in 1970. Almost 20 years have gone by and things have not changed. In fact at this point and time it has become worse.

Although they live just 25 miles away, it has been a year since our son came by. His wife and two sons haven't been here for years. They treat us like we have the plague, don't answer our letters, ignore checks we send to the boys for Valentine's Day, Easter, and for good grades in school. They don't even cash them. I made the mistake of saying two presents we were giving the grandsons were like the Christmas gifts that we had given our two other grandsons (not in WCG). He refused to take them, making a scene which ended in him telling me to "shut up!" He would only take the presents after his father told him they were not Christmas gifts....

We are 71 and 67 years old and don't need this type of total disregard for our feelings by our son. We are of the Lutheran faith and feel that we are going to heaven. The WCG treats us like we are on the road to hell.

Through research, I came across your address in an article published in the Christian Herald, October 1988. The reason for my research is that my father has become involved with the Worldwide Church of God and has gone through some changes that frighten our family. All of the things mentioned in the Christian Herald article (diet, many holidays, etc.) are what he is delving heavily into at the moment. What is also frightening is their secretive meeting place and how when asked if we could come to a service my father hesitated and finally said we could only come for a visit. I confronted my father one night three weeks ago and told him I felt that he was being bamboozled by this group because a week prior to this he gave them $600. Of course, my comments did not go over too well. I told him I was afraid that the WCG would financially drain my parents. To make a long story short, I am afraid for my father and what will happen to our family.

My father has said that he would require proof that this organization is not on the up and up. He does not want to talk to a minister from another religion.

Please stop sending me your X-rated newsletters about the Worldwide Church of God. In the first place, I don't believe a word of it. In the second place, if every word were true it is not my concern. Neither Mr. Tkach nor any other human runs God's Church. Christ always has run it and always will. If those men at Headquarters are doing wrong, let Christ handle it. You are certainly not Christians to write such garbage. Have you no fear of God?

-Mrs. John Buckwald
Baltimore, Maryland

This is the second time someone has sent me your "report" that I did not want! The first time it was sent to my mother, who has absolutely nothing to do with the Church of God. After asking her a few times to make sure she didn't ask for it, I promptly BURNT IT TO ASHES!

Now, this time I'll probably do the same. You are wasting your time and effort to send something as your report to me.

Remember one thing, okay? If there is going to be any moving out of people in GOD'S CHURCH, GOD will do it! Not you or any human being. Not even Satan the Devil, unless God permits it, if you can even believe this.

You called me "friend" in your introduction letter. I respect that. But you are going about this report on your whole attitude [sic] the wrong way. But I probably can't make you see that, can I? Whatever does not include GOD WILL FAIL! I am sorry that the things you say about Joseph Tkach, in your research and opinion, are true. Or seem to you to be true. But I'm one who let's GOD JUDGE what will be done. Not some imperfect human, like the rest of us.

-[No name was given.]

P.S. I can't give you my name because it may be used against me. I'm trying to be as sincere, okay? However, if I receive any more copies of your report, I'll burn it and send back the ashes to you in an envelope. That is how serious I am about waiting for GOD TO JUDGE what should be done. It is truly sad that all you are doing, in my opinion whatever that is worth, is making people's lives miserable. The focus is not what GOD thinks, which WCG members should be thinking about. But the focus is to get personal and have personal vendettas. Why can't we all take a good, hard look at ourselves in the mirror for once? Just once?

P.P.S. It hurt God that someone would try to include my mother in something she knows nothing about. Just leave her out!

Editor: The above letter, postmarked Wisconsin, came to us unsigned and with no return address. If we were the ones sending him and his mother copies of AR (and we weren't, as far as I can tell), how could we take them off our mailing list? The information we presented on Tkach apparently seemed accurate to him, but he neither cares if it is nor indicates he plans to look into the matter for himself. He says he doesn't believe in "judging," but he judges the Report without even attempting to get all the facts. He seems to believe that if something needs to be done then we should just sit back and let God do it. If that is the case, then why is the WCG trying to do "God's Work"? Why not just let God do his own work? And what about HWA's old teaching that "God always works through human beings"? When HWA taught that did he mean God was unable to accomplish anything through anyone other than himself or Joe Tkach? I've noticed that the God in my Bible has the ability to work with, or through, any human being at any time he so desires. Doesn't there seem to be a tremendous disparity between the God we read of in the Bible and the God worshipped by the author of the above letter?

I have been out of WCG since 1985. My two daughters are still in the group. Recently, one of the WCG members called me and asked if I had any HWA tapes that I may have kept. She said all the WCG congregations have been instructed to destroy all of HWA's tapes. She said she felt that the church's history was being destroyed.

I told one of my daughters about it and she said that that member feels Joseph Tkach is being led by Satan and that the church is becoming the "lukewarm church."

Mr. Amos, a minister from the Columbus, Ohio church has decided he is one of the Two Witnesses and is starting a new group. Apparently, the member mentioned above is planning to become part of Mr. Amos' following.

-Ohio

Editor: Many WCG ministers privately teach that those who leave the church are inevitably put under a curse. Yet, our mail indicates that just the opposite is usually the case. Note the following example:

I was terminated from the WCG in 1974 at the age of 26 after 10 years in the membership. A low self-image during my childhood, I feel now, made the WCG and its message a self-depreciating structure of great attraction.

I finished high school in 1966 with an A+ average and near the top of the senior class. The WCG minister advised against a secular college and I was rejected from Ambassador three years in a row - which was humiliating and further devastating to my self-image. "Stay in the local church area, where you can do the most good," I was admonished. That I did, while pursuing a career in broadcasting.

When removed from the church for being too "creative," my life metamorphosed quickly over the next year. From writing, I soon was teaching speech and journalism in an area vocational school. At the age of 26 I entered an off-campus college program and completed my BA and MBA while teaching full-time.

In 1978, I began my own company, developing and duplicating audio and video sales and training programs. In 1986, I commenced studies toward a doctorate in business communications, which was finished in March 1988.

The years since my break with the WCG have been the most fruitful, fulfilling and exciting years of my life. It was as though a terrible burden had been lifted from my creative processes and my self-image has grown stronger year by year.

Looking back, the years in WCG have given me great insight into the functioning of my mind. Bitterness has now evaporated into appreciation for lessons learned. Life goes on.

In reading the material I have already received, I was able to get the story behind the story of the official WCG and filled in a lot of gaps. It reads like a drama performed in front of millions, with the uncanny ability of the WCG to suppress the facts of the actual events exposed. Thank you again for revealing what may be the biggest con ever perpetrated on sincere Christians on their journey for truth.

Thanks for the info. I guess it's a little morbid always wanting to go back to view the dead body. But on the other hand, it's nice to hear from others who proved there's life after WCG.

-Former WCG member, California

Thank you so much for all your efforts publishing the Report. AR was mainly responsible for getting my family and myself out of WCG. We were in 16 years.

Thank you! Thank you!

A Note From the Editor

One of the more difficult things about editing any periodical is having to decide what goes in and what stays out. That problem was particularly acute with this issue because in recent months we have received an unusually large amount of inside information, remarkable letters, and even articles dealing with the WCG. Unfortunately, not only are the Report's finances limited, but my time and the amount of time I can reasonably expect our volunteer staff to donate are also limited. (After all, we have to earn a living, and we have family responsibilities like everyone else.) Consequently, this issue represents only about one third of what I had hoped to publish.

I am going to try to complete another issue within two months. Hopefully we can then get out most of our backlog of information, articles, and letters. I hope those of you who believe in what we are doing will continue to support our efforts as you are able. The AR staff and I cannot do it alone. We need your help.

My thanks to all of you who helped make this issue possible.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR45 September 1990

Stressful Times Hit the WCG

Officially, the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) is not in a crisis. And the official portrait of WCG Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach continues to smile on the editorial page of his Plain Truth magazine. But even a fleeting review of the WCG's own publications for the last few months reveals that the WCG is going through stressful times. Not only is the WCG's income and influence in decline, but many members perceive their church as one being transformed into a spiritually limp and lukewarm version of what church founder Herbert W. Armstrong intended.

As reported in the June 4 issue of The Worldwide News (WN, the WCG's official newspaper), Ambassador College in Pasadena saw its fortieth and final commencement ceremony on May 18. Although many, including Dean of Students Greg Albrecht, were saddened to the point of being near tears, Tkach apparently saw the occasion in a more festive light. At the reception following graduation Tkach proposed a toast to the last Ambassador graduates of Pasadena and had 3,000 balloons released into the California sky. Tkach's attempt to make the day a happy experience for the campus' last graduating class was marred, however, when that evening's graduation ball was rudely interrupted. At about 10:30 p.m. a squadron of helicopters from the California Department of Agriculture buzzed the Pasadena campus spraying malathion, the toxic chemical pesticide being used to attack a local infestation of the Mediterranean fruit fly. As a result of the chemical bombardment, all of the food and refreshments being served outdoors at the ball had to be destroyed.

With the Pasadena campus of Ambassador College closed, the last remaining Ambassador campus is the one at Big Sandy, Texas. For most of the summer Ambassador employees were busy stripping the Pasadena campus of its books, desks, pianos, computers, and other moveable property for shipment to Texas. For the time being, Tkach is hoping to move much of the church's operations into the vacated buildings. For instance, the church's 24-member legal team, now renting office space on Lake Avenue in Pasadena, will soon be moving into what used to be the college's Fine Arts Building on Green Street (WN, May 7, p. 8). Nevertheless, such relocations appear to be only temporary.

Pasadena Property to Be Sold

Even though AR reported in March 1989 that Tkach intended to sell off the entire 70-acre Pasadena campus, until very recently WCG spokesmen flatly denied Tkach had any such plan. But then, on May 23, 1990, the Pasadena Star-News ran a front page article entitled "Real estate agent says Ambassador for sale." In it, real estate agent Ted Slaught of the Charles Dunn Co. of Los Angeles was quoted as saying it is "common knowledge" among community realtors that the WCG is going to sell its Pasadena properties. Slaught went on to detail how the property had been submitted to a number of domestic and foreign prospective buyers who had already made preliminary inspections of the campus. Ambassador spokesmen continued to claim that the campus was not being "listed" as for sale. But church spokesman Michael Snyder admitted to the Star-News that if the WCG received a "serious offer" it would be willing to sell all of its Pasadena real estate including Ambassador Auditorium (called the "House for God" years ago when contributions for its construction were being solicited). Finally, with WCG members asking a lot of embarrassing questions, Tkach was forced to admit (WN, June 4, p. 1) that he, indeed, did plan to sell off the entire Pasadena campus.

In actual fact, the WCG has already received a number of serious offers. One, by a group of Japanese businessmen, for $140 million was rejected by Tkach as too low. Tkach apparently is still hoping to get at least $200 million for the property. Most Pasadena-area realtors, however, say such a figure is unrealistic in today's rapidly deflating real estate market. But what a realistic figure would be is difficult to say. As recently as early 1989 an undeveloped three acres of land on the southeast corner of Orange Grove and Colorado boulevards in Pasadena was sold by a Pasadena Elks Lodge to Ramser Development for $11 million. Ramser intends to construct a $200 million luxury resort hotel on the property which is directly across Green Street from Ambassador College (Los Angeles Times, Real Estate section, Feb. 5, 1989). According to knowledgeable sources, Ambassador officials had made an $8 million bid on the same property only to lose out to Ramser.

Big Sandy Woes

With the Pasadena campus closed, Ambassador College educators are seemingly pinning all their hopes on the Big Sandy campus. But here, too, the WCG has run into big problems. As we reported in our last issue, Ambassador officials had hoped to see Big Sandy accredited within about one year. Now, however, Ambassador officials are privately saying that accreditation in the near future is unlikely. A policy change by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools has resulted in a rule requiring colleges requesting accreditation to perform an 18-month self study before the association will consider an application for accreditation. The problem AC faces is that the State of Texas is requiring all colleges to be fully accredited by July 1991 (WN, May 21, p. 8). If unaccredited by that date Ambassador College will be closed down by the State of Texas. Moving back to California would not be an option because California's new anti-diploma-mill law is as stringent as that of Texas. Had Ambassador not left Pasadena the State of California would have most likely closed the Pasadena campus by 1991. No wonder some college officials are speculating that AC may eventually have to move to another country (Granada? The Cayman Islands? Sri Lanka?) if it is going to survive at all.

Accreditation is not Ambassador's only problem. AC's administrators have been so disorganized of late they have been unable to complete publication of a college catalogue in time for the new school year. Some recent AC applicants were dissuaded from pursuing an AC education when they were informed that an Ambassador College catalogue would not be available for them until after they were accepted for admission and had arrived on campus.

Ambassador administrators have also been faced with delays in their construction program. One of our correspondents sent us the following:

Big Sandy, Texas - As construction of additional classroom and dormitory facilities on the Big Sandy campus of Ambassador College continued to fall behind schedule, college officials recently gave approval for the general contractor responsible for construction to begin working on Saturdays to meet the deadline set by the college. Until recently, the Worldwide Church of God, which owns and operates the college, had required construction to cease each Saturday, which the church observes as its Sabbath. The reason for the change in policy was the need to complete the classroom and dormitory buildings in time for the start of the new fall semester beginning in September.

Income: Negative Growth

The future of Ambassador College is but one of the many problems being faced by Tkach. Church income is way down. Church Treasurer Leroy Neff has confided to friends that he is very pessimistic about the WCG's financial future. Neff has reported that contributions to the church's building fund (for Big Sandy) "are low and even less than last year" (WN, March 19, p. 3); that the WCG's spring holy day offerings were down 10.6 percent compared to last year (WN, May 7, p. 3); that offerings at Pentecost were down 7.5 percent (WN, June 18, p. 8); and that overall WCG income for the first half of 1990 was down 0.4 percent. Wrote Neff, "It is probably the first time since the early or mid 1970s that we have completed the first half of the year with such a low figure" (WN, July 16, p. 3).

Not surprisingly, the WCG is having to cut back in many areas. A few examples: There is apparently no more World Tomorrow on radio anywhere (WN, June 18, pp. 1 and 4). The WCG has been forced to discontinue its telecast's toll-free WATS telephone service, a development Tkach somehow sees as "quite encouraging" (WN, May 7, p. 1). Tkach has taken the WCG's telecast completely off the air in Australia because: "The World Tomorrow is perceived [in Australia] as an American religious show, with accompanying negative attitudes, particularly in light of the American televangelist scandals. Audience levels [for The World Tomorrow] on Sunday morning are so low they are virtually immeasurable.... In addition, airing costs have spiralled to unacceptable levels..." (WN, May 7, p. 1).

Australia may not be the last area to be deprived of the WCG's telecasts. Tkach has stated: "I'm not saying we're thinking of doing away with television. But somewhere along the line - five or ten years from now - as television rates continue to escalate, we may be forced to" (WN, June 18, p. 1). Some insiders feel it will be a lot sooner than five years before Tkach takes the telecast completely off the air. Whether or not David Hulme, the WCG's leading broadcaster and media expert, will then decide to start his own television ministry remains unclear.

Plain Truth Cut Back

The Plain Truth (PT) magazine is another medium being cut back by Tkach (WN, June 18, p. 1). Actually, unknown to most WCG members, the PT's circulation has been quietly diminished a number of times in the last few years. One reason has been the ongoing campaign waged by many Christian groups and former WCG members to continually empty PT magazine racks of their contents thereby making the WCG's magazine rack campaign very expensive. We have heard of some regional groups which have repeatedly removed and destroyed thousands of PTs every week. We know of a number of Canadian groups who each claim to have removed over 25,000 PTs per year in a number of Canadian cities. And some anti-cult groups have even resorted to removing entire PT magazine racks.

We've heard of one ex-WCG member back east, for instance, who was so distraught over his many wasted years in Worldwide that he frequently suffered from insomnia. On such nights he would get into his pickup and drive about town looking for PT magazine racks emblazoned with the words "FREE-TAKE ONE." So he would take the whole rack, that is. He would repeat the process throughout the night until his pickup was completely filled with PT-loaded magazine racks. He would then head for the city dump. Only afterward was he able to go home and sleep peacefully.

No wonder the WCG now frequently bolts its magazine racks to the sidewalk without even asking permission from nearby store owners or city officials (Philadelphia Enquirer; May 6, 1987; p. 2-BJ). And in Britain, at least, the WCG is adding a threatening message to its racks:

Warning: The magazines on this stand are provided free of charge to all having a genuine wish to read them. Any persons removing the same for other than genuine reasons may commit an offense rendering themselves liable to prosecution.

We have even heard that the WCG's lawyers have sent threatening letters to individuals they have suspected of removing PTs for reasons they did not consider "genuine."

Incidentally, while we at AR can fully appreciate the strong feelings of many anti-WCG activists and while successful defenses might be raised in litigation over the kinds of anticult activities described above, we do not recommend or advocate such activities. The WCG has First Amendment rights like the rest of us; those rights should be respected. More important, we don't want to see well-meaning zealots embroiled in costly legal battles even if they eventually "win." Nevertheless, with all of that said, we have been told by sources privy to Plain Truth planning that the activities of many anti-cult activists are the main reason Tkach has decided to cut back the church's magazine rack program and the circulation of the Plain Truth magazine.

The Shifting Sands of WCG Doctrine

As reported in past issues of AR, since 1986 Tkach has changed numerous WCG doctrines. He has done flip-flops on healing and medicine, makeup, birthdays, church eras, and the nature of the true gospel. Many WCG members had hoped that the rate of WCG doctrinal change would have slowed by now. Nevertheless, Tkach has made it clear that many more changes are on the way.

In a bitter editorial in the WN (May 21, p. 1), Tkach, displaying the bullheadedness for which he is becoming famous, was emphatic that he is going full steam ahead with his (and his inner group's) agenda for changing the WCG. Without naming names, Tkach lashed out at "predatory prophets" who continue to criticize his deviations from the teachings of Herbert W. Armstrong. Openly stating that HWA was wrong about many things, "especially having to do with prophecy" (p. 6), Tkach attacked his critics with statements such as:

I am sorry to have to say it, but certain ones who were once among us have now set themselves up as special "prophets," or "watchmen" of the Church or the nation, using fiery language to proclaim that "This is the end!"... But these would-be prophets want to change God's love into a yoke of bondage. They want to lead the unsuspecting right back into the very errors that Jesus warned the ministry about in Matthew 20:25-28. They lust to be lords over God's people. They want to lure people into their web of power, authority and fear in order to exercise dominion over them, all promising bigger and better spiritual rewards.

The ministries that have openly criticized Tkach for deviating from HWA's teachings and then lying about it include: Triumph Prophetic Ministries (William F. Dankenbring, whose powerful writing in Prophecy Flash! newsletter continues to dismantle the Tkach facade brick by brick), Box 292, Altadena, CA 91003; The Church of God International (Garner Ted Armstrong, son of the WCG's founder), P.O. Box 2530, Tyler, TX 75710; The Faithful Word newsletter (which has caught Tkach in scores of lies), Box F-141, 323 S. Franklin Bldg., Chicago, IL 60606-7094; and The Philadelphia Trumpet (Gerald R. Flurry and John R. Amos, two ministers who recently exited the WCG and distribute Flurry's 83-page book Malachi's Message, a scripturally based critique of corruption at WCG headquarters), P.O. Box 1787, Edmond, OK 73083-1787. Ironically, while none of these four ministries seem to subject their followers to fear tactics, claims of extravagant spiritual rewards, or totalitarian yokes of bondage, such descriptions do perfectly fit the WCG!

Some current WCG members are not happy with the way Tkach is changing many of the doctrines taught by HWA. One couple, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Dervaes (P. O. Box 92322, Pasadena, CA 91109), have parked their sign-laden van near Ambassador College in Pasadena every Saturday for the last two years. Tkach saw to it that they were disfellowshipped.

Even more deplorable than Tkach's repeated mischaracterizations of competing ministries is his increasing willingness to legally harass those critical of the direction his new WCG is taking. Notice this excerpt from a recent letter put out by The Faithful Word group:

We took this issue to our mailing service, only to be told by a PRIVATE mailing service that they could not mail the FW any longer. It seems they had been traced down and harassed by attorneys from California and Chicago who represented a large church. They were apparently told the FW held "conflicting beliefs with a major religious organization" (whatever that is) and possibly even [committed] mail fraud!....

We are apparently just one more in a long line of "dissidents" who are finding that MONEY ANSWERS ALL THINGS! To those who can afford to retain large "litigation teams" in most of the major cities of the United States, reaching up to swat down "flies" like us (who still care about the TRUTH) is no more than a minor irritation!

Truth is not even an issue to these people! Money - income - is the ONLY issue! Income has become their only means to measure their righteousness. "Gain" has become their "Godliness." They glory in their (faithless) shame.

Other religious groups have similarly been harassed. For instance, Richard C. Nickels of "Giving and Sharing" (see below) was warned in a letter from WCG attorneys that he should no longer distribute copies of Herbert W. Armstrong's famous booklet 1975 in Prophecy. What possible legal basis the WCG could have for such a demand is unclear because in the 1960s many thousands of copies of the booklet were distributed without the copyright notice required by Sections 10 and 19 of the Copyright Act of 1909. The booklet should therefore be properly viewed as in the public domain. Nevertheless, Tkach clearly does not want it distributed.

Most WCG members are oblivious to the full extent of change Tkach intends for the WCG. But some idea of how extensive that change will be can be seen in a comment made by WCG PR man Michael A. Snyder in a February 1, 1989 letter to author Dr. Ruth Tucker. He wrote:

...Three years ago Joseph W. Tkach, the minister who succeeded Mr. Armstrong, instituted a wide-ranging review of all published literature, which is still underway (there are more than 100 published titles). Herbert Armstrong's book, Mystery of the Ages, has been pulled from circulation pending a doctrinal review and the book The United States and Britain in Prophecy has been reissued in a new revised edition.

Because the WCG's doctrines are expounded upon through its official publications and because each publication clarifies at least one or two major doctrines, the fact that "more than 100 published titles" are being reviewed would logically infer that at least 100 WCG doctrines are up for grabs. One WCG insider, however, has confided to AR that the number of WCG doctrines that need to be revised is closer to 300!

While some doctrines have been openly changed, many have been secretly modified. This has been accomplished by rewriting older articles by HWA and others while leaving their by-lines on the revised articles. A look at the copyright notices on many newly printed WCG books and articles is quite revealing. For instance, on the WCG reprint "How to Be an Overcomer" there now appears the following odd copyright notice: "Original text by Herbert W. Armstrong (1892-1986) & COPY; 1953 Worldwide Church of God" - not the standard form of notice. Obviously, many old articles - and doctrines - are being doctored.

Prophecies Useless?

Of the scores of doctrinal topics now in flux, prophecy seems to be particularly foggy to Tkach. While The World Tomorrow still devotes time to the subject and while letters by Tkach to his Plain Truth readers tout the WCG's understanding of Bible prophecy (see his May 1990 letter, for example), in private Tkach seems to be convinced the church is no longer in HWA's "gun lap." He has told friends Germany may not unite shortly, that a United States of Europe may be further off than anticipated, that a temple may not be built in Jerusalem, and that Christ's return may be far in the future (on the latter, see WN, April 23, p. 1). Other ministers at church headquarters seem similarly confused. Note what one recent Ambassador graduate wrote to AR:

I heard a tape by evangelist Ron Kelly a while back in which he made jokes about prophecy, and essentially (almost directly) admitted that "we" (students of Bible prophecy) know so very little about prophecy that it is almost useless to study it. You just wait until it happens, I guess, and then you find it in some obscure passage in Ruth or Obadiah or somewhere. If that's the case then what is the point of Gene Hogberg's "Worldwatch" in the WN? To state each month that which is obvious - that Europe is going to unite? Only an idiot would say it is not. My church friends in California are mesmerized by events in Europe, as if that is proof of Bible prophecy [being fulfilled]. My goodness, where does it say in the Bible that 12 nations (plus maybe three, four, or five more from the east) are supposed to form a new mega-market in which the U.S. (supposedly Manasseh) is irretractably intertwined, and four of whose members (Britain, France, Belgium, and the Netherlands) are "Israelite"?

Interracial Marriage

The significance (or lack thereof) of race and the way in which the world's races should interact is another doctrinal area undergoing sweeping changes in the WCG. Whereas HWA saw the Anglo-Saxon "race" as having a special past and future historical role, Tkach increasingly emphasizes the complete equality of all races. Whereas HWA was known to have refused to marry interracial couples, Tkach has stated that while his church is not trying to encourage interracial marriage, he now strictly prohibits ministers from refusing to marry a man and a woman because they are of different races (WN, July 30, p. 1).

As Tkach himself acknowledged (p. 5), the topic of interracial marriage is an emotionally charged one in WCG circles. Even in the Church of God International, once thought to be more "liberal" than the WCG, interracial couples have had difficulties being accepted by fellow church members and have even been denied marriage by some ministers. For instance in 1986 when CGI ministers refused to marry one CGI couple because he was white and she was black, the couple was forced to go to a Baptist minister to have their wedding performed.

The couple, now Mr. and Mrs. (C. A. and Doreen) Foland, left CGI to help found the Sabbath-keeping Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ, which is pastored by former WCG minister Ross May. The Folands have appeared on a number of talk shows and their personal trials have been documented in newspapers. Those interested in knowing more about their story or in hearing a tape they distribute called "Grace and Race," which deals with the difficulties inherent in interracial marriages, should write to Mr. C. A. Foland at 223 N. Lynn St., Indianapolis, IN 46222.

More Oxen, More Ditches

Some WCG members suspect that Tkach is in the process of watering down the WCG's Sabbath doctrine. Help Net (see AR44, p. 8) has speculated that the WCG's new emphasis on the "wave sheaf" and on Christ having risen to heaven on a Sunday (see WN, March 6, 1989, p. 5 and The Good News, May/June 1988) may be a precursor of greater tolerance for Sunday worship. Tkach's recent decision for construction to be done at Big Sandy on Sabbath days has further upset some members who feel working on the Sabbath is a direct violation of the fourth commandment and that this is another sign that their church is becoming lukewarm. The following letter from a Big Sandy WCG member is typical of a number we have received:

In July, Mr. Tkach flew in to give a sermon, right before leaving for Kenya. His sermon started with a question: "It's the Sabbath, it's winter, and your furnace just broke. Would God want you to fix it, or have your family be cold and suffer? No, he'd want you to fix it. It would be considered an ox in the ditch. Well, we here at the college also have an ox in the ditch. We will not be able to open classes this fall on schedule and that may cause problems with the accreditation program. It may be that we will have to ask the outside crews to start working on the Sabbath."

The very next Friday night after sundown men laying carpet were still at work. The following morning a local contractor, Scott Zhorne, and another builder, both WCG members, had full crews at work pouring concrete and doing other labor. Then just this week a subcontractor contacted a local independent contractor who is in Worldwide and asked if he would help on a big job that needed to be finished. When asked where and for how many days, the member was told it was for AC and it required working seven days a week until the job was completed. The member declined.

The first thing many at Big Sandy say about this is, "So what? They did it with the House for God [in Pasadena]. What's the big deal?" So I asked evangelist Ron Dart about this. He said [Sabbath work on the House for God] caused a great problem within the ministry. The conclusion reached was that DMJM [the firm building the House for God] had been given a contract with complete control from architect to the finished product. The church was not involved in any decisions such as hiring or firing of employees, deciding how the job was to be done, etc. The difference now is that the church and college are the contractors. They do the hiring and are working side by side with outside crews. Church personnel have been brought here to oversee projects (Jem Wendt, for instance, for air conditioning) and to supervise the crews who are really the "stranger that is within thy gates" [Ex. 20: 10, Deut. 5:14].

Since they announced in the Pastor General's Report last fall that you could own a McDonald's - just so long as you yourself don't work on the Sabbath - what does the Sabbath now mean?

Here at Big Sandy the church does have the control over hiring workers and deciding when work can be performed. They could have worked two consecutive shifts per day by stringing lights. There are plenty available from the oil field suppliers that can turn night into day. Working on seven Sabbaths will not help the college that much. But they have just relaxed one more of the fundamental doctrines of the church.

Recovering Gays Welcomed

Church teaching about homosexuality is another doctrinal area feeling Tkach's liberal touch. In the past, the WCG put out articles and booklets that not only condemned the "gay lifestyle," but did so in very blunt terms. Now, some claim, Tkach wants the WCG to avoid being abrasive on the topic. Some who have written the WCG's headquarters in the last six months asking what the church's position is on homosexuality say the church never even answered their letters. Apparently, the subject of homosexuality is undergoing doctrinal review.

More than a few WCG members have expressed surprise over a recent article that appeared in an official WCG publication with Tkach's full approval. "Hope for Homosexuals" by WCG minister Dennis Luker (The Good News, May/June 1990) reveals the WCG ministry's changing attitude toward gays. While still labeling homosexuality as a sin, gone is the kind of authoritative language that once described homosexuality as particularly loathsome. Luker quotes I Cor. 6:9-11 to show that homosexuality is no worse than other sins. He then writes (on p. 25):

God in past ages has called homosexuals into his Church, and he is doing so today!

The big question is, Will you as a member of God's Church have the love, compassion and understanding to accept these brethren and help them grow spiritually?

Some may feel that homosexuality is the worst of sins. But notice what Christ said in Matthew 11:23-24....

Luker goes on to explain how he has counselled many gays and how "Not all fit the description of Romans 1...." Most gays he's known, says Luker, were just "victims." They just didn't get enough love from their parents, he says. (It's interesting that while the WCG is ostensibly critical of modern psychology, Luker relies on behaviorist and Freudian concepts to explain away why gays are gay.) Luker then goes on to explain why those with AIDS are welcome at WCG services and quotes Tkach: "Let's not be so unduly terrified about this disease [AIDS] that we lose our Christian perspective about extending the right hand of fellowship to our own brethren."

Are homosexuality and AIDS really as widespread in WCG congregations around the country as Luker's article implies? "I don't think so," said one former WCG minister and Ambassador College instructor. "At least I don't think it's been that big a problem among the general membership. But I wonder now about Headquarters. Dennis' article reminds me of the kind that used to come out in church publications before scandals broke in the press - the kind of article that was used to prepare the members for the upcoming shock of revelations from the news media. Now they've got me wondering what is really going on down there in Pasadena."

Yes, a lot of us are wondering.

Ambassador Foundation Continues to Entertain the World's Wealthy

Ambassador College in Pasadena is gone, and The World Tomorrow may not have a tomorrow, but the Ambassador Foundation's 1990-91 concert-opera-ballet-entertainment season is in full swing. The Ambassador concert schedule, which is heavily subsidized by the WCG and provides thousands of free tickets to some of California's wealthiest music lovers, has become a mainstay of the Southern California cultural scene. The Foundation's 1990-91 season lineup includes:

At least five different symphony orchestras, including the Academy of St. Martin in the Fields with Sir Neville Marriner (recently honored with an award from Tkach); numerous opera stars, including June Anderson and Mirella Freni; more than a dozen great pianists, including Andre Watts and Ivo Pogorelich; violinists Pinchas Zukerman and Nidja Salerno-Sonnenberg; cellist Mstislav Rostropovich; flutist James Galway; the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra in 17 different programs; numerous chamber ensembles, including the Juilliard String Quartet; guitarists Julian Bream, Christopher Parkening, Manuel Barrueco, and the Romeros; numerous ensembles specializing in pre-Baroque music; the Koslov Youth Dance Ensemble of Moscow; actor William Windom (as Ernie Pyle); the Jose Greco (Spanish music and dance) Company; Opera A La Carte doing "The Pirates of Penzance"; the Vienna Choir Boys; the Pirin Bulgarian National Folk Ensemble; the New England Ragtime Ensemble; The Shanghai Acrobats and Imperial Warriors of the Peking Opera; Keith Brion and his Peerless Sousa Band; Ballet Folklorico Nacional de Chile; The Soviet Acrobatic Revue; The Canadian Brass; Cab Calloway, the Nicholas Brothers, and the Rhythm Kings; Jim and Jesse and the Virginia Boys; Chet Atkins; the David Grisman Quintet; jazz great Billy Taylor; singers Tony Martin and Barbara McNair; The Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra; Mel Torme and the McGuire Sisters; Larry Elgart and his Manhattan Swing Orchestra, the Modern Jazz Quartet; jazz guitarist Lee Ritenour; jazz saxophonist Scott Hamilton; and many, many more.

One Southern California music aficionado has called the Foundation's cultural program "an absolute delight, a veritable orgy of entertainment pleasure." Leading Southern California music critics have not always been as enthusiastic. For instance, see Martin Bernheimer's "Beckmesser Awards of 1988" (Los Angeles Times, Calendar section, Jan. 1, 1989) where the Foundation received his "Stretch-the-truth-in-advertising award," and Robert D. Thomas' column in the June 25, 1989 Pasadena Star-News in which the Foundation was accused of being "heavy on hyperbole." Nevertheless, Ambassador Auditorium is recognized as an acoustical gem (see "A Fabulous Hall" in the Los Angeles Times, San Gabriel section, Feb. 4, 1990), and many of the artists who perform there are unquestionably first rate. Those who would like a free color brochure describing the Foundation's 1990-91 season can obtain one by calling the Ambassador ticket office's toll-free number (which remains operational): 1-800-CONCERT.

THAI PRESENTATION — Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach presents a ceremonial gift to Abbot Phra Thepsopon of the Wat Thai (Thai Temple) in Los Angeles, Calif., April 26. The presentation was part of a ceremony commemorating the 100th-day anniversary of the death of Herbert W. Armstrong. (Photo by Raymond Epperson)

The above photo of Tkach paying his respects at an idol-filled Buddhist temple appeared in The Worldwide News, May 5, 1986. We know of not even one WCG member who questioned why Tkach would ever be at such a place.

While the Ambassador concert series remains very popular with Southern California's wealthiest music lovers, the Foundation has WCG-subsidized projects to assist the wealthy in other parts of the world, as well. A two-page Ambassador Foundation advertisement that appeared in the Los Angeles Times (Calendar section, Feb. 28, 1988) stated:

The Foundation has also provided major funding for: renovation of the Royal Opera House, Covent Gardens [London, England]; restoration of buildings of The Royal College of Music [London] and the construction of a new opera theatre; The Variety Club of Great Britain; [and] commissioning Sir Michael Tippett to compose a work for guitarist Julian Bream which received its world premiere at Ambassador Auditorium.

The WCG's income is dropping, but the Ambassador Foundation continues to spend vast sums on Tkach's whims. According to one of our journalist friends at the Times of London, one project in England, helping to build a replica of Shakespeare's Globe theatre, has received a Foundation commitment of one half million dollars. And that is but one overseas Foundation project.

Back in California, the Foundation has chosen a new spokesman for its television commercials. He is actor Patrick Stewart who plays the Captain of the Starship Enterprise on the new television show Star Trek: The Next Generation. In one of his commercials, the TV spaceman tells viewers to come to Ambassador Auditorium to "celebrate the greatness of the human experience." Patrick Stewart is a very fine actor, but what his Ambassador Foundation commercial has to do with what the Worldwide Church of God claims is its purpose - the spreading of the Gospel of Jesus Christ - is anybody's guess.

Is the WCG Becoming "New Age"?

AR frequently receives letters from readers who wonder if the WCG is becoming a "New Age" religion. A number of religious writers suspect that it is. Texe Marrs in his book Ravaged By the New Age - Satan's Plan to Destroy Our Kids (Living Truth Publishers, 1989) unequivocally classifies the WCG as a New Age cult. The Help Net group (P.O. Box 811, Merrill, WI 54452) points out how the WCG habitually uses New Age terminology such as "new world order," "human potential," etc. Phillip Arnn of the Watchman Examiner (P.O. Box 7681, Columbus, GA 31908) frequently writes about New Age movements and, while not actually calling the WCG a New Age group, has written that the WCG's "God Family" doctrine derives from Hinduism. Finally, Richard C. Nickels of Giving and Sharing indicates in his March, 1990 newsletter that the WCG now has many of the characteristics of a New Age organization.

According to some who have known him for over 40 years, Dr. Herman L. Hoeh, the WCG's most influential theologian, has been a lifelong student of Eastern religions. He apparently invited a Buddhist to speak at the WCG's Feast of Tabernacles two years ago and has traveled to the Orient to partake of Eastern philosophy. That may be so, but does that make the WCG a New Age church?

The term "New Age" does not really apply to any one well-defined movement, but to many movements, religions, and cults that often espouse doctrines that are incompatible with one another. Generally speaking, "New Age" is an umbrella term used to describe a large number of religious philosophies having their origins outside of the traditional Western Judeo-Christian heritage. New Age philosophies often include elements of Buddhism, Hinduism, Gnosticism, reincarnation, astrology, the human potential movement, the belief that man will become God, and the belief that an enlightened mankind will soon experience a new world order or "new age" of love, peace, and prosperity.

An analysis of what the New Age phenomenon is all about and a discussion of whether the WCG is really a part of it is beyond what we can cover in a newsletter. But for those who really are interested in the subject, we recommend the book Understanding the New Age by Russell Chandler (Word Publishing, 1988). According to the book's publishers, "The New Age is probably the most widespread and powerful phenomenon affecting our culture today.... Its pervasive philosophy influences sociology, theology, the physical sciences, medicine, anthropology, history, sports, and literature. In fact [Chandler] concludes, nothing is exempt - not even churches and synagogues. New Age ideas have percolated into major corporations, political action groups, schools, health clinics, and the military. With careful research and clear analysis the author explains the New Age perception of the human mind - crucial to understanding this 'hybrid mix of spiritual, social and political forces.'"

The WCG's New Spirit and Style

Many of the changes taking place within the WCG are quite substantive - doctrinal changes relating to prophecy, race, and sex, for instance. But there are also many smaller changes that of themselves may not appear to mean much, yet when taken as a whole indicate the WCG's new spirit and style.

Take, for instance, the Plain Truth's new ad campaign. In Harper's we recently saw the following headline in a PT ad:

"All men by nature desire to know."
-Aristotle, Philosopher-

"As we acquire more knowledge, things do not become more comprehensible but more mysterious."
-Albert Schweitzer, Philosopher-

What is going on here? Certainly Aristotle is worth reading (especially the Ethics and the Politics), but since when has the WCG become one of his fans? HWA used to condemn Aristotle's writings as constituting one of the underpinnings of Roman Catholicism.

As for Albert Schweitzer, the famous humanitarian, missionary, physician, organist, musicologist, and Christian theologian, his works are also worth reading. But since when has the theology of Schweitzer had much in common with that of HWA? Not surprisingly, a number of WCG old timers have expressed surprise over the Plain Truth's new ad campaign.

Some members have also been expressing surprise over some of the political alliances the WCG has been making of late. One example: On April 17, the United States Supreme Court decided one of the most important religious freedom cases heard by the Court in recent years. In Employment Division of Oregon vs. Smith, 494 US___, 108 L Ed 2d 876, 110 S Ct ___, the Court held that the Free Exercise Clause of the U.S. Constitution does not bar a state from prohibiting the use of the drug peyote in religious rites, nor does the clause bar a state from denying unemployment benefits to persons discharged for such drug use. The Court's decision drew harsh criticism not only from American Indian tribes who use the drug, but from many large religious denominations, as well. Nevertheless, on June 4, the Supreme Court, issued a one-line order denying a petition for a rehearing of the case. Among the many organizations that supported the petition for rehearing were the American Jewish Congress, the American Jewish Committee, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, the National Council of Churches, and the Worldwide Church of God (Los Angeles Times, Religion Section, June 9, p. F 13).

There was a time when the WCG was viewed as a fairly pacifistic organization. Some now wonder, however, if that is changing. In the last few years the security force at Ambassador-Pasadena has been beefed up considerably. It is difficult to drive near the Pasadena campus now, even on Saturdays, without seeing the church's hefty, black-uniformed officers circling the campus or patrolling blocks away in their squad cars complete with roof-mounted police search lights. No mere security men, these; all nine are either "sergeants," "lieutenants," or "captains" (according to the WN, March 5, p. 5).

Some Pasadena-area residents have complained how, while strolling near the campus, they have been stopped by Ambassador patrols and asked to identify themselves. Is that legal? From what the Pasadena Police Department tells us, apparently it is. Maintaining good relations with local police departments is, for Worldwide, probably a very smart thing to do. And in Big Sandy such is clearly the policy. The college there recently gave the Big Sandy Police Department a free car (WN, July 16, p. 8). Money can buy you security. (Is that what the Bible teaches?)

One of the things that money can clearly buy is state of the art technology. Ambassador College was recently nominated for a Computerworld Smithsonian Award for developing a computer system called "Swiftnet," which uses a personal computer-controlled telecommunication switch that allows people who work at home to communicate, via touch-tone telephone, with supervisors thousands of miles away (Los Angeles Times, San Gabriel section, June 17, p. 9 and Computerworld, June 4). A number of computer experts we talked to said they were uninformed about the full capabilities of the new technology. But one speculated that such a system could be utilized by Worldwide to put members to work at personal computers in their homes or to more closely monitor local church members' or ministers' activities.

Are You In a Cult?

Media Spotlight is a California-based Christian organization and newsletter that monitors the media from a Christian perspective and reports on what the media is pumping into the minds of Americans. In 1980 they published an outstanding special report by Albert James Dager on the traits most often found in aberrational Christian cults. The article asked 26 questions (listed below) to which an affirmative answer indicates a potential cult characteristic. Of the 26 characteristics often found in aberrational Christian cults, an astonishing 25 clearly apply to the WCG!

DOES THE CHURCH YOU BELONG TO:

(1) Have, at its head, a single person or group of persons who claim exclusive apostleship from God? (2) Believe itself to be the only true church? (3) Teach that all other Christian churches are part of the world system and are under the influence of Satan? (4) Operate in a secret or semi-secret manner, shunning outsiders except as they are invited by members? (Many times such organizations will seclude themselves in rural areas or, if in the city, will enclose their grounds with high walls, hedges, or iron fences and gates.) (5) Teach that no other church has the special revelation of God's purpose or working that they have? (6) Teach that you should not use your mind in an attempt to understand the deep spiritual truths that they impart, but you should learn to experience the "reality" of God or Jesus through techniques such as repetitious use of His name or some other procedure? (7) Tell you that you should not question what your leaders are telling you, but that you must trust them because they have been given a special position of authority or ministry from God? (8) Require or at least urge you with firmness to get into the flow of things through constant contact with your fellowship to the exclusion of all others with the exception of using only necessary contact with outsiders for the purpose of witnessing? (9) Teach you that should you leave their fellowship you will backslide, fall into Satan's hands, become ill, get divorced, or have some other calamity befall you as part of God's judgment against you? (10) Teach that you must love each other but that you must hate God's enemies - defined as your enemies because only you are on God's side? (11) Teach that there are other true believers in the world but since they are not part of your fellowship, they are in "darkness," "confusion," "Babylon," etc.? (12) Have its own teaching aids and/or Bibles and require that you shun all others as containing error, using primarily theirs as being the only ones having the whole truth? (13) Teach that if you are faithful to this true church you will find special favor with God so as to be delivered from the great tribulation while He pours out His judgmental wrath upon all others? (14) Teach that if you remain faithful you will one day be like God and will possess His nature - that you will be exactly the same as He? (15) Teach that you should discard your own opinions and assume the opinions of the elders because they are in your best interest? (16) Require that you give a substantial portion of your income to it or to its leaders? (17) Require that you donate your time and talent as free labor for the needs of the body in order to be considered a member in good standing? (18) Teach that you must cease thinking as an individual and begin thinking corporately, assigning your will to the will of God as defined by your elders? (19) Teach that everyone is "out to get you" and that you must be willing to sacrifice all you have including your life, if that is necessary, for the sake of the group? (20) Shun those who have left the fellowship for whatever reason and teach that they are "reprobate," "dogs," "heathen," "publicans," or some other derogatory term? (21) Cover up or ignore the sins of its leaders or its leaders' families while coming down hard on its members for their indiscretions? (22) Have a reporting system that suggests you reveal the faults or discontentment of others in order that they may be "protected" from error and kept on the right path? (23) Engage in public fights against its enemies and employ non-Christians to fight its battles for it through harassment or litigation such as lawsuits? (24) Teach that its leader is the revelator of God's truth for today - that the true Church has not functioned since the first century but has been restored by your leader? (25) Maintain such an identity with its leader's ministry so as to make the two indistinguishable? (26) Claim that its leader is the second coming of Jesus Christ and that he will usher in the Kingdom of God for all those who follow him?

Joseph W. Tkach...

(Part V)

Editor: Since beginning this serialized article on the WCGs current Pastor General, AR has continued to receive letters from readers offering insights into Tkach's background and personality. For this issue, I am interrupting my narrative in order to publish a few interesting comments from some of those letters.

Dear Mr. Trechak:

In your March 1989 issue I read how Mr. Tkach's official birth certificate shows that he was born on March 16, 1927, but how in church publications he claims he was born on March 16, 1926. As soon as I read that in your newsletter I looked up those dates in my copy of Arthur Spier's The Comprehensive Hebrew Calendar [Behrman House, New York, 1953]. I think I may have come across the reason Tkach is lying about his birth date. On the Hebrew calendar, March 16, 1927 was the twelfth day of Adar II. That day is not a special day. But March 16, 1926 was the first day of Nissan, the first day of the first month of the sacred year!

-Kansas

Editor: My thanks for your keen observations and interesting theory. One comment about Tkach's real birth date. There are a number of biblical scholars, including a few in Worldwide, who see great mystical significance in numbers associated with names and dates. One Bible numerologist I know claims the number 12 is associated with "organized beginnings" and the number 13 with "rebellion." The month Adar II is, of course, a 13th lunar month of the Hebrew sacred year. That being the case, some numerologists read Tkach's true birth date as foreboding some type of "organized beginning of rebellion." I am not a numerologist. Nor do I know the considerations that went into Tkach's choice of a fictitious birth date. I have heard, however, that Tkach is superstitious and know that he is aware of the supposed mystical significance of certain numbers.

I recall that back in the late '60s, when Tkach was acting as overall evaluator in the Pasadena Spokesmen's Club I was attending, it was widely rumored that his wife was suffering from a brain tumor and that it was the cause of her very abnormal behavior. At one particular meeting, when it was reported that his wife was missing from their home, Tkach related how his wife had to be locked inside her home to prevent her from wandering away. However, many in the church at the time said that Mrs. Tkach disagreed with how her husband was acting in the church and that she knew something that would embarrass her husband and the church. So Tkach started the rumor about her having a brain tumor and he kept her confined to her room. I understand that at some point she eventually left him and went back to Chicago for a while.

-Texas

In your December issue, you quoted a Robert Skaggs about how Mr. Tkach supposedly did some pretty horrible things to his wife years ago. I asked one of the ministers about this and he said you made it all up, that there was never a real Robert Skaggs. Is that true?

-New York

Editor: Why don't you ask Mr. Skaggs yourself? He is the editor of Bible Truth Research, R.R. 1, Box 140, Underwood, IN 47177.

The gas station at Colorado and Rosemead Boulevards tied to the Pappageorge crime ring, see [AR43] is where Tkach would always send me to rent trailers to move widows when I was head of the church moving team. No wonder!

-Ken Nagele, California

At a recent [evangelistic] campaign, Garner Ted Armstrong privately told a man that Joseph Tkach makes $500,000 per year. Do you have any knowledge of Mr. Tkach's annual salary?

-Ohio

Editor: No, I don't, nor do I know where GTA got his information. Even if it's only an estimate, however, it may be accurate - even conservative. Back in the days when the WCG was grossing less than $80 million per year, HWA got a yearly salary of over $200,000. Stanley Rader, the church's attorney and CPA, would justify such remuneration by pointing to a number of California corporations with revenues less than Worldwide's and top executives whose salaries were greater than HWA's. Tkach, today, can argue that Worldwide's yearly revenues exceed $200 million. He can also point to the fact that in 1989, while the average California worker received a pay increase of 5% (barely enough to keep even with inflation), the state's top 100 corporate executives received pay increases averaging 46.5% (Los Angeles Times, Business Section, May 27, 1990). The Times wrote of those top executives: "That 46.5% pay hike means the average California executive earns. $1,711 an hour.... Five years ago, seven-digit pay packages were relatively rare. Now, any chief executive of a large corporation seems to get one" (Ibid., p. D7). If Tkach really is making $500,000 per year (and I would be surprised if he did not), he would just be going along with the rest of society. And that is what the WCG is all about today. Isn't it?

Chris and Denise Patton in Prison

It is with much sadness that we report Ambassador alumni Christopher J. Patton and Denise Morrow Patton are now serving prison sentences in North Carolina.

Many Ambassador alumni of the early '70s will recall how the Pattons briefly served the WCG in Jerusalem and how Chris also taught archaeology for a time at AC. In the '70s Denise and Chris went into real estate and later also into securities. By the mid-80s, the two were no longer in Worldwide, but became connected with Garner Ted Armstrong's Church of God, International, from which Chris obtained ministerial credentials. Unfortunately, the Pattons used their many contacts among WCG and CGI members to entice dozens of trusting people into giving them huge sums of money and real estate to be "managed" by them. They then embezzled funds, sold bogus government bonds, forged mortgages using imposters' names, and persuaded two dozen clients to invest $600,000 in an imaginary shopping center and a fictitious housing development.

For a time the Pattons seemed to have it all. They had a beautiful home, money, investments. He drove a Mercedes, she a Maserati. But in early 1988 Chris discovered Denise was having an affair with Joseph Warren Hertzler, the son of a local church family. Not only was Denise having an affair with Hertzler, 13 years her junior, she made him vice president of her mortgage company and lavished him with expensive gifts. In September 1988, out of jealousy, Chris went to the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation and confessed that he and his wife had been embezzling from their clients. Then, this year, after pleading guilty to 26 counts of conspiracy and obtaining profits by false pretenses, Chris was sentenced to 5 years in prison, Hertzler to 10, and Denise to 15 (which in North Carolina's system of justice means they could all be out by 1992).

In the meantime, Chris has lost his SEC license and is on a leave of absence from his editorship at the Southern Sentinel (now the Jerusalem Sentinel, a publication of the United Biblical Churches of God with whom he joined after having his ministerial credentials revoked by CGI). In May, Chris married a 17-year old woman after he and Denise divorced. Denise says, however, that she still loves Chris, even though he has tricked the State Bureau of Investigation, framed her, and opened a Swiss bank account. Authorities say about $3 million is missing and may never be recovered. Those who would like to know more about this sordid mess (and of the dozens of naive church people who lost their life savings to these charlatans) can read the details on page one of the Feb. 4, 1990 edition of The News and Observer (215 South McDowell St., Raleigh, NC 27602).

More Researchers Writing About WCG

The number of scholars, theologians, and writers researching the WCG continues to grow. We've recently heard of two that our readers may wish to know about.

Dr. John M. Lubinda. (The University of Zambia, School of Education, P.O. Box 32379, Lusaka, Zambia) is a former WCG member who is writing about his experiences in Worldwide. We have not yet been informed when, or if, his manuscript will be published.

Mr. Neil O'Connor (Castle Treasure, Douglas, Cork, Ireland) is studying at St. David's College, University of Wales, which is Britain's oldest theological university apart from the divinity schools at Oxford and Cambridge. The title of his doctorate thesis is: A Comprehensive Analysis of the History and Doctrines of the Worldwide Church of God, Together with a Critique of the Latter from the Viewpoint of Early and Modern Orthodox Christian Thought. He stresses that his thesis will not be an expose of the WCG in the potboiler sense, but a reasoned presentation of all available evidence.

Mr. O'Connor writes that he is having some difficulty in obtaining all the research materials he needs. He wonders if any AR readers would be able to loan him material such as early member and co-worker letters by HWA, pre-1970 Plain Truth and Good News magazines, and copies of The Worldwide News (all years). If any readers are able to assist Mr. O'Connor in any way, please write to him at his Ireland address given above.

Genesis 2000 Update

In the March 1989 issue of AR we reported on and recommended Genesis 2000, an outstanding new theological journal edited by Prof. James D. Tabor. Because only one issue was ever produced and because we know how difficult it is to keep any periodical alive, we recently asked Prof. Tabor if he would update us on his plans for the journal. Here is his response:

Several hundred readers wrote in response to the March 1989 Ambassador Report article and copies of the original pilot issue of our publication were sent out. Unfortunately, supplies were quickly exhausted. No further issues of the journal have yet been published. However, during 1989 there were a number of significant developments and there are some exciting plans in the works for 1990 and beyond.

First, the nonprofit organization, Genesis 2000, Inc., which publishes the journal, Genesis 2000, received tax exempt status from the Federal Internal Revenue Service. In this day of corporate fraud and religious rip-offs, getting such status is no easy matter. It involves literally hundreds of pages of documentation and a lengthy review process. However, as of May 1989, all gifts to Genesis 2000, Inc. are fully tax deductible. The editors and board of the corporation are prohibited in the by-laws from ever receiving salaries or any personal gain from any aspect of the operations, and the corporation remains committed to distributing all publications free of charge. In terms of "business sense," this policy does not make much sense. But I feel sure that many Ambassador Report readers will agree with me, given our past experiences in various religious organizations, that this is a refreshing policy.

Second, the corporation, Genesis 2000, with the help of gifts from the Kuhn Foundation and the Reunion, Inc., sponsored the 1989 Biblical Theology Symposium held in Pasadena, California, as reported in the September 1989 Ambassador Report. This meeting brought together former top leaders of the WCG for a weekend of intense discussions and dialogue. This summer, through various private gifts, as well as another generous gift from the Kuhn Foundation, Genesis 2000, Inc. will sponsor archaeological and historical research in the Dead Sea Cave area in Israel, including in-depth reports on what various orthodox Jewish groups are doing with reference to rebuilding the Temple in Jerusalem. Those on the mailing list will receive a full update on these efforts.

Finally, 1989 brought some important physical changes and adjustments in upcoming plans, forcing a delay of some projects and all publications. I took a new teaching job as professor in the Department of Religious Studies, University of North Carolina at Charlotte. I had previously been at the College of William and Mary. That necessitated all the changes, both legally and physically, required by such a relocation from Williamsburg to Charlotte, NC. These matters are almost settled as of this date. The move has put us terribly behind with publication plans, but by October 1990, things should be in full operation again.

Plans are to publish a quarterly newsletter, detailing various news and projects of Genesis 2000, Inc. Then, rather than a formal journal like the sample issue sent out in 1989, we will publish a series of in-depth biblical and philosophical articles which will be mailed to all on our list as they come out. The first, titled, "Neither Jew, Christian, Nor Moslem: Restoring Abrahamic Faith," will be mailed out in late October, funds permitting. Others which are already planned and mostly written, but not yet printed are: "The Holy Scriptures: Which Bible? Whose Canon?"; "The Five Fundamental Flaws of Evangelical Christianity"; "The Jesus of History and the Christ of Christianity"; "Faith, Reason, and Revelation in the Modern World"; "Jesus and the One God of Israel"; and a dozen or so others. Every year or so these articles will be gathered together and published in book form.

As explained in the pilot issue of the journal, Genesis 2000 is dedicated to exploring the implications of biblical faith, as primarily reflected in the foundational Hebrew scriptures, in the late 20th century. It is the position of the editor that the so-called "New Testament" is a kind of extended Rabbinic pesher or midrash on the foundational "Holy Scriptures," or Tanakh (Hebrew Canon) - intended primarily for the Greek/Gentile world. The editor is dedicated to bringing the best of historical research to bear on the study of ancient Jewish and Christian origins, cast in the framework of the modern world and our essential questions.

So, there is my answer. Genesis 2000 is alive and well, but adjusting temporarily to its move to the Carolinas and its initial startup tasks. Interested parties can still write using the P.O. Box 754, Williamsburg, VA 23187 address (we still get mail there) or to me directly: Prof. James Tabor, Dept. of Religious Studies, University of North Carolina, Charlotte, NC 28223. We will have a Charlotte box number later in the year. Those who have previously written to Genesis 2000 in response to the Report's original article are on our mailing list and will automatically receive publications beginning in October of this year.

-James D. Tabor

Richard C. Nickels: Giving & Sharing

Richard C. Nickels is a former WCG member who, after a short time with Raymond Cole's Church of God, The Eternal, began his Giving and Sharing ministry around 1978. Readers may find his services of value because, besides offering Bibles and Bible-related books at discount prices and publishing a newsletter dealing with topics of interest to Sabbath and Holy Day-keeping people, Mr. Nickels publishes "family trees" for the Worldwide Church of God, the Sacred Names groups, and the Church of God Seventh Day showing their historical roots and their offshoots. For those who would like more information about Mr. Nickels' publications, write to Giving and Sharing, 4673 Onondaga Trail, St. Charles, MO 63303-7328.

Strickland on "The World's Greatest Hoax"

In our September 1989 issue we mentioned Dave C. Strickland's 89-page book Hope for the Dead - All the Dead. A number have since written us expressing how that book helped them to understand and overcome the effects of the WCG's fear-inducing teachings on hell fire and the unforgivable sin. Now Mr. Strickland has written another book which he believes will be beneficial to those WCG members who live in fear of the so-called "Great Tribulation." The intriguing title of his new 56-page book is The World's Greatest Hoax! (Why the Christian and non-Christian world is on line to fall for the greatest deception of all time). Those who would like to receive a free copy should write to the author: Dave C. Strickland, 20 Mutual Street, Hexthorpe, Doncaster DN4 0EF, England.

No Tithes to Be Paid This Year?

As most Bible students are aware, the Jubilee Year (Lev. 25) is an important Old Testament teaching. The WCG, however, really makes no effort to apply the Jubilee Year doctrine. Perhaps that is because a logical inference of the teaching is that no tithes should be paid or collected during Jubilee Years. Now, one zealous Bible student has put out a small, but interesting, paper which calculates the 69th Jubilee Year as being from the end of the Feast of Tabernacles, 1990 to the end of the Feast of Tabernacles, 1991. Those who would like copies of his research on this topic should write: David Rydholm, 1512 Lebanon St. SE, Lacey, WA 98503.

Letters

I have just finished reading Tkach's "Personal" column [in the May 21 WN]. When I read "change is a hallmark of growth and one of the important elements of God's true church," I began to get a queasy feeling. While we all know some changes are necessary at times (usually very minor), it is what is being changed, and how drastically, and for what purpose that can become alarming, very alarming.

When those changes bring a spiritual organization into lockstep with the spirit of our time, one no longer need wonder about the source. This course in other institutions in our country has been almost universally followed, and you see what we have.

When Tkach quotes HWA as saying no large denomination has publicly admitted error and changed their teaching, and uses this statement to back up his desire to make as yet unspecified changes of doctrine in Worldwide, then they both are wrong. Many, if not all, of the large denominations have done so in this very century. And, perhaps the largest of all denominations, Communism, has just done so on a colossal scale (HWA did properly include Communism as an organized religion). The historic truth is that among most of what used to be fundamentalist denominations, change has been so drastic and so public that only a few of those denominations still even claim to be fundamentalist, and there is a real question about them. Many, even of those who used to be Calvinist, are ordaining women, and even homosexuals, all in the name of change. If inching change moves in the direction of humanistic liberalism, and most does, then it becomes dangerous. Architects of such change are not ministers of God, but rather represent the god of this world, who is very powerful and very persuasive. (It should be much more difficult to change basic doctrine than to change the United States Constitution.) In fact, men can't change God's law at all. They can only say they have such power!

It is distressing to hear these apostles of change suggesting understanding of the identity of modern nations, with emphasis on Israel, is not a fundamental teaching and perhaps not of much importance. The book of fundamentals (foundational truths) is the book of Genesis, which lays down the foundations of all humans, with a strong emphasis on "the fathers," Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their offspring. Paul wrote that one of the purposes of Christ's first coming was to "confirm the promises made to the fathers" (Romans 15:8), those fathers being Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

One should not let a personal bias blind one to this vital truth, without which one cannot understand the full meaning of "judgment, mercy and faith." While salvation is certainly individual, it happens within the framework of nationhood or "the promises made to the fathers" - themselves national promises. The context of Matthew 23 is national, fully as much as it is individual.

Was there a "lack of judgment, mercy and faith" in Worldwide during the days of Herbert Armstrong? Absolutely. But such lack in no way neutralizes the doctrine under discussion here.

Of repentance mentioned by Tkach, one can only wish there were such among Worldwide's leadership - repentance of major violations of the real basics - the ten commandments! But I suppose that would be asking too much. We shall see what God thinks in due course.

For someone in the business of religion to play down current happenings in Europe is to court disaster. To ridicule the "watchman" responsibility or the "Ezekiel message" must be placed in the same category.

In the August 1989 PT there is a letter from an A. Lange, Doncaster. This being my own town, I managed to locate the writer, a teenage girl named Alison. She told me the PT is disgusting. When I expressed surprise at her comment, she explained how the PT editors had added a sentence to what she had written and that it was contrary to what she would have said. I wonder how many other letters to the PT are similarly doctored.

-England

I recently read a church brochure containing all the names and pictures of the WCG ministry. I was curious to see who had remained "loyal" to the church among those I've known.

It struck me that if you eliminated the black and Spanish ministers and looked at the surnames of the remainder, then you notice how a large percentage of the remaining "loyal" ministers have Germanic surnames! (There are also quite a few Irish surnames!) I hope this doesn't sound racist. But there are racial characteristics or traits, and the Germanic personality is known to be very orderly and likes society to be run in a strict legalistic fashion. Could this be the reason so many are determined to be in the WCG to the bitter, bitter end?

-Scotland

What is finally causing me to write is a comment concernign the Cottam family [AR43, p. 10] who let their son starve to death. You noted that this was because they did not want to "disobey their church's dictates." As a Seventh-Day Adventist I can tell you that was not the case. The media always likes to make stories sensational. You can find the true story by writing to the SDA office in Reading, Pennsylvania. The facts are that the family was no longer connected with the SDA church. Cottam had once been a pastor and either resigned or was let go. The family became introverted and would not accept visitors or help from the church or anyone else. It was obviously a dysfunctional family with deep psychological problems, but no one knew how bad it was. It is not known how they planned to "give their money to God." Of course, the media have reported they were on a religious fast. Frankly, I have never known a Seventh-Day Adventist to go on a religious fast. (Some need one!) It would be nice to think that Seventh-Day Adventists are dedicated tithepayers, but only about 50 percent or less are and they do not become fanatical about it.

-Maryland

Editor: Thank you for the clarification. I ran the story on the Cottam family exactly as it came off the AP wire. Nevertheless, considering that I have known many SDAs over the years and have found those I've know to be fine Christians, and certainly not fanatics, I should have questioned the exact wording of the AP story. Nevertheless, my main point was not to criticize that denomination, but to simply show that some people will put fanatical devotion to a religious teaching above the safety and well-being of their own children.

John, you may not have heard this one. St. Peter was conducting a tour of newly welcomed entrants at the Pearly Gates. There were spirit people in groups and St. Peter was asked who the various groups were. He explained that one group was Catholic, one Baptist, another Lutheran, etc. Then they came to a high wall where people could be heard talking on the other side. Someone then asked St. Peter who those people were and he replied, "Oh, not so loud. Those are the Worldwide Church of God people. They think they are the only ones up here."

-Florida

Thank you for the Report. It is good to know what the WCG is up to. I was there about 34 years. I learned a lot - some good, some not so good.

-Oklahoma

Between my wife and I there remains the usual problem, she being a blind Worldwide follower and I trying to show the truth of the matter. To her nothing is true unless WCG says so. We are both on Social Security and she has doctor's bills over her head, but WCG comes first.

-Arizona

Maybe my daughter and son-in-law would have come out of that cult if the truth had been brought to light on that con operation. They've belonged to WCG since 1975 and show no sign whatsoever of coming to their senses. I've got all kinds of literature, books, and tapes disproving the false teachings they've swallowed but, of course, they refuse to either read or heed. You might as well talk to a brick wall than to a member of the Worldwide Church of God.

-Illinois

I am enclosing a small gift as thanks for your work. You saved me from possibly joining the WCG. If not for your reports, I just might have done it, with disastrous consequences.

-CPA, Ohio

I am seventy years old and put in 25 years in Worldwide, but I am free now.

We'll have to close this issue at this point as it's all we can afford for this quarter. Hopefully we'll have another issue out by around the middle of December. My thanks to those readers who are still interested in, and supporting, our publishing efforts.

AMBASSADOR REPORT

AR46 January, 1991

No More Good News

As 1990 closes and the new year begins, the Worldwide Church of God (WCG) and its Ambassador College (AC) continue their steady decline under the leadership of Pastor General Joseph W. Tkach. Insiders say that for 1990 the WCG experienced less than zero financial growth. Important WCG news items since our last issue went to press include the following:

- In his September 25 letter to WCG members and coworkers, Tkach shocked his followers by announcing that the WCG's weakening financial condition had caused him to kill the Good News, for decades the church's main theological magazine. The January 1991 issue is the final edition. According to Tkach, the WCG's more secular Plain Truth (PT) magazine will now become more religious in tone. But Tkach has also admitted that the PT's circulation is being pruned back. Whereas under church founder Herbert W. Armstrong (HWA) the PT had grown to a circulation of over seven million (and at almost double the current number of pages per issue), the PT's circulation in recent months has shrunk to 3.2 million, according to the official WCG newspaper, The Worldwide News (WN, Aug. 27, p. 3). During this past summer, church executives were already anticipating that the PT's circulation would drop to 2.3 million (ibid.). By late August the PT had already been phased out in areas of the Middle East, West Africa, "and other nations where we simply cannot sustain the circulations" (WN, Aug. 27, p. 1, quoting WCG executive Larry Salyer).

- The World Tomorrow, the WCG's television program, is also feeling the effects of the church's financial decline. The number of stations now carrying the telecast has shrunk from 250 in 1988 to only 113 this past year. The WCG's media experts anticipate that that low figure will sink even lower (ibid., p. 3). Like the PT, the telecast is expected to become more religious in tone (WN, Nov. 19, p. 1).

- In spite of Tkach's decree allowing church members to do campus construction work on the Sabbath (see our last issue, p. 2), the new buildings at AC-Big Sandy were not completed until mid-November (WN, Dec. 3, p. 1). And according to evangelist Donald Ward, current president of AC, achieving accreditation for AC should not be considered a foregone conclusion. Mere candidacy for accreditation is not possible for AC before June 1992 (WN, Dec. 3, p. 3).

- Remarkably, while almost all indicia of the WCG's health point downward, Joseph Tkach Jr. (director of the WCG's U.S. ministry) claims the church's membership is growing (WN, Sept. 10, p. 1). To accommodate such supposed growth, Junior says it is important that the WCG ministry be completely interlinked by computer:

The ministers use the computers for word processing and local record keeping [of highly personal information about members' private lives - ed.]. Through electronic mail the computers are connected to headquarters, regional offices and the computers of other ministers. About 75 percent of the U.S. ministers have computers now, but Church Administration hopes that almost all will have them by 1992. (WN, Sept. 10, P. 1.)

- As in years past, the continuous musical chairs game goes on in Worldwide. Evangelist Frank Brown, formerly over the WCG's operations in Britain, is now over the WCG's operations in Canada (including the French-speaking areas). Evangelist Leslie McCullough, formerly over the WCG's operations in South Africa, is now in Frank Brown's old job in Britain (WN, Nov. 19, p. 8; Dec. 3, p. 1).

The new chairman of the theology department at AC is Russell Duke, considered by a good number of older ministers to be a theological bantamweight.

Evangelist Roderick C. Meredith (1261 E. Palm Dr., Glendora, CA 91740, tel. 818-914-4004) is no longer allowed to preach or write articles for church publications. Exactly why Tkach is angry with Meredith we cannot say.

Evangelist Leroy Neff has been removed as the WCG's director of Financial Affairs and Planning because, we are told, Tkach thought him too loyal to HWA's ways and too open with the membership regarding the church's declining finances. Neff has now been given the unpleasant task of heading the WCG's Divorce and Remarriage Evaluation Committee. Neff's weighty duties over WCG finances have been given to Steven Andrews, an inexperienced, generally unknown young administrative assistant formerly under Larry Salyer (WN, Nov. 19, p. 3).

The list of those holding the "rank" of WCG evangelist continues to swell with the recent additions of J. Michael Fezell (Joe Sr.'s chief ghost writer and Joe Jr.'s "side-kick"), Bernard Schnippert (Tkach's "Five Year Plan" coordinator), Kyriacos Stavrinides (one of Tkach's top doctrinal theoreticians), Dr. Clint Zimmerman (on Neff's D&R committee), and Joseph Tkach Jr. (WN, Nov. 5, p. 3).

- Under Tkach, WCG doctrines continue to change. Whereas HWA taught that "God's Work" (the true church's proclamation of "the warning message" just before Christ's return) was in the "gun lap," Tkach emphasizes that Christ's return could very well be far off. Nor does Tkach see the church's commission as being that of a watchman warning of the coming Beast power. For Tkach, the church's commission is to preach Jesus Christ (WN, Aug. 27, p. 4). Those who studied theology under HWA will instantly recognize Tkach's new (actually "mainstream") gospel as what HWA used to refer to as "another gospel."

Whereas HWA taught that the majority of those faithful to "God's Work" would be spared the anguish of a soon-coming, universal "Great Tribulation," Tkach now teaches that it is a serious error to teach that those who are faithful will be physically protected (ibid.).

For decades, most WCG members believed that during the Great Tribulation, all loyal WCG members would be miraculously taken to "the place of safety." Most members were convinced that that place would be Petra, a desert area of Jordan honey-combed with caves. World cruising evangelist Gerald Waterhouse liked to call Petra "the place of final training [for ruling the world]." Until recently, most WCG members believed Tkach also held to Waterhouse's view - especially since Tkach made a 1987 tour of Jordan, met with King Hussein, visited Petra, and had the entire trip played up big in The Worldwide News (March 9, 1987, pp. 1, 3, 8).

Now, however, Tkach and a good number of his mimicking subordinates are saying that they have grave doubts about the Petra theory and that probably those members lucky enough to be protected during the Great Tribulation will be scattered among numerous places of safety. The new teaching has set off a wave of panic among a good number of Worldwidiers who, we've heard, are increasingly hiking into wilderness areas in search of caves in which they hope to hide out during the three and a half years of WCG-prophesied world chaos.

But why did Tkach change his views on Petra? Recent news reports out of the Middle East have pointed out how Petra, far from being an isolated area, is actually Jordan's leading tourist attraction, often bringing thousands of visitors per week. It was even used as a movie set for the conclusion of Steven Spielberg's 1989 film Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade. Perhaps Tkach realized that with visiting film crews and thousands of tourists every week, Petra was just not the isolated "place of safety" he once thought.

- More and more WCG members are apparently taking an interest in various conspiracy theories of world events. Tkach has recently been going out of his way to ridicule such theories, especially the so-called "Jewish conspiracy theory" (WN, Aug. 27, p. 4).

- With Tkach changing so many WCG doctrines, it is not surprising that there are more and more reports of groups of members and some ministers leaving the WCG. The latest minister to make his exit is Mr. Colin Sutcliff of Christchurch, New Zealand. Sutcliff, who is the father-in-law of WCG broadcaster David Hulme, reportedly left with about 40 members to align with Gerald Flurry's breakaway church in Oklahoma. He will not be the last WCG minister to exit because of Tkach.

Want Your Tithes Back?

About every other month AR gets a letter from an angry ex-WCG member who writes as one recently did:

When I joined the WCG I was led to believe that it was the one and only True Church and that its leaders were sincere and dedicated caretakers of the truths revealed to Mr. Armstrong and of the tithes I contributed toward publishing those truths. Now, after years of sacrificing career, family well-being, friendships, health, and savings on the WCG's triple tithing doctrine, I have been disfellowshipped for doing one of the very things that they preached - trying to "prove all things." It has become painfully clear to me that the WCG is a gigantic fraud. The church's leaders do not believe the very things that they preach. They show their true colors by the self-serving, whimsical way they constantly change church doctrines and by the immoral way they live. They tolerate the grossest of sins among those in headquarters' inner circle. Yet all the while they browbeat us members for being human.

I now find myself forced out of the church to which I gave many years of service, sacrifice, and loyalty. Yet they keep all the money I took from my wife and kids to give to what I was led to believe was "God's Work." When I asked the church to return all the money they took from me by fraud, their lawyers had the gall to say the church could not return one penny because they had already spent all of it!

Surely there must be a legal solution to my dilemma. I certainly would never have contributed to the WCG had I known that the church was going to use my tithes to preach doctrines that it once taught were of the Devil. I certainly would not have given money for "God's House" if I had known "God's House" would be used by homosexual performers and then be sold to Japanese investors so that a small group of controlling executives I had never even heard of before could maintain their lifestyle! The money that I contributed was given to me by God with the requirement that I be a good steward. Surely there must be some way I can get the courts to get it back for me so that I may use it the way God intended. Surely a just legal system would never tolerate such evil in "the land of the free and the home of the brave." Would our judges simply allow the perfect crime to be committed in God's name?

Every time AR gets such a letter we feel sick to our stomachs. Because the way the legal system has operated in the past, the answer has been: yes, sadly, our legal system does tolerate such perfect crimes. Lately, however, we have begun to wonder if all of that is changing.

Of course, the argument used so often by WCG lawyers that "your contributions have already been spent" is both flippant and nonsensical. Dollar bills, like bushels of wheat, are legally fungible, i.e., one dollar bill is equally as good as another. Nor can the WCG hide behind the traditional view that all gifts or pledges to charities must be nonrevocable because to hold otherwise would deprive charities of financial stability. That principle makes some sense for legitimate charities and churches. But it was never intended as a means to perpetrate fraud and extortion (as where the vilest of hypocrites pretend to be pious "men of God," use mind control techniques to achieve an undue influence over uninformed followers, and then, through fraudulent statements and fear-inducing tactics, coerce followers into giving money that eventually gets used for purposes at variance with their church's stated goals).

Regarding the latter, the United States Supreme Court appears to agree. The Nov. 17, 1989 issue of Christianity Today (p. 71) reported:

The [U.S. Supreme] Court also let stand a lower court ruling [869 F.2d 628 (1st Cir. 1989)] that a woman [Elizabeth Dovydenas] who gave millions of dollars to the Bible Speaks, a Lenox, Massachusetts-based religious group, may get it all back based on her contention that she was unduly influenced to give. Church/state expert Dean Kelly of the National Council of Churches called the ruling "ridiculous." "If a former member can recover contributions made to a religious group in good faith, and this becomes a trend, churches would have to put all donations in escrow, essentially being unable to use them for fear of having to give them back," Kelly told the Chicago Tribune.

It apparently never occurred to Kelly that such rulings will encourage churches to be more honest, even more Christian. Nor does it seem to have occurred to him that the more the crooked ministries are put out of business, the more money there will be freed up for use by legitimate Christian groups who truly are seeking to do God's will.

The days when a money-making organization can be immune from judicial rulings simply by claiming it is "religious" are clearly over. The successful prosecution of televangelist Jim Bakker shows that the nation's courts are losing patience with religious frauds. And the Supreme Court decision in Employment Division of Oregon v. Smith, 108 L. Ed. 2d 876 (decided April 17, 1990 and commented on in our last issue), greatly clarifies the principle that the conduct of individuals and groups is not beyond the authority of the courts simply because such conduct is labeled as "religious." Dozens of cases currently before the courts are bearing this out. One example was reported on in a UPI story carried by many papers (including the Los Angeles Times, Religion section, p. 7) on June 2, 1990:

WHEELING, W. Va.- Federal officials say they will attempt to confiscate everything at the Hare Krishna Vrindaban commune except the temple, alleging that it was all purchased with money obtained through fraudulent means....

The three men and the corporations, the indictment alleges, used mail fraud to defraud the public of the money by fraudulently soliciting funds for a school, but failed to tell those contributing that "children were sexually molested" at the school.

Because of its victory in the 1979 State of California v. Worldwide Church of God lawsuit, many WCG executives arrogantly assume that the WCG is legally impregnable. But legal experts that we have talked to say such an assumption on the part of Tkach and company is a mirage.

Just as we go to press, we have received a letter from Nebraskan Richard Stambler, the spokesman for a group of recently alienated WCG members, who, very much like the author of the letter that began this article, feel the WCG has defrauded them. The group has been doing considerable legal research and consulting with attorneys with the goal of putting together a class-action lawsuit against the WCG corporation, its trustees, and its officers. The group intends to take the WCG's current leaders to court and to get their tithes returned, at the very least.

Not being legal experts, AR has no way of knowing if such a lawsuit will succeed. Nor do we know how various statutes of limitations would restrict participation in such a suit by members put out of Worldwide more than two or three years ago. Nevertheless, the group's legal theories generally seem quite logical.

Mr. Stambler says, "If there are any ex-WCG members who have been disfellowshipped unjustly (or who felt morally compelled to resign from the church) in the last few years and who wish to be part of a legal action aimed at getting their contributions returned, we'd like to hear from them. Letters should be addressed to me, Richard Stambler, Rt. 1, Box 92, Walton, NE 68461. I would prefer letters that are as detailed as possible and that are either typed or printed very clearly. But I will also take phone calls from those interested in what we are planning. My phone number is (402) 489-8514."

Two Views on What Makes the WCG Tick

Editor: We at AR have had our own ideas about what really motivates the leadership of the WCG. But, as the following two letters show, others have their own, very often quite substantiative, views.

I think church ought to be a place where people go to take instruction in how to use the Holy Spirit, the power of God, but those now in control of the WCG cannot allow that kind of instruction. They don't want to see us take up arms against them. I am, of course, referring to the demons-alien spirit invaders on the planet. Thus they hold down the membership. (Remember the 1986 movie Aliens with Sigourney Weaver?)

Your comments in [AR43] on Mrs. Joseph Tkach and her demon-possession problems were most interesting. The fact that none of the WCG ministry can cast them out is also most interesting. That fact says to me that they have no positive spiritual power. The WCG's ministers are all spiritual frauds!

That Joseph Tkach would consent to live with demons in his wife says to me that he is also possessed. The book People of the Lie: The Hope for Healing Human Evil by Dr. M. Scott Peck (1983) - formerly Assistant Chief of Psychiatry and Neurology Consultant to the Surgeon General of the Army - was most instructive to me on the subject of evil, possession and demonic behaviors. On page 80 of his book he said this: "It is my experience that evil [demonic possession] seems to run in families." So I would suspect that all of the Tkach family is infested/infected.

Dr. Peck also says: "Since the primary motive of the evil [person] is disguise, one of the places evil people are most likely to be found is within the church. What better way to conceal one's evil from oneself, as well as from others, than to be a deacon or some other highly visible form of Christian within our culture... evil people tend to gravitate toward piety for the disguise and concealment it can offer them" (see the footnote on pages 76-77) ....

The WCG is a place where many [demons] have chosen to hide out. And I think that they are doing more than merely hiding out - I think that the WCG is part of an enormous plot to do something on the world scene soon. There is a glitter in Joseph Tkach's eyes that speaks volumes.

-Phyllis Nelson Grau

Having had past institutional employment with the State of Oklahoma Department of Human Services in the areas of counseling and direct care with mentally ill clients, I am able to professionally detect many traits of dysfunctional characteristics among the leading ministers in the WCG past and present. It would be interesting to see what appropriate testing would reveal. However, based upon observation in conjunction with the American Psychiatric Association's DSM-III-R medical diagnostic criteria, it is virtually certain Mr. Joseph W. Tkach is, at the very least, presently suffering some textbook symptoms of Dysthymic Affective Disorder, which helps to explain many of his decisions concerning the future course of the WCG. He may be very sincere and doing the best he feels he can, but yet be at the mercy of a clinical illness which he neither understands nor will admit. Denial of such afflictions is exceedingly common. Mr. Herbert W. Armstrong, whom I always loved and admired, was a very complex and tormented person who internally suffered most of his adult life. His medically based DSM-III-R diagnosable condition of egodystonic psychosexual disorders are easily understood when recognized they were deriving from a narcissistic personality disorder with paraniodal tendencies compounded by classic symptoms of dysthymic depression, which helps account for both his charismatic leadership ability and his desire to initiate personal relationships with international authority figures.

Although Herbert Armstrong was mentally aware of his actions, I firmly believe he did the very best he could while suffering from his unrecognized and untreated mental health problems. I'm certain our true Creator will take his medical problems into consideration at the judgment.

Recognizing the mental illness factors in the ministerial activities and modalities of operation also helps to understand why so many WCG members have been mentally and emotionally upset - occasionally traumatized - rather than being the recipients of "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and self-control" from the WCG ministry! It is virtually impossible for persons suffering from mental illness to control themselves into the exacting standards of scriptural discipline - this in itself can create and intensify an ego-dystonic disorder.

Pakozdi-Parker and Gateways Institute

For a lot of people, "the Worldwide Experience" has provided more than its share of surprises. One of our readers wrote us the following:

As a former 20-year-plus WCG member and a current CGI member, you can imagine the head spinning I have been enduring since reading many of your reports.... When I joined the WCG in 1968 I was told the road would be rocky. But I never imagined anything like what the past 23 years have held - and this is all before the Tribulation!...

Until the early 80s [here in the Cincinnati area] we had a WCG minister named Jack Pakozdi. Now, on cable television there is frequently seen a Jonathan Parker, Ph.D., who is with Gateways Institute of Ojai, California. He sells tapes on success, weight loss, how to quit smoking, etc. Oddly, this Dr. Parker is a dead ringer for Mr. Pakozdi! Seen with Dr. Parker is a Dr. Leslie Brice, Director of the Institute. And, amazingly, Dr. Brice is a dead ringer for Mrs. Jack Pakozdi! Could all this be mere coincidence?

Robert L. Swimm
Covington, Kentucky

As our Kentucky reader may have begun to suspect, Dr. Parker - or "Jonathan," as many of his devoted followers now refer to him - is actually one and the same person as Jack Pakozdi, his former WCG minister.

Media Master

If you tune in to Jonathan's programs (really hour-long paid commercials masquerading as educational programs) you will see the very finest in smooth, sophisticated, high-tech salesmanship. Two of Jonathan's programs, broadcast hundreds of times in the Los Angeles area (one on "success," the other on weight control), are so well done that some confess to being almost mesmerized into watching them repeatedly.

Through Jonathan's television programs and publications such as his Break-Through newsletter and Discoveries Through Inner Quests catalog, one learns about Gateways' more than 300 self-help and subliminal tape programs authored and narrated by Jonathan.

According to Gateways publications (P.O. Box 1778, Ojai, CA 93023), Jonathan's lectures and subliminal messages will increase your wealth and prosperity, help you stop smoking, unlock your natural healing forces, reduce stress, dissolve fear and worry, lower your body weight, produce a body beautiful, improve self-image, increase self-confidence, heighten creativity, expand your memory, sharpen your concentration, help you overcome grief and fear of rejection, improve your sleep, keep your kids off drugs, and even improve your driving! Naturally, for all this you must pay. Some of the tape sets cost more than $150.

Enlightened Mind Workshops

If the tapes aren't enough to do the job, there are Jonathan's Enlightened Mind Workshops. According to one of Jonathan's ads:

At the heart of the workshop experience is accelerated self-mastery through altered-state mental clearing and positive reprogramming. You will refine the process of using mind training techniques that enable you to:

- Eliminate negative memories, fears and guilts.
- Dissolve self-sabotaging thinking and conflicts
- Manage transitions and weather difficult crises
- Explore higher consciousness and channel your higher self
- Get in touch with your life-purpose
- Realize the profound meaning of the Secret Tibetan Doctrines and Egyptian Mystery School Teachings
- Explore past and parallel lives
- Experience mental projections or enlightening out-of-body experiences

In such New Age lingo Jonathan promises a great deal. But on the registration form for one of his workshops there is this warning:

Meditation provides opportunities for personal growth, but can also involve both pleasant and unpleasant emotional and/ or psychological experiences. Your attendance at any meditation session presented by the Institute of Human Development is entirely at your own risk.
THE RECORDING OF SESSIONS IS NOT PERMITTED.

Jonathan's workshops have been held in such scenic locations as Aspen and Maui. Of course, they are not cheap. Nevertheless, some of Jonathan's adoring fans cannot do without them. Wrote one devotee:

During the workshop all surface questions were answered and deeper ones were laid to rest, creating an extremely peaceful state of mind. The discussions and meditations caused a chain reaction and I feel a clearer mind, a peaceful attitude and a total willingness to explore totally the inner world. I sincerely hope Jonathan continues to do workshops because the energies that are felt in person cannot be transmitted on tapes.

Jonathan's True History

Jack Pakozdi, who would later become "Dr. Jonathan Parker," was born in New Brunswick, New Jersey. Before coming to Ambassador College (Pasadena) in 1967, Pakozdi lived in Wellsville, a small rural town in western New York state, and earned a B.S. degree in education from Mansfield State College in Pennsylvania. Leslie Ann Brice came to Ambassador (Pasadena) in 1967 from Phoenix, Arizona where she had been a student at the University of Arizona Jack and Leslie were married in 1969 and after graduating from Ambassador in 1970 Jack was employed by the WCG. From 1974 he served as a WCG minister in Hays, Kansas. Then in early 1979, during the turbulent period when the WCG was being sued by the State of California, Pakozdi was sent back to Ambassador for a refresher program and in mid-year was transferred to Cincinnati where he pastored a WCG church and Leslie sold real estate.

Sources close to Jonathan Parker say that most of the methods now used by Jonathan were actually learned while he was a student at Ambassador College and while he was a WCG minister. In fact, it was while serving as a WCG minister in Cincinnati that Pakozdi developed his Dr. Jonathan Parker alter ego and launched his Institute of Human Development, a supposedly "non-profit" organization that is the parent of Gateways Research Institute. For a time in Cincinnati, friends say, Pakozdi actually lived a double life. On weekends he was a WCG minister giving "Christian living" sermons at sabbath services. During the rest of the week, however, he was transmogrified into famed researcher Jonathan Parker, Ph.D. Because he feared the WCG might discover the true identity of his alter ego, early promotional literature put out by "Dr. Parker" showed him wearing a homemade disguise consisting of a tilted toupee with mismatching beard and mustache. Such precautions, however, did not prevent Pakozdi's suspicious superiors from eventually discovering his double life and defrocking him.

Pakozdi's exit from the WCG was no quiet fading away. His final WCG sermon, given in mid-1982, was described to the Report by Mr. Swimm:

Services began normally with hymns, opening prayers, and sermonette before Pakozdi took the pulpit for what we thought would be a routine sermon. He then proceeded to denounce the church's leadership and to announce that he and his wife were divorcing. (It wasn't until a TV appearance by "Doctors" Jonathan and Leslie that I even suspected they were not divorced!) Pakozdi then tearfully left the pulpit and the building. The congregation was left in a state of shock!

Overflowing Abundancy, At Last!

Quitting the WCG and starting his Institute has paid off handsomely for Jonathan. Insiders say, for instance, that Jonathan's 1988 sales were a whopping $23.5 million. At one point Gateways' marketing operation employed a staff of 80, making it one of Ojai's biggest employers. According to one insider, Jonathan and Leslie (who, until recently, was the one actually running the company) banked upwards of $20 million from their "Mind Power" TV show alone. In a predictable concession to their nouveau riche status they purchased the largest house in Ojai - a $2 million, rambling 8,000-square-foot expanse of house-trying-to-be-mansion.

According to his self-promoting materials, some of Jonathan's Gateways income has gone toward grants to better-known research institutions and scientists. Thus, like the WCG's Ambassador Foundation, Gateways has attempted to buy respectability. But how legitimate is Jonathan's Gateways Research Institute?

On his products and in his publications Parker is described as "one of the most highly respected authorities in the self-development field." Yet, among leading psychologists and therapists that we talked to none had ever heard of Parker or his Institute.

Jonathan claims to have a Ph.D. Yet inquiries to Gateway on this subject are met with flimsy evasions. AR has been unable to find any evidence that Jonathan (or Leslie) ever earned a doctorate anywhere. A letter from AR to Jonathan asking for details about his Ph.D. and requesting an interview was never answered. Nor have we found any evidence that Jonathan is now, or has ever been, licensed or board certified to practice psychology or psychotherapy in California or any other state. The California Board of Psychologists and the California Board of Behavioral Science Examiners in Sacramento told the Report that they have no Jonathan Parker or Jack Pakozdi on their certification rolls. While Jonathan's programs make mention of his years spent in "private practice," such practice appears to have only been his experience as a WCG minister. Nor have we found any evidence (such as published research papers) to indicate that Gateways is in any way a true research institute.

Laced throughout Jonathan's TV commercials are skillfully casted testimonials supposedly from satisfied customers whose lives were transformed by listening to Jonathan. In fact, insiders to the Gateways realm say that some of the testimonials are given by friends, relatives, employees, or associates of Gateways. In one blatantly dishonest TV testimonial a man is shown driving up to a sumptuous mansion-like home in a sparkling white new $50,000 Jaguar, extolling that all his new-found wealth was a result of listening to Jonathan's "prosperity" tapes. Actually, say insiders, the home and car were both Jonathan's. The man, who lives in much more modest circumstances in another part of the country, was provided a free round trip ticket and other perks to fly in for the carefully orchestrated charade.

The Subliminals

A big part of Gateways' current catalog advertises Jonathan's subliminal tapes. These are recordings of innocuous New Age music or nature sounds such as ocean waves over which have been inserted voice tracks of supposedly positive messages. These messages are recorded in such a way as to be consciously imperceptible, but, supposedly, are still able to affect the listener's subconscious mind. Wilson Brian Key, Ph.D., author of Subliminal Seduction, The Clam-Plate Orgy, and The Age of Manipulation, claims that advertisers have been successfully manipulating the public for years using subliminal techniques (a claim strongly denied by the advertising industry). In recent years, some have claimed that subliminal technology has also been used to overlay demonic and suicide-inducing messages onto the recordings of certain "heavy metal" rock groups (a claim strongly denied by music company executives).

But does subliminal technology really work? While there are some researchers who say it does, the preponderance of current scholarly evidence in the field indicates that it does not. For a discussion of that evidence, see "Subliminal Deceptions" by Bruce Bower (Science News, 8/25/90, p. 124), "Are You Open to Suggestion?" by Jo Anna Natele (Psychology Today, 9/88, p. 28), and "Now You Hear It ..." by David Kalish (Marketing and Media Decisions, May 1988, p. 32).

Rehashed Psycho-Cybernetics

What about Jonathan's lectures? A careful review of Jonathan's Prosperity Solution and Winning at Losing sets of tapes reveals that while his lectures do contain much useful advice (the kind of stuff one would expect in a "positive thinking" church sermon), the real core of Jonathan's approach parallels that found in Dr. Maxwell Maltz's book Psycho-Cybernetics (Prentice Hall, 1960, and still available in paperback in many bookstores). During the late sixties the Maltz book was widely read at Ambassador College where it was strongly recommended by instructor David Albert (now a broadcaster on the World Tomorrow religious program) and professor Richard Plache (now in prison). Nevertheless, around 1969, after Ambassador College vice president and evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong, attacked Maltz's methods in a sermon as being "demonic," the campus was purged of all copies of Maltz's work and the reading of Psycho-Cybernetics was strictly forbidden at Ambassador College. Apparently Jonathan doesn't agree with Armstrong's assessment of Maltz's theories; he has adopted them as gospel truth.

Divorce Pending

Whether or not Gateways' tapes are able to help those paying for them, they apparently have not been able to do much for Jonathan and Leslie's relationship. They recently filed for divorce. (This time it must be for real. The Ventura County case is number D177286.) Friends say they are not surprised as the Parker's "open marriage" was maintained formally only for the good of their two boys. Jonathan, some say, has had a mistress since his days as a WCG minister.

Leslie, trim and attractive as ever, is currently working for Wolf Fitness, an Ojai company that sells $1000 exercise machines. Friends say that while Wolf is connected to Gateways, Leslie is no longer running the Institute. Her old position has been taken over by Sylvia Taylor, currently married to an architect, but formerly married to WCG minister Doug Taylor of Cincinnati (one of the ministers the IRS put in prison years ago for a "start your own church" scam - see the April 1984 issue of Ambassador Report). Sylvia, described by insiders as efficient and charming, is well remembered by WCG members in Cincinnati. Wrote one of our readers, "When Mr. Taylor pastored the 'Cinti South' church, his wife Sylvia would come to services braless. She used to stir up quite a fuss among the brethren and even more among the wives."

HWA's Formula Works

Even with its recent reorganization, Gateways continues to thrive. Friends of Jonathan say he is intelligent and personable. But much of the credit for Jonathan's success must go to the late Herbert W. Armstrong, the advertising man who founded the WCG and Ambassador College. Clearly, Gateways has been built upon the same formula Armstrong used to build the WCG. Business experts point out how both organizations (1) have identified a specific market, (2) have cornered a specific placement in that market through unique products, (3) utilize slick packaging, (4) have authoritative spokesmen, (5) make outlandish promises for their products, (6) make sophisticated use of the media, and, most important, (7) utilize the true essence of Herbert W. Armstrong's "give-get principle," i.e., get more than you give and you make a profit.

The system works. As Jonathan intones ever so slowly on one of his hypnotic "Mind Talk" tapes: "The good life is mine. I face life with happiness and confidence. I achieve success more and more every day. I am filled with positive expectancy. My life is like a great magnet that attracts happiness, fulfillment, and prosperity. Each day I progress further and further. Each day is exciting and wonderful. My mind is focused steadfastly on my goals and objectives. My positive thoughts and beliefs make me wealthy and prosperous...."

Combatting Cult Mind Control

A number of readers have complained that they have not been able to locate a copy of a book we recently recommended, Steven Hassan's Combatting Cult Mind Control. It appears that the hard bound edition is now out of print. However, we have learned that a paperback edition is now available. It sells for $12.96 (plus $2 for shipping) and may be ordered from Inner Traditions International, c/o AIDC Dept. 09, 64 Depot Road, Colchester, VT 05446. Or you may call their toll-free number: 1-800-445-6638 to order the book if you have Visa or Mastercard.

Sir Anthony Buzzard and The Restoration Fellowship

Many Ambassador alumni will remember Sir Anthony Buzzard as one of Bricket Wood's better lecturers of the 1970s. Educated at Charterhouse School and Christ Church, Oxford, Buzzard (pronounced Ba-zard') now teaches at Oregon Bible College in Illinois. He has written numerous articles on Christology and eschatology and is the author of the book The Coming Kingdom of the Messiah - A Solution to the Riddle of the New Testament (Ministry School Publications, 1988). Buzzard is also founder of The Restoration Fellowship which publishes a number of studies relating to certain WCG doctrines.

Who, or what, was Jesus before his human birth? The WCG (similar to the Catholic Church since the Council of Chalcedon in 451 and many Protestant denominations) teaches that Jesus had been Yahweh, the God of the Old Testament. (This teaching is, of course, one of the major barriers separating Judaism from modern Christianity). Buzzard disputes the WCG (and Catholic) teaching in a number of well-reasoned articles. We first became aware of some of the details of Buzzard's view through one of his articles reprinted by the Foundation for Biblical Research in 1989. In response to a letter from AR, Buzzard wrote us:

It is difficult indeed to see how one can be the second Adam, if one's origins are not in the womb of one's mother. Granted, of course, that Jesus is supernaturally conceived, yet He is a man (I Tim. 2:5). The Jewish people did not think the Messiah would be other than human.

If you enjoy good theological books there are two which more or less say this clearly. James Dunn's Christology in the Making, (Westminster Press, Philadelphia) challenges the whole notion of Incarnation and just rescues it in John, but does not find it in Paul. My cousin, the late J. A. T. Robinson, argued with Dunn that preexistence is not in John if you read without the benefit of postbiblical spectacles colored by the conciliar decisions at Nicea and Chalcedon (Human Face of God, SCM Press)....

Gen. 1:26 is not thought even by Trinitarians these days to be a proof of a second or third member of God's council as elsewhere. Elohim certainly cannot be used as any kind of proof. It is plainly a singular word in meaning where it refers to the Messiah (Ps. 45:6) and to a pagan god. It may be a plural (in form) of intensity or majesty; authorities differ.

Mark 12:8ff provides the locus classicus of Jesus' confirmation of the basic tenet of Israel. "The Lord our God is one Lord." Yet the Messiah is a different Lord as is clear from the later part of the same chapter. Ps. 110: 1 (the most often cited passage in the NT) distinguishes between Yahweh and the Lord Messiah. Some ex-WCGers are still mishandling this passage.

Charles Hunting, who is very active as time allows him correspondence with all enquirers, and I are preparing a book on the Trinity. We hope this will help the genuine truth seekers amongst the ex's and any others.

Anthony Buzzard has written a number of articles on the pre-existence of Christ doctrine and the questions it raises. Those interested in learning more about his controversial view on the subject should request a copy of his paper "The Preexistence of Christ - Truth or Tradition?" Write to Restoration Fellowship, Box 100, Oregon, IL 61061. To help with postage and handling, the Fellowship says a contribution of $1 would be appreciated. Incidentally, those writing to the Fellowship may also wish to request a copy of Buzzard's short paper "An Examination of Worldwide Church of God's Treatment of Daniel 11 and 12." It is quite relevant in these times of heightened interest in Bible prophecy.

1975 in Prophecy

Of all the booklets ever written by WCG founder Herbert W. Armstrong, 1975 in Prophecy probably caused more people to join the WCG than any other. But because 1975 didn't turn out the way that HWA predicted, that booklet is one that the WCG would prefer to forget. Nevertheless, copies of the uncopyrighted 32-page booklet are still available from a number of sources. One organization that can supply copies (at $3 each) is Midnight Messenger, 9205 S.E. Clackamas Rd., #1776, Clackamas, OR 97015. (For an additional $2, you can also obtain their Sept.-Oct. edition of Midnight Messenger which contained what we thought were a number of eye-opening articles about the causes of the Persian Gulf crisis.)

Incidentally, in our last issue we stated that the WCG had warned Richard C. Nickels not to distribute the "1975" booklet. Mr. Nickels recently wrote us stating that, although some years ago the WCG asked him not to distribute certain WCG copyrighted booklets, the "1975" booklet was not one of them. AR's editor apologizes for his error.

Living With a WCG Mate

AR very frequently receives letters from individuals asking for advice on how to understand and cope with a mate who has joined the WCG. While back issues of AR can provide insights into the WCG, we are not marriage counsellors and do not pretend to have answers for every situation. Recently, however, we became aware of a very fine article on the subject of how a Christian from a main-stream denomination can adjust to living with a mate who is a WCG member. The article, "Religion Divides Our Home" by Phyllis Doudna, appeared in the August 1985 issue of Home Life magazine. The author has kindly offered to provide a free copy of her article to anyone who requests it and sends a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Those interested should write to: Mrs. Phyllis Doudna, 973 W. Exchange St., Akron, Ohio 44302.

Ambassador Report Reunion and Support Groups

We continue to hear from reunion and support groups for ex-WCG members. One in the Kansas City, Missouri area has had enjoyable reunion picnics in 1989 and 1990. Another get-together is planned for September 1991. Those interested in more information should write to: Tom and Jeanette Buller, 5125 N. Tullis, Kansas City, MO 64119 (or phone 816-455-3376).

Former Minister Offers Help

Editor: AR is very pleased that more and more former WCG members and ministers are coming forward to assist those hurt by the WCG. The following two letters are excellent examples of what we would like to see more of.

Dear AR Staff:

My exit from the WCG in the fall of 1970 was an exhilarating and uplifting experience into a freedom and compassion I had never know. I was not at that time interested in counseling or helping others leave as I felt like a rank amateur in the new life I had found. Years of work, study and experience have shown that I was. Now 20 years later and after reading your June 1990 AR I would like to offer my name and address as one who would be happy to talk to and counsel with any people who are sincerely considering leaving, are in the process of leaving, or who have left the WCG and want help with traumatic emotional reactions.

While I never have felt any animosity for the WCG, for its members, or for my 10 year experience, I have never wanted to return. What I do on occasion miss is the genuine camaraderie I experienced with many I pastored in three local churches and the real bond I felt with some ministers, fellow students, and friends in the church.

I do have extensive training in dealing with deep-seated emotional problems - no degrees other than my AC degree - but I work with severely troubled young people and children, so I do have much first-hand knowledge of the psychological forces that motivate all of us.

I would be happy to hear from people who want to do in depth analysis of why they feel as they do, people who just want a sympathetic ear to vent on or some who just might want to say hello after 20 years.

WTL Fellowship

We know there are a lot of ex-WCGers that are hurt, angry and disillusioned. They've had so much taken away from them. Sometimes it just helps to have someone to understand, or just bounce their feelings off of. We would really like to be able to help them in that way. Although qualified counselors have their place, even they can't fully understand what WCG does to a person without having experienced it firsthand. So, although we can't and don't intend to replace a qualified counselor, we would like to lend all the support and encouragement possible to any and all ex-WCGers who'd care to write us. For what it's worth, one of us is a college graduate with a major in psychology and was a social worker for a number of years. But the "plain truth" is, we just want to be there for fellow ex-WCGers.

Letters

In your most recent issue you made a comment on pages 2 and 3 regarding ministries that Tkach has lashed out at. I must tell you that you are misinformed about the Flurry and Amos group....

First of all, the book Malachi's Message is scripturally based only to the extent that anything Herbert Armstrong ever wrote or preached was scripturally based. If you believe HWA's doctrines were scripturally based, then you will also believe that Flurry's book is scripturally based. You are correct when you state his book is a critique of corruption at WCG headquarters. But it is only a critique of the corruption of Tkach and there it ends. Flurry vehemently denies any corruption at the hands of HWA. He states dogmatically that HWA was a righteous man. You see, Malachi's Message is nothing more than a deification of HWA. It is a written graven image of Herbert W. Armstrong. Malachi's Message is a plea for the people of the WCG to return to the "righteous" ways of HWA. Otherwise they are all going to die in the Tribulation and probably go to the lake of fire for choosing Tkach over Flurry....

Mr. Flurry has set HWA up on a pedestal. One member counted the number of times HWA's name was stated in one sermon; 26 times! God was only mentioned by name three times....

You seem to defend HWA by criticizing Tkach's watering down of the former false prophet's doctrines. You may rest assured that Tkach has not mischaracterized Flurry and Amos. They are simply HWA resurrected.

-Ohio

Editor: Perhaps we should have written that Flurry's book was based upon his interpretation of scripture rather than "scripturally based." We did not mean that we endorse Mr. Flurry's views.

As for the changes that Tkach has made, we have never stated that those changes are all bad. His new teaching on healing, for instance, will clearly make life better for many in the church. Nevertheless, even where his changes have been generally positive, or even theologically sound, we have noticed a negative side. Consider the following points:

(1) While Tkach has repeatedly tried to fool the WCG membership that he is carrying on in the HWA tradition, that is not the case. Tkach is clearly going contrary to HWA's teaching in many areas. The Faithful Word group has documented this very well.

(2) If Tkach is going contrary to HWA's will, then where is his authority? Tkach sits in HWA's seat! He would not have been given that seat had he not deceived HWA into believing he was going to carry on in HWA's footsteps.

(3) Even though Tkach has liberalized the church's policies on medicine, makeup, birthdays, and interracial marriage, thereby making the life of WCG members easier, aren't those changes really going to make the WCG a more enticing cult? Doctrines that you will probably not see changed are those central to the WCG's cult status: the WCG's church government doctrine, which puts Tkach in an infallible Pope-like position, and the WCG's triple tithe doctrine which continues to bleed dry those who are mesmerized into thinking it grants magical blessings.

Finally, now that Tkachism has replaced Armstrongism, why would any WCG member believe his church is the true church? I was recently flabbergasted to learn that some poor souls are hanging in there because they are convinced they are being led by "an Apostle." And they believe Tkach to be an Apostle because they have been taught that the WCG's "Apostle" can somehow trace his authority in some kind of unbroken line of succession back to one of the twelve whom Jesus chose. Such an idea is, of course, completely nonsensical. No evidence of such a line of succession exists. However, the question needs to be asked: If doctrine is really secondary to an unbroken line of succession from one of the twelve apostles, then why are those of such belief in the WCG? Somewhat rhetorically I would ask such WCG members: Why not just join one of the churches that really have evidence that they can trace their bishops' lines of succession back to one of the original twelve- namely, the Catholic (Roman and Orthodox) churches?

Dear Mr. Trechak:

Needless to say, the 12 issues [of AR] I have read have been a shock. Like many others who have never been members, just recipients of literature (and sometimes donators of tithes), I had no idea of the extent of WCG's problems and hypocrisies.

I've been receiving their material for close to 20 years. Even without having been a member, I have noticed a great change in their material - The Plain Truth, Good News, World Tomorrow telecasts, and even some booklets - since the death of Mr. Armstrong. It is as if everything he emphasized is slowly being erased. One can only wonder why.

A prime example of this is something I am at a loss to understand. From the beginning of my contact with WCG, I was constantly reminded to be on the lookout for the reunification of Germany. It is happening. Yet, since the removal of the Berlin Wall, I have not seen WCG "capitalize" on this in any of their publications. It suddenly seems that it is no longer important, even though they've mentioned it constantly in the material I have received for close to 20 years! What is going on?....

I don't know if many people have read WCG's French-language booklet, Les Pays de Langue Francaise Selon la Prophetie ("The French-Speaking Nations in Prophecy"). It is about the European half of The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy. Anyone doing just surface research about European migrations, dolmens, and megaliths will come across maps with routes identical to the migratory routes WCG claims the enslaved Israelites took after their Assyrian captivity. Indeed, in all of my years of reading WCG material, this is the only book I have come across that mentions the erection of stone monuments to the biblical God, yet none of their English-language material has mentioned it! In fact, I've never seen this topic mentioned in material from other Bible-based religions....

I should also mention that WCG now has two versions of The United States and British Commonwealth in Prophecy. The new one has 53 pages of text and no index. The original book by HWA had the same cover, but was 196 pages with an index. Oddly, the revised version (uncredited) does not allude to a French-language booklet at all (the HWA one does, on page 146). What is going on?

-New Jersey

Editor: Obviously, those that now head the WCG have ideas about Bible prophecy that are somewhat different from those of HWA. But exactly what their views on prophecy really are remains to be seen. It could very well be that at this time those now heading the WCG do not even know what their own views on prophecy really are.

I am very pleased that you have finally gotten around to reporting on the Ambassador Foundation's concert series in [AR45]. According to The Worldwide News, the concerts are helping to build the church's "image." But if you read the local papers you will see that that is not always the case.

For instance, in 1988 the church sponsored a performance by Russian ballerina Maya Plisetskaya at the Shrine Auditorium. It was a disaster. According to Martin Bernheimer, the Los Angeles Times music critic [April 26, 1988], the old dancer was very stiff, her costumes were old and dirty, her performance was like a vaudeville show, and instead of having live musicians in the pit, she had a loud tape recorder! Gag! And we were told the church was promoting quality in the arts.

Then last year there were the Foundation's ads for soprano Jesse Norman. Did you notice what the church called her? The "greatest of high operatic priestesses." I kept thinking, "Since when does God's House need to have a priestess"? Even more shocking to me was what the Pasadena Star-News wrote about violinist Alexander Markov [March 16, 1988]. That paper wrote how Mr. Markov "plays like the devil" - just like Paganini who was supposedly "in league with the devil." Mr. Markov, the article said, was "every bit suggestive of a modern-day fiddling Faust" and "demon-strated" at God's House!

-California

Editor: The Star-News critic was undoubtedly only using a metaphor for passionate fiddling. But the metaphor does bring to mind a humorous bit of WCG history. During the late '60s one Ambassador professor, David Wainwright, came up with a unique aesthetic theory. Because the Bible speaks of "this world" being "Satan's world," and because "God's Apostle" (HWA) talked about Satan "broadcasting" to the world, surely (so the theory went) all the great music of this world was inspired by Satan and his hordes of demons. Wainwright heard demonic influence in virtually all of the great composers (Bach, Tchaikovsky, and Wagner, for instance) and in some of the world's greatest performers (Horowitz was at the top of his list). Wainwright's theories caused a good number of Ambassador students to fear listening to classical music, just as, years later, the music theories of Ambassador professor Richard Plache would frighten many Ambassador students away from rock records. Wainwright's campaign to expose the supposed demonic influence behind classical music came to an end, however, when Herbert Armstrong discovered that some of the compositions on Wainwright's hit list were some of his own favorites. Wainwright continues to teach at Ambassador, but his current views on musical demons are unknown.

I was a member for 15 years. My husband is still a member (13 years) and is an Ambassador graduate. He is questioning, but after we attended a recent GTA public meeting (Aug. 11, 1990) just out of curiosity, he was called aside into a back room the following Sabbath by the WCG minister and local elder and intimidated. They told him he committed a "very serious offense" by attending that meeting, and mentioned the word "disfellowship" many times. My husband told them to do what they felt they had to do, but he defended a person's responsibility to prove all things. He was curious why GTA was disfellowshipped for supposedly the same teachings they have brought back. We had not told anyone about attending the public meeting so apparently the WCG spies were hard at work.

-Ohio

During my "member-in-good-standing" era, I found few problems with the WCG's theology, but began to find many with its messengers. That feeling became expressed. I told John Rittenbaugh and another minister that they and the church were wrong to preach that HWA would not die but would be alive to lead the flock to a place of safety. I reminded them of the church's own teachings of prophecy in which certain scenarios had to be in place and that HWA could not possibly live until those things became evident. (HWA was very ill at the time and died not long afterward.) At that moment in our conversation Rittenbaugh and the other minister seemed to be taken by apoplexy at my "overt blasphemy" against God's prophet. With visible trepidation they suggested that if I felt that way it might be best if we sever my relationship with the church.

-South Carolina

I went to my library in Victoria and most of the books mentioned in your flyer are now out of print....

I've been involved with the Worldwide Church of God for 8 years now and was interested in checking its background along with another church member. The WCG ministry heard about it through my "friends" and put me and my curious friend out because the AR material is supposedly a threat to the WCG and me. I feel like I've been slapped in the face for trying to "prove all things."

-Canada

Editor: One reason why it is difficult to find books about the WCG in public libraries is that WCG members often remove and destroy them. There are whole states where many libraries list books about the WCG as having been purchased for their patrons use, yet not one can be found on their shelves. Some WCG members have also been known to mark library books with WCG-related messages.

My daughter was told not to come to church if she didn't tithe. Yet she is a single parent trying to raise two children on a less than minimum wage job.

-Kentucky

I allowed my high blood pressure to go untreated for 20 plus years because the church then taught that medicine to control it was a grave "sin" and I believed it. Now I am permanently disabled with heart, kidney, and artery disease at age 42. I am now on total disability so my income is very limited.

-Former WCG Member

I have a sister still in WCG. I am hoping she will read AR and free herself from it, but I have little hope that she will as she reads only what she's told she must read. To quote her, "I don't clutter up my mind with anything but the Bible." As I pointed out to her, she reads only what she's told to read even in the Bible.

-Arkansas

A friend has been involved in the WCG for about six months and I am concerned that he's been brainwashed by WCG. Although he used to be a vibrant, happy, alive person and very talented, now all he ever talks about when I ask what's up is the WCG. To my inquiries about the WCG, his responses are what I consider somewhat flimsy regarding challenges to doctrine.... In closing, I'd like to say that while I am not at all an adherent to any Christian denomination or any organized religion, I do believe in many aspects of spirituality and in some divine and very beautiful, incredible Creator. It is much easier for me to read and trust AR because of its nondenominational stance and open mind.

-South Dakota

I am disabled and retired on social security at $432 per month and have heavy medical bills. My wife is still brainwashed by WCG and is today on her way to the Feast of Tabernacles. She works part-time and gets a social security check of $581 per month, but as you know a lot of that goes to WCG. I struggle to get her to read the AR but seldom will she consent to reading it or any other literature about God's Word unless it is written by a minister in WCG.

I have never been happier in my life than I am today even though I suffer physically and miss the fellowship of my wife and others of like faith. After giving 15 years of devoted time and work to the WCG, I didn't formerly resign from it. I just stopped going to their services and stopped giving any money to them and to my great surprise not one minister, not one deacon, nor any other church person ever contacted me and asked me why I left WCG. That is how much love or care they showed about me in their belief that I was doomed to their hell fire and brimstone death, never to have another chance to live again. But in reality I was glad that they didn't call me or come to talk to me and ask a reason for my leaving. That left me free from their shackles and I didn't have to explain anything to them. This shows how much love there is in that cult.

I love my wife and I don't bug her anymore about the so-called true church and she doesn't want to hear about what I believe concerning salvation, etc. But I let her know as much as she will listen to, but she doesn't like to talk about it.

-AR Reader

Before I knew what hit me, I was feeling very suicidal. I never knew what "dysfunctional families" were. I came to find out I was raised in one! My husband was beside himself. He didn't know what to do with me - institutionalize me or what! Over the last eight years since my husband and I have been together, I've tried to tell him what it was like growing up in WCG. At first he thought I was exaggerating or even making it up, everything seemed so bizarre. Well, now he knows differently. I received help through a therapist. That decision was one of the best decisions I have ever made. I also started buying all the books and pamphlets I could about my problem and then found out about you.

Even my mother who is still in the WCG has told me she has had suicidal thoughts off and on. It's no wonder as my mother has had a horrible life in that destructive cult. Mom and Dad have been in WCG for 27 years....

My father had a very successful business before they joined up. Then eventually (you know how the story goes) he lost everything, even our home - our home! I'm 33 years old now and trying to pick up the pieces and go on. But it's been so very, very hard.

-California

You and your staff make everything so plain about all the deceit and the corruption that goes on in the WCG. Anybody with part of a brain should be able to see through their curtain and know what's going on behind it. I honestly believe that the scripture "Like sheep led to the slaughter" applies to them.

-Kansas

It saddens me so knowing my son and family are such a part of the WCG. And frankly, they now seem more involved. My son works for a well-to-do WCG deacon in the man's business. Yet he receives minimum wages and tithes 30 percent. As a parent, can you please advise how to reach members if they appear very happy and ever so smug in this church? It is as if we are so wrong and they are the only church that is the true one. I simply feel frustrated at times but avoid any discussion. I remind myself as a mother my unconditional love is to accept them in all this. In the meantime, I pray a lot and offer my concerns to our loving Lord.

-Washington

I was a deacon in WCG for 15 years and it was tougher on me than on my wife. It seemed I was in more church functions than her. They kept me so busy that I had no time for my children and they were neglected many times. The love between my children and myself was almost gone. We are happy now and the love has returned, thanks to you folks.... May God bless you many times over.

Readers' Gay Concerns

Dear Mr. Trechak:

You will probably think I am an overly suspicious woman, but with all the talk here at headquarters about certain ministers being bisexual or gay, I can't help it. There is something about our Pastor General that bothers me. It's his official portrait - the one that appears in The Plain Truth and in the new Ambassador College catalog. First of all, Mr. Tkach is holding a book of poetry by Milton. I cannot understand why he did not choose to hold a Bible. Then there is his expression. Maybe I'm imagining things. But frankly, to me Mr. Tkach looks effeminate in that picture. Most of all, however, what bothers me is that instead of a wedding band on his left hand Mr. Tkach has a pinky ring! Now, before you start laughing at me, let me explain.

In our culture married people wear their wedding ring on the ring finger of their left hand. This has been the custom for hundreds of years. Mr. James Remington McCarthy made this very clear in his book Rings Through the Ages [Harper and Brothers, 1945]. Mr. McCarthy further wrote that wearing a ring on the little finger of the left hand is a symbol that the wearer is a "lover," not a married person [p. 59]. I asked a librarian about this and, to my amazement, she referred me to the new Encyclopedia of Homosexuality. (I never suspected such books even existed!)

According to our library's Encyclopedia of Homosexuality [Garland Publishing, 1990], "Gay men have often used clothing to indicate that they were potential sexual partners for other males. Of course, any type of clothing associated with the opposite gender can be so used, but more subtle signals are often desired" [p. 246]. Then on page 416 it says that some homosexuals wear pinky rings as a symbol of their sexual preferences! What do you think about Mr. Tkach's pinky ring?

-Pasadena, Calif.

Editor: Perhaps Mr. Tkach's ring is too small for his ring finger. Whatever the case, don't get carried away. Symbols can change. I checked the encyclopedia you quoted and found that in years past, a red tie was "'almost a synonym' for homosexuality in large American cities." Yet, today, red ties-like the one worn by Tkach in his official portrait - are worn by so many men in public life that the special connotation has surely been lost. As for Tkach's official portrait, well - he looks friendly, at least, doesn't he?

In reading your September issue I found it interesting that you have finally noticed how the church has been influenced by the so-called Gay Liberation movement. But I was disappointed in how wimpy your coverage was. I cannot believe you are not more aware of just how serious the problem really is at headquarters.

To begin with, you certainly must know that the Bible condemns homosexuality from cover to cover. Contrary to The Good News views of Dennis Luker, homosexuality is not simply a bad habit like having one beer too many or eating an extra slice of apple pie. Gay activists know the Bible is their enemy. Dr. George Weinberg in "The Madness and Myths of Homophobia" wrote that the chief cause of "homophobia" (the term he uses to describe all negativity toward homosexuality) is "the teachings of religion, and the Bible in particular." In reading Dennis' Good News article, I thought it amazing how he did not quote but a very few of the Bible's many passages that condemn homosexuality, and that the ones he did quote he watered down.

What Dennis' article accomplished was to show that the Church has fallen victim to the same International Gay Conspiracy forces that are affecting all of society. You may have noticed on the op-ed page of the Dec. 3, 1990 Los Angeles Times there was an article by left-winger Marshal Alan Phillips praising The New Revised Standard Version of the Bible which replaces the 1952 Revised Standard version. Phillips wrote how the "new Protestant version of the Bible is more tolerant of and sensitive toward homosexuality, removing one more obstacle to full societal acceptance of gays, including legal marriage and its associated benefits." The new translation simply waters down all the Bible passages that condemn homosexuality. In other words, instead of turning away from those practices the Bible condemns, the gay lib movement has simply gone ahead and changed the Bible!

For well over a decade the U.S. has been the target of a very real, very organized, and very powerful movement aimed at making homosexuality an accepted "alternate lifestyle." Now, before you call me a conspiracy freak, go to your nearest big city library and see how many books there are on the subject of "living gay." In particular notice The New Gay Liberation Book published by Ramparts Press of Palo Alto, California in 1979. It can be found in almost every big public library in the country. It begins with a chapter on how to become a practicing homosexual and then moves on to tell about how "the movement" will eventually make the homosexual lifestyle accepted in America. The chapter headings tell the story: "Born Again" (not about Jesus but about losing one's virginity in a gay bar), "Testament of a Gay Militant," "Memoirs of an Ancient Activist," "Bisexual Politics," "Inside Sado/Masochism," "Looking Toward Transvestite Liberation," "The Madness and Myths of Homophobia," and "We Will Conquer...."
